SANFORD — Growing crime in the workplace includes not only more robberies and burglaries by strangers, but more disputes among workers.

National statistics released Sunday, say nearly 1' million violent crimes occur in the workplace every year. The figures in the study are not compared to previous years.

The Justice Department says the percentage is about one-sixth of all violent crimes in America, averaging about 971,500 per year, between 1967 and 1992. The study was prepared by Lawrence

A. Greenfeld, acting director of the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

The study shows that about 10 percent of crimes in a workplace involve offenders armed with handguns. Local law enforcement officials assume this figure is based on armed robberies committed by intruders, rather than people actually employed at a business.

A number of armed robberies have occurred in Sanford, Lake Mary and the surrounding area during the past few years. Many of them involved restaurants, often just prior to closing, when the maximum amount of money would be expected to be on hand, and the fewest number of employees in the building.

11-year-old warrant to be decided

STUART - Prosecutors are to decide whether a Panhandle man known for living a quiet, church-going life should be tried on an 11-year warrant for trafficking marijuana.

A Florida Highway Patrol trooper stepped Albert Marvin

Hancock last month near his home in Fountain, about 30 miles north of Panama City. A routine computer check showed that Hancock was wanted since 1963 on a charge of participating in a 5-ton marijuana amuggling operation out of Sewall's Pointe.

Hancock, 42, was charged with marijuana trafficking, a felony punishable by a maximum of five years in prison and a $50,000 fine. He is being held in the Martin County Jail in lieu of $200,000-bail.

Prosecutors were to make a decision today.

Hancock's attorney argues that a four-year statute of limitations has expired. The only way the time limit could be extended was if Hancock had left the state or had been purposely hiding to keep police from serving him with the warrant, said Assistant Public Defender Cynthia Marvin.

Sea turtles now nesting Beachgoers enraged over restrictions

By The Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH - Many residents and businesses aren't happy about giving up recreation time — and tourism dollars — so endangered sea turtles can be protected on the beach.

Volusia County restricted the hours for beach driving this month from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. to make the beach safer for nesting sea turtles and their hatchlings.

The reduction, the second since nesting scason began in May, means visitors have four fewer hours to drive on that beach than they had last summer. That has some residents complaining that their rights are being violated.

"I'm sick and tired of tree-huggers and Bambi-ites," George Locke, a member of the Beach Trust Commission, a county advisory board on beach issues, said at a recent meeting. "We need to have that beach open. care of here."

Later he added, "I like turtles, I used to eat them before they were protected." But Jackie Parker finds such attitudes distasteful. "I like animals, and I hate to see their habitat disturbed because of humans," said Parker, a visitor from Ocala. "It's just like the manatees. They're such gentle animals and people hit them with boats and don't even care.

Turtle activists scout the beach at dawn every day, marking new nests and moving ones that could be destroyed by cars or high tides. They asked for the stricter driving restrictions so they could have more time for surveys in the morning and the hatchlings could have a better chance of survival when emerging from nests and crawling to the ocean in the evenings.

Some officials think the request should have been denied and several Beach Trust members want the County Council to lift the driving restrictions.

Voters distrust politicians, keep electing them

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE - Americans distrust their political leaders and do not feel their voices are heard. But those same leaders don't understand the depth of the public's cynicism — and voters keep rewarding them with re-election.

Those are some of the conclusions reached by Stephen Craig, a University of Florida professor who spent aix years researching and writing a book on the growth of voter cynicism over the past three decades.

"You cannot find any significant social or political group within the electorate ... that is not a great deal more cynical today than it was 15 or 20 or 30 years ago," says Craig, a politi- educated than ever and know cal science professor.

In his book, "The Malevolent Leaders," Craig writes that Americans' widespread distrust of politicians and cynicism began with the Vietnam War and Watergate. Those sentiments have spread into the 1990s.

From 1986 to 1992, Craig interviewed 28 men and women from a variety of political categories, age groups and social classes. He also used data from a series of nationwide surveys of voters that have been conducted by the University of Michigan since 1952.

The book, published by Westview Press, examines "the rise of mistrust in government," he save.

"While voters are now more more about politics and politicians, the gap between rulers and the ruled has widened." Craig says, "Beginning in the mid, "60s, that faith has been dramatically eroded. There was a brief uptick in the early '80s with Reagan. Long before Reagan left office the downward slide began again and has become increasingly acute since

But the very politicians the public distrusts continue to win re-election because Americans are hypocrites, he says.

"The public is largely to blame. It is not that politicians haven't behaved poorly, they have. We continue to reward them for behaving the way they behave, so why would they have any great incentive to behave differently?"

Craig says he also interviewed 26 members of Congress, most of whom were "completely confident that they weren't part of the problem."

'They still don't get it. They don't truly understand how deep the frustrations are and how much their behavior contributes to it." he savs.

"Most of them are aware of the low esteem in which Congress is held as a whole, but they never think voters feel that way about them personally. They just don't seem to comprehend the depth of anger and frustration that people feel."

The public's distrust of politicians may be linked to a more educated electorate and the news media's influence.

Florida struggles to loosen ties to Pentagon; protect economy

ORLANDO - For Adrian Porter, losing his job on the Patriot missile program led to a new career he likes better: working as a street cop.

Porter, 33, an electronics testing technician laid off from Martin Marietta's Orlando plant in May 1993, is one of the success stories in a retraining program for workers who lose their jobs because of cuts in defense spending.

Porter searched for a new job for months before joining a job assistance program and quali-fying for a 20-week criminal justice course that he completed last week.

Graduating as one of the school's top students, he promptly stepped into a job with the Orlando Police Department.

Dollhouses give investigators lessons in real murder cases

In one bedroom, a painted plaster man about the size of a finger lies on his back in a miniature bed, a shotgun on the floor. The dresser and

Twice a year, about 40 investigators from as far away as Australia and Hong Kong come to the state medical examiner's office in Baltimore to try to solve the 18 graphic scenes in the wooden, foot-high rooms. All they have to work with is what they can see, along with a bit of written information

It's called the Nutshell Studies, built in the 1940s by a New Hampshire state police captain with a fondness for forensic science. Frances Glessner Lee based the scenes on police reports and eyewitness accounts of real murders.

"She's got the details down to the exact date on wall calendar," said Dr. J. Laron Locke. Maryland's assistant medical examiner.

The investigators are assigned one of the cases at the beginning of their weeklong visit and expected to figure out whodunit by the end.

Detective Dave Gamble of the prosecutor's office in Monmouth County, N.J., was assigned a three-room dollhouse with a man and a woman dead in a bedroom and a baby dead in the next

At first glance, it appeared that someone had broken into the house and killed all three. But Gamble thought otherwise: "There was gun shot in the kitchen wall," he said. As it turned out, the husband killed the baby. then his wife, and then himself.

"You have to dig and really look into them." and Officer Charles McCully, a homicide investigator for the Metro Dade Police Department in Miami, who participated in the May seminar. "You see some of the crazy things that people

The Nutshell Series was once part of Harvard University Medical School's Department of Legal Medicine, which Mrs. Lee endowed. When she died, the department was eliminated. The Nutshell Studies moved to Baltimore in the

Since then, the seminars have grown. They now include lectures on new technology such as DNA testing, and refresher courses on homicide investigation.

The crime solutions are well-guarded. But investigators did divulge the clues that helped solve the slaying of the man in the bedroom and the woman in the parlor. The man's wife had claimed that he killed

Beautifying the boulevard

The citizens spoke out. The Lake Mary City Commission listened. A small six-person committee has now been established in Lake Mary to work on a gigantic job.

Their goal will be not only to determine beautification and ecological protection of Phase II of Lake Mary Boulevard construction, but look into ways such a project can be financed.

It's not that the city hadn't given these matters consideration in the past. The widening project has been discussed and worked on for a number of years. It's just a lack of money with which to tackle such a project.

Last Thursday night, residents on and near the boulevard rallied at city hall to voice their disappointment over the lack of a definite plan and financing arrangements.

They spoke out on the same night in which the commission was to have the first reading of the annual budget message for the fiscal year 1994/95 city budget. Depending on what the committee determines in cost of these improvements, the city's miliage rate may, end up higher than hoped for. Ad valorem taxes therefore, could increase for Lake Mary

We wish the committee success in pursuing the answer to these complex problems. They have a large job shead of them and it will be interesting to see what they decide.

It must be understood however, that the Phase II widening project runs from Country Club Road in downtown Lake Mary, east, past U.S. Highway 17-93, to Senford Avenue. The majority of it runs through the City of Senford and a quarter miles of this in the actual Lake Mary city

Even if a massive beautification project is proposed and undertaken in Lake Mary, what will happen to the rest of the boulevard?

Are people coming in from Interstate-4 and friving cast on the boulevard dried in beautifully landscaped divided boulevard go through the city, then come to a halt one and through the city, then come to a halt one and a quarter miles out?

Lake Mary Boulevard is a main transportation route. People coming west from the Sanford area may not get a very good opinion of the new roadway, unless the county and City of Sanford also become involved.

Rather than only Lake Mary concentrating on their small boulevard area, we urge that all three governments work together on this. Lake Mary already wants to start moving on this. Now it will take the City of Sanford and Seminole County to join in. Seminole County to Join in.

If they do, everyone will gain. If they don't, everyone, including the people of Lake Mary, will lose, no matter how hard they try.

In response to an article "Female Copa Cry Foul, in the July 17 tesus of the Sanford Herald, we now live in the '90s, not the '50s, it seems that our police department has a problem. It's called females.

In Sheafer's deal, for her to have worked with Sanford for 11 years, without a promotion, just doesn't sound right. What it sounds like is one chief doesn't want a woman on the force. Who really owns 'family values'?

The use — for political purposes — of "family values" has been largely left to polemicists on the Right, very much including the Christian Right. Members of those organizations are increasingly elected to school and library boards around the country, and they then try to decide for all the families in the town what can and can't be taught and read in the schools. They censor books and stlence teachers — all in the name of their family values. name of their family values.

Yet I consider myself very much concerned with family values. My wife and I have four children, and we have not in the least been passive in teaching them about honesty and respect for others and the dangers of censorship to free thought. We never mention God, however. so I expect many in the Christian Right would claim that what we call family values is so deficient as to be fraudulent.

My wife and I appear to be out of step in another way. According to all the polis, a considerable majority of the American people believe that what Bill Clinton did — with regard to adultery — before he became president is of little importance. The man was elected to be president, they say, so let him govern.

My sense is that anybody who commits adultery, in or out of office, has a weak character. That's one of the reasons I didn't vote for Clinton as president. The adultery; the ways he dodged the draft; and other acts of questionable morality in his years as governor made clear to me that he would be a provide a would be a president who does not stand up for his alleged principles. And I was right — as survivors in Bosnia and fleeing Haitians can tell you. So can civil libertarians as they watch him support a crime bill swarming with such draconian measures as 60 new crimes that will bring the death penalty.

What does all that have to do with philandering? The man's moral com pass veers with the wind.

Pro-choice organisations claim they certainly have family values. When a woman has a choice as to whether to bring a pregnancy to term, the child will be welcomed into — and thereby strengthen — the family.

Yet, in New York state, when a woman legislator recently tried to get a bill passed that would allow mothers to be told if their infants are HIV-infected, the flerce and successful opposition to that bill was led by the National Organization for Women and the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League.

As it is now in New York and 43 other states, all infants are tested for HIV - which leads to AIDS - at birth. But they are blind tests, and nobody is allowed to tell the names of infected infants. What kind of family values do NOW and NARAL have when they are ardently willing to allow the infected infants to go home without anyone knowing that they will soon be attacked by infections due to their weakened immune systems? More important to these pro-choice groups, however, is the sanctity of confiden-tiality. That is, once the infected child's name is known, the mother will be revealed to be HIV

It's more vital to them to keep the mother's secret than to save the infant who is obviously not a fetus any longer, but a born person under the Constitution.

HODDING CARTER

D.C. digest for summer dog days

The dog days of summer came early to the nation's capital this year, and seem destined to stay late, which helps explain the disjointed nature of what follows. It's hard to develop a thesis longer than a sound bite while television reporters are frying eggs on the sidewalk to make a point for the 6 o'clock news.

First, dog bites man.

Washington is permanently infected with a handful of bad ideas, which, much like recurrent bouts of malaria, reappear just when you think the city is finally cured. Among the worst is the lunatic notion that the antidote to government by jack boot in Third World countries is a stronger, better-trained military, in a perversion of Mao's famous dictum, Washington believes that democracy comes from the barrel of a gun.

The current application is to Haiti, National Becurity leakers have assiduously spread the word that Arietids will need the army when he

from the barrel of a gun.

The current application is to Haiti. National Security leakers have assiduously spread the word that Aristide will need the army when he is restored to power, and all the Haitian army needs is a bit of old-fashioned professionalism plus concentrated training in good citizenship.

It almost sounds reasonable, until you remember that it has never worked, it hasn't been for want of the old college try in places like El Salvador in the days of the killer colonels, fran in the regime of the shah or the Philippines under the Marcos dictatorship.

Despite the record, the argument never changes. If we give Country X's military the toys it wants, and train its leaders, we'll build a stable institution amenable to American influence.

What also never changes is the result — an officer corps that uses its bigger and better weapons to kill the opposition while contemptuously rejecting half-hearted demands from the United States that it stop misbehaving. Rather than strengthened democrats, what we invariably get are more powerful despots.

But what is evidence in the face of a fixed idea? There are people in the CIA, the White House, the Pentagon and the State Department who can't help themselves. They see those comic opera uniforms in Halti and begin to shake all over in a fit of anticipation.

Repeat after them: When democratic forces are weak and military forces are despotic, the way to right the balance is to strengthen the military. Now take two aspirin and go to bed until the fever passes.

until the fever passes.

Next, "It seems I've heard this song before,"

As the president's European trip reached its apex in Germany last week, we were treated to a clutch of planted stories in America's leading newspapers about the nawly intimate friendship between President Clinton and Chancellor Kohl of Germany. They were nothing new. For unfathomable reasons, American presidents have a compulsive need to pretend to intimacy with the people they meet during their official duties.

You name the president and he emerged at least once from a first-time meeting with some singularly revolting foreign leader to speak of their "close personal ties." Thereafter the rhetoric cam, and does, get downright mushy.

Remember, we're not talking about adolescent boys and girls, but hard-shelled politicians. And yet we are asked to believe the kind of breathless pap which ran last week in The Washington Post and The New York Times under the bylines of

New York Times under the bylines of otherwise respectable reporters. First, the Times:

"Mr. Kohl... has become Mr. Clinton's closest friend among foreign leaders. They share a common vision of Europe, a love of eating and a basically optimistic view of the world."

Next, the Post:

"Aldes who remark on the evident warmth between the

First, dog bites man.

on the evident warmth between the two men point to their working-class origins, their natural passion for politics and their equally impressive appetites."

Never mind that the two stories, run on the same day, don't seem to be translated from the same text. They agree only that the two men share a love of pigging out.

That's quibbling over details, however. What someone ought to sek, and doesn't, is what such a "friendship" means in the real world.
The two men have been thrown together for portions of seven event-packed days spread over 16 months. That's better than Ronald Reagan knew President Marcos, whom he slavishly praised, or than President Carter knew the shah, whom he all but deifled, but no better than you or I know the person we chat better than you or I know the person we chat with at church each week.

with at church each week.

Finally, "trust me" is alive and well.

Health care caravane will be striking out toward Washington this week in support of a national health plan. There is just one hitch. The caravane' organisers have required the aponeoring organisations to promise they will support whatever legislation is recommended by the Democratic leadership in both houses, a product whose form and details had yet to take shape at this writing.

That's called buying a pig in the poke, and it proves one of two things: Either that cynicism has not yet conquered all in Washington, or that, even now, a sucker is born every minute.

Democrate certainly do not own a monopoly on political shake-downs, but they do think they own the franchise on political morality. It was Bill Clinton who wrote in his book. "Putting People First": "American politics is being held hostage by big-money interests. Members of Congress now collect more than $2.5 million in campaign funds every week, while political action commit-tees, industry lobbies, and cliques of $100,000 denors buy access to Congress and to the White House."

After hurling epithets at the entrenched special interests, Democrats are increasingly playing the perfect hosts at a growing number of affairs ranging from star-studded gains to barbecues with Gore. Democrats are enjoying the bottom-line benefits of occupying the White House.

"When there is a conflict between workers and bosses, each side seems to forget the other side is also human, and humans have problems."

"One reason for crimes within a workplace," he added, "is that people don't seem to take time to sit around and talk with each other any more." "The workplace is the place that people in the labor force spend a very significant time of their life," said Wesley Skogan, professor of political science and urban affairs at Northwestern University. "That's where you are when you're out of bed.

"People spend much less of their time walking around on the streets after dark," he added, "It could be that as a fraction of your waking life, workplace crime is actually quite low."

An estimated 8 percent of all rapes, 7 percent of all robberies and 16 percent of all assaults occur at work, said the report based on data from the National Criminal Victimization Survey of U.S. households during those five years.

On average, that meant 13,100 rapes, 79,100 robberies, 264,200 aggravated assaults and 615,200 simple assaults happened at work each year. In addition, 2 million personal thefts and more than 200,000 car thefts occur each year while people are at work.

At the present time, almost all city police departments, as well as sheriff's deputies and law enforcement recruits use the range for their practice firing. All of the 10 weekend firing times still set for the remainder of 1994 involve recruit target practice.

"At the time the range was first built in 1978," Denard explained, "the whole area was mostly orange groves, with no residential housing within one mile. Now, we are near Cardinal Oaks, Lake Mary Woods, and Woldunn, which have all been built since that time.

The area for the proposed move is north of S.R. 46, to the northeast of the St. Johns River bridge, off Osceola Road.

Denard said some land use permits have already been obtained while others are still to be approved. He expected the St. Johns Water Management District permit will be approved within a week.

The site has already been accepted by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and other agencies which deal in firearms training.

closed and two realigned.

Department of Defense officials say nationwide base closings in 1995 may surpass the total number of installations closed in 1988, 1991 and 1993. Federal officials expect to pinpoint about 70 major bases for closing nationwide next year.

Once again, Florida is a prime target for cuts.

"What we are facing is going to be, in a cumulative sense, more serious than what has been before," Florida Commerce Secretary Charles Dusseau warned a gathering of state and community leaders and defense industry executives in Orlando last month.

The state's military bases not now scheduled for closure or realignment contribute about 100,000 jobs and more than $3 billion to the economy, according to the Florida Department of Commerce.

As a result of the 1993 closings and realignments, Flor-ida will lose an estimated 23,000 military jobs over five years. And the loss of military bases and jobs represents only half the problem.

Florida has about 200 defense-related companies that are being hurt one way or another by cuts in military orders. The Florida Department of Labor estimates that 52,678 people will lose their jobs in the defense industry by 1998. An estimated 250,000 Floridians now are employed directly or indirectly by the industry. "Defense-related jobs represent a disproportionate share of the highest-paying skilled work available in the state," says Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay. "Almost 50 percent of Florida's Greyhounds-

"I went to one of the top stude in the nation for their breeding. It was a proven bloodline. I make sure they are fed proper nutritious diets. They have a 250 to 300 foot run so they get the proper exercise. I train them from 0 to 12 months of agreement 15 months I send them to 10 min. A lady there teaches them to run turns and other acceptance in the run turns and other acceptance in the proper exercise. Those four months are very crucial. At 16 months of age they come back and I lease them to a kennel."

Costin emphasized that he only used the best kennel with very sanitary conditions and of good reputation. The dogs are trained at Ross Kennels.

Costner said "these dogs started at 16 to 17 months of age of the top stude in the nation for costner said "these dogs started at 16 to 17 months of age in the races and that made them unique because some don't start until 20 months." Training was emphasized as a very important part of a good racer's career and not to mention "a pinch of luck."

Costin pointed out proudly that his 12-year-old daughter was "very helpful, gave them a lot of love, and really knows how to handle the dogs."

Some discussion was given to

Some discussion was given to retiring a dog and as some trainers call it, "putting them down." Costin stressed that he "has retired 15 to 20 dogs and most have been placed in a home right away." He said, "I even have a waiting list of people wanting the dogs. I guess I'd probably put them in my own backyard if I couldn't find a home for one of them. I already have a few."

Dean Patrick, Director of Guest Services at the dog track in Casselberry commented about one of Costin's best racing dogs.

"Bunns Lane Berth is the superstar of the litter;" he said.

"She has won 12 out of 13 races.

She just started racing this She just started racing this summer. One of the races was a second place."

Patrick spoke of how this particular dog got its name, "The dog was actually named after a street the owner knew of up north," he said. "The Berth is her name; it was supposed to be Bertha but only so many letters in the name are accepted for registry with the Greyhound Association so the "a" was dropped. She does go by the nickname Bertha."

Bertha has only come in second place once in her young career, taking first place in all her other races.

Patrick spoke about "a greyhound in West Palm that set the world's record with 36 wins in a row." He commented that local fans have been excited for this local owner and his winning dogs."

A dog may be man's best friend but in the case of these local champs, men and women alike put their stakes on this winning friendship. Going to the dogs could mean riches with the odds so far with these exceptional four-legged athletes.

technology-based firms are defense-dependent."

The Clinton administration is investing billions of dollars into a program to create jobs by find-ing noncombat uses for military technology. It awarded 212 conversion grants nationwide last year under the Technology

Reinvestment Project.
But only a handful went to Florida. Most of the money went to large companies in California, Connecticut, Massachusetts. Pennsylvania and Ohio.

"I feel - and a lot of other people do - that the defense conversion process is a political process," said John Slack, chief executive officer of DBA Systems, which manufactures digital imaging defense systems in Melbourne. "The TRP grants were in direct proportion to electoral votes that went to Clinton." Slack said he had learned his lesson. His company will not participate in the government's grant program again, preferring to go it alone and try to attract venture capital for medicalimaging devices that help in the early detection of cancer and optical problems.

Bill Schwartz, head of Schwartz Electro-Optics in Orlando, agreed that the TRP program initially was heavily blased in favor of large corpora-

But federal officials have re-vised the program and "they are trying to help small business a little more," Schwartz said. "They are making an effort to redress the blas."

At the same time, retraining and job-placement programs are helping laid-off workers find new employment.

Valencia Community College in Orlando is working with Martin Marietta to retrain some of the more than 4,000 workers laid off from the company's three Florida plants over the past three years.

For Porter, the electronics technician-turned-cop, the program "helps you find out what your real interests and capabilities are."

"Then they support you finan-cially with retraining," he says. "Law enforcement — working with kids and people — is something I always wanted to do. ... Now I'm happy."

But for Robert Reis, who would only admit to being "over 50," starting over will not be the team record set by Chuck Carr last year. Carr led off the ninth with a walk from Willie Blair (0-5). Sheffield, who had four singles in his previous at-bats, followed his 22nd home run. Robb Nen (4-4) pitched out of a jam in the eighth and struck out the side in the ninth.

fenseman Doug Lidster to St. Louis.

In a ruling by NHL commissioner Gary Bettman after eight hours of meetings, Keenan will become coach and general manager of the Blues. But he must serve a 60-day suspension without salary and pay a $100,000 fine.

Bettman fined the Blues $250,000 for negotiating with and signing Keenan, the Detroit Red Wings $25,000 for negotiating with Keenan, and the Rangers $25,000 for filing a lawsuit against Keenan. New York will pay Keenan's $608,000 playoff bonus and he'll repay $400,000 of a $500,000 signing bonus.

Oviedo methodically mows down Goldenrod

From Staff Reports.

TAMPA — Like the Energizer Bunny, the Oviedo Little League Junior All-Star team (13 year olds) keeps on going and going and going

The squad took its first step toward a third tournament title with a workmanlike victory over the District 3 champions from Goldenrod, 7-2. in the opening game of the Sectional Tournament at the North Tampa Little League Complex Saturday night.

The victory gives the local entry a bye into the winners' bracket finals in rhe five-team, doubleelimination tournament It also gives the team a couple of days to rest as they will not play again until Tuesday at 8 p.m. against the winner of the game between the District 6 and District 13 champions that was played Sunday.

Goldenrod was to have played another losing team late Sunday in an elimination game. The loser of the District 6-District 13 game would play the winner of thw Goldenrod game today.

'I guess you can call us the Metro-Orlando Junior champions." said Oviedo manager Pat Metcalf after his charges beat the team that is located just a few miles up S.R. 426 from Oviedo. "Even if we don't win another game, we will still be the Central Florida champs.

But the way they have been playing, it is hard to believe that this will be the last win for a squad that won its area tournament by a combined score of 39-5 in three games and the District 14 championships by a 20-4 combined score in two games. The team had a 20-0 advantage in the district before giving up four runs late in the finals. That's a 66-11 scoring edge in going 6-0.

While the win over Goldenrod was comfortable.

it was not the overpowering victory the team is

"It was a steadily progressive win today," said Metcalf, who was searching for something to make the game sound exciting. "I thought the kids played well despite getting up early and traveling 120 miles to only find that the games were running two hours behind.

"It was a good effort considering that it was a 14-hour day for a bunch of 13-year-olds, 10 hours of which was spent mostly waiting around in the

The game was originally set for a 5:30 p.m. start, but because of the delays, did not get finished until 10:30 p.m.

Oviedo took a 1-0 lead, but Goldenrod tied the game at 1-1. Oviedo went up 3-1, but again Goldenrod cut the lead to 3-2. The winners then pulled away with three runs in the fifth inning and another in the sixth.

A trio of pitchers, Kenny Kayne, Nathan Dancy and Jorgie Hernandez combined on a three-hitter for District 14. Kayne worked the first three innings and Dancy and Hernandez hurled two innings each.

Contributing to a 10 hit attack for the winners were Hernandez (three hits), Dancy (two hits, three RBI). Turner Elliott (two hits). Tommy Koubek (single, sacrifice fly, two RBI), Larry Cummings (single, two RBI) and Jon Prather

When is bicycling a crime? When you break the law

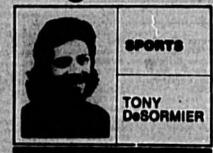

This column, the latest in my ongoing Quixotic crusade for more enlightened (and, hopefully, safer) bicycling, may mark my official entry into old fogey-dom.

With Seminole County's middle school students heading back to class last week. I had anticipated writing the this column this week anyway. But the urge to take up the topic again was increased when I saw the following ridiculous bumpersticker:

"Bicycling is not a crime." I can only assume that this statement, a variation on the. "Skateboarding ..." or "Roller blading is not a crime ", bumperstickers, is a response to recent egislative efforts concerning making the wearing of bicycle helmets mandatory. Bicycling is not a crime? It is if it's against the law.

As glib as that may sound, it's a simple guideline many of us choose to ignore when the situation suits us. It's as if just because something is against the law doesn't make it wrong. That or a particular law doesn't apply to us at a given time (my personal favorite, employed late at night on deserted stretches of interstate).

In those moments of personal rationalization, we forget or ignore the fact that most laws, however convoluted they turn out, were originally based in some sound reason.

And so it is with laws concerning the operation of bicycles, our immediate concern. The idea isn't for unnecessary regulation or government intervention, as some might suggest, but for improved salety for riders and those around them.

Until Florida's counties and municipalities get around to pro-viding safe raods for bicyclists to travel - something we may not see in our lifetime - it is imperitive that two-wheeled pilots know and religiously obey the laws concerning them.

That's even more true for children, who ride recreationally or. now. back and forth to school.

The simplest rule of the road for bicyclists is also the most important: in Florida, bicycles are considered vehicles when venturing onto the public highways and are subject to many of the same basic operating

That means you ride with the flow of traffic, not against.

Also, the gifts of increased mobility and speed that a bicycle gives its rider carries with it the responsibilty of being aware of those around you who aren't moving as quickly. Just as you need to have the operators of cars watching out for you, you have to mindful of pedestrians and their rights.

The same goes for skateboarders. rollerbladers, and rollerskaters, who seem to exchange courtesy for speed. It's for those very reasons - unsafe operating conditions, unsafe operating habits, and rude behavior - that result in laws being passed governing what should be a simple method of transportation.

Right or wrong, the laws exist. Agree with them or not, you are breaking the law when you choose to disobey them. They're in place for your safety and ours. Follow them.

in colsing, the law enforcement agencies of Seminole County would go a long way in helping get that point across - and make Seminole County a much safer place to ride a bicycle - by enforcing those laws on the books. And remember to wear your Spencer, Elliott 1-2 in Talladega sweep

By PAUL NEWSERRY AP Sports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. - Jimmy Spencer, whose hard-charging — some might call it hardheaded style once angered nearly everyone at Talladega Superspeedway, knows when to back off now.

What's next? Will Bobby Knight try diplomacy every now and then? Will Don King order his barber to take more than a little off the top?

Spencer's newfound patience kept him out of trouble in the early going of Sunday's DieHard 500, while his crew tinkered with a handling problem. When they finally got it fixed, Spencer did what he does best: charged for the front.

"They told me to use my head. be patient, and we'll adjust on it," said Spencer, who grabbed the lead 19 laps from the finish and beat teammate Bill Elliott to the finish line by .025 seconds for his second NASCAR Winston Cup victory in less than a month. "The hardest thing for me to do is back off and take water, but that's what I did. I bit my lip a lot in that car."

After his third pit stop, when the crew put on four new tires and altered the chassis, Spencer finally felt comfortable in his Ford Thunderbird.

"I was hanging on out there," he said. "In the old days, I would have kept on wheeling and I probably would have been the second or third" car knocked out of the race.

The old days that Spencer talks about with such nostalgia weren't that long ago. During the Winston Select 500 in May. he attempted a questionable pass in the trioval, sparking a crash that took out several contenders. Spencer escaped the pileup to finish fourth, making those he knocked out even angrier.

"I made a lot of mistakes in May," Spencer is now willing to admit. This time, he said, "Everybody respected me and I respect them and there really wasn't a problem."

Spencer, with Elliott close behind, rocketed past Erni Irvan into the lead, then kept th accelerator on the floor to the end of the 188-lap race. Elliott winless since November 1992 tried everything to get around the other Junior Johnson Ford.

"I felt the place to be was in front." and Spencer. who averaged 163.173 mph in a race slowed by just five caution flags. "The car was handling so well."

Down the backstretch the final time, Elliott weaved back and forth behind Spencer like a drunken driver, looking for just a glimpse of an opening. He never found it.

"Man, I tried everything." Elliott said. "I didn't know what else to do at the end. He just had the faster car at the end, and that's all there is to it." Irvan finished third, holding off a determined late charge by Ken Schrader, who barely beat Daytona 500 winner Sterling Marlin for fourth. Mark Martin came home a close sixth.

Spencer was relieved it wasn't Dale Earnhardt in his rearview mirror on that last lap. Nothing against Elliott, but Earnhardt is the master of Tailadega, with seven Winston Cup victories. more than any other driver at the 2.66-mile track.

Sunday, though, Earnhardt burned a piston coming out of the pits and had to park his Chevrolet on Lap 80. He finished 34th and surrendered the series lead to Irvan, who held on for third and turned a 93-point deficit into a 16-point lead after 18 of 31 races.

"I was glad to see Dale out of there," Spencer said. "Dale is like a snake in the grass waiting to strike. It was so much easier to race without Dale on your back. He's the best." Rusty Wallace, who came into the race third in the season standings, had another bad day at Talladega, where he never has finished better than sixth and has falled to finish more often than not. Wallace burned a piston and wound up last in the 42-car field, going out after just eight laps and failing past Mark Martin to fourth.

Fern is grown for its attractive fronds

Ferns, of which there are over 10,000 species, are non-flowering perennials which offer versatile usage in home and in the landscape.

One of the most unusual ferns is the staghorn fern. The staghorn fern is an epiphyte or air plant which is normally found growing on the side of trees in its native habitat. The generic name Platcyerium comes from the Greek word meaning "broad horn." These plants are grown for their attractive antier-like fronds (leaves). The plant bears two types of fronds: the sterile fronds which ar flat, round and located at the base of the fern and the fertile fronds which are irregular, lobed and usually ascending from the plant. Spores appear as brownish masses on the tips of the antier-like fertile fronds. These spores will produce new plants when sown on moist, sterile peat moss. However, this is a slow method of reproduction and most new plants are obtained from suckers (Pups) which develop from the mother plants.

The singhorn fern can be used to cast the spell of the tropics and add interest to a patio wall. In frostless areas, specimens thrive on palm trunks or on branches of

The culture of the staghorn fern is not difficult except that the plants are sensitive to the lack of drainage, to low temperature, and to low humidity. These points of culture should receive special attention and a moist atmosphere and a warm temperature should be provided for the best development of the plants. Staghorns grow best in shaded areas and will not endure the Florida sun. The medium upon which they are growing should be allowed to dry slightly between waterings.

These plants are usually grown on a slab of pecky cypress, redwood or tree fern. They also can be grown in hanging baskets. Unless the material to which they are attached has a naturally porous and spongy surface, a bed of sphagnum moss should be attached by wire or other means. The roots can grow in the moss and this material also aids in maintaining a high humidity.

All of the many species of staghorn ferns require or grow best in a high temperature. 60-70 degrees Fahrenheit or higher. However, the common staghorn fern (Platycerium bifurcatum) will tolerate a temperature of 50 degrees F. and is best adapted for use in the low humidity conditions of the average Spraying the plants periodically will help to maintain a high humidity around them. However, they should not be sprayed during the winter. Spraying during the winter months will cause spotting of the leaves and often severe rotting of the crown.

The staghorn fern responds to fertilization as much as other ferns. However, since growth is slow, only a small amount of fertilizer should be added at any one time and the plants fertilized only during the growing season, or summer months.

Volunteer sticks with Meals on Wheels

By SUSAN WEN Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY -Being a retired secretary for 18 years hasn't stopped Mary Cook from working. She even considers herself a "professional volunteer."

Cook came to Lake Mary in 1981 after four years in Long-wood. She moved to Florida in 1978 from Connecticut. Her children, Mary and Peggy, are now grown and on their own. She does enjoy some grand-motherly pride by an occasional boast about her six grandchildren and five great grandchildren. Cook attends church at Grace Methodist in Lake Mary and of course volunteers there assisting with the monthly communion.

For many years Cook worked as a "Pink Lady" at Florida Hospital in Altamonte Springs and volunteered wherever she was needed. "It was fun work," she said. "I worked with the oncology department initially but I couldn't take it anymore. couldn't take it anymore because I lost so many of my friends to cancer. I started in the gift shop for a while after

She expressed that there is minimum time involved and the benefits are so great. "We bring meals to people that can't cook for themselves," she said. "It's so rewarding."

Cook discussed one of her favorite people on her route. There is a lady on my route that has both legs amputated," she said. " She is always in such good spirits and always has a kind word to say. She greets us with a smile and never has a complaint." She spoke of another favorite. "We used to have a 92 year old blind lady," she said. "She always could do it herself, thank you. It was so cute. She never wanted all york to help her."

Cook summed-aptwhy she continued to work with Meals on Wheels. "I get more out of it than I put into it," she said.

Will diet affect low blood sugar?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm inter- Naturally nervous and anxious sted in information on low persons have inappropriately ested in information on low blood sugar. I think I have this condition, but I can't afford professional analysis. Thus, I have to cope with minor bouts of anxiety, lightheadedness, rapid heartbeat and occasional vertigo. Will diet alone cure my problems?

DEAR READER: When the blood-sugar level drops too low (usually less than 40 milligrams per deciliter; normal 75-100). some people experience palpita-tions, anxiety, sweating, fatigue, hunger, and lightheadedness.

I say "some people" because the phenomenon is far from universal; healthy young athletes, for example, may experience no symptoms from low-blood sugar (hypoglycemia). Conversely, otherwise healthy individuals can experience the symptoms I mentioned even though their blood-sugar levels may exceed 50 mg/dL. Therefore, the diagnosis of hypoglycemia depends on two criteria: documentation of a sugar level below 40 mg/dL with the simultaneous appearance of symptoms.

In most cases of bona fide hypoglycemia, the cause is unknown. For some reason, after a carbohydrate-rich meal, the level of insulin in the bloodstream over-shoots, driving the sugar down too far. In a few cases, however, this insulin overabundance may be the result of a tumor in the pancreas, the digestive gland that produces insulin.

Thus, any person with hypoglycemia (on blood testing for sugar) should also be checked for a pancreatic tumor, using ultrasound, CT scanning and sophisticated blood tests, including scrum insulin levels.

I've subjected you to this rather technical treatise for two

One, hypoglycemia has been a 'designer disease" in the past.

Two, if you really have hypoglycemia, you should un-dergo further medical tests to rule out a tumor -- which, obviously, would be treated more aggressively than by diet alone.

Having said this, I will add that trying a diet for awhile won't hurt you and, in the absence of the unlikely tumor. may actually help.

I am writing this column the day after Formula 1 Grand Prix driver Ayrion Senna was killed. He was arguably the best motor-racing driver ever. It is always tragic when any sport loses its best participant. I always admired his excellent driving, all the more so as I have driving, all the more so as I have done a little motor-racing train-

Who is the best bridge player no longer alive? Oswald Jacoby and Howard Schenken come to mind. Today's deal was played by the latter. An ambitious auction reached an apparently impossible five clubs. After West led the heart king, how did Schenken try to make the contract?

Schenken had that invaluable knack of being able to predict how an opponent will defend. Here, seeing that he stood no chance if he won West's opening lead, Schenken dropped the four. But West, Wildemar von Zedtwits, was suspicious. He didn't fall for the Bath Coup:

instead, he exited with a trump.

Still facing defeat, Schenken won in hand and immediately led the spade four. Thinking declarer had a guess coming up. von Zedtwitz matched speed with speed. Instantly he played the two. Yet Schenken had no option: He called for dummy's

When it held, Schenken drew the last trump, unblocked his spade ace, ruffed a heart in the dummy, ruffed a spade in hand and claimed 12 tricks when the and claimed 12 tricks when the king fell. There were two spade winners sitting in the dummy, on which declarer could throw his diamond losers.

In the cold light of day, von Zedtwitz made a mistake. But pushing opponents into error is one hallmark of an excellent bridge player.
