Chamber to hear of economy

SANFORD — A good turnout is expected Tuesday morning for the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Breakfast meeting. "Keys to the Economy" will be the topic of discussion.

Sponsored by the Chamber's Bankers Committee, the event is aimed at helping area businesses of all sizes to continue operating in a good economical status during the months and years ahead.

The breakfast meeting is part of the Chamber's theme for 1992, entitled, "Your Key to Business Opportunity." Various committees are taking part in the year-long project.

Guest speaker is Dr. David Scott, executive director of the Dr. Phillips Institute for the Study of American Business Activity. He is a professor of finance at the University of Central Florida.

While advance reservations have been relatively strong, Chamber spokespersons indicated that there are more seats left for the event.

The breakfast meeting will begin at 8 a.m. tomorrow in the Sanford Civic Center. Last minute reservations at $7 per person are still being accepted at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce office, 322-2212.

Four tickets share $17 million

TALLAHASSEE — A Florida Lotto jackpot estimated at $17 million will be divided by holders of four tickets sold in Brooksville, Fort Myers, Jensen Beach and St. Petersburg, Lottery officials said Sunday.

The tickets are the only ones with all six of the winning numbers drawn late Saturday to end the weekly game. The numbers were 2-3-8-22-24-27.

A total of 523 tickets matched five numbers for $2,606 payoffs; there are 26,505 tickets with four of the numbers, and those tickets are worth $75 each, while 457,313 tickets with half the numbers can be cashed in for $4 each.

Correction

A man arrested for possession of a controlled substance on April 1, reportedly gave deputies an improper address. The address was listed in the Police Briefs on April 2.

According to Seminole County Sheriff's spokesman George Proechel, "When he was arrested, Brandon William Cash told deputies he lived with his mother at 108 Ellen Place." The resident of the home, Jess Murray, reported that Cash does not live there.

Business as usual at bank

Foster: Nothing changes. Interest rates will remain as is

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — It will be business as usual today, say officials with Federal Trust Bank, FSB, of their newly-acquired First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Seminole County.

The approximately 23,700 depositors of about $123.4 million at the bank will see no changes, bank officials said. They may continue to use First Federal checks and other materials until they need a new supply, when they will receive supplies bearing the Federal Trust name.

"Nothing changes," said Federal Trust president George Foster this morning. "Interest rates will remain as is until we have a chance to look over things."

Over 580 compete in Social Studies Fair

By VICKI DECONNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Over 580 students took part in the tenth annual Seminole County Social Studies fair at Seminole Community College Saturday.

The majority of the students participated in the creation of the research projects, though there were opportunities for the students to show off their social studies skills in the form of plays and skits as well as by taking part in events like the Current Events Bowl.

Seven of the district's middle schools and all the district high schools sent at least one representative to the fair.

According to Jim Elliott, coordinator of social studies for the district, there was a high quality of participation this year.

"There were some wonderful projects this year," Elliott said.

The overall winner for project category was Jamie Nicole Kruger of Lake Brantley High School for "Galileo Galilei: His Quest for Knowledge."

Kruger will represent Seminole County in the state social studies competition later this month.

Other winners at the local fair were:

• Individual projects, 6th grade: 1. Eric Cohen, Greenwood Lakes; 2. Matthew D. Warrick, Jackson Heights and 3. Jane Warring, Greenwood Lakes.

• Individual projects, 7th grade: 1. Christine Currie, Jackson Heights; 2. Joel McMillan, Milwee and 3. Karen Stefanik, Jackson Heights.

• Individual projects, 8th grade: 1. Elizabeth Yakubchik, Milwee; 2. Susan Fishman, Jackson Heights and 3. Brett Chancellor, Rock Lake.

• Individual projects, high school: 1. Jamie Nicole Kruger, Lake Brantley; 2. Heather Lewis, Seminole and 3. Lorna Pratt, also of Seminole.

• Group projects, 6th grade: 1. Neha Parikh and Joanie Breitenbruck, 2. Kristen Murray and Keia Mastrianni, 3. Jennifer Armstrong and Amy Stratton, all of Jackson Heights.

• Group projects, 7th grade: 1. Katie Golinik and Patricia Kontogiorgis, Milwee; 2. Jennifer Holt and Mommy Lim, Jackson See Fair, Page 5A

Lake Mary to clear old park

By INCK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Crescent Park is the next project in Lake Mary's Neighbors for Neighborhoods endeavor. The City has approved $14,000 for a complete refurbishing of the area.

During consideration of the park for the latest project, Mayor Randy Morris commented, "This area is such a wooded swampy area. It doesn't even look like it should be a park, but the city owns it, and that's what it's supposed to be." The park is located at the corner of Country Club Road and Estella Road near Little Lake Mary.

Morris commented, "We've had excellent cooperation from Keith Abel and Mary Jane Duryea, who are both residents near the park area, and we expect to hear from others who will be willing to help in this project."

It is currently overgrown with underbrush and trees. Parks and Recreation Director John Holland described it. "It's really nothing more than a swampy area now, with brush and trees all over the place." He added, "There is supposed to be a small lake, or a pond on the property, but actually, it's just a swamp."

Holland estimated it would take at least two weeks of work to get the land together. "One thing we'll have to do," he said, "is improve it so the playground area is above the water line."

Other work at the site also includes a slight straightening of Estella Road to the north of the site. Estella is not paved. Improved drainage areas leading to the pond, and the installation of a small size gazebo are also planned.

When finished, one of the leading features of the neighborhood park will be a lengthy nature trail See Park, Page 5A

New county code rules may affect construction

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The rules of the Seminole County development game have changed.

As of April 1, the county has begun operating under new development requirements imposed by the state-approved county development plan. Other changes have been required by other state and federal laws requiring drinking water protection and endangered species protection.

County planners said the changes may have a far-reaching effect on new construction, but what the actual impact of the changes will be has yet to be tried.

"The only way we'll know what the impact will be is after it's been in effect for a while," said Frances Chandler, county comprehensive planner.

The development code changes restrict new development unless adequate "infrastructure" services are available See Code, Page 5A

Airport Authority to request approval of moving offices

By INCK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Another step may be taken tomorrow morning in efforts to move the Sanford Airport Authority offices to another facility. Approval will be requested to put the project out for bids.

The Authority has been considering relocating to building 439 at the airport facility. The building would be shared by Seminole County, which has already established an emergency medical unit training school in the structure.

According to Airport Director Steve Cooke, "We have been working on this for quite some time, and I'm ready now to ask the Authority for approval to put the project out for bids."

He explained, "We would probably have the work done in two steps, with the interior refurbished this year, then the exterior area re-done next year." He added, "The exterior would also have a new canopy added."

Once the interior work has been completed, Cooke contemplated the airport offices could move in, with no inconvenience for either the airport management or the County facilities during construction.

Teacher arrested on drug charges

FORT LAUDERDALE — A sixth-grade social studies teacher was one of four men arrested for trafficking and distributing cocaine, police said.

Joseph Vance, 39, a teacher at Nova Middle School, and Guy Guanino, 39, both of Oakland Park, were arrested Friday night as the result of a four-month investigation by the Broward Sheriff's Office, the federal Drug Enforcement Administration and the U.S. Postal Service, sheriff's spokesman Al Gordon said.

Thomas Holler, 35, of Richmond, Ohio, and James Hughes, 39, of Sharon, Pa., also were arrested, Gordon said.

Vance, Holler, Hughes and Guanino were charged with trafficking in cocaine, conspiracy to traffic in cocaine and distribution of cocaine, Gordon said. They were being held without bond Sunday at the Broward County Jail.

The investigation began when postal inspectors discovered Vance and Holler mailing cocaine to themselves at addresses in Ohio and Texas, Gordon said.

Ban of fishing nets discussed

CRYSTAL RIVER — Sea turtles, dolphins and manatees are endangered when commercial fishermen use nets near Florida's coastline, supporters of a ban charged.

The comments came Saturday at a hearing of the state Marine Fisheries Commission, which will decide in June whether to ban drift, gill and other entanglement nets in waters extending one mile into the Atlantic Ocean and three miles into the Gulf of Mexico.

Sport fishing groups led by the Florida Conservation Association support the ban, which died this year in the Legislature, saying the nets trap sea mammals and are depleting the mullet and sardine populations.

But some commercial fishermen countered the 25 million pounds of mullet netted annually is a vital state industry and crucial to the livelihood of 8,000 Florida workers. A net ban would mean lost income to the fishermen and thousands of others in related services and industries, they said.

Women arrested after dead man found

HOLLYWOOD — A robbery victim was given a glance at a murdered man's body in a closet to convince him to turn over more money, police said.

The man got away from his robbers Saturday, and police later found the murder victim in a car trunk and arrested two women.

The incident began when a Hollywood man, whose name was not released, brought police to the Bahama Motel to say he had been robbed at gunpoint by the man and women.

He said he met the trio at a bar and willingly rode with them to their motel room, but once there one of them pulled a handgun. He told police they tied him up and demanded his cash and jewelry.

The three made repeated threats and showed him the body, police said.

But the robbery victim escaped and went to the police. Police found the women's car two blocks from the motel, and the body of Walter Siminaki, 66, of Dania was inside the trunk.

Desecrating grave charged

PENSACOLA — Three teenagers, one accused of pouring beer into the eye sockets of a corpse and another of trying to take the skull, have been charged with desecrating a grave at Millview Cemetery.

The Pensacola cemetery has been a frequent target of vandals and last November three other young people were arrested for stealing a skull.

Arrests were made Friday in the latest episode, which occurred in early March, said Escambia County sheriff's investigator Terry Kilgore.

"The families are horrified," Kilgore said. "You can't help but feel outraged about it."

He said Eric Palmetto, 18, admitted to the beer-pouring at the above ground vault of a woman who was interred 15 years ago. The vault had been opened by earlier vandals and recovered with plywood that was ripped off in the most recent incident.

Loitering ordinances challenged

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — City ordinances that prohibit loitering are being challenged in the Florida Supreme Court, causing concern among police who use the laws to combat drug trafficking and prostitution.

At issue are a pair of Tampa anti-loitering ordinances that have been upheld by a circuit judge and the 2nd District Court of Appeals.

The Supreme Court was scheduled to hear oral arguments on the issue today.

Stephen Krossschell, a public defender whose client, Oliver Holliday, is challenging the ordinances, said they are unconstitutional because people are denied the right to associate freely and police can make arrests without good reason.

"It would be easier for police to come into people's houses without a warrant, but we

it would be easier for police to come into people's houses without a warrant, but we don't allow that."

don't allow that," Krossschell said.

Holliday, 23, received a 60-day jail sentence in 1990 after he was convicted of loitering for drugs. He was seen passing something into a car and then bolted when confronted by police. When arrested a few minutes later, no drugs were found.

Reneitha C. Wyche, who died last year at age 25, was the defendant in the prostitution case. She was arrested in early 1990 after police spotted her flagging down a car in an area known for prostitution.

Tyrone Brown, an assistant city attorney in Tampa, said the loitering ordinances are specific enough so that people simply chatting on a street corner won't be arrested for drug-dealing or turning tricks.

"Just hanging out is not a crime," said Lt. John E. Garcia of Tampa's anti-drug QUAD Squad. "The people we arrest normally have a record for drug trafficking. We have experienced officers who know what exchanges look like."

Alice Kelly of Sulphur Springs has seen firsthand how the anti-loitering ordinances work. Ms. Kelly's daily errands take her through an intersection where crack cocaine was dealt openly until police stepped up their anti-drug campaign, using the ordinance.

"If they give this away, they're giving the world to the drug dealers," Ms. Kelly said.

Bar concerned over paralegal industry

Associated Press

TAMPA — Former legal secretary Jerri Wakeman says her document-preparation business is an alternative to expensive attorneys for simple procedures such as name-changes and no-fault divorces.

But the growth of non-attorney legal services has some worried.

"It isn't in the public interest for unregulated legal services to proliferate without some kind of scrutiny," says Greg Presnell, an Orlando lawyer serving on a Florida Bar committee created to examine the growing industry.

A recent Florida edition of the national Kiplinger Letter said the growth of such paralegal businesses is booming, with Florida being fertile ground for non-lawyers helping people prepare their own legal paperwork.

The Florida Bar's interest has Ms. Wakeman, who started her business eight years ago with her husband after she was laid off as a legal secretary, and others questioning the Bar's motives.

"I wonder if they are as concerned about public harm as the attorneys going out of business," she told The Tampa Tribune in an interview for Sunday editions. "The main issue is, are we harming the public or benefiting it? I think we are being a very big help."

The Wakemans run a paralegal business that helps customers fill out simple legal forms, for filing wills, changing names or asking for uncontested divorces.

Special unit has the last say in domestic clashes

Associated Press

MIAMI — Baseball star Jose Canseco and his wife Esther thought their clash of wills and cars was a private affair, especially after she declined to press charges against him.

But in Dade County, a special unit of the State Attorney's office has the last word in such matters.

Canseco, who was ordered Thursday to undergo psychological counseling, had unknowingly collided with one of the country's most ardent advocates of intervention in cases of domestic violence when he rammed his wife's car after an argument.

Even if the fighting parties claim they don't want the law involved, the law gets involved and stays involved.

"Victims of domestic violence will usually say they're not battered," says Maggie Rosenbaum, head of the unit, speaking of cases in general. "But what they don't understand is that their boyfriends, husbands or ex-lovers are committing crimes not only against them, but also against the state and the laws of the state."

Ms. Rosenbaum's unit, believed to be the first of its kind in Florida, was formed in 1986.

The unit's concepts were incorporated in a new state law designed to encourage and ensure prosecution in domestic violence. A key provision of the law, which took effect Jan. 1, encourages prosecutors to file charges against an offender even if the victim doesn't want to press the case.

"We are much more aggressive now," says Ms. Rosenbaum, noting past cases in which victims fearful of pressing charges later wound up severely injured or even dead at the hands of the same offender.

"We know from research that domestic violence escalates," Ms. Rosenbaum said.

POLICE BRIEFS

Gambling arrests made

Bernard Burke, 23, 1506 W. 15th St., Sanford; Gregory Lenord DeShields, 30, 5344 Carter Road, Lake Mary; Curtis Lee Williams, 34, 70 Castle Brewer Court, Sanford, and London Edward Strawter, 34, 1012 S. Holly Ave., Sanford were charged with gambling when they were arrested Friday.

The group was gambling with a set of dice in the parking lot of Ideals Grocery Store on 13th St., Sanford, police said. Burke was also charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana.

DeShields, who police said has a record of past drug arrests, was charged with loitering to engage in narcotic activity as well.

All but Burke were held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on $100 bond. Burke was held in lieu of $500 bond.

Loitering brings arrests

Three people were arrested in unrelated occasions for loitering in drug activity areas in Sanford Friday.

Sampson Levant, 24, 806 E. 14th St., Sanford, was taken into custody at Wadels Grocery store on 7th Street. Police said he had a history of drug arrests and had been warned not to loiter in areas known for drug activity.

Milton Roebuck, 19, 900 Cypress Ave., Sanford was arrested at 8th Street and Pine after police said they warned him about loitering in the area that was known for drug activity.

Dave Willis, 21, 1403 Locust Ave., Sanford, was loitering in the parking lot of the BP station, 801 Celery Ave., Sanford.

Each was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $100 bond.

Man won't pay for call, is arrested

Lloyd H. Collins, 30, 1505 W. 25th St., Apt. 303, was charged with defrauding an innkeeper when he was arrested Saturday.

Police said he checked into and paid for a room at the Super 8 motel in Sanford, but when he made a 133-minute long distance telephone call from that room, police said, he refused to pay the $48.88 for the call. Police said they have been called to the hotel for the same reason in the past.

Collins was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

Drug charges filed

Dennis Wayne Helmadollar, 39, 7359 Sylvan Drive, Sanford, was charged with possession of cocaine, possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and possession of drug paraphenalia when he was arrested on Saturday.

Helmadollar was arrested in Altamonte Springs at the Altamonte Lanes on Douglas Avenue after police said they observed Helmadollar and a woman acting suspiciously in a truck in an isolated part of the parking lot.

Police said they approached the car and found a brief case that contained a bag of white powder, a bag of a green leafy substance, a small mirror and a razor blade.

The white powder tested positive in a presumptive test for cocaine. The leafy substance tested positive for marijuana.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $3,000 bond.

Crack arrest made

Tony Anthony Jones, 25, 1405 W. 16th St., Sanford, was charged with possession of crack when he was arrested on Friday.

Police said they observed him parked at the side of Ideals Grocery store on 13th St. in Sanford. They said that many people approached his car and made what appeared to be drug transactions.

Police said that he refused to let officers search his car so the K-9 unit was called out and the dog indicated that there might be a controlled substance in the car.

A search of his vehicle revealed three pieces of crack cocaine, police said.

Police transported him to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held in lieu of $3,000 bond.

Population of schools on agenda

SANFORD — The Sanford Committee, a group of citizens which has been working to improve the image of Sanford, will meet on Tuesday night with the Seminole County school board on Tuesday night at 7 p.m. to discuss the declining student population at Seminole High School.

Though the group is concerned with more than just the schools in their overall scope, they will be concentrating on education tomorrow night.

"I hope the school board will listen to what our problems are," said Billy Higgins, chairman of the committee. "They have been receptive in the past, but they will have to make some difficult decisions if we are going to resolve this problem fairly."

Seminole High School's student population has been declining steadily over the last five years, according to Higgins.

"You'd think that the school board would see that rezoning is the only answer to that problem," he said. "Since it (the student enrollment) has been declining consistently you can see that it will continue."

With newly renovated buildings, a strong curriculum and a new principal, Higgins said that Seminole High School has a lot to offer students.

"I can't understand why the school is underenrolled when it has so much to offer," he said.

While the committee believes that rezoning is the quickest and most stable solution to the school's woes.

The infusion of more students would mean more state dollars to help make other improvements at the school that would make it a more attractive facility and, perhaps draw more people to the community, Higgins said.

"Rezoning is not a popular issue," Higgins said. "And some of the school board members have made their views on that known already. But sometimes public officials have to make difficult decisions."

Higgins said that other solutions to the problem would "certainly be welcome," but he feels that rezoning is the best choice.

"Anything less can't do any harm," he said.

The Sanford Committee will meet with the board in the board's meeting room, 1211 Mellonville Ave., Sanford at 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

Consultant to present candidates

By VICKI DeSCHENNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Dr. Wayne Blanton, the consultant hired by the Seminole County school board to help them select a new superintendent, will address the board Tuesday evening. He will present them with the list of the top five candidates that he and a citizens' committee have selected.

More than 150 applicants submitted their resumes and references to the selection committee. Last week the committee submitted their top 14 candidates and Blanton selected 15.

Nine names were on both lists and the committee, with Blanton's help selected the top five.

Those who made the final cut were:

• Dr. Paul Hagerty, superintendent of the Springfield, Missouri Public School System;

• Dr. Gary Mathews, associate superintendent for instructional services with the Spring Branch Independent School District, Houston, Texas.

• Dr. Diana "Dick" Cabbage, area superintendent of the Wichita, Kansas Public School System.

• Dr. Philip McDaniel, superintendent of the Washington Township, Indiana Public School System.

• Dr. S. Gene Denisar, superintendent of the North Kansas City, Missouri Public School System.

The board will, if they approve of the list that is presented to them, next act about arranging interviews with the applicants.

Blanton will make his presentation to the board at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the board's meeting room, 1211 Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

Popguns

In January, President Bush promised a showdown if Congress didn't pass his economic program by March 20. When the showdown came recently, it consisted of the president and Congress, standing face to face at sunset, dueling with popguns.

In the hours before the deadline, Democrats in Congress passed a tax bill shaped more as a political message than a long-term approach to the nation's economic needs. It was promptly vetoed, although for the wrong reasons.

Bush called the bill a tax increase; in fact, it was a tax shift. It cut taxes slightly on those earning less than $70,000 while adding a 36 percent top rate for couples earning more than $140,000 a year and putting a 10 percent surcharge on millionaires.

Recalibrating the tax system to undo the unfairness of the 1980s, when middle-class and poor Americans lost ground to the rich, belongs high on the national agenda. But it makes little sense to talk about tax cuts for anyone when the deficit is running at $350 billion a year. Those revenues are better used to reduce the federal drain on the nation's savings than to spur more private consumption.

Equally important, the tax bill contained versions of Bush's own dubious proposals, including a scaled-down capital gains tax cut and tax breaks for commercial real estate developers, which would have distorted business decisions and offered little promise of promoting long-term economic growth. They will not be missed.

The president's response to Congress' failure to do his bidding was to go on his long-promised offensive against lawmakers. But all the president offers is the same mishapen tax package he introduced in January for the new Congress' priority: had a challenge to Congress to cut what he calls "pork barrel" spending: funding for a parking garage here, agricultural research there.

In a $1.5 billion budget that runs a $352 billion deficit, the president, who has been traveling from primary state to primary state delivering his own election-year goodies, has singled out $3.6 billion in "wasteful" spending he wants Congress to rescind, of which $2.9 billion is for the Seawolf submarine. That's nit-picking elevated to political theater.

With both sides having established their political messages for November, it's time to put aside the charade of changing taxes to provide short-term stimulus. A slow economic recovery has already begun and it's too late for any tax changes to have much impact on its course.

Writing any tax changes for the long term, either to spur investment and saving or to make the system fairer, will have to wait until voters decide in November whether to break the deadlock of divided government.

Where Congress and the president can still help in the short term is by throwing states and cities a fiscal rescue line. The recovery is too slow and too late to help local and state budgets, still drowning in the red ink of recession.

Without a one-time infusion of cash assistance from Washington, many of them will have to slash more deeply at school budgets, police protection and public health, cuts that will leave a disabling legacy in education and on city streets for years to come.

Now that the political popguns have been fired let Washington do something to keep communities and schools whole until the recovery takes hold.

Just the facts ma'am - or is it?

To say American women are scared of breast cancer is like saying congressional checkbook keepers have a slight problem with basic ciphering. For the last few years, young women with breast cancer have been among the most sought-after guests for TV talk and magazine shows. The message has been hammered home by host after host staring frankly into the camera: "Your odds of getting breast cancer are 1 in 9... 1 in 9... 1 in 9."

Inevitably, we think of ourselves and eight of our female relatives or friends: Which one of us? As time passes we wonder about the authenticity of the statistic, as we do other statistics popularly espoused and accepted, because our experience doesn't bear them out. But we rarely question. Who are we to doubt the experts? If the statistics are skewed, we don't hear about it until another expert doubts the experts.

That's what happened recently when medical geneticist and cancer risk counselor Dr. Patricia T. Kelly publicly disputed the "1 in 9" figure used by the American Cancer Society. In reality, Kelly told writer Sandra Blakeslee in The New York Times, for women under 50 the risk of breast cancer is closer to 1 in 1,000. As a woman gets older her chances increase, but even at age 80, her chances aren't 1 in 9. That figure actually represents "the cumulative probability that any woman will develop breast cancer between birth and age 110."

I'm no statistician. Maybe that's why when I hear the unqualified statement that a woman's odds of getting breast cancer are 1 in 9, I don't assume they're talking about sometime before I'm 110 years old. I don't think the average woman assumes anything like that, either, especially when the figure is used in a string of information that includes the facts that the disease is on the rise and the risk of getting it is going up among younger women. So if the figure is misleading when used without qualification, why would the American Cancer Society use it that way? ACS spokeswoman Joann Schellenback told

The message has been hammered home by host after host.

Blakeslee the figure is "meant to be more of a metaphor than a hard figure. ... The 1 in 9 is meant to be a jolt. We use it to remind people that the problem hasn't gone away."

Metaphor? Jolt? With all due respect to an organization I much admire, that's just another way of saying "the end justifies the means." The end never justifies the means if people are needlessly scared.

What quality of life can we enjoy if we have to live it more afraid than we should be about life's pitfalls? If figures are used to imply much greater probability than actually exists for a variety of life's risks, pretty soon we'll add up all the fractions and have nothing left.

I am grateful to the ACS for making many of us take the precautions of regular breast self-exams and mammograms. I am grateful for the attention they have helped focus on insurers who don't cover preventive mammography, and for helping to bring about legislation that mandates coverage in some states.

But a boomerang of the "1 in 9" figure is that some women are so terrified by their fear of high risk that they refuse to even see doctors lest their fears materialize. Furthermore, some doctors misinterpret the statistics and compound the terror.

HODDING CARTER

It seems perks know no bounds

The great congressional check-kiting scandals, despite the media attention and public reaction, are so many small potato peelings on the vast garbage heap of recent outrages. Actually, they are also reconfirmation of a point made in this column nine months ago: "Almost without our noticing it, government in this democratic republic has become enmeshed with perquisites and payoffs, with multilayered staffs and the love of pomp and circumstance."

What bears remembering is that the inspiration for the column was not Congress but former White House chief of staff John Sununu, "a silly man with an overinflated taste for special privilege paid for by others." What should not be forgotten is that the "overinflated taste" is not limited to the executive branch and Congress. It exempts few people and even fewer occupations, notably including journalists and journalism.

Which is essentially what I tried to say during a recent Sunday taping of ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley." When asked to speculate on the fate of congressional perks in the wake of the uproar over the loose rules at the House bank, I shifted ground and argued that devotion to special privilege was not confined to Capital Hill. What of the limousines routinely provided for network television's high-paid "talent," at least in the flush times of the 1970s and 1980s?

That question was treated as a side issue, which it was, but the underlying point was and is inescapable. A nation whose semi-official creed stresses the values of classlessness has been increasingly subdivided of late along lines of privilege and economic standing. There is the vast herd of ordinary folk who must make do with one set of rules and roles, and there is a distinct elite that feasts in self-satisfied isolation far from the hassles of the common man.

The limousine, rather than that collective pooling of members of Congress' money that was the House Bank, is the appropriate symbol for our times. Taxpayers provide them for White House staffers and congressional leaders. Stockholders provide them, indirectly but surely, for network news and other corporate executives. Network news executives provide them, not infrequently as required by laboriously negotiated contracts, for their on-air stars.

Where do these limousines take everyone? As often as not, to gatherings of the Perks and Privileges Pack in agreeably luxurious surroundings. In those environs, the television news anchor is as one, and indeed is proud to be considered as one, with the other multimillion-dollar-a-year men and power brokers with whom he is associating. America, the land of overnight wealth, of old money and new pretensions, has been familiar with aspects of this phenomenon for more than two centuries. But what was routine behavior for the nouveau riche and supposed aristocracy in the past has, in the late 20th century, become the province of the peoples' tribunes as well. Media and political plutocrats now rub elbows regularly with other, and frequently older, forms of aristocracy, or strive energetically to do so.

The great political essayist and journalist Walter Lippmann once warned his fellows of the seductiveness of "social climbing on the pyramids of power," but that is only one aspect of today's corruption. It is infinitely gratifying to glide smoothly in stretch limousines through the mean streets, to dine with the gilded and the brilliant, to be marked off as special by the many ways you are set aside from the teeming masses. The good table without a reservation, the unique bank for members only, the fawning obsequiousness of a public that has confused celebrity with merit: How sweet it is!

Which means that the target for populist rage is fat, juicy and growing, and that a media allegedly intent on unearthing wretched excess might consider a glance in the mirror. Reserved parking places are provided not merely for members of Congress, but for those who cover them. Special workspaces in government buildings are routinely provided, as though press and government were one. Chartered planes and buses and hotel reservations are laid on for reporters covering the president or his Cabinet. The White House tennis court and presidential fishing trips are reserved for a deserving few among the many reporters who are assigned to report on the presidency.

Congressional Democrats are countering with commendable bravado, itemizing the ways that the White House and its minions have assumed the prerogatives of royalty.

Some people are trying to make a partisan issue out of the need for a general housecleaning. They're missing the point. What we have is a societal problem, not a political one.

Devotion to special privilege was not confined to Capital Hill.

National pastime goes out of reach

WASHINGTON — "Take me out to the ballgame." is an invitation many fans will decline this season. Major-league baseball, along with other pro sports, is being priced out of the reach of fans — both those at the stadium and those in front of the tube.

The fans won't get any relief from Congress. Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., introduced the "Fairness for Fans Act" last summer that would have required teams to broadcast a certain number of their games on free TV, given the fact that many franchises and stadiums are subsidized by local tax dollars. Kostmayer has been unable to find a single cosponsor for his bill. Members of Congress won't stand up to the team owners and leagues, according to Kostmayer. The fear is that an over-regulated team owner would seek revenge on the team's home city. "Cities are rightfully nervous about the possibility of losing franchises that they've invested millions of dollars in," Kostmayer told our associate Ed Henry.

The latest group to feel the wrath of pro sports are bar owners who are being sued for showing televised games to their patrons without paying a pound of flesh to the team. Bottom line: When teams pay multimillion-dollar salaries, they can't afford to let the 25 million Americans on food stamps see the games for free.

No team epitomizes the race for the almighty buck better than the famed New York Yankees, who take in $69.4 million a year for media rights alone. It is a massive multi-year deal that locks most of their local fans out of the games. The fans have the option of subscribing to a cable network for about $30 a month, or going to the stadium — an outing that will cost a family of four $101.61 this year for tickets, refreshments and souvenirs.

Only one thing galls team owners more than their fans seeing the game on free TV. That's their fans watching the game in a local bar, eating hot dogs and guzzling beer that they could be buying at the ballpark. Hundreds of sports bars have been slapped with lawsuits by the major leagues for showing games to their patrons, either by pirating the signal or paying less for the cable hookup than the team thinks it is worth. The Right to View Coalition, a group of bar and restaurant owners, is lobbying Congress to intervene and preserve the right of fans to watch the games in their neighborhood taverns.

Pro sports franchises behave like businesses and raise a stink about their rights to market their product, but they also hide under the shelter of a 1961 law that said they are immune from antitrust laws. Major-league clubs want to sell tickets, and they can't if the game is showing for free in the local bar. "It's their franchise," said David Alworth, executive director of broadcasting for major-league baseball. "We have to support clubs in whatever decision they make to market their product."

But what if people can't afford the price of cable or tickets? "Every game is on radio," Alworth said. BREACH OF ETIQUETTE — The Washington Huskies, co-national champions for Division I NCAA football, were touring the U.S. Capitol last month when they decided to take a considerable load off their feet. They picked the wrong place to perch — the 50 chairs of the U.S. Senate.

The Senate floor is the inner sanctum of government, a place common tourists, even heroes of the gridiron, don't venture without an escort from a member of Congress.

Members of Congress won't stand up to team owners and leagues.

moving in to the six First Federal branches in Seminole and Volusia Counties at the close of business Friday night. The Winter Park-based Federal Trust was the successful bidder out of 25 to acquire the failed savings and loan from the Resolution Trust Corp. RTC took over control of First Federal in April 1991.

Foster, himself a former First Federal executive, said Federal Trust directors saw a good business opportunity with First Federal.

"We know what the potential is," said Foster. "Since we have experience with First Federal, we felt very comfortable with the people and with the environment."

Foster said he worked for First Federal for a total of nine years. When he left before the RTC takeover, Foster was senior branch coordinator. Other First Federal executives now working for Federal Trust include Kevin Krans, who position was unknown this morning, and Dan Lykens, vice president.

The future of the approximately 75 former First Federal employees seems secure, for now, Foster said Federal Trust's immediate plans are to retain all of the employees. Federal Trust spokesman Anne T. Conrod added there may be some duplication in bank operations personnel which may result in future staff changes. Conrod did not know how many personnel might be affected by the duplication.

When the RTC took over control of the First Federal, the 56-year-old institution had $192.7 million in assets and $198.9 million in liabilities and nearly $15 million in delinquent loans. At the time of the Federal Trust acquisition from RTC, First Federal had assets of $110.7 million and liabilities of $123.7 million, mostly deposits.

Federal Trust paid the RTC $911.111 for the six First Federal branches and $11.4 million for $64.2 million in mortgages. The RTC estimates taxpayers will pay $16.6 million for the transaction.

Federal Trust, at the end of 1991, had assets of $91.7 million, double the previous year's $45 million, according to their annual report. The bank had deposits totaling $4.1 million, according to the report. The institution was formed in Amelia Island, Fla. in 1988.

Federal Trust owns three subsidiaries, a mortgage company, a commercial construction company and a commercial building management company, according to its report. The corporate offices were moved to Winter Park in August, 1990 after construction of the bank's headquarters was complete.

Coke commented that the deteriorated roof is the point where we've actually had someone put his foot right through the floor."

Part of the cost for the refurbishing of the new headquarters area will come from a federal grant that could pay for up to 50 percent of the amount.

Another major item on tomorrow morning's agenda includes consideration of a joint participation agreement with the Florida Department of Transportation, for its increased participation in the taxiway "B" project. The taxiway is part of a $2.3 million expansion that has been underway for many months.

"Most of this," explained Cooke, "is the paperwork required for us to get possibly a five percent grant from the DOT to help pay for the project."

A number of lease and sublease agreements regarding various buildings on the airport property are also scheduled to be discussed.

The Sanford Airport Authority meeting will be held tomorrow morning beginning at 8:30 a.m. in the conference room of Building 1 at the Central Florida Regional Airport.

increase in the cost from $10.95 to $11.74 per month, for each household, but would give the citizens two household trash pickups per week rather than one as we have now."

During a number of previous Commission meetings, citizens have voiced their concern over the collections by Industrial Waste Services. Some have expressed problems with the number of pickups while others have commented on the collection days and other related problems.

One of the complaints has been centered on the timing of yard trash pickup, which is presently done on Saturday mornings. Citizens have requested another day, as many residents have only the weekends during which to work on their yards. The trash must then be left until the following Saturday morning before it is picked up.

The new ordinance calls for a change of days for the yard trash pickup from Saturdays to Wednesdays.

The city's present contract with IWS does not expire until May of 1993, but the matter to be proposed tonight calls for an agreement to extend the present contract until 1995.

"When the State mandated the separate yard trash pickup at the beginning of this year," Terry commented, "we started reviewing the situation, and have been doing it ever since.

We believe we have it all resolved now, and are prepared to present this Ordinance for the Commission's consideration."

Terry explained, "IWS also serves the cities of Winter Springs and Oviedo, and charges them $11.74, the same as they are proposing now for Longwood."

Beginning at 6 p.m. tonight, the Longwood City Commission will meet in a work session to conduct a mid-term budget review.

The contract proposal with IWS will be presented for its first reading during the Commission's regular meeting, beginning at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Longwood City Hall.

Peru's president dissolves Congress, opposition leaders under house arrest

By MORTIMER MAYER Associated Press Writer

LIMA, Peru — Troops owned Lima's streets today after President Alberto Fujimori dissolved Congress and suspended the constitution, accusing lawmakers of blocking his free-market reforms and weakening the war on leftist rebels.

Fujimori announced the actions late Sunday in a speech on national television that was later endorsed by the military.

Radio reports said former President Alan Garcia — the main opposition leader — and several leading legislators were under house arrest.

Armored personnel carriers surrounded the congress and other key buildings and took to the capital's main avenues. Police and army units were searching pedestrians downtown.

Troops shut down one radio station, censored another's reports and were also deployed at the offices of other news organizations, including The Associated Press. They did not interfere with AP operations.

In an effort to strike back at the presidential move, members of Congress planned to meet later today to declare the presidency vacant and name the first vice-president to the post, an opposition politician said. It was not known whether such a move would have any effect.

"Fujimori is on the margin of power," said Pedro Cateriano told The Associated Press. "He's in the hands of the military. It's a total dictatorship."

Other lawmakers agreed. "This is a coup d'etat. The Peruvian people will not stand for it," lawmaker Fernando Olivera said. "Congress will try Fujimori for treason when this is all over."

Soldiers hustled Olivera away when he tried to push past them into the congress building. Before being taken away, he said the presidents of both houses of congress had been placed under house arrest.

In addition to being beset by the hemisphere's most violent insurgency, Peru is mired in recession. Fujimori has tried to push a series of austerity measures through the legislature but encountered stiff opposition from leftists.

which extends to a wooden boardwalk and fishing dock, and eventually to the gazebo.

A picnic area with grill and tables will also be provided.

The money for the newest project was approved unanimously by the City Commission during Thursday's meeting. It is to be taken from the unappropriated general fund money.

Crescent will be the fourth park in the continuing neighborhoods park series. The actual gathering of city volunteer residents to do the necessary work has been set for May 9.

Wal-Mart founder Sam Walton dies of cancer

By DENNIS BYRD
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Sam Walton, who built Wal-Mart into the nation's biggest retail chain and became one of America's richest men without losing his penchant for pickup trucks and bargain haircuts, has died of cancer at 74.

Walton died Sunday at the University of Arkansas Medical Sciences Hospital. He had been treated for leukemia in the early 1980s and was diagnosed with bone cancer in 1990.

A shrewd, ebullient businessman who made a habit of popping into his stores unannounced, Walton built his empire on low prices, customer service and employee loyalty. In 1991, Wal-Mart Stores Inc. detroned Sears, Roebuck and Co. as the nation's largest retailer.

"He was a great merchant, a great leader and a great competitor," said Edward A. Brennan, Sears chairman and chief executive.

Walton opened his first Wal-Mart in Rogers 30 years ago. Now there are 1,735 Wal-Marts in 42 states and 212 Sam's Wholesale Club warehouse stores. In 1991, Wal-Mart earned $1.6 billion, up 33 percent from a year earlier.

In October, Forbes magazine ranked Walton and his four children third through seventh on its list of the richest Americans. The Walton's net worth was put at $4.4 billion each.

An unpretentious man who avoided interviews, Walton occasionally drove his pickup from his home outside the Ozark Mountain city of Bentonville to the town square to shop for groceries and get a haircut.

Walton's stores undercut competitors because they use a high-tech distribution system that gets merchandise to stores within two days, compared with an average of two weeks among rivals.

During surprise visits to his stores, "Mr. Sam," as he was known to employees, led workers and customers in a cheer of "Give me a W, give me an A..."

Walton also wandered the aisles of his competitors' outlets, checking prices, service and stock. Once, he had a fender-bender because he was counting cars in a competitor's parking lot rather than watching the road.

Wal-Mart's 380,000 employees — or "associates" as he called them — were encouraged to come up with their own marketing schemes and ideas. A stock-purchase plan gave them a stake in Wal-Mart's performance.

When he was diagnosed with bone cancer, Walton sent a memo to each store, saying he didn't want his corporate family to hear it from anyone else.

Last month, President Bush gave him the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

"Sam Walton was an American original who embodied the entrepreneurial spirit and epitomized the American dream," Bush said Sunday.

Born in Kingfisher, Okla., Samuel Moore Walton earned a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Missouri in 1940. He went to work as a management trainee at J.C. Penney Co., then served in the Army from 1942 to 1945.

He moved to Arkansas and eventually operated 15 Ben Franklin variety stores with his brother. He opened the first Wal-Mart Discount City in 1962. By 1969, there were 18 stores. The company grew explosively in the 1980s, sometimes adding hundreds of stores a year, most of them in small towns in the South and Midwest.

"There was a lot more business in those towns than people ever thought," Walton once said.

In 1984, when profits exceeded expectations, Walton donned a grass skirt and danced the hula on Wall Street.

Walton was not without failure. The chain abandoned attempts to sell discount drugs and building supplies. And it is scaling back the huge Hypermart stores that opened in 1988.

Walton often encountered resentment when scouting sites because his stores drove many small-town merchants out of business. But assurances that he would provide jobs, attract shoppers and give to charities won over most critics.

Study: Marriage, kids buffer women from job stress

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Being a wife or mother has its hassles, but a new study says it also protects a working woman from distress if her job becomes less satisfying.

She may still feel lousy after a bad day at work, but the study suggests that changes in her overall job satisfaction do not significantly affect her general level of distress.

This buffer effect appeared for women with husbands, other long-term partners or children. In contrast, childless and unattached working women did show job-related changes in distress.

Apparently, family roles offer satisfactions that can offset work troubles, the study's authors said.

"The presence of that other role, that family role ... protects them in terms of their distress from vicissitudes of the workplace," said psychologist Rosalind Barnett.

Working women without family roles might receive similar protection by getting involved in such things as community organizations, said Barnett, a senior research associate at Wellesley College's Center for Research on Women in Massachusetts.

Prior studies have shown that the more roles a woman occupies, the better her mental and physical health, Barnett and co-authors wrote in the April issue of the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology.

The study focused on 305 randomly chosen licensed practical nurses and social workers in Massachusetts.

Barnett said she believes the results also would apply to women in other jobs, although she and co-authors called for further research.

Helen Farmer, a University of Illinois psychologist who studies women's conflicts between home and career, noted that the women in the study had jobs in which they help others.

So they might gain more fulfillment than other women do from the helping aspects of being a mother and partner, she said. She agreed that studies of women in other occupations are needed.

Sandra Tangri, a Howard University psychology professor who studies issues of working women, said she believes the findings would apply to traditionally female jobs. She said she is unsure about male-dominated occupations.

"I think it's a great study," Tangri said. Each woman in the study was interviewed three times, at intervals of about a year, to reveal changes in overall job satisfaction and in distress levels.

The women rated how rewarding or problematic their jobs were on 50 measures, such as job security, convenience of working hours, salary, work demands and support from supervisors.

Distress levels were monitored by standard measures of anxiety and depressive symptoms over the previous 30 days.

Of the women, 153 were married or living with a partner in a long-term relationship, and 192 had at least one child.

Titanic sinking still fascinates after 80 years

By TONY ROGERS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — Nellie Becker awoke to silence. It was 11:40 p.m., and the comforting hum of the ocean liner's engines had stopped. She left her cabin to ask a steward if something was wrong. Nothing, he said.

Nellie went back to bed, waited, worried, then left again. She found another steward, who told her, "Go back to your cabin, get your lifebelts and your children and get up on deck."

"Do we have time to dress?" she asked.

"No, madam," he said, "you have time for nothing."

The Titanic was going down. Eighty years ago this month, Nellie Becker and her children scrambled onto a lifeboat and watched as the ship sank. Mrs. Becker died long ago, but this week, her grandchildren will gather with others in Boston to recall that night.

Interest in the Titanic is still strong. And as time passes, there are still young ears wanting to hear the tale told again.

"Even now, I go to schools and talk to children, and they're all excited about it," said Louise Pope, a survivor who was 4 at the time. "When they see me, it's quite a thing."

The Titanic was the biggest and most luxurious liner in the world when it set out on its maiden voyage from Southampton to New York on April 10, 1912.

The 882½-foot ship included everything from Turkish baths and a gymnasium to a French sidewalk cafe, and its passenger list read like a Who's Who of the day. It could carry 2,500 passengers and a crew of 900.

But shortly before midnight on April 14, the majestic liner hit an iceberg. The hull was ripped open, and the ship began to list.

Women and children were put in lifeboats. But there was not enough room for all, and many refused to believe the Titanic would sink and would not leave.

At 2:20 a.m., on calm seas, the ship split in two. Its stern rose out of the water, pointed straight down and sank in an area southeast of Newfoundland, carrying some 1,500 people to their grave.

Over the years, the story has been kept in the public eye through books, movies and, in 1985, the discovery of the wreck on the ocean floor.

Controversy has trailed some expeditions to remove artifacts from the ship, and rumors continue to swirl over how and why the ship sank.

Just last week, British investigators concluded that the captain of a ship near the Titanic should have helped in the rescue, though there was probably little he could have accomplished.

In Boston this week, members of the Titanic Historical Society will gather to commemorate the anniversary and to ruminate on such questions. Becker's grandchildren will be there, as will Pope, 83, who lives in Milwaukee.

Explaining the allure of the Titanic story, society President Edward Kamuda said: "It's the whole drama of the thing. A ship on its maiden voyage, with high society people aboard, hitting an iceberg on a calm night. It's the impossible tragedy that never should have happened."

The story is also compelling for the examples of courage and dignity during the sinking.

There was Ida Straus, wife of Macy's founder Isidor Straus. She refused to leave the ship without her husband, who had to stay behind with the men. Both went down with the ship.

And Edwina Troutt, a single woman who was horrified that men couldn't board lifeboats with their wives. She refused to leave the ship until a man carrying an infant came to her and said, "I don't want to be saved, but who will save this baby?" Only then did she take the child and board a lifeboat.

Don Lynch, an amateur historian who has interviewed Nellie Becker and many other survivors of the sinking, tells how Mrs. Becker's daughter, Ruth, was separated from her mother and forced to find another lifeboat.

Still, the 12-year-old offered blankets to crewmen, bandaged a man's finger and helped a woman find her baby after they were picked up by a rescue ship.

Before she died in 1990 — at age 90 — Ruth told Lynch the saddest thing she recalled were the scores of women who lined the decks of the rescue ship Carpathia, looking out to sea for lifeboats that might bring their husbands.

Earth summit may produce radical new environmental pact

By PAUL RABURN
AP Science Editor

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The 11th-hour rescue of U.N. environmental talks that nearly collapsed last week offers hope that a radical new agreement will emerge from the U.N. Earth Summit in June, the summit's secretary general says.

"I think we're at a real point of civilizational change," Maurice Strong said Sunday. "I cannot say at this stage that the conference will be a success. I believe, however, that that success is in prospect. It's possible."

Strong also said that in a recent meeting with White House chief of staff Samuel B. Skinner and other top presidential aides, he had seen a significant shift in U.S. policy toward agreement with the goals of the Earth Summit.

"It's a constructive shift, an attempt to try and accommodate," he said. "I am encouraged by the fact that President Bush has recently been engaged personally in the issues facing the conference."

Strong's remarks, made at a Rockefeller Foundation conference on agricultural research, came after representatives of 160 nations reached agreement early Saturday on a 27-point declaration of environmental principles.

The declaration commits the industrial nations of the Northern Hemisphere to help the poorer countries of the South develop in an environmentally safe way.

"It goes quite a bit farther than I think most people thought we could get at this stage," Strong said. "But we are still a long way from many fundamental issues we have to decide."

The breakthrough came after two years of negotiations in preparation for the summit.

Triple murderer executed

By NEAL SIBLER
Associated Press Writer

FLORENCE, Ariz. — A triple murderer made an obscene gesture as he was put to death in the gas chamber today in Arizona's first execution in 29 years.

Donald Eugene Harding, 43, was executed just after midnight following a flurry of appeals. He was pronounced dead 10½ minutes after cyanide pellets were dropped into a bowl of sulfuric acid beneath his chair to release the gas.

As he waited, Harding gestured as if to urge the executioner to get started. At least twice — once while in the throes of death — Harding extended his middle finger. At the time, he had straps across his forearms and wrists.

Among the witnesses was Attorney General Grant Woods.

Harding was sentenced to die for the 1980 murders of businessmen Robert Wise of Mesa and Martin Concannon of Tucson, who were robbed, hogtied, beaten and shot in a Tucson hotel in 1980.

He also was convicted of killing a man in similar fashion a day earlier in a Phoenix motel and was linked to at least three other slayings, one in Arkansas and two in California.

'Reality' of Tribe, 'Hounds unfairly questioned

At the risk of being somewhat existentialist, what is reality?

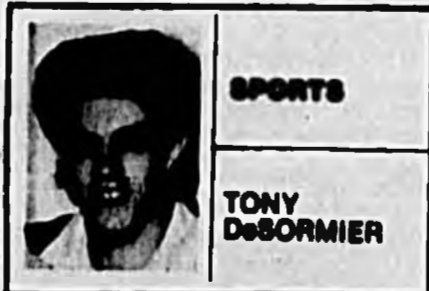

The reason I ask is that at some point during the last two weeks, the coaches of the first-place teams in the Seminole Athletic Conference baseball and softball races were asked the same question by the same individual after a their team won a game...

"So does this mean your team is for real?"

Huh? Is a 19-3 record and the No. 1 Class 3A ranking in the state, "for real?"

Is an 11-4 overall record and a 6-2 mark in the SAC "for real?"

You've got to be kidding me. This is not to cast aspersions on the poster of the question. All that individual did was give voice to the many whispered-behind-the-hand comments that other casual spectators have made...

TONY DeSORMIER

I say "casual spectators" because if these people saw either one of these teams on a regular basis, they'd realize that both of these teams do all the things necessary to be successful: they get good pitching, they play solid defense and they hit in the clutch...

The Seminoles got off to a blistering start — how else would you describe an 18-game winning streak to open the season — but still had their critics: "It's because they're playing 3A schools" or "Let's see them do it in the playoffs..."

When the Tribe went through a three-game slide, you could almost here the collective "I told you so" from those critics, conveniently ignoring the fact that Seminole lost two of those games to Lyman's Kevin Stuckey and Oviedo's Rick Werner, two of the county's three best non-Seminole High pitchers...

The Lyman girls got a taste of that this past Thursday night when they lost to Lake Brantley and fell back into a first-place tie with Lake Mary. Non-believers jumped on the loss like vultures, ignoring the fact that Lyman lost 3-2 in extra innings at Lake Brantley...

Ask a Lake Mary or Lake Howell softball player from the past four years how difficult it is to go to Lake Brantley and come away with a win...

Part of the problem is that both the Seminole baseball and Lyman softball programs have recently labored through the inevitable down cycle that all athletic programs go through. Just two years ago, the Seminoles and Greyhounds were county doormats in baseball and softball, respectively.

But as Lyman softball coach Christy Tibbitts pointed out earlier last week, these players have no connection to those dark days other than that they play for the same school. Players at both schools are forging their own tradition...

Frustratingly, while the players can disassociate themselves from a past that is only remotely theirs, "fans" insist on holding them up alongside those past teams and predicting the same fate for them...

Not only is that unfair, it's illogical.

It's not like at the professional level, where a team generally is made up of a majority of the same players year after year succeeding (or not) at a fairly consistent pace. As high school and college coaches will tell you, every year is a new one, a different entity entirely from the one that preceded it...

Are the Seminoles and Greyhounds for real? 19-3? 11-4? What do you think?

Palms enhance Florida landscape

Palms are one of the most important components of the Florida landscape. They present a tropical look that no other material can provide. The initial care you give your palm often determines the future success of the plant in the landscape. For many years it was felt necessary to amend poor soils with organic material. Current planting recommendations discourage the use of soil amendments. The ideal situation is to have the whole planting area rich in organic materials; if the planting hole is filled with soil much better than that around it, the roots may never penetrate the surrounding poor soil. It is much more important that you apply a heavy mulch around the trunk of the palm, to within 2-3 inches of the trunk, and maintain it as it decomposes.

Under good conditions a newly transplanted palm will establish itself in a landscape within one year. Good drainage is essential. If the area is wet, create a berm and plant the palm in that. An adequate rootball is 6 inches either side of the trunk. The severed roots die anyway to be replaced by new roots. Protect the trunk with burlap and boards when staking. Do not put nails into the trunk, that is inviting trouble in the form of Butt Rot, which enters through any wounds.

Palms may be planted during any season of the year, but the warm, rainy summer months are best. Form a basin with soil around the base of the palm to help water stay around the roots. Water the palm twice a week when first planted, once a week after three months and every three weeks when the palm is established.

The best way to fertilize a palm is with a granular fertilizer spread around the base. Use a 10-5-10 Palm special with micronutrients and magnesium. Palms should be fertilized three times a year: in late winter or early spring, in midsummer and again in late summer or early fall. A fall application of fertilizer significantly increases the cold tolerance of palms and reduces the chance of nutritional deficiencies that may occur when roots are less active during the winter months.

Palms suitable for Central Florida include the Australian Fan Palm, the Cabbage palm (Sabal palmetto — the Florida state tree), Washington palm, the Butia or Pindo palm, the Chinese Fan palm, the Date palm and the Windmill palm. All these palms are large and should be given ample space. Smaller palms include the slow growing Lady palms (Rhapsis excelsa and R. humilis), the hard-to-transplant Saw palmettos, the Dwarf Date palm and the European Fan palm.

The Queen palm is susceptible to the cold and many were lost in the '89 freeze. If you are in a warm spot you might try it. The Mule palm is a cross of the Butia or Pindo palm with the Queen palm, exhibiting the gracefulness of the Queen and the cold hardiness of the Butia. Three other feathery palms are the Sugar palm, the Chamaedorea microspadix and the Chamaedorea radicans. These last three are 6 to 10 feet tall and may be more difficult to find.

The largest collection of palms in Central Florida may be seen at the F.I.T. Botanical Garden, 150 W. University Blvd., Melbourne, FL. Free to the public. Closer to home is an impressive collection at Leu Gardens in Orlando.

Mary Becker is a Master Gardener with the Berninole County Cooperative Extension Service, 222-2000.

$100 gift check bounces twice

DEAR ABBY: Last year, my daughter and son-in-law received a $100 check as a wedding gift from friends of ours who live in the suburbs. (I'll call them the Smiths.)

The Smiths' check bounced; the newweds made two attempts to deposit it. I advised our daughter to do nothing about it, and just wait and see what happens. Well, nothing happened.

Yesterday, I bumped into Mrs. Smith at the mall; we chatted a while, and she hinted that our daughter had been remiss for not acknowledging their "gift."

Now, a year later, what do you think my daughter should do? Leave things as they are or write to the Smiths at this late date and thank them for their check that bounced twice?

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: You gave your daughter poor counsel when you advised her to "do nothing" about the twice-bounced check and to just "wait and see what happens." She should have advised the Smiths that something must have been seriously amiss at the bank when their check did not clear.

Perhaps your daughter should call Mrs. Smith and explain that she didn't acknowledge their gift sooner because she was unable to cash their check.

P.S. Mr. Smith was not in Congress, was he?

DEAR ABBY: I married Al two years ago, without living with him first. Now I'm sorry. We are both well-educated, stable employees, and reasonably well-adjusted.

Al makes more money and has fewer bills than I, yet he contributes only one-third of our household expenses. He travels in his business, and he is often away for weeks at a time. When he's home, he sleeps in the guest room.

After five months of marriage, he announced that sex was "too much trouble." On weekends he rarely bathes, and he spends most of his waking hours reading in bed. He buys ratty clothes at resale shops, and always needs a haircut and a shoe shine. His room and car are both disaster areas. He refuses to get his teeth cleaned. He's useless around the house.

When we got out, either I pay or we go Dutch. He is always crying poor-mouth, yet he buys computer toys for himself. His gifts to me are a disgrace (books from a resale shop that I neither want nor need).

He's an embarrassing slob. If I had known what living with Al would be like, I'd still be single. We are both in therapy — but he's not listening. Is there hope?

FOURTH WORTH
DEAR FOURTH WORTH: Hope? For you or for Al? He clearly needs therapy — and if, as you say, he is already in therapy but "isn't listening" and you put up with him, you need the therapy more than Al.

DEAR ABBY: I just about swallowed my teeth when I read the letter in your column written by "Desperate" concerning her sister "Arlene" and Arlene's husband, "Bud," growing marijuana in their back yard!

My name is Arlene and my husband's name is Bud, and we've had quite a few telephone calls about the letter you printed — they were mostly teasing us about it.

Abby, please print this to let everyone know that it is not...

ARLENE AND BUD OF COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA
P.S. Thanks, Abby!

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

What's the cure for Epstein-Barr virus?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My doctor says I have chronic fatigue syndrome, due to Epstein-Barr virus, yet he is unable to give me much information on it. Could you please print what you know about this condition?

DEAR READER: Epstein-Barr virus, the cause of acute infectious mononucleosis, appears to cause a syndrome of chronic fatigue and swollen glands in some patients, who seem to suffer a cyclic and prolonged variant of the infection.

Expert opinion is divided about how often EBV causes chronic fatigue syndrome. Data are hard to come by because mononucleosis is a very common disease in young people, who may - after recovery - carry evidence in their blood tests for years. Thus, physicians are often perplexed by a fatigued patient with a positive EBV blood test. Is this recurring infection or simply a hold-over from an adolescent bout of mono?

The differentiation is of no practical significance, as there is no treatment for either acute mononucleosis or its chronic variant. Many patients who have been diagnosed with chronic EBV eventually return to normal, so if you are tired and have other symptoms from EBV infection, be patient. You'll get better.

In the meantime, you might be helped by calling the Chronic Fatigue Immune Dysfunction Syndrome Foundation, 985 Mission St., San Francisco, CA 94103. Or call (415) 882-9986. This and organizations like it will provide you with printed material and advice about how to cope with the chronic fatigue syndrome.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've heard there is a new treatment for varicose veins that consists of injecting an irritating solution. Can you tell me more about this and how successful it is?

DEAR READER: The technique is called "sclerosis" because after the material is injected, the vein stops functioning, shrinks and becomes less noticeable. Sclerosis is a suitable option for many people with varicose veins, who want to avoid surgery. The success rate depends on who's doing the procedure. In capable hands, sclerosis is more than 90 percent successful.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Perhaps there is nothing more embarrassing at the bridge table than falling for a deceptive play. Suddenly declarer has made a contract that could have failed. Occasionally it will be impossible to see through the ruse, but usually accurate signaling and trusting your partner's play will keep you from falling into declarer's carefully laid trap.

In the diagram, cover the East and South cards. Against three no-trump, you attack with the heart six; three, seven, king. Declarer leads the club four: ace, two, eight. How do you continue?

Thinking declarer had the A-K doubleton of hearts, West promptly led another heart. He was shocked when dummy's 10 won the trick and South claimed 10 tricks. Which clue did West miss?

It was East's card at trick one. If declarer had only two hearts, that would leave East with the 7-4-2 tripleton. Yet he played the seven. When you cannot play a critical card to a trick, you should give a count signal. With three cards, East would drop his lowest: the two. As he actually played a high spot-card, this marked him with a doubleton (or singleton).

Therefore, West should have realized that South had made a deceptive play at trick one. Why did he do that? He must have been afraid of a switch to another suit, which led to spades. If West had led a spade at trick three, the contract would have been de-feat-ed.

Finally, note that East tried to help his partner at trick two by playing his club eight, a suit-preference signal. There was no point in giving count in that suit.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Osel
YOUR BIRTHDAY
April 7, 1992

You might have to make some alterations in your basic lifestyle in the year ahead. You're likely to do this reluctantly, but you'll quickly discover how much better off you'll be.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone you know who is very nosy is quite curious about your affairs today. Parry this individual's curiosity with small talk, and don't let this person in on your plans. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A memorable achievement is possible today - if you are properly motivated. You might meander off course a bit on occasion, but you'll correct it satisfactorily.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't put limitations on your objectives today, because you're in a good achievement cycle. Several goals are attainable, even if they aren't related to one another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone you like who has been a bit standoffish lately can be brought back into the fold today - if you clarify your intentions. Your friend has been confused about your motivations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't split hairs today or try to save pennies when dealing with an individual who has always treated you fairly. This friendship is worth much more than fractional gains.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In an important endeavor where partners are involved today, don't wait for your cohorts to light the boiler. They think you have the matches in your pocket.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If challenged today on an issue you feel strongly about, stand your ground. You have thought this matter through more thoroughly than your adversaries have.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

You might have to prime the pump a bit today in a business matter - if you hope to start generating a flow. Your outpouring should be nominal, but your returns could be quite large.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Initially, you might be inclined to duck a tough decision today. However, the stern stuff of your inner nature will prevail and, to your credit, you'll stand up and make a wise judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Easy outs won't hold much attraction for you today. You'll believe in your capabilities and, even if a task is strenuous, you'll tackle it - and subdue it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your greatest asset today is your ability to accurately evaluate calculated risks. To the casual observer, it might look like you're taking chances, but the trained eye will realize you aren't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you fail to achieve your objectives on the first try today, don't be discouraged. This is a day when second efforts, which you'll prove best at, will be most meaningful.
