Heart Muscle Is Diseased

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D. DEAR DR. LAMB—Recently a close relative died of a coronary heart disease. He was a heavy drinker and smoker. I was told cardiomyopathy is a non-coronary heart disease. Were the heavy drinking and smoking major factors in the cardiomyopathy? What does it mean to say that cardiomyopathy is a non-coronary heart disease? How prevalent is this? How can it be prevented?

DEAR READER—Myopathy means disease of the muscle. Cardiomyopathy means disease of the heart muscle. It is called a non-coronary heart disease because the basic disease process is in the muscle itself. Coronary heart disease, the common form of heart disease, causes heart muscle damage as a complication of the basic disease of the coronary arteries.

Alcohol is a toxin and is toxic to heart muscle. It causes loss of heart muscle fibers. This is called alcoholic myocardiopathy or myocardiopathy. Rheumatic fever may attack the heart muscle and cause rheumatic myocardiopathy. Occasionally a young woman may have changes in her heart muscle after pregnancy without an infection of the heart or any disease in the arteries.

Other people have a gradual enlargement of the heart muscle even though the blood pressure is normal and the heart valves are normal. The progressive enlargement of the heart muscle just beneath the outlet valve of the heart may cause obstruction to blood flow similar to that seen when the valve itself is constricted from disease. The cause of these changes is not known and can occur in a person who has never

Downtown Restoration To Be Discussed Tonight

The development of a model restored area in Sanford's historical section will be among the proposals made tonight at a general assembly meeting of the Downtown Development Corporation (DDC). The meeting will be held in the Sanford Civic Center at 7:30 p.m. and is open to all area merchants, downtown property owners and the public.

Sanford Commissioners Favor Measure Officials May Back 'Sunshine' Bill

Sanford's city commissioners may join a group of Florida city officials supporting State Rep. Bob Hattaway's proposed amendment to the state's landmark Government in the Sunshine Law. Hattaway's proposal — which opponents charge would gut the open meetings law — has already won the support of the Council of Mayors of West Florida, who are urging city officials in Hattaway's district to join them.

July Fourth Panel To Meet Thursdays

The Seminole County Fourth of July Committee will meet at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Building, 400 East First St., each Thursday night this month at 7:30 p.m. This week's meeting will center on the layout of booths which will be used by various organizations participating in the local celebration of America's 200th anniversary.

dedicating the new building — held in the upstairs auditorium which has been declared unsafe and closed — Mayor Forrest Lake predicted a boulevard and "whiteway" would extend along the shoreline of Lake Monroe to the Osteen bridge, a distance of about seven miles. It cost the city $75,000 to build the two-story Spanish-style building. This time, the architects alone will get more than that. The entire project will cost well over $1 million. Now pointed white, the building was originally finished in olive-colored stucco. Although the interior offices have been re-arranged, the building still looks very much like it did when The Herald first published a picture of the new building in April 1925.

When the city hall was constructed in 1925, the first great land boom was on. Sanford Herald's headlines were filled with run runners, lynchings and the Scott trial. Hard-burger sold for 12 1/2 cents a pound. In those days, the offices included "the laboratory of the

Slash In CETA Funding To Cost 220 Area Jobs

A $1.1 million reduction in funding of a federal jobs program will claim the positions of 220 workers employed in county and city government and other Seminole County agencies by Jan. 31. Director of Administrative Services Bob Ellis informed the Seminole County Commission today that Title VI of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program has been eliminated.

Ellis recommended, and the commission approved, hiring "placement specialists" to try to find jobs for displaced workers. Ellis said the placement specialists will attempt to convince local agencies to place employees on a full-time status after CETA money runs out.

Presently 263 workers are affected by Title VI, a program which was funded by $1.1 million. By August CETA workers must be reduced to 225 by September 30 and by December 31 and finally in January 40.

Ellis said he did not anticipate the federal government coming up with additional CETA money. He said the county must now "try to get them (CETA workers) on the permanent payroll."

The only other alternative, according to Ellis, is "something has got to happen on the federal level." CETA is a federal job program which, until this year, pumped about $4.1 million into the local economy to offset unemployment. At its highest peak about 1,000 workers were paid out of CETA funds.

Earlier this year, however, CETA director Jim Bedsole received official notice that Title VI will be slashed. After the official notice arrived Bedsole and Ellis met with representatives from city, county and other agencies to work up a priority list.

The priority list states which workers will be laid off first in the event permanent jobs cannot be located. CETA was conceived to operate as a seed program in hopes that agencies which employed these federally funded workers would someday place them on permanent payroll.

But, a declining economy has prompted comment from city and county officials that no local money is available to pick up the slack. So, Ellis says now he will appear regularly before the board to request that workers be terminated if local funding cannot be located.

CETA workers are employed in various jobs ranging from laborers and policemen to city planners and specialists in the mental health field.

A majority of CETA workers are employed by county government and the seven Seminole County cities. A few are employed by the Seminole County school board while others work for the mental health center and still others are employed by local poverty fighting agencies.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Allan Howe was reported ready to enter an innocent plea at his arraignment on charges of soliciting sex from two Salt Lake police decoy prostitutes as the Utah Democrat promised a response to pressure from congressional colleagues to resign.

Arraignment was set today in Salt Lake City court on a misdemeanor charge. Howe was arrested Saturday night after allegedly offering two police decoys $200 for sex acts.

It was reported that an innocent plea would be entered by Howe's attorney, Wayne L. Black, Democratic national committeeman for Utah, and Howe was not expected to appear. Howe has proclaimed his innocence to reporters, claiming he was "set up."

Meanwhile, Colleen Gardner said she plans to talk to the U.S. attorney in Washington today about evidence she allegedly has of questionable sexual activities on Capitol Hill.

Mrs. Gardner has said she knows of a sexual rendezvous arranged by a congressman between Elizabeth Ray and Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and of instances where her former boss, Rep. John Young, D-Tex., pressured her and other staffers to have sex with him.

Mrs. Ray has told the FBI that her sexual encounter with Gravel was arranged by Sen. Rep. Kenneth Gray, D-Till, her one-time boss, who hoped to influence Gravel's position on public works legislation.

Mrs. Gardner also claims she was paid a premium salary and was not asked to do much work so she would be available as a sexual partner for Young, who calls her charges "poggycock."

Mrs. Gardner said Monday night that for two months this year she worked half-time for Young, but was paid a full-time, $28,000-a-year salary and continued submitting to his sexual advances.

Young has denied the allegation but declined to say whether he had a sexual relationship with her. Joseph Prendergast, his administrative assistant, said Young is not planning to resign.

Gray has denied arranging a sexual encounter between Miss Ray and Gravel.

Senate Panel Considers Bill To Break Up Oil Firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — A closely divided Senate Judiciary Committee is taking up a controversial bill which would force the breakup of the nation's 18 largest oil companies limiting their operations to one segment of the industry.

Within five years, the firms would have to choose between production, transportation or refining-marketing. Judiciary Committee hearings were to begin today.

Republican leader Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., a Judiciary Committee member, said that he favored reporting the bill to the Senate even though he might vote against it in the end.

"It's the kind of bill that warrants public debate," he said.

ID Card Idea Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal that every American be issued a national identity card or domestic passport apparently is dead after the Federal Advisory Committee on False Identification rejected such a plan as a threat to personal privacy.

The Justice Department task force instead has proposed a series of changes in the law to deal with the problem of criminal use of false identification, illegal immigration and Social Security fraud. One change would make it more difficult to obtain a false birth certificate. The concept of an internal passport has been viewed by some as the most effective means of cutting down the problem. But Asst. Atty. Gen. Richard Thornburgh said Monday: "That type of solution has 1964 overtones" as a threat against personal privacy.

Aid Legislation Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign military aid legislation, already vetoed once by President Ford because of restrictions on spending, has been rewritten and approved by both houses of Congress. Conference must now draft a compromise bill acceptable to Ford.

Both the House and Senate versions include new restrictions on U.S. arms exports. The Senate passed a $6.7-billion authorization June 2 by a 255 to 160 vote.

The bill replaces a 15-month authorization vetoed by President Ford in May because he said it imposed too many congressional interferences with the president's constitutional responsibility to conduct foreign affairs.

Syrian Tank Forces Advance In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian tank forces advanced today toward Marjayoun, six miles from the northeast tip of Israel, after capturing Rachaya, the gateway to Palestinian guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon, a Palestinian spokesman reported.

"If Marjayoun falls," said the Palestinian, "the Syrians will have complete control of the northern and western fringes of the Arab world." That 49-square-mile area north and west of Israel and its panhandle has been the Palestinians' last available staging area for guerrilla raids into Israel since King Hussein drove them out of Jordan in 1971.

Reports from Rachaya, 12 miles southeast of Beirut, said heavy Syrian fire drove guerrillas and renegade Moslem soldiers from the Lebanese army out of the town Monday after a week of resistance.

A pair of persistent thieves — interrupted last weekend as they apparently were attempting to loot an Altamonte Springs home — evidently returned Monday and completed the job, escaping with nearly $2,200 worth of household furnishings, Seminole County sheriff's officers said today.

Deputy J.M. Patton reported that a complete dining room set, valued at $1,000, was taken from the rented dwelling at 602 Orange Street in Altamonte Springs. Other stolen items included a $600 bedroom set, a $500 color television set and a reclining chair, Patton said.

The house was being rented from an out-of-state owner through Robert Bender, broker for the Winter Park Realty firm of American Hartsborough Investors Inc., Patton said.

Bender gave the following account of the affair:

Man Gets Probation After Guilty Plea

Thomas Lee Burton was sentenced to four years probation Monday in Seminole County circuit court after pleading guilty to charges that he created a drunken disturbance near a Sanford restaurant last April when authorities were called, that he attacked investigating officer R. A. McIntyre with an axe handle.

Burton, who listed his address as 1204 Oleander Ave., Sanford, was accused of disorderly intoxication, aggravated assault and resisting an officer with violence in the incident, which took place outside the Brown Derby restaurant on West 13th Street.

"Do you think you can give up drinking?" Circuit Judge Joe Cowart Jr. asked Burton.

"Yes, I plan to give up drinking."

"Well, I plan for you to," Cowart told the 24-year-old part-time student. "I'm glad our plans are running along the same lines. Being so drunk that you don't even remember what you did just doesn't make any sense at all."

In other proceedings, David Hadsall of Orlando pleaded guilty to two counts of possessing a controlled substance and remained free on bond pending the outcome of a pre-sentence investigation (PSI).

Hadsall, 21, was arrested April 8 following a traffic violation in the vicinity of SR-427 and 12th Avenue in Longwood.

Director Resigns Post In Public Works Dept.

Seminole County's Director of Public Works Bob Andrew informed the county commission today he is resigning his $21,000 a year position.

Andrew said he was resigning because of a disagreement with the county commission. However, at today's meeting, he told commissioners he didn't intend for his letter of resignation, submitted last Friday, to sound as harsh as it apparently did.

"I have no regrets at all," Andrew told the commission. "I have learned a lot and have accomplished quite a bit."

Andrew occupied the director's position for 13 months.

Outside commission chambers, Andrew said there are "many, many problems" in the Department of Public Works that commissioners need to address themselves to. "These problems need the full attention of the board," he said.

Request On Bonds Due

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — The Cabinet should ask the Florida Supreme Court today to overturn a part of the legislatively approved state budget restricting use of endangered land bond funds, Atty. Gen. Robert Stevin says.

The Cabinet was scheduled to consider floating another $40 million in endangered land bonds but was expected to delay a decision until settling the budget question.

Natural Resources Director Harmon Shields said his department was pressing for the bonds to continue buying endangered lands.

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — Florida used car dealers say proposed federal rules to give potential buyers the history of used cars would give fly-by-night operators the edge.

On recommendation of Public Works Commissioner Claude Ash, Council voted to permit a mobile home to be placed in the Lake Tuscawilla Recreation Park and waive inspection fee in preparation for the city's summer recreation program. Water Meter Prices Spark Longwood Debate

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The city council debated for 30 minutes a $28 difference in two bids for 200 water meters Monday night before delaying a decision on the matter for one week.

Public Safety Director Douglas Keller, meanwhile, was more fortunate in gaining approval for reimbursement of up to $200 in expenses for attending a police chief's training session in New Port Richey next week, but lost out in a move to have all police department staff commanders named notify publics to certify arrest reports.

The delay in the acceptance of a bid for 200 water meters occurred after a representative of one firm — Sewer and Water Utilities Supply — insisted that the low bid of David Meter and Supply was based on acquiring the meters from sewer and water utilities manufacturer.

The board on a 3-1 vote, with Councilman Parker Anderson dissenting, instructed Public Works Director Ralph Fisher to get in writing a letter from the manufacturer that the Davis meters will be warranted.

The Davis bid was $5,084 at $25.42 each while the Sewer and Water Utilities Supply bid was $5,112 or $25.56 each.

Anderson opposed, saying the warranty should be obtained through the bidder which the city should be dealing with rather than the manufacturer.

Councilman Lawrence Goldberg urged approval of expenses for Keller to attend the four-day conference in New Port Richey for the executive training. He said the lodging expense for the conference would be $15 daily and the balance would be for meals and transportation to and from the conference. Council member June Lormann voted against the authorization.

Council Chairman J.R. Grant balked at Goldberg's recommendation that the expenditure of $144 be authorized to have the city's three police department shift commanders appointed as notaries public.

The council determined that only one notary commission is necessary and that Keller as

Time For GOP To Close Ranks

One way to identify a prophet of doom readily these days is to ask anybody who claims to be attuned to the political tides about the future of the Republican Party.

An off the cuff response is usually lugubrious. The respondent probably would say that the GOP is in trouble and sinking fast. A more learned pundit might draw a parallel between the demise of the Whig Party in the mid 19th century and the current condition of the Republicans, as many have.

After all, the usual line goes, can a party that claims only 22 per cent of the voters' allegiance consider itself viable? Others believe the differences between President Ford and Ronald Reagan as deep and divisive as the slavery issue that sent the Whigs into oblivion.

Those who look beneath the surface might change their minds. Consider, for example, the recent observation by British journalist Henry Fairlie that Republicans have occupied the White House as many years as Democrats have since World War II. Nor do we see a contradiction between the fact that Republican presidents are elected despite the low 22 per cent GOP registration figure.

It is evident that a majority of Americans, whatever their party label, believe in the basic philosophies of the Republican Party — a strong defense, a responsible budget, economy of government, deference to the constitution and pride in the United States.

Those who may doubt this assessment have but to turn their ears to the present political dialogue. Even the Democrats who are considered in the lead for their party's nomination, with few exceptions, are espousing these philosophies, in effect trying to pre-empt the Republican conservatism to one degree or another.

Precise analysis of political matters also realize that the vigorous debate between President Ford and Mr. Reagan is not basically ideological. Their differences are by no means even close to the deep divisions over principles that split the Republicans off from the Whigs in 1854.

Both Republican candidates favor a strong United States posture in the world. Both are internationalists, free traders, support continuing discussions with China and Russia and hold similar views on domestic problems. Whatever differences they have are largely over procedure and approach — which should not be fatal to any party.

Republicans should not despair of the future despite the frustrations of the present campaign. There is no reason why the GOP cannot win in November.

The only obstacle to this goal in the months ahead will be if party members fail to close ranks after the gavel falls in Kansas City.

Going Too Far

The Navy and the American people owe a great debt to Adm. Hyman Rickover. For the vision and guidance he has given over the years to the development of nuclear submarines and surface ships. His stamp is on the Polaris-Poseidon-Trident family of missile submarines which have turned out to be the sea-borne hole of our nuclear deterrent. He has fought many battles within the Navy and with Congress over nuclear propulsion, but the current one suggests he has overplayed his hand, and to the detriment of the fleet.

Adm. Rickover has gone over the heads of his bosses — the secretaries of Navy and Defense and the chief of naval operations — in an attempt to get Congress to overrule the Navy's own recommendations on future shipbuilding priorities. Gordon W. Ruge, the Navy's top civilian contract officer, has delivered a blistering attack against the 75-year-old admiral for attempting to derail the administration's plan for settlement of cost-over-run disputes with shipbuilders.

The views of Adm. Rickover must be given the weight that his vast background in nuclear matters deserves. But in this regard he has failed to recognize the point at which a naval officer must bow to his seniors and the system.

The Clock

By ED PRICKETT

It looks as if veteran county commissioner John Kimbrough will owe me one dollar. Like the true conservative he is Kimbrough made me give him five-to-one odds. If Jimmy Carter is the Democratic nominee, Kimbrough will hand over a crap one; if Carter is not the nominee, I'll hand over five crisp ones.

I point out this little story for two reasons, the first of which is to show you that if you're a Humanist you should be betting with conservatives (even though it seems I lucked up and drew a winner this time) and secondly to introduce you to the fact that Carter as the Democratic nominee has a better-than-average chance of becoming the next President of the United States.

Any Democrat running this year against either Ford or Reagan would have a better-than-average chance. And given the almost mystical ascendancy of Carter into national politics, the former governor of Georgia has an even better chance than your average Democrat.

At long last there is a chance for a Southerner to occupy the White House. If Carter wins, it'll be the first time anyone from the Deep South has been President since Civil War days.

While the Democratic nomination is almost assured Carter, Ford and Reagan are still cutting each other up trying to decide which of the two will carry the gauntlet for the Republicans. Reagan, the former movie star and builder of unlive-in mansions in California is considered the more conservative, while Ford of the do-nothing present administration is considered more moderate. Probably, the difference between the two doesn't amount to a hill of beans.

About the only way I could see any hope at all for the Republican Party on the national level is for the two to join forces, producing a Ford-Reagan ticket. There are those who would vote for such a ticket, just as there are those who voted for Nixon and who, if given the opportunity, probably would vote for him again.

Reagan's close race against an incumbent president shows the weakness of the Ford administration, and the President's claim that Reagan's conservatism cannot win — nationwide — has validity. The time has come for a change in the White House, the voting public is demanding it. And in any year that a Humanist can win a dollar from a rock-ribbed conservative, why, anything can happen — even the election of a Southerner to the highest office in the land.

Ending Red Tape Is A Dream

WASHINGTON — I have just finished reading a most depressing study by Herbert Kaufman, a senior fellow with the prestigious Brookings Institution.

Kaufman's study suggests that however much President Ford and candidates Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan promise reform, streamlining the federal government is impossible.

A major reason: Agency officials and key Congressmen and congressional committee staffs work up cozy arrangements to their mutual benefit. Each protects the other.

Says Kaufman, "Safe seats and the seniority system in Congress" keep the same members in key posts for years, fostering cordial, comfortable personal relations with similarly entrenched leaders of administrative agencies.

Committee clerks and senior staff likewise serve for long periods, developing friendly ties with the top managers of agencies within their jurisdiction.

Close association with the members and staff of the congressional committees handling an agency's business "provides a sturdy shield against hostile forces." Members of Congress gain "because a compliant agency augments their...ability to do favors..." It "may exercise its discretion about the location of facilities and about program emphases in such a way as to increase jobs, expenditures and services in the states and districts of committee members..."

"It may take favorable and speedy action for clients on whose behalf strategically placed legislators intervene, thus earning for the legislators the gratitude and loyalty of those voters and political donors." And an agency "may use its leverage to the advantage of applicants recommended by powerful senators and representatives..."

But this influence, says Kaufman, does more than help senators and representatives with the voters. By using their influence with a captive agency, they can do favors for other congressmen, "who are then in their debt." They thus build a foundation to advance their own government careers.

It is unrealistic to expect senators and representatives to give up this profitable arrangement. The mere fact that an agency has outgrown its usefulness to the public does not mean that it has outgrown its usefulness to the men who control it.

But there are other reasons, Kaufman finds, which insure that most agencies, once voted into existence, will endure indefinitely. Note that of 73 federal government agencies and units he fingered in 1922, 85 per cent were still going strong in 1973. Only 23 disappeared. Some 246 were added. In the 50 years the 173 had thus grown to 421.

A major problem in reform is time. Legislators are now so busy, have so many details to cover and so many budget items to run through, that they give neither proposed laws nor appropriations the study necessary to do a good job.

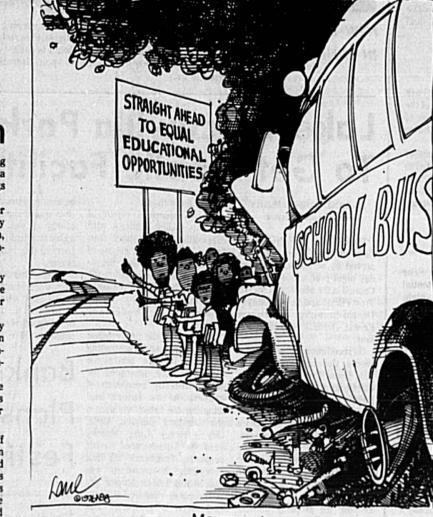

Candidate Carter makes much of zero budgeting, which involves studying each agency's budget from scratch each year, instead of limiting discussion to proposed changes.

Further anguish, he told friends, "I would put a bullet through my head." Added the broken Hays meaningfully: "And I've got the guts to do it." We got the first inkling of the torrid Hays-Rays romance more than two years ago when Elizabeth Ray called our office in an hysterical crying fit. Between sobs, she blurted that she was about to lose her Capitol Hill job because she "would not go to bed with Wayne Hays."

Our associates Bob Owens and Jack Claberty hurried up to Capitol Hill to see her. But by the time they reached her, she had changed her mind. She wanted our reporters to forget about the call.

But that wasn't the last time we heard from Liz Ray. She called our office repeatedly. We found her erratic, unreliable and unpredictable. We concluded that her outburst against Hays had resulted from a lovers' quarrel, that her status of her romance, and that the two of them were exploiting one another. But there was no way we could base a story, we decided, upon her statements.

She also boasted of relationships, we learned, of such prominent Washington figures as Senators Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and

A Dilemma For Lenders

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a social issue and a financial issue in the redlining regulation which affects mortgage lenders beginning Sept. 30, and there may be an irresolvable conflict between them.

After that date many of the larger home mortgage lenders will have to post information on where they lend funds, broken down by census tracts, which correspond generally to neighborhoods.

Publicity of this type, required by the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act, is expected to make many institutions reconsider a sometimes prevalent view that mortgage money not be invested in blighted areas.

This conflict, AEs lenders, who are guardians of other people's money, supposed to make their investment decisions on the basis of safety and return or in pursuit of social goals? The new law presents a dilemma for lenders. As it reads now, the major question for them is that the information might be used by a community to greenline the lender, or deny it the use of the savings that accumulate in the community.

Fears exist, however, that pressure could be applied to lenders to invest in blighted areas. We got the first inkling of the torrid Hays-Rays romance more than two years ago when Elizabeth Ray called our office in an hysterical crying fit. Between sobs, she blurted that she was about to lose her Capitol Hill job because she "would not go to bed with Wayne Hays."

Our associates Bob Owens and Jack Claberty hurried up to Capitol Hill to see her. But by the time they reached her, she had changed her mind. She wanted our reporters to forget about the call.

But that wasn't the last time we heard from Liz Ray. She called our office repeatedly. We found her erratic, unreliable and unpredictable. We concluded that her outburst against Hays had resulted from a lovers' quarrel, that her status of her romance, and that the two of them were exploiting one another. But there was no way we could base a story, we decided, upon her statements.

She stopped at another table to engage a prominent Washington lawyer in conversation. Hays gestured toward the scene and remarked to the others at his table: "That's why I can't marry her."

WILLIAM E. SIMON

America's Swollen Bureaus

(Editor's Note: John Lofton is recovering from a brief illness. Treasury Secretary William E. Simon has written this guest column for him.)

WASHINGTON — John Lofton's readers are accustomed to straight talk. I'll open this column with a blunt statement: The election, shaping up for November may be the most important in our lifetimes.

Why? Because, as rarely before, the American people will have a clear voice between greater government control and greater, individual freedom.

I know it's fashionable nowadays for virtually all of the candidates to take a stand against big government. Yet many of these same candidates will also be turning around and asking the voters at every level of government — federal, state and local — to support policies that will lead to more spending, more controls, and more regulation: in other words, more government "invasion" to our problems.

Let me assure you that regardless of the rhetoric emanating from Washington, D.C., the spend-spend, elect-elect syndrome is alive and well.

I submit that the central task before this nation is to stem the tide of big and growing government and at the same time to strengthen the dynamic private sector of our economy.

Critics have called me a fanatic on the subject of free enterprise. I submit that I am not. I am simply a realist who believes that the system that has given us the highest standard of living and the greatest prosperity in history is one that motivated our small colonial army to fight and win a war of national independence against overwhelming odds — one that has "drawn millions of immigrants to our shores, many of them sacrificed everything they had, just to be able to come here and pursue the American dream."

I've already alluded to part of the problem: faulty perceptions which inevitably lead to faulty policy. In the minds of many, society is divided between those who care and those who don't.

Those who advocate bigger government programs are pictured as socially enlightened champions of the underdog. But those who advocate less government and a strengthening of the private enterprise system to improve opportunities for each and every citizen are dismissed as outdated exploiters who are out to make a fast buck.

And, because image is so all-important, and because bad news is a big news, the advocates of big government often get greater exposure in the newspaper and on TV to expand on the real or fancied ills of society and advance their own remedy: Turn on the federal spending spigot.

That, of course, is no cure at all. It is the same destructive approach that at the very root of the problems we are struggling with today. Big government is not the solution; it's the problem.

The fact is, the federal government has been trying to do more than our resources allow. So many things it cannot do well, to do other things it should not be doing at all, and to do all these things at the same time.

Let's take a look at what has happened over the past 10 or 15 years. For most of our history, the federal budget stayed somewhere below the $100 billion mark — usually very below it. Then, in 1962, we finally hit $100 billion — and that was only the beginning.

Seven Sharpley Sisters Reunited In City

A reunion of seven sisters was quite an occasion for Christine Sharples at her 14714th home. According to Christine's daughter, Mrs. William (Jean) North, it was a happy gathering of the Hawkins clan.

The group enjoyed an old-fashioned feed and departed armed with cuttings and plants from the Norris gardens.

Other sisters attending were Eloise Titworth, a twin, and Ouida Billrey, of Clearwater, and Emily Wallis (win) and husband Clinton, Edith Frank and husband Chester, Elizabeth McKinney and Peggy Breeze, mother of 33-year-old triplets, Tom, Dick and Harry, all of Bradenton.

Attorney James C. (Jim) Fisher was host at his Altamonte Springs home at a cocktail party recently honoring Dorothy Lee, director and other models of American Models Association.

Ms. Lee is a former pageant director, producer and mistress of ceremonies of the Junior Miss Pageant Miami Beach, with 30 years experience as a

She has written many songs and after-office hours has performed in and around the Los Angeles area where he is well-known for his entertaining expertise.

Mrs. William (Gladys) Wray has returned from Savannah, N.Y., near Syracuse, where she visited her daughter and family. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wright, highlight of the trip was attending commencement exercises at Cornell University where her granddaughter Beth was graduated.

Those who missed the Fellowship Players in Act III's "Godspell" over the weekend really missed a rocking, professional treat. The acting, orchestral and lighting effects were superb.

As one man put it so well, "Once upon a time we went to the friendly neighborhood garage man to keep our car running. He did everything. Now he sends us a specialist to fit the auto's transmission or to another expert to repair the air-conditioning unit. It's the same with doctors. They diagnose, undoubtedly correctly. But then we are sent to a specialist if we have a stuffed-up nose or to another medical expert for our fallen arches and varicose veins."

A dynamic woman closed the meeting, saying, "Maybe the doctors should frequently re-read the Hippocratic Oath. Read it each morning when they shave and tape it to the dashboard of their 'yachts.'"

Elizabeth Ann Du... will be cast in "Bus Stop" with Ralph Malph, Donny Most, of the popular television series "Happy Days" at St. Edward's University Theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Bowers, 213 Hedge Dr., is a sophomore at the university. In the production, Miss Bowers will play the role of Elma. At St. Edward's University, Elizabeth is presently majoring in Theatre Arts.

Conratulations are in order to Mrs. Carl (Shirley) Schilke. From her book of poetry, "The Many Faces of Love", now in its third printing, two poems have been selected for an anthology, "New Voices of American Poetry for 1976."

Known as Jack to his Sanford friends, Dr. Ivey's specialty is music and entertaining. A talented vocalist and guitarist.

When I said we had been lucky to find a young local doctor who came over so close to being like our old family physician, many in the audience wanted his name and address.

A generalization of the gripes: "Gone are the doctors as we knew them. Today they are medical scientists and maybe they do make us feel better and prolong our lives."

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Smokin' Joe Frazier will try to "cool it" tonight as he tries to end his career in a fight against George Foreman, who humiliated him in Jamaica last month.

Joe impressed Futch enough that the trainer-advisor let it be known that Frazier would fight again for the right kind of purse and the kind of opponent that would earn him another title shot. "He didn't need to work his way up," said Futch. "He's been there. He's a former champion of the world."

Tanana Mistake Proves Risky As Aaron Homers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Frank Tanana, while rated by a roundhouse, I rolled it in the best of snapped it, and he hit it well. But Aaron was sure he had thrown a mistake to Hank Aaron. Aaron, 42, blasted a soft Tanana curve into the left-field seats with two men on, capping a five-run Milwaukee third inning. Don Money and light-bulb Gary Sutherland also homered off of Tanana as the Brewers pounded the California Angels 6-2 for their third victory in four games.

stop fighting. On June 17, 1974, Frazier stopped Quarry in five rounds, surprising him with jabs, straight lefts and right-ahs of which made the famed left hook more potent. There was pressure again on Frazier to quit after he was stopped following 14 grueling rounds against Al List Oct. 1. When it came time to reach a decision on whether to quit or not, Joe locked himself in his Philadelphia gym with Futch and Benton and went at it with someone described by Futch "as a good young heavy-weight."
