Hoover Again Sees Freedom Threatened

Ex-President Caustic In Reference To Present Methods Of Government

STANFORD, UNIVERSITY, Calif., June 17. (AP)—Another warning against any sacrifice of freedom in the search for economic security was sounded here yesterday by former President Herbert Hoover.

Caustic references to "bureaucratic methods" of restoring social growth, to "the economy of security" and to bureaucracy were made by Mr. Hoover in addressing the 1935 graduating class of Stanford, his alma mater.

In a reference to the prevalence of individualism at the time of his own graduation in 1895, Mr. Hoover said he spoke "at the risk of seeming counter-revolutionary or as a defender of evil."

"Government by specific laws, not by the uncertainties of administrative fiat," was one tenet put forth by the former president. "The concentration of economic power and the concentration of political power are equally destructive," he remarked.

"There never has been, nor ever will be, freedom from powers of government are lodged in a man or in a group of men," he added. "Moreover, all history teaches us that even majorities cannot be trusted with the ark of freedom without checks. Constitutional government, the division of powers, are the only successful protections the human race has devised to transcend or obviate the tendency to weaken and finally destroy freedom itself."

Only a few days prior to the recent Supreme Court decision that brought death to the Blue Eagle, Mr. Hoover in an interview admitted abolition of the NRA.

'Here's Why I Lost'—'Here's How I Won'

These are the words said after the boxing session, with Max Baer, defeated as world's heavyweight boxing champion by Freddie Goetz, his hands for the defeat which stunned the fight world, and he's pointing to his swollen left hand as proof. On the right you see Freddie Goetz, demonstrating to Baer without how he won. It was his good left hand which he kept sticking into Max's face which helped bring victory. Although the ex-champion looks pretty cheerful, neither fighter was in too good a shape when they posed for these photos "the morning after." (Associated Press Photos)

O'Neill Takes Charge Of New NRA Program

Congress Speeds Up In Effort To Put Roosevelt's "Must" Measures Across

WASHINGTON, June 17. (AP)—A greatly abbreviated NRA, stripped of its power to enforce business codes, began functioning today as Congress speeded its effort to speed through President Roosevelt's legislative program.

Taking over the helm of the new NRA, James L. O'Neill said at his first press conference that it was an "open question" whether the new legislation might be enough at this point for a more positive law under which the recovery agency could operate.

The House, hoping to be ready for adjournment by mid-July, also dove ahead with the intention of disposing of four major Administration "must" bills before the week-end.

President Roosevelt built a new NRA last night on the ruins of what was left of the organization outlawed by the Supreme Court. He issued an executive order that will continue the framework of the recovery agency until April 1, 1936, and named three men to guide it.
