Minister Will Confer Soon With Treasury Head, Offering Plan For Debt Payment

Denial Made That Note Caused Action

American Note Causes More Than Stir In European Countries

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Secretary Mellon, as chairman of the American debt commission, is expected soon to give a definite proposal to the government of Estonia for the funding of Estonia's debt to the United States.

It was made known Monday that Minister Piip of Estonia had been in conference with Secretary Mellon on the question of the funding of Estonia's debt to the United States for several weeks and that the proposals had brought the two governments nearer to a settlement.

Minister Piip soon will confer with the Treasury Secretary on the basis of memoranda prepared between the two officials before, it is believed a concrete agreement will be worked out.

It was declared Monday however, that there was no connection between the discussion of a funding agreement with Estonia, which owes the United States $17,000,000 in principal and interest, and the recent move of the American government to expedite consideration of terms with its foreign debtors who have not yet made a plan in that direction, although the United States had made a similar offer to the nations which had made those offers.

The government had made no desire that funding proposals be no longer delayed.

It was said yesterday's discussion of the government's proposals to its creditors had been in the nature of an admission to the foreign debtors of a period of several days. It also tended to confirm the fact that a definite change had been made in the Administration's plan of tolerating delays which had been effect first were circulated early this year.

While no official word was forthcoming from any foreign capital, American's repudiations to the United States were indicated that the action caused little stir among the governments.

One official here revealed word which described the situation resulting from the funding suggestions, however, as "more or less quiet."

Associated Press dispatches from Paris quoting the reports that the world would start its funding negotiations within 15 days were viewed at the Treasury with considerable interest, since they served to strengthen information supplied from private sources.

Mr. Caillaux, the French finance minister, has seen his way to open discussions.

The Treasury, however, recognizes that France is indebted to the United States about 620 million dollars sterling with whatever arrangements with the United States are considered, thought to be given to payments to the United States as well.

In this complication, it is felt that a part must be made in the signing of the debts, and there being officials who believe that the United States is the protor around which the interrelated debts as well those to the United States.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW AT 91 DELIVERS "PEPPY" ADDRESS

Famous Humorist And After Dinner Speaker Rejoices In Bond of Understanding Be- tween U. S. and England

NEW YORK, May 19.—Although asserting that he could "distinctly remember eight years of life," Chauncey M. Depew spoke at a luncheon of the Pilgrim's Society of the United States Monday with a vigor and a sparkling wit of which any man half his age might well be proud.

The luncheon was in honor of the British delegates to the international police conference.

Throughout Mr. Depew's address which he delivered in a resonant voice giving little evidence of his 91 years and with firm gestures which forcibly pointed his remarks, the tenor of his thought was the increasing bond between America and Great Britain during the period of his life.

As an example of this growth in friendship, Mr. Depew told the story of a Des Moines glove manufacturer who went up to King George at the Wemyss Exposition and said:

"King, meet my son
"King, how are you? I want you to meet my son."
"Now suppose," said Mr. Depew, "when we were closed officially but not so close in spirit, some colonial had tried to approach George III, and shake his hand. He would have gone to the tower and never got on the tower. As a democrat and he said:
"Glad to see you. Is your family well? That's kin across the sea."

Speaking again of changes for the better that have occurred during his lifetime, Mr. Depew said that international relationships used largely to be made up of "royalty, pageants and victories and war, but now the world is on a different basis. The people who have a solid interest are running it. We are trying to get away from never and to maintain peace and to promote industry, production, prosperity and happiness."

Mr. Depew said that the greatest of missions ever sent to the United States across the sea was that headed by Stanley Baldwin, which announced that Great Britain intended to pay every penny of her debt.

People Envoied by Britain
"The war had shaken the economic structure of the whole world," the speaker said, "and the people were in doubt as to what was going to happen, but when Great Britain said, 'We will pay our debts,' it had a tremendous psychological effect. If you understand psychology you can run the world."

Policeman Georges Deno said earlier men were knocking half hysterical women aside in their mad rush for freedom and the motorman is credited with saving many lives when he rushed from the train to an emergency station and turned off the electric power.

Many of the fugitives, through the darkened tunnel, stumbled against the third rail, ordinarily deadly, in their mad rush for safety.

HENRY FORD IS ENTERING BANK CIRCLES OF N.Y.

Auto King's Entry to Wall Street Seen in Establishment of Branch of Detroit Firm Having Ford Backing

Venture Viewed With Surprise By Bankers

Enormous Growth of Business Believed to Have Induced Ford To Open His Own Bank

NEW YORK, May 19.—The entrance of Henry Ford into Wall Street was seen by some bankers Monday in the announcement that the Guardian Detroit Company had been established as the New York investment branch of the Guardian Trust Company of Detroit, of which Edsel Ford is a director.

Relationship of the Ford interests to the new banking enterprise in Wall Street also was given a direct contact by the naming of Ernest Kautler, vice-president of the Ford Motor Company as a director of the Guardian Detroit Company.

The Guardian Trust Company of Detroit, a recently organized institution which is believed to have the backing of the Ford millions, obtained its foothold in New York by the acquisition of the Higbie and Company, Inc., an investment firm which has specialized for many years in the underwriting and distribution of municipal bonds and other high grade securities.

The New York office of the firm, it was announced today, had been regarded as the nucleus of the Guardian Detroit Company, of which Jerome E. J. Kane will be made chairman and John C. Grier, Jr., president.

Mr. Ford family's venture into the banking world was viewed with surprise by many bankers since Henry Ford has held aloof from Wall Street and openly attacked the methods of New York banks from which he sought a large loan several years ago. Rebelling at the bankers' terms laid down by the strikers at that time, Ford terminated his negotiations and succeeded single-handed in carrying the Ford Motor Company over a temporary depression.

Since then he has financed his ventures in the railroad and railroad projects himself and has individually engaged in a variety of banking operations, making several loans to the city of Detroit.

The enormous growth of the Ford enterprises and their expansion in the railroad, steamship and commercial aviation fields, Wall Street believes, has influenced the automobile manufacturer and his son to engage in banking operations. With a New York investment house, under his control, Ford could make a public offering of securities in any of his companies without the intervention of outside banking interests.

Deny Any Significance.
DETROIT, May 19.—Stewart L. Pittman, Vice-President and Secretary of the Guardian Detroit Company, issued an emphatic denial tonight that the establishment of a new company indicated in any way the entrance of Henry Ford or the Ford interests into Wall Street financial affairs.

Arms Meet Eliminates
Right to Search Ship
GENEVA, May 19.—An amendment to establish a right to search ships suspected of conveying arms, was eliminated today at the proposed agreement.

American delegates led opposition to it. The arms conference also voted to abandon the proposed plan of a central board under the league to regulate traffic in arms and munitions. The American delegation had opposed such a board.

BRYAN RAPS MODERNISM IN NEW YORK TALK

Great Commoner Begins Open Fight Against Teaching of Evolution Theory; Greeted With Mild Hisses, Cheers

Minister Takes Issue With Bryan Remarks

Tennessee Statute Forbidding Teaching of Evolution And Biblical History Are Upheld

NEW YORK, May 19.—William Jennings Bryan's attack on modernism in religion and his spirited defense of the Tennessee law forbidding teaching of evolution in the public schools, in a speech Monday in Brooklyn, drew a vigorous protest from the Rev. James S. Williamson, pastor of the King's Highway Congregation Church a member of the audience.

Mr. Bryan was alternately mildly hissed and cheered. He asserted that he had brought the fight against teaching evolution into the open and that we are going on to win. "We must win," he added, "if the world is to be saved."

Mr. Bryan had just said that the modernists can't send missionaries abroad because they have no message to send.

Minister Objects
"You are unfair to us—that is not true," declared Mr. Williamson from his seat. "I speak as a Congregationalist minister. We believe in majority rule and each church is guided as it wishes in this matter. We believe in the freedom of the human spirit."

"I don't mind talking to you," Mr. Bryan replied. "After this I'll exclude the Congregationalists. If they have no creeds and stand for nothing, I'll leave them out. I am more familiar with the modernists in the Presbyterian church."

"Two thirds of us are modernists and we were passed by the Legislature; the disgrace is that teachers said by the times of a community which stamps its dollars 'in God we trust' should betray the trust imposed in them by the taxpayers."

"The President of the United States takes his oaths of office on the Bible. Are the school children of this nation to be taught that this Bible is untrue? No; and they shall not be taught for the majority of us believe in the Bible and hand that writes the pay checks should control the schools."

Mr. Bryan said that it would be ridiculous to entrust the education of children to an oligarchy of scientists, referring to the Society for the Advancement of Science. The modernists, he asserted, "are making us brothers to the brute."

3 JURYMEN FOR SHEPHERD CASE ARE SELECTED

Chicago, Man Placed On Trial Charged With Killing Ward By Use of Poisons

School Head Will Be Star Witness

Prosecution Weaves Strong Case About Faiman's Testimony

CHICAGO, May 19.—Three jurors were accepted tentatively in a four hour session Monday which marked the opening of the trial of William Darling Shepherd for the alleged murder by administering typhoid fever germs to his wife's young minor ward, William Nelson McClintock.

Shepherd, Chicago lawyer and chief beneficiary under the youth's will, which disposed of an estate of approximately $1,500,000, will face an effort to have him hanged on circumstantial evidence, the state indicated in its questioning of venemen.

Defense 'After' Faiman
The defense will rely on breaking down the testimony of U. G. Faiman head of a Chicago school of science, who confessed he supplied typhoid germs to Shepherd, taught him how to propagate and administer them with an assurance of fatal results, for which he was to receive $100,000.

Faiman, indicted with Shepherd, was granted a separate trial today on motion of the state. No date for it was set.

In addition to the three veniremen tentatively accepted, a fourth man had been accepted by the defense when court adjourned.

To obtain that number a dozen men were examined, the majority being excused because of prejudice against the death penalty or conviction upon circumstantial evidence.

Want Intelligent Jurors
That both state and defense sought men of above the average intelligence was indicated when by agreement, one venireman was dismissed when he said he had only a fourth-grade education and had difficulty in understanding questions asked him. It was understood the attorneys were seeking jurors able to comprehend the technical terminology that probably will be heard under way.

Each side had twenty peremptory challenges. The defense exercised one late today.

Shepherd was denied the comfort of his wife's presence at his elbow when the prosecution objected today when she kissed the accused man and seated herself across the aisle, protesting feebly at the enforced separation.

Both of the Shepherds seemed otherwise to be in good humor, and both expressed gratification that the trial finally was under way.

Olsen's Name Mentioned
The name of Harry Olsen, chief justice of the municipal courts, was mentioned frequently in examining veniremen. The defense asked if his activity in obtaining the indictment of Shepherd and the affirmative action of the coroner's jury would influence a jury.

It was Judge Olson, proclaiming himself "counsel for the dead," first accused Shepherd of murder of young McClintock, and later added Mrs. Shepherd's name in what he said was a sixteen-year-old plot to obtain the McClintock estate.

Large Wildcat Killed By Policeman Green

Policeman J. B. Green, who is on his annual vacation, today exhibited the body of a wildcat, which he killed last night between Deland and Sanford while enroute home from Jacksonville, where he has been for several days. The animal, declared to be one of the largest seen here for some time, suddenly appeared in the road when the officer was about half way between Deland and this city. He drew his pistol and fired one shot, killing the animal instantly.

ARMY TELLS TWO WAYS TO DISPLAY FLAG PROPERLY

Should Be Flown Unfurled, From Staff or Hung Flat With Stary Field at Top And to Observer's Left

These are the only two ways to display the flag properly, according to an outline of flag etiquette made public recently by the United States Army Information Service. One way is to fly the flag, freely unfurled, from a staff; the other way is to hang it flat, with full horizontal or vertical length falling evenly, with the stary field at the top and to the observers left.

At crossed staffs with another flag, it should be on the observer's left. Its staff in front of the other staff. In a cluster it should be in the center or at the highest point of the group. In a procession it should be on the marching right of all flags, or if there is a line of flags it should be in front of the center of that line.

How to Hang It in Street. A flag projecting from a window or balcony should be hung either horizontally or at angle, with the stary field drawn clear to the truck, as the peak of the staff is called. Suspended between two rows of buildings so as to hang over the middle of the street, the flag should be hung vertically with the stary field to the north in an east-and-west street and to the east in a north-and-south street.

Whether indoors or out, the flag should never be fastened over doorways or arches, tied in a bow, knotted or fashioned into a rosette or draping. For these purposes bunting of the national colors is most appropriate. The stary field should be uppermost.

On a platform the flag, if not flown from a staff, should be displayed flat, above and behind the speaker. If on a staff it should have the position of honor, at the heroic right or observer's left.

When flags of two or more nations are displayed they should be flown from separate staffs and all flags should be approximately the same size. International usage forbids the display of the flag of one nation over that of another in time of peace. With several staffs in use the national flag should be flown from the staff of the extreme heraldic right, or observer's left.

Night-Flying Proper. In holding the flag it should be run up briskly. It should be lowered slowly and ceremoniously. The War Department sees no objection to flying the flag at night over civilian property, if otherwise appropriate. It should not be used, however, for advertising purposes.

When flown at half-staff the flag should first be run to the top of staff and then lowered; before lowering for the day it should be run to the "truck". At unveiling ceremonies it should form a distinctive feature of the program, but should not be used as the covering for the statue. As a signal of distress at sea the flag is displayed with the stary field in the center. Use of the flag for athletic uniforms, handkerchiefs, napkins or other means lacking in dignity and respect, while not strictly a violation of law, is a violation of patriotic feeling.

There is an old army custom which affords an opportunity to do reverence to the Stars and Stripes whereby old and frayed flags are withdrawn from active service. By it the blue field is cut from the flag. Then the separate pieces of the flag are burned and their ashes scattered on the parade ground.

Moonshine's Odors Wafted On Breeze As Police Pour It

This was "pouring day" at the Sanford Police Station, and during the afternoon the fumes wafted on the breezes from Chief Roy Williams' office reminded one of the fumes which used to be inhaled when entering a "barrel house" in some port city.

Chief Williams and Motorcycle Officer Beckwith were busy emptying coco cola bottles, near beer bottles, old time pints and quarts into a big glass container. City Clerk L. R. Phillips was present to act as official "checker out" and Desk Officer Smartt was the official "pounder."

"Here's a full one, Mr. Phillips," Chief Williams would say. The official would bring his nose down near the orifice of the big container, jerk his head and—

"Whew—! that would kill a mule. That's moonshine alright. Pour it out."

Officer Smartt would then grab the stuff, lug it over to the sink and "ten thousand fights" and a million headaches went gurgling into the pipe on its journey to the lake.

This was liquor pouring day at the police station and yesterday was still breaking day at Sheriff Hand's office. Ten big copper stills which have accumulated with in the past few months as the results of raids of deputies, were cut up and scrapped for junk.

Senator Spencer's Body Is Sent Back For Burial At Home

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Accompanied by a Congressional committee of honorary pall bearers and members of the family, the body of Senator Seiden P. Spencer of Missouri, who died here Saturday night, was placed on a train Monday night for St. Louis where funeral services will be held Wednesday.

The public, it was announced by the family, will be given an opportunity to pass before the body in the Second Presbyterian Church for a short time Wednesday to the funeral services there, which will be private. Interment will be in the Bell Fountain Cemetery.

A revised list of the Senate committee membership, as announced tonight includes Senators Reed of Missouri, Cameron of Arizona, Dupont of Delaware, Ernest of Kentucky, King of Utah, and Watson of Indiana.

The House members designated to attend the funeral include the entire Missouri delegation and Representative Sassewski of Michigan.

KANSAS CITY, May 19.—A special dispatch to the Kansas City Star from Jefferson City quotes Governor S. A. Baker as definitely announcing he is not considering General Pershing for the vacancy caused by the death of Seiden P. Spencer, junior United States Senator from Missouri.

"General Pershing never has been considered by me. He is not even a citizen of Missouri; he is a citizen of Nebraska," the dispatch quoted Governor Baker as saying. Mr. Baker reiterated that he already had decided upon an appointee but would announce the selection until after the Spencer funeral in St. Louis Wednesday.

STORY OF SON'S DEFENSE PARTLY TRUE, SAYS DAVIS

Davis denied that the words "Peterson route" ever were used by Oswald in any conversation with him. Davis completed four hours of cross examination upon the adjournment of court last night. The attorney-general will resume questioning him today.

In his statement to the press, made Jan. 10, after publication of an alleged expose of a pardon sale through Russell Davis to Pollman, Governor Davis had said that certain persons took advantage of the "unsophisticated nature of my son to inveigle him into some indiscreet act."

He had denied in the statement any knowledge of Pollman's visiting Russell Davis on the Davis farm in Bourbon county, but his own testimony brought out that he had been informed of the Pollman trip. Pollman testified that he offered $1,250 to Russell Davis if his father would grant a pardon. Russell is alleged to have accepted from Pollman the $1,250 in a Topeka hotel and handed the paroled convict the pardon bearing the signature of the governor.

Newspaperman Spends Day in Jail With Shepherd

BY ROY J. GIBBONS
CHICAGO, May 18—A rattling door. A key turned. The thing swung back on hinges. The newspaperman was left behind and I was in the same jail. The same tier and in the next cell to William Darling Shepherd. NEA Service and The Sanford Herald assigned me to the task so that you could learn by first hand information and under natural conditions just what sort of person this man is. He is now on trial for murdering his mistress and molesting the youth with typhoid. He is under indictment for advertising deadly bacilli to young McClintock. And a coronary has just voted that he is guilty of the grand for slaying Billy's mother. Avoids Newspapermen since he has been arrested he has been able to really oblige and talk to Shepherd, the editor. For he is an actor and a manipulative one. The history he has built up for himself proves that. He has avoided newspapermen. But Shepherd talked to me. I was one of the three out of who come here," he said to "who are capable of understanding. This jail is the hell of things. They're good to me but I want out and free. I was just two minutes after all guard had searched, weighed and measured me that I saw Shepherd. The same hands that through my pockets for concealed weapons had helped coddled men to the gall in the same jail, the owner me. I was down in the bull pen and there, bulked out of his cell in the first tier. Shepherd in his tilted cap was leaning out to catch the light that fell on paper. He was reading the story about himself topped by his black headline. Even when I stood I could see the muscles on the man's face. This alone betrayed his mind. I was not to work. I was not to reach Shepherd's cell. I was to stand there. His face was as white as paper. He was looking at his large bulging eyes fastened on the sooty wall. "I look at your paper?" I said. "I want to see if those words are your case." I started talking. I gave him my opinion. "You must get lonesome in here," with vile words. I rubbed them all out and put those up instead. While talking, Shepherd picked up a cross-word puzzle. "I never liked these things, he said, 'unlike I came here. I tried sleeping all day at first but that made me loggy. Now I do anything to pass away the time. Most of the time I stay in my cell. There are few prisoners here who are fit to associate with. The guards are my only company. They are all fine fellows. Making it easy for them I make it easy for myself. It's foolish to be a rebel when they have you cornered like I am.' Suddenly the man's eyes shot full on me. They had a peculiar glare in them. They seemed to roll and bulge. Then they shut all out and put those up instead. "Yes, they've made me out a devil with horns. Perhaps they'll have the horns growing yet," he said, and laughed a mirthful chuckle.

Evades Man Going to Freedom
 After a while Shepherd came down stairs. A man accused of murder who had been in the jail was about to leave. He came over to Shepherd to say goodbye. "He's a fine fellow," said Shepherd. "And he's going home to freedom. How I envy him. But I'll be free too, in a little bit. 'Guess I'll go out to Colorado this summer for a fishing trip.

could have stood a brush. Glancing up I saw a fat cockroach prowling through the dust. The insect missed its footing and clung perilously. "Look out!" I shouted. Shepherd ducked just in time. The roach crashed down beetle him, stunned, on the cement floor. The man's eyes dilated. Then he laughed.

Wears Silky Pajamas
 As soon as he gets up in the morning he puts on his house slippers and sits up in bed in his silky pajamas to eat breakfast. He made a grand speech about those house slippers. "They have given me more comfort than most anything else," he said. He smokes cigarettes incessantly from an amber-colored holder, lighting a fresh one from the end of one just consumed. At the desk, where he assists the guards, he affects the air of a psychologist. He runs his finger up and down the list of prisoners just brought in. "Look at these criminals. Can you wonder why it gets on my nerves to have to associate with such men?" We were talking together with timidity of old friends. The prison had leveled us. Then he starts pacing. He has counted the distance along the cell tier. It is just 50 feet to the inch. "I put in at least a mile," he said. I paced the distance with him. "It's great fun going to the barber shop or going down to the canteen to see my lawyers. Anything to break the monotony. At first I didn't sleep. But finally I broke myself into a routine. Now I'm so tired at night I can't wait to go to bed. Shepherd and I kept close company during the rest of the day. I finished my work and was allowed the range of the cell block with him. Twice someone brought him food. The man has the most prodigious appetite I have ever seen. And in the evening he started eating again. He buys all his meals outside. "They have only stews and hash-cakes for the other prisoners," he said.

Finds Limburger Has Kick
 Shepherd eats his evening meal with the guards. I saw him bend over with glee written on his face when they brought in a big Bologna sausage about two feet long, a square of butter and a pound of Limburger cheese. Shepherd cracked some jokes about the Limburger cheese and fell to with a relish. "That stuff has a kick," one of the guards said. "Yes, it'll make a mule out of you," Shepherd said and laughed. But no one laughed with him. At 9:30 he has a pot of tea and by 11 he is in bed. At this hour all the cells are locked. I bid goodnight to him just before the final hour. I was in only for a day and he— "I'll be out by summer and get some of those speckled dandies out in Colorado," he shouted.

BE GENTLE

Stop now, and let the unkind word be left unheard. The one you thought had injured you has feelings, too.

Full half—yes, more—of all the blame. And scorn and shame we cast on others, is our own, And ours alone.

How thoughtless are we so we bring Heart suffering On those whose love, forbearing, sweet, Lies at our feet.

O guard your lips! Words shorten lives; No loved one thrives On unkind words; be gentle, true, As skies of blue. —B. F. M. Sours.

Florida's Five Flags

As part of the observation of "Flag Week"—May 23-30—the people of Florida might be interested in reviewing the history of their state's allegiance to the flags of five nations. The Spanish, the French, the British, the Union, the Confederate flag each waved on high over fair Florida, and in addition to these the emblem of the "unconquered Seminoles" must have had its day.

Back in 1559 the Spanish flag was first raised over Florida, and with the exception of the five years between 1718 and 1723 when the French were in control, remained the flag of Florida for two hundred years. In 1753 the British Union Jack was raised and remained until 1781 when the Spanish flag came back and remained until 1818, when Old Glory was raised and kept afloat for a year. Then again the Spanish flag was the master flag until the transfer of the territory to the United States and the Stars and Stripes except for the period when Florida was one of the Confederate States and gave honor to the flag of the Confederacy,—came to rule forever.

Some of the most thrilling stories in history can be found in the records of Florida's adventures under its many flags. Romance and beauty seem to have especially colored the story of this land. The Fountain of Eternal Youth that lured the brave Spaniard to the new world was really hidden here. And under each of the flags gallant adventurers in Florida have sought and found mystic treasures.

During "Flag Week", along with the flag-of-peace programs, it would be decidedly worth while to take a glance backward into the interesting history of Florida. This state has such a different setting from any other state in the Union. No wonder the spirit of adventure keeps leading us on and on!

Speaking of Honest Ship-Builders and Others

In one of the school readers of a generation or two ago was the story of the unscrupulous ship builder who in his eagerness to make a big profit on the boat he was building did not saw out the knots in the planks nor discard any timber that could possibly be used in the construction.

The story being a good one had it come about that the ship builder's only son, unknown to his father, took passage on that badly built boat. And out in the China seas somewhere the ship encountered a storm and went to pieces. The captain and crew were providentially saved. But even the wreckage to which the ship-builder's son was clinging broke up; and the boy went to his death beneath the waves still clinging to the end of a plank that had broken "just where the knot had been left."

It was a dramatic story with the author taking particular pains to explain, in addition to the obvious moral, that unfaithful work always brings rightful punishment. Very likely thousands of children who read the tale made up their minds never to build a ship with rotten boards. A few of the same children undoubtedly carried the lesson a little further into their lives and decided never to build anything from material that would not stand the wear and tear it was expected to stand.

But the main lesson in that story is the one that is so gravely needed—the honest job idea. The ship-builder endeavoring to get big profits at the expense of the man who was paying him for an honest job has his counterpart in so many lines of work today. From the plumber who hides a defective pipe in the walls of a house, or fails to make a tight joint, to the dentist who fills a tooth without properly cleaning the cavity, to the mechanic who screws a cracked nut on the end of an important bolt—the list would be made pages long; and each artisan, each professional man in the category represent the crooks and the near-crooks of his clan.

The wretched little thief who measures a yard of good materials on the short side his thumb; the contemptible little thief who mixes more sand in the cement than good building rules demand; the measly little thief who poses as a lawyer and gives paid-for opinions or matters he knows nothing about; every town has some of these rascals who are supposed to be good citizens and honest men!

That story of the ship-builder was to over-drawn to be very effective, but there could be dozens of telling sermons preached from the same theme with the scenes laid right here in Sanford.

MY FAVORITE STORIES BY IRVIN S. COBB

Some people insist that measuring, class by class, the lowest order of human intelligence in America is found among Key West sponge fishermen. Others hold that the group placed at the foot of the column properly belongs to a certain order of theatrical producers. As proof of the value of their contention they point to the story of the theatrical manager...

"There isn't a manager in town who can even pronounce it," said Lackaye.

Without any desire to take part in the controversy over the respective merits of the theatrical managers and the Key West sponge fishermen, I herewith submit, for what it may be worth, an incident which happened in the office of a prominent producing manager...

"Well, you get hold of this fellow Dickens and bring him around to lunch tomorrow and we'll get his ideas and fix up a contract." In the same connection there frequently is cited a remark by Wilton Lackaye, who once expressed a desire which he said he feared would never be gratified, to play the part of Jenn Valjean in a stage adaptation of Hugo's Les Miserables. A friend spoke up:

"I don't want you should read it to me now," said the manager. "Just tell me what it's like." "Well," said the playwright, "it's a historical drama in five acts. I call it 'The Dauphin.'" "For why do you call it that?" "Because it's based on the story of the Lost Dauphin."

ADVERTISING ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

"We would no more think of cutting our advertising than of shutting down our plants."—The Board of Sales Company, New York

That is one of the replies received by the Manufacturers' Record when it queried many of the big, great corporations in the country on the amount of money they spend on advertising and the results it brings them. They were unanimous in the statement that advertising on a large scale is essential to business survival. In the current issue of the Record in an article entitled "Advertising: The Creative Power of Business Success," these business kings bear witness to their dependence upon the advertisement for the continuing of their reign.

The names of their products across the continent and around the world. They are spending more this year than they did last to command the public's attention. They have learned that to let down in the use of printer's ink is to lose out in the race for supremacy.

Through three closely printed pages runs the story of manufacturers, salesmen, railroad and advertising managers who tell of spending enormous sums of money to keep their business in the public eye. They are men who filing

It is an ancient story: Not the occasional outburst of brilliant, ideas in advertising wins, but the incessant, day-in-day-out and never-let-up assault upon the public mind. The thing is now an open and shut proposition; whoever advertises the most sells the most. Successful men never talk about putting in an advertisement; their discussion is always of putting on an advertising campaign. "People are buying brands and not goods." The store which can establish itself through statements to the public as the synonym of good taste, excellence of goods and efficiency and courtesy of service is inevitably the dominating house in its line. The national advertiser succeeds in making his brand stand for the article desired. The local advertiser can likewise make his store stand for "the only place to go for things of that sort."

As Brisbane Sees It

LET FORD HAVE THEM. A NEW GAS. TIME CHANGES ALL. A WISE SPANIARD. By ARTHUR BRISBANE (Copyright 1925)

HENRY FORD is willing to buy Government ships now rusting away at anchor—sad reminders of war graft and incompetency. The ships that are worthless Ford would junk. Those worth it he would keep going.

THIS SUGGESTION from Ford arouses two kinds of "high moral doubt."

Incompetents on this side of the ocean, never able to make American shipping pay, always begging for subsidies in return for third class service, think it would be wrong to let Henry Ford take the ships, pay the government real money and stop the heavy losses. Corporation gentlemen that rely on getting up rates instead of rendering service don't like Ford. He bought a railroad, paying about one dollar a share for it, and ran it in the Ford way. Now owners of the minority stock refuse Ford's offer to buy their stock for $105 a share.

Such efficiency as that doesn't suit some of our railroad men. Their idea is not to develop and work a railroad, but to sit still in the old fashioned way and work the public.

THERE IS AGITATION also in Europe. The British have long controlled the world's international mercantile marine. American shipping has been a joke that British enjoyed.

But somehow they don't like the idea of HENRY FORD going into the shipping game. They see him selling, in Great Britain, Canada, in Australia, more than ten times as many automobiles as all the British manufacturers can sell. The thought of such competition at sea doesn't please them.

The question is: What will Mr. Coolidge decide to do about selling the idle ships to Ford, who knows how to do things?

THE PUBLIC would be well pleased if Mr. Coolidge would write to Henry Ford about the ships and Muscle Shoals, about as follows: "My Dear Mr. Ford: You are a white blackbird. You combine honesty with efficiency. Please buy the ships, make them useful. Also take the Muscle Shoals plant, develop it, and show the people what can be done to use advantageously power that now goes to waste."

WHAT IS THAT new gas in the sun? Scientists discovered it during the eclipse, that made it possible to see gases that whirl and rush in the intense heat close to our great star.

In the sun, and elsewhere in space, science discovers the various elements that go to make up our world. Helium, for instance, was discovered by scientists on the sun before we ever discovered it here on earth.

MR. LANDIS tells in a few words how the world changes. President Coolidge says he will stick to his ten cent cigar, refusing "expensive cigars" for fear of losing his simple tastes.

The world says "What marvelous economy, but does not President Coolidge push it a little too far?" Fifty years ago, the world would have said "What, smoke ten cent cigars? What extravagance! Such a man isn't fit to be President."

Our standards change as we move from the buggy to the automobile and up to the flying machine. THE PEOPLE of Canada plan more and more to manage their affairs, shape their own destinies and develop their possibilities.

IT IS SUGGESTED that Canada will send a special diplomatic representative to the United States in addition to the British Ambassador, to talk especially for Canada. A good idea. Canada and the United States between them, with the co-operation of modern statesmen of Mexico, have in their hands the destinies of the North American continent.

THE DUKE of Alba, well known to the United States because Zuleta painted a picture of his wife, is going to let his peasants buy some of his land. He hopes it will set a "democratic example." It will do more than that, and may save the grandees of Spain from some of the troubles that have afflicted the Grand Dukes of Russia.

When people own the LAND they take an interest in their GOVERNMENT and want it to be solid. IF THE Duke of Alba will study the history of France and Sweden, he will know what it means to have so-called "common people" own the land of their country.

Contemporary Comments: You had Mr. Coolidge did not notice the war in the name of Warren—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE PANTLEGGER IS ANOTHER BIG PROBLEM

The Newspaper Man, You and Florida

When you sell your Florida real estate, totalling big profits do not forget to thank the newspapers. They have played an important part in development here and have enriched your properties by presenting clean statements of facts to a few million readers. Indeed, the Florida pen is a mighty implement—dredging its way into the human mind with startling stories of the state's wealth. Big and little newspapers alike have devoted their best thought and their best front page space to telling and retelling good stories of Florida's great resources. If you do not believe this statement is true come to this office and scan the exchanges. You will then say that newspaper men are loyal and progressive. Without the enthusiastic support of the Florida editor this magnificent land would not now be known as the world's garden spot. He went to the front for Florida with all his might and put notice and thunder into industry. Hammer and saws are singing the builders' song and great structures are rising above the sand, towering above the waters of the ocean, lake and river.

SEEING THE LIGHT MIAMI HERALD

Connecticut's blue laws, it would seem, have been tried out for sufficient length of time to prove their value. They were once so strict, it is said, that a man could be prosecuted and jailed for kissing his wife on Sunday. The Sunday laws in that state prohibited all Sunday amusements, among which it rated excursions by train on that day, although the law did not prohibit excursions by boats.

The legislature of Connecticut now recognizes that conditions have changed, that modern life requires more freedom for the individual than was given by the old law. One of the reasons for change is the attitude toward a strict observance of Sunday is the growth in the use of the automobile. That very handy means of transportation has brought the railroads of Connecticut to see that they were working at a disadvantage as to the matter of Sunday excursions.

and they appeared before the legislature making the very reasonable plea that if automobiles were to be permitted to operate on Sunday and if excursions by boat were in compliance with law, the railroad ought to be allowed the same freedom. The legislature saw the point and freed the railroads from the obligation to refrain from running excursions on Sunday and while it was about it lifted the ban against Sunday baseball and other reasonable recreations and amusements, leaving the question of whether they could be permitted to the various towns in which it might be desired that games be played and amusements be enjoyed.

PLAYING SAFE ST. PETERSBURG INDEPENDENT

St. Petersburg filling stations have not sold the new motor fuel of which there has been so much discussion though arrangements had been made to have the new gas handled here next fall. But it now appears that the automobile owners in this city will not have a chance to try the fuel until further investigation of it is conducted. The oil companies have taken the sensible course. They have ordered the sale of ethyl gasoline to the public to be discontinued until doubt as to its dangers has been settled. The public's attention was first directed to this fuel last summer when several workers in the New Jersey laboratories of the Standard Oil Company collapsed and died. It was charged that the inhalation of the fumes of tetra-ethyl lead, a compound being perfected at that time to prevent motor knocking, was responsible. If it was a method of control has been found, for the product has been made in great quantities since and we have heard of no further fatal results.

It has recently been put on the market for resale in gasoline and has become anew the subject of scientific apprehension. Dr. Yandell Henderson, of Vaye, declares that universal consumption of the fuel by automobiles would be attended with grave danger to the public. He fears that the thousands of motor exhausts in each city would so pollute the air with the fumes of this gas that slow lead poisoning of the population would ensue. An investigation by the bureau of mines declared this danger remote, but Dr. Henderson contended that he could not accept their conclusions because their work was financed by the oil companies. Dr. Horatio B. Williams, of Columbia university, whose investigation is being financed by the Ethyl Gasoline corporation, said that so far he had formed no conclusion as to the possibility of atmospheric pollution of the cities. He denies sensational reports that workers in his laboratory were poisoned, but admits that minute quantities of lead had been discovered in them. He did not regard this as suffering from lead poisoning in any degree. Taking cognizance of the storm which was brewing, the surgeon general of the United States health service has called a conference of scientists to meet in Washington May 20. They will discuss the use of ethyl gasoline on public health. If they determine that it endangers public safety, sale will be forbidden. In the meantime the oil companies have wisely retained no special sales. If they get a clean bill from the surgeon general's conference, they can place their product on the market with renewed confidence.

Fatal Prank

"I shot her down cold—just like Uncle Frank shoots 'em," said Marvin Crutcher, 3, when in play he shot and killed Mrs. Vivian Harlan of Kansas City. Marvin of Jefferson City, Mo., visiting at the Harlan home, picked up a revolver, which Frank Harlan, a city detective, had left on a table. "I'm a policeman, watch out," he warned, before Mrs. Harlan could reach him the lad pulled the trigger.

It's Green As the Grass

Very deep shade of green makes effective background for the checked design in lighter green which follows a somewhat irregular course over one of this afternoon frock. The cut is simple so as not to detract from the material.
