

Winged Foot Golf Course May Be Undoing Of Jones And Hagen In Open Match

By Davis J. Walsh, International News Service Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Bobby Jones is likely to find Winged Foot something of a tangled foot in which the harder he tries, the worse one becomes involved. So it is Walter Hagen. It is a course, however, that may yield to the long frons favored by Gene Sarazen and Mac Smith and it will not treat unkindly the timid golfer who prefers safety above the uncertainty of boldness.

Johnny Farrell, the 1928 champion, returned to America after finishing second to Hagen in the British open golf championship, was discussing today the impending American open in connection with the course. "I have said, in no doing, gave an impression of what the course will demand and what the individual favorites may be prepared to give. It seemed to be his impression that the admitted boldness with which Jones and Hagen go for the pin may prove 'air undoing' at Winged Foot some two weeks hence.

"They are stroke-savers around the greens," he explained. "But these greens have deep, furrowed leaps like Okamoto, precluding anything but the explosion shot, and their usual stroke-saving in the bunkers is liable to be hampered, if not altogether nullified. Of course, if they are hitting their long frons, it will be another story. As I see it, they simply must hit these shots on a line or become resigned to those deep traps exacting their toll of strokes. For, you see, neither Jones nor Hagen is the type to compromise about a thing like that. They go fearlessly for the flag and this is one course where either make the perfect shot to the green or add a couple of strokes to your score."

Farrell, who beat Jones in a play off for the title at Olympic Field a year ago, has played Winged Foot for years and knows it more intimately than any other entry, barring Mike Brady, the honor professional. John is certain that 208 won't be broken; in fact, he believes that 200 won't be more than a stroke or two off the winning score. He professes not to have the slightest idea who will furnish the magic figures but he admits that he fears the worst for Leo Diegel and Horace Smith.

"Such hit low frons and these won't do on this course," he explained. "The greens are too small, too elevated and too tightly trapped to make this close-façade approach effective. Besides, Leo hates clover."

This latter is one of the added terms in the list of matrial handicaps arranged by the course for the open championship. Jones got all he wanted of it during a recent practice round or two some days ago. And it will be worse for the champion, since it only is beginning to grow at this time as a result of the continued rains this Spring. Two weeks hence it will be in full bloom.

POOR PITCHING IS HURTING ROBINS' BATTING STREAK

By Les Conklin, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 11.—One of the ironies in the career of Uncle Wilbert Robinson is that his Brooklyn players, who couldn't hit a lick when the Robins boasted the best pitching staff in the league, are batting like demons now that the hurling corps consists of practically only Dizzy Vance.

Led by Herman, the league's premier batsman; Bancroft, who is enjoying a new lease on life, Hendrick, Frederick and Bresler, the once "rimless Robins" have become a team of hitting fools. They are better the ball at a .300 clip but can hardly keep out of the cellar because of the bush league pitching they have been getting.

Uncle Wilbert's nephew's manager to hand the leaders a jolt now and then, however. Scoring six runs in the fifth inning yesterday.

U. S. Border Patrol, Like Royal Police, Is Suggested In Bill

when the wearer is considered a real officer, is a horror to criminals. It is a preventative measure.

It is said that the uniform worn by the Royal Mounted Canadian Mounted Police of Canada has had much to do with the wonderful success and established reputation of that admirable organization. "An organization of this kind would go into the field to prevent violations and enforce all federal laws."

Hudson's bill would give the resident power to consolidate agencies by executive order, placing the new border patrol under the department of justice.

One of the chief arguments for it, he said, is that criminals operating along the borders usually engage in more than one violation. The violations laid to certain agencies include smuggling of aliens, liquor, smuggling the narcotics, and in urging consular uniformity.

In urging consular uniformity, Hudson meets a demand of consular "wets" for the identification of all officers engaged along the border. Criticism of the customs agents has broken out again in Canada following the killing of Henry Vitkula near International Falls, Minn.

Raskob And Smith Will Remain Chiefs Of Democratic Body

contrast, he cited the Republican organization which maintains its national headquarters in Washington the year around and keeps its fences mended in all parts of the country.

Shouse further emphasized the need of a national organization that will keep functioning. He pointed out that in the past the national committee has plunged into feverish activity once every four years, at campaign time, and otherwise has been a dormant inactive institution.

His vision of a new Democratic organization to carry every intensive work to every electable office in the country, of which there are some 150,000. He pointed out that if it were possible to get a contribution of only $1 some each district, the deficit would be wiped out and the party assured of working funds to keep up a militant and aggressive headquarters.

It is to that work that he plans to devote his own energies, leaving Shouse to conduct the Washington end.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13. BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY: PRAYER—Search me, O God, and know my heart.

AN OLD VALENTINE: Valentine's day is a time of love and romance. It is a time when hearts are opened and love is expressed.

It is interesting to note that when Lindbergh put to sea, he left several thousand reporters at sea.

The Spanish War Veterans are in session in Sebring with twelve hundred in attendance. Thirty years have passed since these heroes of San Juan made history.

Dr. Lincoln Hulley suggests that low prices for citrus fruits is a worse long than the Medfly, but sometimes low prices are better than no prices at all.

This is wonderful weather we are having these days. We might say Miami's climate is slightly better than it read, "It's always January in Sanford."

The Internal Revenue Bureau announces that 115,000,000,000 cigarettes will be smoked in this country this year. The cigarette is proving a lucky strike for the manufacturers.

The federal government should come to the aid of Florida growers whose crops have been damaged by the fruit fly invasion. Just the same as it would if enemy planes had destroyed their homes by raids through the air.

Ramsey MacDonald and Herbert Hoover are going to get together and talk things over with their feet on the same table. Diplomatic notes and disarmament conferences attended by highbrow plenipotentiaries are all right in their places, but if you want to get anything done, go to the fountain head and talk it out with him man to man. We expect Hoover and MacDonald to get somewhere.

Another love pact suicide and murder has been discovered in Moorestown, New Jersey. There a young man not only shot his sweetheart twice, killing her instantly, but also turned the gun on himself and fired three shots into his own head in rapid succession. The police figured it must have been in rapid succession as they could hardly imagine a man deliberating about a second and third shot after he had fired the first shot into his brain.

Quick work by the Red Cross life saving corps, and the grave of flood, saved many lives Sunday afternoon when a long wooden pier of Clearwater Beach collapsed and pitched fifty wildly screaming, highly disorganized, intensely frank men, women, and children into the Gulf of Mexico. No one was drowned, a fact which should not save the owners of the pier from the necessity of an explanation.

The vice president of the Pan-American Airways Inc. was killed in an airplane wreck late Saturday afternoon. This man, Colonel Hamilton, was one who flew with Lindbergh when he blazed the air trail from Miami to Crystal Lake last winter. Saturday afternoon, his plane apparently without any good reason fell directly to earth when it was only fifty feet in the air as a landing was being attempted. There is still danger in aviation, just as there is danger in automobile driving, or walking, or eating, but while thousands are flying safely every day.

Purely Arithmetical

We once heard a college professor remark that no man could consider himself educated until he knew calculus. That this opinion is not shared by a large majority of the American populace is evidenced by a recent editorial in the Greensboro Daily Record under the caption, "Too Much Arithmetical."

The Record points out that a Columbia university professor has just issued the statement that at least eighty-five percent more arithmetic is being taught in our public schools than any ordinary man ever requires in the daily affairs of life. The North Carolina newspaper is evidently of the same opinion because it says:

"Most of us, in our daily life, have small use for much arithmetic. If we want to find out something about the amount of interest a certain sum of money will earn we ask a banker and he tells us. We do the same with most other problems that go beyond ordinary addition, division, subtraction or multiplication."

Mathematics may be the bane of the average school child's existence, as the Record insists, but that very fact tends to prove that it has its place in any well ordered curriculum whether it is of any practical value in later life or not. The athlete pulls weights in a gymnasium, not because he expects to win a silver loving cup as the champion weight lifter, but because the exercise he gets in this manner will benefit him greatly in other lines of endeavor.

For the average man it probably is of little value to be able to extract the square root of three, to determine the height of a tree when only the distance to the foot of the tree and one angle are known, or to know how to differentiate dy, dx, and all the rest of the alphabet, but such problems are mental stimulants which far surpass in their potency such placid subjects as English, history, or foreign languages. Mathematics provides just the right amount of cerebral exercise which most of us so badly need.

Undoubtedly the Record is right when it says, "A whole army of present and former school children, beyond doubt, will be ready to endorse the Columbia professor's stand most heartily," but anyone who has ever seen a lady, or otherwise of apparent intelligence, trying to add a bridge score, or an average citizen trying to determine what five and one-half percent interest on eight million dollars worth of city bonds is, will undoubtedly conclude with us that what this country needs is not eighty-five percent less arithmetic, but eighty-five percent more.

A Protest Against Distortions

The widespread misuse of the English language has caused many outbursts of rage among leaders of the intelligentsia, but none more rabid than that of Charles Hanson Towne who devotes an entire editorial in a recent issue of Harper's Bazar to a desperate denunciation of the modern simplifiers of spelling and diction, and urges congressmen to enact a law making it a felony punishable by ten years in jail and a twenty-five thousand dollar fine for anyone who purposely misspells any good Anglo-Saxon word in any electric sign, billboard, or street car placard.

"Stepping down the street the other evening," Mr. Towne declares, "I was dismayed at the number of words I found it difficult to read. It was as though I were in a foreign country. Theater managers sought to lure me to see 'volvel' and 'huplesk.' They did not receive my patronage. I felt that the performance would be as discreditable as the words over the entrances of these palaces of art. Before another palace I was confronted by a sign which told the world that there would be a good show 'tomite.' Once in motoring, I had seen a sign insisting that if one wished to reach a certain town one should turn 'to the rite,' and I wondered, as I deciphered it, if a foreigners happening to turn to the left and meeting with disaster, would not have a good chance of getting substantial damages from that town. For, after all, he might have learned, in studying our language that right is spelled 'right,' and would be justified in contending that any other spelling confused his astonished brain."

Such formulations so commonly seen as "Klasay Kut Klothes," "Tastee Candee Shoppes," or even "alldho," do certainly tend to demoralize any student of our language. Some such abbreviations are particularly obnoxious. We refer especially to the use of "Xmas," really an abomination, for the beautiful and expressive "Christmas." But Americans being Americans, they will probably continue to write and speak English, or shall we say American, as they choose, Charles Hanson Towne and all the congressmen in the world to the contrary notwithstanding.

FLORIDA WILL NOT BE DIVIDED

FLORIDA TIMES-UNION

The Hamilton Post-Dispatch discussing the "state division" has been at work in the legislature in expressing its wonder and amazement that such a thing is again discussed. The plan and arrangements made for slicing Florida somewhere about the middle and setting up two establishments were made without very serious looking, however, and the matter will pass into oblivion as soon as outsiders who have discovered this descendant note turn to something else. The proposition did not do very far in the regular session of the Florida legislature and may not be mentioned during the special term now getting a start. But it is interesting to see how the people look at the suggestion from a distance. The Post-Dispatch, for instance, says:

State independence is so highly developed in the people of most of the states of the Union that they will not listen to proposals for spitting their states into two or more commonwealths. In any state they have sectional or factional differences, ordinarily they subordinate them to their love for the state as a whole.

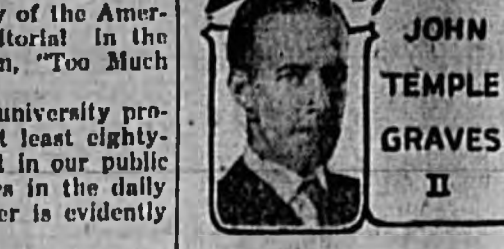

This proposal to divide Florida into two states is, therefore, rather surprising. The rest of the country has not been aware that there were differences between the citizens of the Peninsular State serious enough to inspire a Tallahassee dispatch announcing that sentiment in the house favors the proposed split, but that the senate spilt the proposal as a joke.

It is incredible that there should be any likelihood of a division taking place. The proposition is not in harmony with the modern day tendency toward consolidation for avoidance of duplication of unnecessary expense in administration. The area of Florida is sufficient for the state to be divided and for the resulting parts to be each larger than any one of the smaller states of the East. But the population of Florida is not dense enough nor the wealth great enough to make the setting up of two states out of the old one practical. The cost of government to each new unit would be increased, perhaps doubled. Necessity would develop for the establishment of many new institutions by one or the other of the new states, and a complete new set of state officers provided for. Because of limited resources neither of the proposed new states could progress rapidly. The plan will not go through because it is out of line with the spirit of the times. This is the day of merger, and not division.

There is further content which indicates a misconception of the sources of moves for division, and the Texas newspapers can be informed that it was not the usual dispute of the urban populations resenting control and dictation by the suburbanites. Of course the country districts do, to a certain extent, override some of the proposals of the city groups; as they do everywhere—but Florida's disquiet, when noticeable, is on account of the differences in aspirations and occupations of the sections. Southern Florida has interests that are not always appreciated by the people of the northern

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, Than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

The New York World, in many respects the most able and interesting of American newspapers, weighed last week against the southern senators who voted for the exclusion of aliens in the congressional reapportionment count but were not willing to have disfranchised southern negroes included also. The World charged that these senators are willing to ride rough shod over the constitution in their effort to preserve for a comparatively small number of white voters in the south representation in Congress out of all proportion to their number.

That the abstract logic of the southern position in this respect has its flaw cannot be disputed. But there is, at least, a plea in abatement. The World overlooks two circumstances which, when the machinery of American politics is considered, may have given the southern white man actually less of a voice in national politics and the southern negro actually more of a vote than their respective numerical strength deserved.

The first circumstance is the system of apportioning delegates to national Democratic conventions. Without regard to the wide variation in the proportion of Democrats in different states, each state is allowed twice the number of delegates that it has representatives in Congress. This means that states like Pennsylvania, which never vote Democratic have considerable more voice in Democratic conventions than southern states which nearly always vote Democratic. It means, in effect, that the southern white man, whose ordinary political vehicle has been the Democratic party, has not been proportionately represented in the most vital decisions of that party.

The second circumstance is the method of apportioning delegates to the Republican party in the south, an organization in many instances based on the votes of southern negroes. While the Republican party has a fair system of apportioning delegates to its national conventions, the Democratic party has, the southern delegates in Republican conventions nevertheless have had in the past a representation out of proportion to their strength in the south. This means that the southern negro may sometimes exercise an actual determining influence in the national conventions of the Republican party. And this party has been generally in office at Washington since the Civil War.

Since the political destinies of the nation are determined fundamentally in the conventions of two great parties, the World should not itself wonder that the circumstances named above do not affect whatever discrimination of the negro on a general election day the south may be guilty of. Secondarily, the southern white man's superior representation in Congress is not hampered by the southern negro's superior voice in the choice of a president of the United States.

The theory is one thing; the condition another. Theoretically the south has no legs to stand on in its disregard of the fifteenth Amendment. Under actual conditions, however, without regard to the social problem the negro represents, it is possible that the southern negro for those who control him has weighed more in strictly national politics than the southern white.

end of the peninsula and those of the western strip, which hang along over the Gulf of Mexico at the foot of Georgia and Alabama. Florida is a big state; considerably larger than many of the others, but has a comparatively small population rather unevenly spread about the triangular area and offering a very wide diversity of occupations and interests.

Family discussions and differences are usually settled at home and this will continue to be the way in which Florida will handle her problems. Division of the state would, as has often been argued, double the expense of government without any appreciable benefit to anybody, except perhaps the new officials who would be necessary to carry on affairs in the two divisions. Florida has too many valuable people to be torn far into any such expensive nonsense.

SANFORD FORUM

Editor The Herald: I am thinking of an old colored woman who took in washing. She washed and ironed six days out of each week and she sang as she worked. I'll never forget the answer she gave me, when one day I said to her, "Mary how is it that you can sing all the time and you never seem to be tired?" She stopped the rub a dub dub, settled down apparently on one foot and looked straight at me. I really began to feel serious and to wonder what she had in mind and then she said, "why chile it dis way, I keep on over hauling myself."

I have wondered since that time if it would not be a good idea for us all to over haul our self, once in a while. Before I started this writing I did very carefully over haul myself. I wanted so much to tell the simple truth, not trying to create sentiment or to appear to be a moral reformer. I'll tell the plain facts about what my father and children were like. I mean to do since I can remember. There were nine of us children, and our father worked away from home on public works most of the time.

We owned a small farm. Mother and we children worked together at home. Father came home late on Saturdays and went away again on Sundays. I always had lots of company on Sunday afternoon, we would have music and a pleasant time together. Father was always a home lover and I know now, why he could leave us on Sundays and go back to camp with a smile on his face.

I remember how on pay day, he would take the children with him to the little village store, I wish I could show you just how that little paper bag of candy looked to us. We were sure of that candy each pay day, which came once a month. Now you may wonder how father came to find any time for companionship with his children. He had to work to manage it. As I have said, his visits at home with us were short, but I can not recall any time when he was too tired, or disinterested to tell us a story. We, like other children enjoyed hearing stories about animals, and it seemed to us that there was no one else living who knew as much about animals as Father did.

Just what I could explain to you just what his companionship has meant to me. There was not any thing too big or too small for me to consult my father about. He had a way of explaining things to me in a way that I could understand, it and it satisfied me. Father has grown old and I am no longer a child. He is Father and grandfather, too, and I am a mother, and yet, he has that same sympathy in his understanding heart that words cannot explain. A clean pure love shines through the dear aged eyes and we know without a doubt that he is and will, while life lasts be a grand old man.

I wish to say to the children of today, if you are looking upon your father merely as one given to you to be used in a financial way, and if you are not confiding to him all your joys and your sorrows, simply telling him all about it, if you are not doing this you are missing one of the greatest blessings that was ever intended for you.

And to you fathers and mothers who are busy making a living and educating your children, perhaps too busy to give a word or thought to father, I can not explain what you are missing. The fact that they have developed self control from the years and experiences they have gone through, is no sign at all that they do not care to be loved and remembered. Surely they are too sensible and too sympathetic toward us to be putting themselves in our way or seeking favors for their self, yet, Father is one of the most human of all human beings.

God bless our Fathers and help us to have a better understanding of their true nature. Very truly yours, Mrs. W. A. Hopkins.

FUNCTION OF A NEWSPAPER

BOSTON GLOBE

A newspaper, to deserve and retain the confidence of its readers, must be something more than a business enterprise. Under a newspaper is a wholeheartedly committed to unselfish service to the public it is of little value to the community.

All newspapers make mistakes. But errors of judgment can be forgiven. A position on a public matter, mistaken though it may be, is excusable, if it is based on a sincere belief in a just and independent press.

The public has no other means of gaining information on important public matters than through the newspapers. The voter usually makes up his mind on matters of public interest on the basis of the public information he finds in the press. The paper on his newspaper for information regarding the manner in which his chosen representatives have represented his constituency or his state.

He has a right to expect that a newspaper shall not allow its masthead to be used to debate the cause of the public interest, nor to serve the cause of interests or special privileges of the representatives of the people.

At the same time a newspaper is bound to deal fairly with great corporations engaged in public service. They have every right of public controversy in which they are engaged.

are engaged. It would be doing no service to the public to deny these interests full representation in the press. The citizen needs such information to arrive at any reasoned conclusion. But beyond this no free newspaper can do.

The moment great corporate interests receive special consideration in the news of editorial columns because they are able to demand it, then the public interest is betrayed.

Newspapers are subject to many temptations, particularly in this era of frenzied money making. It is remarkable that so many remain unswayed by any financial connection which might impair the honesty of their views on public questions. Great fortunes are made in the newspaper business as compared with some other lines of mercantile activity, though it is quite true that there are many successful newspapers in the country.

The great danger to American institutions is that the source of the public information on public matters may pass from an independent, uncontrolled press to one which selfish interests have attained complete power.

The one safeguard of the public rights rests with the free and independent newspaper men who are keepers of their own souls and who can honestly say that they know no other master than the great public they serve.

THE TOURIST AND THE GAS TAX

DAYTONA BEACH NEWS-JOURNAL

Just how much the tourist objects to the five cent gasoline tax, as applied to, for example, the three cent tax imposed in California, is difficult to determine. Opponents of the Carlton plan, who favor a decrease in the Florida gas tax, claim that this objection is a serious matter, and that Florida can not expect a full quota of tourists and maintain so high a tax on the staff tourists (travel on). Surely, nothing should be done to discourage tourists in Florida. The question is, how many tourists will stay away because of a five, or even of a six cent tax on gasoline?

The answer to this is in the psychology of the tourist. What the tourist most objects to is not a few extra pennies here and there but the feeling that he is being fleeced. He acquiesces at being made to pay more than the market for hotel rooms, or food, or tires, or gasoline. But if he is charged market price for gasoline, plus a definite fixed tax, even if it is a tax higher than that demanded by neighbor states, he will not object. He knows all the other tourists are paying the same tax.

Of course, it would be better not to tax gasoline five or six cents. It would be better still not to tax gasoline at all. It would be best of all to abolish taxes. But the gasoline tax is the most equitable of all proposed taxes. Anyone who can afford to operate a car can afford to pay it. It is

A HAPPIER SAN JUAN

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

"Roosevelt Going to San Juan" Announcement of President Hoover's intention to appoint Colonel Theodore Roosevelt Jr., as Governor of Porto Rico carries a strikingly familiar linking of names. That of the island capital at once recalls a certain Cuban hill made famous by another Col. Theodore Roosevelt. Congressional rumblings have indicated some opposition to the appointment of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy at the time the revoked naval officer was made, but this objection is scarcely expected to block confirmation. In any event Colonel Roosevelt's expedition into the Field Museum of Natural History will likely prevent his taking over Governor M. Towne's duties before fall.

It is believed that the political period for the island Government in connection with the handling of hurricane relief will have passed. The native Legislature is aroused over delays in applying the $5,000,000 voted by Congress for the purpose. Porto Rico needs relief of more than one kind. Its problems offer as great a challenge to constructive statesmanship as Colonel Roosevelt could ask. It presents the anomaly of 1,500,000 citizens of the United States whose average income is reported to be less than one dollar a day, with nearly half of the workers unemployed. Also, it is making insistent demands for a larger share of self-government.

While fishing out at the West Bay bridge one day a few days ago, one of the county officials had a sad experience. An inhabitant of the deep swam up near the surface to see if there were any of the number who usually fling instruments of torture out in the water to ransack some unsuspecting fellow creature, were missing. Noting that all were present he gave a playful bite at the minnow of this fishery and the fish whipped out like lightning. Quick as a flash the fisherman started his head around the reel and he is still wondering why the minnow didn't think that he had been bit.

Fashions In Cans

These small sized cans are not only handy for individuals without an ice-box, but they are convenient to take on picnics and for workmen's and school lunches. The new eight ounce cans are used mostly as containers for fruits, and the standard No. 1 cans for vegetables such as tomatoes, corn, peas and stringless beans. This is also a popular size as a container for fruits for salad. Certainly these small cans serve to eliminate waste where there is no regular continuous cooking.

At the other end of the picture is a 30-ounce increase in the big standard No. 10 cans which are used chiefly in hotels and restaurants.

Lon Chaney Stars With Lupe Velez In Milane Picture

Lon Chaney, famous little Mexican actress, who scored recently in "The Gaucho," "The Lady of the Pavements" and other film successes, has for a father the most famous male star of the screen in her latest role, for she plays the daughter of Lon Chaney in his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "Where East Is East," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound synchronized film which will open at the Milane Theatre today.

The new picture is a vivid mystery thriller laid in the wilds of Siam, with Chaney as "Tiger" Haynes, mysterious animal trapper in the wilderness. Fate stalks his steps in the form of a sinister Oriental siren, his former wife, who would steal the happiness of their child and whom, in his frenzy, he plots to kill.

Besides Miss Velez the cast includes Estelle Taylor, who plays the part of the Oriental menace, and Lloyd Hughes, an American youth, who visits the jungle, falls in love with the daughter and almost falls a victim to the heartless mother, Louis Stern and others of note are in the cast. Ted Browning, who wrote the story, with Harry Simlate Drago, also directed it.

Manchester is without money to employ counsel, and accordingly the court has appointed Pope S. Brock and James W. Schell, widely known Macon lawyers, to defend him.

Aeroplane Radio Communication Demonstrated For Newspapermen

New Plane Receiver and Transmitter Lauded in Press Throughout Nation

"Cortland 7700, please." There was a minute's pause while the connections were being made and finally the telephone, jangled in the office of Edgar S. Bloom, president of the Western Electric Company, "Hello, Mr. Bloom, this is Bernhard speaking. I'm calling you from an aeroplane up about two thousand feet in the vicinity of New Brunswick. Can you hear me distinctly?" "I can hear you as though you were in the next room," flashed back over the air to the plane winging its way at a speed of over 100 miles an hour. And when the telephone receiver was returned to its hook a new era in telephonic communication had been inaugurated—two way conversation between aeroplane and ground.

Ever since the war the telephone has been a vital link in the chain of communication, and now it has been demonstrated that it can be used for two-way communication between a plane and the ground. During the war the laboratories were active in radio developments but there were many problems to be surmounted before it was considered that such a transmitter and receiver were ready for commercial use. The question of weight was an important one. They cut out the rear of the motor so that the man in the plane could hear the message coming to him over the air, was another factor. But one by one these obstacles were overcome until the set as it now stands is as nearly perfect as present-day engineering ingenuity can make it.

The receiver promises to be one of the largest factors of safety in the air. By means of it an aviator will be able to hear the weather reports which are broadcast hourly from the largest factors of safety in the air. It will also be used for two-way communication, and now it has been demonstrated that it can be used for two-way communication between a plane and the ground.

Hudson Plus Aerocar Too Fast For Cops

Here coupled to a Greater Hudson Coupe is the Aerocar, a trailer type coach which promises revolutionary automobile passenger travel through its high degree of riding comfort. Its amazing tractability was demonstrated on a test run from Miami to New York City when Glenn H. Curtiss, its inventor, asked Washington police for an escort through the city but drove so fast that the escort could not catch up. With Mr. Curtiss, central figure in the picture are, left, "Barney" Everitt, president of the Aerocar Company of Detroit, and right, Richard Letts, general sales manager. Among his backers are outstanding men such as: Roy D. Chapin, Howard E. Coffin, Walter O. Briggs and Arthur Brisbane.

A FIVE-YEAR-OLD FORECAST MORE THAN REALIZED

JUNE 1924 "the Chrysler is, in reality, the first step in the general revision of motor car design which is bound to follow its advent. For it is an entirely new type of car, built on a new kind of engineering, which produces results radically different from any heretofore registered in the industry."

—Advertisement Saturday Evening Post June 7, 1924

CHRYSLER'S INFLUENCE ON YOUR CAR

It has become an axiom of the motor car industry that much of what comes tomorrow originates in what Chrysler engineering does today.

For five years, Chrysler has been the acknowledged leader in thrilling performance. For five years, Chrysler has led the way in individuality and modern smartness of design.

Those in possession of the facts know that there is scarcely a motor car today that does not owe some improvement in its make-up to Chrysler—and has not become a better car by reason of Chrysler engineering achievement.

Emulation is a nice compliment to Chrysler leadership, of course. But the mere copying of features cannot equal the complete Chrysler results.

To you who are about to choose a new car, a natural question arises: Why not enjoy a Chrysler (the) so long as Chrysler smartness, comfort, performance and quality are the goals to which other cars are striving? Let us show you in a test of your own choosing the superiority of Chrysler to anything aspiring to compete with Chrysler.

CHRYSLER "75"—$1595 to $1795—Eight Body Styles. CHRYSLER "65"—$1040 to $1145—Six Body Styles. All prices f. o. b. factory. Chrysler dealers extend convenient time payments.
