Sanford Could Cut Refuse Pick-Up Costs $2.10 A Month

Sanford residents could get the cheapest rate in the county for garbage and trash collection, if a staff recommendation is accepted by the Sanford City Commission at its 7 p.m. meeting today.

Industrial Waste Services, a private company, in a meeting with city staff has offered to take over refuse collections from the city and to charge $6.40 per month to single family residences for the service.

Although the city has charged residences a $7.25 monthly fee for some years, the rate was raised to $8.50 per month, beginning July 1, to pay increased costs for garbage disposal at the county's transfer station at Upsala.

The city was notified in mid-May that the private dump it had used for years as a disposal site in Orange County was closing. Using the county facilities nearly tripled the city's disposal costs.

City staff members who met with IWS officers included City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles; Assistant Manager Steve Harriett; Public Works Director Bob Kelly; Refuse Superintendent Cliff Small, and Assistant Public Works Director George Rufas.

In a memo to the city commission Knowles said the firm offered to provide refuse collection and disposal services for the city of Sanford as follows:

- Continue the present collection method of curb side collection.

- Provide up to 250 back door collection points where occupant is certified by the city to require. The city currently has nearly 50 of these type customers.

- Pickups twice weekly of unlimited volume if in barrels, bags, containers.

- Provide service at a monthly rate of $6.40 for residential and 10 percent less than the city's current schedule for commercial accounts.

- Rates would be firm for three years under a five year contract. After the three year period any increase would be tied to the consumer price index.

- All city refuse equipment would be taken over by the firm at its appraised and agreed to value.

- All city refuse personnel would be taken over by the contractor with those the city wishes to keep on its payroll retained.

- "They will evaluate all employees on performance and cannot guarantee that those who are not producing will be retained. Old employees with 10 or more years service may wish to stay with the city because of pension vesting," Knowles noted. However, he added, they may wish to leave if higher wages are paid to them by the contractor.

- City would bill and collect as it presently does and pay the contractor the amount billed. The city would also handle bad accounts.

- Special pickups would be provided for loose material, appliances, mattresses etc. at special charge.

- Storm debris is not included.

Knowles in his report notes other items which the staff and IWS officials discussed and IWS officials agreed to:

- "They are willing to joint venture a refuse transfer station and guarantee a disposal cost to the city of $7,800 monthly on present volume if the city stays in the garbage collection business.

"They are willing to joint venture an incineration project with the city as we work out details as an alternate plan," Knowles said.

Knowles report says this firm disposes of its refuse from their present areas plus Sanford at Ocala or DeLand. They operate the Marion County landfills, plus some other systems.

The manager said the quality of service was a city staff concern.

"It was advanced that a city supervisor be retained by the city to observe, check, follow-up on complaints of any private collection effort and that the same high level of service must be maintained," Knowles said. "Failure to maintain high quality service would result in a monetary deduction from the contract services on a monthly basis."

"The entire city staff are unanimous in recommending this type contract services to the city commission," Knowles said.—Donna Eates.

Shotgun Killing Ruled Justifiable

A grand jury has decided that a Casselberry man committed justifiable homicide when he shot and killed a Sanford man in a dispute following a traffic accident.

Because he was attempting to protect himself and his family, the grand jury Wednesday found Juan Mendoza was justified in killing Rick Garnsey, 23, on May 28.

Garnsey and his girl friend, Janessa Burns, 20, both of 2764 Ridgewood Ave. in Sanford, were driving in a car on U.S. Highway 17-92 near Casselberry when the incident began, according to the state attorney's office.

Garnsey had been drinking heavily. Tests later showed he had a blood alcohol level of .28, almost three times the legal limit.

Garnsey and Mendoza, 47, got into a dispute when they both stopped at a traffic light. Garnsey got out of his car and approached Mendoza's car, according to the state attorney's office.

The two men began tussling, and Mendoza pulled out a .25-caliber pistol. As the fight continued, Mendoza was shot in the throat and the bullet exited his mouth. Mendoza then sped toward his home.

Garnsey got back in his car and followed Mendoza, who was bleeding heavily, got out of his car and fell down on the front lawn of his home.

Garnsey turned into the driveway and Burns ran into the house to get a towel for Mendoza. She then went back into the house to call a friend for help. Garnsey pushed past Mendoza's wife and entered the home, took the phone from Burns and slammed it down.

Mendoza got up, entered his house and grabbed a shotgun from his bedroom, apparently meaning to scare Garnsey with the weapon, who was physically larger than Mendoza.

As Mendoza turned through a doorway, Garnsey was six inches away from him and Mendoza pulled the trigger, blowing off the left side of Garnsey's skull. —Charles Cobb

There has been only one execution in Florida in the past five years, despite the fact that the governor has signed 50 death warrants. That is due in large part to the efforts of the Florida Clearinghouse on Criminal Justice to keep Death Row inmates out of the electric chair. But the group's budget is being cut in half, a circumstance some say may lead to the resumption of executions in the state by fall. See story, page 2A.

Youngster Angry Over Treatment Of Blind Parents

By Tom Giordano
Herald Managing Editor

Mariann Craft is 10 years old. She'll be 11 in September, going on 30. Mariann Craft is an angry young lady. She's not really sure who she's angry at. But she is.

Mariann's parents are totally blind. That's not really what's bothering Mariann, though. What bothers her, she says, is that people don't understand that her parents are normal...that they can function just about as well as most human beings who're not handicapped...perhaps better than some.

One of the things her parents cannot do, however, is drive a car. And perhaps that is the single most frustrating part of Mariann's life. It's also a major frustration for her father, 36-year-old Ray Craft. For Mariann it means she'll spend the hot summer playing around the yard with her 6-year-old sister, Laura. Both children have normal vision. Every once in awhile Mariann asks her father and mother to explain why they can't go for a drive...to the beach...a park...or just some cool picnic spot somewhere. That's when Mariann "argues," as she puts it, with her parents.

Mariann knows full well that her parents can't drive. What she can't fathom is why people aren't willing to give them a hand and volunteer their services to drive them somewhere...not often, "just once in awhile."

Mariann's dad is a bit more realistic. And proud. He's not looking for volunteers. He's willing to pay a driver. But they're hard to come by for what he can afford to pay.

"I hate to say it, but people are greedy," he says, matter-of-factly. Ray and his 38-year-old wife, Ann, have a monthly income of less than $500 from a disability pension. From that they pay the small mortgage on the modest home at 334 Marjorie Ave. in Longwood they managed to buy through a special low-interest federal mortgage, and pay their monthly utilities, buy food and clothing for the children.

What Ray Craft is looking for more than anything else is a job.

"Hell, if I can earn even a hundred and fifty a week I'd gladly give up my pension. I'd rather be earning my own money and taking care of my family on my own...I don't want charity."

The Crafts' plight came to light a few days ago when a member of the Knights of Columbus hand-carried a note written by Mariann to the Evening Herald offices and asked for help. He said area churches and civic organizations have been as cooperative as possible, but have been able to do little for the Crafts. Mariann's note is a plea to the public for help.

Craft is a piano-tuner and worked at the craft in upstate New York until about five years ago when he got laid off. They moved to Florida then, because a doctor told them Mrs. Craft's rheumatism would be eased in a warm climate. Piano-tuning jobs are scarce, especially in summer, Craft said. And the few jobs he's sought with firms didn't pan out.

"As soon as they see I'm blind, they don't believe I can do the work. Why, I even have braille and special equipment for recording if I could land a telephone-answering job. But even there, people see my condition and they think I can't do the work."

When Craft manages to get a piano-tuning job on a freelance basis, he earns about $30 for a general tune-up — a little more if there's extra

Gas Tax 2 Cents Or 4 Cents Seems Only Remaining Question

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

A public hearing on a proposed gas tax for Seminole County will be held Tuesday night, but it appears likely anyone who plans to speak against the tax altogether will be wasting their breath. The question will be not whether or not there should be a tax, but whether it will be 2 cents or 4 cents per gallon.

For with three Seminole County commissioners on the record favoring the tax, the board has enough votes to pass a 2-cent tax. It would take a vote of four commissioners to pass a 4-cent levy. To date, commissioners Bill Kirchhoff and Robert G. "Bud" Feather have not said how they will vote. Commissioner Kirchhoff said this morning, however, a 2-cent tax is "a good possibility."

Feather has said he wants to see a road repair priority list before he will vote for it. No such list is likely to materialize before the hearing, after which the commission is expected to vote.

The public hearing is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the courthouse in Sanford.

County commissioners last month passed a resolution to consider a tax of up to four cents per gallon.

Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn said today she doesn't know how the vote will go.

"I really don't have any idea. We haven't discussed it as a board."

Mrs. Glenn, Robert Sturm and Barbara Christensen have publicly supported the gas tax.

They have to convince either Feather or Kirchhoff to get the full four cents. Late last week, Feather said he favors the tax if a list of roads which will be improved is developed before the tax is approved. He was unavailable for comment on the issue today. Kirchhoff has stated he will wait until after the public hearing to make a decision.

County Administrator T. Duncan Rose said "the prognosis is good" for passage of the tax.

He said the county cannot afford to make road improvements through its regular budget appropriations.

"If we don't get a gas tax we will continue to fall further behind," he said. "We're already five to 10 years behind our needs."

"If we don't get a gas tax I don't know where we'll ever get the money," Rose said.

Rose doesn't expect commissioners to develop a priority list of road improvements prior to their vote Tuesday night.

"They're [commissioners] trying to break that into two decisions. They felt there's no sense getting enamored in discussions about road priorities when they don't know if the tax will pass."

The closest thing to a list of priorities is a list of projects deemed "critical segments" by the county Public Works Department and prepared as examples of the type of projects which are needed in the county.

If approved, the gas tax will go into effect Sept. 1.

Sanford Man Charged With DUI In Fatal Car Crash Near Daytona

A 28-year-old Sanford man was the driver of a car involved in a one-car accident near Daytona Beach Sunday in which a 22-year-old man was killed and two other persons were injured, according to the Florida Highway Patrol.

The accident occurred when the driver of a 1967 Oldsmobile, eastbound at a high rate of speed on Interstate 4, two miles west of Interstate 95, lost control of the vehicle, spun around in the median and rolled twice, throwing one of the passengers from the vehicle, according to the FHP.

Troy Lee Preston, 22, of Virginia Beach, Va., was killed when he was thrown out of the car in the 9:05 p.m. accident, troopers said.

James Myers, 16, of Sanford, another passenger, was injured and was admitted to Halifax Hospital in Daytona Beach. His condition was listed today as satisfactory.

Another passenger, Larry McGraw, 29, of Spencer, Va., who suffered a broken leg, remained in the hospital's concentrated care unit today, his condition listed as fair.

The driver of the car, Ralph Lamar Jernigan, of 217 E. 3rd St. in Sanford, apparently was not injured. He has been charged with driving under the influence, according to the FHP.

Two other passengers in the car were not injured. They were listed as Randall Bringos of Sanford and Mickey Parker of Daytona Beach.

School Board Tackles $123 Million Budget Tonight

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

A proposed $122.8 million budget eight percent higher than this year's budget is scheduled to be presented to Seminole County School Board members at a special 7 p.m. meeting today.

Assistant Superintendent for Finance Roger Harris today said the budget package is "very tentative." But even if the entire spending plan is approved, a tax increase would not be necessary, Harris said.

State wrangling about funding for educational improvements put the district behind schedule in its budget preparations. Under state law, the district is supposed to present its tentative budget by July 6 but that deadline was relaxed this year because the state Legislature didn't approve a funding package until early in July.

As a result, school officials have been scrambling to get tentative figures for this year's budget. "The Legislature put us under pressure. But we're going to get on schedule this week," Harris said.

Harris said the public will get a chance to comment on the budget during a hearing scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday at the school district office at 1211 Melville Ave., Sanford.

The proposed 1983-84 budget represents a $9.3 million increase from the $113.5 million budget for fiscal 1982-83.

But Harris warned board mem-announces its official funding figures.

School board members discussed the district's budget needs in June and came away with a "status quo" budget plan with only one major new program — an upgrading of the district's data processing capability.

Expanded data processing capabilities are essential, administration officials said, to provide needed services to the schools and district personnel.

The new budget also includes projected additional state funds for hiring 45 more teachers which will be needed to meet tougher state curriculum requirements. The Legislature approved changes in the requirements for graduation beginning in 1984-85. An additional class period will be added this year in Seminole County schools to ensure that students can meet the new standards.

School Board Chairman Roland Williams also wants to consider a program to improve computer literacy in the schools. He said some computers are available at a low cost and could be available to virtually every student in the district.

The school board is expected to continue meetings on the budget proposal until the end of September, just prior to the start of the new fiscal year Oct. 1.

Senate Set To Approve MX Missiles... With Strings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress may approve the production of the first MX nuclear missiles this week, but opponents will attempt to link its deployment to progress in arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

After two weeks of delays, the Senate will hold its showdown vote Tuesday on the controversial 10-warhead weapon. Although the Senate bill, as approved in the Armed Services Committee, would give President Reagan all the money he wants, it contains some significant strings.

First, it specifically authorizes building no more than 21 missiles in 1984 for actual deployment. Another six may be built, but only as spares or for testing purposes.

Second, it requires the president to submit, as part of any future requests for additional missiles, an assessment of how the new weapons would affect the U.S.-Soviet nuclear balance and arms control.

Senate opponents of the MX worked out an agreement last week when they ended the filibuster by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., that allowed them to offer up to four MX-related amendments to the $200 billion military authorization bill.

One of the amendments would stop production of the missile and another would link production to arms control.

More Advisers Or Money?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon has proposed increasing the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador from 55 to between 100 and 140 if Congress does not agree to $110 million in new aid for the country, officials say.

The increase in military advisers is one of several options the Pentagon has proposed to President Reagan, officials said Sunday, adding no decision has been made.

The Pentagon's current self-imposed limit on advisers is 55. Another 26 Army medical advisers have been in El Salvador for the past month, a Pentagon official said.

The options were presented to Reagan in the spring when the administration sought to increase military assistance to El Salvador by $110 million this year, administration and Pentagon officials said.

Congress thus far has approved only $55 million, but it has not completed work on the necessary authorization.

Israelis Head To U.S. For 'Urgent' Talks

By United Press International
Israel's defense and foreign ministers fly to Washington today for "urgent" talks with Reagan administration officials on the deteriorating political and military situation in Lebanon.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens, invited to Washington by President Reagan, were leaving determined that Israel would stick by its decision to redeploy its forces in Lebanon.

The invitation came in a note that reached Prime Minister Menachem Begin shortly before the weekly Cabinet meeting Sunday. Israeli officials described the "Dear Menachem, Yours Ron" note as friendly, but Israel television said it was "an urgent invitation one could not refuse."

Interviewed on Israel television, Shamir said he did not expect the Americans to pressure Israel to delay the redeployment of its troops to less vulnerable positions in southern Lebanon.

In Lebanon, the leaders of a new political alliance opposed to President Amin Gemayel gathered support for what they claimed would be a second government in Syrian-controlled areas of Lebanon.

The formation of the "National Salvation Front" raised fears that Lebanon might be partitioned into zones controlled by Syria, Israel and the Beirut government, but Gemayel, in the United States, dismissed them.

"We have democracy in Lebanon," he said Sunday in Houston, Texas. "Democracy means government and opposition. So that is very normal. We are not afraid."

In the Aley and Shouf mountains east of Beirut, Druze Moslem and Christian militias exchanged machine-gun fire Sunday and roads to the capital remained closed.

Ronald Reagan ...worsening political and military situation in war-torn Lebanon prompts talks between the two

There were no immediate casualty reports. Police said another person died in Christian east Beirut of wounds suffered in a day of shelling Friday, bringing the toll to 19 dead and 51 wounded. Police said the number could still climb.

Artillery and mortar duels erupted for a second day in the eastern Bekaa Valley between rival Palestine Liberation Organization groups. At least six people were reported killed and dozens more wounded in two days of fighting.

In Beirut, news media reports said 10 political groups plan to support the front commanded by former President Suleiman Franjeh, former Prime Minister Rashid Karame and Druze Moslem militia leader Walid Jumblatt.

All oppose the Christian Phalange Party headed by Gemayel's father, Pierre, 77, and reject the May 17 Israeli-Lebanese accord on the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon.

"We want national institutions, not Phalange-dominated espionage services," Jumblatt said. "We refuse, however, to take over the present institutions but we will study the possibilities of running them or controlling them."

The group's charter, published in a Beirut newspaper, said the front would deal with a range of economic and military affairs and also denounced the troop withdrawal accord, saying it "deprives Lebanon of its Arab identity."

Franjeh, a Christian Maronite, invited the Syrian army into Lebanon while president in 1976 and is a bitter enemy of the Phalange, which he blames for the murder of his son five years ago.

Jumblatt's Druze are a secretive sect outside mainstream Islam and Karame is a leading politician in the predominantly Moslem northern city of Tripoli.

However, former President Camille Chamoun, quoted by Phalangist radio, suggested old animosities might tear the coalition apart.

"When Franjeh and Karame were in office they could never agree on anything," he said. "The front will only survive if Syria keeps on sponsoring it."

Syrian troops occupy about 40 percent of Lebanon and Gemayel has accused the Syrians of complicity in the repeated shelling of Christian areas around Beirut by leftist forces in the mountains east of the city.

Despite Gas Price Moderation Motorists Staying Near Home

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fewer motorists took trips far from home this summer, even though gasoline prices rose only slightly by the peak of the summer driving season, an oil industry analyst said.

"Summer driving is a disappointment and it's attributed to price sensitivity and also an apparent reluctance of owners of older model cars who are dependent upon competent service station repairs to go into rural and more remote areas," Dan Lundberg said Sunday. "There has been so much attrition in service stations in rural areas."

Lundberg said his bi-weekly survey of 50,000 retail outlets in 50 states listed the average gas price, including taxes, at 125.19 cents per gallon, up 0.18 cents since July 8.

Wholesale prices, without taxes, were 95.10 cents per gallon, up 0.16 cents.

The average profit for retail dealers was 8.71 cents per gallon, up 0.02 cents but still less than the 11.48 cents per gallon dealers maintained at the start of the year, Lundberg said.

Lundberg also said drivers of newer model and foreign cars have in recent years looked more to the car dealers for minor repairs and maintenance.

'Except for scattered state price increases, it does look as though the summer price of gasoline has hit a period of stability.'

Dan Lundberg
oil industry analyst

While the current overall average price is above the 119.73 average gasoline price at the beginning of the year, Lundberg said, "it has to be viewed in the light of the national weighted tax on gasoline, which has climbed to 21.38 cents per gallon since January."

He said the tax includes the 5.94 cents per gallon national tax imposed April 1, and an additional average of 0.94 cents per gallon imposed by states.

"If you take that 5.94 cents from the current 125.19 cents per gallon you arrive at 119.5 cents, which is a just a bit under the price of gasoline at the first of the year," he explained.

The overall average of regular leaded gasoline was at 115.61 cents at self-service stations and 131.56 cents at full-service outlets, the survey noted.

Regular unleaded was 122.67 cents for self-service and 137.74 cents for full-service.

"Except for scattered state price increases, it does look as though the summer price of gasoline has hit a period of stability," Lundberg added.

As Anti-Death Penalty Group Loses Funding

Executions In Fla. May Begin Again This Fall

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The anti-death penalty group that has frustrated attempts by Gov. Bob Graham and Attorney General Jim Smith to execute 50 people the last five years is about to lose much of its money and staff.

The Florida Clearinghouse on Criminal Justice's income will drop 50 percent the end of this year with the expiration of a Clark Foundation grant. Clearinghouse director Charlotte Holdman will lose her only full-time employees, Jimmy Lohman and David Mack.

The cutback comes when the group will be facing its toughest challenges ever. Smith, pointing to recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings weakening the hands of lawyers for Death Row inmates, says he expects executions in Florida this fall — the first in four years.

"We don't have any choice but to continue the work," Ms. Holdman said in an interview last week. "It's just going to make an impossible job more difficult."

Graham has signed 57 warrants, but there has been only one execution — John Spenkellink's in 1979 — largely because of the clearinghouse, which finds lawyers for inmates once their normal appeals have ended and Graham begins considering their cases for either clemency or a death warrant.

But two challenges to the state Supreme Court's review of capital punishment cases have been resolved in the court's favor, leaving only scattered issues in the various Death Row appeals and making it more difficult for anti-death penalty lawyers to win stay of executions.

The grant from the Clark Foundation, established by members of the old Avon family, has been the clearinghouse's largest source of revenue, producing about $2,500 a month.

It was awarded originally for three years, then extended for two years, one of the few extensions the foundation has ever approved. The clearinghouse will continue to get money from the American Civil Liberties Union, the Catholic Conference's Campaign for Human Development and the Veatch Foundation.

It has never had its own lawyer and has little chance of getting one now, with its $50,000 a year budget about to be cut in half. Ms. Holdman has had to convince or coerce lawyers around the state into taking on death cases — pro bono, or free of charge.

Although the actual legal work is done by others, the clearinghouse provides critical support services, including typing, legal research and investigations. It spends up to $1,000 each time Graham signs a death warrant.

The courts have ruled that states have to furnish lawyers for people unable to afford them at the trial level and throughout the normal appeals, but there is a tremendous void currently.

No court has ordered this right extended to the clemency-death warrant process and court-appointed lawyers routinely get out of a case when it gets to this point.

"But this is when it is more critical than ever," Ms. Holdman says. "Not all the people on Death Row are going to be executed. They never have been. They have a 50-50 chance of not being executed with a lawyer. Without one, there's maybe no chance."

Graham and the Cabinet have commuted the death sentence to life in prison in six cases. The courts have ordered commutations in six other cases.

Some 90 cases are in one court of another now and Ms. Holdman says as many as half could result in orders of commutation, new trials or resentencing.

Police Spot Burglary Suspect, 25, In Bush Hideout

A 25-year-old man was arrested early today after Sanford police, answering a burglary alarm, found him hiding in some bushes at the Southland Corp., 2530 Jewett Lane, Sanford.

A police officer said he drove to the firm after the alarm sounded at 4:49 a.m. and saw a figure run inside the Sunland compound. After a search, the man was found lying face down in some bushes.

A knife was found in the man's rear pocket, according to a police report. A chain link gate leading to the compound also was found pried open.

Cary Levi Burch, address unknown, was arrested and charged with armed burglary. He was placed in Seminole County jail where he remains in lieu of $8,000 bond.

QUICK TRIP
Two wheel barrows fell off the back of a man's truck as he was driving west of Sanford, and before he could turn around, go back and retrieve them, thieves had made off with them.

John D. Williams, 62, of Tifton, Ga., told Seminole deputies he was driving on West State Road 46 about one mile west of Orange Boulevard when the wheel barrows fell off.

He turned around about a mile up the road to retrieve them, but when he returned to the area where they had fallen off, the wheel barrows, valued at $55 each, were gone.

CLOTHES SNATCHED
Some thieves will take the clothes off your clothes line. Edith Barnett, of 1171 New Jersey Ave., Altamonte Springs, knows. She hung her wash out on her clothes line at 8 a.m. Thursday and when she went to take it in an hour later, she found that someone had already done the job for her.

Missing were two bras, six pairs of her husband's underwear, three pairs of her son's Nike socks, four pairs of her daughter's socks, three bath towels and five wash clothes.

"There was a real variety of stuff out there and someone just grabbed all of it," said Mrs. Barnett.

BURGLAR SETS TABLE AFIRE
A burglar pried open a dining room window, entered a Sanford woman's home, and set her dining room table afire at about 2 a.m. Thursday.

Mrs. Flora Ann Tillman, 27, of 1220 W. 8th St., told police that she extinguished the flames on her table. She estimated the damage at $25.

TRUCK ROBBED
Thomas Ruffin, 60, of 212 Homewood Drive, Sanford, reported to Sanford police that $30 was stolen from a tractor trailer he owns while the vehicle was parked at the State Farmer's Market on U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford.

Ruffin said the theft took place between 8 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m. Thursday.

HOUSE BROKEN INTO
Flora Tillman, 27, of 1220 W. 8th St., Sanford, told police someone broke into her residence between 2 and 7 a.m. Thursday and started a fire on the dining room table.

Miss Tillman said entry was gained through a dining room window. She said damage from the fire was estimated at $25.

VEHICLE STOLEN
Keith Abbott, 27, of 3512 Curtis Drive, Apopka, told Seminole County sheriff's deputies his 1979 Ford Bronco along with his wallet containing $10 was stolen from his driveway between 2 p.m. Thursday and 7 a.m. Friday.

Deputies said the vehicle was unlocked when it was taken.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Polish Amnesty Decisions To Be Finished By Friday

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish prosecutors promised most decisions on amnesty for political prisoners in their custody will be completed by Friday, the PAP news agency said. Pardoned prisoners began leaving jails in Warsaw and other cities during the weekend, but the total number freed was small. Officials would not give specific figures, but probably no more than a few dozen of at least 650 political prisoners were released.

Some of the prisoners awaiting pardon have been in custody for more than 19 months.

The authorities also reported two members of the Solidarity underground in Gdansk turned themselves in at police stations as part of the amnesty offer. They were released after "necessary formalities," PAP said.

All members of the underground have been promised a pardon if they surrender, promise not to oppose the Communist regime and give a full account of their illegal activities since martial law was declared Dec. 13, 1981.

Doggie Derring Do Earns Mutt Hero's Medal

MIAMI (UPI) — A 20-month-old mutt that risked its life to save eight sleeping children and their mother from a burning house has earned a permanent place in the Animal Hall of Fame.

On Saturday, Fred was awarded a Canine Medal of Valor, dogdom's highest honor. In an impressive ceremony at Metro-Dade County Fire Station 11.

Fred was honored for his quick thinking on May 13, when he forced open the door to Arbury Sanders' bedroom and paved the woman awake at 5 a.m. to alert her to a fire blazing in the living room.

Mrs. Sanders' eight children — aged 8 through 16 — were herded safely out of the house.

Traffic Jams To Be 'Brutal' During Road Widening

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

Work to widen Red Bug Lake Road near its intersection with Winter Park Drive began today and county officials are predicting enormous traffic jams because of the project.

Jim Matthews, with the Seminole County Public Works Department, said county crews will be placing grading stakes at the site for three days. Pipes and culverts will be installed beginning Thursday.

Once the pipes have been placed, county workers will begin widening about 1,000 feet of the road into four lanes, Matthews said. The entire job is expected to take about a month.

Construction will be going on from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily, Matthews said.

The three-lane highway will be reduced to two lanes during construction, Matthews said. He added that traffic may be limited to one lane during some phases of construction because of the width of the highway.

"The traffic jams should be really brutal once we begin construction," he said.

Matthews suggested that motorists who use the road could stay out of traffic tie-ups by avoiding the area.

Development in Winter Springs and Casselberry have made Red Bug Lake Road one of the county's most congested highways. The road, designed to serve about 10,500 vehicles a day, actually carries more than 16,000 vehicles per day, county surveys show.

State officials have announced plans to begin construction of an overpass at the intersection of Red Bug Lake Road and State Road 436 in 1986. But before the overpass is built, county officials must widen Red Bug Lake Road.

Scientists Surprised

Animals Return To Mount St. Helens

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Animal life is returning to Mount St. Helens, the volcano whose fiery eruption left 57 people dead or missing and flattened about 150 square miles of timber and brush in 1980.

About 200 scientists conducting volcano research were initially surprised by the dramatic resurgence of plant life after the eruption.

Now many of them are astonished at the rapid influx of animals and birds.

"I think it demonstrates the resiliency of nature, how rapidly nature heals itself," said Robert J. Anderson, a Weyerhaeuser Co. wildlife biologist who has counted 26 mammal species, 101 bird species, one reptilian and three amphibian species in the expanse that three years ago was dismissed as barren.

As plant life increases in the devastated area surrounding the volcano, animals' return. Evelyn H. Merrill and A.B. Adams, two University of Washington doctoral candidates who led a research expedition this summer, noted an increase in certain plants in the scorched area at the outer edges of the blast zone. The result has been an immigration of elk.

Five college and high-school students in the research program, sponsored by the School for Studies in Cambridge, Mass., have spent the last month tracking the elk.

The students monitor the elks' movement and study their diet as they track daily from their base camp east of Toutle, Wash.

An estimated 6,750 elk and 14,400 deer now inhabit the four Washington Department of Game management areas adjoining the crater, said Mike P. Kuttel, a department wildlife biologist.

The numbers are roughly equivalent to populations before the May 18, 1980 eruption, except in the hard-hit area north of the crater, where herds remain down 25 percent, Kuttel said. The animals, he said, are healthy and productive.

James A. MacMahon, a Utah State University biology professor, said, "The amazing part of it to me is just how many plants and animals survived the blast, let alone how many have recolonized."

And John S. Edwards, University of Washington zoology professor doing research on the upper slopes of the mountain, said animals and plants that live in the Northwest are good at colonizing as a result of the history of volcanic eruptions in the region.

"That's why they're so special and unique for studying," he said. "The initial interest was on volcanology and geology. But from here on out, it's a biological phenomenon."

Reagan, Kissinger Meet To Map C. American Strategy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House strategists hope the creation of a bipartisan commission to examine unrest in Central America will help President Reagan rebut charges he is committed to meeting instability with military force.

This hope, discussed by administration officials last week, reflects the direction of a stepped-up drive by Reagan to strengthen his policy south of the border with increased support from Congress and the public.

The push for a policy backed by national consensus prompted Reagan last week to name a 12-member commission to delve into the economic and social problems in the region.

Reagan invited the panel's controversial chairman, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, to a meeting today to underscore his determination to find solutions to these problems while making clear that communist insurgency requires at least a short-term military response.

Formation of the commission comes at a time when Reagan is struggling to persuade Congress to approve an economic and military aid request for El Salvador and intensify pressure on Nicaragua through covert backing for anti-government rebels and a military show of force.

Administration officials concede the aid proposals have become stalled in large part because of a perception that Reagan is committed to a "military solution" in El Salvador that raises the specter of Vietnam-style involvement.

"The real problem we've had is that all of the reporting lately has focused on what we may or may not do militarily, when the real answer down there is economic or social (reform)," a senior administration official said Sunday.

"The Kissinger commission is going to focus on that long-term policy and hopefully take some of the heat off the shorter-term need for continued military support for the governments we support," the official added.

The New York Times, in Monday editions, reported that the Reagan administration is preparing a major expansion of covert intelligence operations in Central America.

The newspaper quoted administration officials as saying the plans are being refined but have been approved in general by the White House. They include stepped-up support for anti-government insurgents in Nicaragua and a campaign of sabotage directed against Cuban installations in Nicaragua.

"The expanded program of paramilitary action, the officials said, would make the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency in Central America the most extensive covert operations mounted by the United States since the Vietnam War," the Times said.

A new Gallup Poll said 71 percent of those questioned believed it "fairly likely" the United States' involvement in El Salvador will grow significantly, while 19 percent said it is "not likely" and 5 percent said "not at all likely." The New York Times reported Sunday. The poll was taken June 24-27 and sampled 1,558 adults in 300 locations across the country.

Former Democratic national Chairman Robert Strauss, a member of the commission, said Sunday the economic, social and political problems of Central America "have not been addressed properly."

Strauss, interviewed on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," branded as "overreaction in one direction" the attempt to pressure Nicaragua with naval units in the area and military maneuvers in neighboring Honduras.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of a House subcommittee on Central America, said on NBC's "Meet the Press" the military moves are a "tragic mistake." He labeled Reagan's policies "illegal, misguided and counterproductive."

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., also interviewed on ABC, said the Kissinger commission is nothing more than a move by Reagan to buy time for a militaristic policy that seeks to overthrow the Sandinistas, contrary to U.S. law.

Zeroing In On Student Aid Abuse

During the 1982-83 school year, nearly 7 million college students received federal assistance. Most of that number utilized the helping hand of $7 billion from taxpayers to good advantage in pursuit of a higher education.

However, about 20 percent of that number probably will have earned less than the "C" average needed to receive a diploma when graduation time rolls around. That's money down the drain which could have been put to much better use elsewhere.

U.S. Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., is seeking to do something about this situation by sponsoring legislation to remedy the problem. He cites the example of a student who received more than $4,200 in federal assistance and was awarded a degree in social science at a four-year university over a period of five years. The student took 13 physical education classes, including Coed Bowling, Coed Billiards and Coed jogging.

He received 4 F's, 11 D's and withdrew from 8 other courses. Although he had a grade average of less than a C, the school waved its standards to allow him to graduate.

Nobody gains in such circumstances. Taxpayers shouldn't have to foot the bill and the heads of such educational institutions should hang their heads in shame for their laxity. The problem centers on the fact that there are no standards for academic performance applied to students receiving federal aid. Instead, each institution develops its own standards.

Although students receiving financial assistance are required to be in "good standing," a General Accounting Office report found that the standards often are relaxed or not enforced.

Under the proposed legislation aimed at curbing the current abuse, students failing to maintain a C average would not be dropped immediately. They would have a year in which to develop study habits and establish an academic average. Those failing to maintain a C average would be given an additional grading period to bring up their average without having their federal aid cut off.

The procedure would be simple since colleges already are required to verify a student's scholastic standing. The institutions would simply have to include a grade point average as part of the process.

Much of the blame currently being heaped upon educational institutions is of their own making. They've ignored insisting on high standards and opened the classrooms to everyone who had the price of tuition. It's time to return to the high standards of old. A step in that direction would assure taxpayers they are getting their money's worth.

Congress Stay Out

U.S. Rep. Jim Bates, D-Calif., has introduced three bills that would put Congress smack dab in the middle of dismantling American Telephone & Telegraph Co. — the world's largest corporation.

His proposed legislation, co-authored by 20 fellow congressmen, would throw Congress into the pit — have it dictating the terms of the antitrust settlement, presumably to keep local telephone rates from being priced beyond the reach of many subscribers.

Customers are fearful. Some Bell companies, to be cut off from long-distance income, are asking for rate increases that would more than double the basic monthly charge to residential customers.

We fear Bates' bills are premature. Congress should not interfere at this stage. It should give the courts and the state public utility commissions time to work out and complete the present agreement.

The AT&T antitrust settlement, which requires the breakup of the Bell System, is moving along well in Washington under the direction of U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene. It is properly a matter to be handled in the courts. If problems arise down the line, that would be the time for Congress to step in with legislation.

AT&T's plan for divesting itself of 22 of its Bell companies was found acceptable, with certain pro-consumer conditions, by Judge Greene.

The plan, expected to go into effect Jan. 1, will turn over to the 22 Bell companies about three-fourths of AT&T's $152 billion in assets.

The plan provides that the 22 Bell companies will continue to provide local telephone service and some intrastate service. Most intrastate and all of the interstate long-distance service will continue to be provided by AT&T.

The divestiture is on schedule. Any congressional interference at this stage would simply disrupt the orderly procedure of the court.

BERRY'S WORLD

"He's setting up a gossip and trivia service for the neighborhood."

Thinking About TV Reporting

Barbara Gordon is a beautiful and very intelligent young woman who has survived more than her share of miseries. Her new novel, "Defects of the Heart," deals with matters of considerable current importance. It focuses on medicine-induced birth defects of the thalidomide sort, and on the "investigative reporting" side of television.

I notice that Dow Merrell Pharmaceutical has just withdrawn a drug called Bendectin from the market, because of the mere undocumented suspicion that it causes birth defects.

The drug cured morning sickness in pregnant women, a syndrome that in some cases is dangerous. But the drug is gone, without much analysis of the causes or the consequences. I notice also that TV investigative reporting is now the subject of very large law suits, which call into serious question many of its standard techniques.

Barbara Gordon is herself an award-winning TV producer, but you probably know about her through her best-selling autobiographical 1979 volume, "I'm Dancing As Fast As I Can." This tells the story of her Vallium-induced emotional collapse, a story that leads quite naturally to her focus on a crooked pharmaceutical giant in her new novel. Her memoir was, for me at least, something of a revelation. I had supposed the practice of psychiatry to be based, at least to some degree, on science. But Barbara Gordon introduces us to an astounding gallery of Manhattan psychiatric quacks, cynics, and psychopaths, and she shows that even in a — very expensive — private sanatorium you are lucky to get even commonsensical treatment. Many of the psychiatrists are crazier than their patients.

The new novel, "Defects of the Heart," tells us about a foolishly avaricious corporation, McCambell Pharmaceuticals, which is preparing to market a drug which British research connects with birth defects. McCambell tries to cover up the evidence, intimidate researchers, bribe witnesses, etc. A TV investigative reporter, Jessica Lenhart — splendidly drawn — uncovers the whole crooked scheme.

While I find it unlikely that a major firm would attempt any such scheme, risky to the point of doom, the novel also presents a brilliant and revealing portrait of "investigative television." Barbara Gordon has been there, and she knows the business — the tricks, the coached interviews, the editing. All of this, as it happens, is now very much in the news.

There is a major problem with investigative television. For, on the one hand, TV — even public TV — is entertainment. It lives and dies by ratings. Thus there exists every incentive to hype the story, create heroes and villains.

One of the finest moments of "Defects of the Heart" comes when Jessica, hot on the trail of her story, visits the family in England of a boy who has the deforming birth defects. She finds, to her unexpected disappointment, that he and his family are coping very well — and are happy. "Somewhere in the back of my mind was the horrible wish that Timmy could be a pitiful invalid, a sad little cripple. I thought I would have a more powerful film..."

Stable has to be the perfect word to describe the Sanford city government. In other Seminole County governments major employees and elected officials change frequently, either because they are moving on to something better, because the voters have decided their time has expired or because in the case of an employee, a decision has been made that the government concerned could be better served by someone else.

In recent days news stories have said things like: —Four Sanford employees with combined service to the city of 88 years will retire next year. Major among those employees is Fire Chief William C. Gailley, a city employee of nearly 32 years.

—Mayor Lee P. Moore, a member of the Sanford City Commission for the past 14 years, has said he won't run for re-election.

—City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles has 30 years service to the city.

—Mack LaZenby, city engineer for 10 years, moved on to a new job, but it was with the Sanford Airport Authority and he still does some engineering work for the city as a consultant.

—Police Chief Ben Butler has about 30 years of service to the police department.

—Public Works Director Bob Kelly is approaching 30 years with the city.

—John Daniels resigns after 11½ years as a member of the Sanford Airport Authority. He was a continuous member of the board from the time it was established on Oct. 1, 1971.

Democrats In A Bind

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It looks as if the Democratic Party might hold several of its presidential primaries this year — and that's a nightmare for the party's planners and for most of its announced presidential hopefuls.

As reported earlier, the Democrats have had major problems with their 1984 primary slate. The party wanted all primaries and caucuses held between March 13 and June 12, with the exception of those in New Hampshire and Iowa — which, for historical reasons, could take place slightly earlier.

The current problem is California. The state is operating under a redistricting plan that was pushed through the Democratic state legislature just before Gov. Jerry Brown left office last year. The plan features a rigged set of districts that heavily favor Democrats — and it has outraged Republicans, including the new governor, George Deukmejian. He has called a special election for Dec. 13 as a referendum on the redistricting plan.

Special elections traditionally draw only light voter turnout, especially among minorities and other voters who are strongly Democratic. The GOP hopes for a low voter turnout so it can overturn the redistricting plan.

Democrats have threatened to counter Deukmejian by holding their primary on the date of the special election. This would ensure a huge Democratic turnout, almost guaranteeing the referendum's defeat.

The Democrats say they will go to court to test the constitutionality of the special-election call. However, if they fail to get a favorable ruling, they probably will have to make good on their original threat: holding at least a statewide non-binding "beauty contest," if not the actual selection of convention delegates.

Meanwhile, Iowa and New Hampshire are legally committed to holding their caucus and primary before any other state, regardless of date. Theoretically, if California Democrats are forced to hold a primary on Dec. 13, the New Hampshire primary would be held Dec. 10 and the Iowa caucuses on the first weekend in December.

This would wreak havoc with the candidates' plans. They're gearing up for a primary season that would begin — at the earliest — on the last weekend in February, and they didn't expect to fight it out in California until much later.

About the only candidate who would find such a revision attractive is Sen. Alan Cranston. The Californian won the straw poll conducted at the California state convention and probably would be the favorite in a December primary — and a win would greatly boost his standing in the overall race.

Democratic leaders hope that the California party will win a court ruling that strikes down the special-election call. What if the election is upheld and the state's Democrats move up the primary? Party officials can only shake their heads and say they hope it won't happen.

THE DEMOCRATS ARE talking up their chances of capturing enough Senate seats in 1984 to regain control of the upper chamber. But their only chance of doing so is to run the strongest possible candidate in each state — and this doesn't seem to be happening.

In Colorado, for example, Democrats say that incumbent GOP Sen. William Armstrong is vulnerable. However, polls show that the only Democratic candidate who seems sure to win would be the popular governor, Richard Lamm. One recent poll put Lamm ahead of Armstrong by 51 to 38.

Baring Of Our Politicians

WASHINGTON (NEA) — One member of Congress describes himself as "a piece of meat shoved from one meeting to another." Another legislator says, "My 13-year-old keeps asking me what I am going to be when I grow up."

A third lawmaker offers this candid view of service in the House of Representatives: "I used to wonder why my predecessor quit after only 10 years. He was enormously popular and could have kept his seat as long as he wanted. Now I wonder how he made 10 years."

Those observations are contained in a fascinating new publication, "Congress Off the Record: The Candid Analyses of Seven Members," just published by the American Enterprise Institute, a Washington-based conservative "think tank."

There is a temptation on the part of the press and public to view members of Congress as people who occupy their time between Capitol Hill scandals by doing little more than voting to increase their own salaries, attending cocktail parties, touring the world on taxpayer-financed junkets and voting in favor of budget-busting appropriations bills.

What makes AEI's slim (53 page) book especially valuable is that it allows the legislators to portray themselves as they really are — a group of fallible, harried and sometimes insecure men and women struggling to survive in an uncertain world under conflicting pressures generated by constituents, lobbyists and colleagues.

Their concerns about their families and their careers, their aspirations and frustrations, their hopes and fears are compassionately yet honestly portrayed in the book.

Enlisted by AEI for the project were six men and one woman elected to House seats for the first time in 1978. There were four Republicans and three Democrats, representing diverse personal backgrounds, ideological views and home districts. To encourage them to be forthright, all were assured of complete anonymity.

Most of those interviewed were startled by the frantic pace of activity in the House and the demanding schedules they were expected to maintain. "That was the biggest shock to me," says one lawmaker, "the insanity of the scheduling and the fact that you go to so many meetings."

A colleague explains: "Now I understand why, after 10 years of this crazy life, never seeing your family and what not, you would bag it, particularly when you represent a district where you never have a life of your own."

Because Congress is such a complex institution and the issues with which it must deal are so diverse, most of the lawmakers have found security and satisfaction through specializing in the work of their subcommittees.

One describes his subcommittee as "the one place probably where you can have an impact on legislation." Another says, "That is the area where you can make your most positive contribution." Observes a third: "It is what I really enjoy. That is why I am here."

The House floor is, of course, where all legislation must finally be debated and voted upon — but tourists and others in the visitors' galleries often are confounded by members milling about, chatting with each other and paying little attention to those making speeches.

SOVIET CHEATING: Secret evidence has been laid before national security adviser William Clark that the Soviets have repeatedly violated the SALT I and SALT II arms-limitation treaties. There is also abundant evidence that the Soviets are using deadly chemicals to flush guerrillas out of the rugged mountains of Afghanistan and Laos.

Yet Clark is under pressure to suppress these grave treaty violations. Otherwise, it might upset the Soviets just as they are beginning to negotiate arms reduction with the Reagan administration in Geneva. President Reagan wants to show that he is willing to make peace with the Soviet Union as the 1984 election year draws closer.

Clark heads an interagency committee that is supposed to report on the Soviet violations.

Democrats In A Bind

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It looks as if the Democratic Party might hold several of its presidential primaries this year — and that's a nightmare for the party's planners and for most of its announced presidential hopefuls.

As reported earlier, the Democrats have had major problems with their 1984 primary slate. The party wanted all primaries and caucuses held between March 13 and June 12, with the exception of those in New Hampshire and Iowa — which, for historical reasons, could take place slightly earlier.

The current problem is California. The state is operating under a redistricting plan that was pushed through the Democratic state legislature just before Gov. Jerry Brown left office last year. The plan features a rigged set of districts that heavily favor Democrats — and it has outraged Republicans, including the new governor, George Deukmejian. He has called a special election for Dec. 13 as a referendum on the redistricting plan.

Special elections traditionally draw only light voter turnout, especially among minorities and other voters who are strongly Democratic. The GOP hopes for a low voter turnout so it can overturn the redistricting plan.

Democrats have threatened to counter Deukmejian by holding their primary on the date of the special election. This would ensure a huge Democratic turnout, almost guaranteeing the referendum's defeat.

The Democrats say they will go to court to test the constitutionality of the special-election call. However, if they fail to get a favorable ruling, they probably will have to make good on their original threat: holding at least a statewide non-binding "beauty contest," if not the actual selection of convention delegates.

Meanwhile, Iowa and New Hampshire are legally committed to holding their caucus and primary before any other state, regardless of date. Theoretically, if California Democrats are forced to hold a primary on Dec. 13, the New Hampshire primary would be held Dec. 10 and the Iowa caucuses on the first weekend in December.

This would wreak havoc with the candidates' plans. They're gearing up for a primary season that would begin — at the earliest — on the last weekend in February, and they didn't expect to fight it out in California until much later.

About the only candidate who would find such a revision attractive is Sen. Alan Cranston. The Californian won the straw poll conducted at the California state convention and probably would be the favorite in a December primary — and a win would greatly boost his standing in the overall race.

Democratic leaders hope that the California party will win a court ruling that strikes down the special-election call. What if the election is upheld and the state's Democrats move up the primary? Party officials can only shake their heads and say they hope it won't happen.

THE DEMOCRATS ARE talking up their chances of capturing enough Senate seats in 1984 to regain control of the upper chamber. But their only chance of doing so is to run the strongest possible candidate in each state — and this doesn't seem to be happening.

In Colorado, for example, Democrats say that incumbent GOP Sen. William Armstrong is vulnerable. However, polls show that the only Democratic candidate who seems sure to win would be the popular governor, Richard Lamm. One recent poll put Lamm ahead of Armstrong by 51 to 38.

Altamonte, Pony Baseball Combine For Dream Team

The Altamonte Little League and the Seminole Pony Baseball, Inc. have long been the frontrunners when it comes to summer all-star teams in Central Florida, as well as the state.

Altamonte continually goes to the state tournament on various levels while just two years ago, the Seminole Pony 11- and 12-year-old Broncos finished second in the World Series.

Which brings one to ponder, what would happen if you combined the two forces? The wondering is over — at least for the 13-year-olds. Manager Frank Messina's Junior League Altamonte All-Stars have six players who learned their trade at Seminole Pony and eight players who played most of their career at Altamonte.

And the team has been nothing short of spectacular, so far. Of course, the competition hasn't been much, but when you outscore Mount Dora, Oviedo (twice) and Winter Garden, 57-6, it does say something for a team's bats.

"The players who came over from Seminole Pony have given us tremendous depth," said Messina who previously coached on the Mustang level for two years at Five Points.

Pitcher Greg Ebbert and infielder Jimmy Waring were both key members of the Broncos' World Series runners-up as 11-year-olds. Catcher Randy Green and pitcher Zac Maddox played for manager Russell Swain's Forest City II team last year at Seminole. The Martinez twins — lefty Eric and righty Ernest — played for Lake Mary as 11-year-olds before going to Semoran last year.

The remaining eight — outfielders Matt Lange, Chris Brock along with infielders Jeff Hagen, Eric Birle, Cory Prom, Scott Stiles, Matt Messina and Anthony Laszalc — all played last year at Altamonte, although Messina, Birle and Lange have all spent some time at Seminole.

The difference between the two leagues is substantial until the players reach 13 years of age. Seminole Pony plays pure baseball (lead offs and pitching from the stretch) while Little League does not allow that until age 13. The Seminole Pony Broncos (11- and 12-year-olds) play at 70-foot basepaths while Altamonte's 11- and 12-year-olds play at 60.

Each has its good points, although it would appear the Seminole Pony program would benefit the better player. He would have a four-year headstart on the Altamonte 13-year-old when it comes to pickoffs and pitching from the stretch.

Others feel, however, that the Mustangs (9- and 10-year-olds) can't adequately handle holding runners on base and catch well enough, which turns the game turns into a track meet with too much stealing and too many passed balls. Catching, as one might expect, is a very important aspect of Seminole Pony Baseball.

"I'd like to incorporate some of both leagues," said Altamonte president John Strott, who is responsible for much of the league's success because of his strong leadership. "But we have a very strong charter and Little League baseball doesn't want anything changed."

One thing is for sure, though, when you combine the best of both worlds — you have one dynamite team.

The Juniors have an extraordinary lineup and bench filled with hitters. At one time or another all have started and produced. The competition, though, has been weak, which is why tonight's game (8 o'clock at Winter Garden) should give an indication of just how good this team is.

The Altamonte pitchers have had an easy time of it. Once Prom, Ebbert, Maddox, Messina or the now-disabled Anthony Laszalc disposed of the several good hitters from Mount Dora, Oviedo or Winter Garden, it was a piece of cake. Laszalc suffered a broken wrist after two games and his loss was devastating. He was a top pitcher and a strong hitter and defensive player. His absence could mean the difference between a sectional or state championship.

Tonight, manager Frank Messina's free-swinging bunch begins Little League Junior Sectional Tournament action at Winter Garden, which will also hold the state tournament. Districts 1, 11, 14, and 15 make up this sectional. Altamonte is 14.

Pensacola-Tri-County (1) plays Jacksonville-Highlands (11) at 5:30 p.m. Altamonte team takes on Crystal River at 8 p.m., which according to District 15 administrator Solon Brown, "has a pretty strong team."

Messina will throw Ebbert at Crystal River. The blond lefthander tossed a pair of shutouts as Altamonte rolled through the district. While not overpowering, Ebbert has good control of his pitches and an excellent pickoff move.

If Ebbert can keep Crystal River in check, the hitters should do the rest. Center fielder Brock is the best of the bunch. He's had a four-hit, three-hit and a two-hit game. He also raps a few doubles and can steal a base when needed. The Martinez twins can also swing the aluminum. Eric had a three-hit game and a couple two-hit games while Ernest added a couple two-hit games and drew numerous walks. Lange, who is almost impossible to throw out stealing, is another good hitter and bunter.

Shortstop Messina, catcher Brown, infielder Waring have also produced at times. The hottest hitter lately, though, has been Prom, who sprays the ball well to left center and can deliver in the clutch. He had three runs batted in against Winter Garden.

While the bats are strong and the pitching solid, Altamonte's biggest asset is its defense. Time after time the opposition has made errors on routine ground balls during the district — and the Juniors capitalized. Time after time, too, Altamonte made the routine play — and sometimes the spectacular. Brock has excellent range and a good arm in center. The Martinez brothers are steady at the corners as are Messina and Waring in the infield, and Hagen when he plays first or left field. Green possesses a fine arm behind the plate. Lange threw out a runner from right field at first base against Oviedo.

The bench of Maddox, Stiles and Birle has to rank as one of the top ones around. All would have started and been stars if they played on Oviedo, Winter Garden or Mount Dora teams.

Yes, it's been a breeze so far, maybe it'll be more interesting tonight.

TOURNAMENT TIDBITS -- If you see Ernest Martinez following around brother Eric, it's only natural. Eric is four minutes older, according father, "Lefty." Wonder is that's why Eric bats before Ernest in the batting order?

Sanford Runner Wins 880

Sanford athletes continued to turn in impressive performances as the Sunshine State Games finished its first week of competition Saturday and Sunday at various sites in the Orlando area.

Saturday, former Seminole High School track standout Octavius (Baker) Clark turned in a 1:51.7 clocking to win the 880 and ran a leg in the District 5 mile relay team which finished first.

Sunday, several Seminole High wrestlers did well. Sanford's Tracy Turner (130) and Bernard Burke (119) each captured the free style and Greco-Roman titles. Turner attended Seminole last year, while Burke went to Sanford Middle as an eighth grader.

Here's a look at Sunday's results:

Surging Seniors Battle Niceville

The Altamonte Senior League All-Stars couldn't have picked a better time to get their bats going. It all started when big Kevin Baas broke out of a slump with a game-winning homer in the District 14, Division 2 title game this past Tuesday against Eustis. Altamonte came back on Thursday night and rapped out 12 hits in a 15-2 rout of Winter Garden in the District 14 championship game.

Altamonte manager Clayton Garrison is hoping the hot hitting streak will continue today as Altamonte goes for the sectional championship against Niceville, the District 1 winner (Panhandle area) at 4 p.m. in Inverness at Pleasant Park. The winner of the sectional goes on to the state tournament. Mayo plays Dunnellon in the second game at 8 p.m.

"I told the guys that the road to Inverness went through Eustis," Garrison said. "Now we have to keep the bats going and hope the road to state goes through Inverness."

The biggest of the 12 hits against Winter Garden were a pair of home runs. The first was a grand slam off the bat of Chris Waxler in the third inning which increased Altamonte's lead from 5-0 to 9-0. Neil Harris connected for Altamonte's second homer as he drilled a two-run shot in the fourth inning. Harris also picked up a two-run pitching victory with relief help from Tim Smith.

The home run by Waxler was indicative of the way Altamonte has been winning recently. Waxler, who wasn't in the lineup in the division title game against Eustis, was the ninth hitter in Altamonte's lineup against Winter Garden. Waxler, Altamonte's right fielder, came through with a big defensive play in the top of the third when he gunned down a Winter Garden runner at the plate to put a stop to a rally. He came back in the bottom of the third to hit his grand slam. Waxler wound up with two hits and five RBI for the game. Harris was 3 for 3 against Winter Garden including his two-run homer. Harris didn't play in the division title game against Eustis either.

"That's the way we've been doing it lately," Garrison said. "Different guys will get the big hits or make big defensive plays and we are getting a lot of production from the bottom of the order."

While the bottom of the order gets the big hits, it's only a matter of time before the top of the order starts hitting. So, maybe it will all come together tonight for Altamonte.

Hardee's 1 For 2 Earns 3rd Place

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

TAMPA — Seminole's Hardee's went 1 for 2 over the weekend and it added up to 3 in the Mustang World Series at Town & Country's Shimbarg Complex.

Hardee's, which lost its opening round game to Town & Country, came back to hammer North Tampa Saturday, 12-8, but lost to Town & Country again Sunday, 7-3, to settle for third place among the four teams. Hialeah knocked off Town & Country, 5-3, to win the championship for the nine- and 10-year-olds.

In Sunday's game, Hardee's jumped to a 2-0 lead after two innings. Catcher Jeff Livernols opened the game with a single to left, stole second and third, and came home on an error by the third baseman on the catcher's throw. Jeff Lamb also singled in the inning, but was cut down going for second on a fine throw by the right fielder.

Hardee's added a two-out run in the second when Bryan Cole walked and stole second. Jamie Mocny followed with a base hit to right field which chased home Cole for a 2-0 lead.

Mocny held T & C in check until the third, thanks in part to fine catch in the second by center fielder Pat Newell. In the third, though, leadoff hitter Kent Anderson powered a 3-2 offering way over the right field fence to ignite the rally. Jason Raekkers and Brad Radke followed with singles and stolen bases. Raekkers then raced home on a passed ball, and two batters later, Radke trotted in on a squeeze bunt by Brian Suarez for a 3-2 lead.

In the fourth, Town & Country added four more runs to put the game out of reach. Reliever Lamb walked the bases full to start the inning, then struck out Raekkers for the first out. Radke, though, ripped a double down the line to score two runs and Mike Sal Gado followed with a double for two more. Kwari Brown singled two hitters later, but Robbie Koehn gunned down Sal Gado at home to end the inning.

Hardee's added its final run in the fifth when Kevin Twigg walked and scored on a booming triple to right center by Livernols. For the day, Livernols had a single

Richmond Outruns Rain For Pocono 500 Win

LONG POND, Pa. (UPI) — Two rain delays couldn't stop Tim Richmond from winning the $298,000 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, but he sure wished the weather had sent him home early.

Richmond, who won $27,430 for his first victory of the season, took the lead in Sunday's race six laps from the flag and won by nearly two seconds over Darrell Waltrip at Pocono International Raceway in the race known as the Like Cola deserved to win."

However, Waltrip had a decidedly second-place view of the rain.

"I did everything I could do but I just didn't have enough," Waltrip said. "After the second rain the track really changed. It complemented his car and not some of ours. That's really what happened.

But if you can't win, at least be second. That's what my momma always told me."

"I was hoping it would end then," said Richmond, who was holding the lead at the second rain delay. "I really felt we had one of the cars to beat today. I really was hoping for rain then. If it did rain and that was the end, it was fine with me because we were one of the cars that

Brett's Smile Turns To Anger As Homer Bat Ruled Illegal

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Brett didn't look much like a man who hit a two-run game-winning home run for the Kansas City Royals against the New York Yankees.

Behind Brett's despondent demeanor was a story that started in Kansas City the week after the All-Star Game. During that series between the Royals and the Yankees began a chain of events which produced a 4-3 victory for the Yankees Sunday and had Brett's bat on its way to the American League office.

"We talked about it two weeks ago when we were in Kansas City," said New York catcher Rick Cerone, who gave Brett's bat to home plate umpire Tim McClelland after Brett's blast off reliever Rich Gossage gave the Royals a temporary 5-4 lead with two in the ninth.

"It was heavy up to 19 inches and there was another 3-4 more inches of lighter pine tar," said umpire crew chief Joe Brinkman.

Since Rule 1.10 (b) only allows 18 inches of "foreign substance (including pine tar)" on the bat, Brett was called out, giving the Yankees the victory.

Once Brett had circled the bases under U.L. Washington, Yankees Manager Billy Martin protested the bat and McClelland took it to Brinkman near second base. The four umpires then came back to home plate, measured the bat, disallowed the homer and declared Brett out, ending the game.

Brett and Royals Manager Dick Howser charged from the dugout, engendering a furious argument as the Yankees headed for the clubhouse with their ninth win in 10 games.

In the melee, Gaylord Perry seized the offending bat and tossed it to Hal McRae in the on-deck circle. McRae flipped it into the dugout with Brinkman in hot pursuit. Brinkman recovered the evidence from Steve Renko.

"Renko, he was the last guy in the row. He didn't have anybody to hand it to," said Brinkman.

"We noticed it before," said Martin. "I hoped we wouldn't have to use it in this instance. That stuff is all the way up to the end. We noticed it in Kansas City. (Coach Don) Zimmer and (third baseman Graig) Nettles picked it up."

So, patiently, the Yankees bided their time, waiting for Brett to do them damage. He did it in the ninth inning after collecting two harmless singles earlier.

In the meantime, Brett changed bats. "I used the bat for five or six games," he said. "I used it up in Toronto a little before we came in here. Every time I'm in the on-deck circle, I put pine tar on the bat because I don't use (batting) gloves."

Cerone nearly blew the plan by forgetting the reason he was told to check Brett's bat.

"I was checking for cork," said Cerone. "and I tossed the bat down and then I remember what I was supposed to be checking for. The pine tar was way above the trade mark."

After closing the Royals clubhouse for nearly 40 minutes, Howser said that he planned to protest the decision to AL President Lee MacPhail but remarked, "What chance to I have? They have George's bat. George wants his bat back and they won't give it to him."

At Milwaukee, Jim Gantner's suicide squeeze bunt in the eighth inning scored Ben Oglivie with the winning run for Milwaukee's 12th victory in 14 games. Pete Ladd, 3-2, worked the final 1-3 innings. Dick Tidrow, 2-3, took the loss.

Rangers 3, Blue Jays 0
At Arlington, Texas, Rick Honeycutt became the first AL pitcher to win 13 games this season with a five-hit shutout. Honeycutt, 13-6, allowed three hits by Toronto's Barry Bonnell and singles by George Bell and Alfredo Griffin. George Wright homered for Texas.

Cardinals 3, Dodgers 0
The temperatures finally cooled off a bit in St. Louis Sunday but Neil Allen kept right on sizzling.

For the first time in five days the city's temperatures dipped under the 100-degree mark, yet Allen remained hotter than the pavement as he posted his second straight shutout and pitched the Cardinals to a 3-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

By stopping the Dodgers on six hits, Allen became the first pitcher since 1976 to shut out the same team twice in one year while pitching for two different clubs. He beat Los Angeles 4-0 on six hits May 20 while pitching for the Mets.

"Not many people shut out the Dodgers twice in one year," Allen said, "but this was more of a rewarding game."

Since joining the Cardinals in a June 15 trade from the Mets for Keith Hernandez, Allen has won five of six decisions, has an ERA of 2.02 and has forgotten all about the problems he had at the beginning of the year when he was hit hard in almost every outing.

Expos 7, Astros 3
At Montreal, Steve Rogers scattered eight hits and Al Oliver knocked in two runs to lead the Expos to victory. Rogers, 13-5, walked one and struck out one in going the distance for the ninth time.

Tim Lardner singled and stole a base in four at bats for the Expos.

Reds 4, Mets 2
At Cincinnati, Joe Price pitched a six-hitter to win his fifth straight game and Cesar Cedeno singled in two runs for the Reds. Price, 10-5, has allowed just five runs in 36 1-3 innings over his last five games and has permitted three runs or less in 16 of his 18 starts.

Cubs 5, Padres 3
At Chicago, Ron Cey drove in four runs with a homer, double and sacrifice fly to lead the Cubs. Chuck Rainey, 10-8, went eight innings to notch the victory with Lee Smith getting the last three outs to post his 14th save. Terry Kennedy homered for San Diego.

Pirates 3-5, Giants 1-8
At Pittsburgh, Greg Minton's wild pitch scored Lee Lacy with the go-ahead run and Jason Thompson and Tony Pena added RBI singles during a three-run eighth inning that gave the Pirates a triumph in the opener. In the nightcap, Jeff Leonard's grand slam in the 11th gave the Giants a split.

Horner Clobbers 2, Braves Lead Grows

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mike Schmidt feels the Philadelphia Phillies aren't as bad as they looked in Sunday's 12-4 loss to the Atlanta Braves.

"We're not in bad shape," said Schmidt, who hit his 22nd homerun of the year in the losing effort. "We're just getting beat by a hotter-than-hell team."

The Braves were as hot as the temperatures which hovered in the mid-to-high 90s at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium Sunday.

Bob Horner, the Braves third baseman who drove in three runs with a pair of homers and a single, said the Braves are playing "complete ball."

"When guys hit home runs like we did today a lot of aspects about the ballgame you tend to forget," Horner said. "Glenn Hubbard (Hubble) made a couple of great plays from the hole. Rafael (Ramirez) made some good plays. Some of the outfielders made some good plays. It's a complete ball team but when you get four or five home runs you tend to forget some of the things you did right."

Old Flame Fires Up Woman In Love

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a guy I'll call Joe. We've been together for four years, but we can't get married for the following reason: Joe said that about five years ago he was engaged to marry his childhood sweetheart. She came down with a terminal illness, so she broke their engagement and made Joe promise he wouldn't marry anyone else as long as she was alive.

In the meantime, Joe met me and we fell in love. Joe says the girl is still in remission and nobody knows how much time she has left. Abby, I think she is very selfish in not releasing Joe from his promise, but he is a very honorable man and says he can't break his promise to her. I would like to meet her and try to reason with her, but Joe says it's best if I don't know her name or where she lives.

How much longer should I wait? I want to get married.

WAITING FOR JOE
DEAR WAITING: I think you've waited long enough. (P.S. Please send me Joe's last name and address in case I run into someone who's looking for a good salesman.)

DEAR ABBY: You goofed in your advice to "Desperate in Denver." What's wrong with a man wanting sex four times in one day? This woman calls her husband a "sex maniac," says she wants out of the marriage, and right away you tell her to run for her life to a temporary shelter for battered women! Abby, he didn't even lay a hand on her. Then, to make matters worse, you advise her to refuse to live with him until he sees a psychiatrist.

I don't think wanting sex four times a day is any reason to leave a man. I'm sure there are many lonely ladies out there who would be glad to take him off her hands.

J. IN ANDERSON, S.C.

DEAR J.: This woman wanted to end her marriage not because her husband wanted sex four times in one day, but because of his selfish and violent behavior. She wrote:

"Last Sunday he insisted on making love to me four times. By nightfall I was physically and mentally abused. The next morning he woke me up at 4 a.m. wanting sex again. I told him I just couldn't—I was still exhausted from Sunday. He got rough and tried to force me against my will, so I jumped out of bed and ran to the guest room and locked the door. He screamed at me, pounded on the door and called me a 'frigid b---'. I thought he was going to break the door down. He finally gave up, and I stayed in that room until after he left for work."

Either my column was edited and these facts were omitted, or you believe attempted rape is acceptable. In which case perhaps you should also consider professional help!

DEAR ABBY: You said in your column recently that once a gift is given, it is the property of the recipient.

I am filing for divorce and have in my possession gifts of jewelry and silver that were given to me over the years by my late mother-in-law. (They once belonged to her.)

Although I know these things are technically "mine," I don't feel right keeping them. I don't want my father-in-law to think I didn't appreciate these gifts, but I consider them heirlooms, and as such I think they should remain in my husband's family.

How can I return these things gracefully? Should I give them to my husband or my father-in-law? If my husband marries again, I think these heirlooms should be given to his wife.

Please advise me soon. I've been agonizing over this for several months.
B. IN BIG D.

me. You are to be admired for your thoughtfulness and generosity. Such qualities are all too rare these days.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Officials' Misuse Of Aircraft Costs Taxpayers Millions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government officials are misusing civilian aircraft, including transporting their families at federal expense, congressional investigators have found.

A new report by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said many flights by government aircraft are made to locations "readily served more economically" by scheduled commercial flights. "The report, the latest and most comprehensive to date in a series of studies on the misuse of government aircraft, indicates widespread waste and misuse by agencies throughout the federal government," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas., in releasing the document Sunday.

The Coast Guard, Federal Aviation Administration and National Aeronautics and Space Agency alone spent $3 million more than available commercial flights would have cost during the year, the GAO said.

Investigators noted high hourly operating costs for government planes, failure to make use of cheaper commercial flights and use of government planes to carry spouses, dependents and other non-official passengers.

The cost of owning and operating the planes was nearly $800 million, said the report. GAO investigators found civilian agencies operated a fleet of at least 675 aircraft in fiscal 1981. The aircraft, the report said, were worth about $440 million and cost $326 million to operate for the single year.

An additional $99 million was spent for leasing, chartering and renting private aircraft services, it said.

Money was wasted on underuse of the federally owned planes that raised the cost of each hour flown, said the report.

The report also said of eight aircraft used by the FAA, only one met a minimum usage standard of 500 hours per year. In another case, it said, the U.S. Customs Service's 65 aircraft flew an average of only 200 hours a year.

The space agency, the report said, used a five-passenger plane to fly NASA officials between Wallops Island, Va., and Washington, D.C., even though the passenger load averaged less than three per flight — then replaced the aircraft with a nine-passenger model.

FAA aircraft were "used routinely" to transport unofficial passengers, said the report. During fiscal 1982, it said, 63 spouses or other dependents flew on 39 flights to and from FAA headquarters.

During a 15-month period ending Dec. 31, 1981, the report said, two Coast Guard aircraft based at Washington National Airport were used to fly high-ranking officials, their wives and guests at a cost exceeding airline fares by $1.5 million.

Brooks said the findings reinforced two earlier GAO reports finding wasteful use of aircraft by the Coast Guard and FAA.

"The actions taken by the Department of Transportation in response to these abuses were inadequate and disappointing," Brooks said.

YOUR BIRTHDAY JULY 20, 1983

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Put others first today. Thoughtful actions that help friends will do much to shore up relationships which are tottering a trifle. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Even though you'll be able to easily perceive the ulterior motives of others today, you're not apt to let on or cause them embarrassment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Inspirations in financial or commercial matters should be followed through to conclusion today. What you envision can be brought about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a chance you'll be asked to take on new responsibilities with your club or special group. However, there will also be

At 6 Feet, Is 160 Pounds Too Thin?

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — My mother-in-law seems to think her son is too skinny and needs to eat more meat. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 160 pounds. He is not skinny at all but she is overweight. She says you need to eat meat at least twice a day along with bread.

I don't think meat is all that important so we sometimes include it only once a day. I do use beans, cheese and fresh vegetables. If I'm supposed to be unhealthy and starving myself because I don't eat a lot of meat, why do I only get sick one day of the year?

It bothers me that she doesn't think I feed him well and brings meat over every time they visit us. I plan to show her your answer.

DEAR READER — There are a lot of people who eat no meat at all and many of them are much healthier by statistics than the general public. However, lean meat is a good food and a good source of protein. The fat in meat is not beneficial unless you want or need excess calories.

Your husband needs 56 grams of protein a day. An eight-ounce portion, raw weight of the edible portion only, of red meat, chicken or fish will provide about 50 grams of this. A quart of fortified skim milk contains over 40 grams of protein. Cheese is also a good source of protein.

Both of you have missed a fundamental point — lean meat isn't fattening. A whole pound of lean round steak with all the visible fat removed contains only 600 calories. It is how you cook many foods that affects the calories. I mean whether you trim the fat off before cooking and what, if any, butter or other fats you add.

The key to staying lean and healthy is often in what you do in the kitchen. I am sending you The Health Letter 9-12. Kitchen Power for Weight Control, which will help you.

It is normal for mothers to want their children to be plump but it is not always wise from a health standpoint. Keep your husband lean, not fat. And I am glad I won't be around when you show this column to your mother-in-law and the fight begins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter flew to London. On the morning she left she woke up with a sore throat and stuffy head. When she arrived in London she had very bad caraches. She went to the doctor and he gave her some antibiotics. The ears ached so bad she spent all her time in the hotel.

When she got back her doctor said she should never have flown with a cold and sore throat.

DEAR READER — It is called aero-otitis media or barotitis media and it is caused by the changes in barometric pressure during flight.

With a cold, the opening of the tube in the throat that connects to the middle ear may be obstructed. So you can't change the pressure in the middle ear chamber during take-off and landing. Not being able to equalize the air pressure on both sides of the eardrum can cause mechanical injury.

Then, you can literally suck infectious material into the middle ear from air pressure changes. That is why doctors recommend that you avoid air travel when you have a cold, or problems with allergic rhinitis (hay fever).

go the other way and never respond one diamond with either a four- or five-card suit if they hold a four-card major. The whole problem is difficult, but we can offer one important rule here. Make sure that you and your regular partners have a firm understanding of how you handle this problem.

Oswald: "Today's hand is set up to show the advantage of the diamond response. When South plays in six hearts, he can't be beaten."

Jim: "He starts by playing three rounds of trumps. Then he goes after diamonds. Since the jack falls on the second diamond, he can score four diamond tricks to get a spade discard from his hand. Eventually he loses a spade trick but makes the slam."

Oswald: "If North responds one heart, he will play the slam. If East opens a spade, the defense takes the first two tricks. As even a beginner knows, you can't make a slam if the opponents start that way."

Oswald: "Most experts respond one diamond rather than one heart to partner's opening club bid. We belong to that group. In fact we strongly recommend responding with the lowest four-card suit you can bid at the one level."
