Murder trial: Counsel change

The Seminole County Public Defender's office has filed a motion in circuit court to withdraw as counsel for Benjamin Scott. A special public defender will be appointed.

The public defender's office was appointed to represent Scott and Terrance Brooks during their first court appearance. The two youths are charged with first degree felony murder and attempted armed robbery in the death last year of Mark Edward Marsh in Sanford.

It is against the code of ethics for the public defender to represent both defendants. The court will appoint a special public defender for Scott, who is scheduled for arraignment Feb. 23.

Assistant public defender Gary Andersen will continue to represent Brooks.

Reflections: Art instructor fired

LOS ANGELES — A college teaching assistant was fired after assigning students in a beginning art class to draw themselves nude.

"I thought it would make us all relax a lot more and make them more comfortable with drawing," said Rupert Stechman, a 25-year-old graduate student at California State University at Northridge.

Administrators would not exactly why Stechman was fired Monday, but Phillip Handler, dean of the School of Art, said the assignment was a contributing factor.

"We have students drawing from the nude at the university, but it is not done in that class," Handler said. "The course is a beginning course in drawing objects. It's not a figure drawing class at all."

She's a changed person

ST. PAUL, Minn. — If Susan Kimberly returns to the City Council after a 15-year absence, she'll come back a changed person.

Kimberly served on the council from 1974 to 1978.

At the time, she was a man named Bob Sylvester.

The transsexual said in today's Saint Paul Pioneer Press that she will run for office if the housing and economic development organization she runs lets her keep her job.

"It would give a certain completeness to my life by returning to the City Council," Kimberly said.

Bob Sylvester was editor of the Catholic Bulletin when he was elected in 1974. He eventually was named council president. He had a sex-change operation in 1984.

Cops enlist citizens

Committee to tackle Sanford crime issue

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford's acting police chief is proposing the formation of a citizen advisory committee to work with him on crime and law enforcement issues.

Acting Sanford Police Chief Ralph Russell plans to ask for formation of the committee during Monday afternoon's workshop meeting of the Sanford City Commission.

"What I plan to propose," Russell said, "is that each of the four commissioners appoint one representative from their district, plus an additional person appointed by the mayor."

"Then I would meet with these five, and we would work together on problems from each individual district as well as throughout the city," he said. "What we will be working on is input and feedback so we can make some plans to help resolve the problems."

"This should also be an educational program," Russell continued. "In most cases, the people don't really understand the requirements and laws under which police must operate, and if we can share this in the committee, the committee members might be better able to explain the situations to people in their areas."

Russell said he was keeping a close eye on the present drive by Daytona Beach police in patrolling

Deputy appeals his dismissal for circulating white-supremacist flyer

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

Former Seminole County deputy Steve Martin has appealed his firing by Sheriff Don Eslinger.

Martin, 40, filed the appeal Thursday. Martin's attorney Tom Greene declined to discuss the grounds for the review, saying only a disciplined employee has the right to review. Maj. Steven Harriett said a Civil Service Board hearing will be held before March 20 to consider the appeal.

Martin, an internal affairs investigator, was fired after an internal investigation found he showed three sheriff's employees a white-supremacist flyer obtained from Lt. John Thorpe, commander of the criminal intelligence unit and an 18-year veteran of the sheriff's office.

Thorpe was fired for giving Martin the original flyer from his evidence files to copy. Thorpe had not appealed by this morning, said Harriett.

The flyer, titled "The Real Black Achievement Awards" and signed by "A. Wyatt Mann," depicted a cartoon of a smiling black man with exaggerated lips. A hand presents a sandwich containing a whole catfish, head and tail attached, as reward for living on welfare for 27 years. It also compliments the character for getting 14 women "in de family way," making him eligible for the "unwed belly sweller award."

"Young man, you is a prime example of a person what clings to his heritage...Keep up the good work, boy...." ends the flyer's caption.

Although the majority of the Disciplinary Review Board members recommended suspension for both Martin and Thorpe, Eslinger said their effectiveness in dealing with minorities had been compromised by the actions.

Lake Mary Boulevard ahead of schedule

By NICK PFEIFAU

LAKE MARY — Construction work on Lake Mary Boulevard is running ahead of schedule. Work could be completed a month earlier, according to Lake Mary's mayor.

Mayor Lowry Rockett made the announcement during last night's city commission meeting. "I've been informed by the prime contractor that they expect to be completed with the work about 30 days earlier than expected," he said.

Work on the boulevard widening between Heathrow and Country

Club Road halted for almost a half year following the failure of the original contractor John Mahoney in July.

Just before the end of last year, an agreement was reached for a new prime contractor, Hewitt Construction, and work resumed in early January.

The original deadline was extended into the contract with Hewitt, and the work on Phase I was to be completed by no later than June 14.

In a separate matter presented to the city commission last night, Parks and Recreation Director John Holland requested direction on arranging for intersection enhancement construction.

The proposal has been discussed previously, with the final suggestion that several intersections be enhanced through stamped concrete pattern material that would give the appearance of a brick area.

"The money has already been earmarked for this work," Holland said. "All we need now is to determine where they would be built, and whether we would have the enhancement on all four sides of an intersection, or just two."

"No matter where else we plan these enhancements," said Commissioner David Meador, "I definately want it at the intersection of the boulevard and Country Club Road." Commissioner Gary Brender agreed that it should be the prime area of consideration.

Commissioner George Duryea objected. "We have already spent a great deal of money on the boulevard," he said. "Now I'm questioning whether we really need to enhance the area at all. I think it would be better to save this money and use it for future improvements."

Mayor Rockett responded. "The way I look at it, this money will be

If a trip to New Orleans isn't within your budget this year, you can still get a taste of Mardi Gras with a Sanford flair at the All Souls Catholic Church festival beginning tonight.

The three day fund-raising event will feature food, arts and crafts, games, entertainment and rides.

The streets surrounding the church will be blocked off, from Park on Park to Myrtle to 10th to 8th and back to Park on Park, according to publicity coordinator Theresa Scott.

Tonight's activities focus on the Miss Mardi Gras pageant where girls compete in their various age groups for prizes, crowns and trophies. Twenty-five girls are competing. The reigning Mrs. Florida, Jody Yarborough, is scheduled to emcee the pageant.

Students at local dance academies and other dance groups are scheduled to perform Saturday. Balloon rides will be conducted over the weekend.

An ongoing silent auction will be held during the festival as well as a live auction Saturday night. 3 arrested in murder of Florida tourist CAIRO, Egypt — Police have arrested three suspects in the murder and robbery of an American tourist whose strangled body was found in the desert earlier this month, an Interior Ministry spokesman said.

Rita E. Arias, 63, of Coral Gables, Fla., disappeared Feb. 5 after arriving at Cairo International Airport to join an archaeological tour.

Her body was found two days later in the desert between Cairo and Suez, 80 miles east of Cairo. Her money, jewelry and baggage were missing.

The spokesman, who could not be named under ministry rules, said Thursday that three suspects have been arrested. He identified them as Gamal Zakariya Abdallah, a former employee at the airport, Youssaf Mohamed Youssaf, unemployed, and Sayed Toghian, a taxi driver. They all have previous criminal records.

The spokesman said the second and third suspects confessed to the murder and robbery of Mrs. Arias. They said they took $120, two cameras, her handbag and suitcase. No further details were available.

Officers charged with violating law

WEST PALM BEACH — Two former law enforcement officers have been charged with violating the state's hate crimes law for allegedly holding two black teenagers at gunpoint, handcuffing them and threatening to lynch them.

The men surrendered Wednesday on police warrants, denied making any racial slurs and said they thought the 15-year-olds were burglars. The men were released on their own recognizance on two counts each of false imprisonment and assault.

The boys said they were looking for a friend when they mistakenly walked onto Donald Kuhs' patio Jan. 9. Kuhs, 54, and Kevin Lewis, 27, handcuffed the boys together, searched them and began questioning them, reports said.

Neighbor William Cornell told police he witnessed the encounter and said the men went too far.

"They were called 'lying niggers' and 'stasics,'" a report said. "Cornell heard Lewis say 'We ought to string them up right here.'"

Federal agent arrested on old charge

MIAMI — A federal agent who went undercover to sting crooked colleagues was arrested on an old charge of trafficking in counterfeit Levi's jeans, a U.S. Customs Service official said.

Arsenio Rodriguez, 45, is the fifth Customs agent arrested in the last month on charges including money laundering, stealing money from drug traffickers, and selling counterfeit goods. A Miami FBI agent was also arrested in one case.

Rodriguez was caught with 1,000 pairs of jeans in August 1991, but formal charges were postponed when he agreed to help sting other corrupt agents, said Leonard Freedman, regional director of Customs internal affairs.

"We deprogrammed him and sent him back in as an undercover agent to root out the foxes in the henhouse," Freedman said Thursday.

Rodriguez then set up a sting that led to the Feb. 2 arrest of fellow Customs agent Paul Arzola, 32, and two civilians, also for trafficking in jeans.

Atlantans sought to test AIDS vaccine

A Florida company is looking for 21 Atlantans who do not have the AIDS virus to test a potential vaccine for the disease.

The company says there is no chance of getting AIDS from the vaccine, but because it creates antibodies to the HIV virus that causes AIDS, participants may test false positive for the virus for about a year.

The trial is being conducted by Serologicals Inc., a company in Pensacola that specializes in rare antibodies. The vaccine is made by Genentech Inc., a California company.

Serologicals officials said the vaccine could damage the immune system, increasing a participant's susceptibility to infections.

That hasn't happened in any of the 100 healthy people who have been vaccinated so far across the country, though some have had sore arms and flu-like symptoms right after being vaccinated, they said.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration would not comment on the safety of this particular vaccine, but said it would not license a trial unless the company's data indicated it would be safe.

At least seven other trials of AIDS vaccines are being conducted in the United States, said FDA spokeswoman Monica Revelle.

Serologicals' new trial will vaccinate 100 people in Atlanta, Pensacola and Mobile, Ala., where the company has clinics.

Antibodies will be extracted from the blood plasma of participants and injected into people infected with HIV.

Day care rescue

Donations salvage center for county's working poor

By Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — Money for a subsidized day-care center in Palm Beach County was supposed to run out today, but thanks to $1.3 million in contributions, 975 children of Palm Beach County's working poor will still have a place to go Monday.

After a month of rallying support, a countywide child-care task force found money to preserve the service.

Working parents rely on the subsidized day care, and several said they would have had to quit work to stay home with their children — and possibly return to welfare — if the service had lapsed.

When HRS announced in January that the money was running out, parent Marie Monroe panicked.

"If something were to happen to this program, I probably would have to stop working," Monroe said.

Before getting subsidized day care, Monroe paid $480 a month for the care of her four children. Now she pays less than $100 a month.

"This was just an incredible community effort," said James Hart, acting district administrator for the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. "Even private citizens wrote checks."

The biggest sums came from HRS, the School Board and Palm Beach County, which together contributed $864,492 toward the total.

The cities of West Palm Beach and Boynton Beach, United Way of Palm Beach County, the Children's Services Council, the Private Industry Council and various child-care centers also contributed.

The task force collected most of the contributions, more than $958,000, in cash. But members also found another $323,000 worth of day-care slots in other programs, including Head Start and Pre-K Early Intervention, said Barbara Kaufman, executive director of the Children's Services Council and a task force member.

Volunteers needed to build home

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Seminole County chapter of Habitat for Humanity will begin construction on yet another home to replace one that has fallen into disrepair.

The home, which is being built in east Altamonte Springs for Lillie Thomas, is the eighth project taken on by the Seminole County chapter during its three year history.

Volunteers from the Love Tabernacle Church of God in Christ, an African-American church, will join with volunteers from the Congregation of Liberal Judaism and the Altamonte Chapel U.C.C. to build Thomas' home.

"This is a unique opportunity to show that we can all work side-by-side to make a difference in this community," said Habitat volunteer Emily Furlong.

The goal of Habitat for Humanity is to "rid the world of slacks."

The group, working with the homeowner who is living in substandard housing, builds a new home from the ground up. Thomas' will help to build her new home and then the old one will be torn down.

"We hope to have her new home completed by the end of the spring," Furlong said.

The work will be done entirely by volunteers so the completion date is often difficult to predict.

Habitat for Humanity depends on donations of money and building materials to be able to get the job done. Local businesses have "always come through" in their times of greatest need, Furlong said.

Elder Richard Butts of the Love Tabernacle Church, Rabbi Larry Halpern of Congregation of Liberal Judaism and Pastor Marcella Freeze of the Altamonte Chapel U.C.C. will be on hand to lead the volunteers when work begins on Thomas' house at 196 Jackson St., Altamonte Springs.

The groundbreaking ceremony for this new house will be on Sunday, Feb. 21 at 2 p.m.

Those who want to volunteer or join in the ceremony should call Habitat at 328-9717 for more information.

Gunman surrenders after hijacking plane to Miami

By CATHERINE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A young Haitian man hijacked an American missionary flight from an airport in Haiti to Miami on Thursday, firing a shot in the cabin before the plane took off. But minutes after it landed, he emerged with his hands behind his head and surrendered.

None of the other 12 people aboard — all believed to be Americans — was injured, FBI spokesman Paul Miller said. Among them was a woman whom the hijacker had taken hostage before boarding the plane.

The hijacker, identified as a Haitian soldier by an embassy spokeswoman in Haiti, had surrendered his handgun to the crew during the flight, more than two hours after he seized the plane and two hours before it landed in Miami, the FBI said.

The FBI said Woody Mark Edouard, 24, was taken to the agency's North Miami Beach office for processing. He faces a federal air piracy charge, which carries a minimum penalty of 20 years in prison, Miller said.

The hijacker had shot a hole in the plane while it was on the runway in Cap Haitien in northern Haiti, said Kathleen Bergen, spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta. She said his only known demand was to be taken to Miami.

The hijacker reportedly followed a woman who was facilitating the flight, but who was not a passenger, said FBI supervisor Roy Tubergen.

"It seems that he just followed behind her and took her onto the plane," he said. "He fired a shot. It went through her skirt and into the floor of the plane. I don't know if he did it on purpose."

The plane, a twin-prop DC-3 more than 30 years old, refueled without incident in Providenciales Island in the Turks and Caicos, Bergen said. It had to make the stop because of a shortage of aviation fuel in Cap Haitien, which is about 800 miles from Miami.

"The pilot had a gun to his head, particularly in the Caicos. It was really tense for him there," said FBI special agent John Pavalasky.

After the plane left, the hijacker apparently handed over his gun after speaking with his hostage in "a religious conversation" in Creole, said Pavalasky.

Tubergen said the hijacker gave up after the pilot said he would take him where he wants to go.

Soon after the plane landed at Miami International Airport, the man walked out the door with his hands behind his head as about 10 SWAT team members in dark garb crouched nearby. The man then laid down on the tarmac and the officers surrounded him.

Defense argues crime not carjacking

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO — Defense attorneys are trying to convince a jury that while two people were killed and a third wounded in the theft of a vehicle, the defendants shouldn't be convicted of the federal crime of carjacking.

"Jermaine Foster, in fact, killed the two young men" while engaged in robbery, said Foster's lawyer, William Sheaffer.

But his client and two co-defendants are not on trial for murder, Sheaffer said, and cannot be convicted under a new federal law that makes armed carjacking involving death punishable by life in prison.

Sheaffer agreed with the prosecutor Thursday in the first such case to be tried that the victims were taken to a rural Central Florida area and robbed of their belongings and their car Nov. 29.

"This was, in fact, grand theft auto and a robbery and therefore Jermaine Foster was not guilty of the charge in the indictment."

Foster, 19, Alf Catholic, 21, and Gerard Booker, 22, are being tried under the new statute for armed car thefts leading to violence and injury. It became effective in October.

The three will also be tried later in state court, where they face the death penalty on first-degree murder and attempted murder charges.

Foster admitted to investigators that he was the lone gunman, and the prosecution will introduce his videotaped statement at trial.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Randy Gold said in his opening statement that Anthony Faiella, 17, and Anthony Clifton, 20, were killed by gunshots to the head fired by Foster.

Michael Rentas, 20, was wounded in the hand when he covered his head, and a female companion, Tammy George, 25, was unharmed.

Gold said the defendants had earlier stolen a red pickup truck in Auburndale, driven to the St. Cloud-Kissimmee area and then targeted the victims in a bar because they were having mechanical problems with the pickup.

The three young men and George were driven in their vehicle to a pasture, where the youths were robbed, made to strip and lie face down on the ground, the prosecutor said.

"Foster took the 9mm gun and, from a distance of less than three feet, fired... and it exploded from the barrel into the back of Anthony Clifton's head," said Gold, adding that Foster then did the same to the other two.

"Booker then said, 'Don't kill her (George). She's a sister. She's black,'" the prosecutor told the jury.

The defendants also are black and the victims white.

Chris Smith, lawyer for Catholic, and Mark O'Mara, counsel for Booker, objected to U.S. District Judge Patricia Fawcett that they were concerned about racial prejudice against the defendants and accused the prosecution of fueling a bias with the jury.

"This is not a hate crime," Smith said.

A fourth defendant, Leondre Henderson, 17, pleaded guilty earlier and is to testify against the other three. He also faces a life sentence in federal court, but prosecutors will not seek the death penalty when he is sentenced in state court.

Robin Atkinson, a roofer from West Palm Beach, testified that the three stole his gold chain watch and truck at gunpoint on Nov. 28 in Auburndale.

The defendants were not handcuffed, but were shackled at the ankles, and there were six to eight security officers in the courtroom at all times.

Pro wrestler found dead

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Kerry Adkisson, the youngest surviving member of the pro wrestling Von Erich family, was found dead Thursday, just days after he was accused of cocaine possession. Authorities say he apparently killed himself.

Adkisson, 33, who had continued the family's professional wrestling business, had been scheduled to appear Friday in a match in Dallas.

Adkisson was the fourth of six brothers in his family to die since 1984 and the fifth overall. If his death is ruled a suicide, it will be the family's third since 1987.

"This is the third of my six that has taken his own life," said Kerry's father, Jack Adkisson. "I can cope with this, but Kerry was so special."

He said his son had battled a drug problem since becoming addicted to pain killers following a 1986 motorcycle accident in which his right foot was smashed.

Inmate discusses talks with Rolling, authorities

By The Associated Press

STARKE — Gaineaville slayings suspect Danny Rolling asked a fellow inmate to speak to investigators about the murders because Rolling would "go to pieces" while discussing the crimes, the inmate said.

Convicted murderer Bobby Lewis befriended Rolling last May, according to a copyright story in today's editions of The Gaineaville Sun.

"He said, 'Look, you know I'm guilty...I can't live with this. I've got to get right with God. I need to get this out. The things I've done are so horrible and so terrible,'" Lewis, 45, recalled in an interview at Florida State Prison.

He said Rolling told him he alone killed the five students in August 1990 as part of a vendetta against those in society who had abused him since childhood.

for a robbery spree — had confessed to him.

"They just asked me if he actually said that, and I said yes...that he had killed the five students and (I told them) the couple of things he had told me to tell them," Lewis said.

After Rolling returned from the mental hospital around New Year's, Lewis consented to be his confessor. Rolling started to detail the crimes, sometimes writing statements and drawing sketches to explain his actions, the newspaper reported.

Since then, Lewis has relayed "extremely minute details" about Rolling, the murders, the weapon, the victims and their apartments in at least 12 January meetings with investigators, including two that Rolling attended, Lewis said.

Lewis answered a detective's questions during the courtroom meetings with Rolling. He said Rolling occasionally added a few sentences for clarification, but never said he was the killer.

That's because Rolling is a born-again Christian who believes a confession is a sin like suicide and the case should be tried in court, Lewis said.

"The closest to a confession would be something along the lines of I would tell a story and he would simply say yes or no when they asked if it was true," said Lewis, who initiated all of the meetings at Rolling's request.

Neither state attorney's spokesman Will Irby nor Rolling's attorney, Public Defender Rick Parker, would comment Thursday.

Sources close to the case confirmed last week that the meetings triggered an intense search for the murder weapon at some abandoned University of Florida deer pens, the Sun reported. The search was called off a week ago when the knife and a pair of gloves apparently were not found.

The site is less than a mile from the apartment of victims Christina Powell and Sonja Larson and the duplex of Christa Hoyt. It is across the street from the third murder site, the apartment of Tracy Paules and Manuel Taboada.

Lewis said he is "100 percent positive" Rolling was alone when he killed the victims and that Edward Humphrey, a former UF student and early suspect, did not know Rolling.

Kudos to cops for cooperation

We should all join the applause for Sheriff Don Eslinger and Acting Sanford Police Chief Ralph Russell for their cooperation to combat the city's growing crime problems. The sheriff has ordered his patrol deputies to take regular passes through troubled neighborhoods to remind criminals and delinquents someone is watching, even if city police aren't around. A school resource officer will be in those neighborhoods after school maintaining the watch.

Too often we hear about "professional jealousy" among law enforcement agencies competing for the glory of cracking some big case. With similar frequency, we hear of law enforcement officers relieved to find a crime has occurred just across the boundary line of their jurisdiction. No paperwork hassles.

Crime knows no such boundaries. A coke dealer selling in the city's Goldsboro streets today may change corners tomorrow and be in unincorporated Lockhart. Cooperation between police and sheriff's investigators will speed both investigations.

Capt. Russell says his officers can tackle the neighborhood crime problem, but he adds a helpful hand can expand the deterrence. Sheriff Eslinger has extended that hand.

We applaud both of you.

Nomination thrilling

President Clinton's nomination of Janet Reno to be the nation's Attorney General is a thrilling event for Florida's child advocacy family. Janet embodies the unique combination of tough and tender. Her job is to prosecute criminals, yet she is one of the state's foremost spokespersons for crime prevention. Over the years, Janet's powerful persuasion has forced attention to the root causes of crime-child maltreatment, family dysfunction, and lack of health care, treatment services and educational opportunity.

At numerous child advocacy events, Janet presses for workable solutions to Florida's most perplexing problems. As a champion of the law, she never hesitates to enforce a strict code of ethics. As a staunch crusader for children, she understands that our youngest citizens need the chance to excel, not just survive.

Janet's most poignant story is about the World War II experiences of her two aunts. One worked in a munitions factory stateside, loading bombs into crates for overseas shipment. The other served as a field nurse in combat zones. Janet says she often feels like both aunts in one body. While her primary job is fighting crime, her passion is repairing families before their children become victims.

At our organization's 1990 conference she declared, "Although I hate the act, my job is to send people to the electric chair to die. But since I hate to lose, I want to change the fact that we're building criminals faster than we're building jails."

As Attorney General of the United States, Janet Reno will redefine the role of our nation's chief law enforcement official by becoming the nation's chief crime prevention official, as well. I look forward to her swift confirmation.

Gays in the military

I say that gays do not want to fight our wars for us, they just want a free medical insurance policy to protect them against the result of their most unique lifestyle: AIDS.

For 50 years gays have avoided combat in wars by saying they were gay. Even some normal male Americans have claimed they were gay to avoid the ravages of war. The AIDS virus has been the principal cause for the current interest in military service.

My only question is: Where will those of us who fought the wars go when all the military and VA hospitals become filled with AIDS wards?

I am glad Senator Nunn has won the first test on this issue against President Clinton. It buys us some time to bury the issue completely and retain the ban against gays in the military.

'Big Four' personify black history

Rarely in American history have four of the nation's greatest men died within a few days of each other, as recently happened. More ironic was the deaths of these black Americans on the eve and during the period of the 67th annual celebration of black history — Dizzy Gillespie, Thomas Dorsey, Thurgood Marshall and Arthur Ashe.

Their deeds are now legacies, but their lives still inspire. Think of the soaring seminar we could have enjoyed if we could have sat down this "Big Four" at a table and told them to share the reminiscences of their triumphs — the irrepressible, fun-loving founding genius of be-bop, Gillespie; the stately, white-haired composer of gospel music, Dorsey; the tall, robust scholar and practitioner of the law, Marshall; and the skinny, graceful gazelle with the dazzling tennis forehand, Ashe.

I'm not as wildly enthusiastic about annual black history celebrations as I used to be. For one thing, the embers of black history glow brightly and are rekindled periodically in my collection of stamps of black Americans. A couple of weeks ago, the 29th stamp — which honors Dr. Percy Julian, an eminent scientist — was issued. Yet the impoverishment of a mere 29 stamps still indicates the richness of the black American experience.

Black Americans are making history so often that you practically need a scorecard. The litany of their achievements is a history of superlatives — the first black to break a barrier, the first black to break a record, the first black to break new ground — from baseball legend Hank Aaron, renaissance man Gordon Parks and brilliant legal strategist, civil rights leader and university president Julius Chambers to U.S. Sen. Carol Mosley Braun, poet laureate Maya Angelou and astronaut Dr. Mae Jemison — "my Lord, what a morning."

But their lives had been brightly inspired by the superlative "Big Four."

Marshall was a one-man history-maker — the first black to successfully argue over 25 cases before the Supreme Court for the NAACP Legal Education and Defense Fund, the first black to be appointed solicitor general and the first black on the Supreme Court.

Ashe did more than become the first black man to win the U.S. Open tennis title, in 1968: Wimbledon, in 1975.

Like Columbus, Gillespie discovered new horizons, sailing in musical waters never before explored. He influenced jazz through compositions and the distillation of styles from fellow geniuses like Parker, Miles and Monk.

On the other side of the black musical spectrum was the prophet-mannered Dorsey. "Take my hand, precious Lord, lead me, let me stand." That comforting hymn was only one of the many that Dorsey composed. But this father of gospel music wrote, directed and led hundreds of choral groups into a hand-clapping, shouting desire to "make a joyful noise unto the Lord."

All four are irreplaceable, especially Marshall. With the appointment of an intellectual pygmy as his successor, George Bush put black history on hold.

Their deeds are now legacies, but their lives still inspire.

Was jury muzzled in cover-up?

DENVER — Members of a federal grand jury who, for three years, have heard evidence of environmental law violations at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, believe the Department of Energy and the Department of Justice are engaged in a cover-up. However, they have been stifled in their efforts to reveal their findings by threats of prison terms for violating their oaths of secrecy.

From 1975 to 1989, Rockwell International operated the plant, located 16 miles northwest of Denver. Activists long charged that serious environmental law violations were occurring behind the locked gates. On June 6, 1989, agents of the FBI, Environmental Protection Agency and the state raided the plant.

On Aug. 1, 1989, a 23-member federal grand jury was empaneled, and began receiving evidence from Assistant U.S. Attorney Ken Fimberg and his boss, Denver U.S. Attorney Mike Norton. Early last fall the grand jury was suddenly disbanded; Norton announced that his office and Rockwell had agreed to a plea bargain in which the company admitted to some minor environmental violations, and paid a fine of $18.5 million.

The government trumpeted the settlement, pointing out the fine was five times greater than any ever paid by a company for an environmental violation. It said that the extensive investigation had failed to uncover evidence of the two most serious charges against Rockwell: that it secretly burned nuclear waste at night and that it dumped toxic chemicals into streams that flow through and near the plant.

The government said the most serious violations uncovered were that Rockwell had let small amounts of liquid waste in solar ponds seep into creeks and allowed blocks of liquid waste mixed with concrete to disintegrate.

The grand jury was outraged. It gathered in the law offices of Ken Peck, a grand jury member, and wrote a scathing report perhaps unique in the annals of federal grand juries.

Addressed to U.S. District Judge Sherman Finesilver, the report accused the Department of Energy and Rockwell of engaging in an "ongoing criminal enterprise" and recommending that eight individuals be indicted and prosecuted.

Portions of the report were then leaked to the press. Various grand jury members, especially foreman Wes McKinley, a rancher, gave statements decrying the settlement and accusing Norton of a cover-up. The government responded by defending the settlement, and by starting a formal investigation of the grand jury for secrecy violations.

The report itself remained secret. But in response to a lawsuit by news organizations, Finesilver has now released an edited version. Finesilver blocked out the names of individuals the grand jurors recommended for prosecution, and interjected detailed point-by-point responses from the government to each charge raised by the grand jurors. He also accused the jurors of accusing public officials without regard to a lack of evidence, and of engaging in social, legal and political argument outside its scope of authority.

Norton, who is leaving office so that a Democrat can be appointed, said the report vindicates his handling of the case: "We were as aggressive as we could have been given the lack of evidence."

The two most serious charges contained in the grand jurors' report were trivialized in the government response: — The grand jurors called the way DOE was storing waste at the plant illegal, and thus a "continuing criminal enterprise."

The government said the grand jurors had been told that Rockwell had complied with various DOE orders and regulations, except in minor areas for which they paid the fine.

— The grand jury said the June 6 raid uncovered compelling evidence of serious law violations. The government dismissed the findings as much less than compelling.

Many of the grand jurors are still angry, but the threat of years in jail has effectively silenced them. Foreman McKinley commented that "in this form the report is more the government's than ours." He also noted he could say nothing more: "I'm looking at 20 years of hard time, and that's not an encouraging thought."

Another juror, who asked that his name not be used for obvious reasons, said "nothing in the government response has made me change my mind one bit. Both Rockwell and DOE employees should be prosecuted for the way they ran Rocky Flats. I am convinced the Justice Department were not prosecutors here, but acted as defense counsel for DOE and its contractor, Rockwell."

McKinley has requested a pardon for all the grand jurors from President Clinton and a full-scale congressional investigation into the operation of Rocky Flats.

They have been stifled in their efforts to reveal their findings by threats of prison.

GAP has a beef with poor meat inspection

WASHINGTON — When the recent Jack-in-the-Box food poisoning outbreak hit the front pages, Tom Devine was "only surprised that the disaster took this long to happen."

As the legal director of the Government Accountability Project, a whistleblower support group, Devine has represented over 150 meat and poultry inspectors — more whistleblowers than from any government agency.

"A tragedy is never the sort of vindication a whistleblower wants," Devine says. "But it confirms all the warnings they've been making for the last decade."

Typical was a case we reported on in 1988. At a Nebraska meatpacking plant, a government inspector feared she would lose her job if she stopped the assembly line where she saw what appeared to be an unhealthy carcass pass. Her USDA superiors warned her that it was money out of the company's pocket every time she shut off the line. The inspector's union filed a grievance with the USDA claiming the veterinarian told her it cost $130 every minute the line remained idle.

This inspector's grievance was ultimately upheld, but most inspectors haven't had happy endings. "When meat inspectors protested too loudly, they were harassed, fired and even threatened with prosecution," Devine says.

This war on consumers and inspectors was presaged in a 1981 Department of Agriculture management memo: "The special interest groups representing the meat and poultry industry have won and now have the ear of Washington. They 'paid their dues' and are now in the driver's seat. ... The consumer advocate base has disintegrated. We must be versatile and adjust to this new challenge."

Essentially, a new era in food safety was ushered in: slaughter houses were now on the honor system. The meat industry was allowed to "police" itself. Management was allowed to purge trained and qualified federal inspectors. Inspectors had as little as six to eight seconds to inspect 1,000-pound carcasses, blurring by at 300 to 400 an hour. Whistleblowers said that even when violations were spotted, companies could call Washington and get individual inspector decisions overruled.

The upshot: In the 1980s inspectors condemned only 60 percent of the meat and poultry that would have flunked during the 1970s. The contaminated-meat scare is now on the Clinton administration's platter.

Though there is some temptation to heap blame on the hamburger-flippers for not cooking the meat long enough, the problem is more deeply rooted. The task of identifying contaminated meat is kept deliberately daunting.

"Although the inspectors are no longer blindfolded with their hands tied, the line speeds are still hopelessly out of control," Devine argues. "Now the problem is they can't possibly keep up with the carcasses. Even if they could, at best they could certify that the meat looks safe, and the bulk of food-safety threats can remain in invisible form." Three times since 1985, the National Academy of Sciences has proposed rapid lab tests to the USDA in order to take the guesswork out of food-safety decisions.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy held an extraordinary meeting recently at GAP headquarters — once regarded as enemy territory — with five whistleblowers flown in from around the country.

Tom Devine was 'only surprised that the disaster took this long to happen.'

Presidential drug panel visits Florida

By Associated Press

TAMPA — A presidential commission working on a new battle plan for the nation's war on drugs visited here to get a few fresh ideas from those in the trenches.

The 24-member bipartisan group heard discussions Tuesday of new ways of testing criminals for drug use and reduce drug manufacturing. Commissioners also learned how an overloaded Dade County court system reinvented the way it handles first-time drug offenders. The commission, which will issue its final report in May, was appointed by President Bush to write model legislation for the states.

"The real challenge will be to convince each of the state legislatures to pass it," said commissioner Shirley Coletti, founder and president of a St. Petersburg non-profit drug treatment center.

Mentioned many times in Tuesday's testimony was the need for more drug education in schools and early intervention for drug users. Coletti brought in 90 third- and fourth-graders to show them a puppet show used in Pinellas County schools as part of the county's education efforts.

"It's a great way of drug-use prevention that is long term," said New Orleans district attorney Harry Connick Sr.

Wary of regular parades of addicts, a Dade County judge gathered South Florida law enforcement officials together four years ago to craft a new system.

The resulting Drug Court has helped break the cycle of drug addicts getting arrested, serving a few days in jail, and being released only to end up in court soon after, said Circuit Judge Stanley Goldstein, who runs the court.

Drug users are taken to the court instead of the usual arraignment and given the chance to sign up for the program. If they do, they're taken by bus to a treatment center.

providing an enhancement for the city, and help in economic growth." He continued, "We have the potential of having a major hotel near Interstate 4, and other businesses and industries. If we water this down, we will be doing away with enhancement and I don't believe this would be best for the city."

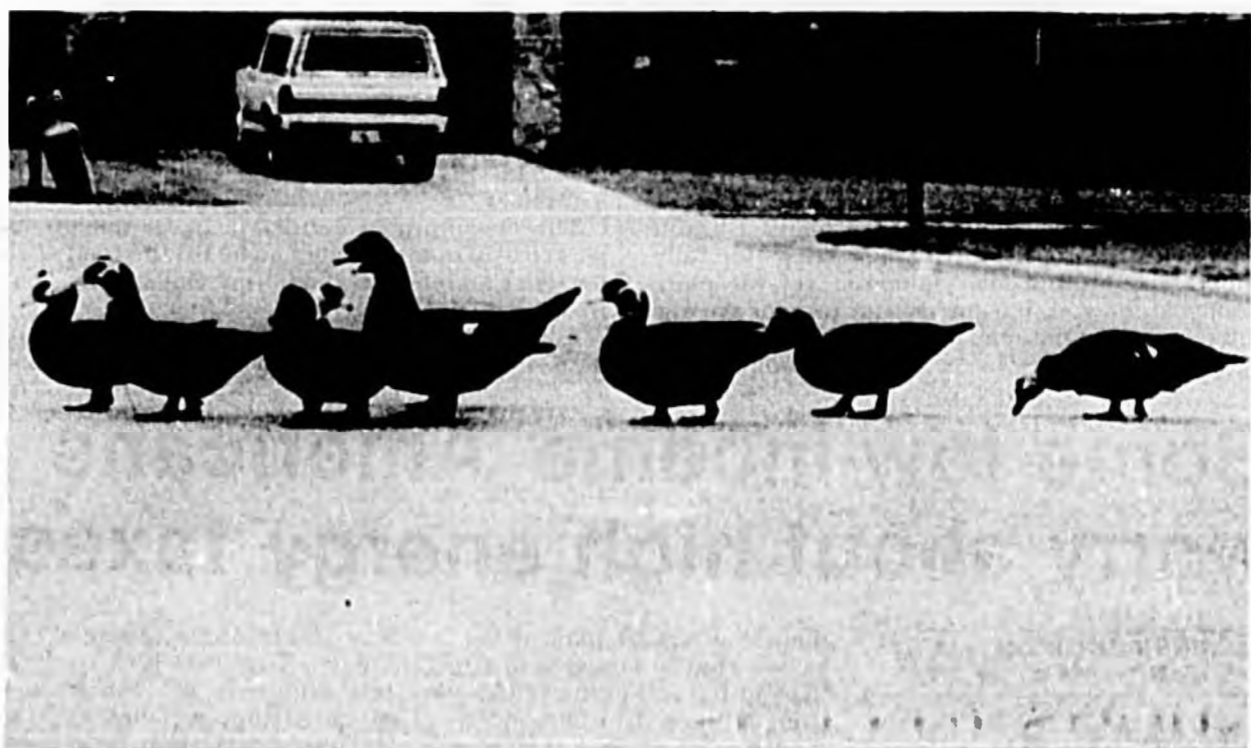

Holland explained that between money already allocated by the city, combined with money from Seminole County earmarked for the enhancement, "there is enough to do three intersections on two sides, or two intersections on all four sides."

Following a demonstration by Holland of what the work may resemble, the commissioners voted to have two major intersections enhanced. They would be at Country Club Road and Lake Emma Road.

The boulevard was brought up for the third time during the commission meeting, when City Attorney Ned Julian told the commissioners of a conduit problem near the 7th Street intersection. He suggested the city allow the bonding company to obtain a special agreement to allow for the repair and possible replacement of power lines, to meet specifications requested by Florida Power Corporation.

"If they have to replace the lines," Julian said, "it will cost more, but they believe the lines can be repaired. It would be a minimum of $15,000, but no more than $35,000," he added.

Julian said paving in the area was expected to start in two weeks, and the power lines work must be done by that time.

the area near Bethune Cookman College, in an all-out drive to help reduce crime in that area.

"This approach could be one way to resolve some of our problems in Sanford," he said, "but whether it would be the best thing to do at this time is something we should discuss with the people of the community."

Regarding groups being formed by private individuals such as Johnell Jackson, Russell said, "While I'm not specifically seeking group participation at this time in the committee, I'll be happy to meet with Mr. Jackson's group or any of the others and work separately with them to help work on their particular problems."

He indicated the committee would not be a short-term group designed to deal only with the immediate crime problems. "There will be many other issues that will be coming up eventually," Russell said, "and if we can continue operating with the committee, it will be a valuable tool for not only law enforcement but the entire city."

Russell said this morning he plans to ask the commissioners to make recommendations to the committee at the workshop session, scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. Monday, Feb. 22.

The workshop will be followed at 7 p.m., by the regular commission meeting, in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall.

committing a lewd and lascivious act upon a child under 16 and with sexual activity with a child under 16 when he was arrested on Feb. 9 by Sanford Police.

The father said that for two years his son had "gone into a shell." He would not speak with the rest of the family and spent most of his time at home confined to his bedroom.

"We were all hurt by this," the father said. "It is a sad, sad situation."

The father said that the whole family suffered with his son who held the secret of sexual assault inside him for two years.

"We didn't know what he was going through, but we knew that he was suffering," the father said. "I am 100 percent sure that this man molested my son and we have all suffered by it."

The man's son is no longer at Lakeview Middle School and it was as a result of his leaving there that he felt "free enough" to talk openly about what had happened.

"He told school officials some of it two years ago," the father said. "He (Paterson) should have been taken out of there even then."

The father said that his son "passed out on the floor" while recounting the events he had endured and since then has been able to come out of his room and be with the family. Still, the parents are having to adjust.

"We, as parents, did our best to raise our sons the best they could be," he said. "He is in gifted programs. He has hundreds of awards as a result of extra-curricular activities. But he will be shackled by this."

He said that he and his wife have suffered greatly and still "do a lot of crying," but that the healing process has begun.

Clinton says economic plan in national interest

By HAHCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

CHILlicothe, Ohio — President Clinton launched a cross-country blitzkrieg to rally Americans around his economic revival plan, "not just for you, but for us; not just for narrow interest, but for national interest."

American," a confident Clinton told a flag-waving crowd at St. Louis' historic Union Station on Thursday.

The consummate candidate of Campaign '92 was clearly in his element as he lit the road again for what he referred to as "Day One of America's new direction."

Clinton coupled his campaign-style appeal with a stern warning that unless the country restores its economic strength by creating more jobs and paying its deficit, "we're going to be in trouble."

"We have got to create some new jobs in this country, for goodness sake," he said.

The president also dispatched his Cabinet to all corners of the country to help promote the $493 billion economic plan he presented to Congress on Wednesday night.

The president was continuing his national sales pitch in Ohio today with a question-and-answer session for students and townspeople at a Chillicothe high school, followed by an afternoon speech in Hyde Park, N.Y. Then, after one day back at the White House, he heads for West Coast on Sunday.

Clinton spent the night at the Chillicothe Comfort Inn after being greeted by thousands of slumbering but cheering townspeople who turned out for his arrival in single-digit temperatures.

It was an uneasy reception for a president who had just announced he wanted to raise taxes and slash spending by nearly a half-trillion dollars.

Clinton's leadoff appearance in St. Louis on Thursday was part campaign rally, part economic tutorial during which he urged Americans to let members of Congress know they are backing his plan.

"I ask you to support it not just for you, but for us; not just for narrow interest, but for the national interest," he said.

He added, "We need you to tell your members of Congress that we will support you if make the honest, tough, hard decisions."

The president stressed the most attractive elements of his package, poking fun at questionable government programs he wants to cut and promoting popular new spending initiatives in areas such as education and job training.

Clinton said his hit list includes the Bicentennial al Commission — set up to mark the country's 200th birthday in 1976 but somehow still in existence.

He devoted a lesser share of his St. Louis speech to the tax increases he is seeking.

"The burdens in terms of taxes, I think, are imposed in a fair way," Clinton told his audience. "The rates of 98.9 percent of Americans will not be raised."

His Cabinet and other top deputies were sounding much the same message.

Former Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin, now the No. 2 official at the Education Department, told an audience at the University of Vermont, "We cannot do business as usual."

Clinton's message got a good reception in St. Louis.

Dan LeBoyd, a department store manager who turned out for Clinton's speech, said he was "one of the individuals earning over $100,000 who will be paying more."

"As long as you look at it as a total package, it's fair," he said. "Either you do it now or my daughter's going to pay later. Therefore, I am supportive."

Patricia Daughtry, who works at a credit agency, said she'd be willing to pay her part "if everybody gets their fair share."

Clinton's program calls for a broad energy tax on fuels that would cost the typical household up to $150 a year when fully in place by 1996. Income tax rates would jump for well-to-do Americans, individuals with taxable income above $115,000 and joint filers above $140,000.

Tax increases and spending cuts would add up to a $493 billion reduction in the expected deficit over four years. Part of that reduction would be erased by $169 billion in spending on education, health care and other programs he favors to stimulate the economy.

Some low-income Americans worry about high energy taxes

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Kathy Mindre has three children and an annual income of under $20,000 — just the kind of family President Clinton has promised to protect from higher energy taxes.

That protection is a tax break, and Mindre says she just can't wait until the end of the year for help.

"I can't afford another penny a month. I can't afford to meet my monthly payments," she said Thursday.

Welfare analysts say families with young children like Mindre's should come out ahead under the president's economic plan announced Wednesday, despite its call for stiffer taxes on heating oil, gas or electricity.

That's because Clinton also wants a more generous tax credit for working families earning less than $30,000, although most families wouldn't realize any benefit until they file federal tax returns.

The president's plan also includes substantial increases in spending for energy assistance, vaccinations, Head Start, food stamps and the special supplemental feeding program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC).

But Mindre, 30, says any increase in her family's energy bills will really hurt. Clinton said the tax would cost the average family earning $40,000 a year about $17 a month.

Subtracting even a few dollars from her monthly budget, which she supplements with food stamps and WIC vouchers, is "very, very bad," Mindre said from her home in Gaithersburg, Md.

"So what if we get something back at the end of the year," she said. "I need it to live on every month. To say that they're not raising our taxes, that's ridiculous. An energy tax is a tax, regardless of what you call it."

In Port Huron, Mich., Edward Troy also worries that higher energy taxes will be felt in his home. He recently spent $150 to repair a broken window and a television, and wonders where he'll find the money in his budget.

"We're the type of family who goes from paycheck to paycheck," said Troy, a 54-year-old laid-off printer who works as a custodian at a high school.

His wife is an interior designer and their combined, taxable income is about $30,000. Their youngest son is a quadriplegic attending college, the oldest is handicapped and lives at home.

Under Clinton's plan, the Troy family may be eligible for the expanded earned income tax credit, although their income appears too high to qualify for food stamps, which would receive $9 billion in additional money over the next four years.

The earned income tax credit currently applies only to families with children and incomes of $23,100 in 1993 and $23,800 in 1994.

Clinton wants to expand it to families with two or more children earning up to $30,000, and to families with one child earning up to $28,000. Childless workers also would be covered, as long as their earnings don't exceed $9,000, welfare analysts said Thursday.

More than 13.9 million couples and individuals claimed the credit on returns filed in 1992, but hundreds of thousands of qualified families failed to do so. Activists say many are not aware of the credit, and can only receive it by filing a tax return.

The credit was created to reward low-earning families for staying off the welfare rolls and to help them offset their Social Security taxes. It has been expanded to provide additional help with medical insurance and for those with newborn children.

The credit is unique: It can wipe out a family's entire income tax liability. If your credit is larger than your liability, the government will send a check for the difference.

Getting the point across

Seminole learn lesson while beating Leesburg

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Sometimes a coach has to prove a point.

When several players missed practice Wednesday, Seminole High School head coach John McNamara decided to bench the absent players for the start of the Tribe's opening game of the 3A-District V Tournament with Leesburg at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium Thursday night.

"I went with the girls who came to practice," said McNamara. "I'm not really mad, but they have to realize this is the playoffs and I need them at practice."

With a makeshift starting lineup on the floor, Seminole got off to a slow start, not scoring until the 6:37 mark of the opening period and not hitting a field goal until the 5:23 mark.

When the benched players, including senior star Niki Washington, came into the game with 4:49 left in the first stanza, the Tribe still held a 5-2 advantage.

The new players seemed to incite the Yellow Jackets, not Seminole, as the visitors took a 14-12 lead after the first period.

But after that it was all the Tribe, as the local team outscored Leesburg 42-8 over the next two periods, building leads of as many as 49 points, and going on to post a 67-33 victory.

The key to the victory was a Seminole full-court press that totally took the Yellow Jackets out of their offense. The result was 35 steals off of 47 turnovers.

Pats give new coach first win

From Staff Reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Nothing helps opening game jitters like a five-run first inning.

The Lake Brantley High School girls' softball team, playing its first game for new coach Debbie Frank, scored five runs in the bottom of the first inning Thursday night and rolled to a 13-2 win over the visiting Bishop Moore Hornets.

"We were a little shaky in the first inning," said Frank. "But then we settled down and played real well."

After Bishop Moore cut the lead to 5-2 in the top of the third inning, the Patriots added four runs in the home half of the inning to all but ice the game. A run in the fourth and three in the fifth ended the game by the 10-run mercy rule.

Stacie Stalled led Lake Brantley's 16-hit attack by going 4-for-4 with a home run, four RBI, and three runs scored. Rachel Poppe was 2-for-3 with two runs. Nicole Rathbun went 2-for-3 with a run. Tiffany Poppe was 2-for-2 with two RBI while Jill Soost went 2-for-2 with an RBI and two runs.

Junior Tracy Brown was the winning pitcher.

Offensive woes continue to haunt SCC in M-FC loss

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Oh, for the want of a clutch hit. The Seminole Community College baseball team finally produced some offense in its Mid-Florida Conference contest with Florida Community College at Jacksonville Thursday afternoon at Raider Field.

But the Raiders could not get the big hit with men in scoring position, dropping a 6-3 decision to the Stars.

SCC took a 2-1 lead in the second inning when Isaac Cruz doubled in Oviedo's Eric Jordan and Johnny Goodrich. FCC-J tied the score in the fourth inning and that's the way it stayed until the seventh inning, when the Stars scored two runs to take the lead for good.

But the Raiders missed several good scoring opportunities before the seventh inning, leaving five men in scoring position.

SCC's other run came in the eighth inning, when Sanford's Rick Eckstein was hit by a pitch, went to second on a balk, advanced to third on a passed ball and scored on a fielder's choice by Sanford's Demetry Beamon.

The Raide's got another good pitching performance, this time from Oviedo's David Blanton. The sophomore right-hander gave up nine hits, struck out five, walked none and allowed only two earned runs.

Florida Sport Wear struggles to stay on top

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Florida Sport Wear is getting no respect. Despite being one of the two remaining undefeated softball teams in the Sanford Recreation leagues, Florida Sport Wear has had to fight for its life the last two weeks.

A week ago, Florida Sport Wear and Gator's played a game that was stopped by rain after seven innings with the score tied 10-10. Last night at Chase Park, Florida Sport Wear had to rally in the bottom of the seventh to tie the score before pulling out a 13-12 win in eight innings over Meyers Tree Service.

In other action last night, Gator's blitzed Bamboo Cafe 18-1 in a game stopped after five Trailing undefeated Florida Sport Wear (5-0) are R.E. Templeton (4-2), Gator's (3-2), Bamboo Cafe (3-3), and First Baptist and Meyers Tree Service (both 1-5).

Next week, R.E. Templeton challenges Florida Sport Wear at 6:30 p.m., Gator's takes on First Baptist in the 7:30 p.m. game, and Bamboo Cafe tangles with Meyers Tree Service at 8:30 p.m.

Each of the 11 hitters in the Gator's lineup had at least one hit and scored one run. Leading the 25-hit assault was Jerry Russi, who collected a home run, double, single, and two runs. Chris Wargo added a double, three singles, and two runs. Mike McLohon singled three times and scored three times.

Also chipping in were Wil Bland (three singles, two runs), Danny Gracy (three singles, one run), Tom Bledsoe (triple, single, one run), Brian Rogers (double, single, two runs), Chris Wire (two singles, two runs), Mickey West (double, run), and Mark Aten and Mark Clatterback (each with a single and a run).

Mom should deal honestly with teen-age girl

DEAR MARY: I am uncomfortable talking to my daughter (10th grade) about things like teen-age sex, drug abuse and other difficult topics. I'm afraid I might put ideas in her head. Since I really don't know what to say or how to say it, I just don't bring "touchy" subjects up and neither does she.

She's always been a delightful child to be around, and I sincerely doubt that these kinds of things are going to be a problem. However, if it really needs to be done, give me some ideas on how to approach the subjects.

UNCOMFORTABLE MOM

DEAR UNCOMFORTABLE: Since she's always been a delightful child, you probably have a good foundation of mutual trust and respect between you. That's a wonderful basis for open communication about the difficult decisions and issues she will inevitably have to deal with during the next few years.

Begin NOW to talk about your concerns dealing with teenage sexual issues, substance abuse and any other issue that may be a problem for her during her teens. Don't be afraid to admit that you don't have all the answers and make sure she knows that you will listen close to what she's saying, even if you disagree. Never allow anger at what she says to end a conversation. Your daughter needs to know that it's okay to rely on you for accurate information or feedback on whatever is important in her life.

Whenever you talk to your daughter, emphasize the things she's doing right instead of focusing on what is wrong. Use the "Oreo" approach: put the negative comment between two positive ones.

Finally, give very clear messages on where you stand on sensitive topics so your daughter will know exactly what is expected of her. Then model the good behavior that you want from her. Make sure that your own actions reflect the honesty, integrity, and healthy life-style choices that you expect from her.

Retiring in 21st century Employer-funded plans will be less generous

Retiring in the first part of the 21st century will be quite different from retiring during the latter half of the 20th century. Baby boomers moving through the life cycle with one eye on retirement can expect to contribute more of their personal funds to retirement than workers retiring earlier.

Employer-funded retirement plans will pay less generous benefits in the next century than they do presently. Defined benefit plans, the types that promise a specific monthly income, are being phased out. A growing number of employers prefer contributions plans that require the employer to fund contributions out of the current year's income. Retirement income depends on how these employer-deposited funds grew.

Today, a large number of employers provide medical coverage for their retirees; few, if any, will do so in the next century. Employers cannot afford to do for the next generation of retirees what they are doing for this generation.

Social Security will also be less generous. The retirement age at which a person is eligible for full benefits will move from age 65 in the year 2000 to 67 by the year 2020.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Benefits will be adjusted downward as the ratio of taxpayers to retirees drops. The relatively smaller number of workers will not be able to carry such a heavy tax burden.

This means that individuals who retire in the 21st century must shoulder a much heavier share of the cost of funding their retirement than current retirees. Experts suggest focusing on four areas:

• Take advantage of current company plans. Contribute as much as you can to an employer sponsored retirement fund such as a 401(k) or 403(b). Most employers make matching donations from 50 percent to 100 percent.

• Invest one spouse's income. This idea may be "easier said than done." Yet younger couples with no children or a small family can adopt this strategy if they are willing to live in medium-priced housing and buy inexpensive used cars.

• Invest in rental real estate. Probably more people have become wealthy by investing in real estate than in any other investment. Attractive mortgage rates with flat or declining housing prices in many sections of the state make this a good opportunity for real estate investment.

• Start a business. All the down sizing taking place in business is creating an opportunity for new small businesses that people can operate out of their homes. Home computers make it possible for tens of thousands of Americans to have their home also serve as their office.

Far too many people put off funding retirement. The younger a person starts, the more successful they will become. With both government and business reducing and eliminating benefits, funding retirement is increasingly the responsibility of the future retiree!

USMM vets acquire a ship's bell

The United States Merchant Marine Veterans World War II recently acquired a ship's bell they had sought for a long time. The presentation of the bell from a tugboat serving in 1944 took place at the American Legion building in Sanford. Proud of their bell are (from left) Fred Fontaine, treasurer; David Eslick, member; Eugene Jones, vice president; William Kelly, a member who spent considerable time acquiring the bell from a group in Texas; and Bob Swanson, president.

Ex-wife of rapist: Keep doors locked

DEAR ABBY: A recent letter in your column about locking your doors brought back some painful memories.

As a child, I was taught always to lock the doors to our home, and I've carried that habit with me into my adult life.

But there are many people I know who left their doors unlocked for "just a moment" while they went to the mail box, dumped their trash, and carried their laundry to the wash room. Abby, these "people" — all women — were the sexual assault victims of my ex-husband.

After he was arrested, he told how he would hide and wait for these unsuspecting women to leave their apartments — "just for a moment" — and when they returned, he'd be waiting for them. He also told of many assaults that occurred because he had gained access through unlocked doors and windows in the middle of the night. (Can you imagine waking up to find someone like him standing over you?)

My children and I have healed, but his victims have a long road ahead of them. My "ex" will be out of prison in five more years, and free to rape again.

Abby, please warn your readers often how dangerous it is to leave their doors unlocked — even for just a few minutes. If it saves one woman from being assaulted, the time I took to write this was well spent.

A WARNING FROM PHOENIX
P.S. Abby: My "ex" was not a typical serial rapist. We lived in a nice, family-type, middle-class neighborhood, and he was active in Little League, PTA, church, etc. He was a clean-cut guy with a big problem.

DEAR ABBY: My husband says "don't!" when he should say "doesn't." This may sound trivial to you, but he is in business for himself, and when he deals with customers, the way he expresses himself is important. We've been married for 20 years, and this is really getting on my nerves because I know he knows better.

When I correct him, he accuses me of nagging him and trying to change him. Abby, I am not trying to "change" him; I am trying to help him. He is an excellent provider and is very skilled at the work he does, but he doesn't take criticism very nothing more unwelcome and less appreciated than unsolicited criticism.

ADVICE

Apparently, your husband's grammatical gaffes haven't hampered his ability to make a good living, so if he "don't care," and it "don't matter," I advise you to lay off.

DEAR READERS:
"Ever notice how much better those tales from our youth depict us?"
"As the years leave fewer witnesses."
"Who are able to contradict us?"

INTERESTED IN A YOUNGER LOOKING FACE?
TCA Facial Peels are now available in our office. This type of facial peel is superficial and is considered a very safe cosmetic peel. You can now have a younger, fresher looking face in approximately 2 weeks. If you have dark blotches, acne scars, freckles, or fine wrinkles, you might be a candidate for this type of facial peel. This affordable, almost painless, in office procedure will leave you with your own natural skin color and a more even skin texture of the face. Call for a consultation to see if you are a candidate for this procedure. This is a cosmetic procedure and not reimbursable by Medical Insurance.

LET US REPLENISH THE SEED OF FAITH THROUGH ... Regular Church Attendance

The March Through Time

Forty-two, they number, in the march through time ... the prestigious parade of Presidents of the United States of America. Although of different physical stature, sharing various views of political leadership, and each possessing a distinctive personality ... each of our Presidents has shared one common denominator.

Each has shared, though for various periods of time and in different strengths of capacity, in the guidance of our nation and in furthering the democratic process on which our nation was built. They gave of their ideas, their energies, and in some terrible instances their very lives.

This year on Presidents' Day, may we reflect upon our history ... upon "God and Country" ... and pray for the future of our nation as we continue to support our Commanders-in-Chief in their march through time.

Dr. Beck to be guest speaker at First United SANFORD — Dr. Bill Beck, director of the southeast regional office of Heifer Project International (HPI) will be the guest speaker at First United Methodist Church, 419 Park Ave., during the 8:30 and 11 a.m. services on Sunday.

The public is invited to join members of First United to hear the miracles of how HPI helps to overcome hunger in the world.

In 1994, HPI will celebrate its 50th Anniversary for helping hungry families feed themselves and share with their neighbors. The first animals given were 17 heifers sent to families in Puerto Rico whose malnourished children had never tasted cow's milk. Today, families and communities in 110 countries and 35 U.S. states are leading self-reliant lives as a result of the project.

The nonprofit, ecumenical, organization works in partnership with 14 major church denominations. Thousands of individual church congregations, as well as individual donors throughout the world, provide funds to make possible gifts of livestock and training. Every farmer receiving an animal "passes on the gift" of offspring to help a neighbor.

HPI received The President's Award for Voluntary Action in 1986 and '90, and was the recipient of the Presidential End Hunger Award.

Congregation Beth Am Sisterhood Purim to feature Judy Gabbai

LONGWOOD — The Congregation Beth Am Sisterhood will hold a Purim Workshop on Sunday, Feb. 28, at the home of Nina Warshaw, 500 Raymond Ave., beginning at 11 a.m.

The workshop will be led by Congregation Beth Am Religious School Principal Judy Gabbai and will cover a wide variety of custom, ceremonies and rituals associated with the celebration of the victory of the Jews of Persia over the forces of anti-semitism lead by Haman.

All are welcome to attend simply by making reservations through Arlene Harris at 774-9587.

Although widely celebrated, Purim is often misunderstood.

Aspects of the holiday are trial centered and young people flock to synagogues during the reading of the story from the traditional Megillah, the Scroll of Esther to blot out the name of the wicked Haman with noise makers called graggers and to feast on Hamantaschen symbolic of the wicked Prime Minister.

However, the holiday has great significance to those who constantly guard against the forces of anti-semitism.

Assimilation is a second focus of the contrast between Mordecai who refused to bow down at the King's gate while his niece, Esther, married the non-Jewish King Ahasuerus.

A third critical focus deals with the role of women and the powerful forces they bring to bear in the maintenance of cultural, religious and ethnic identity.

Judy Gabbai has an extensive background as a Jewish Educator in Israel, Canada and the United States. In Central Florida she has served the Religious Schools of Congregation of Liberal Judaism, Temple Israel as well as Congregation Beth Am. For many years she anchored the Hebrew Language program of the Hebrew Day School of Central Florida.

Gabbai's movement towards adult Jewish education has met with much acclaim. Her Purim Workshop is sure to make a significant impact.

Is it phlebitis or varicose veins?

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DR. GOTT: Two years ago my right leg started feeling hot. It now aches constantly, and my doctor has recommended an elastic stocking. I do have swelling about six inches above my ankle. Is there any way of telling if this is caused by varicose veins or phlebitis?

not always. Marked by twitches of the mouth, cheeks and tongue, it is treatable with medicine, notably chlorpromazine. Senile chorea does not impair intellectual functioning.

Chorea is also caused by hyperthyroidism and lupus, which are diagnosed by blood tests and require specific therapy. An unusual form, chorea gravidarum, can occasionally affect pregnant women (and those taking birth control pills) - and will disappear at the time of delivery (or when the pills are discontinued).

DEAR READER: An ultrasound examination of your lower leg should help resolve the dilemma. Phlebitis is inflammation of a vein, usually because of a clot. The ultrasound test, which is entirely safe and relatively inexpensive, will show if the veins in your leg are open and swollen (varicose veins) or blocked (phlebitis). Ask your doctor about this.

The difference is important because varicose veins usually can be treated with elevation and support hose, whereas phlebitis ordinarily requires more aggressive therapy, such as anticoagulant or anti-inflammatory drugs. In severe cases, both afflictions may need surgical correction.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has senile chorea. His specialist described it as similar to cerebral palsy, only instead of his being plagued by it 100 percent of the time, it comes and goes. Can you provide specific information on his condition?

Whenever some declarers come to a crossroads, they always seem to crash.

In today's deal, South thought he was diving cleverly along the main highway when in reality he was heading down a side road that looked attractive but was leading to a cliff top.

Against three no-trump, West led the heart three; four, jack, king. South counted seven top tricks and anticipated getting two more from diamonds. And he knew an avoidance play when he saw one.

South led a diamond to dummy's king, returned to hand with a spade and led a second diamond. If West had played the queen, South was planning to duck in the dummy, keeping East off the lead. However, when West played the 10, declarer put up dummy's ace and led a third round. South was pleased to see West win this trick, but he was less pleased when West promptly switched to the club nine (the high card denying interest in the suit) in answer to his partner's encouraging "club-seven discard on the previous trick. East won with the ace and returned a heart: one down.

South's path required finding the diamonds 3-2, with West holding the club ace and West having to win his side's diamond trick. But there was a much better route available. Assuming West's heart three was an honest card, the suit had to be splitting 4-3. If so, South just needed to find West with the club jack. At trick two, South should have finessed dummy's club 10. His nine tricks would have been four spades, one heart, two diamonds and two clubs.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 20, 1993

In the year ahead, improvements in your social life are indicated. However, continue to maintain close ties with old friends. Remember, they are the ones who stuck by you when you were less popular.

FISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In order to accomplish important objectives today, assertiveness and boldness on your behalf will be required. If you're too faint-hearted, it may end up being just another ordinary day. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A close friend who is always rather tight-lipped about finances and private affairs will resent being placed under close scrutiny today. Don't let your curiosity create an incident.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You are capable of whatever you set your mind to today, but there's a chance that others may receive more credit for your accomplishments than you reap yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It would be wise today not to boast in advance about things you intend to achieve. There is a possibility that circumstances might not abide by your timetable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might be called upon to manage a critical situation for another today. Treat this matter as if it were your own. Doing anything less could make your venture unsuccessful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might find it necessary today to try to be all things to all people. Unfortunately, this could prove to be an extremely counterproductive concept.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you get off on the wrong track with co-workers early in the day, the situation is not likely to be remedied before quitting time. Forewarned is forearmed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may have a slight edge over rivals today in situations that have elements of competition. However, don't go so far as to take a chance and bet the farm.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Developments in financial or commercial areas could come about to your liking today. However, the problem is that once you have something in your hands, you might get careless and lose it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The right answers could be found today in situations where you rely upon your logic. This may not be true if you put too much credence in hunches or intuitive perceptions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions are a trifle unusual today. You might be fortunate in your material affairs, yet not so lucky in keeping the good will of those involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Social encounters with friends should turn out pleasantly for you today. Conversely, your dealings with business associates might be a pain in the neck.

Dr. Kevorkian assists 14th and 15th suicides

By LAURA GRIMMER
Associated Press Writer

WATERFORD, Mich. — With two more suicides, Dr. Jack Kevorkian is stepping up the pace as a March 30 deadline approaches.

Two cancer patients from California breathed carbon monoxide through a mask Thursday in Kevorkian's presence, bringing to 15 the number of suicides in which he has assisted since 1990.

Kevorkian has assisted in seven suicides since Dec. 15, when Gov. John Engler signed a law, effective March 30, making such activity a crime punishable by four years in prison. Six of the suicides were this month — three this week.

"People are becoming more desperate," said Kevorkian's attorney Michael Schwartz. "People who might not have contacted him are contacting him now out of fear and panic."

Kevorkian has said he intends to ignore the new law because he considers it immoral.

State legislators seemed hesitant Thursday to try to move up the law's effective date. Rep. Michael Nye cited a 1978 opinion by Michigan's attorney general that questioned the constitutionality of such a step.

The latest victims were Jonathon Grenz, 44, of Costa Mesa, Calif., who had throat cancer, and Martha Ruwart, 41, of Cardiff-by-the-Sea, Calif., whose duodenal cancer had spread to her ovaries, said Geoffrey Fieger, another Kevorkian lawyer.

They used the same method employed in all but two of the 15 suicides, Schwartz said. Friends and relatives were present.

"My sister had a very advanced cancer," said Ruwart's sister Mary Ruwart. "We've had a lot of cancer in our family. We've seen what it can do and the suffering it can cause."

Grenz's cancer forced doctors to remove his larynx and much of his tongue, Schwartz said. Grenz's physical decline and his mother's death two months ago forced him into a deep depression, Fieger said.

Kevorkian has been helping people die by carbon monoxide poisoning since he was barred by court order from using a device he invented that intravenously administers lethal doses of drugs.

Marky Mark has apologized for teen-age violence, harassment

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Grammy-nominated rapper Marky Mark said he was sorry Thursday about racially tinged violence dating back to his early teens.

The 21-year-old white rapper, whose full name is Mark Wahlberg, was in Hawaii, but he issued a statement apologizing for the racial incidents. The long-distance apology headed off a Times Square rally against him by civil rights activists.

"In 1988 I harassed a group of school kids on a field trip, many of them African-American," he said in the statement. "And in 1988, I assaulted two Vietnamese men over a case of beer. I used racist language during these encounters and people were seriously hurt by what I did."

"I am truly sorry. I was a teen-ager and intoxicated when I did these things," he said. "But that's no excuse."

He served 45 days of a 90-day jail sentence in the attack on the Vietnamese men in Dorchester, Mass.

In addition to the apology,

Wahlberg promised an ad campaign to denounce all forms of bigotry.

"I know there are kids out there doing the same stuff now and I just want to tell them, don't do it," he said.

The apology prompted organizers to call off the rally scheduled in Times Square beneath a billboard underwear advertisement bearing Wahlberg's picture.

The Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation, the Committee Against Anti-Asian Violence and other groups targeted Wahlberg after he failed to denounce anti-homosexual remarks by a singer with whom he appeared.

"I want to make it clear that I condemn anti-gay hatred and violence," Wahlberg said in the apology statement.

"We really applaud him for being able to realize the errors of his ways ... saying to kids, 'Look, I've been there, don't go there,'" said GLAAD spokesman Donald Suggs.

Wahlberg publicist Gary Stromberg said details of the ad campaign had not been worked out. Wahlberg is scheduled to appear in a Massachusetts court March 2 to face assault charges brought by a man whose jaw was broken during a fight last in August.

He was nominated for a Grammy Award in the best rap solo performance category, for the song, "You Gotta Believe." The awards ceremony is Feb. 24.

His older brother, Donny, was a founding member of New Kids on the Block.

Actor pleads innocent to attempted murder

By The Associated Press

EL MONTE, Calif. — Actor James Healey, who appeared on "Dynasty" and "Santa Barbara," pleaded innocent Thursday to attempted murder for allegedly cutting the throat of his sister's estranged husband.

Healey, 42, of Santa Monica, also pleaded innocent to assault with a deadly weapon, burglary and making a terrorist threat, said Deputy District Attorney Donna Wills.

Healey, 42, was charged along with his sister, Annetarie Virginia Rivera, 35, and a friend, Henri Marechal, 39.

Mrs. Rivera and Marechal allegedly held the victim down while the actor cut his throat with a piece of glass, said sheriff's Deputy Ron Weber. Both pleaded innocent to similar charges.

All three were held without bail, Ms. Wills said. If convicted of attempted murder, the three could face up to life in prison.

Healey was arrested Feb. 6 after the attack on Jacob Benjamin Rivera. Rivera was hospitalized but survived.

Rivera, 42, and a woman friend allegedly received death threats from his wife the night of the attack, Weber said. The couple is divorcing.

Healey played Sean Rowan on "Dynasty" during the show's 1987-88 season. He also played Derek Griffin on "Santa Barbara."

Cosby coming back to NBC in movies, series

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Bill Cosby and NBC will reunite in 1993-94 for a series of two-hour movies that will be spun off into a weekly series the following season, NBC West Coast President Don Ohlmeyer announced Thursday.

Cosby, who led the struggling NBC into ratings dominance in the 1980s with "The Cosby Show," will star in four two-hour movies described in an NBC statement as "light mystery." The specials will become a weekly one-hour mystery series in fall 1994.

The NBC movies and series will be produced in New York, as was "The Cosby Show."

The announcement was Ohlmeyer's first since the former producer and broadcast executive joined the troubled network, now in third place, in a newly created position earlier this month.

The new TV series would be Cosby's sixth in prime time TV. His first was NBC's "I Spy," a 1990s comedy-drama mystery series in which he co-starred with Robert Culp.

In January, CBS announced a reunion "I Spy" TV film with Cosby and Culp, also scheduled for next season.

"The Cosby Show," which ended its eight-year run on NBC last season, was TV's top-ranked series during the 1990s.

This season Cosby fared less well with his syndicated revival of the "You Bet Your Life" game show. Its viewership was less than half that forecast by its producers, and in December, Cosby announced that the show wouldn't be back next season.
