Warship News

United States, among the richest and most disliked nations on earth, lags far behind other leading powers in modern machinery of warfare. While France, Italy, England and Japan, have constantly enlarged and improved their army, navy, and air forces, the United States' defenses have steadily disintegrated since the World War. We talk of forcing foreign nations to pay their debts to us and we allow our army to shrink to a corporal's guard.

Actual expenditures by the various governments of the world do not reflect the true condition of our inadequate defense.

In 1931 the United States spent $707,000,000 on its army and navy leading all the other nations in the world in war appropriations. Second in line was France, preparing for another war with Germany, constructing impregnable fortresses, building huge underground cities, refuges from gas attacks, and perfecting vast air fleets, but spending only $541,000,000.

And Japan which at that time was conceiving a huge oriental empire and executing the campaigns in Manchuria and destroying the Chapel districts of Shanghai, spent only $234,000,000 on national defense. A depreciated yen in Japan and a devaluated franc in France enable those countries to accomplish a great deal more for less money than we in this country can.

In spite of our enormous expenditures we boast a standing army of only 182,000 officers and enlisted men. France has 607,000 in its regular army, with a separate air force of over 40,000 men. France also relies upon a trained reserve of over six million men. Italy's regular army consists of 467,000 men with a separate air force of 23,000. The British regular army includes 403,000 and a separate air force of 48,000. Japan has a regular army of 225,000, with nearly two million trained reserves.

As to the navy, we have done somewhat better but we still lag far behind our rivals under the London naval treaty. That treaty permits the United States 1,123,000 tons of fighting craft. A summary of U. S. ships of war last December showed this country's total tonnage to be 728,000. England's warship tonnage at that time was 983,000, and Japan's was 728,000, practically the same as this country's though the treaty ratio was as 6:5:3.

NO RESPECTOR OF PERSONS

Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness is accepted with him.—Acts 10:34, 35.

St. Petersburg is in the throes of a refunding agreement. It is more painful to give than to receive.

As one of the city prisoners put it the other day, he has been beaten up in some of the best jails in the country.

Gen. Johnson is said to be suffering with a slight case of blood poisoning. Must have been infected with some of that NRA arsenic.

Remember way back there in 1920 when the advice of most financial and political commentators was "Don't sell America short!"

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt just inherited $21,000,000 the other day. Well they say it is only three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves. And he's the third!

A Texas woman has been sentenced to all of five years for beating her husband to death. It must have occurred during the closed season on husbands.—Minn. Herald.

Admiral Byrd says he is going to claim for the United States a country bigger than America situated in the South Polar region. And after we get it, may be some of our northern collegias will hold their annual freshman snowball fights down there.

The great American "Buy Now" campaign is supposed to get under way on the first of October. Increased demand for goods is more likely to increase the price of goods. Those who view the "Buy Now" campaign optimistically and who are smart will buy now before the "Buy Now" campaign gets under way.

The court holds that Florida cannot borrow money to help unemployed because of its state constitution. But our state constitution does not prevent other states from borrowing from the federal government, and if they fail to repay such borrowings, it will not prevent us from having to pay our share in federal taxes so that the unemployed in other states can obtain relief. Smart unemployed in Florida may hitchhike to Pennsylvania.

During the past two months the business improvement of the early summer has taken something of a slump. The Department of Commerce's business chart, which is adjusted for seasonal fluctuations and which constitutes about the fairest indication of real business conditions that there is, shows that industrial production in July registered at 100, in September at 95; freight loadings had dropped from 65 to 55; exports from 48 to 38; and so on. Factory employment increased slightly as did payrolls, showing that the NRA had actually spread unemployment. But business itself isn't holding up so well.

It will be interesting to observe whether Gov. Sholtz orders a special election in Seminole County for the purpose of electing a successor to Bob Holly, who has just resigned as representative. There will be no point in going to the polls if there is no special election unless it is to be a special session of the Legislature, and Gov. Sholtz has repeatedly stated that there will be no special session if he has an election it will be fairly representative of a reasonable assumption that sometimes holding an election will be a special session. Of course the Governor does not have to hold a special session unless he has an election.

Fighting Streets

STRIBLING IS CRIPPLED FOR LIFE IN MISHAP

They said if Stribling lives he will owe his life to the presence of Miss Francis Jones, a registered nurse who was riding with Barrow. She fashioned her cape into a tourniquet and stopped the spurting blood from his severed leg, and made bandages from her dress.

The "king of the canebrakes" did not lose consciousness at the scene of the accident and as Barrow ran to him the fighter grinned and said "Well, kid, I guess it means there will be no more road work."

Mrs. Stribling was not told of the accident until some time after it occurred. "Pa" and "Ma" Stribling who became noted as the manager and trainer of their son, were enroute from Texas by automobile and could not be located immediately.

Stribling to the world at large was a clean young boxer who fought them all from the lowest to the highest but who never quite reached the top, but to his Mason friends he is a neighbor and fellow-well-met.

They know him as a boxer here but when "W. L." is at home they talk mostly of his independent basketball team on which he is the star player, or his activities in the Kiwanis club.

They also know him as a daring flier who goes about his business in airplanes and is good enough to hold a transport pilot's license and a commission in the army reserve corps.

His boxing career began when he was in his teens and the accident today ended it, two months short of his 29th birthday. During that time he fought three world's champions. Recently he won a newspaper decision over Max Baer, the light heavyweight king in Houston, Tex. It was his last fight.

Starting his ring life some 15 years ago, Stribling fought from coast to coast and abroad. He was often called "king of the canebrakes" because he fought so many second rate boxers in his quick hops about the country.

In 1923 he had two battles with Mike McTigue, then light heavy weight champion. The first in Columbus, Ga., brought about the famous controversy over Referee Harry Ertle's decision, which was changed three times before finally listed as a draw. In 1924 he was knocked out in the fifteenth round of his heavyweight championship fight with the then champion Max Schmeling in Cleveland.

In other major duels, Stribling lost to Paul Berlenbach in New York, to Ernie Schaaf in Chicago and to Jack Sharkey in Miami. He knocked out Phil Scott in London and won one bout and lost another, both on foals, with Primo

A Poor Way Out

Very frequently men in the public spotlight make statements on the spur of the moment for which they are sorry afterwards. It is regrettable that some of them seek to shift the responsibility of their words to newspapers, stating they were incorrectly quoted.

Such a case has arisen in tennis circles involving Ellsworth Vines, former national tennis champion. Vines was reported as having severely criticized the American Davis Cup strategy and later repudiated his statement, saying he was "terribly upset over such a falsehood."

The Associated Press, through whose facilities Vines' statement was given to the public, launched an investigation as soon as the tennis player impugned the correctness of the news stories. Its findings revealed that Vines was quoted, not only by one sports writer of unquestioned integrity and efficiency, but by several and that they were all unanimous in affirming that he did say what he was reported as saying.

One Boston writer who has been in the newspaper business longer than Vines has been breathing and who is one of the best-informed tennis writers in the country made the following statement: "Vines absolutely was not misquoted. I had a 40-minute talk with Vines on Tuesday of Newport Week and agreed to hold the story until after he was beaten at Los Angeles. As you know I have 23 years of sports writing experience and I do not misquote athletic celebrities."

The complete report of the Associated Press follows: (1) Vines, instead of repudiating remarks he made at Newport earlier in the summer, repeated and amplified them when he talked with sports writers on his return to Los Angeles.

(2) The former champion's categorical denial of criticism of Davis cup methods, made in a telegram to Bernon Prentice, of New York, captain of the American team, was dispatched after consultation with Perry Jones, secretary of the California Tennis Association.

— about Cigarettes

Of all the ways in which tobacco is used the cigarette is the mildest form

YOU know, ever since the Indians found out the pleasure of smoking tobacco, there have been many ways of enjoying it.

But of all the ways in which tobacco is used, the cigarette is the mildest form.

Another thing—cigarettes are about the most convenient smoke. All you have to do is strike a match.

Everything that money can buy and everything that science knows about is used to make Chesterfields.

The right home-grown tobacco—seasoned with just enough aromatic Turkish—are blended and processed—blended the Chesterfield way.

Then the cigarettes are made right—firm, well-filled. Chesterfield uses the right kind of pure cigarette paper.

There are other good cigarettes, of course, but Chesterfield is the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better.

Chesterfields satisfy—we ask you to try them.

HAVANA TOLL 4 DEAD AND 89 WOUNDED

City On Trigger Edge After Wild Night; Many Blame U.S. For Not Taking Action

HAVANA, Oct. 3.—(A.P.)—Warfare in which 44 were killed and 89 wounded left Havana today on trigger edge. Through the night bullets whizzed in streets and the city discovered that a truce had not yet been called. What the A.B.O. Society would do stood out as today's major enigma.

Enlisted men of the army and students enjoyed the United States had not "interfered," but many Cubans mourned their dead and blamed the United States for not acting to prevent the bloodshed.

Bullets still pattered Havana's streets last night as even the surrender of besieged officers in the National Hotel failed to bring peace after the bloodiest day in the city's history.

After an all-day battle soldiers trooped riotously into the hotel, finding no resistance. With pandemonium due to street fighting and the looting of the hotel, the shooting apparently was mistaken by the officers for violation of the truce and they re-opened fire from the top floors of the hotel, shooting into groups of civilians and soldiers on the streets.

Soldiers returned the fire for 20 minutes, after which all the officers surrendered peacefully and were taken either to prison or hospital.

Afterwards snipers and soldiers began to exchange shots over the (Continued On Page Two)

Motorists Warned To Observe Law In Respect To Busses

Just as he did last year on the opening day of Seminole County's school, Superintendent of Schools E. W. Lawton called the attention of all motorists this morning to a state law which requires that all automobiles must be brought to a stop on any highway upon which a school bus is either loading or unloading passengers.

Several bus drivers visited Mr. Lawton's office yesterday to request that several changes be made in the law. He said that the law is a thing of great importance. The state law was passed by the thoughtful legislator who had seen the necessity for the drastic penalties contained in the law. We should have a law enforced by police and sheriff office heads as soon as possible, by living the letter of the law.

Attempt Made On Life Of Dollfus

VIENNA, Oct. 3.—(A.P.)—Chancellor Engelbert Dollfus was slightly wounded in two places by a would-be assassin today at an hour after receiving treatment at a hospital he was able to go home and continue with his official duties. One shot struck his left arm and the other grazed his left breast when he was fired upon at the entrance of the parliament building. "That was a close one," he remarked to friends as he left the hospital and walked smilingly to his automobile. A young ex-soldier, recently discharged from the army and whose political connections the police were not immediately able to trace, was arrested in connection with the shooting and police began a roundup of all political suspects.
