Carter Announces Sweeping Welfare Reform Program

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter Saturday proposed scrapping the existing welfare system in favor of a $34 billion plan be required of single parents with children aged 7 to 14. A family of four in this category would have its $4,200 annual payment to provide cash for those who can't work and to move those who can off welfare and into jobs.

Carter called the present welfare system "anti-work and antifamily, unfair to the poor and wasteful of taxpayers' dollars," and told a nationally broadcast news conference in a prepared statement, "We must make a complete and clean break with the But he acknowledged, "There is no perfect solution for these difficult problems." The most surprising of several major concessions outlined by Carter in his statement and accompanying message to Congress was a decision to discard his stated goal of putting no additional bite on the treasury, at least at the start. He said he was proposing $2.8 billion in added spending, but this figure did not include an additional $3.3 billion cost to the treasury in new tax credits for wage earners who pay income tax. Carter outlined these major provisions: -No work will be required for the aged, blind, disabled and single parents of children under age seven. They will be eligible for $4,200 a year for a family of four. -Part-time work which does not interfere with child care will reduced by 50 cents for each dollar earned. -Fulltime work would be expected of two-parent families, single persons, childless couples and single parents with no child under age 14, if the jobs are available. Whether work is available or not, a family of four in this category would get $2,300 a year. But if work is available, the family would lose 50 cents from the $2,300 welfare payment for each dollar of earnings more than $3,800.

-Up to 1.1 million public service jobs would be created at or slightly above the $2.30-an-hour minimum wage. -To encourage employment in private jobs, expanded tax credits would be available to low-and modest-income workers up to a maximum of well over $600 for a family of four. These would apply in private and nonsubsidized public jobs. By comparison, combined state and federal benefits in Aid for six months. Families with Dependent Children now vary from $720 a year in Mississippi to $5,954 in Hawaii for a family of four.

Carter supplied no figures for the number of persons in each of his new categories. The nation currently has 23.4 million welfare

Carter's proposals will get special treatment in Congress.

Recommends The Cheapest

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dramatizing his displeasure with recent increases in steel prices, President Carter is ordering the Pentagon and General Services Administration to buy steel wherever it is cheapest. The President also told the Council on Wage and Price Stability to recommend what the government could do to moderate future price increases. Although the Pentagon and GSA account for only a small percentage of the steel industry's sales, Carter clearly hopes the action will encourage some companies to forego new prices increases. maintaining a split price system.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF Power User Charge Heuring Called For By PSC Chairman

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - The chairman of the Public Service Commission has called for a hearing to learn how much Florida Power Corp. customers were overcharged during an oil embargo four years ago.

Mrs. Paula Hawkins issued a press release Friday calling for company officials to help determine "the amount of overcharges and to demonstrate why it should not be ordered to immediately refund this amount to its customers."

His Wife Doesn't Like City

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - A finalist for the presidency of Florida A&M University has dropped out because his wife doesn't like Tallahassee.

Dr. Richard Trent, 52, founder of Medgar Evers College in New York, told Chancellor E.T. York that his wife didn't like Florida's capitol city. That leaves only three finalists in contention for the post.

The finalists include Drs. Paul Mohr Sr., Andrew Robinson and Walter Smith. Trent already told York that he had taken a job in California.

rolled over and lay submerged a a pond for 38 minutes. key orientie is that cold water, betow do degrees Fahr-Cunningham, 18, recalled "struggling, inhaling water and enheit, lowers body temperature, slowing blood flow, with the brain needing less oxygen. Such cooling of the body is frequently done to permit openheart surgery without brain injury. Another defense is the "mammalian diving reflex" that permits air-breathing seals and porpoises to stay under water for 30 minutes or so.

The reflex slows heart beat. Less blood is pumped to tissues such as muscle, skin and gut, that can get along with little oxygen; more goes to the brain and tissues needing more oxygen. Humans experience this reflex, but to a lesser degree, when the * face is immersed in water cooler than 68 degrees F, Dr. Nemiroff says. The face somehow triggers the reactions for the diving

The heart slows. There can be no detectable breathing, no pulse at the wrist. The skin gets little blood and turns blue and cold. The eyes can become fixed and dilated

"To the lay person and even to some experts, the patient apears clinically dead," Dr. Nemiroff says, but might be saved with quick and aggressive rescue efforts. Police, emergency medical technicians and the public "must learn that just because someone looks dead when you pull him from the water, you don't just say, 'Well, that one's gone,' and forget it," says Dr. Nemiroff, assistant professor of internal edicine, pulmonary division, at the medical school. The colder the water, the more profound the diving reflex, with perhaps more protection for the brain, he adds. The reflex is stronger or more active in children and young people, and rescue should be tried particularly with toddlers who drown in cold There is much less reflex effect in warmer waters.

Another protective mechanism is the concept of "dry drowning." The first in-rush of cold water may cause spasm of the larynx. This protects the lungs from drawing in water, but the person may become asphyxiated. If taken from the water soora enough, persons who haven't flooded their lungs may have rapid recoveries with standard heart-lung resuscitation. Ten to 15 per cent of drownings may be the "dry" kind.

Centennial Issue: Sit Back And Enjoy

"SANFORD. The Gate City and Celery Center of South Florida, located on the South shore of Lake Monroe, a beautiful sheet of water five miles wide and twelve miles long, East and West.

Sanford is connected with the North by the Plant System of Railways and the Clyde Line of Steamers, via the historic St. Johns River. From Sanford diverge five railways to Southeast, Southwest and South Florida.

Within a radius of five miles of the city there is enough Celery land to supply the United States, and with alluvial soil, natural drainage, and artesian irrigation, the Celery Industry is assured, and Sanford destined to become the Celery Center of the Union."

The description above was affixed in the upper right-hand corner of the official stationery of the City of Sanford following its incorporation on Sept. 29, 1877. And that is the way the city was viewed in its early days.

Now - 100 years, a century later - much has changed. But not all.

The City of Sanford today is a combination of the old and the new - the old flavor and the new realities.

It is in the core of a burgeoning area, an area headed for a growth outburst assuredly not ever envisioned when General Henry Shelton Sanford first purchased 12,535 acres in 1870 and laid out the town that was to bear his name.

But, at the same time, the city has managed to retain much of its old-time, historic favors and nuances.

This is what has made Sanford the pleasant place to live for the many families whose ancestors date back to the early founding days. And to many who have come here to seek shelter from the frustrations and hassles of the North.

Today's special Centennial edition, published as part of your regular Sunday Herald, reviews and reminisces about the past 100 years, reflects on the present and even the future. So, lean back - and enjoy.

Relax, Senator

Ever since telephone companies began relaying long distance telephone calls through microwave transmitters, it has been technically possible to eavesdrop without resorting to the more obvious practice of wiretapping.

Someone willing to invest in the expensive and complex equipment and locate it in the right place could tune in on ransmissions between relay stations and listen in on some of the 15 million long-distance conversations conducted via microwave every day.

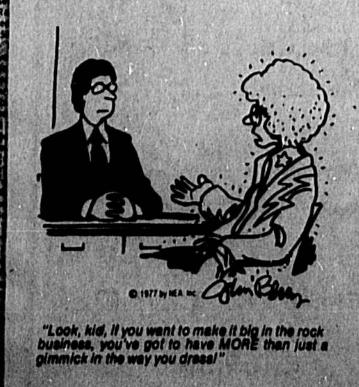

This kind of electronic eavesdropping, like wiretapping, is patently against federal law. Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan is aroused by the amount of it he suspects is going on, especially by Soviet agents. We're not as worried, however, since our overument for years has used "scramblers" and other technical devices to make phone conversations dealing with national security unintelligible. President Carter alluded to this in a recent news conference, and indicated that passive listening echniques are a tool of intelligence-gathering that governments have to tolerate.

As for Sen. Moynihan's concern for the vulnerability of our private long-distance calls to eavesdropping, we can't see the need for new federal regulations. The law protects civilians against surveillance without court orders by our own intelligence agencies that might possess eavesdropping equip-ment. The number of private citizens whose phone conversations might interest foreign agents is minuscule. A business firm with secrets valuable enough to induce a rival to invest in a secret microwave pickup station and risk jail o use it can afford its own security measures.

Microwave relay has given us an amazingly efficient and conomical way to handle the country's huge volume of long distance telephone traffic. Demanding that the system be overhauled to prevent eavesdropping would only erode its ef-ficiency and drive up the cost of calls. Sen. Moynihan should Casselberry Mayor Gerald Christensen stunned colleagues at a recent meeting of the Council of Local Governments in Seminole County when he predicted that the new state law on mandated fees for traffic offenses will ultimately lead to the attempted and sometime successful bribery of police officers by violators.

He said he could foresee citizens stopped for running a stop sign ottering an officer something, rather than facing a minimum $57.75 fine.

Christensen added that the law also is certain to result in more people taking traffic citations to court and appealing to the humanity and sympathy of county judges rather than automatically paying fines now that they are so high.

Alan Dickey, elected only last fall, but chosen by his colleagues on the county bench, Wallace Hall and Harold Johnson, as administrative judge of the county court, agreed that logic would seem to say that more people will be coming to court with their traffic offenses.

Dickey appeared at the council of governments meeting by invitation of city representatives seeking some assurance that the county judges will not waive the portion of the fines which are returned to city and county coffers since high mandated fees must also be collected. The mandated fees are forwarded to the state for the crimes compensation trust fund and the good drivers compensation fund.

"Under the law, we cannot take your revenue into consideration," Dickey said. "I don't consciously cut fines, but I may have," he said. The judge said that most of the people who appear in his traffic court are men with two or three children and a wife to support on an $80 to $100 weekly take home pay. He cited a recent example where a family man in the above circumstances appeared in the court charged with two offenses. By the time Dickey levied the "minimum" fine and the mandatory fees were added on plus the cost of attending driving school the total exceeded $400.

The judge said the man waited until after court to tell him he didn't have that much money and the judge agreed to permit the fine to be paid on the installment plan at $15 a week with the payments to

Rapport In First 6 Months

From his Inaugural walk down Pennsylvania Avenue to his shirtsleeves chat with the people of Yazoo City, Miss., Carter has given the average citizen a president to identify with.

He has done so through the most skillful use of television of any politician in memory. By intuition or design, and it probably

He speaks to us in tones that are conversational, not condescending. He is serious. but not somber. He dresses for the occasion - a sweater for the fireside energy talk in the dead of winter, shirtsleeves for the sweltering high school at Yazoo City. We understand instantly; it is the way we act ourselves.

George Reedy, Lyndon Johnson's first White House press secretary, said last March at a National Town Meeting program in Washingtion that Carter is "the first real television president."

It seemed, at first blush, an extravagant claim. What about John F. Kennedy, who is usually given that designation? Or Johnson, Nixon and Ford - all of whom relied heavily or television to communicate with the public? But Reedy explained what he meant, and he was right. Kennedy, he said, was "a man of words who used television to see that those words got a much wider audience." Johnson and Nixon were dreadful on television, losing ground every time they went on that in fact they consider it necessary. the tube. Ford was neither enlarged nor diminished by the medium.

Carter, on the other hand, understands the "a medium that communicates words very poorly," a medium that is preeminently visual, not verbal.

Carter is not a man of words. His prose is utilitarian, not inspiring. DON OAKLEY More Are Returning To Cities

It hardly amounts to a reversal of the trend of the past few decades, but for a variety of reasons more and more middleclass whites are moving back into the cities. And in an ironic twist to the usual pattern, they are displacing residents who had filled the vacuum left by the previous generation's flight to the suburbs.

The phenomenon is occurring in a number of major cities but is especially eveldent in Washington, D.C. Reported to be 71 per cent black in the 1970 census, Washington has begun gaining white population again, mostly young, college-educated and affluent.

Unfortunately, in the process of reviving decaying neighborhoods and turning dilapidated tenements into fancy townhouses, the newcomers are forcing out people who can't afford the stiff new rents.

According to one news story, "Like displaced war refugees, thousands of the poor are floating from one neighborhood to another. A rain of eviction notices is falling on tenants, spreading fear and resentment. Many will move a short distance, only to be evicted again as the reclamation moves deeper into the black and Hispanic areas."

The problem was major topic of discussion at the recent annual meeting of the National Association of Neighborhoods in Pittsburgh, where one community leader from Columbus, Ohio, asked: "Who are we rehabilitating neighborhoods for? For the people who are there or for the middle class moving back in?"

On the one hand, the middle-class influx boosts sagging tax bases and enables a city to afford better police protection and other services. It leads to a commercial revival. This, after all, is what urban renewal is supposed to be favored by a majority of top management, and investment accounts. Kimbrough confirmed Friday the rumors racing through the county courthouse, namely that he would be moving to Virginia in October to accept a promotion from Schering Corp.

The county was a bit different when Kimbrough was first elected to the commission in 1970 when the population was #3.692. There are now 140,000 county residents, a jump of two-thirds in just seven years.

Kimbrough was only the second Republican in history to be elected to the commission, but he frequently appointed Democrats to positions that were considered party patronage jobs, a situation that did not endear him to GOP stalwarts. Democratic Gov. Reubin Askew will

Football:

By ANDY GIRARDI Herald Correspondent

Days are still hot and evenings warm, but as summer enters its waning moments, fall begins to take shape.

One can almost smell football in the air. Within the month area students will be swapping summer fun for text books.

Football players get sore muscles and lose a few pounds of sweat in the trade. Will things be any different than in the past? Will

Bottom Line That Counts

Neil Makin is something of a wizard of odds around the Seminole Harness Raceway in that the general manager is starring at the track's most successful year financially, despite mutuel handle being slightly off last year's figures.

"It's the bottom line that counts," said Makin, heading into the final eight performances of the season, which winds up Aug. 15. "And we are ahead of any previous year in dollars and cents. We look for a strong finish, and a better season next year." In the meantime, Makin isn't having much luck with takers on the free automobile he is trying to give away in the pick 'em contest.

At stake is a new 1977 Mercury Comet. All anyone has to do to claim the keys to the car is pick a perfect race card - name the winner in each race

"I've had a few perfect cards the next morning." mused Makin. "but so far no one has done BEFORE the evening's races. But the car will be HIT SANFORD given away. If no one picks a perfect card between now and closing night, the one who has picked the most in a row starting on the first race will win the car." The gentleman currently holding his breath is Jerry Brown. He's the leader so far.

Seminole has given away weekly prizes of trips to Key West and monthly prizes of windjammer cruises all summer.

Seminole's closing will go as scheduled, but most track officials had expected the state to grant it the 15-day extension which was denied earlier this week.

"I think this is what they call 'turning the corner,' "said Makin. "Now that we are past the stage of people wondering from day to day if the track was going to fold, we see signs that point to much brighter days.

History will be made at Seminole Harness Raceway Tuesday when all 24 districts of the Florida Elks will combine for a "Night at the Races" with the proceeds going to their favorite charity, the Harry Anna Hospital for children.

The hospital is being built and the funds are sorely needed, which has Elks state-wide pulling out all stops to meet the necessary quota to complete the project

In addition, on the same night the finals of the radio celebrities will be held. This group includes: Jerry Allen of WTRR in Sanford; Jim Sharp of Leesburg's WELE; Bill Stamper of WDBO, Orlando; and Gary Roberts of WDIZ, Orlando.

On Wednesday, the newspaper finals will be held, including Jean Patteson and Jim Haynes of the Evening Herald; Harry Skop of the Metro News; Kerry Snelker of the Seminole Citizen News; Mae Moore of the Daily Highlander; and Thea DiPinto of Orlandoland magazine. Television finals have already been held with Buddy Pittman and Scott Harris of Channel 2 making the finals against two newspaper and two radio qualifiers Thursday last year's losers win? Will the winners lose? It's too early to tell. Florida schools begin practice on Aug. 15.

Last year belonged to Seminole, posting a 10-0 record only to be disqualified before playoff action began because of an ineligible player. Most of the other teams in Seminole County had poor seasons. Lake Brantley, Oviedo, Lyman, and Lake Howell had losing records. The question at Lake Brantley is when coach Jim Raley's system will start showing up in the win column.

Well, Since You Asked...

Q. What's this about Joe Namath being the number two quarerback on the Los Angeles Rams? Do you really think they're erious? - J.F., Anaheim, Calif.

Just lip service. You don't pay a couple of hundred grand a ear, or whatever it is the Rams are giving Joe Willie, just to have im set on the bench. And that business of saving him for the stretch run to the Super Bowl is just a lot of baloney, too, because team develops continuity with one quarterback. I think the Rams are just protecting themselves against the possibility of Namath being unable physically to play. And also to make Pat Haden, their young incumbent, feel better.

Q. What was the longest baseball game? What were the teams, ad what was the score? Joe Zoppala, Brea, Calif. The longest game ever played was between the Brooklyn The longest game ever played was between the Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves on May 1, 1920. It went 26 innings and ended in a 1-1 tie, called on account of darkness. The real oddity was that starting pitcher Leon Cadore of the Dodgers and Joe Oeschger of the Braves each went all the way. Q. How many teams has Reggie Jackson played for? - Allen Barton, Evansville, Ind.

I assume you mean in the major leagues. The tally is now three well, actually four if you consider the fact he started with the Kansas City A's at the end of the 1967 season. They became the Oakland A's in '68, and he stayed with them through '75, played with the Baltimore Orioles in 1976 and signed with the Yankees this year. In the minors, he made stops at Lewiston, Modesto and

Q. What did you think of the verdict in the George Atkinson ader case against the Pittsburgh Steelers and Chuck Noll? -R.M., Savannah, Ga.

The question is not what I think. It's what the jury thought. I do feel their verdict was heavily influenced by the fact that Atkinson had received bad publicity in a couple of previous scrapes that had brought him into court, publicity which had not damaged his career. However, I also feel that Coach Noll's comments about "a criminal element" were over-reactive. Finally, the whole mess, which resulted in Atkinson losing the case, could have been avoided if both parties had shown any kind of conciliatory at-

Q. Before Tom Seaver was traded from the New York Mets, he said Los Angeles was one of four places he wanted to play. Did that include the California Angels, or was that strictly for the Dodgers? - W.L. Fischer, Santa Ana, Calif.

I'm sure he meant only the Dodgers. It's inconceivable Seaver would have been waived by every team in the National League so he could have been peddled over to the American Leagues Angels. Q. Would you please explain the 3-4 defense that all the teams in the National Football League seem to be going to, and why its sudden popularity? - R.G., Elizabeth, N.J. Nothing breeds success like success. The 3-4, which is really an offshoot of the old Oklahoma college football formation, uses three front linemen and four linebackers. It was pioneered as a run homer and Frank Tanana fulltime alignment in pro ball by the Houston Oilers and New won his first game since July 3 England Patriots a couple of years ago, but now that the Oakland Raiders used it to sweep to the Super Bowl last year, other teams ifornia over Baltimore. are jumping on the wagon-San Diego, Philadelphia and Cincoverage and is still effective against the run, especially if you've got a linebacker like the Raider's Ted Hendrickson who can also step in front and perform like a lineman.

Q. In Rod Carew's quest for a .400 batting mark, little mention is made of the fact that with the new artificial surfaces he can get a lot more infield hits by punching the ball through on that slick, hard turf. Don't you agree? - T.Y., Santa Ana, Calif.

I would, except that only three of the 14 ball parks in the American League use artificial turf - Toronto, Seattle and Kansas City. The National League leans a lot more to artificial surfaces. Carew gets his estimated 40 infield hits a season because of sheer speed and bat expertise. I think it was Ted Williams who said he could bunt .400 if he wanted to. Q. How big is George Atkinson, the defensive back of the Oakland Raiders who is supposed to go around bruising people? Where is he from? - L.N., Alameds, Calif.

George is the most unlikely bruiser you've ever seen. He's six feet and 182 pounds and looks even slimmer than that because of a small upper torso and thin face. When he came to the Oakland Raiders in 1968, out of Morris Brown University, he weighed almost 10 pounds less than that. Originally, he's from Savannah, Ga., but now makes his home year round in Oakland, where he's in the real estate business and other enterprises. O. J understand that Jorge Orta and Richie Zisk, who've been so insportant in the rise of the Chicago White Sox to first place, are unsigned. Is Bill Veeck going to be able to keep them after this sensor? — K.R., Bloomington, III. I think so. Veeck-as-in-wreck has done a masterful job of uggling both the personnel and finances of the Chisox in the two years he has had the club. Orta, settled down at second base, and Zisk, who has added home run punch to the lineup, want the usual astronomical sums that free agents are now demanding. But Veeck is in a position to pay them since he dealt off shortstop Bucky Dent and pitcher Ken Brett earlier this year, not only getting rid of healthy salaries but adding cash to the Sox coffers. Q. What is being done to increase the accuracy of officiating in rofessional games? And if nothing is, why not? -- Gary Capellar,

You can't knock professional sports in this area. This exhibition eason, for instance, the National Football League is exerimenting with a seventh official, on top of the normal six, who will be stationed in the middle secondary to help pick up pass infractions. The National Basketball Association has been tinkering with three officials during a game to ease the load of detecting penalties. And you'll notice that baseball has increased its complement of umpires over the years.

Q. In the Lucious Allen trade, did the Kanses City Kings give up their own No. 1 draft choice in 1978 or the No. 1 pick of the New York Nets, which the Kings have? What do you think of the trade and the Kings? - M.B., Kokomo. Ind.

The Los Angeles Lakers will receive the Kings' first and second round picks in 78 and also get forward Oilie Johnson. They gave up Allen because he was playing out his option anyhow. That leaves the Kings exceptionally strong in the backcourt, despite trading Brian Taylor, because they'll have Allen, high-scoring Ron Boone and have drafted touted rockie Otis Birdsong. The Taylor trade produced towering Tom Burleson to play center, and it forward they really have Richard Washington and Scott Vedman. I look for them to be an improved team.

Monroe Harbour situated on the shores of Lake Monroe is truly a full service marina. Hookups, gas island, hardware sales and mechanical service insure a one-stop operation for the enjoyment of all boaters. Dockage, both open and covered, will accommodate and cater to small vessels as well as the larger yachts. For those who prefer to trailer their boat, five sloped concrete ramps at no charge with ample parking for cars is available. New owners and operators are Charles Volk and his wife, Mary Helen, who are in partnership with Joe Maino and wife, Dorothy. They say, "this is our dream come true."

Joe and Chuck are both avid hunters and fishermen who were longtime friends in Chicago. When they acquired the marina it was with the thought in mind, "now we can work and fish in a climate we both enjoy and no more freezing winters."

Long range plans call for expansion of sales, service and accommodations second to none. Alternations to the large dry dock building along with fresh paint is just a small indication that Joe

Lads And Lassie's Shine

- On Monday nights since early summer, Lads and Lassies league has been rolling. Made up of members of the AJBC, and ranging in ages from 12 to 19, put on a show this last week that had the adults bowling in other leagues on other lanes wonder what was going on in the 1-10 lanes.
- These youngsters were doing some fantastic bowling. Chuck Hall, a lad of 16, bowled a 279 game and a 638 series scratch. "James Martin, also 16, had a 661 scratch series. Chuck's 279 is purported to be a record for a bowler in AJBC ranks as a high for a single game. On Saturday, a week ago, John Jenkins rolled a 216 game and a 607 series. Stacy Stafford, a young lady of 12, rolled a 220 game, and James Martin bowled a 247 game and a 629 629 series. Sounds as though these youngsters have a great bowling future ahead of

Results of the Youngster-Adult tournament held Sunday, July 31 are in. Garnering top honors for the Bantams with a 999 handicap series was Bantam John King and his teammate Frank Kaska. In the Jr.-Sr. division, with 1145 handicap series won it for Danny Berry and his teammate. Ray de Groat. Helen Barbour, youth director for these youngsters, announces that the new winter league for the Bantams and Jr. & Srs. will begin Saturday, September 10th with Bantams starting at 10:00 (Torresibe 3-2) a.m. and the Jr. & Sr. group starting at 1:00 p.m.

Around The Leagues (Summer)

FLAGSHIP BANK MIXED: Don Gorman came up with another 601 scratch series. In the past month and a half, Don has done some terrific bowling with series in the upper 600 and lower 700 bracket. Those are scratch scores. His 199 average attests to his ability to consistently come up with those high scoring games and Texas at Detroit series. Wouldn't be a bit surprised to hear about him coming up with a 300 game, not at the rate he is going.

SHOOTING STARS: The Mayfair Country Club team of this league boasts that the leading high averages go to three of their members. Wendy Boness 163, Carol Slaughter 158, and Mary Johnson 155.

T.G.L.F. Leading the scratch games with high is Cathy McNabb with a 268, followed by Linda Lewis with a 262. Butch MacAteer has the high scratch game for the men with a 271. Reuben Blake a close second with 270. Mark Quick's 699 series total is the high for the men but not too far behind is Butch MacAteer with a 695.

Georgia Maples 679 is the high series for the distaffers. Three highest averages for the men are Eric Storm 184. Mark Quick 178. and Jr. Lewis 177. Leading the ladies with high average is Linda Lewis with a 173, closest to her is Dorine MacAteer with 167. DYNATRONICS: This league was very proud of their Star of the Week. Thelma Taylor is her name and she bowled 101 pins above her average which is under the 100 mark. Her team is called "Gritty" and she really lived up to that name with a great night of bowling.

show how good they are. In the Jamboree, Coach Jerry Posey went with Chad Roll, Alvin Sweet, and Morris Barber. The backfield will consist mainly of those three, each of whom had a good Jamboree. Seminole's challenge: Get the running game going again and have another fine season.

For Lake Howell things are different. Coach Curtis Keen has many concerns. Keen's school was Class AAA last year and has now jumped to a AAAA schedule. Still Keen is hopeful of the upcoming season, he feels as all the coaches do this time of the year. He feels he has a chance. Lyman's problem is the loss of players. Most of the team will be new faces this fall, most coming from the JV squad of a year ago. What Coach Dick Copeland sees as his best improvement is the attitude his team has assumed. "Enthusiasium says it all." Copeland said, "and we have it."

Oviedo has basically the same team and although head coach Joe Montgomery said he knew the club had improved, no one knows if Oviedo is capable of playing the way it did in the Jamboree.

The Lions won both quarters, beating the likes of Lake Brantley and Seminole. Trinity Prep is the other school in the county and they are a different story than most of Seminole County's teams.

Trinity Prep is coming off a good season last Year. It lost Norbert Seals, who signed to play at Harvard this season, but the showing in the Jamboree despite poor opposition was a good one.

Palmer Miles and Brent Matthews played well in the Jamboree and the backfield looked strong. As for the rest of the team the defense looked good but went untested. Trinity is planning another Jamboree for early September in which we may get a better look at what kind of team it has,

Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977 earlier this year. Here is a brief rundown on some of the most important provisions of that law, which, despite its name, will probably not do much to reduce or simplify your taxes.

Standard Deduction and Tax

The Act builds the standard aduction into the tax rate ables (it's no longer a separate deduction) and sets it at a flat rate of $3,200 for joint returns. and $2,200 for single taxpayers.

Fourteen-five is hardly a salary to be sniffed at. But $14,500 wasn't enough to hold Richard Hittell at his Sanford letter carrier job.

"No matter what the benefits are like, no matter what money you're making, if you're not happy, it's not worth it." said Hittell.

So July 15, after four years with the post office, he quit to open a produce stall. "Business is slowly picking up," smiled Hittell, as he

Full of fun. Full of humor. And with a oneliner to suit every occasion.

The jovial director of the Altamonte Springs Civic Center, who spent most of his life on the vaudeville circuit, is about to see his dream of a vaudeville revival come true. Just for three nights, admittedly. But that's enough to put Rose on Cloud Nine - along with all his old favorite songs, dances and comedy acts.

August 12, 13 and 14 his dream comes true - when Dimensions 4000 presents "Vaudeville Tonight!" at the Altamonte Civic Center. The family-style show will be directed by Cher Stempler of Dimensions 4000, a local theatre group. But chief consultant, emcee and mainstay of the comedy routines will be the inimitable Eddie Rose.

"It's strictly for local people who have talent and want to show it and have some fun," is how Rose describes "Vaudeville Tonight!"

"I've written a couple of old burlesque skits," said Rose, button eyes sparkling, "and we've got a cute chorus line - you know, girls doing the old Roxy-type kick numbers."

The show will also feature a variety of singers, from "sweet soprano," to blues, to Jolson-type and even a "Red Hot Mama." Plus a cornedy team and a magic act by a nine-year-old and his kid sister.

"All the good old stuff," chuckled Rose, and for a moment his eyes grew misty with memories of the vaudeville greats: Red Skelton, Jack Bennie and Mary Livingstone, Sophie Tucker, Jimmy Durante, The Ritz Brothers, Harry Richman.

"Also Eddie Cantor," suggested Rose. "You know, 'If you knew Suzie, like I know Warmed by the to nillar tune, he sashayed into another Cantor favorite. "Another bride, another groom,

Another sunny honeymoon, Da-da da-da, da-da da-da. Making whoopee!'

Ah yes, the good old days. Eddie remembers them well. "Vaudeville." He ponders the moment.

"Well, I guess you'd call it a kind of musical review, but with absolutely no story line. It's a showcase for singers, dancers, comedians." Vaudeville peaked in the days before television, said Rose. In the days when every neighborhood theatre worth its red velve curtains and gold-braided ushers offered weekly a cartoon, a newsreel, a movie and a vaudeville show.

"Then the unions came in, and that was the end of vaudeville," sighed Rose. "Suddenly they wanted four guys to pull the curtains open and four shifts of two men to work the spotlight, plus 20 men in the pit to play the Rose admits he may be exaggerating a little about the demands made by the unions - but not about their effect on his beloved vaudeville.

These outfits - often small, raggle-taggle affairs held together with nothing more than a spirit of good fellowship and the desire to be before the bright lights - couldn't stand up to union demands and regulation and salaries. And besides, by the early fifties, television was really coming into its own.

A number of vaudeville stars - Milton Berle, Mickey Rooney - adapted to the new electronic medium, and even today TV's variety specials are nothing more than cleaned-up rewrites of vaudeville's favorite burlesque routines, according to Rose.

Born and raised in Newark, N.J. - (Jerry Lewis went to my school") - Rose started out in vaudeville at an early age as a tumbler. In high school and college he worked shows on the weekends, and soon after that started doing nightclub acts.

"My whole life's been show biz," he explains in a rapid, husky voice which still has Newark, N.J. in every nuance. "The best thing about vaudeville was that everyone knew everyone. Everyone helped everyone. It was 't dog-ent-dog like show business today." In the old days, versatility and imrovisation were the name of the gas

Happiness Is...Being Own Boss

Hittell grew up in Sanford. He knows the local farmers. And during the season, he plans to get most of his produce from them. Right now, he buys from United Produce at the Sanford Farmers Market.

He leases his stall from the farmer on whose land it sits. just back from the highway right-of-way. Already he's working on plans to get electricity so he can install a cooler to keep his produce fresh overnight, and he has other little improvements in mind.

It's hard work and long hours - 9:30 to 7, six days a week. But to Hittell, it's worth it.

"All I want is to provide a service to the people, make a comfortable living, and sell the freshest produce for reasonable prices."

Hittell is delighted with the positive new attitude he has developed - and so are his wife and two daughters, he says with a smile.

"Being my own boss," is what he likes best about his new venture. "There's no thumb pressing me down. I feel I can sprout out and be myself. And when you feel like that, everyone around you is happier." - JEAN PATTESON.

Starke: 50 Years In Medicine (Continued from Page 1-C) strongest and brightest set off for Lakeland inthreads in the fabric of stead. But on the way he was diverted by a doctor in Orlando who persuaded him to come to Sanford instead. On Sept. 15, 1927, Dr. Starke opened his first practice in a small space above the old "Jerry's

Drug Store" on Sanford Avenue. "The town was pretty small in those days. There were only nine or ten other doctors here," recalled Starke. "But I was in a good location because a lot of people traded up and down Sanford Avenue. especially on Saturdays and Mondays. Those were the days the people came in from the farms." Those were also the days when doctors made house calls, and Dr. Starke remembers driving out into the surrounding farm communities to deliver babies or answer emergency accident calls.

He had hoped to specialize in obstetrics and gynecology, but found himself answering the need in the small community for a family doctor and surgeon as well.

He had been in Sanford just a short while when he was accepted by Harvard University to do his residency at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. He was one of only four black doctors to be accepted -'and they kept a close watch on us," smiled the

over the years, one of the

But despite the fact that many of his patients were white, it was not until 1947 that Dr. Starke was able to work in the old Fernald-Laughton Hospital. "The answer was always the same - 'closed staff.' said Starke.

In 1947, he became the first black doctor to hold membership in the Seminole Medical ssociation - he was also the first black member of the Florida Medical Association, and the second in the American Medical Association.

In the beginning, said Dr. Starke, his attempts at improving race relations were mainly on a one-toone basis. Later he helped found, and serve as vice president of the city's Biracial Commission. Its goals were to improve ving conditions and seek better jobs and higher pay for blacks, and to obtain better schools for all children. "Apparently it has changed," said Dr. Starke of black-white relationships in the community "Children today don't have respect for the structures in society. Their attitude generally does not seem as good as in the old days."

While he has been involved in fraternities, odites, and housing and recreation projects over the years, and most recently in the Night Fire interdenominational church gatherings in the city, Dr. Starke's main devotion has always been to medicine.

"I'm one of those people who felt I never needed more than four hours sleep a night. I've kept office hours till one, two in the morning and then answered house calls to deliver two or three babies.

"That was my life, and I've enjoyed it." Dr. Starke attributes much of his devoted service to the principles he was taught in medical school. "We were taught, number one, that our life is not our own but belongs to our clientele. And number two, that it was our job to alleviate pain by whatever method possible.

"Also, that we were to answer the call whether the patient had finances or not. In all the years, I don't think I've asked two people if they could pay for the treatment I was giving them," said the doctor. "It was these principles that spurred me on and on through the years." His wife, Ruth, who died a year ago last January, maintained the business side of his practice during their long life together.

Dr. Starke had planned to retire in September, on his 50th anniversary. But now it rather depends on whether he can get a eplacement in time. And besides, the doctor is becoming increasingly reluctant to leave his practice.

"It seems when a man retired he becomes inactive; he loses his reason for living. And he dies," said Dr. Starke. "So I'll probably continue working after September - even if its only parttime."

The Ladies Association Club sponsored a pot luck-get acquainted dinner for many of the clubs and organizations of the community. This affair was held at the home of Mrs. Mattie Holt, 1827 Hawkins Ave. Mrs. Holt is president of the Ladies Association. Enjoying the evening were members of the Les Bon Amies Club, Westside

Jimmy Carter's younger brother Billy is cashing in on his presidential brotherhood earning an estimated $500,000 this year in personal appearances alone, not counting what he'll get from the family peanut business (which grosses $5 million a year).

Jim: Muppets Analyzed

What are Muppets? According to creator Jim Hensen, Muppets are a cross between a marionette and a puppet - having the heads of hand puppets and the hands and torsos of stringed marionettes. But how are Muppets created?

Explains Hensen: "It all starts with sketches of characters based on a personality type or an attitude. Then we begin building - often altering as we go.

"While an actor has an enormous range of expressions of his face, most of the Muppets can only open their mouths. Thus, the angle that the head is held, how it's moved, or where the puppet is looking creates the expression. Five degrees of tilt can convey a different emotion.

The City of Sanford is on the brink of beginning its second 100 years, its second century. For any town or city, this is a momentous occasion. A proud, self-satisfying, joyous attainment. And well it should be.

The history of this "little town on the St. Johns River"—as it has often been dubbed a combination, not only of the old and the new, but of people, places and events that have worked in unison and harmony to bring it to this historic juncture.

The history of the City of Sanford, as reviewed on the ensuing pages of this commemorative Centennial edition, merely puts into words and pictures the memories and contributions of the many people and organizations combining to keep Sanford alive and vibrant.

Dear Mr. Dean:

By MRS. J. N. WHITNER

The program of the Wednesday Club announces that I am to tell the tale of a Mosquito. It does not designate which mosquito, or to what class it shall belong, whether it shall be of Madam Stegomia, or of an Anopheles, but as their presence in our midst has had only a melancholy influence on our health or our comfort, I assume that you will gladly turn away with me from their kind to another, whose history we can trace with pride in private manuscripts and in state records; and we are particularly fortunate in having among us those who have contributed to our story of their own experiences and recollections of the settlement of that portion of eninsular Florida, once called Mosquito County, the territory of which in 1845 was reduced in size and its name changed to Orange

In the preparation of this paper, to write history has not been thought of, but its purpose is first: to define certain localities in our County where earliest settlements were made, which, after careful inquiry, have been established; also to relate incidents and facts touching the life of the people that would never find their way into history, but should be cherished and related to our young people that they may appreciate the heroism and the magnificent characteristics and ability which have made possible the civilization we now enjoy. Some effort in this line could collect a fund of stories and anecdotes which would be valuable material for future literature.

In the Club's recent research in Florida history, we studied of an interesting period of 20 years, between 1763 and 1783, when Florida has passed from under the Spanish to the British flag by the terms of the Treaty of Paris, when Florida was separated in provinces, East and West Florida, each having its own governor. 1950 note: Since this paper was written it has been learned that the Spanish called Florida "Mosquito .Territory.") The Apalachicola River was the dividing line.

After the Spanish withdrawal, the remaining population was mainly concentrated in the vicinities of Pensacola and St. Augustine. The British government at once made attractive offers to capitalists, of grants of land to induce settlers to other parts of the provinces. Along the upper coast, then a part of East Florida - later Mosquito County -, some fine estates were developed. In 1765 a colony of one hundred families was located by Mr. Denis Roller and called Charlottia (East Palatka). Large plantations for the cultivation of sugar cane and indigo were established at Volusia, Reresford, Spring Garden and DeLeon Springs; evidences of these are still to be seen. In 1766 a colony settled at Mosquito inlet.

The most interesting of these early settlements became known as the Minorcan Colony. Fifteen hundred persons were brought over in 1767 from Italy, Greece, Minorca, and Smyrna by a Scotch Andrew Turnbull and his associates and locat near Mosquito inlet on a grant of 60,000 acres and the town of New Smyrna was founded. A vast plantation was laid out, with a fine system of coquina-lined ditches for irrigation. Many deep wells, carefully walled, are still in a good state of preservation. Foundations of a number of buildings and a wharf built of the same material still remain. To plant indigo and sugar-cane was the main purpose, besides olives and other Mediterranean fruits. About 3500 acres was actually in cultivation and the first crop of indigo was said to have yielded $300. The enterprise was financially successful till a chemical process of dyeing destroyed the profit in indigo culture. The colonists became discontented with the management and after nine years moved to St. Augustine. After large expenditures of labor and money, the project was

A deep mystery surrounds the ruins of a great house buried out of sight in a pile of coquina rock in Shell Hill, which stands north of the Ocean House at New Smyrna. The structure is of large blocks of coquina cemented together and the style of architecture is similar to the fort at St. Augustine, as revealed by partial excavation of several chambers, the corners and enough of the outer walls to show the design. No explanation is given of the extraordinary fact that the outlines of the house were actually lost in a mass of the same coral formation as the walls themselves, and but for the autobiography of Mrs. Jane Murray Sheldon, whose parents settled there in 1803, the history of the building or probably even its very existence would have been unknown. Mrs. Sheldon's life was spent in that vicinity and her descendants are prominent citizens of New Smyrna at this time. In her autobiography she relates thrilling experiences of her early life in our Mosquito County territory. Her husband purchased that part of Turnbull plantation which contained Shell Hill and erected their residence on the top in order that they might have a more beautiful view and also that they might have a cellar to the house. It was at the time of excavating for the cellar that the ruins of the old building were discovered. During the Civil War this residence was destroyed by gunboats on the river. These, uniting with the original tribes, absorbing run-away negro slaves from Gerogia, became the fierce Seminoles, and before the entury had closed, had overrun the peninsula. After the British evacuation in 1763, when the Floridas were schanged with Spain for the Bahamas, we learn from Green's history that, "The narrow policy of Spain compelled the English history that, "The narrow policy of Spain compelled the English settlers to migrate". Decay and ruin rapidly overtools the beautiful estates scattered along the coast and upon the banks of the St. Johns." The Indians became more aggressive, and ad-venturous spirits who dared remain in the peninsula of Florida through this period, did so at the peril of their lives, and that was only passifile along the coast where they could flee to the ocean in case of attack. "By 1818 all white settlements in the interior of the peninsula were destroyed or abandened." A new shopping center was built in south Sanford and a need for a new banking facility in that area was immediately apparent. On February 27, 1965 United State Bank of Seminole, a member of our banking family, opened its doors in The Sanford Plaza.

We made the big change in 1974 when both banks joined Flagship Bank Inc. and we changed our names. The Florida State Bank of Sanford became Flagship Bank of Sanford and The United State Bank of Seminole moved into their handsome new facilities at 3000 Orlando Drive (across from the plaza) and became Flagship U.S. Bank of Seminole.

sden from Escambia, and in 1823 Duval was formed from St. Johns. On December 29, 1824, Walton, Leon and Nassau were made in the Northern section. On the same day, the peninsula was separated from St. Johns County and divided into three: Mosquito on the Atlantic side, Alachua on the Gulf, their southern boundaries running east from Charlotte Harbor to the Atlantic, the end of the peninsula southward, including Lake Okeechobee and the keys, formed Monroe County.

A transcript made from the territorial records of that date reads: "An Act To establish counties and define the boundaries of counties of the territory: Sec. 10, - Be it further enacted that there be and is hereby constituted a county by the name of Mosquito, and the said county shall be bounded on the north by the county of St. Johns, on the south by Monroe County, on the east by the Atlantic Ocean, on the west by the Indian boundary line, and the county of Alachua." Alachua County included the Indian settlement made by Secoffee and his followers, which two years before, 1822, had been made an Indian reservation.

After the passage of this act, the territory had eleven counties. Another act was approved on this day, December 29, 1824: that the judges of the respective counties should hold two terms of court each year, commencing in the County of Mosquito, on the first Mondays of April and October, and until the county site of Mosquito should be permanently established, the county court should be held at the house of John Bunch, near the Tornoka

An act, approved November 17, 1828: "To provide for the holding terms of the superior court for the Eastern District sitting at St. Augustine, shall have jurisdiction over all offences against criminal and penal laws of the territory, committed in Mosquito County." and the said court should also, until the county court should be established, have same authority over county affairs. Miss Brevard's history of Florida states that Mosquito's population in 1830 was 733. By this time, the red men were again making their presence felt in the settlements. On March 5, 1823, Ft. Brook had been established near Tampa.

A chain of forts were formed along a government road stretching down the east coast. Lateral roads branching from the main route running through the state led to soldiers' camps throughout the region later covered by Mosquito County. Military establishments brought their usual following of a population not altogether amenable to its control. This condition brought the necessity for civil authority.

Distances being so great, the number of county sites was inadequate for law enforcement and called for the formation of other counties. In 1834 Alachua was divided, Hillsboro was made from its southern half, including Ft. Brook (Tampa). On January 29, 1835, New Smyrna was made the county site of Mosquito County. And on February 4, 1836, Dade County was formed from Mosquito and Monroe, its northern boundary being the present north boundary of Brevard. The clerk of Mosquito County was appointed to serve Dade, as the clerk of St. Johns had served

In a painstaking effort, no record has been obtained of any white persons (except possibly early Spanish explorers) penetrating to the interior of the peninsula south of DeLeon Springs, prior to the military occupation of 1836. In December 1836, Camp Monroe was established by Col.

Fanning on the south bank of the beautiful lake which bears that ame. (1952 note: where marker st uius.) The post was occur by two companies of artillery, four companies of dragoons and some Creek Indians. The chiefs, King Phillip and his son, Coacoochee, made an attack upon the post with 400 Seminoles, on February 8, 1837.

The late Maj. Sydney Herbert Lancy, the gifted military writer who obtaineddata from the War Department of 1837, describes the battle as follows:

Col. Wm. Selby Harney, arrived at Camp Monroe, February 6. 1847 and although ranking officer, he did not take command, but took immediate steps to fortify the place against attack from Indians, then in the vicinity. He was none too soon as the attack came early in the second day after his arrival. It was a desperate assault led by brave Indian chiefs.

"Mr. Geo. R. Fairbanks says, 'The Indians fought three hours, with great steadiness, unaware that the post had been re-inforced. Capt. Charles Mellon was killed. Lieut. McLaughlin and 14 others were wounded. The Indian loss was 25."

Capt. Mellon and other soldiers who died at the post were interred on the estate Villa Shoora (1952 note: Elk's Club), on Lake Monroe, now owned by Mr. Chas. R. Walker. Several of our older townspeople recall having visited their graves, which were placed so near the water's edge that the waves long since have washed away all traces of them. (1952 note: About where WTRR stands.) The military record states that "Ft. Mellon became the healthiest and most important inland garrison in Florida." Some years ago, with great eloquence, Maj. Lancy, in an address before a Grand Army encampment at Sanford, urged our citizens to suitably mark the place "where occurred one of the fiercest battles of the Seminole wars."

To Mr. Alexander Vaughan we are indebted for statements made by his father, Mr. A. J. Vaughan, who enlisted at Ft. Mellon as a soldier, December 1837. Also, for names and locations of certain persons whom he believed to have been the first white citizens of the interior of Mosquito County, south of DeLeon Springs. Mr. Vaughan related that when he arrived at the post a few months after the Indian attack, Negroes were there whose owners had been massacred in Upper Florida. They had been captured and brought south by the Indians and had been with them long enough to have learned their language. When the Indians had been repulsed and driven back, the Negroes were left and sought safety at the Fort. These told the soldiers that the savages were so terrified when the artillery was turned on them (2 small gunboats and the Fort artillery), with its explosion and roar, shells cutting twigs and limbs from the trees, that the poor creatures believed it to have been a thunder storm sent by the Great Spirit to aid the white men, and that they had surrendered in awe.

Intense alarm was felt after this attack, though no actual hostilities occurred. Depredations and murders were frequently occurring in the surrounding country. The government was aroused, active measures were taken for their suppression and eight thousand soldiers were soon scattered throughout the peninsula. Up to this time no buildings had been erected at Camp Monroe. The soldiers had lived in tents: now substantial officers' quarters were built with all the equipment of a well-established garrison with commissary and bakery.

It is stated by Mrs. C. G. Evans that about eight two-story framed buildings were erected. One of these, with plazzas surrounding both stories, and a cupola which overlooked a one

'It Seemed A Pity...

Not since Mrs. J. N. Whitner wrote "The Tale of a Mosquito" back in 1910, has anyone compiled any kind of comprehensive history on Sanford. At least, not that Mrs. Katherine Bishop could discover. "It seemed a pity," said Mrs. Bishop. "that there should be no history of the city. especially during its centennial year."

So she conceived the daring plan to compile a pictorial history of Sanford. She took her ideas to the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, which decided to adopt the book as an official project of the Chamber commemorating the incorporation of the city of Sanford in 1887.

The result is a 96-page book, "Sanford Now and Then," which features more than 300 photographs.

Tracing Sanford's history in commemoration of its centennial has been Mrs. Bishop's labor of love for more than a year. She will receive no remuneration for her efforts - but the book's success and warm reception make up for that, says Mrs. Bishop. The colorful edition dates back to 1821 when Spain released Florida to the United States without fanfare, war or exchange. Data on the early history of Sanford was plentiful, it was revealed during Mrs. Bishop's research. Photographs from the early days

Mrs. Evans remembers both houses and that signals were exchanged between them in the Seminole war of a later date. General Zachary Taylor during this year laid out a road between Ft. Mellon and Ft. Brook at Tampa, along which was established a line of forts: Ft. Read, Ft. Maitland, Ft. Gatlin, (Orlando). Ft. Meade, etc. Over this road and laterally, by means of muleteams, supplies were conveyed and deposited at the forts, enabling the troops to penetrate to where probably white faces had never been before: to the interior of the peninsula between Lake Monroe and the Everglades.

The northern end of this road is now known as Mellonville Avenue, in Sanford, and much, if not all of it, is still in use. Hecords of February 2, 1838 shows: "An act - To provide for the safekeeping of the records of County of Mosquito, whereas the continuance of Indian hostilities render it impossible for the records of Mosquito County to be safely kept in said county." etc. It was therefore enacted, that the clerk of the St. Johns County should take jurisdiction over the county court records as he was already doing for those of the superior court (as had been the case before the county site was established) under a bond of $2,000.00. Another act of same date was entitled "An Act-to repeal an

Read was probably named for him, meantime, a picket had been built around a two and half story log as the spelling of the two names was the same until a post-office house, the home of a family named Duval, which was situated was established near the old fort, when the spelling was changed diagonally across the government road northwest from the by petition to "Reed". Leigh Read was a member of a convention blockhouse at Ft. Read. (1952 note: The Lingle Grove on which met in 1837 looking forward to Florida's commission to Mellonville Avenue.) Being a larger house, it could accommodate statehood. Of the men who formed that convention, our state historian, Mr. Geo. R. Fairbanks wrote, "They were by far the 'Appeal after appeal was made to ablest body of men who ever met in Florida."

For a time, in the summer of 1837, the war was thought to be over. Transportation of the Indians to the west had begun. Col. Harney left Ft. Mellon to establish a trading post for the Indians further south, on the Caloosahachee River, when on July 22, at daybreak, 250 Indians attacked his camp, and out of 30 men, 18 were killed. Col. Harney only escaped by swimming the river. When the news reached Ft. Mellon, Lieut. Hanson, who had been left in command, seized 30 Indians who had come to the post to trade.

In 1840, to induce settlers, offers were made by the government of rations for six months, and some degree of protection, to persons settling in the vicinity of the forts. In payment for services to the government, land warrants were issued, known as "floats", which gave the privilege of locating on any government land desired. If a settlement happened to occur on a Spanish claim, the claim was allowed to stand, and the owner of the grant reimbursed by a float claim to the United States government asserted to have been the first citizens of interior peninsula Florida, came to Ft. Mellon in company with him, having met them at Palatka when returning after scout duty, in the Alachua listrict. Some of these men enlisted as soldiers; others were nere followers of the army, but all became permanent settlers. Their names were Vincent Lee and family, Hiram Potter, Henry Brewer, Poole, Erasmus W. Reck, etc. Under the direction of a government employee, Henry A. Crane, they were located at Tuscawilla on the south bank of Lake Jessup, where they remained for six months, or at least until they could decide upon some course to pursue. Vincent Lee removed his family to Ft. Gailin, where he settled. Under a land warrant, Mr. Vaughan secured a homestead on which Ft. Read was located. Henry Brewer did not secure the land, but built and occupied a house on the site where the late Judge J. Wofford Tucker's residence now stands. (601 E. Third St.). Hiram Potter's homestead was one familiar to us all, that occupied so many years by George W. Wylly and family near Ft. Read. (Old house at the Air Base east of Mellonville Avenue). Poole entered the land lying west of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad tracks, (North French Avenue) including Clouds Creek, now occupied by Mr. Cecil Gabbett. Henry Crane "floated" his claim on the Mellonville track. Mr. Beck's claim was the hammock on Lake Jessup bearing his name. In 1843 the county site of Mosquito was removed from New Smyrna to Enterprise, on the North bank of Lake Monroe, with an act authorizing the raising of a county fund by taxation to build court-house, clerk's office, jail, etc. Henry A. Crane was made county clerk. In 1884 St. Lucie County was formed from the north end of Dade, and Mosquito was given the jurisdiction over St. Lucie's record, as St. Johns had held over Mosquito's. On January 30, 1845, a law was enacted changing the name of Mosquito County to that of Orange. One month later, Florida an ame a state, March 3, 1845. Mellonville became the county site of Orange County, July 16, 1845, and one of the government buildings was temporarily used as clerk's office, etc. Mr. Arthur Ginn was appointed clerk of the court. He secured the tract of land on which he planted the orange grove which before the great freeze was the most famous grove in the state, - the Speer Grove, (Speer grove marker on Mellonville Avenue) and another on the banks of the St. Johns River, now known as Shell Bank Farm. (Indian Mound Village). He placed two steamboats on the river, the largest of these, "The Hancock", being the first passenger steamboat plying on the upper St. Johns between Ft. Mellon and Palatka. Dr. Speer lost his life some years later in the capsizing of the smaller of these boats.

In 1854 Volusia County was formed from the north end of Orange. The St. Johns River formed the dividing line through the In 1845 another family was added to the Ft. Mellon-Ft. On December 30, 1856, an act was approved and entitled: "To fix and locate the county site of Orange County at a place called Orlando." Mr. James P. Hughey was made county clerk and served until about 1880. Mr. J.R. Worthington donated a tract of land for public purposes, upon which the next year, 1857, a onestory hewn log building was erected for a court-house, which was later destroyed by fire with all its records, except one book, which contained the earliest records of the county. On the evening before the fire, Mr. Hughey, fortunately, had taken it to his home to make some entries.

family and slaves. He was an 1812 soldier and made a valuable citizen in those troublous times from his experience and knowledge of Indian habits. He constituted himself a vigilance committee to watch the savages, and was usually informed as to their whereabouts. Mr. Hughey had never entered claim for land due him payment for military services, but after moving to Florida he floated his claim on a tract of 160 acres lying along the Wekiva River. There he planted an orange grove and erected a residence, now the town of Markham. Mr. Hughey's homestead was the large tract of land which comprises the suburbs of Sanford Heights and Markham Heights.

In 1846 hostilities were renewed by the Indians. Mrs. C.G. Evans, daughter of Mr. Hughey, relates some interesting recollections of the excitement which prevailed, and the thrills of horror they felt one day when a young son of Dr. Speer came running into their home with the news that Indians were in the neighborhood. Her mother, Mrs. Hughey, spread a sheet upon the floor, hastily threw into it some garments for her little ones and ran with them as quickly as possible to Dr. Speer's residence one-half mile away. Dr. Speer's house was a log one with two rooms and an open hall between. All the people in the neighborhood had assembled; the men fortified the house by placing pine poles and fence rails closely together over the windows and enclosing the hall. In the same manner, breastworks were erected for the men to stand behind when using their guns in case of attack. The ladies, Mrs. Ginn, her daughter, Mrs. Speer, Mrs. Hughey and others, were in the hall moulding bullets for the rifles. Suddenly shricks were heard, all stared in terror, the mothers to look for their children, one lady fainted.

Across the young orange grove opposite came a figure almost denuded of clothes and screaming wildly. As soon as she could be quieted, she told of how the Indians had caught her, placed her on a pile of lightwood knots to burn her. In a desperate effort to save herself she had torn away from them and left her garments in their hand..

all the people from the "regions around about." A planter named Clay owned the land containing the nowcelebrated sulphur spring which bears his name. He was among those who came to the stockade for protection. The government, occupied in the effort to remove the Indians to the west, was negligent in protecting the settlers. Few soldiers were retained at he Forts. Official estimate underrated the number of Indians. and call of the people for protection was not heeded.

Those at the Duval stockade passed six anxious weeks, waiting or relief. One day the sound of bugle was heard. The people oyously poured out of the high walls and formed a line along the road to give them welcome. Imagine their dismay when, instead of the reassuring presence of dignified United States soldiers, in rode two companies of volunteer cavalry, under command of Capts. Ellis and Knight.

Uncouth and rough to a degree that the settlers soon feared the soldiers little less than the Indians. They camped on the ground which is now known as the Deane grove on Mellonville Avenue 1952 note: about 2318 Mellonville Avenue) a part of the Vaughan homestead, where Mr. A.J. Vaughan had deeded two acres of land as a site for a church, school house and cemetery; and any soldiers dying during the encampment were buried in this cemetery. (1952 note: S.W. corner Cornell Grove.)

A small building had been erected and served as a church and schoolhouse and was used now for officers quarters. The soldiers depredated the farms, turning their horses into the fields, killed cattle, exterminated poultry, robbed bee-hives, then overturned and destroyed them. Two parallel race tracts were laid out by the soldiers for their amusement, stretching along west of Mellonville Avenue, and it is only in recent years that these have been obliterated by the building of the suburb of Georgetown.

Appeal after appeal was made to the government for relief from the depredations and misdemeanors of the soldiers. None came, however, till a new Secretary of War was appointed, a Georgian whose name was Crawford, whom Mr. Hughey recognized as that of a friend of his boyhood. To him he at once addressed a letter, recalling himself to his memory, relating the extremities of his people, and soliciting his interest and influence in sending to their relief soldiers of a better character. Secretary Crawford responded at once: "Dear John: I remember you as my playmate in boyhood. Two companies of United States Infantry will go forward at once, under command of Capt. Grafton and Mrs. Hughey's kinsman, Lieut. Morris." Following this period, all over the peninsula there was constant anxiety and occasional outbursts of violence, but the presence of the army had made civil life possible, if not very comfortable, even away from the vicinity of the forts. In 1851 the Brock House, (1952 note: about where the Methodist Orphanage stands) famous for many years as a winter resort, was built at Enterprise, by Capt. Jacob Brock; our early settler, Brewer, was the builder. We find that in 1852 enough persons had settled near Lake Apopka to erect a Masonic Lodge, a framed building of two stories. The land on which it was built and still stands, was donated for the purpose by Mr. Stewart, grandfather of M.M. Stewart, a citizen of Sanford. The lumber for the building was cut at a mill near the present site of Ocoee, and "The Lodge" became the name of a far-reaching neighborhood, afterwards renamed Apopka.

The little church-schoolhouse, which the soldiers had occupied, was burned during their encampment. About 1857 another log building was erected on Mellonville Avenue opposite to where the blockhouse had stood on land also donated by Mr. A.J. Vaughan for a Methodist Church, which was used also for a school-house. There Methodist services were held once in three months, and a Union Sabbath school was conducted weekly after 1867. The first Episcopal and Presbyterian services as well were held from time to time in this little edifice: Earnest Chapel. (1952 note: about 2445 Mellonville Avenue.)

Except for occasional depredations, such as the celebrated Shivers massacre at New Smyrna, the Indians gave no further trouble. Detachments of regular soldiers and some state troops were scattered over the peninsula. As late as 1857 state troops were stationed at Ft. Gatlin, under command of Capt. Kendricks and Capt. Robert Bullock. In 1858 military posts were no longer needed in Florida. The camps of the soldiers had been scattered throughout the peninsula and down the coasts; and the names of Forts Mason, Christmas, Drum, Pierce, Lauderdale, Dallas, Myers, Davenport, are familiar to us now.

When the camps were broken up and the troopers marched away, each of these forts proved the nucleus of a neighborhood Orange County now settled down to the pursuits of civil life. In the next years that followed, few persons traveled away from, and few came to the county. Some small orange groves were planted and the people produced from the sell mainly what they consumed for food. Large herds of wild cattle were grazed on the prairies. Ft. Melionville, slowly falling into decadence, finally ceased to exist about 1983 or '84.

In 1884, the Lyman Bank was founded with its "first brick building" in town. Three years later it developed into the First National Bank. In quick succession came Tuxberry and Fernald, later the Geo. H. Fernald Hardware Co., and now the Ball Hard-ware Co., Chase Brothers Packinghouse, now Chase & Co., the J. N. Whitner Co., Lord's Jeweiry Store, now McLaulin's Jeweiry Store, (1952 note: Kader's), Sanford Loan and Trust Co. Bank, W. T. Deane's Furniture Store, T. J. Miller & Son, the Fiber Factory, and others and then the fire. But the fire only cleared away the old wooden buildings, and Sanford arose in brick.

In February 1888 was held a County Fair which was attended by President and Mrs. Cleveland, and Emma Abbott was engaged to sing at the "Old Opera House" under a guerantee of $1000 for one nance. The fair was a great success, and Orange County contained a happy and contented people and hope held out a reasonable prospect of large demand for their products, as our national population should increase and become educated to their use; with assurance that a profitable culture of citrus fruits was necessarily limited to South Florids.

A possible recurrance of such weather as had frozen orange rees in 1836 gave them little concern, being counted the one liability to disaster, against many in other business enterprises. Thus, buoyant with hope, their countenances expressed astisfaction for the present and bright anticipation for the future, when lot the great freeze of February 6, 1995 came. by the time Jim was four years old he and his sister Emma were up at four in the morning milking the cows. Jim and the seven other Spencer children attended the Little Red Schoolhouse while living at the family home, a large house where 20th and Magnolia is today.

"Our dairy was right there at 20th and Magnolia." remembers Spencer. "That was way out in the country back then." Spencer remembers that his dad made all the children work, "but he paid us." Papa Spencer decided the dairy was not enough to keep the family busy, so he opened a bakery and a restaurant. and started a celery farm. "We had them all going at once," Spencer recalls.

Jim does not recall any stories from his mother about what Sanford was like when he was little, but strongly suspects that "it was about the same when I was born." And what was that like?

"The only paved streets ran south as far as Third Street and then stopped," he remembers. Shipping was still big business when Jim was little. "The Clyde Line came here and docked down where the

The Speers: Steaming Ahead Right Into Sanford

Like others of the earliest settlers in Sanford, Dr. Algernon Sydney Speer was a steamboat owner.

In the early 1830s and 1840s he operated a boat between Jacksonville and Enterprise. In Enterprise his passengers often found their rest at the famed Brock House, a stopping point noted in major guidebooks of the day.

Brock House was operated by Mr. Arthur Ginn, whose attractive daughter, Mary, caught the eye of Dr. Speer. In or close to 1840, Mary and Algernon were married.

Only two years later Congress passed "An Act To Provide For Armed Occupation and Settlement of the Unsettled Part of the Peninsula of East Florida."

The act permitted a person to homestead a parcel of land up by one quarter section (160 acres, or a piece of land one-fourth mile in each direction.)

The criteria for those applying to the federal government homesteading land had to meet certain criteria: he had to be the head of a family, able to bear arms, and fill out an application. Dr. Speer made application for his land in June, 1843, And the next month, fully 33 years and a bit more before Sanord was incorporated, he received his property. Dr. Speer, whose steamboat lines ultimately included three ships, had two homes. The property he homesteaded was in the area of what is now "Crow's Camp" on the St. John River. His other home was in the area where Mellonvile Avenue crosses 20th Street today. There was an orange grive there as well, so the area became known as "Speers Grov," while the place on the river was called Speers Field. Dr. Speer and Mary had four children and three steamboats. The boats were the Torn Thumb, the Hancock and the

Sarah Spaulding. The children were Algernon S. Speer, Arthur, Mary and Ella. In 1857 a storm on the Lake George carried the Tom Thumb to a watery grave - along with Dr. Speer. On board the boat that fateful day was Algernon S. Speer, who was then about 10. Realizing the boat was in mortal danger, Dr. Speer and a slave who was on board with him tied young Algernon S. to a pair of demijohns. He floated ashore. His father and the slave were both lost. That slave also has descendants in Sanford today. Frank Blair, long a custodian at Sanford Atlantic Bank, is part of that family. In 1895 the larger of what had become two orange groves (one a Speers Field and one at Speers Grove) was frozen. On its site there is now a park known as Speer Grove Park.

Through the years the Speer family, beginning with Dr, Algernon, participated in local politics and, after Florida became a state he served as a representative from Orange County. Algernon S. Speer, the boy who floated ashore, had a son,

George Algernon Speer, who operated a drygoods store in early Sanford. It was located where McCrory's is today. His sons, George Algernon Jr. and Vivian A. have sons

first baseball game was staged in Sanford, but baseball historians assume it came shortly after Abner Doubleday mented it in 1839. Like the rest of the country, baseball certainly made an impression on the citizens of Sanford.

The first substantiated account of a baseball game came when an old newspaper 'San-ford Daily Journal), dated July 5, 1887, turned up in a church safe. It described a game between Sanford and F&W Railroad Club of Savannah as "certainly the best ever played in Sanford," lending speculation it wasn't the first

"I will never find his equal." "He was in every way a loyal and dutiful son of his country...a man of simple faith and devoted to the church." These words by Donald Houston and Bishop H.B. Whipple describe a man of unique qualities, a great and very admired man, Henry Shelton Sanford, shortly after his death on May 21, 1891.

The citizens of the City of New Upsala paid their respects to the deceased in writing: "We join with the country at large in ex- retain the knowledge conveyed to him. pressing our high regard and esteem of the deceased and in the expression of grief at its loss." Henry Shelton Sanford was born in Woodbury, Conn., June 15,

1823, the only son of Nehemiah Curtis Sanford and Nancy Bateman Shelton. Nehemiah Sanford was very active in the state and local governments of Woodbury and the State of Connecticut. In 1836. Nehemiah Sanford sold his ancestral home at Woodbury and moved to Derby, Conn. There he joined his brother-in-law, Edward N. Shelton, in organizing the Shelton Tack Company, the oldest continuing tack-manufacturing company in the world. Nehemiah Sanford later built "The Homestead," a large wooden structure which still remains in the Sanford family. Henry's parents recognized his scholastic abilities early in life and placed him under private tutors until he entered the Episcopal Academy at Cheshire, Conn., at the age of 15, where he had high honors and ranking in his class.

Henry, now 16, graduated from the Academy and entered Washington College (later Trinity College) in Hartford, Conn. An asthmatic condition, causing failing eyesight, forced him to relinquish his studies and - on his doctor's orders - took a sea vovage.

In 1841, Henry Sanford pursued his studies in Europe. He overcame his physical impairments by developing extraordinary mental powers which enabled him to listen to others reading and

This characteristic of Henry became a very important key in his life. It helped him pursue his plans despite all obstacles. Henry studied at the Universities of Berlin and Heidelberg in Germany. It was at Heidelberg where he earned his degree of Doctor of Laws in 1849. Later, he received an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from

Trinity College for his many achievements. While in Germany, Henry learned to speak Latin, French, Spanish and Italian as well as fluent German. Many of his studies and writing were done in these languages. The fall of 1849 marked the beginning of a diplomatic career when he was appointed Secretary of the American Legation in Paris under William C. Rives. He later became Charge D'Affaires in Paris. From this post he arranged and negotiated the first Postal Convention between France and the United States. In 1854, Sanford became involved in the famous Aves Island

Case in which the government of Venezuela infringed upon the rights of U.S. citizens there. The United States urged the Venezuelan Government to reimburse the losses of the Americans stated at $341,000. In March, 1861, Sanford was named United States Minister to Belgium by President Lincoln. A very close and strong friendship developed between the Sanford family and the Belgian monarchy a friendship which continues today.

From Brussels, Minister Sanford could keep an ever-watchful eye on the movements of European governments. Sanford also made many secret and confidential visits to European powers. Due to these extracurricular activities, the Secretary of State, William L. Seward, remarked: "That man (Mr. Sanford) during the first year of the war, was the Minister of the United States in Europe.

White natives caused many problems in the development of the area. They were incapable of manual labor and were, according to some, "not worth a dime." From that time on, Henry Shelton Sanford became known as "General Sanford," a title he had not sought nor expected, but one

On Sept. 21, 1864, Gen. Sanford married Gertrude Ellen du Puy, 27, from a prominent Philadelphia family. They had met in the Belgian Court. Gertrude would bear Gen. Sanford seven children

Gen. Sanford first came to the Sunshine State of Florida in the Civil War years. He was deeply impressed with the possibilities of future growth and named Florida his "adopted" state.

Gen. Sanford first bought a small grove in St. Augustine. Then in 1870 he purchased 23 square miles on the south side of Lake Monroe (formerly Lake Valdez), called the Sanford Grant, for-He was greatly impressed with the country, climate, rich soil and one beautiful site on Crystal Lake. The area also was the head of navigation on the St. Johns River and he foresaw it as the natural distribution point for northern markets. So he began to found what has become the "Gate City of South Florida" - the violence erupted as the angry white natives attacked the black labor camp. The blacks were driven away - with one killed, and several wounded.

The labor problem was solved in part when Gen. Sanford sent an agent to Sweden and engaged 100 adults to work a year for their expenses.

Gen. Sanford established a weekly paper, the "South Florida Journal," later becoming the "Sanford Journal." Sanford became Florida's first "dry" town with the sale of liquor prohibited by Gen. Sanford. All deeds of sale or contract for sale of land bore the prohibition on it.

Gen. Sanford saw a need for a railroad and, with the help from the Boston Herald Syndicate, the South Florida railroad opened. Construction began in 1880, with the visit of Gen. and Mrs. Ulyssess S. Grant, when Gen. Grant turned the first sod for what at that time was the southernmost railroad in the United States. The City of Sanford became incorporated in 1877; it soon looked like the everyday U.S. town - with thriving business, public schools, churches, banks and other institutions. Yellow fever was prevalent in parts of Florida but a government physician came and reported Sanford to be the "healthiest town in the state." "The Belair grove or "Tropical Gardens" or "Experimental Tract" became world renown for Gen. Sanford's remarkable experiments in plant and fruit growth.

He was far advanced for the thinkers of horticultural and agricultural subjects of the day. The grove contained many varieties of oranges, lemons, bananas, pineapples, figs, olives and apples, probably about 30,000 trees in all. His work helped speed up the "orange revolution."

In the year 1887, Gen. Sanford became involved in the scientific and commercial exploration of the Congo of Africa. There he worked with H.M. Stanley, the famous British explorer, in opening the Congo River Basin. Gen. Sanford and King Leopold II of Belgium established the Congo Free State (Zaire).

"As one of the founders, your name will hereafter be associated with mine in history," wrote Leopold II to Gen. Sanford at the establishment of the new Congo state.

In 1890, Gen. Sanford received his last appointment, in connection with the Congo, when Secretary of State Blaine asked him to attend the Anti-Slavery Conference in Brussels, as Plenipotentary and Envoy Extraordinary for the United States.

During the Conference, Gen. Sanford sought untiringly for abolition of liquor traffic and slave trade in the Congo. It would be his final campaign for humanitarianism. Gen. Sanford died on May 21, 1891, in Healing Springs, Va., and was buried at Long Hill cemetery in Shelton. A marble monument marks his final resting place with the inscription: "And thus this man died, leaving his death for an example of a who are experts or who are interested in hospitals and not a single one has expressed himself otherwise than that there is no better hospital anywhere."

Thus did Seminole Memorial Hospital officials glowingly describe the facility on the eve of its opening, Jan. 29, 1956. While this was by far the grandest hospital Sanford had yet known, it was by no means the first. Around the turn of the century, there was a hospital operated by the Plant System Railroad.

" It was located in a building on West 9th Street which later became the railroad station when the Atlantic Coast Line took over the railroads in 1902. (The site today is occupied by Coast Line park).

The hospital was moved to Waycross, Ga., in about 1904, and for 15 years the city was without a medical facility. Homes in the city were used to house patients needing simple medical treatment Surgical patients had to travel to Jacksonville hospitals.

In 1919, a large, attractive residence on Oak and 5th was donated to the city for use as a hospital by George H. Fernald and his wife, Mabel. It was named the Fernald-Laughton Memorial Hospital for the Fernald family and Mrs. Fernald's mother, Mrs. Eliza Laughton.

The hospital served until 1956, when the Seminole Memorial Hospital was opened. The late Dr. Charles L. Park Sr., while compiling a history of the Seminole County Medical Society (chartered in 1950), wrote this description of the Fernald-Laughton Hospital: "It was a two-story building and a very beautiful old home ... There were five private rooms or bedrooms in the building. It was large enough to accommodate 35 beds after th comparatively small addition was built on the rear. The operating room was the old hall of the residence. The elevator connected stirectly to the operating room. The elevator was run by rope, and prior to surgery the surgeon or someone had to pull the patient up and down the elevator to arrange for surgery.

"After operating for one, two or three hours, it was necessary to pull the patient back upstairs by the rope, which was not very convenient

"The only access to the addition in the back was through the operating room itself on the ground floor. Often the surgeon was quite concerned of possible contamination as people used it as a thoroughfare," wrote Dr. Park Sr.

"The ambulance entrance was through the elevator to the operating room and in case of accident or emergency, while surgery was being done, they brought the new patient into the operating room covered with sheets or blankets, along with the attendants.

"In spite of all the handicaps, the record was good pertaining to the patients and so forth, and was on an equal with adjacent county hospitals," he wrote.

The hospital was run as a private institution by a board of directors appointed by the Fernald and Laughton families. When the hospital opened in 1919, superintendent of nurses was Mrs. Auther (Myrtie Palmer) Frazier. She resigned in 1922 and was replaced by Miss Mary Landgraf.

According to Dr. Park Sr., the superintendent of nurses ran the hospital and supervised the operating room. Superintendent of the hospital was T. W. Lawton.

There were usually three graduate nurses on duty during the day, and just one at night. There were also several practical nurses, but these, according to Dr. Park Sr., "had no real training, but were simply people who had nursed patients at

A more unusual duty of the nurses was shoveling coal into the furnace to heat the building in winter.

A ward bed in the Fernald-Laughton Hospital cost $5.00 a day; private rooms were $7.00 a day. The operating charge was $5.00 for minor procedures and $10 for major procedures in the first hour, and $5.00 for each hour thereafter.

While the Fernald-Laughton Hospital was a workable stop-gap, it took the county 30 years of effort to make the Seminole Memorial Hospital a reality. Their efforts were finally rewarded, and on a Sunday afternoon, Jan. 29, 1956, more than 4,000 local residents toured the proud new facility.

The tour was preceded by a brief ribbon-cutting ceremony performed by T. E. (Gene) Tucker, chairman of the board of trustees; Randall Chase, chairman of the Fernald-Laughton board; and Ernest M. Galloway, trustee of the Bert Fish Testameny Trust.

It was a gift of $250,000 from the estate of the late Judge Bert Fish that gave the dream for a county hospital the impetus needed to make it a reality. The front (north) wing of the hospital is named in his memory.

Additional funding came from an $800,000 bond issue on a threemill tax voted by the county taxpayers. The bond will be retired in through the Hill-Burton Act. The $1,250,000 facility included 75 beds, 16 bassinets and eight pediatric beds. Separate but equal facilities were provided for devices, heating, air conditioning, color schemes and surgical and obstetrical equipment. Daily room rates were as follows: pediatric rooms, $5.00; semi-private, $10 and $11: private, $13, $15 and $17. Compare these with today's daily rates: semi-private rooms, $70; private rooms, $80; and intensive care, $150. The first patients were moved from the Fernald-Laughton

Hospital to Seminole Memorial between breakfast and lunch on Jan. 30, 1956. The first patients were five babies born in the Fernald-Laughton Hospital. Hospital administrator in the new facility was Harry Weir. He

Mrs. Sanford's proposal was outlined to her family, the City of Sanford, and in her will at the time of her death in 1901. However, negotiations for the memorial were not initiated until the early 1950's.

At that time General and Mrs. Sanford's only surviving daughter, Carola Sanford Dow, began extensive correspondence with Mrs. Frederick T. Williams of Sanford in an attempt to execute the terms of her mother's will.

In the interest of the proposed memorial library, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Eugene (Gene and Hortense) Roumillat II traveled to Derby during two summers. At Derby the Roumillats visited the Gen. Sanford home,

The growth of Fourdee is the story of one man's American Dream. Ron Worswick had an idea for a new type of coupling which he began producing in the utility room of his home in 1958. Hard work and faith brought continuing expansion until today Fourdee is over 250 people working on a wide range of electro-mechanical devices in a 70,000 square foot facility with adjoining employees' park and recreation area. the focal point for the lives and activities of more recent residents of the city: the senior seasoned retirees from the North who hope to enrich Sanford in the city's second century. Some of their stories, as told to Marylin Sheddan appear on the following pages.

SANFORD'S SEASONED CITIZENS

Lovingly Tabbed 'Wrinkle City' Bram's A Bustling Beehive

Sanford, with its warm year-round climate and compact business district has long been a favorite aven of older citizens. As early as 1875 Ramblers "Guide To Florida" nentioned that Sanford was destined to be the most important place on the upper St. Johns. One point in particular was cited in Rambler and other contemporary publications as making San-ford especially attractive to older people: its warm sulphur springs.

'The average person who has a moderate income and some, but not a lot of savings--when he gets to the point where he cannot mow the lawn or care for the house, what does he do?'

One of the springs was located on one of General Henry S. Sanford's banana plantations. The 100acre plantation, called St. Gertrude's was scheduled to be the site of a major hotel, but it was never built.

Another spring, first seen in January of 1872, was reported to be of greater volume than the already popular resort spring at Green Cove. Through the years Sanford's focus shifted from haven for the elderly and the escapee from northern cold to agricultural and marine businesses. A century later, having been the home of a major Naval Air Station during and after World War II, Sanford found itself with a large number of former residents, now retirement age, eager to return to the quiet town.

During the mid-sixties local church members and area citizens decided that one portion of that retirement population was being badly neglected. "There is a segment of the population which is not ministered to most of the programs that go on around us," said the Rev. Fr. Leroy D. Soper Jr.,

Their talk of starting a ballet company was met with negativism and iciness when they approached community eaders. But the avalanche of discouraging rejections only incited the sisters to pursue their objective. Challenge.

The sisters' determination and perseverance combine with the enthusiasm and support of slightly more than a handful of friends saw the birth of Ballet Guild of 1968. At the inaugural concert, "The Nutcracker Suite," in December of that year, only a sprinkling of supporters turned out at Seminole High School auditorium.

Those attending the performance reviewed the production as excellent and many appeared overwhelmed that such talent existed in the community. But, from where the Rye sisters stood, the nonprofit community endeavor would require more than talented twirling toes. They projected that through the efforts of warm working bodies the necessary operational funds would follow through. And that's the way was.

As the dance company progressed, classical balle took a backseat to jazz and free-style ballet, and year after year the repertoire has included "Something For Everyone - Country to Classic.

And through the years. as artistic-directors and choreographers of the company, the sisters have managed to exceed their efforts. Their remuneration for this service requiring endless after-hours, is $1 each annually. But their rewards are many. They beam. The merits - standing ovations, full houses, community cooperation and local dancers moving on to the bigtime - are the gratifying compensation that reflects the hallmark of success.

Not to be overlooked are the certificates of excellence awarded the guild. In artistic circles the local dance company has earned awards on the local, state and national level. The Bicentennial Dance Drama, "River Gold." incorporating 200 years of history along the St. John's River, captured scores of artistic awards and notice. Written by Mildred M. celebrating its centennial, Ballet Guild is working toward its 10th jubilee celebration, beginning early next year. The small company, which could not attract a full house in 1968, now appears annually in concert in Sanford followed by a season of touring.

The award-winning Sanford-based ballet company is sustained entirely by civic support. Auditions, conducted annually by a non-partisan dance master, are open to any qualified area dancer. Accepted dancers receive no remuneration, nor do they pay for instruction. Each dancer is required to obtain at least five sponsors yearly, at a cost

Many friends of the ballet contribute generously to the non-profit state-chartered cultural group. Dr. Thomas L. Largen and Joe Kurimai founded the Ballet Guild Open Golf Tournament in 1974. The net proceeds from this tournament and other contributions have enhanced not only a wider scope for the dancers, but

THE CLOCK

The Clock, a city landmark at First Street and Park Avenue for more than 30 years, was located originally on the front of the Sanford Atlantic Bank building. When A. H. Moses purchased the bank in 1930 for $70,000, he gave The Clock to the city — it then was erected over the traffic light by the Independent Merchants Assn.

In 1961, in a controversial action, city commissioners had The Clock removed as a traffic hazard. The Sanford Elks lodge rescued it from storage, placing it in front of its building on East Second Street - but the works were removed and the hand points now perpetually to 11 o'clock in tribute to the Elks' traditional "Eleven O'Clock Toast."

YESTERDAY... ... And Then, A Glance At Yesteryear

Like all small towns which play significant parts in economic, social and historic activities, Sanford has a history which reflects the entire world. From the days of Seminole Indian attacks on Fort Mellon to the days of space flight, Sanford has played such a part. Nowhere can that involvement be as clearly seen as in headlines of the newspapers printed in Sanford. Headlines selected from the date of newspaper publication nearest to the Sept. 29 anniversary of the town each year provided a detailed account of more than happenings in the lives of Sanford citizens. They provide an insight into the shaping of a world which has moved from Indian wars to atomic power, from steamships to spaceships, from candles to electric lights from epidemics to antibiotics in a mere 100 years.

Oct. 3, 1908, saw Sanford urging its men to get out and register to vote.

LOCAL: Sanford Voters Have Two Places For Registering NATIONAL: A New Postal Order. Postmasters To Talk To Public School Children. An Entirely New Departure. Object Is To Inform The Children Of The Nation As To The Working Of The Great Postal System.

On Sept. 24, 1909 the news was of death - and life. LOCAL: "Death Rode On Engine. Terrible Accident Occurs Near Lakeland Last Saturday. Sanford Engineer Is Killed."

NATIONAL: Though not a headline, the following story had a large play in this issue of the paper: "The Hudson-Fulton celebration commemorating the exploration of the Hudson River by Henry Hudson in 1609 and the inauguration of steam navigation by Robert Fulton in 1807 will open in New York City this week."

Young people of today might be surprised to note that the City of Sanford had companies advertising go-carts in 1909, but they were featured in a large ad. However, these go-carts had a different use from the vehicles bearing that name today: they were covered baby carriages.

Another sign of the changing times in that issue of the Sanford paper was a simple advertisement for unimproved celery land: $50-200 per acre - flowing wells guaranteed! On Oct. 7, 1910, the news looked like this:

LOCAL: Another Cigar Factory. Sanford Is The Location For Making Clear Havanas.

NATIONAL: Nineteen Men In The Newspaper Plant of The Los Angeles Times Were Burned To Death Last Sunday. The Fire Was Caused By A Dynamite Bomb Placed In The Building By Enemies Of The Paper.

On Sept. 29, 1911, the condition of local agricultural efforts had become of prime importance and headlines reflected this interest. LOCAL: Sanford Being In The Heart Of The Greatest Trucking Center Of The World Naturally Depends Largely Upon The Crops For The Money That Circulates In All The Channels Of Trades.

On Sept. 30, 1913, the local agricultural industry took over the headlines once again- but they were not all there was on the front page. The news was:

LOCAL: Florida Vegetables In Great Demand. And there was another one as well. The head read, "Will Represent Florida At Panama Exposition" and the story told how . local man A.V. French had been honored by Governor Trammell and "will get busy at once". Then On Sept. 29, 1914, it looked like this for Sanford and the LOCAL: Drainage District Is Established., Tract of Land Bonded Contains 265.000 acres And Includes Upper St. Johns NATIONAL: Food Law Amended And Now In Effect. From that day on food packages had to show contents, weight and date. And Start Is Made At This End. There were a couple of other headlines, depicting events that shattered the fragile peace of this country.

INTERNATIONAL: Right Wing Of Germans In Retreat, Leaving Dead And Wounded. Allies Centre Holding Firm.

On Sept. 29, 1916, the Democratic executive committee was coming to Sanford and headlines looked like this: LOCAL: Executive Committee Will Meet. There was another newsworthy event that day. "Clean Up Is The Slogan For Sanford," read the second head.

NATIONAL: Place Soul Above Dollar was the headline on a story about a convention of the American Bankers Association. as bankers were told they could fulfill their duty to the world in "great financial reconstruction" following the Eurpoean war if they would "put the soul of the people in the use and application of the dollars."

On Friday, Sept. 28, 1917, the folk of Sanford were urged to back a tobacco fund for "Thousands of our boys somewhere in France" who would be sent their favorite smokes. NATIONAL: Second Draft Needed To Fill Big Army On The purchase of liberty bonds. "Again the Government comes to the people of the country with the request that they lend their money, and lend upon a more liberal scale than ever before, in order that the great war for the rights of America and the liberation of the world may be prosecuted with ever-increasing vigor to a victorious conclusion. And it makes the appeal with the greatest confidence because it knows that every day it is becoming clearer and clearer to thinking men throughout the nation that the winning of the war is an essential investment. The money that is held back now will be of little use or value if the war is not won and the selfish masters of Germany are permitted to distate what America may and may not do. Men in America, besides, have from the first until now dediated both their lives and their fortunes to the vindication and maintenance of the great principles and objects for which our government was set up. They will not fail now to show the world for what their wealth was intended.

(s) Woodrow Wilson

The people of Sanford responded, and the news of the day was: LOCAL: Liberty Loan Was Opened Saturday. Seminole County Will Surely Go Over The Top.

The issue of Sept. 26, 1919, made it clear that some things don't ever change. The headlines read this way:

Sanford was once known as "Celery City" and changed its official city motto to the "Friendly City" only in 1974. The business history of Sanford is reflected in the life of Chase and Co., one of Sanford's oldest and most successful concerns. In fact, the company was formed in 1883, three years before the fledgling settlement on the St. Johns incorporated as the City of Sanford. It was founded by Sydney O. Chase and his brother Joshua C.

opened an office in Jacksonville, and the citrus and vegetable business were booming. The celery business in Sanford was still in its infancy. The insurance business recovered from the freezes of a decade earlier, which had placed many businesses insured by Chase in the position of not being able to meet their insurance premiums. Chase sold insurance all over the State of Florida.

In addition to Chase and Co., successful agricultural companies included American Fruit frowers, Sanford-Oviedo Fruck Growers, Nelson and Co. in Oviedo) and Duda and Sons (also in Oviedo.)

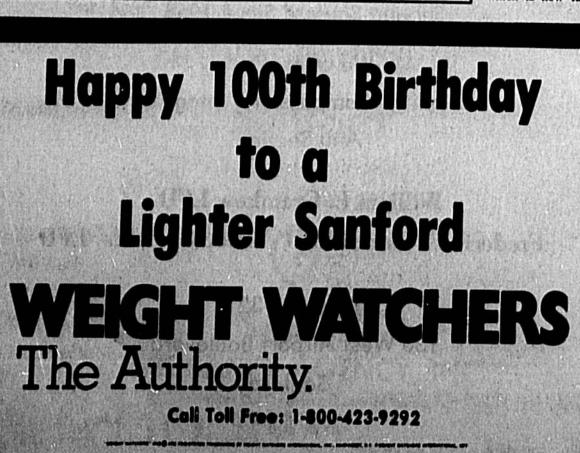

With Sanford's farmers trying to run farms scattered all over town, with cheaper land available for farming southern Florida and with the economic difficulties of the national and local economies, recent decades have been omewhat more challenging for the business community of Sanford.

The location of the Sanford Naval Air Station here in 1942 was a boon to the local economy. The purchasing power of the thousands of military and civilian personnel and their families became a driving force in Sanford's economy. The station was closed after World War II but was reopened when the Korean War broke outt. The air station was finally closed in 1968, and the land was returned to the city. Agriculture continued to decline in influence in the local conomy. The 1971-72 seasons was the last good year for Central Florida farmers, according to Chase. "By 1973-74 the bottom had dropped out. Then there were one or two reasonably good years. Chase and Co. no longer
