

Housework For Exercise

Housework can be made as good a "conditioning" and "sterilizing" exercise for women as golf or tennis, according to expert opinions gathered by Ruth Chandler Moore for Collier's Weekly. Dish-washing, scrubbing, sewing, bed-making, sweeping, ironing, and especially running up and down stairs, can melt off hips and surplus poundage, and even act as a general workout to give a woman the smooth elastic muscles and lithe erect carriage which are supposed to result from golf, tennis or swimming.

The main thing is to learn the correct "form." It's the way you work that matters. "Too bad women don't go after their housework the way they do their sports," says Jac Aker, who directs a fashionable gymnasium for women in New York. "They take up sports to improve their figures, carefully observant to get the right stance and follow-through and posture. Then they slump and go at their housework in any old way. No wonder it pulls so many of them out of shape—when it ought to be as good a workout as any sport! Women can make first-class conditioning exercises out of their housework, if they'll only learn how to do it right."

It makes no difference, then, whether a woman gets her exercise in a gymnasium or a kitchen, just so she gets the right kind. And if she tackles housework with the same emphasis on form and stroke that she'd give her golf game, it will do the same thing for her figure. The conclusion reached in the Collier's study of housework as exercise are, in part, the following:

"It's a matter of mechanics, really. We study the instructions that come with our labor-saving devices and run them with conscientious regard for their efficiency and their expensive guides, and it's high time we learned to do the same for the machine that inevitably shares the work of every one of them—the houseworker's own human body. For that machine is designed on engineering principles, too. If you use it correctly, it will run, as the saying goes, like a bird—and with just as little slack muscle as a bird has, too."

"Take ironing, for example, you not only make hard work of it when you bear down on the iron from above, but you inevitably thicken your shoulders and curve your back. Instead, adjust the board so that you are standing comfortably upright, and rotate from the thigh joint as you work, using your arms merely to guide the iron back and forth. This straightens your spine, pulls in your hips, and eases your shoulders for the sustained effort of this particular task. It isn't necessary, anyhow, to throw your weight on the iron; that only draws ugly lines on the linen as well as on your back and brow."

"And then there's sweeping, there's a great slimming exercise for you—if you do it right! Take an easy stance, knees limber, feet just slightly apart, with your weight falling over your ankle bones—that is, so that you can lift either your heels or toes a little way from the floor without shifting your weight. Now imagine that you have a third leg growing between your two sitting-bones so that your pelvis rests in a tripod. Then, with your hips held down under you and your head and back erect, turn your body from side to side as you sweep, keeping it all in one piece. In other words, instead of swinging the broom from your shoulders and scooping down against the floor with it, keep your back straight, rise down, and shoulders easy, and move the broom back and forth, letting the swing come from your hip-joint and following through with your knees—like the follow-through of a golf stroke. This is a limbering as well as a sterilizing exercise, and it's also, in case you're interested, marvelous practice for your golf-swing!"

So just remember this, when your housework begins to get monotonous, and you look upon life as pretty empty drudgery, with nothing but a pain in the back, sore feet and blistered hands to take your mind off your work, it's a feebly splendid exercise! The experts tell us so.

The Graf's Success

With another successful flight of the Graf Zeppelin to the United States, the old question of "how does she do it?" comes up again. Other dirigibles, seemingly just as strong and fast and with all the same equipment and devices, have never performed anywhere near as notably as the German airship. An answer to the Graf's amazing performance may be found in the reply which its commander gave to one who asked the secret of his success. Dr. Eckener said:

"Weather maps just as you have in this country. We contact by radio at all times in our transatlantic crossings, first our own wonderful weather station, the Seewarte at Hamburg, then your station at Arlington which gives weather all over North America. Of course going to South America and over South America we have to depend more on local stations, and the weather reports from ships at sea, since there is no large weather station on that continent. But we can draw on our knowledge of weather conditions, observed through long months of study and travel over that continent, and then of course the weather is much more equable there than it is here."

"Our helmsman is constantly studying the charts, and three or four times a day he gets a report, which he compares with his own excellent knowledge of meteorology and the result is almost perfect."

Dr. Eckener declared that even storms do not bring him fear, for after judging the storm and determining whether it is electrical or hot, a course is plotted. If lightning is not seen the ship usually rides through the disturbance. Thus it may be seen that scrupulous study of weather reports is as essential in dirigible flying as it sometimes is in successful farming.

SANFORD TWENTY YEARS AGO

Theodore Schaal and family... Old Glory was flying in the air over the Orange County Fair grounds in Orlando early this morning, the occasion being the third annual meeting of the Florida State Association. President J. N. Whittier called the meeting to order and made a few remarks. Talks were made by J. L. Guernsey, F. H. Rand, Capt. B. M. Sims, Mrs. Martha Tyler, J. O. Price, J. H. Sells, and H. H. Dickson. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: E. M. Robinson, president; Mahlon Gore, first vice-president; J. H. Rand, second vice-president; Mrs. Martha Tyler, third vice-president; Mrs. H. A. Newell, fourth vice-president; L. J. Dellins, secretary and treasurer; and Arthur Butt, assistant secretary.

MORAL COLLAPSE OF MIAMI PHILADELPHIA RECORD

The Record has no time for pessimists who blame the depression on the moral collapse of America. The moral fiber of America is as fundamentally fine today as it was in the time of the founders. The depression is due to economic conditions. But in fairness to the pessimistic moralists, we must call attention to the most flagrant and open moral degenerations of a community in the history of this country. Governor David Sholtz, of Florida, has just dismissed the high sheriff of Dade County (Miami and Miami Beach) for "mental instability." That story was dutifully printed on the controlled press of Miami, with hypocritical attempts to justify the governor's outrageous action. Every one in Miami knows the real story. Sheriff Dan Hardie has been one of Miami's few honest police officials in a generation. He had the courage and ability to drive out the Al Capone gang, dry cleaning racketeers and other underworld vermin, that threatened the decency and prosperity of that resort section. His name came prominently before the country last winter when he captured and later executed Zanzara, attempted assassin of President Roosevelt, murderer of Mayor Carmak, of Chicago. Dan Hardie comes of frontier stock, a typical old-fashioned

No employer in a town of 500 or less, may make any "unwarranted reduction" in the number of his employes to come within the exemption from all code terms given to those with five or less workers in the small towns. Part time workers must be counted. The exemption shall not apply in towns of 2,500 or less whose business touch the line of a larger community, nor to those within the metropolitan area of cities of 100,000 or more as defined by the law census. Complaints as to any subject by merchants are to be made to the nearest district office of the Department of Commerce pending creation by the trade itself of local committees, authorized by the code to help administer and enforce the pact. Two important qualifications were made to these rules. A retailer may not below his own invoice cost to meet a competitor's price based on a lower invoice, but to avoid being classed as a violator must report his action immediately to the regional manager until the local committee is created. He cannot cut to meet outside clearance sales, and disposal of damaged goods, etc., where a merchant is free of minimum price restrictions. Even in towns of 2,500 a merchant who will not suffer exceptional hardship is expected to conform to the fullest extent possible with the requirements which would be otherwise obligatory. A special committee on the fair practice provisions of the code is to be set up in each town of all industries under the six points enumerated, pointing out that a supplementary group of regulations could be developed in order to regulate subjects such as return goods, piracy of design, hidden dues, arbitrary, changing stamps, schemes of chance and others. On the six general points, a summary of its report said: "Inaccuracy: Under this heading are the restrictions against inaccurate advertising and other misrepresentations of commodities, credit terms, values, policies and services. Also advertising and selling methods which tend to deceive or mislead the customer, usually referred to as "bait" and "misbranding." The report points out that the committee recognized that the test of fair practice is to accuracy, based on the normal appeal to truth with the implied measure. All persons are liable to unintentional error and are appreciative for having the mistake brought to their attention for correction, but no one wants to be accused either justly or otherwise of dishonesty. These rules eliminate from business discipline any moral element and place adherence to the principle of fair practice on a basis of factual proof. "Attacking competitors: This heading embraces the practices aimed against competitors and their business such as inaccurate references, threats, claims of un-

CODE HIGHLIGHTS

(Continued from Page One). Professional persons, outside salesmen, outside collectors, watchmen, guards and store detectives are not governed by the employee working hours above. No person under 16 years of age shall be employed in a retail store, except that persons 14 and 15 years of age may be employed either for a period not to exceed three hours per day on six days per week, or for one day per week, such day not to exceed eight hours. All such work must be between 7:00 A. M. and 7:00 P. M. NO PERSON UNDER 16 YEARS OF AGE SHALL BE EMPLOYED IN DELIVERING MERCHANDISE FROM MOTOR VEHICLES. The hours worked by any employee during each day shall be consecutive, but one hour may be allowed for a meal period, this hour not to count as part of the employee's working time. Any rest period sleep employees shall not be deducted from such employee's working time. One extra hour may be worked by any employee on one day of each week but the hour is to be included within the maximum hours permitted each week. WAGES: Upon the basis of a 40 hour work week the minimum wage of any employee shall be increased from the rates existing on June 1, 1933 by not less than 20 percent providing that this shall not require an increase in wages to more than the rate of $10 per week and provided further that no employee shall be paid less than 20 cents per hour. "Commercial bribery: That which there is no greater evil than results in the betrayal of the trust is covered by prohibiting the influencing or rewarding of an agent of an employer or a principal, or the securing of an in-ter-urate bill. "Breach of contract: It is considered a breach of contract that the interference with another's contracts or the repudiation of one's own are equal reprehensible. "Coercion: Under this caption are the forced purchase of one another and the discrimination known as a "black list." "American employers' promised reward from NRA for the hours wage code's recently given their employees is the immediate effect on against the unfair competition of their own. Because of the complex overlapping of interests, the code is particularly important in the adoption of uniform fair practice rules, that will provide business to be of the factually and unconsciously pointed out basis that the consumers will receive the benefits of the new code to which they are daily conditioned.

WINTER'S TOUCH SPURS BUYING IN U.S. DURING WEEK

Retail Trade Volume Picks Up, But Other Barometers Decline

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. (AP)—The breath of winter spurred the consumer to active shopping in preparation for cold weather during the past week. Reports of retail trade volume from many parts of the country remained decidedly encouraging, although steel production slackened rather abruptly, and such business barometers as freight movement and electric power production declined. Industrial activity usually slackens during the last two months of the year, but most business indices indicated a somewhat greater than seasonal recession in the past week. Some hope remained, however, that with the spring-up return several weeks later than usual, and carrying well into mid-summer, the autumn upturn may yet materialize. The operations of the NRA and the AAA seemed to be boosting consumer buying. While industrial production declined in September, the bureau of labor figures showed a gain in employment of 3.2 per cent over August, and in payroll of 2.7 per cent. Liberal retail buying was reported from several agricultural areas, notably the south, where the cotton crop is being marketed, and nearly $10,000,000 of the crop reduction money has been received. The pronounced slackening of industrial production in a number of lines, however, is receiving increasing attention, and more to be heard of the lack of financing for construction and capital goods. With private capital still timid, more and more heavily are these lines leaning on government credit. The public works program has heated heavy construction appreciably in recent weeks, and Washington is understood to be considering increasing the works total from $3,500,000,000 to $5,000,000,000. Automobile production held about steady during the past week, after the rather sharp decline of the previous week, and more than double the amount of the like week of 1932. Steel production has fallen close to 30 per cent of capacity, or to a rate little more than half of the summer peak, with automobile material buying slack. The steel companies are still at loggerheads with Railroad Coordinator Eastman over the price at which they will accept the business for 800,000 tons of steel rails.

TUGWELL SAYS HIGHER WAGES MUST BE PAID

Perhaps the most popular of all the present-day prevalent theories of government and business men runs in the following terms: In order to get things going again we must induce business a profit. Only with this assurance will they begin to borrow to expand their operation, and to give employment. What is holding us back, it is said, is uncertainty—uncertainty that goods made can be sold at a gain, uncertainty that these gains can be invested in further enterprises which will make us for her profit justifiably to be sold on in bonds to be deemed in a field.

"The theory, it will be seen, demands the further program of deflation, reduced governmental budgets, that taxes may be low, abandonment of the program of higher wages and farm incomes. It demands a declaration of intention to stand on at all costs, last consequences of a 'sound' dollar.

"All these demands of course, are the familiar ingredients of orthodox mental pronouncements before the March 31st election was a mandate of reflation. If it re-opens anything, it was the adjustment which led by these attitudes. And those people who would like us to crawl back to the old ideas like a wounded animal to its a soldier den, instead of to the courage of the present government.

"We are trying to show that heaped up corporate surpluses and an over-concentration of wealth are not the life of trade but the death of trade. Income must be transformed into larger wages and higher prices to farmers, not simply stacked up in sterile hoards of capital. If wealth in any large and gratifying sense is to be guaranteed profits, in the terms of cash.

"If, I should like to ask, we their interpretation, to all business men, who is to buy the goods on which the profits are made? It is elementary that purchasing power must equal total prices if activity is to be maintained. This is not consistent with the kind of profits contemplated under the theory I have mentioned, and the kind to which many business men are attempting to help themselves under the deflationary wings of our blue eagle. For when prospective buyers are lacking, this fact also is obvious to those who distribute credit. The wharves for expansion cannot be had until we have definitely and with lower operations gone over to the low price, large volume program. That was contemplated on by NRA.

"Nothing but higher wages and farm incomes, together with moderate retail prices can address the maladjustments which continue to exist in the structure of our prices. Profits will have to follow from new efficiencies. To put them first is to put the cart before the horse. On fact the best guarantee of profits is capacity of operation of low costs and prices; this involves the preservation of purchasing power, the conservation of markets. It may

Miss Andrews Presents Interesting Program

A large audience of friends assembled in the studio parlors of Mrs. Fannie S. Munson on Myrtle Avenue Saturday evening to hear the piano recital program presented by Miss Mary Frances Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Andrews, who is a pupil of the Fannie S. Munson Piano School.

Assistant talent on the program was Mrs. Margaret McRae Maffett, reader, who responded to applause with several encore numbers in addition to the numbers on the program.

Miss Carolyn Cogburn and Miss Fannie Raba Munson assisted Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Munson in receiving and seating the guests in the studio which was decorated in a pink color scheme with a background of ferns and plumosa palms. Baskets of pink anemones, bowls of pink roses, pink shaded lights and pink candles accentuated the chosen color note in the studio and entrance hall.

Following a prolonged applause at the close of the recital, Mrs. Munson said: "The certificate presented tonight is for the completion of a certain required course in music study, which includes selections from various schools of music, classical, modern, and ultra modern compositions from all the old masters; theory music history and recital." Miss Andrews will continue her music study with Mrs. Munson for further grades, advanced theory and harmony.

The entire program was given as follows:

Russian Rhapsody, Heesleberg—Mary Frances Andrews.

A Heap o' Lovin', Guest—Mrs. Maffett.

(a) Country Gardens, Grainger—Mrs. Maffett.

(b) Cosack Dance, Repper—Mary Frances Andrews.

That Old Sweetheart of Mine, Riley—Mrs. Maffett.

Liebestraum, Liszt—Mrs. Maffett.

Valcik, Mokrejs—Mary Frances Andrews.

SOTHERN IS DEAD

EDWARD HUGH SOTHERN

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Edward Hugh Sothern, who made roles of the forlorn Romeo and other Shakespearean figures live on the stages of two continents, died Saturday night in his hotel suite.

He was 73 years old and succumbed to lobar pneumonia.

His wife, Julia Marlowe the Juliet of his greatest stage triumph—was at his bedside. His death was announced yesterday. Only a few close friends and his family knew that the great actor died at 6:15 P. M. Saturday.

He had asked that his body be cremated. The funeral service will be private. The ashes will be left with Mrs. Sothern.

Garbo Praises Milane Film With Dietrich

Greta Garbo, Joseph von Sternberg and Marlene Dietrich were the first three persons to view "The Song of Songs," Miss Dietrich's new Paramount film, produced by Rouben Mamoulian, now at the Milane Theater.

Miss Garbo, seeking to enlist the services of Rouben Mamoulian, its director, for her new picture, saw "The Song of Songs" in the projection room of the Paramount studio and gave it the highest praise. So did Von Sternberg, who has directed Miss Dietrich in all her previous pictures. Miss Dietrich, it is said, considers it her finest effort.

"The Song of Songs," a lavish production adapted from Hermann Sudermann's literary classic of a selfish girl who suffers for her unselfish love, features a supporting cast including Brian Aherne, Lionel Atwill, Allison Skipwith, Harile Albright and Helen Prentiss.

were not injured, nor was Walter Brown, Altamonte Springs negro who was the driver of the other car. Also unhurt were three negroes riding with Brown.

The accident occurred just to the north of the road leading to Sanford-Deland highway at a point about one mile south of Orange City.

Mr. Smith was driving north to Daytona Beach where he was a member of a dredge crew which recently operated in Lake Monroe. Brown was driving south to his home at Altamonte Springs.

The left front wheel of the Smith car locked with the left front wheel of Brown's car, witnesses state, causing an abrupt halt in the progress of both automobiles, and resulting in both driver's losing control of the wheel. In an instant both cars had crashed into opposite ditches.

Mr. Smith and his companions were brought to a local hospital by passing motorists. The former had died enroute, and the latter were released shortly after their arrival.

Sheriff S. E. Stone of Volusia County investigated the wreck shortly after it happened. This morning it was learned that Brown had been released, and that the accident was termed "unavoidable."

Mr. Smith was born at Longwood on Christmas Day in 1891. He was widely known in this county as a former county guard, railroad worker, Elks Club steward, and restaurant operator. He saw active service during the World War, and since his return from duty he had resided in this city.

Surviving him are three brothers: R. F. Smith of Sanford, Charles W. Smith and A. M. Smith of Pelham, Ga.
