

Breakfasts Subsidies Help Program In 4 Seminole Schools

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

Federal funds and food commodities enable a breakfast program operated by the Seminole County School District to "break even," according to the district's food service director.

Charlotte Whitmore said the same rule applies to the breakfast program as the lunch program. Students from low-income families are eligible for free or reduced cost breakfasts.

Mrs. Whitmore said the federal government subsidizes the program, providing a portion of the cost of the meals and provides some food, such as peanut butter, canned fruit, cereals and other staples, to the districts.

Those federal subsidies enable the district to operate the breakfast program at four locations—Southside, Goldsboro, Midway and Lawton Elementary schools.

The program is the same one which has been offered by the district for several years and the same as one previously offered at other schools.

Southside, Students, regardless of income, may sign up for the breakfast of cold cereal, milk and orange juice.

Mrs. Whitmore said students who receive free or reduced price lunches are automatically eligible to receive the same price break on breakfast. Eligibility requirements for reduced price meals is an income of $1,434 per month for a family of four. A family of four with an income of under $1,008 per month is eligible for free lunch and breakfast.

The program has received opposition from some members of the community who complained that the community was paying for breakfasts for children from affluent families.

"There were some strong feelings about parent responsibility," Mrs. Whitmore said. "It gets to be personal with a lot of people."

She said there are instances that both parents may have to travel early for work so their children must get thermoses ready for school. For those students, and children from single-parent families who head leaves early for work, the program is beneficial.

But unless those children meet the eligibility requirements for reduced price meals, they must pay the full price for their breakfast.

The breakfast program has operated smoothly at Goldsboro and Lawton, where more than 100 students eat breakfast every day, and at Midway, where 140 students eat breakfast. The pilot program at Southside, started just this past week, is also working smoothly, Mrs. Whitmore said.

Only 14 children showed up for breakfast the first day breakfast was offered but Southside school officials said participation would probably increase slowly. Parents of 87 children at Southside said they were interested in participating in the program.

The pilot program will continue through the remainder of the school year when the school board will decide whether it should be continued.

Some students at Southside Elementary School are participating in a pilot breakfast program at the school. The students like Rick Perez, a third grader, and Lateralita Cleveland, kindergarten, arrive at school at 7:30 a.m. to eat a breakfast.

A parade, a mascot fire, a city-wide cleanup program and the establishment of a historical commission were all discussed by the City Manager's 90th anniversary and granted permission for the parade participants to gather at Crystal Lake Beach Park for other activities.

Kulbes is to contact county officials to determine whether a special permit can be obtained for disposal of the trash at a county dump.

City Manager Tom King reported cleanup for one day and a possible follow-up every week, each in May.

Dick Foss, chamber president, said among the dignitaries in the parade will be state Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont, and state Rep. Art Grindie, R-Aluminston Springs, as well as city officials from Sanford and Lake Mary.

Crime Also Drops In State

By Victor Auerbach

Crime in Florida dropped in 1982 to the lowest level in five years, reflecting a drop in crime in Seminole County of 9.7 percent, according to the Department of Law Enforcement's annual report, Crime in Florida.

Presenting the 1982 annual report, Commissioner Robert L. Dempsey says, "For the first time since 1976, the actual number of serious crimes reported in Florida has decreased from the previous year. With almost 38,000 fewer serious crimes reported, Floridians may think that the crime problem is no longer a serious threat and will ultimately disappear.

"I would caution anyone not to think in this term since there is still an average of one major crime committed for every 13 residents of our state," says Dempsey.

The number of murders, rapes, robberies, assaults, burglaries, larcenies and thefts of motor vehicles dropped by 4.8 percent last year but assaults on police officers were up by a staggering 80.1 percent while the number of officers assaulted and injured jumped by 19.9 percent.

The crackdown against drug dealers in Florida, particularly in South Florida, produced huge decreases in the amount of drugs seized as the dealers fled the state and moved north across the state line.

The figures, which do not include drugs seized exclusively by Federal agencies, shows that in 1982 there was a 69 percent drop in the amount of drugs seized and 9.8 percent fewer people arrested.

"The state's lower crime figure is reflected in a drop in crime in Seminole County of 9.7 percent," said the state's spokesman John Spokiel, in no way measure due to the cooperation of the public who are more aware of the crime problem in Seminole County Drug Task Force undercover agents have been particularly successful recently in arresting drug dealers and Spokiel said that the lower seizure rate is because of the success against dealers.

Against Blacks Qualifying Teacher Test Called Biased

By Michael Beha

Teachers' unions, Florida teachers will probably be thrown out by the courts because of their racial bias, the director of the Seminole Education Association believes.

Bob Becht said comments made by state Commissioner of Education Ralph Turfington show that the state's teacher qualifying test is racially biased.

"I would bet it won't have a long term impact," he said. "But if it's not thrown out by the courts, minority students won't have minority teachers as role models to look up to."

Gov. Bob Graham and the Cabinet agreed Wednesday to make the qualifying test for would-be teachers more difficult.

Ron Beeth

Graham said making the test harder conforms with his goal of making Florida's educational system one of the top ranked in the country.

The Cabinet action increases the number of correct answers needed to pass the reading, mathematics and professional education sections of the test. The writing standard is removed by black groups who claim the test is already tilted against them. They cite figures showing that only 40 percent of would-be black teachers pass the test compared to a 90 percent passing rate for whites.

Becht said there is an obvious racial bias to the test, which has been admitted by the commissioner of education, Turfington's view and the test figures should be sufficient to get the higher standards thrown out by the courts.

"We're not overly enamored with the concept of a test in the first place," the director of the 1,325-member association said.

"We question very seriously if the test truly evaluates a person's ability to succeed," he continued. "It doesn't guarantee that person is going to be a good teacher."

He said the test should be dropped entirely and state colleges and universities should be charged with the responsibility of adequately preparing students to teach.

Owen McCarron, Seminole County School District assistant superintendent for administrative services, said he doesn't see the higher standards, which will go into effect later this year, having any impact on the quality of teachers based on the percentage passing the test. It won't be too much of a problem," he said.

McCarron said the higher standards are a good way to improve the quality of education in the state.

Sanford Commissioner Named to Health Fund

Sanford City Commissioner David T. Farr has been elected by the Florida League of Cities to serve as a trustee of the Florida Municipal Health Trust Fund.

He is the first Seminole County official to be named to the fund.

The program was formed in May 1980 and now offers 200 governmental entities pooled group health and workers coverage with annualized premiums in excess of $6 million, covering 8,000 employees and dependents.

Commissioner Farr will join other elected officials governing the program. Trustees serve a maximum of six years to allow for a geographic and appropriate balance of all members.

The trustees are responsible for the overall operation of the fund, sponsored and administered by the Florida League of Cities and serviced by Hill, Richards & Co. Inc. of Orlando.

Rouses' Escape Called Miracle

Langstone county music performer Gordon and Carrie Lou Rouse, who had been visiting with friends in Winter Springs, were injured in an auto accident near Fort Dodge as they were returning home to Miami.

According to Robert A. Grady of 147 Hayes Road, Winter Springs, with whom the Rouses had been staying, the couple's car struck a guard rail Thursday night on the way from their first home. A tire was flattened when the car hit the guard rail, causing the vehicle to overturn.

They were taken to Stuart Memorial Hospital. Their car was a total loss, he said.

"The Highway Patrol said it was a miracle anyone walked away from the accident," said Grady, "and if she had not been lying down in the back seat, she would have probably been killed."

Rouse is the surviving member of the Rouse Brothers musical comedy act, whose show business career spanned four decades.

Gordon's late brother, Ervin, is best known for writing the song, "The Orange Blossom Special," which the Rouses hope will be named Florida's official state song.

Higher Medicare Fees Considered By Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Budget Office report raising medical fees for the old and disabled total generates billions of dollars in new revenue, but would not stop it from running out of money to pay benefits by 1990.

Under a "fast-track" budget office Medicare fee-for-service program, a fast-track program for Medicare beneficiaries requiring people to pay more for health care.

Medicare costs rose an average 17.7 percent a year from 1970 to 1982, and would rise more than $60 billion in 1982. Current revenues would not meet the cost of 1987 or 1990.

"None of the options considered in this paper would generate enough revenue to do more than postpone the onset of the problem for one or two years," the budget office report said.

To eliminate the deficit by requiring beneficiaries to pay more "would require a very large increase in costs," the budget office said.

Medicare includes hospital and outpatient benefits to 24 million old and disabled Americans.

The budget program is funded by part of the Social Security trust fund, said by a Republican and fees for beneficiaries. In outpatient insurance pay benefits into a separate fund. Beneficiaries pay premiums and stay in part of each bill, the government pays the rest.

The budget office said three-quarters of Medicare beneficiaries are eligible from paying higher costs because they are an insured or have private supplemental insurance policies.

The budget office considered two main working options:

—Raise the premium for Supplemental Medicare insurance, the out-of-pocket portion of Medicare, which is voluntary. Costs would rise an average $68 per beneficiary next year. Savings $1.4 billion.

—Require a first-year premium for hospital insurance. A $10 monthly premium would cost $120 a year per beneficiary. Savings: $2.3 billion.

—Raise the $75 deductible for supplemental insurance to $100, offsetting about 70 percent of income required. Savings: $200 million.

—Require patients to pay 25 percent of each outpatient bill instead of the current 20 percent. This would cost $40 for the average old beneficiary, and $24 for the average disabled one. Savings: $600 million.

—Require patients to pay in more for hospital care, but not to exceed 10 percent of their income. This would cost $40 for the average old beneficiary, and $24 for the average disabled one. Savings: $600 million.

New Sponge Contraceptive OK'd By FDA

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new sponge contraceptive approved by the government has a failure rate of 18 percent during the first year of use and 10 percent after that — about the same as a diaphragm, Planned Parenthood says.

The contraceptive, approved recently by the Food and Drug Administration, was tested during field tests since 1977 in 11 countries. The trials were funded partly by more than $600,000 from the National Institutes of Health and the Agency for International Development.

Dr. Louise Tyler, medical director of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said the results for the "one-size-fits-all" polyurethane sponge — 18 percent failure in the first year and 10 percent after that — put it in the same league with the diaphragm.

"Anyone who wants a high degree of protection against pregnancy probably will not be happy with the sponge," Dr. Tyler said.

The FDA has told the manufacturer, V.I. Corp. of Costa Mesa, Calif., to inform purchasers of the safety of vaginal contraceptive sponge that its use is not as large enough to assess the risk of developing toxic shock syndrome.

However, Dr. Tyler said, a study has shown that, although spermicide employed with the device may protect against gonorrhea and other sexually transmitted diseases.

It is the most commonly used sperm killer in the United States and in more than 20 years of use has not caused significant harm to men or women.

The sponge is made of a special polyurethane material that has been tested for strength, softness, heart, blood vessels and heart valves.

V.I. vice president Anne Bellegria said the non-prescription sponge will be shipped to countries first and should be available from Arizona to Alaska by mid-July. The new product will be available nationwide by September.

A month's supply at the rate of one per each 24 hours for a very sexually active person, probably would cost more in a month than the $12 for a month's supply of birth control pills.

Unlike the diaphragm, the sponge fits all women in one size and thus does not require fitting by a doctor or a prescription. It can be used for 24 hours and then must be removed — by tugging on a loop — and disposed.

A plus cited by Dr. Tyler is that the sponge does not cause any systemic side effects such as the potential problems faced by users of the IUD and the pill.

Old Hospital is Not The Best Place For County Offices

I strongly disagree with your editorial of March 11, 1982, commending the move if the county staff "into the old hospital building."

I do agree that we don't want to keep spreading the county staff into "another facility" and I agree that "for the next four or five years" that we need a temporary "office" AND that is my present point.

To spend $1.8 million of taxpayers' dollars that we don't have to purchase 100,000 square feet of initial space that we don't need to build and a real waste of dollars.

By using the empty space in the old jail, by using the empty space upstairs in the Emergency Operations Center, by using the space designed for growth in the new Health Center and by efficiently using space in the other County buildings, the most new space we need in the next couple of years for offices is 20,000 square feet.

Let's run the County government as a business. A successful business first looks for the best location to work in. Each of us at the County is centrally located with the primary center of the county, the old hospital, just far away. The hospital is 300 feet from the north entrance of the County.

A successful business then looks for efficiency of operations. We are looking for the best use of Public Works, the Department of Environmental Services, the Department of Public Safety, the Emergency Operations Center, County Services, the Jail, the County Museum and the Plant at Fort Meade.

For a few dollars, you just spent over $400,000 to acquire the adjacent 17 acres. Don't you think it is time for the rest of the administration to move there to consolidate costly duplication of efforts and overhead AND better run our government?

Thankly, it looks as perhaps the most important concern since the bulk of expense in a salary — roughly 60% — of the total payroll is not Florida Tax. What is Ver Chairman

Ophthalmologists Oppose Florida Optometrist Legislation

For the third year in a row, ophthalmologists are seeking to "become physicians by the league" of education.

Last summer, the state's Board of Optometry proposed legislation that would allow optometrists to use and prescribe certain drugs for the treatment of eye ailments.

The ophthalmologists and the Florida Medical Association have made the case to court and the First Circuit Court of Appeal Judge Tallahassee cleared the way for eye specialists to challenge the rule.

Since then, the ophthalmologists and the Florida Medical Association have gone strong financial support to numerous legislative candidates who have been talked in front of the House and Senate. If passed, the bill would allow optometrists to both use and prescribe "limited" drugs.

What you may be told that it is "about" "hurt," a matter of economics that the medical decision that a

The facts are that so many Florida citizens have eye examinations and have a need for eye care, the ophthalmologists could not possibly handle the demand. A great many optometrists who work primarily in the eye ophthalmologists do very little eye examinations these days. They welcome and encourage the optometrists who work primarily in this field of refraction.

The medical profession in Florida, particularly the ophthalmologists who are financially involved in the health of the human eye, fear that passage of the proposed legislation, which would allow optometrists to use lasers could adversely affect the health of Floridians. Only two states now allow optometrists to use the laser for drugs.

It is a lack of training and education of optometrists causing eyes to be treated by illegals.

Taxes For Schools

Few knowledgeable people would dispute the contention that Florida's highest education level is second-rate. But there is concern over the government's effort to do so to improve it. Should taxes be raised to increase funding to current programs? Is a major reform necessary? To answer this basic question, we have found an institution in northeast Florida. It is a lack of training and education of optometrists causing eyes to be treated by illegals.

The depressing situation is hardly a surprise, although not one who justified. Two of the Democratic primary candidates, incumbent Mayor Jane M. Byrne and County Treasurer Richard J. Free press is one of the strongest pillars of American society, guaranteed by the Constitution and treasured by everyone who loves democracy. But in recent months, we have heard speakers on college campuses have been shouted down and frequently forced away by vicious hordes of anti-gay men?

It has had a chilling effect. With the graduation season coming to an end, the student organizations have been simply refusing to make commencement speeches. Many of them are even phasing out by parties determined to use any means at their disposal to avert expulsion.

Last week, a group of national education leaders, student organizations joined together in a national statement condemning the abominable tactics. Disagreeing with points of view by peaceful protesters, the statement urged the suspension of those at that philosophical perspective that encourage that attacks of faculty and is simply unacceptable in this kind of democracy.

Tuition Colleges Resorting To Creative Financing For Cash-Short Students

By Stanley W. Darden

United Press International
Colleges and universities across the United States, including some in the Southeast, are finding they must devise more flexible tuition payment plans for their students in these hard economic times.

One of the most imaginative plans in the nation has come out of St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minn., a liberal arts institution with a well-respected music program.

St. Olaf estimates that a student who enrolls this year and stays through graduation four years later can expect to pay $35,000 in tuition.

The college has instituted what it calls a "charitable remainder trust" to help the parents of students defray the cost of their education.

The college works by shifting a family's assets to the college — which generates a tax deduction for charitable contributions — then having the college establish a 30-year trust that yields income to the family.

If a family has or can borrow $50,000 in assets, they could earn enough to send two or even three more children through college for the same amount that they would spend to educate one child.

The family would donate $10,000 to the college, getting in return a charitable deduction worth $3,000, assuming the family is in the 30 percent tax bracket.

The remaining $40,000 worth of assets goes to the college for the creation of a 30-year trust, with all the income it earns during that time going to the student or the family. This $40,000 gives rise to another charitable deduction, the amount of which depends on the cost basis of the assets.

The college invests the money in high-quality investment corporate bonds, yielding 12 percent a year. That alone is not enough to pay the $5,000-$10,000 yearly college costs. But combined with the income tax savings the parents have realized from their charitable contributions, it will cover almost two years of costs.

The rest comes from a loan to the student from St. Olaf.

At the end of the fourth year, the student will owe the college $12,000 — which will be paid off from the proceeds of the trust over the next three years. By the end of the seventh year, the student's costs will be paid, and he and his family will still have 13 more years of income from the trust — a total of $65,000, more than enough to send another child through college.

"We had a great many inquiries in this plan, particularly as it pertains to charitable trusts," said Raymond E. Wahlberg, St. Olaf's director of deferred giving programs. "It's a new program. It's only starting up this fall, so there haven't been any sign-ups yet but several people are seriously considering it. We have run it past our legal and tax experts and they can't find any reason why it shouldn't work."

Wahlberg said the plan doesn't require that all children in the family be sent to St. Olaf. The benefits from the trust flow to the other named in the plan regardless of what schools they attend.

"We're convinced we're the only school in the country that's doing this type of thing," said Wahlberg. "But other schools are studying it."

Most state supported universities have tuition low enough so they don't have to draw up deferred payment plans.

At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where in-state tuition is about $900 per semester, there are no deferred payment plans, according to financial aid director Eleanor Myers.

"We're blessed with low tuition rates for North Carolina residents," said Mrs. Morris. "That takes some of the pressure off our bookkeeping as well as our students' pocketbooks."

Out-of-state students pay significantly more than in-staters at UNC, but there has been no need to develop deferred payment plans for them, said Mrs. Morris.

A spokesman for Emory University in Atlanta said Emory has installment plans for students but no trust plan that compares with St. Olaf's.

Need Some Last-Minute Tax Info?

With only a few days remaining before the April 15 tax return deadline, the Internal Revenue Service is reminding Florida taxpayers that the new Tele-Tax service is available for last-minute tax information.

"Earlier this tax season, we instituted this new service in seven Florida cities in order to enable taxpayers to obtain recorded tax information," according to Merlin W. Hoys, IRS district director for Florida. The recorded information service is available 24 hours a day and contains information on 141 subjects including filing requirements, itemized deductions and tax credits.

In order to use the Tele-Tax service, taxpayers must have a push-button telephone. Taxpayers wanting to call Tele-Tax should call 422-0092.

More than 50,000 Florida taxpayers have already used the service of the Tele-Tax service this year.

IN BRIEF
CambK Subject Of Drug Funds Laundering Probe
 WINTER PARK (UPI) — A bank here has been placed under federal currency laws by failing to report an $800,000 worth of transactions over the last four years, federal investigators say.

Provisional investigators a drug enforcement agency discovered the suspected transactions while monitoring the accounts of several customers at the Winter Park, Cascade Bank branch.

The 17-check cache was seized in July by the Freedom Stairs and Last Association of Cambria.

A grand jury, hearing to testimony from the investigative branch of the Internal Revenue Service, is holding the findings.

"The investigation is, of course, far from complete, but it indicates that the Cambria bank was used by a network of officers and employees who have engaged in illegal violations of reporting laws," Assistant U.S. Attorney Stephen Allred said.

Bank officials say they are "entirely concerned" and intend to cooperate fully with investigators.

"I would hope that we would have a settlement in the near future," a Cambria spokesman told reporters last night, adding to the release of the cache, but he would not say before most of us were in this organization," said Robert King, president of Freedom's Board.

Bank officials say they are "entirely concerned" and intend to cooperate fully with investigators.

Congressional Study Warns

No Way To Protect MX From Soviet Attack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Richard Nixon's special study of the MX missile has concluded there is no practical way to make the intercontinental nuclear weapons invulnerable to Soviet attack.

The Washington Post said on Friday an advisory study has revealed a shift in opinion in the administration, which is now accepting to move the focus off the missile now because a vulnerable MX missile is easier to hit in a renewed Congress.

The Post said the change in focus was revealed while examining the study last week by members of the House subcommittee to make Mexico by Reagan's special study of the MX missile.

The committee is expected to report an estimated 100 MX missiles reduce to about 100 MX missiles under a crash program to develop a new, smaller missile named "Midnight" within the next several months.

The newspaper quoted a letter by Defense Secretary Robert McNamara to congressional members of Congress to attend Air Force hearings to understand why the MX was needed even if it cannot be made invulnerable.

"The strategy in the past, both in the Press and on Capitol Hill, has been to focus on the 'beating issue' and disregard the real question as to the need for modernizing the ICBM fleet," the letter said.

The ICBM vulnerability problems is only one of the myriad of strategic issues that require written explanation by the Chairman before leaving a definite message on the "beating issue."

The Los Angeles Times reported that along with studying the need for a smaller missile, the panel will recommend research on increasing existing intercontinental missile size.

The Times said the potential for a major shift in strategy is being established the same way.

annual weapon (but congressmen who already support a strategic MX-ICBM missile program).

The newspaper said the two research efforts would not be linked with a new decision on whether to deploy more MX missiles or new small ICBMs in the late 1970s and beyond.

It also said McNamara's letter said Thursday the MX system is being proposed to solve three problems in the MX program: survivability, aging and delivery capability in the face of the Soviet missile buildup.

First, must having MX missiles in a "suicidal state" was no, meet the survivability goal, but it will solve the other two problems.

"While we would like to see survivable launch by addressing the first two problems, the aging and capability ones, we would concern that it's more urgent that we solve the aging and capability problems at this point," he said.

More Money, Time Needed To Cut Black Jobless Rate

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — More money and more time for vocational education programs to place students in jobs could help reduce the high unemployment rate among black teenagers, education administrators say.

These comments came in Gov. Bob Graham's report to the Governor's Interagency Education Committee on the state's vocational education program, which would be de-emphasized under a major proposal to restructure the state's vocational education program.

Schlichter Just Pulled In By City Boys?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Two years ago Ohio State Attorney Gen. Schlichter antitrustly wanted at his former's farmhouse in rural central Ohio to see if he would be picked in the first round of the NFL draft.

This weekend, Schlichter, who was made a No. 1 choice by the Baltimore Colts, was scheduled to appear in a FBI grand jury investigation. Schlichter and Columbus lawyer Jack Chester, whom Schlichter hired to represent him, Friday said they requested a federal investigation that would be asked if his client was frightened, the attorney would say that Schlichter is "cooperating fully with the FBI."

"I think that says it all," said Chester. "The NFL said it is cooperating in the federal probe and also is conducting its own investigation. Chester's representative met with Mr. Schlichter, and the league will continue its investigation," a spokesman said. "We will have no further comment until the status of the federal investigation and our own investigation."

Chet Chester, Columbus Republican who once served as former President Richard M. Nixon's personal attorney and who represents Schlichter, issued a statement saying Schlichter is a "material witness" in the investigation.

"None of the charges involve any football game in which Schlichter, or any team of which he was a member, participated. Schlichter will make no further statement on the status of the case pending its federal court," said Chester.

York St. Louis and Cincinnati. Simmons, who predicted eight to 10 new franchises could be awarded, said the owners are not afraid of diluting the league through expansion since it is confident that finding talent for the new teams is "the team of our problem."

"We are not only looking at big TV markets," he said. "We are looking for cities that are open to expansion. We are going to explore any city beyond the four markets. We have, however, not yet revealed the four cities that will receive franchises..."

"We are going after it full bore," said Alan Harmon, one of the owners of the L.A. Express and a member of Bassett's committee. "Interest is so high from cities that have the facilities, demand and no great — we feel we wouldn't be creating an injustice if we didn't expand."

Harmon, who predicted as many as a dozen new franchises could be awarded, said Pittsburgh, Houston, Dallas, and Minneapolis are the most likely sites for the initial expansion.

Simmons said the owners also talked about plans for their July 17 championship game and said New Orleans and Denver are under consideration as the site. He had no comment on a player union leader Ed Cooney's effort to change the bargaining agent for USFL players, saying only "we take good care of our players."

Simmons said that after two seasons, he took the American Football League to get up to that average, he added. Simmons did not reveal any financial figures, but when asked how, "later any of the owners were considering a push for the NFL."

There is not an ownership that is in financial straits, and no indication of any cities dropping out. Rodney has positioned to win.

Spirits Move Mr. Cap To Popping Bottle Caps

By Lori Drew

Don't try "busting the bottle." In "Mr. Cap's" establishment, the 250 uniquely shaped whiskey bottles are carefully aligned along ledges for display and drink — and perhaps a little friendly conversation — only.

Nick Capaccio and his wife, Dorothy, have been collecting Jim Beam executive, state and even election-year bottles for 28 years, Capaccio explained. "My wife really started the whole thing. When she told me she was going to start collecting these bottles, I said she was crazy."

But now the 58-year-old native of Massachusetts appears quite crazy about their collection, boasting a string 500 unique bottles — none deserving the description rare and valuable.

"Their values range from $1,000, to $25," Capaccio said. And along the many wall shelves in his personally-designed, new Sanford restaurant and lounge sit half the family collection, with "Cap's" favorite fire engine ready for the moment when it will be called upon to add to a light conversation.

"Look at this. The wheels even turn. Do you see this? The proud bottle owner walked casually around the comfortably lighted dining area of his business he stresses, "is sure for the family." He pauses to chat with his patrons before moving past the fish and Sherman, golfers and golf balls and "Ding's 20th." There is an army helmet canteen, and a Liberty Bell, ticker-tape machine and more than a dozen models of antique cars. Astonishingly, each is a bottle.

"Each year, Jim Beam puts out an executive bottle," He held up a fine ceramic water jug complete with vanity mirror affixed. "This one is 12 years old, worth about $250. The longer you have them, the more valuable they become." He said they sell for "812 and up."

Indiana, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Virginia were honored with bottles during the Capaccio collection years, and the couple also have six sets of election-year donkeys and elephants, not to mention Mrs. Capaccio's complete Elvis Presley bottle set. "They (The McCormick Company) put some out," said the collector. "And she has all of them."

Although all the bourbon bottles are not publicly displayed, all are empty. He said the special spirits have been shared among family and friends over the years, predominantly in the Westfield/Springfield, Mass. area where the Capaccios resided until just recently.

"I'm originally from Springfield," he explained, pointing to the Massachusetts ragged bottle from 1976. "Then we moved to Westfield for 10 years where we owned four establishments, including the Treks Country Club and Restaurant.

From 1973 till 1975, Capaccio owned and operated the Lakewood Inn in Tampa, and operated for what "Cap" hopes is the last time, "We moved to Sanford in '82 and plan to retire here." Sanford became home for the couple and two of their eight children because, "I thought it was a nice, quiet town," said the restaurant businessman of 31 years.

Sue Harper, also a bottle collector, shares Nick Capaccio's enthusiasm for rare whiskey bottles.

Dancing And Pottery Just Seem To Go Together

"If there is something we could share with other people, whether they be aspiring artists or anyone, I guess, it's that whatever you love to do you can make that your life's work. You don't have to make it secondary to your life, you don't have to confine it to a hobby," says Martha Jepsen, Martha and her husband, Steven, are co-owners of Jepsen Pottery in Geneva.

The Jepsens have had the studio on Florida Route 46 since 1973. Prior to that they had a studio in Orlando for 18 months.

"I find it interesting that most people drive by and think they aren't welcome even though there's a sign out," says Martha.

Love blossomed for the Jepsens when Steven was doing graduate work in pottery in the college. Martha attended in Kirwinville, Mo. "Steven stood behind me and held my hand and helped me throw on the wheel," says Martha. Martha says today she doesn't do any wheel throwing. She leaves that to Steven. She does cut and slab building, but says most of the pieces they make are "joint efforts."

set pattern of shows they worked each summer, traveling to Chicago, Milwaukee, Kansas City and Ann Arbor, Mich. But now their shows are limited to Chicago, Ann Arbor and Florida. Martha says 10 years is a long time to be traveling, so they are "putting out emphasis on wholesaling so we don't have to travel so much."

Steven taught at the University of Florida for seven years. Today, however, he devotes his time and energies to pottery, workshops and guest speaking engagements.

Their studio sits on five acres, where Martha says they have an enormous amount of space. Because of their space, other pottery and craftsmen come to see what the classes are and at times rent space to create their crafts.

Michael Galtrii, a potter, native of Sanford and former student of Steven's, rents space from them. There also is a student from Bethelington College who is doing a 2-month work study program with the Jepsens at the present time. Also, Bob Danner, a friend from Wisconsin has set up his primarkmaking shop, and he and Steven are pooling their energies toward the materialization of innovative concepts.

"My husband is a venturer. He and I do a lot alike. They have the ability to materialize new ideas and then the energy to follow up on them," says Martha.

The Jepsens not only make functional objects to sell, but they also use these items in their everyday lives. Most everything they make can be used and most is know-how. Their home is filled with pottery and art objects. Once a year, around Christmas time, the Jepsens have an open house at which time the public is invited to come view their pottery.

Lately, pottery has been taking second place in Martha's life. Martha takes three dance classes, tap and jazz, a work, and is an assistant dance instructor for six Jepsens, offers and at times rent space to create their crafts.

"Dancing is a real big part of my life," says Martha, who has been dancing for four years now.

Martha feels the most stressful you can bring into your life, the more fulfilling and rich your life will seem. "You have to make the effort to go out and get it for yourself. Some things seem to you, but what you really want, you have to go out and get it. What you have in your life is what you're given for yourself," says Martha.

Costumes have been provided by the school's lunch roomettes class under direction of teacher, Debbie Mitchell. The lighting and stage direction is by Sertees member, John Patterson.

Special invitations have been sent out to all Seminole County middle and elementary schools. Two performances include April 29 for elementary schools, and April 28, for middle schools. Both shows start at 9:30 a.m.

If for some reason of our fun, a performance, open to the public, will be held on April 28 at 7 p.m. in the school auditorium. A $1 donation will be collected at the door.

The funds raised will be used by the Sertees to help area handicapped children.

The Lake Mary Elementary School has announced that orders are being taken for this year's "yearbooks." Editions are limited so be sure to order now. The cost is $4.25.

According to the school's assistant principal, Marlene Kinney, the fifth graders of the school have been learning new things to do in their sport time besides watching television.

Through a special Dividends project, they have been learning the art of entrepreneurship. Lisa Harding of Deas-Needle Works, has visited each of the 8th grade classes and gave the children first hand training on the making of this craft. She also provided the materials.

The kindergarten classes have been learning the alphabet in a delicious fashion this year. The teachers have combined the learning of letters with the cooking of different foods starting with each letter.

All the cooking is done in the classroom, and the children are learning how to mix and measure. Wonder what Mr. Z could be?

Building A Home

This is 50¢ Pioneer Linn — someone's dreamhouse on the way to fulfillment. For the great rewards of building a home becomes a part of the future it really means it.

It takes a heap of love!

And something more it takes. Our loving hands the firm and gentle of love in God. Our deep roots are and purpose which requires conviction's labor in us.

Each one has a vast coast or sea, continues. As the neighborhood groups across pines each week or worship, for spiritual renewal.
