Mr. Douglass says, "to keep the preposed sales tax."

Mr. Douglass says, "to keep the suggested fund of two billion dollars intact, would not feel the payment there of."

Now a two billion dollars increase in the expenses of the federal government is a 50 percent increase in ordinary federal expenditures and would necessitate a 50 percent increase in tax levies. But let's see if two billion dollars would be enough to pay the bill.

Mr. Douglass says that 5,006,000 persons would be eligible for the $200 a month pensions. Well, if one person receives $3,000,000 multiplied by $200 which equals $1,500,000,000 multiplied by twelve in one year, or $19,200,000,000, which is over minetoen billion dollars, and not two hillion dollars, as Mr. Douglass says.

An additional annual expenditure by the federal government in the second of the paying $200,000,000, which is over minetoen billion dollars, and not two hillion dollars, as Mr. Douglass says.

The Cost Of The Amendment

Proponents of the Homestead Examption Amendment still contend that the public can secure all of the benefits of exempting the homes from taxation without having to pay any of the costs. They argue that it is quite possible to eat your cake and have it too. They insist that we can evade on a large scale the payment of taxes and still enjoy the privileges of good roads, good schools, and adequate police and fire protection.

and still enjoy the privileges of good roads, good schools, and adequate police and fire protection.

When listing the benefits of the Amendment, they declars the homes will be freed from state and county taxation. They say that the homes will also be exempted from city taxation. They hold that this exemption applies not only to operating expenses, but to debt service as well. But when they figure up the costa of this Amendment, they set their final figure as if the homes could be exempted only from state and county taxes, and there, only from operating expenses.

This particular figure is a county taxes, and the county is the real cause of depression or stagnation of business, with its corollary-unique employees.

could be exempted only from state and county taxes, and there, only from operating expenses.

This particular figure is $6,236,755.42. It was arrived at by Muri E, Pace, president of the Tax Assessors' Association of Florida, who secured his information from official state records. This complete analysis was published in The Herald on October 8. It is as authentic and as unbiased a statement as has yet been prepared on this subject. Even the homesteaders themselves acknowledge the accuracy of the figures.

But this analysis, as Mr. Pace clearly states, is based on the assumption that the homes cannot be exempt from tax levies for the purpose of paying, bonds; and other liens and assessments. And, as he also clearly states, it applies only to the state and county taxes. It does not applies only to the state and county taxes. It does not in any particular, take into consideration losses to municipalities incident to homestead exemption. On his basis of figuring the loss to the state and counties, for operating expenses only, is $6,236,755.42.

As to whether the state can exempt homesteads from taxation by municipalities, there is considerable doubt As to whether it can exempt them from debt service, there is an even larger question. There, is inquipossible way of deciding these points, beyond all u question of doubt, now or at any time before the election of Only a Supreme Court decision, after the Amandment that been voted on, could possibly settle the question in However, the advocates of the Amendment have al ready settled it in their own minds. They are advertising that the Amendment will exempted all homesteads, from all taxation, for all time," There is no question in their minds that the state can exempt homesteads from city taxes, and that the state can exempt homesteads from levies by cities and counties for the payment of bonds long, since contracted for. They insist that the state has the authority to do these things.

Then if it has, the cost of the Amendment should be figured on that basis. Losses to state and counties If Florida adopted a policy like for operating revenues only have been aggreed apon as amounting to $6,236,755.42. Now if you also exempt the set out it would be pretty tough homes from county, school district, and drainage district debt service levies, the loss in revenue to the state and counties is increased, at once to between nine and ten million dollars.

If you also exempt the homes from tax levies for these. What we do not hear the operating expenses of the cities, you increase the during the past three losses to around fourteen million dollars. But if you expenses to a country of the cities are losses to around fourteen million dollars. ent into bankruptcy. However, empt, the homes from both debt service and operating ren this surprisingly large figure levics, in cities counties, and state, if you advertise that an improvement on the 4,000 the homes are exempted "from all taxation," then the loss to our various governmental units is approximately $20,000,000.
