Cops skeptical of plan to curb drunk driving

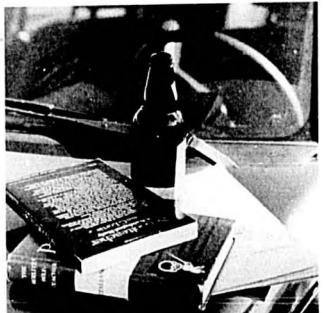

By SANDRA ELLIOTT Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - A federal plan to curb teen-age drunk driving may be difficult, if not impossible to enforce, according to several local police

Earlier this week the National Safety Transportation Board urged governors and state legislatures to crack down on teen drivers who drink through the use of nighttime curiews, zero-tolerance blood-alcohol standards and quick suspension of driving privileges.

The five-member board said teens are responsible for a disproportionate number of traffic fatalities, particularly at night. It adds up to one death on average every 57 minutes.

FORT LAUDERDALE - A cab driver accused last month of locking a passenger in the trunk of his taxi for nonpayment of a fare will not be prosecuted for false imprisonment.

Cabbie Edward M. Blagden, 64, will not go to trial for locking passenger Robert Goodnough Jr., 28, of Boca Raton, in the trunk of his cab on Feb. 1.

In court documents filed on Monday, Assistant Palm Beach County State Attorney Moira Lasch said police had probable cause to arrest Blagden, but Goodnough was "so intoxicated that he was unable to recount what happened to the police."

She also said there was no proof of criminal intent on Blagden had picked Goodnough up at the Copa nightclub in Fort Lauderdale and drove him to his apartment, where Blagden says Goodnough tried to stiff him for the $42 fare.

GAINESVILLE - A proposal to use an artificial cold virus to genetically alter lung cells and treat cystic fibrosis has won University of Florida researchers a federal

Developing a system to deliver the correct form of the CF gene into the lung cells of patients is the goal of the Florida rescarchers, says Stecenko.

The three-year study will work first on cell cultures and later on animals, she says. Finding a way to get the gene into the lung cell is the researchers' first priority, Stecenko says.

One way of doing this is to alter a respiratory virus by taking out the viral segment that makes the patient ill and replacing it with the corrected CF gene. Then, when the patient is "infected" with the virus, the correct form of the gene is reproduced, rather than the viral illness.

But the UF scientists are taking a different approach by developing an artificial form of

"We've taken the cold virus and tried to determine exactly how it enters the lung's cells. Then we try to mimic or copy the virus." she says. The fat droplets are intended to act as the virus' outer coat.

The researchers then isolate the virus proteins that target and penetrate the respiratory cells, and put them in the droplets of fat.

"On the inside of this envelope, we'll insert the correct form of the CF gene hooked up to its own copy machine that makes many copies," she says.

The altered virus would then be administered by having the patient inhale it.

Hypnosis used in missing girl case

By Associated Press

BROOKSVILLE - Using hypnosis, investigators have obtained a detailed description of a faded, light blue pickup truck death of Jennifer Odom.

The technique was used "on a couple of witnesses" to get extra information. Hernando County Sheriff's Office Maj. G.Z. Smith told The Tampa Tribune for a story in today's editions.

Hernando County Sheriff Tom Mylander said the details were taken from new interviews with children on the 12-year-old's school bus. But neither he nor an abandoned orange grove in Smith would say whether Spring Lake, about 10 miles children were hypnotized.

The vehicle is described as a full-sized, General Motors pickup built in the late 1970s or early 1980s and in poor condition.

It is a work truck, dirty, with tools, building supplies, pipes or lumber in the bed area and last seen with the tailgate open. The truck has a rear-view mirror and two rectangular and chrome side-view mirrors, the spokesman Sgt. Frank Bierwiller report said. It has a step-bumper said Wednesday. He did not

The taillights are intact, but there may be dents on the passenger side of the truck. The tires are described as normal for believed to be connected to the the size of the truck and worn. The truck has white wheel rims and may be missing a hubcap on the right rear wheel.

Children said they saw such a vehicle approaching Odom after she got off her school bus Feb. 19. She was kidnapped on the dirt road leading toward her home in St. Joseph, a rural community north of Dade City. Her body was found Feb. 25 in Authorities say Odom had died of a blow to the head five or six days before.

Man missing since July still sought

By SALLIE STEPHENSON Special to the Herald

Phillip Sellew, 44, a man with a mental disability, disappeared from Sanford nonprofit group home, the Ranch, on July 6,

With the exception of a few possible sightings, around Sanford, then at Lake Monroe, next in Apopka and Mt. Dora, a few days after he left the Ranch, Sellew has not been seen since.

Hart investigations in Casaciberry, a detective agency that has recently taken on the case of locating Sellew, hopes that someone reading this newspaper account will be able to shed some light on Phillip Sellew's disappearance. There is much concern by the family that if Sellew is not found soon the worst possible scenario may have occurred.

Phillip Sellew is a slim white male, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 145 pounds, has black hair and brown eyes. He was wearing a blue short sleeve shirt and blue jeans at the time he left the group home and was carrying identification with the name and address of the Ranch as well as $15-$20.

He has a large scar down his entire chest.

Sellew suffers from short-term amnesia due to brain damage resulting from a fall four or five years ago. After the injury, he lived with his parents, an elderly couple, in his home state of

When his condition worsened, he was transferred to several treatment facilities up north before coming to live near a relative in Florida, at the Ranch in Sanford where he had been residing for four months prior to his disappearance. At the Ranch, residents are free to go to the store nearby and are encouraged to do things on their own. On the day of Sellew's disappearance, according to the Hart investigator working the case, a bus was scheduled to take some of the residents to the Seminole County Mental Health Center for treatment as was customary several times a month. Sellew was sent to the back of a building to throw away trash. That was the last time he was seen by any of the people from the Ranch.

Phillip Sellew takes several kinds of medication for his medical condition and without it, according to Ranch director Peter Lee, his memory will deteriora's further. In addition, he suffers from eye problems due to damage to his optic nerve and normally would be wearing glasses, however, he was not wearing any when he left the Ranch.

On several occasions, he is reported to have confused the order of the letters of his last name and said his name was "Wells," instead of Sewell.

Sellew had spoken with his family in Connecticut who were planning a family reunion. He stated that he wanted to make his way back to Connecticut to be with his family.

Phillip Sellew may appear fairly normal and is able to count money and make change. Without his medication, he could, at times, appear intoxicated or, at the other extreme, catatonic, as though in a daze, not knowing where he is or what welfare worker on a charge of sexually molesting a boy at a school for emotionally handicapped children has spurred an investigation for other possible victims.

That incident allegedly took place in August 1990, and the worker, Miles Craig, 26, held similar jobs over the past two years, officials said Wednesday.

"Our main concern is because this person has remained working in the capacity with emo-tionally handicapped children over the past two years, we feel there are probably other victims out there," said Cpl. Ken Cox. head of the sex crimes investigators.

"We know of two that are not identified yet."

Cox said some leads had been referred to Seminole County. Craig worked at the Seminole County juvenile detention center in Sanford.

He was arrested Monday after the mother of the boy molested in 1990 found that he was again working with children.

Craig could have been charged in 1990 if the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services had reported the allegations to police, as required by law, said Orange County sheriff's detectives. But HRS administrator Paul Snead said the agency had reported the alleged assault and fired Craig. An internal agency investigation later cleared the employee, however, and he has since worked with children at several institutions in Central Florida.

Craig was fired Tuesday from his job as a tutor and crisis team member at the Cherokee School, operated by the Orange County School District.

At the time of the incident, he worked at what is now Devereaux House, one of Orlando's oldest psychiatric treatment centers for children, many of them in HRS custody.

The 11-year-old victim told sheriff's investigators Craig would come into his room at night and perform sex acts on him. He said he saw Craig commit similar acts on two other children.

"He admitted he needed help," Cox said. An investigation was under

Bike week:The time for safety on the highway

This is bike week in Daytona Beach. Tens of thousands of motorcyclists are riding the streets and highways of the entire Central

The need for an expanded awareness of highway safety is of critical importance at

As of this morning, 13 bikers had already been killed in highway mishaps in the area. Two died and one was injured in a mishap on C.R. 415 in Osteen. Another was killed early this morning, also near Osteen on C.R. 415.

As the week progresses closer to the bike races at the Daytona International Speedway, thousand of additional motorcycles will be in the area. Accidents and deaths could mount

Many motorcycles are being taken out of the garage for the first time in months. This is especially true for northern visitors who are safety conscious enough to avoid snow and

For Floridians, some bikers are part-timers. They hold down regular jobs, and only take their machines out on weekends or during bike week activities.

Many cyclists are experienced at riding on our highways, and pride themselves in being safe riders. Others have not been twowheeling enough to know all of the problems that could be experienced during a ride.

Even though Florida law requires motorcyclists to wear helmets and ride with their lights on, many out of state people may not know the laws. Others merely ignore

After watching the high speeds of the professional motorcycle racers on Sunday, some may consider themselves capable of similar speeds on the way home. Others may have excessively indulged in certain liquid refreshments before hitting the road.

Sunday evening and early next week will be the time for the most caution on the Cyclists however, do not cause all of the accidents. Motorists, whether in a car or truck, are unaccustomed to seeing motorcycles in such large numbers traveling the highways. When one passes, they may have a tendency to change lanes only to find there are twenty more bikes behind the first.

Motorists may believe they can make a turn in front of a group of oncoming motorcycles before they reach the turn, only to find that they were closer than originally thought, or traveling faster than expected.

If people are to avoid any additional deaths or injuries caused by collisions of bikes and cars, they must exercise extreme caution at all times. Motorcycles could be anywhere from interstate highways, to dirt roads.

Motorcycle riders and fans have a right to have their fun. They have the same rights on the highways as do other vehicles.

A car or truck however, offers much more protection to the driver and passengers than the two-wheeled machines.

A moment's hesitation or a close call in a four-wheeled vehicle may result in nothing more than a dented fender. The same brief lack of caution on a motorcycle could result in death.

Role models in school

This is in response to Sarah Overstreet's column of Tuesday, Feb. 9. Her column mentioned the schools responding to the need for role models for our students. We have just such programs in Seminole County schools. At the elementary school level, we have Special Friends. These mentors meet with their students once a week at the school site. They listen, tutor, read, lunch and play games with their students.

At the middle school and high school level, we have Youth Motivators and COMPACT mentors. These mentors also meet with their students once a week at the school. COMPACT mentors' commitment also involves helping students explore career choices, investigating post secondary educational opportunities, provide job shadowing days and arrange public service commit-

Although we all agree that adults need to role model responsible behavior for children, 200 such adulta have stepped forward; we need many more. Our most critical need is at Sanford Middle, Lakeview Middle, Lake Howell High's COMPACT and Seminole High's COMPACT. The guidance counselors and teachers at these schools have seen the results of the mentoring programs and want to expand to reach more students.

news for conservative coalition

It's tempting to a political columnist to stay tightly focused on what's going on in Washington. But often the truly important developments, that will affect our political future fundamentally, aren't taking place in the White House or on Capitol Hill, or even inside the Beltway. So let me lure you away, briefly, from the usual amusements, to contemplate a couple of recent articles that may in the long run prove far more

The conventional wisdom, as purveyed by the liberal media, is that the conservative coalition is falling apart. The most obvious fracture-line, and the one the media are working hardest to lengthen and widen, is the one between the Christian-right elements of the coalition and just about everybody else: especially the so-called neoconservatives, who are regarded as foreign policy hawks but domestic "moderates," and therefore as hardly conservative at all now that the Cold War is over, and the libertarians, who detest government on principle and are averse to having it, or any other institution, impose limits on their personal behavior.

On Feb. 1 the Wall Street Journal carried a traditional spiritual most interesting article by Irving Kristol, a former liberal who can fairly be called the individuals need ... " commentaries are as lucid as they are perceptive and stimulating, asserts that today, as secularism declines, liberalism "is at the end of its intellectual tether," and that "it is the religious who have a sense that the tide has turned and that the wave of the future is moving in their direction."

Contemptuously dismissing current liberal efforts to cope with America's overwhelming social problems, Kristol argues that "we are going to have to begin with a very different view of human nature and human responsibility in relation to such issues. ... It's the values that we as ment, and the Republican Party as its political vehicle, are well placed to reaffirm their attachment to two of conservatism's three pillars: nationalism and economic growth.

But the third pillar, Kristol argues, is religion. "Coping with a religious revival, however, is something that conservatives and the Republican Party are not yet prepared to do. ... But if the Republican Party is to survive, it must work at accommodating these people. ... One way or another, in the decades ahead they will not be denied."

If you think that is a remarkable tand inspiring) statement, coming as it does from the godfather of neoconservatism, let me direct your attention to an article by Murray Rothbard in the February issue of the Rothbard-Rockwell Report. Rothbard is to present-day libertarianism what Kristol is to neoconservatism: He would be its pope, if it had one.

What is Murray Rothbard saying these days? "Most libertarians think of Christian conservatives in the same hald terms as the lettist media, if not more so. .. Nothing could be further from the truth: Christian conservatives are trying to fight back against a left-liberal clite that used government to assault and virtually destroy Christian values, principles and culture

Keeping eye on TV news videos

This just in: Those dead fish you saw floating belly up on NBC News weren't killed by loggers who polluted streams, as reported. In fact, they weren't really dead, just sort of playing possum. (More later in our broadcast.)

And: Those teens that Minnesotans saw guzzling beer on KCCO-TV weren't unadulterated delinquents, after all; their brew was provided by the TV crew for a story on teen-age drinking. (Wonder what the KCCO-TV gang. now fired, might have procured for a story on teen-age sex.)

To understand today's TV news, brush up not on McLuhan, but Marx. Check out that pithy political treatise "Duck Soup," where Groucho dashes from dowager Margaret Du-mont's bedroom, only to have Chico crawl out from under her bed — diaguised as Oroucho and insisting that he never left at all. And when the grand dame demurs that she just saw the real Groucho leave "with my own eyes," Chico proclaims for the video ages:
"Well, who are you gonna believe, me or your own eyes?"

Today, cither our eyes are failing us - or TV journalists are. It's happening faster than you can ask a friendly anchor: "What's the frequency?" And it's happening, especially, on NBC News. A nation that salutes the bald eagle is dismayed at the plight of a plucked peacock.

First, NBC News apologised under legal duress for secretly using sparking devices in crash recreations to show that a 1977 Chevy pickup truck can burst into flames when hit broadside. Now scrupulous anchor-journalist Tom Brokaw has read a lawyered apology about a report that Idaho's Clearwater National Forest was being overcut, causing polluted streams and killing fish:

"At one brief point we inadvertently used footage of dead flah from another forest further south, not from Clearwater.... We also showed workers conducting tests on water in the Clearwater (forest) where fish appeared to be dead. In fact, they were not: they had been stunned for testing purposes.... And finally, we showed a large area of land that the timber industry claims was burned and not cut.... Some portions may have been cut after a fire."

This proves you don't have to actually have dead fish to produce an apology that smells like you do. For, while television news applies a professional standard for its scripted words. it relaxes its rules for pictures.

The problem pictures came not from NBC's crew that spent four days at Clearwater, but from the environmental group "Lighthawk" and from Idaho public TV, according to NBC News spokeswoman Katherine McQuay. TV news is driven by the compulsion to show great and beautiful pictures. Ronald Reagan's mediameister, Michael Deaver, and his deputy. William Henkel, used to say TV newspeople are part journalist and part artist — and the artist in them always craves beautiful pictures (hence, Reagan's carefully crafted photo-ops). Indeed, TV newsfolk talk of "wallpaper" — file footage inserted to represent something similar to what an unseen reporter is talking about.

Apparently, NBC's crew didn't get terrific footage of fish floating belly-up, so it looked for good pictures from other sources - they were inserted by an NBC News producer trying to follow the written instructions of NBC News correspondent Robin Lloyd, who had p n e u m o n i a . "Miscommunication

I've had a lot of ups and a few downs with Leon Panetta since he was elected to Congress 17 years ago, but if you looked at him through my spees right now you would see a golden glow.

My current high opinion of the White House budget director has to do with what he's been telling congressional Republicans who have been bellyaching about Bill Clinton's economte package: "It's put up or shut up time, stupid."

Ronald Reagan, who never once submitted a balanced budget proposal, burbled incessantly about excessive spending and illustrated his point with a $30,000 eranberry research project. and perhaps even divert gargantiian asteroids.

Everyone else seems to have one. Agree with it or not. Bill Clinton has laid a gutsy proposal on the table. He wants to freeze federal pay, slash the defense budget, trim Star Wars, cap farm subsidies. He wants an energy tax, higher corporate taxes and more taxes on the wealthy.

Ross Perot offered his painful solution last year - bike Medicare premiums and cut pension COLAs, among numerous other things. Senators Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Pete Domenici, R-N.M., signed on to a scheme last October that called for caps on entitlements other than Social Security.

So let's have an alternative budget from the firm of Dole. Michel, Gingrich and Lon. What would you cut? Certainly not detense which is 19 percent of the budget. What then? Social Security, 20 percent of the budget? Medicare and Medicaid, 15 percent? Interest on the debt. 17 percent? What are you going to do. declare bankruptey and pay off bonds a dime on the dollar?

It looks like you've got about a third of the budget to play with, centlemen. So what will it be? Veterans benefits? College loans? Highways? Space? Farms? He specific.

part of the teen-age drinking drivers question. A bill, which would establish blood-alcohol standards for teens and result in a suspended license if exceeded, was heard Wednesday by the state Senate Transportation Committee.

If it becomes law, the bill would establish a .03 blood alcohol standard for individuals under 21. If their blood alcohol reading exceeded .03, their license could be suspended at the scene. A blood alcohol standard of .10 would remain to determine if an adult is intoxicated.

Analyst John McCollum said the committee did not establish a zero-tolerance standard because, in a normal sized person, a piece of rum cake or cold remedy would show alcohol in the bloodstream, even though the person had not been drink-

Seminole County Sheriff's Department spokesman George Procchel weighed his comments carefully. On the one hand, he said, states give teens driving privileges then propose to take back some of the privilege by saying they can't drive at certain times. "How would you enforce it?"

he said of the curfew. "We aren't even allowed to enforce the scatbelt law except as a secondary offense," he said. "The thought behind the proposal may be a sound one but the practicality is not good at

Procchel explained that drivers are not stopped for not wearing a scatbelt, although if they are stopped for some other infraction, they can also be cited for not wearing their scatbcalt. 'I'm not for changing the whole system...to punish everyone for the actions of a few," he added, referring to the eurfew. Many teens are mature and responsible and don't drink and drive. "We can do very little to prevent drivers ages 21 to 100 from drinking and driving el-

The sheriff's department takes a firm stance on drunk drivers whether they are adults or Juveniles. In the case of teens who are drinking but not legally drunk, sometimes their parents are called to the scene. "Our department sometimes doesn't have time to bring them in or to a substation." Procchel said, "so the parents are called to the scene of the (traffic) stop. Sometimes the officers have a difficult time getting in touch with the parents." In some instances, teens can be charged with possession of alcohol by minors but the decision is made on a case by case basis, he added. Although Lake Mary Police Chief Richard Beary said he is not aware if his city has a curfew, the constitutionality of curfews have been challenged in several states. "Some (curlews) have been struck down," he

The impact of a law tightening restrictions on teen drivers would be on borderline teens.

'Do I think it would be a major deterrent? No." he said. Some teens will drink and drive, no matter what the consequences but others might be stopped when threatened with loss of their licenses. "But there is some value in it, because this might stop people

Although Sanford has an 11 p.m. curfew ordinance on the books for under 16. year-olds, it is not enforced, according to Sanford Police Department spokesman Lt. Mike Rotundo.

"The state's attorney has too much other stuff to do," Rotundo said, to spend time dealing with curfew violations. Even if police began trying to enforce the ordinance, Rotundo said, there would probably be some people who would fight against it.

"Sometimes, people say they want curfews, then end up saying they don't want curfews," he said. He pointed out that even if a curfew on teen drivers was passed, it would be almost impossible to enforce.

"What would you have to do?" he said, "Set up roadblocks and stop every driver to see if they were under 16 or 18? Stop every teenager?" Drawing up ordinances is casy. Rotundo said, but sometimes they cannot be enforced. If a teenager is stopped for another violation, such as late night speeding, the police could also charge the driver with curfew violation. However, just to go after curfew violators. Rotundo said. "I don't see anyway we'd be able to enforce it."

Teenagers, who have been drinking but are not legally drunk, are taken to the Sanford Police Station and turned over to their parents, who are told about the drinking. They are not arrested because as Rotundo put it. "We were all kids once." Teens who are drunk are ar-

Contracts, injuries top concerns

Associated Press

Contracts are still at the forefront of baseball news, but most of the numbers being discussed at this time of year are thousands, not millions. The Atlanta Braves have threatened to renew Deion Sanders' contract today. The Braves negotiated with Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker, until late Wednesday night but couldn't agree on either a one-year or multi-year deal.

The Texas Rangers renewed 1992 home run champion Juan Gonzalez's contract after the two sides could not agree on a deal.

"The difference in proposals between the two sides on a one-year contract was so great that we were unable to reach an agreement." Texas general manager Tom Grieve said. Rodriguez made $525,000 last season when he hit 43 home runs.

"A renewal is not something that we wanted to do, but under the circumstances, that was the only way to resolve the situation," Grieve said. Gonzalez, who hit .260 with 109 RBIs in 155 games last year, will be eligible to file for salary arbitration after the 1993 season.

Outflelder Moises Alou of the Montreal Expos also had his contract renewed. Alou, runner-up in National League Rookie of the Year voting last vear, refused to sign for the club's last offer of $210,000, so he was renewed at what he and his agent predicted would be a smaller figure, possibly $200,000. "I've never been involved in a more difficult negotiation in my life," Bill Stoneman, the club's vice president, said Wednesday. "It's been a wearving process. Alou followed through on a threat to boycott

NFL free agency returns to court

Four days after the plan took effect, the case was back in court when two of the 10 "franchise players" decided to challenge it before Judge David Doty, who retains jurisdiction over the lcague's labor plan led to the agreement, gave preliminary approval to the proposal last week. But he also gave anyone objecting until April 2 to file motions and set April 16 for a hearing on those objections. Already, linebacker Wilber Marshall of the Washington Redskins has filed a motion before Doty in Minneapolis objecting to the provision in the agreement that doesn't allow him to seek offers from other teams. And the lawyer for San Diego defensive end Leslie O'Neal said O'Neal also plans to object to the agreement.

The response was remarkably uniform from two sides who have been at odds for five years. "None of this is particularly unexpected," said Jim Quinn, the lawyer for the players and their chief negotiator in the deal that led to free agency. "We think the settlement is eminently fair and that it will be upheld."

"The current agreement serves the overall best interests of the players and the league," said Joe Browne, NFL vice president for communications and development. "Objections are not unexpeeted, but Judge Doty will make the last determination. One player who won't challenge the plan is White said he hasn't had a concrete offer although he will visit Cleveland this weekend.

So far no players have signed with new teams, although agents have claimed they've received numerous phone calls. That trritates some team officials, like general manager George Young of the New York Glants, who responded to inquiries about the status of his free-agent punter Scan Landeta by saying:

IN BRIEF

Authors at book store opening Saturday

Seven Central Florida romance authors will autograph books Saturday, March 6 to celebrate the grand opening of the second location of B & L Books in Lake Mary at Lake Mary Boulevard and Country Club Road.

These authors have over 50 books in print and meeting their fans in person is a mutually beneficial experience for both the author and the reader. As Glenda Sanders, author of 21 books, puts it, "Writers work in solitude much of the time and meeting readers reminds us whey we work so hard. It's both enlightening and gratifying to hear from them what touches them in a book - what makes them laugh or cry or sigh."

This is the second location for B & L Books whose main store is in Altamonte Springs by the Outback Steakhouse. This is the only bookstore in Lake Mary that offers new and used paperbacks at discount prices.

Duds add sizzle to cookoff

Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole held a chill cookoff and auction last Saturday at the Sanora Clubhouse in Sanford as a fund-raiser for the guild's silver anniversary. Following the cookoff, patrons got to sample the chill by buying a chill dinner. Fonda Nobles' chill recipe won the first prize and she will be featured in the near future as Cook of the Week.

Linda Zern, who played Lily Chantilly in Ballet Cuild's performance last spring, cooked her chill all dolled up in true Lily-fashion. Other cooks donned a variety of interesting attire.

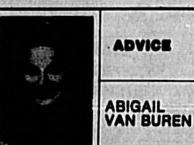

Cyclists dislike nuisance status, attractive or not

Forbes were alive, he would be on the phone to you as a friend and motorcycle rider in response to your latest stand on bikes being a "nuisance." Since he isn't alive, may I express my Bikers come in all sizes, ages and walks of life. We raise money for charities, teach rider safety in schools, pay property taxes, gas taxes, street taxes and insurance. We are good citizens. We care for our safety, that of our passengers, and the nonriding public. We ride for a variety of reasons, and our feelings about this pastime are strong nd valid.

think you owe motorcycle riders an apology for what appears to be an insensitive public statement, and an apparent stereotype with which we have been labeled. If a child or an adult admires (or wishes to sit on) my bike in my presence in a parking lot, it's my pleasure to be an ambassador of understanding about the equipment and responsbilities that come with owning and operating a motorcycle. I'll bet all of us feel this responsibility. How about a second look?

YOUR NEPHEW RON BRODKEY IN OMAHA DEAR RON: Thank you for your candid letter. As you probably know, I personally select the letters for my column. I chose the letter signed "Barbara in Dallas" in which she said, "You would be doing bike owners an enormous favor if you would print my letter.' I thought her letter had merit, so I printed it. In my response to her letter, I stated that a motorcycle might be legally termed "an attractive nuisance," meaning that it attacts people to it, just as a set of swings, a swimming pool, etc. does, and unless it is "fenced in" and made inaccessible to the curious public who may want to touch and examine it — the owner had better be well-insured. The bikers wrongly assumed that I was calling their bikes "a nuisance," and the hate mail some containing vile and filthy language — was shocking. My mistake was in using the legal term "attractive nuisance," which bikers interpreted literal-

P.S. As a gesture of friendship and goodwill, the Gold Wing Road Riders Association invited me to be their special guest at their 15th Annual International Convention in Louisville, Ky., in June. Unfortunately, because of a previous commitment, I was unable to accept. DEAR ABBY: You won't beleive this one. My husband and I are in our 60s and recently retired. All during our marriage, my husband snored loudly. This kept me awake and I would get up from our bed and go into the guest room to sleep. We hardly together. My husband was very understanding and didn't seem to mind this arrangement. He claimed that I snored too, but it didn't bother him - he could sleep right through it. (I didn't believe him, but I didn't say anything.)

Abby, I drank three cups of coffee a day. My husband didn't usually drink coffee, but occasionally he would have a cup or two. About three years ago, I noticed that if he drank even one cup of coffee for breakfast, he would complain the next morning tha my snoring kept him awake. Abby, how can that be?

When he drank coffee, I snored? I decided to try an experiment: I stopped drinking coffee entirely. Guess what? My husband stopped snoring!

Of course, the truth is obvious: He still snores, and I suppose I do, too, but it was the caffeine that kept me awake - not his snoring. Now we save a little money by not buying coffee, and we snuggle together all night long.

TWO ASTRONAUTS HOVERING

Colitis: Diagnosis is key to recovery

DEAR DR. GOTT: Last July I was hospitalized with return to the gastroenterologist pseudomembranous colitis. I who will probably perform a was suffering from dehydration flexible sigmoidoscopy, during and severe pain in my lower which he will examine the colabdomen. Two weeks later I suffered similar symptoms. I then went to a gastroenterologist who treated me with Flagyl and ultimately converted me to a drug costing $570. My symptoms have continued. Am I going to have problems every six months despite therapeutic intervention?

DEAR READER: Antibiotics, by killing certain strains of bacteria and leaving others unaffected, can upset a delicate microbial balance in the colon. This may lead to a variety of symptoms, ranging in severity from simple diarrhea to major colonic inflammation that causes bleeding, fever, malnutrition and deliydration.

Previously termed "pseudomembranous colitis," this disorder is known as "antibiotic-associated colitis." The most common cause of this condition is a hardy microbe named C. difficile that is relatively unaffected by most antibiotics. These bacteria produce a toxin that can be measured in the stool, thereby establishing the diagnosis.

C. difficile colitis is so prevalent that most doctors will customarily check for the toxin in any person who has severe diarrhea following administration of antibiotics (for unrelated reasons). These germs will ordinarily be controlled by Flagyl taken for 10 days. In resistant cases, a more expensive drug, vancomycin, may be necessary. In most instances, the treatment clears up the infection; relapses are rare. On occasion, oral treatment with harmless lactobacilli (Lactinex) is required for persisting infection.

There are certain things so rare that we cannot help admiring them: the Hope diamond; a no-hit, no-walk complete game in baseball; a man who gives up his scat to a woman on a crowded bus or train. Today's deal is something that I don't remember seeing before. Can you see what is so unusual?

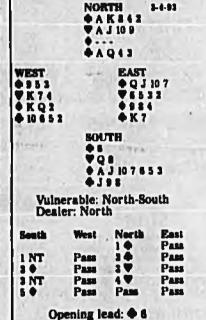

The deal was reported by Villy Dam from Denmark. Most pairs reached three no-trump, which they made without difficulty. The given auction - which contains several debatable bids was produced by Klaus Madsen, South, and Jens Otto Pedersen.

West led the club six, second-highest from a weak suit. Madsen put up dummy's ace, eashed the A-K of spades, discarding a club, and ruffed a spade in hand. Two winning heart finesses, followed by the heart ace, allowed South to discard his last club. Madsen returned to hand with a club ruff. He continued with the ace and a low diamond. (This is right when one takes the suit in isolation. If their trumps are 3-3, all plays work. If they are 4-2, there are six low doubletons and eight honor doubletons.)

Here Madsen was safe. But suppose we switch the queen and four of diamonds. Now East wins the second trump with the nine and leads his last heart. allowing the defenders to score their diamond honors separately. What is the unusual feature about this deal? You can make game in all five denominations. Even more unusual is that you cannot make a slam. I leave you to work out all the analysis -I've run out of space. (C)1993, NEWSPAPER EN-TERPRISE ASSN.
