Seminole County Fire Chief Terry Schenk Fifth bugle signals fire chief's ascent

By MARIA OREM
Herald Staff Writer

After working his way through the ranks, Terry Schenk at age 45 today, has reached top billing as Seminole County fire chief.

At a ceremony last week, Schenk received his fifth bugle, a symbol recognized internationally among firefighters. As he achieved each rank, from lieutenant to battalion chief, to assistant chief to deputy chief to chief, Schenk earned a bugle.

The bugle, he explained, comes from the early days of firefighting in the late 1800s when a bugle was used to rally firefighters.

Schenk, who has served as deputy fire chief for the last four years, will maintain his current duties in the county's Emergency Medical Services Division, which includes the management of 230 people, 12 fire stations and a shared facility in Lake Mary.

Airport wrestles with growth

Officials fight development designation

By MARIA OREM
Herald Staff Writer

Airport officials are hoping to resume projects temporarily halted by a state planning agency.

On Sept. 17 the State Department of Community Affairs issued a cease and desist order for airport projects totaling about $6.6 million including several runway expansions, a new building, and an addition of the main terminal. The notice of violation said some of the projects could be considered a Development of Regional Impact (development activity impacting more than one county and infrastructure) and the airport had not applied for the designation.

The events leading to the cease and desist order, came as a result of complaints from the Audubon Society and the Game and Fresh Water Commission when the airport cut down trees housing bald eagle nests in order to clear the area for a runway expansion. The

The Great Fall Exposition '97 is recording blockbuster crowds for this past weekend and is looking forward to an even bigger weekend coming up.

According to Rick Silankas, of DreamVision Studios and Mountain View Productions, the crowds were an estimated 50 to 60,000 for Friday and Saturday alone. Numbers have not been confirmed on tickets sales as of yet.

Silankas said, "We're extremely excited and we are gearing up for the big weekend ahead." Jessica Biel of the Warner Bros. television show 7th Heaven will be on hand Saturday as well as the network's mascot Michigan J. Frog. There will also be shows by the groups Earth Beat and The Drifters. Sunday is Bob Dance Family Ride Day. All ages, all rides, all day only $15 until 7 p.m.

Everyday at the expo, festival goers can see the Incredible Road Air #1 Flying Car and meet personal trainer and star of the Cash 4 Titles television commercials, Ted Brown.

SPD told to: Respect Chief Dillard, don't shoot the sheriff

By RUSS WHITE
Herald Staff Writer

The wake up call to the Sanford Police Department became louder and more direct on Tuesday.

For the SPD to become an effective law enforcement agency its members have been advised to make a pair of immediate attitude changes:

One is to respect - and quit back-stabbing - Chief Joe Dillard.

The second is to develop harmony with the Seminole County Sheriff's Office.

To be sure, Dillard left City Hall on Tuesday sensing a good deal more support than he has had since becoming the city's police chief in January, 1997.

He received that support from the consultant who made a critical study of the SPD this summer and from Longwood Police Chief Greg Manning, who chairs Sanford's newly-appointed Law Enforcement Options Committee.

"I'm very impressed and grateful for what happened here today," Dillard said after the committee met for 2 1/2 hours with Public Administrative Service Assistant Director George Hubler.

Dillard will take the committee through the SPD's head- See Police, Page 3A

Shooting victim nabbed for drugs, guns

By DAVID FRAZIER
Herald Staff Writer

The Sanford man whose life was threatened by two murder attempts in the last two weeks was arrested himself on multiple charges. Eric Wynn, 23, of 1001 West 10th Street, was arrested Friday, Oct. 3, by Seminole County deputies.

Wynn was charged with trafficking 28 grams of cocaine while armed, possession of crack cocaine, concealed firearm, possession of cannabis over 20 grams, possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of a firearm/concealed weapon by convicted felon, selling of cannabis and grand theft of firearm. Also arrested, according to the report, was female accomplice Tantanisha Burke, 21, of 4220 South Orlando Drive, Sanford. Burke was charged with trafficking 28 grams of cocaine while armed, possession of crack cocaine, concealed firearm, grand theft of firearm, possession of controlled substance (cannabis) over 20 grams with intent to sell and possession of cannabis over 20 grams.

According to the arrest reports: Sheriff's deputies pulled over a vehicle suspected in being a part of an aggravated assault. The brake lights were out on the vehicle which is why it was pulled over. The deputy wrote a citation for driver Burke and then he spoke to Wynn about the assault incident. When he asked Wynn if he could search the car, Wynn responded that the officer would have to ask Wynn's mother.

Upon final search of the vehicle, the officer saw a portion of a gun handle sticking out from beneath a floor mat on the driver's side. See Wynn, Page 3A

Learn ABCs of gardening at plant sale, fair Saturday

By SHARI BRODIE
Herald Staff Writer

Everything from A to Z will be available at the Seminole County Master Gardeners' Plant Sale and Fair this Saturday.

That's avocados to zinnias, all on sale at the Cooperative Extension Service Center, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Master gardener Jim Hunter is coordinating the plant sale and fair for the group and says that everything available at the event was either grown by a master gardener or donated by a nursery.

Seminole County has had a master gardener program since 1979. An extension of the University of Florida Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, the volunteers provide research-based information to the community about gardening and are trained to educate homeowners about lawn care and pest identification and control.

Hunter mans the telephone at the extension service every Wednesday afternoon, dispensing information to callers who have questions about horticulture.

"I can't tell you how many trees I've saved," Hunter says regarding the free service that is provided by the master gardeners weekday mornings and afternoons. He says that it is especially helpful in the winter, when northerners, unfa-

The grants will be used to fund a variety of projects, including:

- Research on manatee and turtle populations.
- Protection of manatee and turtle habitats.
- Education of the public about manatee and turtle conservation.
- Enforcement of laws protecting manatees and turtles.

Applications for grants should be submitted to the Florida Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Marine Research, 3300 Gulf Bldg., Tallahassee, Fla. 32304. The deadline for applications is October 15, 1997.

New Hamilton principal sets pace Many changes for now, and in next school year

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles on the seven schools in the Sanford dragageion consent decree clusters. Readers will be given an opportunity to learn first hand about the schools from which they may choose to have their elementary aged children attend. We suggest that you clip each of these articles so that you will have them to review when it is time to choose your child's school next spring.

million with the growth cycles of Florida call in to inquire about the health of trees that have shed their leaves. Some of the people that do call are really troubled.

Proceeds from the plant sale will go toward the volunteer groups' educational programs.

At the fair, there will also be free plants and free seed packets while they last. Hubert says that all of the plants in the fair can be planted in the fall garden, except some of the tropicals.

The group hopes to make the sale and fair an annual event incorporating displays by commercial vendors, as well as more demonstrations on subjects related to gardening.

This year, there will be displays provided by the Central Florida Bromeliad Society, the Central Florida Daylily Society, the Central Florida Camellia Society and the Central Florida Orchid Society. There will be a table on a plant clinic, a hydroponics display, a craft table for the Family and Community Center, and a food concession provided by the U.W. Clubhouse. Hubert will have the opportunity to meet "Johnny Plant A Seed."

The Seminole County Historical Museum will be open for tours and tickets will be on sale for the historic quilt raffle.

The cooperative extension and the museum is located off of County Home Road on U.S. Highway 17/92, across from The World. For more information on the event or for questions regarding your garden, call 323-2500 ext. 5550 or ext. 5558 or ext. 5561.

Editorial/Opinion

Law and order, please

Tuesday's meeting by the Sanford's Law Enforcement Options Committee was a positive stride not only to save the city's police department but to make sense out of the whole bloody situation.

Yes, it is time for the SPD to:
 + Support not rag Police Chief Joe Dillard.

+ Get in harmony with the Sheriff's Department.

It is disappointing that Phillip Jackson, one of those appointed to the Law Enforcement Options Committee, was a no-show, having decided to resign from the group.

He voiced two objections to the makeup of the committee selected by the city commissioners.

Jackson didn't believe that Velma Williams, one of the commissioners, should be sitting with the committee. And he didn't believe Longwood Police Chief Greg Manning should sit in judgment of another city's police department.

While we appreciate Mr. Jackson's opinions and concerns, we do not share his contention that the process is but "a witch hunt."

Far from it. Commissioner Williams has time and again expressed her desires to save the SPD.

And Chief Manning made a passionate plea on Tuesday to allow Chief Dillard to run the department and for the SPD's officers to get in harmony with the sheriff's office deputies.

The mere thought that the two law enforcement agencies have had petty differences is certainly not in the interests of Sanford or the county.

Sheriff Don Eslinger said this morning that it was not so much a matter of "strained relations" between the two agencies but a failure by Sanford to "utilize the resources of the sheriff's office." Sanford, he said, had a tendency to be "more isolated" than other cities within the county.

This is no time for isolation, of course.

We anticipate that the sheriff and Chief Dillard will work together. "I get along super with Joe and his commanders," Eslinger said.

10-4.

ELLEN GOODMAN

A woman's designated place

BOSTON--It came to him as a cardiovascular epiphany. Bill McCartney, former football coach and founder of the Promise Keepers, was jogging on the Washington Mall when he felt his heart "yanked toward heaven."

This spiritual aerobic high led him to call for a gathering of men to "Stand in the Gap." Not The Gap store. Not the gender gap. The biblical gap recorded in Ezekiel when God went looking for a few good men to save a country.

So it is that half a million men arrived in the nation's capital this past week-end for a Saturday of male bonding and male bashing. They will be uttering an all-male mea culpa for the abuse and neglect of families and children. If the pattern of such rallies holds, these men will be sharing their feelings and taking responsibility.

This gathering of what is arguably the largest men's movement in the country sounds at some levels like the fondest feminist fantasy. Hundreds of thousands of men collectively eschewing adultery and pornography, violence and abandonment. Men pledging publicly to keep their promises to their wives, to change diapers and bring flowers and offer respect.

Yet many women kept away from this male event call the leaders of this assembly the enemy. Indeed, the National Organization for Women has put together the darkest analysis of their goals and gone so far as to declare a policy of "No Surrender" in what they define as a battle of the sexes.

This is the duality that has tracked the Promise Keepers since the movement began drawing followers to religious rallies in the comfortable male venue of sports stadiums. A mixture of old-time muscular Christianity and New Age sensibility, the group has raised hopes and hackles in almost equal proportion.

On the one hand, the Promise Keepers appeal to men alienated from each other and their families, men uncertain about what masculinity means anymore, men in search of spiritual healing. On the other hand, the organization is deeply connected to the Christian right, profoundly hostile to homosexuals, opposed to abortion and "liberal women's groups" as well as "atheists and Satanists."

On the one hand, it promises women husbands who will, in McCartney's words, "take responsibility for their actions, who are faithful to their families, who keep their word, even when it's difficult or costly." On the other hand, it assumes a trade-off: wifely submission to a kinder, gentler patriarch.

I don't believe that the Promise Keepers are Women's Enemy No. 1. Or even No. 10. During their peak years, the rallies offered more than 2 million men a safe place to atone, to acknowledge what was missing in their lives, even to change.

But at the same time, the Promise Keepers point a way out of the current conflict of roles and identities which is a way back.

The leaders speak to an old familiar view of authority in our culture. This is a view that says power is granted in return for protecting the weak and vulnerable. It's a view that says,

Many women kept away from this male event call the organizers the enemy.

In turn, the weak and vulnerable (must?) follow that leader, accede to that authority, in order to be protected.

In many ways, the Promise Keepers message echoes the words of the secular fatherhood movement. McCartney blames "a decline in responsible manhood" for the problems of children who grow up without fathers, for crimes of assault and rape.

But what he means by a responsible man is a take-charge kind of guy. Women, in this scheme of things, are left with the choice of a dangerous man, no man, or a sole head of household.

McCartney, trying to reassure women especially of his good intentions, has compared a country of shattered families to a losing football team. "In the game of football," he wrote, "if your team is getting trounced, you'd better have a serious talk with the men at half-time and identify the problems."

You don't have to be a sports analyst to find the flaw in this game plan. In the world of Promise Keepers, men are the only players. In the locker room, they identify the problems and call the shots.

On the field, whether it's the Washington Mall or the family back yard, a woman's designated place is on the cheerleading squad.

night. "You learn to read for a reason," Parker says. "Programs like BEST or Career Clubs help kids have that reason."

Another program due to start soon is Project CARE. It is an effort to correct a problem that affects many Hamilton students. Many of the children who come to Hamilton do not have the benefit of family support. They have not had the influences in their lives that insure that they will be successful in school. Hamilton is looking to the local churches for volunteer support that will provide mentors and adult influences in the lives of children who are in need. This program will help pull some of those kids back into the mainstream.

Hamilton Elementary School is a school in transition. This year it has a new principal and many new teachers. Next year it will change again. This school has been designated to have a magnet emphasis in Communication Technology. More resources will be available—more emphasis in Communication Technology. More resources will be available—more emphasis will be placed on climbing on board the learning train. Better information will be placed in parent's hands about what their child has learned and what it is that the child needs to work harder on. Parents will become a greater part of the child's learning experience as community programs involve families with two parents, one parent or even families with only grandparents raising children.

Lead-Follow—get out of the way! Nan Parker and her team at Hamilton is on the move!

Tourist Airport

trict, the Central Florida Zoological Park and the Wal-Mart shopping center on U.S. Highway 17-92.

The service, scheduled to run from May to Oct. 1, was a marketing tool designed to attract European visitors to area shopping and local sites. The idea was to give travelers, waiting for their departure flight, a place to go and spend their last dollars. Throughout the venture, airport officials also hoped to relieve crowding in the departure area.

Following a review of the pilot program, officials at Orlando Sanford Airport have decided to discontinue the service because of low ridership.

"The ridership wasn't enough to sustain the service," said Jack Wert, director of the Seminole County Tourism Council, a partner in the venture.

Preliminary passenger counts show that 3,248 people used the shuttle bus from May to Sept. 12. Estimated revenues were 630,841 for the six month period with expenses at about 836,185. Additional receipts and expenses are expected through Sept. 30.

Wert attributed the low numbers to visitors' reluctance to leave the airport once there.

"We found most people wanted to stay there," he said, adding that there may be a possible expansion at the airport.

On the positive side, Wert said, "we learned from the experience and we saw that people experienced what we had to offer here."

Wert said he expects when visitors come back again they will go to local businesses on their own. He said the airport will continue to distribute informational brochures as he did not discount the possibility of bringing back the shuttle service at some future date.

The shuttle service, which ran at 45-minute intervals on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, was funded by local merchants and airport user and rental fees.

The airport had built a ticket counter to an adjoining left luggage facility where visitors could check in baggage.

According to Susan Flowers, director of for the airport terminal manager OBI, will buy out the building including the cost of improvements.

area. He also said that expo officials have enjoyed the level of professionalism they have worked with in Sanford.

"This is a big weekend coming up," said Silanskas. "And the encore of the fireworks should be a big farewell to the city. It promises to be even bigger than last weekend."

airport and the Federal Aviation Administration had said the airport needed to clear the area for safety reasons.

The airport hired a Tallahassee law firm specializing in DRI issues to avoid what could potentially turn into millions of dollars in litigation and fees if the airport were to apply for a DRI.

Deisy Bowman, an attorney with Flopping Green Sama and Smith, told board members Tuesday that the main consequence of the DRI designation is fees. She said some of the airport's facilities are subject to DRI review and that approval process could take up to 18 months and cost between one quarter to half a million dollars. She said mitigating litigation associated with the case could cost millions and development at the airport could be halted.

However, Bowman, said some of the projects could be grandfathered in through the 25-year-old DRI law and not be subject to DRI requirements. Based on her review of the airport projects, she said if the project in question is voted prior to July 1973 when the law went into effect, then it would be exempt from DRI review. If the airport does eventually become a medium size hub, Bowman said it would qualify as a DRI, as would a new terminal and a newly paved runway exceeding a certain length.

Bowman told airport officials she had met with DCA representatives and was currently negotiating to avoid formal litigation and also to allow airport projects to continue and minimize DRI requirements. Her recommendation to petition the DCA for an abatement to allow projects to continue, was approved by board members.

The board also accepted Bowman's recommendations to proceed with airport Executive Director Steve Cooke's letter requesting immediate clearance for ongoing projects; to enter into an agreement with the DCA for a general DRI providing more flexibility; and that the airport maintain closer communication with the DCA.

Schenk

Schenk grew up in Winter Park and earned a bachelor's degree in public administration from the University of Central Florida.

A firefighter since 1975, Schenk said his interest in the field came largely from his friends and in particular Don Harkins, who is currently the fire chief in Orlando.

"It's an exciting job and I enjoy what I do," Schenk said.

In addition to his regular duties, Schenk has been on the scene during hurricane disasters and has also traveled to the western part of the country to fight brush fires.

"When I saw CNN picture of the Yellowstone fire in 1988, I called and told them I wanted to assist," he said.

Schenk remains on call for summer fires, however, he said for the past two years he has focused his efforts closer to home. Schenk was directly involved in the county's emergency transport issue, which gave his department the sole contract for providing emergency service in Seminole County.

"The transport is working great for us and people are happy with the service," Schenk said.

Through the Florida Fire Chiefs Association disaster committee, Schenk is responsible for the eight-county Central Florida area during times of emergency.

Schenk likened many of his duties to a business.

"It's like operating a business," he said. "If we have a disaster then the fire chief remains involved coordinating resources and staffing."

Schenk said his department responded to about 17,000 emergency calls last year.

One of his proudest accomplishments, Schenk said in his national accreditation as a certified emergency manager, which he earned in 1994.

Schenk has many ideas he plans to implement as fire chief. In addition to a wellness program for all employees, Schenk said he would like to implement new technology, improve response time and upgrade the computer dispatch system.

One project, scheduled for completion early next year, is a joint fire station which will be manned by Seminole and Orange county firefighters and located on the University of Central Florida campus. The temporary facility for that area is currently a mobile home in Palm Valley, he said.

As if all this weren't enough for a man who jogs two miles a day and spends quality time with his wife and three children, Schenk also got his degree in meteorology. He works with the National Weather Service, he trains Seminole County school teachers and also involves himself in a program at Seminole Community College. Schenk is responsible for posting weather information for Florida's 67 counties and also studies the impact of weather.

When he isn't fighting fires or following hurricanes, Schenk, who is also a private pilot, and he likes to fish and surf. He also serves as a church deacon and youth group leader. But through it all, Schenk said his family is most important.

"Family is the most important thing."

It's healthy: Lose a little sleep over breakfast

OK, so we know we're supposed to eat a good breakfast. Our moms told us. The USDA told us. Recently, at a meeting for my daughter's school, the school nurse told us.

It was good, amidst all the high-flown talk of curricula and goal-setting and the school's "mission," to hear someone talk about something basic like breakfast. A reminder that the most creative teachers in the world can't help a kid too hungry to learn. Her little talk helped me develop a three-step approach to weekday breakfasts.

First, you have to make a commitment to eat breakfast. Sleep is precious, but if you sacrifice a few minutes of it to get real food into your kids' stomach (not to mention your own), you've made a worthwhile trade.

Second, you have to rethink the whole idea of the meal. I mean, who says breakfast has to be made up of cereal and microwaved oatmeal, try offering them a recycled version of their favorite dinner. Sure, everyone knows about cold pizza for breakfast, but did you ever think of making a spaghetti pie (leftover pasta, eggs and garlic)?

Third, you have to find some quick, tasty recipes that can turn leftover dinner into your morning meal.

This is where I can help. Below are several of my favorite "breakfast" foods, all of which can be made in about the same time it takes to prepare scrambled eggs. In addition to spaghetti pie, I offer you French toast made with leftover carrot cake; it's an idea on loan from Chef Michel LeBorgne of the New England Culinary Institute in Essex, Vt. If the cake is made from a low fat recipe, you've got a healthy breakfast as well. There's a fake rice recipe, and one for turning mashed potatoes into potato patties. Even if your kids don't bite, it might shake you out of the breakfast doldrums.

If you just can't get your kids to eat breakfast, ask their teacher or the school nurse for help. And to Jan Wimmer, nurse at Union-32 High School in East Montpelier, Vt., thanks for the reminder!

FOOD
MARIALISA CALTA

1 tablespoon butter or 1-1/2 teaspoons vegetable oil and 1-1/2 teaspoons butter
Maple syrup, warm applesauce, or plain or vanilla yogurt, for topping whites. Add 2 cups sugar, 1 cup prune puree, and 1/3 cup vegetable oil. In another bowl, mix 2-1/2 cups flour with 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-1/2 teaspoons baking soda, and 1 teaspoon salt. Add to the egg mixture. Stir in 2 cups grated carrots, 8 ounces of canned crushed pineapple (drained), and 1/4 cup chopped, toasted walnuts. Bake in 2 standard bread loaf pans in a 350 degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes, or until tester comes out clean. (This also makes 3 9-inch round cake layers.)

1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 eggs, beaten
Salt and pepper to taste
1 clove garlic, peeled and minced, or generous shake garlic powder
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon butter

Mix the cold spaghetti in a bowl with the cheese, eggs, salt and pepper to taste. If using garlic powder, add it now.

Heat the oil and butter in an 8 or 10-inch skillet over medium heat. If using the garlic clove, add it now and stir for about 2 minutes until it gets soft. Pour in the spaghetti mixture and shape it into a round pie. When one side is done, slide "pie" onto a plate and flip it over into the skillet so that the other side browns.

Serve immediately.
Yield: 2 to 3 servings

Tips for smart grocery shopping

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Supermarkets are among the savviest of selling machines. They know how to entice you to buy more than you had planned — through the placement of items on their shelves, the use of special displays on the ends of aisles, and the aroma of fresh-baked bread.

They know how to sell high-priced, high-profit items, from packaged salads to gourmet cheeses, that have special appeal because of convenience, cachet or taste.

And they know how to lure you with the promise of low prices — by offering store brands, frequent-shopper programs and all kinds of promotions. Some also make a point of providing extra-friendly service and other conveniences.

From our guide to smart shopping, here are some tips that can help you cut your grocery bills or get in and out of the store quickly with the items you really want — and nothing more.

— Shop the specials — if they are special. Supermarkets, like many other retailers, offer loss leaders. These are heavily advertised items that may sell for low prices — with little, if any, profit. ... to get you into the store, where you buy more profitable items. Whenever you shop, you'll find many nonperishable staples and perishables that can be frozen (or stockpiled) on sale at predictable intervals. With careful planning and ample storage space, you can shop a single store and rarely pay full price for items such as cereal, meat, paper goods and soft drinks. But make sure a featured item really is offered at a sale price. Regular-priced products may be prominent in ads only because their manufacturers have paid the store to feature them.

— Consider store brands. Buying private-label items is a proven way to cut your grocery bills, since such items are priced as much as 10 percent below their national-brand competitors. In our tests of supermarket products, we almost always find store brands that are as good as their name-brand counterparts — which is not surprising, since the name-brand manufacturers often make the same items for their supermarket.

— Join the shoppers' club. As a member of a store's shoppers' club, you receive a card that entitles you to automatic discounts on products without having to clip coupons from circulars. You may also receive access to unadvertised, members-only specials. Some shoppers' clubs, following the models of airline frequent-flyer programs, also allow you to accumulate points you can redeem for free items or cash rebates. Stores may also use the information they receive when you use their card to target you for particular promotions. Such micro-marketing may be appealing or annoying, depending on your outlook.

— Check the scanner. With price tags now largely obsolete, shoppers are at the mercy of shelf tags (which are sometimes missing) and the store's checkout scanners. A recent national study of scanner accuracy found fairly low error rates. And it found that when the scanner does err, customers are a little more likely to be charged less than they should, not more. Writing down prices is probably more trouble than it's worth, in most cases. The best bet may be to carry along the store's circular, which can at least check the featured items. And find out the store's policy for pricing errors. Many chains will give you the item free if the wrong price is scanned, but most keep mum about the offer.

— Weigh the advantages of prepared food. Prepared foods are extraordinarily profitable items. Stores typically mark up grocery, meat, dairy and frozen goods by around 20 percent. The markup on most prepared foods is twice as high. Our readers tell us that prepared foods' main attraction is their convenience — only one-quarter of readers who bought supermarket meals said they bought them for quality and taste. And the decision was often an impulse. Nearly two-thirds of prepared-food purchasers said they usually decide to buy a meal after arriving at the store.

I'm sorry but I just can't get to love soccer

SANFORD — Oh, I try so hard. So often, my job takes me over to the Seminole Soccer Complex where, over acres and acres of land in Sanford, hundreds, thousands, millions of kids scurry across the dozens of fields as their fanatical parents cheer them on from the sidelines. There is love in the air.

It's all about soccer. Somehow, the game is the most participated-in youth sport in America and supposedly the world's most popular game.

I hate it.

I always have hated soccer and always will, even if it kills me.

In fact, one night last year, covering a girls' high school soccer game, I started to like the game, then forced myself, against my will, to change my mind.

It all started when I was a kid. My parents took me to a Tampa Bay Rowdies - Fort Lauderdale Strikers game when I was about seven. The only thing I knew about soccer was that the Rowdies had a pretty cool theme song (The Rowdies arrrrrrrr...a kick in the grass).

The crowd was big. Tampa Stadium was the largest place I had ever seen, and I remember the cheers when the only player I had ever heard of, Rodney Marsh, ran onto the field for the Rowdies.

There was a lot of noise. I buzzed with the excitement of a seven-year-old kid.

And then the game started.

For the next hundred hours or so, nothing happened. No one scored; no one got the ball near the goal. The crowd was going wild over indirect corner kicks or what ever they're called.

Me? The Hundred Years War didn't take quite as long as this one.

To make matters worse, my parents poured cokes and cotton candy down my throat so, not only couldn't I go to sleep in the stadium, I had a sugar rush that made me even more aware that I was bored.

Finally, some team (I have no idea which one) scored on some shootout and, mercifully the game was over.

Now it's 14 years later and I've covered soccer in a lot of places and still don't understand it. Take the offside rule. Dozens of people have tried to explain it to me. Something about a player not being able to cross a line with the ball until his teammates have already crossed the line.

Who spent time coming up with that rule? Anyway, to the untrained eye, that seems to be the reason no one ever scores. Every time a team starts actually accomplishing something on offense, the stupidly-dressed referee starts blowing whistles and handing out Uno cards to everybody.

None of it makes any sense and no one ever scores, except that sometimes you get a game where it ends up something like 9-0 where the ball never leaves one end of the field.

I know what all of you soccer fans are thinking: Berlinicke doesn't appreciate the beauty of the game. The art of a fine corner kick; a header into the net.

Leave me alone. There is nothing beautiful about people letting a ball crash off their skull or a bunch of players trying to defend a direct kick by standing in front of the goal, covering their, uh, private parts, in a very public fashion.

Now, I'll admit, I get a little bit moved when I see some eight-year-old score his first goal. The smile is worth the boredom, but I also know that God must be getting tired of my prayers when, with five minutes left in a 1-0 game, the trailing team makes a late charge and threatens to tie the game.

There is an unwritten rule in soccer that, when a game goes into overtime, both teams are absolutely forbidden to even try to score until the shootout eight hours later.

Nothing is worse than knowing there is only five minutes left in a soccer game when the other team scores and all you have to look forward to are the endless hours of human pinball.

Of course you never really know how much time is left because the scoreboard clock is irrelevant. The official clock is inside some referee's pocket and, usually, with the clock snailing towards zero, the game keeps going. Then, the referee just announces, "Game Over."

I wish he would announce it earlier.

Quartet remains in running in Sanford women's softball

From Staff Reports

SANFORD Vivona's and Today Homes stayed hot. Paul's Auto and Truck Repair missed an opportunity to tie for the league lead and the Sharks got back into contention in Sanford Recreation Department Women's Fall Slowpitch Softball League action Tuesday night.

At Pinhurst Park, Today Homes moved into a tie for first place as it scored in every inning, including a four-run first inning and a five-run third inning, and the defense held Vaughan to seven hits in a 14-1, five-inning Run Rule victory.

But Vivona regained the league lead an hour later, scoring four runs in each of the first and third innings and then finally pulling away from the Nightmares by scoring seven runs in the sixth inning to post a 10-7, six-inning Run Rule triumph.

At Chase Park, Paul's Auto and Truck Repair had also moved into a tie for first place in the league standings by scoring four runs in the third inning to break a 1-1 tie and going on to outscore Insurance World 9-2 in the first game of the evening.

But Paul's Auto and Truck Repair could not match Vivona's in the second game as the Sharks scored four runs in the top of the first inning and Paul's Auto and Truck Repair could never recover in dropping a 5-2 decision.

Vivona's holds the league lead with a 5-1 record, but it is still very close behind them with Today Homes second (4-1), Paul's Auto and Truck Repair third (4-2), the Sharks fourth (3-3), Vaughan fifth (2-4), the Nightmares sixth (1-4) and Insurance World seventh (1-5).

Next week, Today Homes plays the double-header at Chase Park against the Sharks at 7 p.m. and Vaughan at 8 p.m.

The Ryder Cup-style matches featured a variety of formats and were played two weeks ago at both clubs.

For Alaquia: Jim Byrd, Tom Davidson, Harold Kaplan, J. Gordon Blau, Jerry Plante, Larry Stutes, Randy Parks, Mike Marroschak, Craig Rattick, Tom Dellatorre, Emerson Elliott and Sheldon Aboff.

The opening day was played at Alaquia and featured two-man teams playing an alternate shot format on the first nine holes and best ball on the back nine.
