Comprehensive Plan -The Drainage Issue

Herald Staff Writer

The sun beats down. We don our sunglasses and head for the beach or one of the area's other outdoor attractions. The problem of flooding seems remote. But it is a pressing problem in rapidly expanding Seminole County, according to county Principal Planner Gerald Langston. And it's going to get worse. "There's still lots of vacant land - even in urbanized portions of the county," says Langston, "and we have a relatively weak drainage system. As development fills in, you can logically expect a lot more (surface) runoff" due to the increase in paved areas. Seminole County's comprehensive development plan framework, now in draft form, addresses the problem of surface water resources by proposing the establishment, with the cooperation of the county's municipalities, of a countywide surface water management authority.

The authority would have responsibility for planning Seminole County Commission Chairman Dick Williams concedes that, within the Comprehensive Plan now being studied, consolidation of services is a key factor is such areas as transportation & roads, drainage, fire protection and parks.

This is the second in a series taking a close look at what consolidation is envisioned and what it would mean to the municipalities and the county.

improving, maintaining and regulating the county's 16 arterial drainage networks.

Before an area becomes developed, rain water either seeps into the gound or enters the area's streams, which flow into rivers or lakes.

Once development takes place, the balance of nature is thrown out of kilter. There is less land area to soak up the water, which has fewer places to flow. Streams can overload during periods of heavy rainfall, and development can change the depth of waterways. Flowing water does not respect political boundaries, and the actions of one city can affect the flow of water through another. Gee Creek, for example, flows through Longwood, Winter Springs, Casselberry and unincorporated areas. If development occurs in flood-plain areas, homeowners face the possibility of flooding in their homes when heavy rainfall takes place. "With a hundred-year flood, some homeowners might be flooded out," according to Langston.

The last such flood took place before the county began to

As areas are stripped of vegetation, the water is held for a much shorter time and more water enters county waterways, robbing the water table of its means of Solving the multi-faceted problem "seems to require some kind of multijurisdictional approach," Langston says. "We need a compatible approach to the regulatory process and maintaining the flow in the system." Langston says the success of such an approach depends on building a cooperative relationship between the county and the cities. . . We're looking for cities to take a constructive look at the proposal to see if it has merit. We hope they'll tell us what they think." The plan lists four possibilities for creating a surface

And ridership, according to County Commission Chairman Dick Williams and county planners, is the key to continuation of the one system - or the start up of others.

"Mass transit is a long way off," Willaims said. However, he said, increases in the price of gasoline could alter the picture and prompt county officials to look into the feasibility of funding public transport.

"The people have indicated a need and want it," Williams said. So far, he added, that hasn't happened.

Ridership on Maitland Route 14 is up period last year.

be efficient to continue a service that's not being used," Mrs. Sellen said. The lack of public transportation has always been matter of concern to residents of Seminole County. But, county planners have no proposals on the books to get into business of public transportation. "Development is sprawled. It's hard to provide a cost effective system." Mrs. Sellen points out.

The county's new comprehensive plan touches on public transport, but the blueprint for future growth contains no ambitious plans to get seriously involved with public transportation. The only light at the end of the transportation tunnel is a proposal by OSOTA for an additional express route

However, Mrs. Sellen said details on the additional run still have to be worked out. OSTA's proposed new route, like Maitland Route 14, depends on ridership. If residents don't ride buses, then governmental entities won't be spending tax dollars to fund them.

NATION IN BRIEF

Carter's Energy Projection: A 'Sky Is Falling' Message

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is preparing to warn the American people that "the sky is falling" as far as energy is concerned and that there must be sacrifices now to hold off abrupt and painful shortages in the future. Carter is beginning an intensive campaign to win public acceptance of his national energy plan, which he will outline tonight in his second "fireside chat." The energy policy will be revealed in depth on Wednesday when Carter addresses a joint session of Congress.

Oh, That Tangled Web

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is working to extricate himself from a political tangle of his own making, while keeping his promise to curb the government's beaver-like ambitions to dam the nation's rivers and flood its flatlands. Carter is recommending a halt in 1978 funding for 15 water projects, cuts in funding for five more, continued review for two projects and full funding for eight. His recommendations have been disclosed by sources in Congress, state governments and environmental groups.

Crisis May Sharpen Rivalry

WASHINGTON (AP) - Russia now is selfsufficient in oil but in a few years it will face an energy crisis that is likely to sharpen U.S.-Soviet rivalries in the Middle East, CIA analysts predict. This is one of the most startling and, in the view of analysts, significant conclusions in a still-secret report to President Carter. That report, mentioned briefly by Carter last Friday, warns of a potential global oil shortage in less than 10

Congress is Reconvening

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is returning to Washington to hear President Carter's proposals for a broad new energy program and to decide how to handle the remnants of the administration's economic stimulus package. Before leaving for a 10-day Easter recess, the Senate had scheduled the big Carter tax bill for immediate attention on its return today.

Runners Are Call Of The Day | Drainage -- It's Key Target

BOSTON (AP) - Massachusetts observes Patriots Day today with an international horde of nearly 3,100 runners - young and old, men and women - competing in the 81st Boston Marathon. The race begins in the tiny Middlesex County community of Hopkinton, 25 miles southwest of Boston. The runners kick off at high noon, headed for a finish line in Boston, 26 miles and 385-yards away.

He apparently is determined to avoid spending political ammunition before he reaches issues he deems crucial. One is at hand in the energy program he will present to a joint session of Congress on Wednesday night. That one will take some heavy persuasion, with the country and

Pay Toilets Still Major Controversy

One of the more pertinently controversial subjects across the land in our times is the matter of pay toilets.

Thanks to American industries, notably the major oil companies-so often condemned-America has no shortage of sanitation facilities that are open to the public without charge. Nevertheless, amid such affluence, a significant number of individuals have been willing to spend an occasional dime to obtain the extra privacy and environment that pay toiletry affords.

Basically, this arrangement between willing customers and a willing provider of service would seem to invite few objections. Unfortunately, state legislatures have shown a tendency to intervene. The Wall Street Journal pointed out that four states now ban this voluntary convenience. They are Alaska, Wyoming, Tennessee and New York. On reflection, the disposition of the state to involve itself in an apparently harmless and trivial transaction between private parties appears to have stemmed from a mythical grasp of the factual

The myth is the image of an individual in desperate visceral circumstances, but without a dime to trip the pay lock. The depiction indeed draws sympathy. No mind the probability that nonpay facilities are in the vicinity or that generous passersby traditionally are willing to "spare a dime" for a cup of coffee. Under the license of painful possibility, however remote, the lawmakers rush in with ban in hand. The net result is to decrease investment in public sanitation (by making same less profitable) and to disturb what had been a constructive relationship between entrepreneur and privacy-seeking client.

But wait, all is not lost. Hoving onto the horizon like the Lone Ranger comes a hero. Yes, we can recognize the white hat as he draws closer. It is. . . . it is. . . . old reliable, Human Ingenuity, For, according to the Journal, Nik-O-Lok Co. has come out with a token-operated lock to substitute for the coinpops. The Journal reports that merchants say the tokens at least let them retain some control over the use of their restrooms. That is, if you want to use the facility, you can ask the cashier for a token. Something like getting your parking stub validated.

Now, why didn't the lawmakers think of that? Instead of prohibiting semi-private toilets, they might have decreed that the business establishment keep a few tokens on hand for the rescue of persons in distress. The fact that lawmakers in a number of states chose to prohibit a helpful facility rather than to mitigate a rare difficulty, illustrates the characteristic limitation of remedies that are politically arrived at.

For absolute clarity, the subject could be reduced to an aphorism. But we restrain.

do business in South Africa because of that country's racial policies. Eleven major U.S. companies are demonstrating the other side of the coin — that American influence can help move South Africa away from its repugnant apartheid.

The companies have announced a plan to start treating nonwhite employes in their South African branches under the same principles of fair employment and equal opportunity that prevail in the United States. Work facilities will not be segregated. Training programs will be offered to nonwhites to advance their careers. Equal pay for equal work will be the rule.

Such practices are going to run against the spirit if not the letter of apartheid laws. The South African government will find it awkward to do anything about it, however, since the presence of the U.S. firms is important to their economy.

American companies have an opportunity to prove that principles of social and economic justice which we are striving to perfect in this country can be an export commodity.

"Hey, wait a minute! What happened to the of 'slap-on-the-wrist'?"

Sanford City Manager W.E. Knowles' decision to ecommend court action to settle the "doubletaxation" issue with Seminole County was anything but surprising. Knowles said the county commissioners' response to the city petition to alleviate the problem, a resolution which denied the existence of double taxation, was "the same response they gave in April

City officials have repeatedly stated their intent to go to court with the county on the question if a atisfactory answer from the county was not for-

In petitioning the county, the city was taking advantage of a state law allowing cities to identify services "rendered specially for the benefit of the property or residents in unincorporated areas financed from countywide revenues."

The law also allows cities to petition the county "to develop an appropriate mechanism to finance such activity, which may either be taxes, special assessments or service charges levied solely upon residents or property in the unincorporated area. . .

or by remitting" the cost of the services in question to property taxpayers in the city or to the city itself.
Sanford's petition identified double taxation as existing in the county's "building department, planning and zoning department, environmental services, subdivision street maintenance, traffic engineering, road resurfacing and grading, arthropod solid waste control, public works, refuse and disposal and sheriff's department." The state law requires county commissioners to respond to city petitions on tax equalization within 90 days. The county commissioners acted on Sanford's petition on Tuesday the 90th day.

The city has sought a solution to the problem since September of 1974, when the city commission first passed a resolution bringing the tax equalization issue to the attention of county commissioners. In March of 1975 the city commission requested the county establish a study group on the issue.

And in January of 1976, the city requested the Seminole legislative delegation to sponsor legislation to define double taxation and require a study commission.

The delegation's response was to appoint special committee to study the issue. The committee reported to the delegation in January that double taxation does exist in Seminole County in 10 areas of county government.

Sanford's Jan. 10 petition to the county listed the areas of double taxation mentioned in the special committee's report.

The county commissioners met March 31 with the Sanford city commission to discuss the issue. The meeting was also attended by representatives of five other cities in the county, who had been invited by Sanford to attend. At that meeting, County Commission Chairman

Dick Williams promised the county would respond to Sanford's petition by the April 12 deadline. That response has led Knowles to recommend the city commissioners approve legal action to settle the issue in the courts, where most observers of the situation felt it would eventually be resolved. Other cities in Seminole are expected to join Sanford's effort to deal with the issue through

Postal Service Is Urged: Make Deliveries Reliable

Special To The Herald WASHINGTON - The financially trouble Postal Service should concentrate on making its undependable deliveries more reliable instead of faster, the Postal Service Commission has urged in a confidential study.

The spotty mail service should hold costs down by cutting back deliveries to five days a week, not by closing needed rural post offices, recommends the long-awaited federal report. We have obtained an advance copy of the report by the Postal Service Commission, which held 26 days of hearings in 21 cities to determine how the much-maligned mail service might be improved. Congress made the Postal Service a semi-independen agency in 1971 in a move to get it into the black, but Capitol Hill had to kick in over $1 billion last year just to keep the mail In fact, the postal operation cost twice as much last year as it did in 1968, and the declining service that the 13-cent stamp now buys has made it the target of increasing public resentment. The commission's recommendations, therefore, will have a major impact on the shape of mail delivery in the coming years. According to the draft report, these are the panel's major

-Rural post offices should not be closed to save money. If small post offices had not been closed in recent years, there would be nearly 77,000 post offices today instead of 30,000. "Post offices provide major government services, especially to rural America," the study observes. Closing the small offices to cut costs "hardly seems to be a fair return to the rural taxpayer." - Mail delivery should be cut back to five days a week. According to a Nielsen survey cited by the commission, 80 per cent of the public favors this approach as the least painful way to cut costs. If Congress adopts this recommendation, Saturday's mail probably will disappear.

— Higher rates should be charged for guaranteed, next-day delivery. Although five-day delivery would be more efficient, those who demand faster service should bear the increased cost, the report advises. - the number of collection boxes at convenient locations should be increased. More postal facilities should be located where people shop or do business, the study suggests, such as shopping centers and government buildings. - Post offices should make their hours move convenient to the public. Without increasing the total number of hours, postal facilities should remain open evenings and Saturdays to accommodate people who work.

- Parcel post service should be improved. The report sharply criticized parcel post, where volume has steadily declined since 953. A major reason is that the bulk mail machinery often mangles packages and sends them to the wrong destinations. "Doubt lingers in our minds," the commissioners said, that the service is doing all it can to make every aspect of parcel post more "competitive."

- The change-of-address system should be improved. Forwarding of mail should be made more accurate and more timely, and should be free for a year. - Postal workers should be better trained and supervised. This mission blames rising salaries for much of the Postal Service's increased costs. While postal costs have increased from $9.2 billion in 1971 to $14.1 billion last year, three AFL-CIO union agreements have boosted wage costs a staggering 61 per cent. This compares to a 47 per cent jump in private salaries and a 40 per cent boost in prices over the same period. The price of a firstclass stamp, however, went up 117 per cent.

While the public will support some service reductions to keep costs down, says the study, it would rather have Congress spend more money to keep essential services intact. Not surprisingly, more people favor increased public subsidies for mail service instead of having to pay higher postal rates themselves. The commission, therefore, recommends that Congress spend $625 million to wipe out the service's operating deficit.

First-class mail faces major competiton in the future from electronic communications systems, notes the report. The Postal Service should utilize this new technology if it is to keep pace with competitors, it recommends

Despite modest productivity gains, mail volume will continue to decline in the future, and there is little the Postal Service can do about it. In fact, the commissioners paint a bleak picture of the service's future. "Achieving self'sufficiency by 1985 would be extremely difficult, if not impossible," the report contends "Unless dramatic changes occur, the prospects are not en-

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC:

YOU WON'T GET THE GAS MILEAGE ADVERTISED.

No, sir, you won't. There's a slight possibility you'll get more, but you'll probably get less. The only gas mileage figures we are allowed to use in our advertising are given to us by the government. The Environmental Protection Agency (E.P.A.) test runs all models of cars in a laboratory on a dynamometer. We don't know anybody who drives a car in a laboratory. But we know a lot of people who drive on city streets and country roads.

SO, WHAT MILEAGE CAN YOU EXPECT?

With some cars and in some cases, you can expect as little as half the E.P.A. estimates. On the other hand, if you have your car fine tuned by an expert, properly inflate your tires, don't carry any passengers, luggage or turn on the air conditioning...if the wind conditions are right and you drive with an egg under the gas pedal-you might come pretty close to that E.P.A. mileage.

TOYOTA'S E.P.A. ESTIMATE IS 49 MPG HIGHWAY -

That's for our Toyota Corolla with the standard four-speed transmission. You possibly won't get that mileage. Road Test Magazine stated, "...our 52 mile real world driving cycle with its potholes, hills, traffic, and weather forced that (E.P.A.) number down to 38 mpg." That's still mighty good. So, when you buy a Toyota, you buy a thrifty car that's stingy on gasoline. It's quality designed and engineered, yet good-looking enough to be proud of and comfortable enough to ride in. If gasoline mileage is your only consideration. and you're not interested in gallon. Wouldn't you really

War Of Chromosomes

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) - The "War of the Chromosomes" is beginning to wear on Dr. Renee Richards, the transsexual who is fighting for the right to play tournament tennis-

"It reminds me of the time I served in the navy," said the prominent 42-year-old eye surgeon who until a sex change 20 months ago lived as Richard Raskind, New York opthalmologist, former Yale tennis captain and ranking sectional player. "I was assigned to this sub. We had to make 16 dives a day. The purpose was to keep repeating, looking for a dive that might go wrong. Once, I recall, a hatch didn't close and the tower was filled with two feet of water before the alarm went off. "I feel now that those who oppose my playing will keep insisting" on tests until one comes up that can be used as an excuse to bar

Dr. Richards underwent the prescribed test a couple of weeks ago in Little Rock, Ark., properly supervised and attested to. She Results of the test were sent to the International Lawn Tennis Federation and the U.S. Tennis Association to insure her entry in the year's major events - the Italian and French opens, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

The Women's Tennis Association, which directs the major tour that includes players such as Chris Evert, Rosemary Casals and Virginia Wade, refused to accept the latest finding. "They are trying to keep me out because they are afraid I will take some of their prize money," Dr. Richards said during a break in a weekend tournament at the Port Washington Academy. "They are trying to protect the false image of the ladies' tour. All except Chris Evert, they are deathly afraid of exposure of their own proclivities, which are well known and not above

"The WTA and the USTA are idiots. I have my documents, my airline reservations and accommodations for two months of play in Europe. I don't intend to be denied this privilege." Renee, who faced up bravely to the circus-like atmosphere that surrounded her attempt to crash into bigtime tennis last year, suddenly has become taut, less patient and less accessible in public dealing with the issue.

"I have proved I don't have two heads," she said. "It is a 'fait accompli.' I don't want any more headlines. I am tired of interviews dealing with the subject. I am constantly being besieged for TV talk shows and other appearances. I turn down most. "I resent the attention given my tennis matches just because I am transsexual. I want to be judged strictly as a person and on

As the tall, willowy doctor talked in the club lounge, 16-year-old Caroline Stoll sneaked up behind her and pretended to choke her. Players thought it was hilarious.

The WTA's resistance seems picayune and misguided. The 42year-old Renee, on performance, has posed no serious threat. She lost to the teenage Miss Stoll in the semifinals here. In seven major league victory while Jim satellite tournaments, she has won only one - Hawaii - and has lost regularly to players not in the top 20.

Carol-Jo Garfinkel 'tunes in' to receive information on past lives of subject. Who you might have been does not really matter: it is more important to know what you may have accomplished in a past life.

The Comprehensive Plan -- Roads, Transportation

The county's proposed comprehensive form, puts forth a three-level solution to the problem of increased traffic and the need for better coordination of tran-Sportation within the county. The plan, which will be considered at a May 17 county commission public hearing, proposes the establishment of:

- A countywide principal road system, including most state primary and secondary roads in the county and other arterials and collectors to be defined later. The system would be composed of about 228 miles of roads, 18 miles of which are located within incorporated areas.

—An urban road system for unincorporated areas. The system would include roads not designated by the county wide system. -A rural road system for unincorporated rural areas.

County planners cite the county's "bassically weak highway system, the tremendous growth experienced by the Orlando metropolitan area, plus that anticipated in the future," as factors that will result in "travel demands which surpass the county's ability to provide adequate traffic capacity."

The planners also feel that even if the county's population doubles within the efficiency we get for our investment," next 25 years as expected, few new roads Langston says. will be constructed in the county.

Areas included in the grant preapplication are: Bookertown, Lockhart, Midway, Winwood, Jamestown and Johnson Hill.

County Planner Bill Kercher said all areas except Midway requested paving and drainage. Midway asked for funds to construct a new community

"I thought it was great news," an elated Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff said when informed today of the grant. "It is good news," Kercher replied.

Kercher said county planners will meet to decide where the $265,000 can most effectively be utilized between now and midsummer when the final grant application must be submitted
