Casselberry joins county in deciding adult clubs' fate

By Maria Orem HERALD STAFF WRITER

CASSELBERRY - It'll be up to the voters to decide in November the fate of adult clubs in the city as well as the county. City commissioners on Monday unanimously approved an ordinance that would separate alcohol and nudity. The ordinance is aimed at banning the sale of alcohol in adult clubs, a combination city officials said is not permitted in other Seminole County cities with the exception of Winter Springs.

With three adult clubs in the city and three more just outside the boundary, Casselberry has been trying to strengthen its existing adult ordinance. Adult businesses have been blamed for contributing to lower property values and having and adverse effect on community stan-

Mark George, a paster of a Casselberry church and a candidate for the city commission, said the adult businesses contribute to the negative image of the U.S. Highway 17-92 corri-

In June, George as leader of the Citizens For Decency, led a petition drive to place a decency ordinance on the November ballot, after county commissioners voted to not adopt it in favor of the current ordinance that permits nude dancing but severely restricts locations and outside appearances of adult businesses. More than 9,500 signatures were collected, but the validity of several was challenged by a lawsuit last month. County commissioners, to save the cost of a lawsuit, will reconsider the decency ordinance at a Sept. 22 public hearing.

"Adult entertainment with its alcohol, alcohol, alcohol and nudity, nudity, nudity, is a major contributor to our blight and disinvestment," George said.

He cited statistics showing a high number of police and fire department responses for the three clubs and urged commissioners to listen to their constituents and not to the pornography lawyers.

We have a right to establish community standards," he sald.

Speaking in support of the ordinance, several residents urged commissioners to vote on the issue and not wait until the Nov. 3 referendum.

Nancy Ross, representing a Longwood citizens group, said, "We want you to vote tonight. I believe we have already apoken."

Vice Mayor David Henson said, as written. commissioners could not vote on the ordinance because it specified a Nov. 3 referendum vote. in order for the commission to vote, the issue

Business as usual in Lake Mary

By Shari Brodie HERALD FEATURE EDITOR

LAKE MARY - It's business as usual in Lake Mary as the Lake Mary City Commissie meets of the final time in fiscal year 1997-98.

The second public hearing on the proposed millage rate and budget for the new fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, tops the agenda for the Thursday city commission meeting.
As no one opposed the incumbents for the three commission seats up for election, and Mayor David Mealor will continue in their jobs for two more years.

A potentially heavy agenda for the commission has been whittled down, due to postponement of several items to Oct. 1.

The commission was to hear second readings on the annexation and land use change of approximately 17 acres of property on Emma Oaks Trail, in Seminole County.

Three parties have petitioned for the voluntary annexation into the city, in order to develop office/flex space. The property is contiguous with the city's municipal boundaries and Sentor Planner Susan Deines advised the commission, in the first reading on Sept. 3, that the annexation would be beneficial to the city and the applicants "to be able to develop this property under the city's land development regulations. The property owner will be assured of city utilities and services and the city will be assured of compatible development with surrounding uses."

The property is adjacent to Skyline Drive, where several commercial developments already exist.

Deines requested the postponement of the second reading because of a 30-day moratorium on future land use amendments required by the Please See Lake Mary, Page 2A

Future of Fort Mellon Park officially in hands of voters

By Maria Orem HERALD STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - The future of Fort Mellon Park is now in the hands of voters, city commissioners decided on Monday.

On Nov. 3, Sanford residents will speak out on whether the park should be part of a proposed site that will include a hotel and conference center. The city commission had previously given its stamp of approval to conceptual plans offered by the Connecticut-based developer Joe Pacitti.

The issue, however, has divided residents for the past

Members of the Society for the Preservation of Fort Mellon Park, led by Doug Groseclose. say they are not against economic development or progress. The group had asked the city to consider other sites and went as far as filing an injunction last month questioning the intent of an ordinance that would clear title on the park property.

The wording, the group contended, gave the city carte blanche in dealing with the developer and would render the November referendum moot. A judge earlier this month denied the request for an injunction.

The Society continues its protest through a letter writing campaign and signs. The group also had launched a petition drive seeking 2,700 signatures to place the issue on the November ballot. Before the signatures were collected, however, Pacitti agreed to a referendum vote.

Mayor Larry Dale, an outspoken supporter of the lakefront development project, had committed on behalf of the city about $2 million to park improvements, which included a fishing pier and boardwalks. At least six acres of the park would remain intact. Dale said.

Local merchants and residents formed a group and held a rally recently seeking residenta' support for the proposed Ficase See Park, Page 2A

It's time for the Jaguars to become a team for all of Florida

JACKSONVILLE Hey Jacksonville Jaguars, come on down.

Did you notice the 3,500 empty scats at Sunday's game against the Kansas City Chiefs? It was only a preview to the AFC championship game, that's all.

You're getting a little arrogant up there in Jacksonville.

Let's recap:

When Jacksonville was rewarded with an NFL franchise in 1993, the city promised to sell out the first three seasons of play. Season tickets were sold on a three-year contract, guaranteeing sellouts for the first three seasons.

That was never a problem in footballstarved North Florida.

But now that the novelty has worn off and the Jaguars had to face season ticket renewals for the first time, they were hit in the face Sunday by the reality that the team is no longer a novelty, even if it is the best team in the AFC.

For the first time, the Jaguars have to scriously market the team.

And one place to do some serious work is right here in Central Florida.

True, the Jaguars have to be considered, along with Denver, as a co-favorite to reach the Super Bowl. The Miami Dolphins, despite a 2-0 start with wins against the Colts and Bills, will still be lucky to reach the post-BERSON.

But, when WKMG-Channel 6 ran a poll to allow voters to pick the game of their choice to televise last weekend, Orlandroids chose a lame Miami-Buffalo game over the biggest game of the weekend.

In fact, the entire country, except Orlando, got to watch the Jaguars and Chiefs.

And the vote wasn't even close. It ended up 9,500 to 2,500 in favor of the Dolphins, even though the Jags are closer by half to Orlando than Miami.

What's the problem?

Sure the Dolphins have more tradition and have a long sense of loyalty in Orlando, but the Jags are as close as Tampa and everyone you see these days is wearing a Buccaneer Jersey. You never see anyone wearing a Mark

The problem is that the Jaguars have become arrogant. North Florida, which is really an extension of South Georgia, is different from the rest of the state. It isn't tourist-friendly and you're more likely to see gun racks on a car than an out-of-state license plate.

The Jaguars like their little cocoon in North Florida, but they also had to notice the empty seats Sunday for the biggest game in the country. Tampa Bay started to sell-out last year. Granted, the Bucs had a winning record, but they also recruited Central Florida. There are still billboards and advertisements all over the place for season tickets for the new Sombrero or whatever it's called.

The Bucs even played a pre-season in Orlando two years ago, although it drew under 20,000 people.

Tampa Bay has become Orlando's team and it's the Jaguars' fault. Central Florida should belong to Jacksonville, but until the Jaguars recognize it, they'll still be seen as ugly step-children, part of South Georgia. The Jags had 3,500 empty seats against Kansas City Sunday.

Imagine what the number will be when the lame Ravens come to town this Sunday. Hey, Jacksonville, come on down. We'd love to have you. Last Second Shot: Can you believe the Orlando Magic is advertising season-ticket sales? Who in the world would buy a season ticket now, with the NBA season in jeopardy?

Van Looven is a two-sport star at Lake Mary High School. In the fall. she is the school's all-time leader in assists for the volleyball team that is a candidate for a state title.

That won't be anything new for Van Looven. She was a member of the soccer team that won states last year, but she says, despite the Rams' championships in soccer, softball and basketball last season, the only pressure on the volleyball team is what it puts on it-
