The title of the forum tonight is, "Perceptions, Perspective, Progress, Partnership." Program chairman Kay Bartholomew calls it, "an open exchange of ideas on how to improve and support the Sanford schools."

"We want to support the school system, and when there is a problem, work with the board in a positive, constructive manner," Cranias said. "We are not going to sweep the problems under the rug."

Members of Seminole County School board will be on hand at the meeting to discuss various concerns with downtown merchants as well as members of the public who may have questions or wish to share ideas. Dave Farr, Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce executive director, will moderate the forum.

Teachers OK contract

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — By a vote of 1,608 to 155 Seminole County teachers had approved 1991-92 contract when the ballots were tallied late yesterday afternoon.

"The teachers have gone long enough without a contract," said Helen Goodson, president of Seminole Education Association.

The teachers union failed to reach an agreement with the school district on their contract for this year during regular bargaining attempts prior to the start of school.

A special hearing officer was appointed to hear the case and make recommendations. Both the district and the union agreed to the terms recommended by the special master, but the teachers themselves had to vote on the terms.

The sticking points in the negotiations had been the matter of compensation for those who had reached the top of their pay scale.

The district agreed to the Special Master's recommendation that veteran teachers who had reached the top end of their pay scale and were, thus, not eligible for an automatic annual step raise, should receive a one-time $300 supplement this year.

A new teacher with a college degree and no classroom experience will make $20,0010 per year. A teacher with 30 years experience and a Ph.D degree earns $40,457.

Teachers will also receive an additional paid holiday this year which they will take on Jun 12. Teachers now will get seven paid holidays. Students will not receive a day off as this is the day after the close of school. Other language in the contract deals with issues including length of planning time and lunch duty.

"I'm satisfied with this years contract and we're ready to start negotiations again at the end of the school year," Goodson said.

Goodson acknowledged that the union members understood that the district is in a tight budgetary situation and that financial compensation was a difficult issue as a result.

"I think we've been able to agree on reasonably

Polk's son works for sheriff's foe

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — The son of former Seminole County Sheriff John Polk has worked for a private investigation firm owned by sheriff's candidate Harvey Morse since last week, the same week the Polk family endorsed Morse and handed Polk-picked sheriff Don Eslinger a stinging rejection.

Both Morse and Polk's son, John K. Polk, denied his job as a private investigator intern led to the endorsement by Polk's widow, Dottie Polk.

"I first went to Harvey a month, month and a half ago to talk to him about his philosophical beliefs," said John K. Polk, known to many as "John Jr." "It had no influence on the endorsement."

Morse maintained he knew nothing of the endorsement prior to John Jr. delivering the letter

Child struck by car dies from injuries

SANFORD — Five year old James Morris, Jr., of 1817 Alexander Avenue in Sanford, died yesterday of injuries received in an accident Sunday afternoon.

According to the Florida Highway Patrol, the youngster died at 3:08 yesterday afternoon at Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women, in Orlando. The boy was flown to the Orlando facility by helicopter following the accident on Airport Boulevard, near 20th Street.

According to the Highway Patrol, the boy was said to be walking along the shoulder of Airport Blvd., with his grandmother, when he ran across the roadway into the path of an oncoming car, driven by Timothy E. Thomas, 21, of 2019 McCarthy Avenue.

No charges have been made in connection with the case.

Lake Mary may ease way for business

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Two proposals will come before the City Commission this Thursday night. Both deal with smoothing out the processes needed for the establishment of new business.

The first item to be considered is an ordinance that would eliminate the Due Public Notice for Planning and Zoning Board hearings. According to City Manager John Litton, "This ordinance was prompted by the boards to reduce review time for site plans and subdivisions."

If approved, the ordinance will allow P&Z to deal basically with reviewing applications, taking testimony and examine relevant materials or other information in order to form a basis for recommendations to the City Commission.

During a recent discussion on the proposal at a city P&Z meeting, City Planner Matt West reported that the ordinance would eliminate any need for advertising for the hearings by P&Z. Board member John McMenamy however, stated he wanted to be sure, "that we don't forget that we owe some degree of notification to the citizens."

The second item, to be presented as a separate ordinance, would eliminate City Commission review of subdivisions and site plans that do not require approvals for variances.

Under the proposals, cases which would involve variances will be brought up for Commission action, as well as decisions made by the P&Z Board which may be contested by the applicant or another interested party.

West explained, "What will happen if these ordinances are approved, is that a notice will be posted on the property involved, whenever there is an application filed. Then, anyone who has any objections can inform the City Hall and it would then be brought up for SANFORD — The Hidden Lake Subdivision is getting a dinosaur. The creature was used on the set for the filming of the movie "Wilder Napalm" at the Zayre Plaza.

Joe Altman, president of the Hidden Lake Homeowners Association, said, "I've been in contact with one of the producers of the movie, Phil Collins, and he has agreed to donate the dinosaur and several other props used in the movie."

Altman had hoped to obtain the structure this past weekend, but commented, "The movie people say that they are running quite a bit behind, and so we've had to postpone bringing it over here, but as soon as they're finished, we'll be able to bring it in."

Altman said, "Although the Lee P. Moore park is relatively near our area, there is no

Has rainfall returned to 'normal'?

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

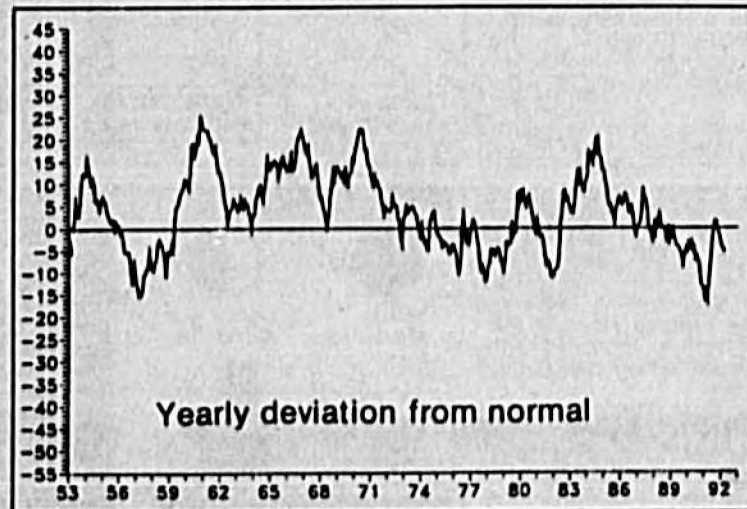

SANFORD — Despite rebounding rainfall levels, the chief statistician of the St. Johns River Water Management District says "normal" rainfall may not have returned.

"We've gotten normal rainfall figures," said Bill Osburn, director of technical data services for the water district. "Now, is that because of El Nino and we wouldn't have this rainfall without it? Who knows?"

El Nino is the shift in upper atmosphere patterns that meteorologists believe have contributed to heavy downpours in the Southwest which resulted in flooding in Texas and southern California.

Sanford was the wettest place in the entire 19-county water district which extends from Jacksonville to Melbourne and inland to Polk County. The 7.19 inches received was more than double the normal 3.26 inches as established by the federal government.

While many of the district's rain monitor stations still read far below normal conditions, Sanford rainfall exceeds three-month and annual averages, according to a monthly district hydrologic condition report. Rainfall at the city was still one inch below six-month averages for February.

District records show there has been a general downward trend in annual rainfall in the central section of the district which includes Seminole County since 1984. The last time the central section of the district experienced an excessively wet season was 1971.

City police may vote to unionize

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford police may vote to unionize next month.

A tentative date of April 2 has been set for Sanford police officers, corporals, and most sergeants, who are eligible to decide whether to be represented by a bargaining organization, said city personnel director Tim McCauley.

Police officers, corporals and sergeants in non-management positions will decide whether to be represented by a union, and if so, which one. Although the Fraternal Order of Police originally assisted union organizers with the effort last March, McCauley said the Police Benevolent Association has since asked to be included on the ballot.

Rolling bank robbery trial opens

TALLAHASSEE — A Gainesville college student was found murdered on the same day Danny Harold Rolling robbed a bank and then ran to a campsite in a wooded area near the bank, a prosecutor said.

But the eight women and four men picked as jurors Monday for Rolling's bank robbery trial only heard a veiled reference to the other charges against him — the murders of five Gainesville college students.

A prosecutor told jurors police were involved in a "massive investigation of another matter" as they were trying to catch the masked gunman who robbed First Union National Bank in Gainesville on Aug. 27, 1990.

One body was found that same day. Two bodies had been discovered the day before and two more the following day. Prosecutors believe Rolling likely came to town eight days before the first murder victim was discovered.

Rolling walked into the bank wearing a brown ski mask and gloves and carrying a 9mm handgun, stole about $7,000 from two tellers and fled on foot, according to Greg Miller, an assistant U.S. attorney.

Yale team swamped

TAMPA — A wave swamped two boats of the Yale University crew team on Tampa Bay and 19 members had to be rescued from the 64-degree water, authorities said.

The rowers were spotted off Tampa's Davis Island clinging to their overturned boats and a buoy Monday. Nine were briefly examined at Tampa General Hospital.

"A wave caused by the high winds apparently swamped both boats," said Aubrey Grant, deputy chief of fire-rescue operations. "It was cold and most of them were only wearing shorts and no shirts."

The Yale team, which is on spring break, has been training at the University of Tampa and competed in a regatta there last week.

Universal Card rate to drop

JACKSONVILLE — The annual rate for the AT&T Universal Card will drop by 1 percentage point effective April 1, benefiting nearly 13 million customers, the company has announced.

"As our costs decline, the right thing to do is pass the savings along to consumers," Paul Kahn, president of AT&T Universal Card Services, said Monday in a release from the company's Jacksonville headquarters.

AT&T said the variable annual percentage rate for 8.5 million charter members will drop to 15.4 percent from 16.4 percent.

In addition, more than 4 million card holders who signed up after the charter membership period also will get a 1 percentage point decrease, to 16.4 percent from 17.4 percent.

The Universal Card's variable annual percentage rate, which is pegged to the prime rate, has dropped a total of 3.5 percentage points since April 1991.

The charge is a combination MasterCard or Visa and a AT&T telephone credit card.

ACLU files suit for judge

OCALA — The American Civil Liberties Union has filed suit on behalf of a county judge, saying he was unconstitutionally threatened with prosecution for his technique of campaign advertising.

The suit filed Monday in U.S. District Court claims Citrus County Judge Gary Graham was threatened with prosecution under a law which makes it a crime for a judicial candidate to pay for any endorsement advertising sponsored by another person or group.

As part of Graham's 1990 campaign, he paid to print 5,000 postcards which stated "I am supporting Judge Graham because ..." A space was provided for recipients to explain their reason for supporting his candidacy.

Graham also paid to publish letters of support with the consent of the authors.

Both the postcards and advertisements were clearly designated "paid for by campaign account for Gary Graham."

Driver says he took trafficker to Noriega

MIAMI — Prosecutors threw another last-minute witness at Manuel Noriega over complaints from the defense that the government was abusing its power.

Felipe Pena, a Panamanian bus driver, said Monday that when he worked in the narcotics department in May 1984, he drove Medellin cartel trafficker Julio Cesar Correa to Noriega's summer home for a meeting.

At the time, leaders of the Colombian cartel had just fled to Panama after allegedly assassinating their nation's crusading anti-drug justice minister.

Much of Pena's testimony, however, appeared to contradict the rest of the prosecution's witnesses on important dates.

His cross-examination was to continue today.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Feds name tree noxious weed

From Staff and Wire Reports

FORT LAUDERDALE — The water-guzzling melaleuca tree, dubbed by scientists as the "ecological terminator of the Everglades," has gotten a new federal designation — noxious weed.

Also called a "Punk Tree" according to Seminole County Master Gardener Phil Braunschwig, the weed is found in Central Florida, director of the county Agricultural Center extension bureau, Uday Yadav said.

"There is one happily growing at the Orange County Extension Bureau," Braunschwig said. No doubt, they are growing all around here, including the Sanford area.

In putting the melaleuca on its Noxious

Weed List, the U.S. Department of Agriculture promised no money to fight the tree's spread. But the designation makes future federal aid in the melaleuca battle more likely, officials said.

"It's a federal hunting license to go after it," Ted Center of the USDA said at a news conference Monday near a thick stand of melaleucas at the Sawgrass Recreational Park in northwest Broward County.

The melaleuca joins tumbleweed, kudzu and water hyacinth on the federal noxious weeds list, which was created in 1979. It's the first addition in 12 years.

But only $750,000 was set aside last year to control the plants, numbering about 100, on the list.

"It is good to have it on the list, but I don't think this will have any immediate impact for a couple of years," said Burkett Neely, manager of Palm Beach County's Arthur R. Marshall Loxahatchee National Wildlife Refuge, where melaleucas cover several thousand acres.

Braunschwig said the melaleuca had not become a big nuisance in Central Florida.

"But eventually it could," he said.

The Australian melaleuca was brought to South Florida in 1906 to help drain wetlands. But without natural enemies to check its growth, it has flourished.

According to the latest estimates, 6 billion melaleuca trees cover up to 600,000 acres in the region. In some places, they have formed 40-acre forests dense enough to keep sunlight from reaching the ground.

Florida is attracting major films

Associated Press

ORLANDO — Gov. Lawton Chiles says Florida's efforts to expand TV and film production are bearing fruit, with 13 new projects getting under way within six months.

"We're building a major entertainment industry," the governor said Monday in outlining his administration's progress in attracting filmmakers.

In addition to the new projects — whose revenue has not been calculated — production income for the first two months of the year totaled more than $43 million from nine feature and TV films, according to the governor's office.

"Our efforts are paying off," Chiles said during a news conference at Universal Studios Florida.

Since January, Miami and Dade County have replied to a 1,000 percent increase in permit requests representing over $83 million in production, Chiles said. In Orlando, inquiries from film and TV producers have doubled over last year, and two major films are being completed in Sanford.

The state's film industry "is rapidly becoming one of the mainstays of our economy, along with tourism, citrus and the space center," the governor said.

The new projects — along with ongoing efforts at Universal, Disney-MGM Studios and other film centers — "means thousands of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars to Florida's economy," he said.

According to the state film office, movie and television producers spent $229.4 million on 42 film and video projects in this state last year. The projects provided 6,700 jobs.

Son of former newspaper executive testifies against his longtime friend

Associated Press

TAMPA — The son of a former newspaper executive testified a friend went too far in sexually assaulting a woman who appeared to have passed out.

Mark Urbanski, 25, originally was charged with aiding in the alleged attack, but struck a plea deal in exchange for his testimony against Carl Allison, 26.

Allison is accused of picking up the 22-year-old Clearwater woman at a downtown bar, slipping her LSD and after she passed out assaulting her with his hand, a stochorn and a small liquor bottle.

Urbanski said he finally objected when Allison reached for another object, a small religious statue.

"I think it was of Jesus standing in a robe," Urbanski said. "Carl grabbed it and I said, 'No, we can't have this. It's sacrilegious.'"

Then, Urbanski said, Allison laughingly asked that photographs be taken.

"He said, 'I live for moments like these. I want my fate in here — I want to remember this for the rest of my life.'"

Urbanski said he later retrieved the film from Allison's apartment and destroyed it.

"My parents are very conservative and very religious people," he said. "I didn't want to have pictures of a female in the nude, on their bed, taken and developed."

The attack occurred at the home of Urbanski's father, former Tampa Tribune president James Urbanski, who was out of town at the time.

Allison's four companions that night, all sons of prestigious local families, accepted plea deals in exchange for their testimony against Allison.

Chiles vetoes no-new-taxes budget

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles said the Legislature will have to rewrite its vetoed $30 billion state budget in a special session, but some lawmakers were skeptical about any increases.

Chiles announced his decision to veto the no-new-taxes spending plan Monday in Orlando and said he doesn't know how long he'll keep legislators working on a new budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

"As long as it takes to put down a budget that takes care of the basic needs of Florida," he said.

Chiles said the Legislature's budget failed to do that because of spending cuts for education, social services, corrections and the environment. He said he'll keep pushing for $1.4 billion in new revenue for those areas.

"He's been selling this tax increase. He's been using some political speak, talking about investments and all that," said Senate Minority Leader Ander Crenshaw, R-

Jacksonville. "But after 10 weeks, people aren't buying his tax increase. I think sooner or later he'll get the message."

Chiles said he hopes lawmakers who ended their regular legislative session Friday will get the opposite message during a week at home. They return Monday for the first of a series of special sessions on unfinished business such as reapportionment and the budget.

Distracted by redistricting fights and facing re-election in the fall, they balked at raising taxes in the regular session.

Longwood may repair Center

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The Longwood Community Building may finally get some new life. A repair project was proposed but approval has been temporarily held up.

During last night's Longwood City Commission meeting, Parks and Recreation Director Steve Palumbo requested authority to reallocate $12,500 already in his budget, but designed for construction of an additional pavilion at Candyland Park.

Palumbo said, "The Community Center is an eyesore, the roof leaks, and I feel bad whenever someone uses the building. It's in bad condition and we must do something to get it back into a facility that can be used by the people."

City Administrator Don Terry explained, "Repairs have purposely been delayed due to the previous attempt to purchase the Longwood Village Inn for use as a City Hall." With that purchase, the present City Hall facilities were to have been converted into a Community Center. Terry did not expect the Village Inn purchase would happen, "for the next two years."

"Since coming on board in September," Palumbo said, "the pavilion currently at the park has had approximately six to eight requests for it to be reserved for its use. This does not show a justifiable need for additional pavilion space at this time."

Although there is $12,500 allocated for the pavilion, Palumbo said, "this is a maximum we would need, the actual amount will probably be less than that."

The work he is projecting includes installation of a new roof which would be done on contract, repainting the building, installing insulation, fixing up the building trim, and the purchase of new tables and chairs.

"We have tables and chairs for about 80 people right now," Palumbo said, "but not one table could be considered to be in good shape." He expected the cost of the tables and chairs would be approximately $3,400.

While the Commissioners appeared supportive of the proposal, several Commissioners proposed additional consideration.

Commissioner Rex Anderson suggested the matter be held up. "While I think this is a good move, I don't see anything in your proposal from the City Building official that gives us a professional opinion of the actual condition of the building."

Commissioner Fred Pearl suggested the air conditioning and heating of the facility should also be checked, before a full refurbishing plan gets underway.

Mayor Adrienne Perry suggested consideration should also be given to the type of roofing to be put on the structure. "I'm also a member of the Historic Commission," she said, "and I don't see putting a modern type roof on this building which is in the historical district."

Palumbo agreed that it had not been officially checked, and agreed to have the building inspected, as well as the heating and air conditioning checked. Regarding the roofing, he informed the Commission that the intent was for a galvanized roof, but he would investigate the situation before continuing.

The Commission asked Palumbo to bring his request to reallocate the money back before the City Commission at the April 6th meeting, with additional information as requested.

School advisory board organizers will meet

By VICKI DeBORNER
Herald Staff Writer

The state has mandated that by next fall all schools in the state will have a local school advisory council in place to help keep administrators aware of the community needs regarding the school. The district organizers will have their first orientation meeting on Thursday evening at Seminole High School.

"We need to have the community involved in this," said Barbara Spragg, who is the director of the District School Advisory Committee. "The LSACs are not just for parents. We want businesses and senior citizens involved."

Spragg said that the LSACs are charged with helping the schools, the district and the state legislators know what the schools can do to better serve the community. Representatives of all aspects of the community are needed to be sure that their voices are heard.

"We are working together as a team," Spragg said. "We are a team that is committed to improving education so that the students will get out of school better prepared to enter the work force and the community."

The idea of the LSACs, Spragg said, is to help return the power of running the school to the people who are most closely associated with it. The schools, she said, need to meet the needs of all the people that they serve.

"This is not a group to join to help one kid," she said. "We can make a difference for all our students and for the community."

The state legislature and the Department of Education have set guidelines which require that the groups have a minimum of 11 members and that the group be made up of people who reflect the diverse ethnic background of the school they will serve.

"Some of the schools are waiting for us to tell them who to appoint," Spragg said.

Sanford house used in movie catches fire

SANFORD — A bit of movie magic may have resulted in an estimated $15,000 in damage to an Old Sanford home Monday.

Fifteen firefighters and two engines responded to the fire at 301 E. Fifth St., reported at 12:20 p.m. and worked for an hour to bring the blaze under control. The fire was limited to the attic and roof of the unoccupied residence, said assistant Sanford fire chief Ron Neel. The origin of the fire was in the attic area, Neel said.

Neel said the building was being used for a scene in "Wilder Napalm," a movie about a pair of brothers with incendiary powers. Neel said the crew was filming a scene utilizing pyrotechnics before the fire was discovered, which he said may account for the fire. The cause was listed in reports as inadequate control of fire, Neel said.

Legislators quietly hike gasoline taxes two cents

TALLAHASSEE — A quiet last-minute move by legislators could cost drivers an extra two cents per gallon of gas; the tax hike is intended to raise $100 million to clean up leaky underground storage tanks.

With little debate or notice, the bill (HB 2477) sought by Environmental Regulation Secretary Carol Browner cleared the Senate 38-0 Friday night. It passed the House 105-0 on Wednesday.

"It is a very important piece of legislation," Browner said. "It puts the financial responsibility on the polluters."

The measure raises the tax on a 42-gallon barrel of gasoline by 50 cents to 80 cents to finance an existing state program to fix leaking tanks. That will translate to about 2 cents per gallon at the retail level if the tax is passed on to consumers.

Florida motorists already pay 36.5 cents per gallon in state and federal gasoline taxes.

There are 13,000 faulty underground storage tanks at old gas stations in Florida, leaking dangerous pollutants into the groundwater, Browner said.

DER officials said the money could move up the cleanup timetable 40 years, allowing most sites currently on the state's list to be addressed by 2010.

Republicans, who have staunchly opposed new taxes in both chambers, were a little surprised at what they'd voted for.

"A hundred million dollars? No, we didn't want to vote for anything that had a tax in it," said Rep. Jim King, R-Jacksonville. "Quite frankly, some of us got caught. Our premise was no new taxes."

Senate President Gwen Margolis, D-North Miami Beach, also secured $2.6 million through a funds transfer in the same bill to clean up a North Miami site called the "Munisport" dump that she has sought for years.

That generated the only public comment on the tax increase, when state Sen. Larry Plummer, D-South Miami, asked where that money came from.

Don't let up

Peru's president may be realistic in his reasons for rejecting the Colombian proposal to cut drug trafficking, but that is no reason for letting up in the war against drugs.

In the recent drug summit meeting at San Antonio, Colombian President Cesar Gaviria said leaders of the seven nations at the conference should cut production in half by 2000, cut production and consumption 70 percent by 2005 and set a target of 2010 to end drug trafficking altogether.

But the timetables were put aside, at least for the present.

Sixty percent of the world's cocoa leaf, which is used to make cocaine, is grown in Peru. President Alberto Fujimori is sharply aware, as many experts on illegal drug production are, that farming will have to be converted to other crops before farmers will give up their lucrative cocaine growing.

All of the heads of the multi-headed cocaine monster, including corruption of officials and money laundering, must be chopped off to kill it.

President Fujimori said more money is needed to proceed with crop conversion. But the Bush administration says no more money is available than is now budgeted. Eventually, more will be available, but not now.

Meanwhile, the war against illegal drugs should be waged with all of the weapons and resources available. The stakes are too high to justify slackening.

The effort against drug trafficking and consumption should continue in spite of claims that "it is not being won" or that it is "unwinnable." That is tantamount to saying that the war against crime is unwinnable because crime goes on in spite of all of the laws and police action against it, so we should all give up and let the criminals take over.

Crime would be incomparably worse if there were no laws or police. If there were no "war on drugs," so would drug-related crime grow more widespread and vicious. As the "war goes on, and as weapons, tactics and strategies improve, it will become winnable.

$27 million sure thing

When the Virginia state lottery jackpot reached $27 million recently, a syndicate of Australian investors calculated that they could corner the market on just about every possible winning combination by buying up 5 million tickets at a dollar apiece. You don't have to come from Down Under to consider that kind of 5-1 pay-back as pretty fair dinkum.

Indeed, it seems the syndicate may have pulled it off. Lottery officials confirm the Australians' investment, and the syndicate has notified its members that they have won something somewhere overseas. But given all the questions that still have to be cleared up about international exchange and the legality of reselling lottery tickets, no one has actually stepped forward to claim the prize.

It turns out, however, that even a $27 million sure thing may not be quite the bargain these days that it once was. In the first place, to bet the $5 million, the syndicate actually raised $7.5 million to cover administrative costs, legal fees and the like. Then, the investors don't get their $27 million in one lump sum; instead, Virginia pays off the jackpot in increments of $2.35 million over the next 20 years. And 22 percent of that money gets withheld for state and federal taxes.

As a result, if each of the 2,500 investors put in $3,000, they can each look forward to getting back about $410 a year. That's a 13 percent return, which certainly isn't bad. But it's still a far cry from the kind of payoff that Nathan Detroit and Benny Southstreet and Damon Runyon's other guys and dolls used to dream of.

Term limits nip at career politicians

Supporters of term limits for legislators got a major boost recently when the U.S. Supreme Court refused even to listen to an appeal by California state legislators against a decision of the Supreme Court of California upholding the constitutionality of Proposition 130. This proposition, adopted by the voters of California in 1990, limits state senators to two terms of four years each, limits members of the assembly to three terms of two years each, prohibits both from ever running for the same office again, and for good measure slashed the legislature's staff budget by 40 percent.

It is safe to say that this measure will cause changes in a lot of California politicians' career plans. Worst hit was Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, who in more than three decades in Sacramento had carefully carved himself a niche as the state's most powerful politician. Brown was morose after the Supreme Court's action, pointing out that even a convicted felon, who loses the right to run for office, can have the right restored. Apparently Speaker Brown doesn't realize that the people of California regard eight years in the State Senate, or six in the Assembly, as crimes beyond all possibility of rehabilitation.

There are arguments on both sides of the term-limits issue. Presidents, of course, are limited to two terms, but such an impressive authority as Ronald Reagan argues that this is a serious mistake. In the case of members of Congress (both House and Senate), moreover, there is the still-unresolved question of whether term limits imposed by the voters of individual states would be constitutional.

But it is the argument on the merits that is toughest. Foes of term limits contend that limiting the terms of legislators merely turns a legislative body into a sort of permanent Amateur Hour, in which members are forced to step down just as they are beginning to learn how the blasted place really works. This, critics insist, will simply make them more dependent on the expertise of unelected staff employees.

whose personal agendas may be far different from those of elected officials. Personally, I think there is considerable force in this argument.

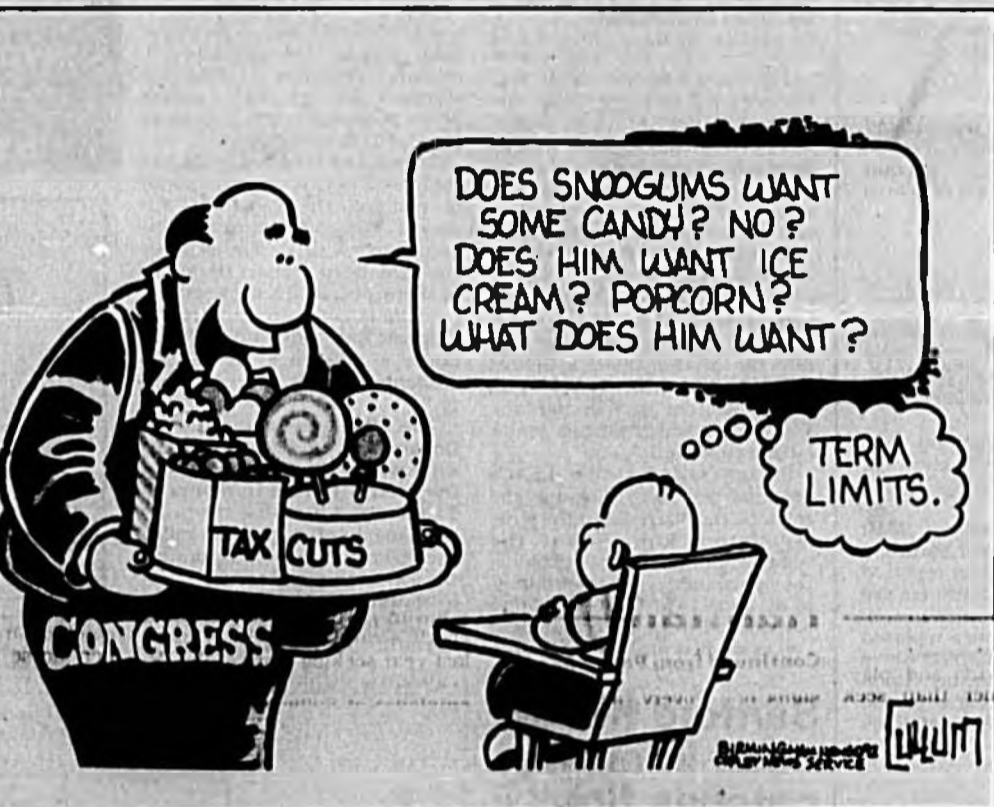

On the other hand, the present no-limit system was made to order for sly old pols who manage to get re-elected interminably, mostly through sheer inertial momentum, and who use their legislative seniority to build up fiefdoms in which they wield enormous power - Congressman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, being one example that leaps readily to mind. (Willie Brown was certainly another.)

In addition, term limits will almost surely alter to some degree the very character of legislatures affected by them, and that should be all to the good. More members will be individuals with experience in non-political careers to which they fully intend to return. The fact that experience elsewhere - in private business, for instance - can shape a person's attitude toward legislation was testified to feelingly by former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern, who not long ago took a flyer in the hotel business in Connecticut. (The fact that the business later went bankrupt presumably educated him still further.)

In any event, it seems clear that the drive for term limits is going to loom large on the political horizon for the foreseeable future.

It is safe to say that this measure will cause changes.

ROBERT WAGMAN

Aussies won; was it worth it?

WASHINGTON - State lottery officials nationwide are looking closely at the recent $27 million jackpot won by an Australian betting syndicate in the Virginia lottery. While some officials are worried they might have to change their state lottery rules to prevent a similar occurrence, most are baffled about why the betting syndicate made what amounted to a high-risk wager of $5 million for a relatively small return over a period of 20 years.

To recap the Virginia situation, agents for the betting syndicate - International Lotto Fund, acting through the related Pacific Financial Resources and an Illinois businessman - bought slightly more than 5 million number combinations, including the winning one, for a $27 million jackpot.

Immediate questions were raised about the methods the syndicate used to buy the tickets and whether those methods could cause the average ticket buyer to lose confidence in the integrity of the lottery system.

From the very beginning, state lotteries have been concerned about a rich buyer acquiring all the available number combinations, insuring that he would be holding a winning ticket.

Depending on how many numbers are in a state's drawing, the possible number of combinations varies from slightly over 7 million - in states like Virginia with 39 number draws - to almost 14 million in states with 46 number draws. Thus, in order to buy all available number combinations, a buyer would have to invest between $7 and $14 million at a cost of $1 a ticket.

No lottery will directly sell bulk tickets. All lotteries have the same rule: All tickets must be issued by machines, one ticket at a time.

The assumption has been that it is almost physically impossible for any betting group to put enough people in the field, and tie up enough machines, to get the requisite number of tickets issued before a drawing. It takes literally hundreds of machines, working round-the-clock, to issue 7 million tickets, let alone 13 million.

The Australians, though, found something of a loophole. They went to several large supermarket chains, which have hundreds of machines between them, and offered to buy all the tickets that the machines could crank out from the minute the lottery's computer came up until it went down for the night in the days before the $27 million drawing.

In the end, the syndicate bettors ran out of time and were only able to buy about 5 million combinations. This means that although they had improved their chances of winning to about 5 in 7, they still went into the drawing with $5 million on the line and more than 2 million chances of losing.

Virginia Lottery Director Kenneth Thorson said he was surprised by what happened because - considering the basic mechanics of collecting prize money from the state - the large gamble by the syndicate seemed unwarranted.

"I would think that this is a rather bad investment for them," Thorson said. "It seems like they are tying up their money for a relatively small return."

Thorson was referring to key reasons why most states have assumed few bettors would be willing to sink millions into cornering a lottery jackpot: All state lotteries pay off over a 20-year period - and all winnings are fully taxable, both by the federal government and by most individual states.

Foreign public lotteries almost always pay off in lump sums, which are often tax free. In this country, however, what you win is actually a 20-year annuity that the state lottery buys for you.

International Lotto Fund in Virginia wanted to invest $7 million in hopes of winning $27 million. That sounds good, but it actually represents only about a 7 percent compounded return to the company.

Since International Lotto Fund was obviously willing to take a risk, it could easily have found much safer investments returning a compounded 10 percent annually, and it could have gotten back $47.1 million over 20 years for the same $7 million investment.

But what has lottery officials even more baffled is the further chance that International Lotto Fund took on being the only jackpot winner.

In U.S. state lotteries, if more than one person holds the same winning set of numbers, the prize is evenly shared. That means in the Virginia case, if someone else had the winning numbers also, International Lotto Fund would have received only $13.5 over 20 years - a poor return on its money.

It's an established fact, and rather logical, that the bigger the prize the more tickets are sold. Equally obvious, the more tickets sold, the higher the probability for multiple winners.

Immediate questions were raised about the methods.

MARTIN SCHRAM

Will the Flipper parrot Gipper?

Polls are in free fall, strategy is in disarray, policy is inconsistent, but don't despair - President Bush has called in the Gipperizer.

Peggy Noonan is back. This master speechwriter - who gave Ronald Reagan his gift of gab and then, in 1988, helped make Bush what he was but no longer is - was summoned to the headquarters of Bush/Quayle '92 by an urgent S.O.S. from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

The president was unhappy, yet again, with the quality of the speeches he's been giving, and the wise heads figured what he needs - pronto! - is yet another chief writer of speeches. There seems to be a message problem, the high command decided. No wonder the boss has fallen behind even the much-troubled Bill Clinton and the untelegenic Paul Tsongas - the president's message just hasn't been getting out to the public.

So, as they say at B/Q '92, they tasked Noonan with "message development." Just develop the message that somehow never got developed in the three years of the Bush presidency - then figure out a way for this Un-Great Communicator to communicate it.

Indeed, that might work. Unless, of course, the president and his brain trust are wrong about this message mess.

Maybe Bush's problem is not that his message isn't getting out. Maybe his problem is that it is. For we seem to have been getting the real message of the Bush presidency all along.

Three years of the Bush presidency has taught us that this is the Bush Message:

Economic Crisis - There is no recession. Oops, so there is a mild recession, but it can be fixed by turning on another trickle-down spigot for the rich and well-to-do. What do you mean, "voodoo economics"?

Health Crisis - There's no urgent need for a national health plan. Oops, now that I see the polls, OK, here's a half-a-plan.

Crime Crisis - I'll be your tough law-and-order president. But I won't do anything tough to get the assault weapons out of the hands of drug gangs.

Abortion - I'm pro-choice. Oops, I'm anti-choice.

Environment - I'll be your Environmental President. Oops, I've got to scrap a highly qualified Justice Department appointee because right-wingers don't like the fact that he was once a trustee of an environmental group.

The Arts - I'm your National Endowment for the Arts President. Oops, Pat Buchanan is trying to frame me for funding porno art. Well, I'll fire back - by firing the Endowment's John Frohnmayer.

Taxes - No new taxes, I promise, no matter what. Oops, I've got to raise taxes; but they made me do it. Oops, I apologize for raising your taxes. It was a mistake.

And, just the other day, Bush's message soared even higher than mere politics and policy, as he waxed philosophic for an audience of home builders in South Carolina: "Life means nothing without fidelity to principles."

Suddenly, Bush has his own special brand of fidelity crisis. At a press conference the other day, Bush made it seem that he, too, is searching for his long-lost principles. In words that might work for a neophyte campaigner but hardly for a three-year president, Bush said people will vote for him "when we get through defining clearly my objectives for this country."

"My advice to the president was simple: 'You are the message.'"

There seems to be a message problem.

Longwood city administrator job may be filled by April 6

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Longwood may have a new City Administrator by April 6. The City Administrator Selection Committee was chosen last night, and is to start work immediately.

The Commissioners chose to select five persons rather than three, as originally proposed two weeks ago.

The purpose of the committee is to review applications received for the position of City Administrator. The pay scale for the position starts at $47,302.

Longwood Personnel Director James Coleman reported this morning that 126 persons have applied for the position so far. The deadline for receiving applications is 5 p.m. March 18.

The person selected will be replacing City Administrator Don Terry who was terminated during a Commission meeting Jan. 29. Terry served in that capacity for slightly more than one year. He had previously served as Longwood City Clerk for approximately 11 years.

"When we took applications for the job last time," Coleman said, "we only had 40 to 50 applicants. This time, the numbers are really high."

During the March 2 Commission meeting, three names were submitted for consideration, but no decision was made. The original number of members for the Committee was to have been three with one alternate, but Commissioners Rex

Anderson and Fred Pearl requested a larger list from which to select.

Last night, Coleman presented a list of 11 names, consisting of present City Managers and Administrators, persons who had assisted during previous selections for Longwood, and members of the Range Riders, a group of retired City Administrators.

Mayor Adrienne Perry suggested, "I would rather have five persons on the Selection Committee. I believe that would be the best number of people to handle this decision best." Commissioner Fred Pearl agreed.

Persons selected include Range Rider member Warren E. Knowles of Englewood, present City Managers James McKnight of Rockledge and Eugene Willford, III of Oviedo, former Selection Committee members Joseph W. Yarbrough of South Daytona and Russell D. Barr of Largo. Barr is also a Range Rider member.

With the larger number on the Committee, the Commission did not believe an alternate would be necessary.

Coleman explained, "The Review Committee will start looking over the names starting Thursday, and they are to make their recommendations to the Commissioners by March 27."

He continued, "Then the Commission will start interviewing their suggested candidates as soon as possible after that, and we hope to be able to present the matter for a formal City Commission decision at the next regularly scheduled meeting on April 6."

from his mother last week. "I had no involvement with the endorsement," said Morse. "An endorsement was never discussed."

According to information provided by the Florida Secretary of State's private investigations bureau, John Jr.'s application for a private investigator's license was received on Oct. 30 last year.

A state-required license for an internship was issued March 13 — four days after John Jr. delivered the endorsement by Dottie Polk. The license was issued to John Jr. to intern at the Morse Security Group, Harvey Morse's Orlando company.

John Jr. said he will work part-time at Morse's agency on an as-needed basis. He said he also works at another private investigations firm, Sullivan Investigations. John Jr. said the Sullivan job came after he called sheriff's candidate Larry Conniff last year seeking work. John Jr. is also listed with the state as an employee of Sullivan, located in Altamonte Springs.

Sullivan Investigations owner Pat Sullivan said this morning John Jr. has been employed with his firm for about three months and has done a good job. Sullivan said John Jr. came to him last week and told him Morse had offered him a position at a rate about 50 percent higher than his own pay.

"It kind of surprised me," said Sullivan. "The rate was much higher than anyone else pays."

Morse said his firm charges more for their services than most and can afford to pay their investigators a higher.

"He's not getting paid one nickel more than any other beginning investigator," Morse said.

Last week, John Jr. delivered a letter bearing the signature of Dottie Polk and a $25 contribution to Morse. Both pledged to work on Morse's campaign. In the letter, Dottie Polk said after Eslinger was appointed and they saw the way he treated long-term employees, Polk came to realize he had made an error in naming Eslinger.

John Jr. said Monday his mother still did not want to conduct an interview regarding her Morse endorsement, an endorsement which surprised many.

"That's what my mom wants to do," John Jr. said. "This whole topic is bringing up painful memories."

John Jr. said both his mother and father strongly supported Eslinger to replace the ailing Polk in November 1990 despite an earlier commitment to back Morse. But they came to regret the Eslinger backing.

"After both my mother and father observed him and the way he ran things, that's when my mother and father, and especially my father, realized they had made an error," said John Jr.

Eslinger said Friday he was disappointed by the endorsement and said statements that Polk had made an error were "absurd."

Sanford police began the move towards unionization early last year. Representatives of the effort cited favoritism in promotions and poor treatment among the leading incentives for the bargaining effort. No officer has come forward as an organizer, citing fears of retribution by police management.

Altman did not know exactly when he could bring the dinosaur to Hidden Lake, but plans to house it at a temporary storage area at first. The actual installation into the playground area is yet to be determined.

DEATHS

JOHN JAMES KANE

John James Kane, 81, 711 E. First St., Sanford, died Monday, March 16, at Central Florida Regional Hospital, Sanford. Born May 1, 1910, in Chicago, he moved to Sanford in 1973 from there. # Whites vote in referendum on ending apartheid

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Whites voted today in a referendum on ending three centuries of white domination and sharing power with blacks, a vote on which President F.W. de Klerk has staked his political future.

Most political analysts predicted a government victory in the whites-only poll on a mandate for constitutional change, with some saying support has been swinging to de Klerk in the final days of the three-week campaign.

"I voted 'yes.' It's the only thing to do for the future of this country ... my (black) workmates don't have the vote and I must vote for them," construction worker Chris Bakker said after voting in Johannesburg.

Yet predictions were uncertain, as there was a ban on publishing opinion polls during the campaign. Party workers taking private polls said many whites were refusing to say how they would vote, adding to the doubt.

Analysts said that the up to 25 percent of white voters who were undecided were likely to decide the outcome.

Long lines formed at many urban polling stations as voting began shortly after dawn on a warm summer day. A heavy voter turnout of the nation's 3.3 million white voters was expected to favor de Klerk.

De Klerk, smiling and looking confident, said he was sure of victory. "I'm optimistic. I'm full of enthusiasm," he said after voting in Pretoria.

Results were not to be announced until Wednesday.

A victory for de Klerk, who has scrapped most apartheid laws during two years of lightning reform, would signal the end of white domination stretching back to the arrival of European settlers in the 17th century.

But if defeated, De Klerk has said he would resign, clearing the way for a whites-only general election and the probable victory of pro-apartheid forces.

Any attempt to reimpose apartheid would be resisted by the nation's 30 million blacks, plunging the country into political chaos.

If reform is rejected, "there is no doubt where that must lead us — to a dead end of division and destruction," de Klerk said in a newspaper message to voters on the eve of the referendum.

Many blacks expressed frustration at once again seeing a whites-only referendum. "We want to see the end of apartheid. It's a long time we struggle," said a black office cleaner.

Nelson Mandela, president of the African National Congress, said the black opposition group would fight if reforms were halted.

"Any suggestion that we should return to those days (of old-style apartheid) will be resisted with all the power at our command," Mandela said Monday in a final appeal for 'yes' votes.

"Those who remember what the swatika meant in Europe ... know it means the same thing in South Africa now," said Zach de Beer, leader of the anti-apartheid Democratic Party, which is backing de Klerk.

De Klerk says the country's only hope is a negotiated deal with the black majority. Pro-apartheid forces, however, say de Klerk is leading the country into the kind of chaos that they claim has wrecked black Africa.

Audria Treumicht, head of the pro-apartheid Conservative Party, has told the country's 5 million whites they could lose everything to a government run by black Marxists if the referendum passes.

Brief campaign for referendum fierce

By TONY COMEN
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — White politics in South Africa is traditionally a rugged affair. Issues arouse great passion, even fistfights.

The three-week campaign leading up to today's referendum on sharing power with the black majority has been especially bitter, so high are the stakes.

Bombs damaged two offices of the ruling National Party and fire damaged a hall where President F.W. de Klerk was scheduled to speak.

Tear gas forced him to cancel one speech and right-wing students shouting "Traitor" greeted him at a university.

Fisticuffs broke out at several de Klerk rallies. According to posters on street signs and traffic lights throughout white residential areas, the nation faces destruction no matter which side wins.

De Klerk says a vote against reform will lead to a black uprising. The pro-apartheid Conservative Party says de Klerk's reforms will usher in a black Marxist government.

One right-wing poster depicts de Klerk meekly bowing to African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela. A government poster shows an armed, masked neo-Nazi as the nation's future if the referendum is voted down.

De Klerk's National Party ran full-page newspaper ads every day warning of a black uprising, economic collapse, renewed international sanctions and further sports bans if the referendum fails.

De Klerk announced the vote on Feb. 20, leaving less than four weeks for the campaign. Violence and scare tactics quickly followed.

One anti-reform group referred to Mandela's ties with Libyan leader Muammar Gadhafi and wife Winnie Mandela's 1986 endorsement of "necklacing" — killing people by putting blazing tires soaked with gasoline around their necks.

"If Gadhafi is your next president's best friend and his wife supports necklacing as a means to resolve conflict, would you vote for him?" one ad read.

A pro-reform ad, showing a woman and a baby, noted that women make up the majority of white voters and could prevent right-wingers from coming to power.

"On March 17, the woman of South Africa can prevent a war," it said.

Even longtime government opponents such as Mandela, the African National Congress leader, and Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu reluctantly urged whites to vote "yes," while rejecting the fact that the poll excluded blacks.

Clinton, Bush aim magic to stifle opponents

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

DETROIT — Michigan and Illinois voters today settle presidential contests that seem destined to vault Bill Clinton miles ahead in the Democratic race and sap more strength from Patrick Buchanan's Republican revolt.

Jobs and trade were the dominant issues in the weeklong campaign to win the struggling Rust Belt, although the Democratic race was sidetracked at the end by rough mudslinging between Clinton and Jerry Brown.

Clinton hoped for a Midwestern sweep to add to last week's Super Tuesday blowout. Well ahead in late polls in both states, the Arkansas governor was poised to become the prohibitive favorite for the Democratic nomination.

Buchanan himself established Michigan as perfect proving ground for his "America First" message, but late polls showed he was more likely to have a tough time matching past showings.

Buchanan abandoned his talk of toppling Bush and returned to his battle cry that a vote for him would "send Washington a message to wake up."

Bush, in a stop in Milwaukee, hardly sounded worried on an election eve trip to Wisconsin and Illinois that raised $1 million for his re-election effort at a time even conservative enthusiasm for Buchanan's rebellion appeared to be waning.

"I've been very pleased," Bush said of his unbroken string of 15 victories. But he refused to predict his margins: "Never try to say how high the high bar should be on these primaries."

Among the Democrats, Clinton held healthy leads heading into today's balloting and sought to end the day with a good chunk of the 295 Democratic delegates at stake. He had 766.25 delegates even before the polls opened — one third of what it takes to be nominated.

Already, there was talk of Clinton as the presumptive nominee, and party leaders called on the candidates to tone down the personal attacks lest they provide Republicans with ammunition for the fall campaign.

While predicting wins in both states, Clinton aides said the man to watch in Michigan was Brown, the former California governor and angry-man candidate who worked feverishly to tap into the state's economic anger — vividly illustrated by mounting auto layoffs and anger at perceived unfair Japanese trade practices.

Clinton aides said Brown was approaching 30 percent in late internal Michigan polls.

A strong showing by Brown would be more bad news for former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who immediately after poor showings in the South said the real test of the race would come on the neutral Midwest turf.

But he showed little success in broadening his appeal to blue-collar and minority voters, and was damaged with his opposition to a ban on striker replacements and comments critical of American car quality.

Tsongas already was looking ahead to next week's Connecticut contest, which offers him more affluent suburban votes — the source of his past success.

"We're in this campaign until the convention," Tsongas said as he campaigned in Moline, Ill. "At the convention there will be one question. Who can beat George Bush? Who is electable? ... That is the question. I am the answer."

Candidates campaign for American trade

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

RIVER ROUGE, Mich. — The room was silent as Jerry Brown read a poem by a blue-collar worker: "Buy American while you still can. The yen cartel has its own plan. ... While all our jobs drift away, the Japanese swing and sway."

Then came cheers from the union members and churchgoers who had come to the Union Second Baptist Church on Monday night to see a presidential candidate they regard as their spokesman and best hope.

"People outside Michigan don't get it," Brown said. "They think that if you protect jobs in (Michigan) you're pandering — that people are selfish if they want to stay employed and not see their jobs go to Mexico or some other foreign country."

He disagrees, as does his Republican counterpart Patrick Buchanan. The two protectionist presidential hopefuls flooded Michigan with trade rhetoric and not-so-veiled Japan bashing in the week preceding today's primary.

Many in Michigan blame the auto industry's decline on imports and cheap factory labor in Mexico and Asia. The state has lost tens of thousands of jobs in the past few years.

"We're just going to get smaller and smaller," said Brad Smith, 36, an auto designer from Flint. "I say protect our industries and limit how much money we're going to send out into the world."

Despite widespread sentiment like that, the candidates expected to win today were President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton. They and Paul Tsongas, another Democrat, had the tall order of defending their free-trade stands in a state with 9 percent unemployment.

Bush presented his case on television, where his campaign pointed out that Buchanan — despite his America-First theme — owned a Mercedes, and in person, at a Kalamazoo medical manufacturing plant that sells almost a third of its products overseas.

"Some people simply don't get it. They see the challenges of the global economy and they say: Let's draw the blinds, bolt the doors; maybe the whole world will go away," Bush told several hundred Stryker Corp. employees last Friday. "The future belongs to those who have the will to compete."

Clinton and Tsongas also talked about competing to win. Tsongas, the former Massachusetts senator, reproached U.S. industry for being slow to make quality a priority while Clinton, the Arkansas governor, said he'd end tax incentives for moving jobs overseas.

The litmus-test trade issue in this election has been lost-track — shorthand for the authority Bush won from Congress to negotiate a trade agreement with Mexico without congressional intervention. Congress granted his request and will vote the treaty up or down when it's finished.

Protests mark some Irish-day festivities

By PAUL GRITNER
Associated Press Writer

Gay Irish-Americans, barred from today's St. Patrick's Day Parade in New York, worked to hold their own march. Meanwhile, the woman mayor of Savannah, Ga., was snubbed by the all-male organizers of a post-parade feast.

Elsewhere today, St. Patrick's Day parades were planned in Kansas City, Mo., and Des Moines, Iowa. In Massachusetts, Gov. William Weld planned to attend a corned beef luncheon in Lawrence, about 30 miles north of Boston.

New York's parade — the nation's largest — was scheduled to start at 11 a.m. Police expected 120,000 marchers, 200 bands and 2 million spectators.

The Irish Lesbian and Gay Organization planned its own march past reviewing stands an hour before the starting time.

"We will do something visual and symbolic," said spokeswoman Eileen Clancy. "But we're not planning anything disruptive."

The protest was announced after U.S. District Judge Pierre Leval on Monday refused to order the Ancient Order of Hibernians to let the homosexuals march.

The Roman Catholic fraternal group has argued it has the constitutional right of freedom of association to exclude homosexuals. The homosexuals sued for the right to march on the grounds that the parade is a public forum.

Leval didn't address the constitutional issue, ruling

Happy St. Patrick's Day

Instead that the gay group was not entitled to jump ahead of others on the parade waiting list.

Monday's ruling set the stage for a number of city officials — including Mayor David Dinkins — to boycott the traditional venue for politicians.

Some officials expressed concern that spectators, fearing disruption because of the controversy, would skip the parade. Police planned to have 300 to 400 more officers on duty than last year, or more than 3,000 in all.

In Savannah, the Hibernian Society, which sponsors that city's parade, declined to invite Mayor Susan Weiner to its traditional post-parade feast. It was the first time Hibernians can remember that a mayor hasn't been invited.

"In the past, it's always been an all-male affair, and it will continue to be so," society President Thomas M. Spillane said. Weiner said she would accept their decision.

Recovery strong enough to last?

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Bit by bit, evidence is building that the economy has pulled out of its stall and started growing again.

An increase in employment in February, a strong rebound in retail sales and other positive signs have convinced most analysts that the economy has finally left the recession behind.

Now they are wondering whether the recovery will last and whether it will be strong enough to make an impact on the lives of most Americans.

"February is really the first month of the revived recovery, as far as I can see," said economist Robert G. Dederick. "But then the question is ... 'Is it going to be sustainable at a pace that satisfies the public and officialdom?' It's too soon to tell on that."

Economist David Berson of the Federal National Mortgage Association said he believes the economy is shifting gears from no growth to slow growth.

"I think we're going to be very vulnerable to pauses. ... Any sort of unexpected shock is more likely to slow the economy or make it go negative," he said.

Analysts were getting plenty of new evidence today with three government reports on activity in February. The Federal Reserve was reporting on industrial production, the Commerce Department on new housing construction and the Labor Department on consumer prices.

Most economists expected a strong gain of around 0.7 percent in the Fed's industrial production index, bolstered in particular by increased output on automobile assembly lines.

It would be the first increase in four months and follow a sharp 0.9 percent drop in January.

Housing starts, which shot up 5.5 percent in January, likely did not rise as strongly in February. Most analysts looked for a modest gain of around 1 percent. A few expected a decline because heavy rains depressed building activity in Southern California and Texas.

Meanwhile, inflation should be relatively well behaved. Analysts were expecting a moderate 0.3 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index in February.

Easier-to use caps due for kid-proof containers

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — How do you make a childproof medicine container that doesn't frustrate the elderly?

First, design a cap that appeals to thinking skills rather than to physical strength, says the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Then, use people aged 60 to 75 as test subjects, instead of the strapping, 18-to-45-year-old adults that have been in the test groups in the past.

The consumer commission says hundreds of children's lives have been saved by safety caps, but in times of pain many an adult groping for aspirin has cursed their existence.

Elderly adults often just give up, leaving the lids on their medicines off or loosened, creating a hazard for children.

A Poison Control Center study says 17 percent of the prescription drug poisonings in 1988, the last year for which such statistics are available, involved products that were in unsecured childproof containers.

An additional 44 percent were caused by drugs that were in easy-to-open containers that pharmacists had been asked to provide.

"What we want to do is protect children from poisoning," says Ken Oiles of the consumer commission. "We want to come up with a closure that people will use."

The agency has been working for years on a new test.

The children's part of the test would continue to be accomplished by giving 3- and 4-year-olds, in groups of two, five minutes to try to open the container. An adult then demonstrates how it's done and the kids get another five minutes.

If 85 percent of 200 children can't open the container in the first round and 80 percent fail in the second, the container is considered childproof.

For adult testing, the consumer commission has decided manufacturers should replace young and middle-aged adults with the elderly and make sure they can figure out how to open the container in one minute or less.

But researchers are finding more variables in the physical abilities of people over age 70 than among children under age 10, leaving the agency a little stumped over the tests that should be used.

"Children don't have the dexterity that adults do, but once you get to 70 you don't have it either," says Mark Bennett, spokesman for Calmar Inc.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

Lazaic stymies U-Mass

ORLANDO — Lake Mary graduate Anthony Lazaic tossed a three-hitter over 8 2/3 innings as the University of Central Florida topped visiting University of Massachusetts 8-5 Monday night.

Lazaic struck out seven in improving his record to 3-2. Junior outfielder Chad Mattola had 3 hits, including his ninth home run of the season as the Knights improved their record to 19-5. Mattola doubled in the first inning, hit a solo home run to lead off the third inning and singled in the seventh.

UCF will host Cornell Tuesday evening starting at 7 p.m. at the UCF Baseball Complex.

AROUND THE STATE

Jordan keys Bulls romp

MIAMI — Michael Jordan scored 37 points and keyed two fourth-quarter surges as the Chicago Bulls won their sixth straight game, 116-100 over Miami on Monday night.

Rony Seikaly had 21 points and 18 rebounds for Miami, 0-14 all-time against Chicago.

The Heat, whose home record dropped to 23-10, have beaten every Eastern Conference team except the Bulls this season.

Horace Grant had 12 of his 20 points and Jordan 11 points in the third quarter, which ended with Chicago ahead 86-72.

Courier struggles to win

KEY BISCAYNE — On the verge of climbing to No. 1, Stefan Edberg lost to No. 289

Robbie Weiss, a qualifier from Ponte Vedra Beach, surprised Edberg 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 in Monday's third round at the International Players Championships.

Because of the idiosyncratic nature of the ATP computer, if Jim Courier fails to reach Sunday's final, Edberg will still supplant him as No. 1.

Courier barely advanced himself. The defending champion was struggling against Andres Gomez in their final set when the veteran from Ecuador retired because of a sore left ankle.

The day's other upset was orchestrated by a more familiar name — John McEnroe. He beat seventh-ranked Goran Ivanisevic 5-7, 7-5, 7-5 before a raucous night-time crowd.

Boris Becker also won, and Pete Sampras eliminated Jimmy Connors.

Record breaking Tribe

Ortiz, offense put SHS into record book

By BILL KERNS
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Sometimes repetition needs a twist.

Although using the same route of solid defense and explosive hitting that is by now becoming repetitive in its undefeated start, the Seminole High School varsity baseball team used seven strong innings of relief by Ryan Ortiz to recover from a 3-0 first inning hole and go on to whip Leesburg 11-4 in a Class 3A-District 5 game at Seminole Field Monday afternoon.

"Ryan really did a fine job," said Seminole head coach Mike Powers. "These kids have really come around. They don't get nervous when they're behind. They don't press, they simply do the fundamentals."

The victory was No. 17 in a row without a defeat for the Tribe, the most consecutive wins without a loss at the start of a season in Seminole County history (see related story), and was a good tuneup for today's showdown with Lake Brantley. Seminole will host the Patriots in the big Seminole Athletic Conference contest starting at 3:30 p.m. at Seminole Field.

Robby Morgan, who has been battling tendinitis, gave up singles to Leesburg's first three batters before Ortiz relieved him. Ben Husebo, Clint Patterson, and Beau Young all scored on Morgan's account as the Yellow Jackets, now 1-6, accounted for four of their seven hits in the opening frame.

After allowing four of the first seven batters he faced to reach base safely, Ortiz (now 2-0 on the season) settled down to retire seven in a row. The junior righthander surrendered only one run on four hits, striking out three and walking four.

"I felt comfortable," said Ortiz. "My curve ball wasn't working, but I was throwing strikes. I moved my fastball in and out, worked on the location, and kept them off balance with my off-speed pitch. The defense did a real good job behind me, after we recovered from the 3-0 start."

"What got me shaky early was when I got hit in the leg (in the second inning on a line shot by Lee Simmons). That left a big old welt, and really messed me up."

Matt Freeman led Seminole's offensive attack, going 2-for-3 with a double, four RBI, and one run scored. Nine Fighting Seminoles either had a hit, scored a run or had an RBI. Among the big bats were Denny Beamon (2-for-4, three runs scored), Anthony Roberts (2-for-3, two RBI), Dave Eckstein (1-for-3, two runs scored), and Phillip King.

17-0 start best ever in county

By BILL KERNS
Herald Correspondent

"Unbelievable!" With that word Seminole assistant coach Rod Ferguson summed up the feeling of the Seminole High School varsity baseball team's 17-0 start, which breaks the Seminole Athletic Conference record previously set in 1986 by Lake Mary's 16-0 start and out-pulls them to No. 3 in the Class 3A state poll.

"We really didn't expect to start out the season 17-0," said Seminole head coach Mike Powers, who starts only two seniors. "It feels good. The kids are performing real well. They know what winning is and they like it. They play together as a team. They're really excited, it's not too tough at all to get them up for each game."

Although no one could have expected this, the unprecedented rise which has a Seminole high team ranked for the first time is not an accident either.

Key players Jeremy Chumot, Scott Ferguson, Dave Eckstein, Matt Freeman and Robby Morgan have been playing together for five years. Most of the players have competed together for about three years.

Two years ago, as freshmen, the core of the Tribe's current squad led the junior varsity team to an 11-0 start. During the summer following last year's 11-14 spring season, they won the Cal World Series and helped Seminole's American Legion team to a 24-6 record.

"Our legion play last summer really helped us out," said Powers. "We've been building this team for two years. But this is kind of surprising. We've got trolls in the dug out."

Chumot (5-0, 1.00 ERA) combines with sophomore Todd Braden (6-0, 2.67 ERA) to head Seminole's strong pitching staff which has allowed just 29 total earned runs. Manning the bullpen are junior's Phillip King (three saves), Ryan Ortiz (2-0, 2.90 ERA) and Freeman (3-0, 1.02 ERA). Morgan, bothered by tendinitis, has one win.

Ken Rummel claims Monday softball title

Coach Tim Winkle (left) waves the Wrecking Crew's Steve Woodley around third base on his way home en route to an inside-the-park home run. The blast scored two runs during a seven-run fourth-inning explosion that led the Crew to a 13-6 victory over Cafe Sorrento.

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Chuck Lamb ripped a three-run, inside-the-park home run to break a 3-3 tie as Ken Rummel Chevrolet bested the Lake Mary Pub 7-3 and clinched the championship of the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Monday Night Super C Polar Bear Softball League at Chase Park.

Lamb's blast came with one out in the fifth inning after Mike Owens had walked and Terrell Ervin had reached on an error.

The victory improved Ken Rummel's record to 7-2 while the loss dropped Lake Mary Pub, Ken Rummel's nearest competitor, to 5-4 with one week left in the season.

In the other games Monday night, the Wrecking Crew won its third game in its last four starts with a 13-0 triumph over Cafe Sorrento and the Boomtown Boys got a 7-0 torrid gift from Slade's Sluggers.

The Boomtown Boys moved it into a tie for second with Lake Mary Pub with a 5-4 record, while Cafe Sorrento is 4-5 and the Wrecking Crew and Slade's Sluggers are both 1-6.

The final regular season games will be next Monday night. The games were rained out on Feb. 24. At 6:30 p.m. the Boomtown Boys will play Cafe Sorrento at 7:30 p.m.

Ken Rummel will take on the Wrecking Crew and at 8:30 p.m. Lake Mary Pub and Slade's Sluggers will close the season.

Doing the damage for Ken Rummel Chevrolet were Mike Melton (two doubles, one run scored, one RBI), Owens (two singles, one run scored), Jeff Aten (two singles, one RBI), Lamb (home run, one run scored, three RBI), Terrell Ervin (one single, two runs scored, one RBI), Chris Nickle and Mark Russt (one single and one run scored each) and Mark Aten and Terrell Ervin (one single each).

Facing the Lake Mary Pub offense were Gaty Stephan (one double, one single), Kerry Keeler and Doug Wolter (two singles and one run scored each), Mike Brannon (one double), Dave Goldstick (one single, two RBI), Chris Wargo, Brian Curtis and Bobby Keeler (one single each) and Mike Marshall (one run scored).

Steve Woodley highlighted a seven-run fourth inning with a two-run, inside-the-park home run as the Wrecking Crew broke away from a 4-3 lead to pick up the big win. Winning pitcher Craig Appel.

Wife hopes to end husband's tango

DEAR ABBY: I need your help, and hopefully soon. My husband has been taking dancing lessons for two years. His teacher is two years older than our oldest grandson.

This teacher phones my husband day and night — at all hours. She always needs money. He has given her money for a car, a downpayment on a house, a TV for her kids, money for trips to visit her sick mother, and the list goes on. He has plenty of money, all inherited.

Yet he won't give a penny to help our children or grandchildren. It makes me so angry. I could pull his gray hairs out!

I want this business with that dancing teacher to stop, but I'm not sure how to do it. We're

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Catholic, so divorce is out.

MISERABLE IN MOLINE

DEAR MISERABLE: You need more help than I can give you in a letter. You don't say how you feel about your husband. Talk to your priest. Also to a family counselor. If your husband refuses to see a counselor, go without him.

Do you want to stay with him? Perhaps when he finds out how much it will cost if you decide to leave him if didn't say "divorce" — I said "leave", he may change his tune.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a widow for six years. My late husband and I were friendly with a couple who were our neighbors for many years. The wife died last year, and I gave "Harold" a lot of attention — as any longtime friend would do.

We have so much in common and would make a wonderful couple. I have been teasing Harold about getting married — but he refuses to take me seriously.

The other night when I mentioned marriage he said, "Oh, stop talking about marriage — I'm impotent!" Then I flat out told him it was fine with me because I never cared much for sex anyway. Even that didn't budge him.

Abby, I know there is no other woman in his life. How can I get Harold to realize I am serious? I am not interested in his money, because my husband left me as well off as he is. I am 68 and Harold says he is 70.

LOVING MY NEIGHBOR

DEAR LOVING: Invite Harold over for a candlelight dinner and tell him that you are serious — that both your lives would be much richer if you had someone to share them with. Assure him that you are not after his money, and the matter of impotence doesn't bother you as long as he enjoys cuddling. Then stop talking and listen carefully to what he has to say, and you'll have your answer.

DEAR ABBY: Years ago you printed a quote by Thomas Jefferson concerning religion. I clipped it and misplaced it.

Negotiate, say new Cuban-Americans

By ANITA SNOW
Associated Press Writer

They were children and young adults when they left Fidel Castro's Cuba. Now they defy their more conservative elders with words and acts that a few years ago could have brought a bomb to their doorstep.

They are taking the 90-mile trip across the Florida straits to observe Cuban life and talk with the island's leaders, breaching an emotional iron curtain of more than three decades. They are calling for peaceful change.

"Cuban-Americans are doing a lot of things that would have been unheard of before," said Alicia Torres, executive director of the Cuban American Committee Research and Education Fund.

In December, her Washington-based group — which supports normalization of relations between Cuba and United States — visited Cuba and met with high-ranking Cuban officials. They came away convinced that Cuba is slowly moving toward political and economic reforms.

Torres noted that members of her parents' generation generally oppose talks with Castro government representatives.

"In the last five years, there has been an opening up of different views in the Cuban community," said Mariana Gaston, 41, an educator from New York and a co-founder of the committee. "Before that, the only acceptable view was the extreme right view."

The younger generation's views are part of a growing debate that has emerged with the collapse of communism elsewhere, Cuba's growing political and economic isolation, and a feeling by some that Castro's fall is imminent.

Most of the new voices are professionals in their 40s or early 50s who came to the United States as children or young adults after the 1959 revolution that overthrew dictator Fulgencio Batista. Growing up in the Cuban-American communities in Florida, New York and New Jersey, they were taught that Castro was a communist devil who should be toppled from power.

But as adults, some have come to believe that talks, not violence, would lead to democracy in their homeland. Though most oppose Castro's regime, they also oppose sending in the U.S. Marines to oust him.

A recent Florida International University poll of Cuban-Americans in Florida's Dade County indicated that 49 percent favored a dialogue between Cuban exiles, Cuban dissidents, and Cuban government representatives.

But the October poll, which had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points, also indicated a strong majority clings to hard line views that have dominated the community for three decades.

Eighty-eight percent favor increasing political pressure to tighten the U.S. trade embargo against Cuba and 77 percent favor U.S. support of an armed internal rebellion to overthrow Castro.

"The hard line is still the predominant voice in the community," said Guillermo J. Grenier, a principal researcher on the survey. "But the hard line is losing its hegemony."

Grenier's analysis was borne out in a January rally in favor of dropping economic sanctions against Cuba. More than 3,000 people attended the event at a New York convention center, while outside, more than 10,000 people — including many from Miami — demonstrated in opposition to sub-freezing temperatures.

Members of the conservative exile community acknowledge dissenting voices exist, but dismiss them as insignificant.

FCC eyes rules to save radio industry

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In just a few years, the radio industry has gone from the darling of Wall Street to a business struggling for survival.

But the Federal Communications Commission was poised today to breathe new life into that ailing patient by giving financially healthy companies the opportunity to buy more stations.

FCC Chairman Alfred Sikes told a Senate subcommittee Wednesday that rules limiting single owners to 12 AM and 12 FM stations, with no more than one of each in a single community, were outdated.

"In most areas literally dozens of cable television channels are owned and controlled by a single firm," he said. "In most cities, moreover, there is only a single local newspaper."

He said the financially troubled radio stations would probably die unless stronger operations were allowed to buy them.

The main cause of radio's problems was the expansion in the number of stations allowed by deregulation in the 1980s, industry analyst Thomas Buono told the Senate Commerce communications subcommittee.

Huge debts were incurred, not only by creation of new stations, but the fact that half all stations have changed hands since 1985.

"I have seen an industry that had become the 'darling of Wall Street' in the mid-1980s become a troubled industry struggling for survival in the 1990s," Buono said.

The economic boom and availability of financing in the mid-1980s was followed by a recession that shrunk advertising. More than 100 stations have gone dark, a number of radio owners are in bankruptcy and hundreds are restructuring their debts, said Buono.

More than half of the approximately 10,800 commercial radio stations in the country are losing money, according to industry data.

Buono said the best solution was "eliminating antiquated ownership regulation that has constricted broadcasters."

Others with an interest in the industry said the move would ill serve the public, by endangering the diversity of programming and viewpoint available because of a variety of owners.

Pierre Sutton, chairman of the National Association of Black Owned Broadcasters, said that concentration of ownership would reduce opportunities for minorities.

Andrew Schwartzman of Media Access Project, a public interest telecommunications law firm, said the FCC was responsible in part for the problem by allowing mergers without gathering evidence on the benefits and costs of the mergers.

Schwartzman criticized the FCC's oversight of the industry, saying it relied too heavily on data gathered by the industry instead of doing its own studies.

Play it safe with diet when controlling gout

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from gout in my right hand that is treated with medication. My concern is learning to prevent it from happening again. Is there a special diet or regimen I can follow?

DEAR READER: Gout is a form of acute arthritis caused by the deposition of uric acid crystals in joints. Before the advent of effective anti-gout drugs, such as allopurinol and probenecid, diet was a mainstay of gout control. Patients were forbidden to eat purines, which contain uric acid and are present in liver and most organ meats.

Today, however, therapy for gout is so successful that strict diets are unnecessary. Nonetheless, I urge my gouty patients to avoid liver, kidneys, brains and sweetbreads.

To give you additional information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91389, Cleveland, OH 44101-3389. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: You discussed pulmonary histoplasmosis in a recent article. Could you expand your discussion to include spread of histoplasmosis to the eye? My husband underwent laser surgery for this condition in 1989, hopefully to prevent its spread to his good eye, after having lost center vision. Is there a chance the histoplasmosis could become active again?

DEAR READER: Histoplasmosis, a fungal lung infection, is presumed to affect the eyes in some cases. I say "presumed" because, according to my ophthalmologist consultants, no one has ever proved that histoplasmosis itself (and not some consequence of the infection) is the actual cause of retinal damage, which diminishes vision. Laser treatment is the therapy of choice.

Unfortunately, even after treatment, histoplasmosis can become reactivated in the same (or opposite) eye, necessitating more rounds of laser therapy. Your husband should be periodically monitored by his

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Henry VII of England had the ideal Chancellor of the Exchequer: John Morton. He operated under the principle that if a noble had a high standard of living, obviously he could afford to pay taxes to the king. Whereas if a noble lived frugally, clearly he was hoarding his money and so had cash to spare for the king. It was the perfect Catch-22, and, in memory of the Chancellor, there is a bridge play known as Morton's Fork.

Cover the East-West cards in the diagram and plan the play in six spades. West leads a trump from jack-third.

The hand was played during the 1991 Gold Flake Asia and Middle East Bridge Championships in New Delhi. Tahir Masood, who was helping Pakistan win the Open event,

YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 16, 1992

It could prove highly advantageous in the year ahead to get more deeply involved in your club or organizational activities. Contacts you'll establish could prove helpful in many ways.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your evaluations of developments are likely to be more accurate than your mate's today, but if you are too aggressive or forceful, things may end up in a stand-off rather than in success. Pisceas, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Pisceas' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Ego might cause you to feel inclined to attempt an endeavor today that's beyond your knowledge and ability. You'll know you're in over your head, yet you may disregard that fact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There might be some political stirrings within your peer group today and, if this is true, don't get involved. Whichever side or issue you support will be the wrong one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone you hold in high regard might turn out to be a severe disappointment to you today. This is because you'll put more credence in this person's ability than this individual actually possesses.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may not be as confident at mental maneuvering today as you think you are. You'll have the other requisites, such as enthusiasm and initiative, but you may lack vision.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be doubly careful today in your commercial and financial dealings. The ground you're standing on is not as firm as it appears to be, and you might get mired down.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do nothing out of the ordinary today that could alienate allies or partners. These key people are more important to your present success than you may realize.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Mismanaging others could be your undoing today. There's a chance you may have a penchant for rubbing the wrong people the wrong way. Be thoughtful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a possibility you might encounter someone socially today who is as equally strong-willed as you are. It's better to back off and give a bit rather than create an unpleasant incident.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Underestimating your opposition could deprive you of success today. Evaluate anyone who contests you realistically, and then handle that individual appropriately.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guard against the tendency today to be hyper-critical of others' ideas without giving them a fair hearing. Be attentive to all the pertinent facts before arriving at a conclusion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Involvements with the wrong people could cost you money today. Be wary of individuals who try to profit in some manner from the resources you possess.
