Guard enters Florida drug war

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida National Guard will assist in a crackdown against drug smugglers in south Florida that could lead to a broader role for the Guard in the war on drugs. Gov. Bob Martinez said Thursday.

Martinez declined to disclose details of the federally funded operation until it is over, saying, "I certainly don't want the people in Nicaragua, Colombia and all the rest to have the details before they get to work."

Other officials indicated the Guard's role will be limited.

Firemen vote for union

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD— Longwood firefighters have taken the first step toward becoming the only unionized fire department in Seminole County.

Fire Chief Charles Chapman, who just got back to town, and City Administrator Gene DeMarte said they had only heard rumors about the effort to unionize. However, firemen confirmed Thursday night that they have voted unanimously to affiliate with the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) by forming Local 3163.

Roy Clelland, who has been elected temporary president of the group, said that all 23 uniformed firefighters, which includes everyone except the chief and assistant chief, voted to organize and affiliate with IAFF.

"It's not a matter of money," Clelland said of the reasons for the vote. Last year the commission brought the pay for firefighters up to that of the police department. Current salaries range from $17,185 to $37,570 a year.

"The fire fighters feel it's time and they want representation," Clelland said. "We have nothing against Chief (Charles) Chapman, he's done a great job. We've all worked for him a long time, most of us for several years. We like Longwood and want to continue to work here."

"We want a little more voice in local government, and in the long run I think it will benefit the city," Clelland said. "It will assure that we keep the highest standards possible from both ends. We never ever will strike, that's not even an option. It's against the law."

He said none of the men have ever worked for a union department and the city has not had to deal with a union. "It's a new thing for us both," Clelland said. "I hope it all works out."

Clelland said he has never seen the firemen working so closely. "It's united all of them and everyone's working together. We approached IAFF because it is the largest firefighters union."

He said cards of intent have been signed and applications to form a union are on the way. The fledgling local has not had its first formal meeting, Clelland said. An international repre-

Commissioners happy with charter

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County Commission Chairman Fred Streetman told the charter advisory committee Thursday night they had done a "great job" as other commissioners expressed general support for the proposed charter.

"I have always felt we have needed a charter," said Commissioner Bob Sturm. "This comes very close."

Commissioner Sandra Glenn asked several questions regarding the effect of the charter on the current status quo relationship between the county and the cities and seemed satisfied when county and city attorneys told her the proposed wording offered by charter committee attorney Harry Stewart would not change the current relationship.

She raised no objections to the charter when Streetman asked for them.

Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff declined comment until the committee completes its final vote on the charter next Tuesday. Commissioner Barbara Christensen did not attend the meeting.

The committee will take final action on the charter Aug. 2 and present the final document to commissioners Aug. 9. Commissioners must decide whether to accept the document, or make changes, by the end of September in order for it to be placed on the ballot for the Nov. 8 general election.

In the charter commission members reviewed Thursday night, committee members had included wording that no county ordinance would be in effect in a city unless the city chooses to adopt it, with the exception of areas where state laws grant counties specific authorities within city boundaries. Stewart told committee members the wording is unconstitutional because the state constitution requires charters to

Salvation Army ending its distribution of food

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald staff writer

SANFORD— The Salvation Army of Seminole County will hold its last distribution of food commodities next week. Its contract with the Emergency Food Distribution Office (EFDO) for Seminole County runs out in September and Lt. Sam Flanigan said he does not plan to renew it.

He said the reason is purely economic. The program cost the Salvation Army $5,000 more than it received to administer it in 1987. This year, through August, it will have cost $3,500 more in spite of cost-cutting measures Flanigan has taken. Earlier this year, the Salvation Army eliminated one distribution site and changed from monthly to bi-monthly distribution.

Another reason for not renewing, Flanigan explained, is that the EFDO has told him the only commodities they will be giving out October through December are butter and corn meal, or butter and flour. "We are only reimbursed for the value of the food under the new contract, and it costs more to operate than we are reimbursed for," he said. "I don't know of anyone who can take on the opera-

Longwood wants tax hike to fund road work

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD— A tax increase of $1 per thousand assessed property valuation, was agreed to at a workshop Thursday night by city commissioners who expect the transportation tax to generate $430,014 next year for road reconstruction.

The total tax rate of $4.15 per $1,000 is expected to raise $1,310,489 for the city coffers. Local revenue sources are expected to bring in $1,164,800, revenue from the state, $943,877 and from the county, $320,000.

The $10,134,215 revised budget reviewed at the workshop is $380,438 more than the budget originally proposed by City Administrator Gene DeMarte.

The proposed tax rate is an increase of $1.15 per $1,000 over the $3 per $1,000 rollback tax rate specified by the Seminole County property appraiser tax as what would be needed to generate the same amount of revenue received last year after increased assessments from new construction, annexations and additions were considered. DeMarte originally said last week he was using the rollback figure, but found out the staff and commissioners had last year's tax rate in mind.

Shopping center changing owners

By WAYNE MIZE

SANFORD — Sanford Town Square, the city's newest shopping center, is in the process of being sold to a Pinellas County company.

The Melrose Corporation of Belleair Bluffs on Florida's west coast is close to putting the property under contract, but the closing of the transaction is contingent on the company's ability to sell unleased space, according to a company spokesperson.

Sanford Centre Associates, Inc., the current owner of Sanford Town Square, has signed the contract and is now waiting for the Melrose Corporation president to close the deal.

Sanford Centre Associates, Inc., has a leasing office at the shopping center and a home office in Deerfield Beach.

Located at 15th Street and S. French Ave., Sanford Town Square opened June 7, 1988.

The land was originally owned by Red Jones of Sanford. Jones said he owned the Georgia executes convicted child killer

JACKSON, Ga. — James E. Messer Jr., who lawyers said was brain damaged, was executed for luring his 8-year-old niece from school, taking her to the woods and killing her when she resisted his advances.

Messer was pronounced dead at 7:23 p.m. EDT Thursday after a single jolt from Georgia's electric chair at the Diagnostic and Classification Center.

The 34-year-old resident of rural Cedartown, Ga., made no final statement, but mouthed "Amen" after a minute-long prayer by the prison chaplain.

Messer was sentenced to death for the 1979 slaying of Rhonda Jean Tanner, who was beaten, molested, stabbed repeatedly and left for dead. She ultimately bled to death and her battered body was found the next day.

Wayne Tanner, the victim's father, stood outside the prison with his wife, who was holding Rhonda's picture, and said that Messer "got off easy."

Iran rejects Jackson's hostage effort

WASHINGTON — Ex-presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, insisting he has not sought direct talks on the release of American hostages, says he merely wanted to appeal for their freedom as the Iran-Iraq war nears a possible end.

Iran promptly rejected Jackson's effort, and the Reagan administration said Thursday the matter should be left to "official channels." Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, Jackson's opponent in the primary elections, said private citizens should not try to conduct foreign policy.

Yet amid all the commotion, U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, at Jackson's request, appealed to Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati to help gain the "unconditional release" of the American hostages.

"The captives should be released on moral and humanitarian grounds as an act of good faith," Jackson said in a prepared statement. "There should be no linkage (to other goals) in their release."

Congress preparing final drought aid bill

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate are working quickly to send $6 billion in drought aid to farmers, but their relief package contains some items President Reagan opposes as unwise.

Congressional leaders say the largest disaster bills ever, which slipped through the House and Senate with only a few hours of debate Thursday, are close enough to Reagan's desires that he will sign the final version.

But Reagan asked for legislation devoted solely to drought relief, and Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng sent letters to Capitol Hill in advance of Thursday's votes objecting to the 50-cent increase in the milk support price approved by the House and a plan in the Senate to subsidize the sale of surplus corn to the producers of ethanol, used in making the fuel gasohol.

"I think we complied with the wishes of the president," said House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, noting Congress stayed within budget limits and voted for aid only to farmers.

De la Garza and others stressed consumers would benefit from the legislation by getting a plentiful supply of food at affordable prices.

Yet with the magnitude of disaster aid, even supporters said the assistance would compensate farmers for only part of their losses. Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., estimates the drought may cause $10 billion in damage.

Unmarried couples said more violent

DURHAM, N.H. — Slapping, punching and other violence is more than twice as likely to occur among unmarried couples who live together than married couples, a national study found.

Sociologist Murray Strauss said the survey of nearly 6,000 couples found that violence occurs among 35 percent of unmarried couples as compared to 14 percent of married couples.

The study released Thursday showed violence occurred among about 20 percent of couples who are dating but not living together.

"Violence includes everything from slaps to homicide," said Strauss, director of the Family Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire.

Strauss blamed the high rate of violence among non-married couples on poverty, a "lack of investment" in their relationships and isolation from family and friends.

"Cohabiting couples are poorer and violence is more prevalent among the poor," Strauss said. "They also don't have the same investment in their relationships as married people and it's going wrong because they can walk away."

He also said that unmarried couples can become isolated because family and friends do not know how to respond to a relationship that does not have legal status.

"Many people don't know how to deal with them. It's a deviation from established patterns even in this day and age," Strauss said. "Couples tend to become less closely tied to relatives (who) tend not to be readily available in times of trouble."

Thousands flee South Dakota wildfire

A South Dakota wildfire forced thousands of Rapid City residents to flee their homes as rain dampened a major blaze that threatened Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park, and fires burned unchecked in other drought-parched states from Wisconsin to California.

Although small in comparison to major infernos in Alaska and the Midwest, South Dakota's devastating 2,800-acre arson fire had incinerated 15 homes, 33 outbuildings and 18 vehicles worth more than $1 million and forced the evacuation of 3,000 people.

In Wyoming's Yellowstone Park officials said the park's dozen fires had blackened 107,775 acres, but declared the famed Old Faithful geyser area and the Grant Village campground complex out of danger.

Park spokesman Costa Dillon said firefighters combined aerial "hell-torching" and terrestrial flame throwers to create backfires in the 8,500-acre North Fork blaze that appeared to be moving away from Old Faithful after coming to within 6 miles of the geyser. Some of the 930 firefighters would be pulled off the blaze today, he said.

Dillon said there were scattered thunderstorms Wednesday and Thursday throughout the park but there had been no reports of new lightning-sparked fires.

"The advantage to the rain is that it raises the humidity and that helps keep the plants and trees less dry and that reduces 'spotting' that can help spread fires faster," he said.

Yellowstone's south entrance and 22 miles of road in the area were expected to remain closed as 3,000 firefighters battled the worst rash of fires in the 116-year history of the 2.2 million-acre park.

The Clover-Mist fire, the largest blaze in the park, grew from 46,825 acres to 68,035 acres but was expected to be contained late today.

Wyoming Sen. Alan Simpson said the clouds of smoke above Yellowstone may have a silver lining, though — the fires have cleared room for grasses and other small plants that eventually will provide new feeding grounds for grizzly bears and elk.

South Dakota's arson blaze threatened several subdivisions in dense woods just outside Rapid City. Eight homes were consumed by the blaze Thursday about one and a half miles southwest of Rapid City.

Committee claims 'set-up' by White House

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The White House leaked word of a covert action plan in Panama and blamed it on Congress in order to make lawmakers look bad and to undermine spy legislation, Senate Intelligence Committee leaders charge.

Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., and Vice Chairman William Cohen, R-Maine, leveled the blast at the administration Thursday, describing the situation as a "set-up" by the White House. Claims that the news leak came from their committee, they said, were "false and erroneous."

At a news conference they called, where tradition would dictate that Boren speak first, Cohen led things off to stress the dissatisfaction of a senior Republican with his own party's administration.

"I think the matter was handled in such a way as to set up members of Congress so they would appear to be the source of the leak... (and) I'm offended by it," the senator declared.

Cohen suggested the leak was tied to the impending House consideration of a bill, already passed by a large bipartisan margin in the Senate, dealing with intelligence community money for fiscal 1989.

The legislation includes a provision requiring the president to tell leaders of Congress about covert actions at least within 48 hours. President Reagan opposes it on grounds that it would increase the risk of leaks.

The measure is an outgrowth of Reagan's worst crisis, the Iran-Contra scandal, in which he deliberately hid from Congress the secret sales of U.S. weapons to Iran in a bid to buy the freedom of American hostages in Lebanon.

The action regarding Panama was reported Wednesday and Thursday by The Washington Post, which quoted unidentified administration as well as congressional sources in saying that Reagan had approved a plan for promoting Panamanian opposition to discredit strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The newspaper said the plan was sent to House and Senate intelligence panels July 15 but with Congress in recess, they were not briefed until Tuesday.

Cohen and Boren said they heard detailed, knowledgeable questions about the issue from reporters even before they received their classified briefing from intelligence officials.

Cohen added, "We were chagrined and surprised to find such a heavy-handed approach used by the executive branch to cause embarrassment to members on the Hill."

North linked to report that ruined sting

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A House subcommittee chairman strongly suggests Oliver North may have been the source for a news report that ruined a federal "sting" operation designed to catch the kingpins of Colombia's cocaine cartel.

But others are taking issue with that suggestion, insisting a number of officials could have released the sensitive information that led to the article in The Washington Times July 17, 1984.

The newspaper reported that officials in Nicaragua's Soviet-backed Sandinista government were allegedly linked to the Medellin cocaine cartel, a revelation that forced the Drug Enforcement Administration to kill the undercover sting because of risks to the agents involved.

A former DEA official testified to the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime Thursday that North, as a White House National Security Council aide, attended at least two briefings on the sting operation in late June 1984 — and had reason to release the information because President Reagan was trying to stop legislation that would cut off all U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

By linking the Sandinistas with drug traffic, according to this theory, aid to the rebels accused of human rights violations might seem more palatable.

"There is no doubt about (North's) interest in getting the story out," said Frank Monasters, the former assistant DEA administrator, who nonetheless would not accuse him directly of the news leak.

Subcommittee Chairman William Hughes, D-N.J., came closest to pinning the disclosure on the now-retired Marine lieutenant colonel indicted on criminal charges in the Iran-Contra scandal.

"The only people who had reason to leak this were Oliver North and the CIA," Hughes declared. "It has been consistent that those were the two who wanted to get it out."

North and his lawyers offered no immediate comment on the matter.

DEA Agent Ernst Jacobsen, involved in the undercover operation, testified to the subcommittee that the attempt to apprehend the top four leaders of the Medellin cartel came to an abrupt halt when the Times report appeared.

Jacobsen, speaking from behind a screen to protect his identity, listed the targets of the aborted sting as Carlos Lehder, Jorge Ochoa, Pablo Escobar and Gonzalo Rodriguez-Gacha — the chief exporters of cocaine to the United States.

Lehder, arrested subsequently, was tried and has been sentenced to prison in Florida, but the Medellin cartel continues its booming business.

Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., was one of those protesting the attempt to finger North.

Polymyalgia treatment includes avoiding cold

DEAR DR. GOTT: A cousin in Florida wants to come visit me in New Hampshire during the winter. She must be nuts, but my question isn't about her mental state. She has polymyalgia and taken medication. Is there anything I need to know about her condition in order to make her visit as comfortable as possible?

DEAR READER: Polymyalgia rheumatica is a relatively common disease of unknown cause, marked by severe muscle stiffness, especially in the morning. The ailment often is associated with fever, feeling unwell, weight loss, anemia and — in some cases — inflammation of medium-sized arteries, causing headache and heart disease.

Polymyalgia patients can be helped by avoiding cold, wet climates, a fact that your cousin ought to take into account. Short of behaving like any concerned hostess, there is nothing that I know of for you to do to make her visit to the Granite State more comfortable.

DEAR DR. GOTT: During my physical, my doctor seemed perturbed because he found a slight swelling in my liver. A CT scan showed fat, but no tumor in the liver. Now he wants me to have a liver biopsy. I'm having no symptoms and the doctors won't tell me what they are looking for, so why should I agree to surgery?

DEAR READER: In the first place, don't consent to any surgery — even a simple biopsy — without first knowing what the doctors are looking for. All surgery carries with it certain risks. The hazards of liver biopsy include hemorrhage, peritonitis and infection.

I think that you would be better served by insisting on more non-invasive (non-surgical) testing. For example, blood tests of liver function and an ultrasound examination would be helpful in delineating the cause of your fatty liver. Furthermore, the use of alcohol is a common cause of fat deposits in the livers of Americans. If you drink, give up booze — including wine and beer — and see if within a few

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Poor Willy Nilly, our fictional haphazard declarer, is often at the helm of our bridge ship, usually steering it aground. In fairness, Willy is probably a better player by now, particularly if he has been reading about his own exploits. Nevertheless, here he is again pushing cards around without too much thought.

How did he do it this time? He got to four spades and the opponents led three rounds of diamonds. Willy ruffed the third diamond, and played to the jack of spades. Then he played the queen of spades. When East showed out, there was nothing for Willy to do but play a third spade and hope that West had no more diamonds to force him to the trump suit. No such luck.

West won the spade ace and played another diamond to beat the contract.

The correct play is easy. After dummy's spade jack holds the trick, declarer should play the two of spades back to his 10. If West holds up, then declarer must cash two clubs and three hearts. Since West must follow, at the finish South can lead the fourth heart from his hand while a high spade is still in dummy to prevent West from making a trick with a little spade.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books (C)1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

What The Day Will Bring...

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Performance time must be taken into consideration today or else you might begin a project that you'll be unable to complete and just abandon to collect dust.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There is a chance your generosity might be abused today, but it will be partially your own fault because you'll innately know you're being too liberal with one who is undeserving.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Complacency could dilute any advantages you gain today in your dealings with others. You must pin things down in order to succeed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, guard against tendencies to be nice only to people you think can do something for you. Your motives will be obvious to keen observers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today there may be a tug-of-war between your abilities to acquire and your inclinations to be wasteful. It looks like the latter might have a slight edge.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This should be a rather pleasant day for you, provided you take care of things you should be managing instead of letting them fend for themselves. Direct your destiny.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Things that you have been sweeping under the rug lately might pop up today and compete for your immediate attention. Don't postpone any longer that which needs doing now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you fail to keep your priorities in order today, you may put more emphasis on frivolous activities than you do on practical matters. Produce instead of playing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of worrying about what others think of you today, it's far more important what you think of yourself. If you know in your heart you're doing your best, that's all that counts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There is a possibility that you may confuse wishful thinking with optimism today and make judgments which do not serve your best interests. Be realistic.

Waterobics

20 to 80-plus, she said. In September and October, new waterobics groups will form and novices or past students can pay a $10 fee and learn and practice the techniques of this type of exercise, Reiley-Morton said.

"I'm not a super expert on exercise," Reiley-Morton said, "but I can tell you what works in water."

She said she began helping her mother teach swimming when she was about six years old and became a certified instructor at 17. She's had her certification for 13 years and although her favorite students are "kickers and screamers, I love little kids," Reiley-Morton said she's happy to help anyone find their way around in the water.

Many of those who sign up for waterobics are non-swimmers. After they've gotten into the water for the exercise program, Reiley-Morton said, some go on to take swimming lessons.

One of her students, Ginger Milsom, of Sanford, said she's not into swimming, although she knows how, but she finds waterobics very refreshing.

"I definitely feel like I get more exercise in the water than I do walking," Milsom said. Since January she has been walking three or four miles a day at a brisk pace, but that just wasn't enough to firm up her body after the recent births of her two babies, she said.

"I would say it's painless, but I feel more muscles are being used in the water. I get more of a workout in the water. It's a lot of fun and very beneficial."

She doesn't have a swimming pool, so to keep up with her waterobics after this session ends, Milsom said she will sign up for the Red Cross program again this fall. "It's something different," she said.

Reiley-Morton said a 1/2-hour of waterobics is equal to three hours of land bound exercise as far as benefits go.

Although the water adds resistance, which increases the effect of movement, she said the moves seem easier to make in water than on land.

"The main thing in the water, you start with the toes and work up. Above the bend of the joint that is bent, that's what gets stress. We don't push for sore muscles or high activity. We use the whole body just to maintain balance," she said.

Those with back problems, Reiley-Morton said, will have less difficulty exercising in water. She said water therapy is often prescribed as treatment for many medical problems.

The usual benefits of aerobic exercise - including an increased heart rate, are there with waterobics, but exercise goals just seem easier to reach in the water, Reiley-Morton said.

Waterobics class, she said, is also a social outlet for her students, whom she said sometimes don't want to stop talking to start their workout.

She has Red Cross waterobics sessions scheduled to begin on Sept. 6 at the Sanora club house pool, off S. Sanford Avenue, Sanford. For information call 321-4307.

Bryan Brown dispels the Aussie stereotype

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If there is a mold in which moviegoers cast the Australian male — brash, swaggering, individualistic — Bryan Brown could be a perfect fit.

He is proud to be descended from those English convicts who were sent to the world's most forbidding penal colony a few centuries ago.

"There's a horrible possibility that I may be descended from an ancestor who was sent to Australia to guard the convicts," he said. "That's a terrible thing to be said about a man in Australia."

"But I suppose the guards were just as much prisoners as anyone else Down Under."

In many ways Brown — who currently co-stars with Tom Cruise in "Cocktail" — reminds people of Errol Flynn, the superstar of the 1930s and 1940s from the Australian state of Tasmania, whose screen heroics dazzled a generation of moviegoers.

After Flynn, there was a long, dry spell in which an Australian actor swept onto the screen and captured moviegoers' hearts. Peter Finch, an Englishman who moved to Australia, won the best actor Academy Award in 1976 for his performance in "Network," but his appeal was more cerebral than visceral.

Then came "Breaker Morant" in 1979. The title role was played by Edward Woodward, another Englishman, but audiences also noticed Brown and fellow Australian Jack Thompson in the story based on the court-martial of three Australian officers during the Boer War.

That film was followed by "Gallipoli" in 1981, starring Mel Gibson. The Aussies were back.

There was "The Man From Snowy River" and the "Mad Max" pictures. The most recent heavy hitter has been Paul Hogan, whose "Crocodile Dundee" and "Crocodile Dundee II" have earned almost a half-billion dollars between them.

Australian men have been regarded as physical, rugged, unapologetic types who prefer beer to champagne and the company of their "mates" to the companionship of women.

But American female audiences seem to find those qualities attractive, if unrefined, while American males consider them admirable.

While Brown may display those characteristics on screen, his private life is anything but rough and rowdy. He is rich, successful and married to English actress Rachel Ward, whom he met when they co-starred in the highly rated television miniseries "The Thorn Birds."

He has three homes — a beach house in Malibu, a home overlooking the sea in his native Sydney and a 300-acre cattle ranch, some 300 miles north of Sydney.

His favorite is the ranch, where his young daughters, 18 months and 2 years, are able to enjoy country life away from the noise, smog and traffic of Sydney.

Brown tries to balance his career by giving equal time to both Australian and international projects.

"I love my homeland," said Brown. "I suppose I could live in London or New York or Hollywood, but so far no one has given me one good reason for doing so."

Brown had just returned from England, where he had spent six weeks under gloomy skies and rain while his wife was working in a new movie, and was anxious to return to Australia.

"I really don't know how people survive the English climate," he said. "It's downright depressing."

"And the English aren't the friendliest people on earth either. It's rather 'in' to be an Australian in England these days, probably because of 'Crocodile Dundee,' but the old caste system is still in evidence everywhere. The English categorize each other every time they open their mouths."

Brown studied in London at the National Theatre, appearing in "The Tempest," "Romeo and Juliet" and other plays and working with the likes of John Gielgud and Sir Laurence Olivier.

To assume Brown is a big, brawling, raw-boned yahoo would be a mistake. Like Flynn or Clint Eastwood, with whom he also is compared, Brown is a man of sensitivity and perception.

Until now, his 6-foot-3 frame and his imposing demeanor have put him in action-adventure films, playing swashbuckling, devil-may-care types.

"Cocktail" is an important departure for him. He doesn't throw a punch, fire a gun or climb a mountain. He plays a cynical, veteran bartender who helps the character played by Cruise learn the ropes.

Brown also appeared in the title role of "Tai-Pan," based on the novel by James Clavell, which was a box-office bomb, and in "F-X," a thriller in which he played a movie special effects man innocently caught up in political intrigue.

His Australian projects include "Cathy's Child," "Str." "Newsfront," "Money Mover," "The Odd Angry Shot," "Blood Money."

NBC dominates prime-time Emmy nominations again

By RUSSELL KISHI
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — NBC and its acclaimed series "L.A. Law" dominated the 40th annual nominations for prime-time Emmys Thursday, with the top-ranked network taking 114 nominations and the hit series earning 19.

The nominations, announced at a news conference at the Registry Hotel in Universal City, sounded like a television rerun, with 12 nominations apiece going to NBC's "The Golden Girls" and the CBS drama "Beauty and the Beast," and 11 nominations going to NBC's long-running "Cheers."

The best showings for first-year series were ABC's "thirtysomething" with 10 nominations and CBS's "Frank's Place" with nine.

"St. Elsewhere," which has concluded its run on NBC, received eight nominations, tying the show with a "Hallmark Hall of Fame" special, "Foxfire."

It was the second straight year that Steven Bochco's series about the trials and tribulations in a Los Angeles law firm dominated the field — earning nominations for outstanding series and for male and female leads Michael Tucker, Corbin Bernsen, Jill Eikenberry and Susan Dey. The ensemble also received nominations for supporting actors Larry Drake, Jimmy Smits and Susan Ruttan.

Although "Beauty and the Beast" came in second with 12 nominations, it failed to score in most key categories against "L.A. Law," except for nominations for outstanding drama series and outstanding lead actor, Ron Perlman.

The popular "Golden Girls" series maintained its tradition for several key nominations including nominations for outstanding comedy series and three for outstanding lead actress, including last year's winner, Rue McClanahan, and co-stars Beatrice Arthur and Betty White. Estelle Getty was also nominated for her supporting role.

NBC's domination was further reflected in another strong showing for its situation comedy about life in a Boston bar, "Cheers." The series also earned nominations for outstanding comedy series and nominations for its stars, Ted Danson and Kirstie Alley. Supporting actors Woody Harrelson, George Wendt and Rhea Perlman also picked up nominations.

Last year's critical hit, "thirtysomething" proved just as big a hit in nominations, with selections for outstanding drama series and for supporting actors Timothy Busfield, Patricia Wettig and Pauley Draper.

Although the Tim Reid series "Frank's Place" is not on the CBS fall schedule, the critical hit also scored big in the nominations, including outstanding comedy series and lead actor for Reid.

This is the first year that cable television shows were included in the overall competition. Both Showtime and HBO had six nominations each.

The awards will be presented Aug. 28 from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium and will be carried live for the second consecutive year by the Fox Broadcasting Company.
