Trash can clue nails suspect

A detailed manuscript of what life on the run is like has led to the arrest of a California man wanted on forgery charges and for questioning in the death of his wife.

Police say the man discarded a manuscript in a motel room trash can that was later discovered by a motel employee. The discovery played a key role in helping police locate and apprehend the suspect.

PTL exec gets eight years

Former PTL executive Richard Dortch was sentenced to eight years in prison and fined $200,000 Thursday for his part in a series of money-raising schemes.

Dortch's boss, TV evangelist Jim Bakker, will have his chance to explain the now-bankrupt ministry's monetary discrepancies and fund-raising shenanigans when his trial starts next week in the same courtroom.

Drug lords declare 'total war'

Drug lords in Colombia, saying they have declared 'total war' on the government and that country's legal system, went on a rampage of violence Thursday during which political offices were bombed and politician's houses were set on fire.

The U.S. continues to monitor the situation very closely. President Bush has expressed interest in sending American troops to Colombia to aid in the battle against drug bosses but says he will do so only if asked by the government.

Relatives return to wreck site

WHITEFISH POINT, Mich. — Relatives of the 29 crew members who died when the ore carrier Edmund Fitzgerald sank in Lake Superior 14 years ago say they hope new photographs will tell them why the ship went down.

The photographs were taken Wednesday by a Michigan research team aboard the vessel Grayling. The crew returned to the wreck site off Whitefish Point Thursday and spent another 10 hours over the wreck, shooting about 90 minutes of video tape with a submersible robot.

Tom Farnquist, director of the Great Lakes Shipwreck Historical Museum, described it as "pretty amazing stuff." He said the researchers would return to the site Friday before turning their attention to two other shipwrecks in Whitefish Bay.

Ex-HUD boss defends tenure

LOS ANGELES — Former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Samuel Pierce has denied allegations of political favoritism while at HUD and contends his actions during Ronald Reagan's administration have been misinterpreted, it was reported Friday.

Pierce told the Los Angeles Times he believes he has been attacked by some members of Congress because, as head of HUD, he allowed consultants to usurp the traditional role played by congressmen in obtaining grants for the agency.

In defending his on-the-job performance, Pierce said, "everybody was treated the same" at HUD. "That was the advice I gave to the people at HUD."

Mom gets probation

'Cocaine baby' defendant ordered to finish drug treatment program

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The first woman in Florida convicted of delivering cocaine to her unborn child was sentenced here today to complete a one-year drug treatment program, then serve 14 years on probation.

Jennifer C. Johnson, 23, of Altamonte Springs, was convicted last month of delivering a cocaine to her two children before they were born. The children, born last January and in October 1983, were both born addicted to cocaine.

Seminole Circuit Judge O. H. Eaton told Johnson, "I have no desire to hurt you. I know that this case has resulted in a great deal of attention and I think what you need most is to be allowed to continue treatment without interruption."

Johnson has been undergoing treatment for cocaine addiction at the Temporary Living Center in Apopka for the past several months and Judge Eaton ordered that she complete the treatment program there, expected to take 12 to 16 months. She will be under the additional supervision of the community corrections department while undergoing treatment.

Montye Kelly, director of the treatment center, told Judge Eaton that constant attention on Johnson and the center by the press has hindered her treatment. "We cannot carry on an effective treatment plan for Jennifer or other patients with the constant attention of the media," she said.

Local men head heliport committee

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Two local men have been selected to head a committee studying a possible new link in Central Florida's transportation system.

Mack LaZeny, Sanford Regional Airport director, was elected chairperson of the Orlando Urban Area Heliport steering committee Aug. 18. Tony VanDerworp, Seminole County planner, was elected vice-chairperson of the 18-member committee.

The steering committee is overseeing a 10-month study designed to determine if the Orlando area could support a public heliport system. The feasibility study will determine the cost and demand for the service in Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties, whether the level of noise created by the aircraft would be compatible with surrounding land uses, and which levels of government will fund and operate the system.

"This is one of the most influential studies on aviation in Central Florida," LaZeny said this week. "I believe it will set the foundation for any other specific transportation services in the tri-county area. It's a dynamic study on a dynamic topic."

Hoyle Tanner & Associates, an Orlando engineering firm, is surveying airport managers, helicopter operators, Federal Aviation Administration registration files and Florida Department of Transportation records to pinpoint the number of helicopters operating across the state, the areas they serve and the hours of flight time in the Orlando area.

The firm is asking 220 individuals and corporations who operate helicopters where they fly in the Orlando area, and where they would fly if public heliports were available.

Air traffic patterns and population will determine where — if at all — heliports are needed. Ground traffic patterns will also be measured, comparing times required to drive congested roadways — like Interstate 4 or State Road 436 — and flight times for the same distances.

State schools at bottom of the barrel in key categories

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is spending more money on public education than it has in years, but its overall efforts are nevertheless pretty dismal, putting the state at or near the bottom in many key categories, according to a state-by-state comparison study by Florida State University.

Poll: Americans want education changes made

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A majority of Americans would support a sweeping array of educational changes ranging from higher school taxes to a national curriculum and the doctrine of choice espoused by President Bush, a poll showed Thursday.

The 21st annual Gallup-Phi Delta Kappa poll of attitudes on public education indicates Americans are moving away from such traditions as the neighborhood school and local control of education in search of alternatives, said John Rowley, president of PDK, the education fraternity.

"The public seems to be ready for some tradition-shattering changes in the policies that govern our public schools," Rowley told a news conference.

However, when asked to grade their local schools, 43 percent of those polled gave them an A or a B, up from 40 percent last year and a low of 31 percent in 1983. Four percent failed their schools, the same as the last two years.

The survey of 1,584 adults last spring found 60 percent favored choice — defined as the right of

For instance, a 28 percent increase from 1980 to 1986 in state spending per college student was the lowest of any state in the nation and resulted in Florida falling to the bottom of the 50 states in public higher educational spending per student.

The survey by Dr. Thomas R. Dye of the FSU Policy Sciences Program reported grade schools faring only marginally better. Allocations were "adequate, although not generous," he said, due to a relatively low demand for elementary and secondary education.

For higher education, Florida ranks 49th nationally in per capita expenditures, spending about $134.95 per person (the national average is $247.50). For elementary and secondary education, Florida spends about

Parents partly to blame for 'kindergarten jitters'

By United Press International

GAINESVILLE — Anxious parents may cause their children to suffer from the jitters about starting kindergarten or first grade, University of Florida educators said Thursday.

Because parents have been with their children for so long, they often worry whether their children are ready for school and don't want to give them up, said Suzanne Krogh, associate professor of early childhood education, and Lynda Hayes, kindergarten teacher at the university's P.K. Yonge Laboratory School. "I've seen children who almost feel obligated to cry when the parent is leaving them. But the minute the parent is out of sight, the child is fine," Krogh said. "Quite often, the parent needs to release the child more than the other way around."

Hayes said the National Association of Education recommends that parents be "conscious of their own fears and be really upbeat."

"It's important that they talk about how they remember their own first days in school, the types of things they were afraid of and how things turned out OK," Hayes said.

To ease children's fears, the educators said, parents should rehearse what the child can expect during the first few days of school.

Rollins College president resigns

The time is right for me and the time is right for Rollins

—Thaddeus Seymour

United Press International

WINTER PARK — Thaddeus Seymour submitted his resignation Thursday as president of Rollins College to close a 12-year tenure that brought numerous improvements to the private liberal arts school.

Seymour's resignation is effective at the end of the academic year around June 1, said school spokeswoman Susanne McGovern. He gave notice for in advance to allow college officials adequate time to find a replacement.

Seymour, who will be 68 when he steps down, said in a statement he intended to serve as president only for 10 years and stayed on longer to complete a five-year fund-raising program concluded in June.

That drive, McGovern said, turned out to be the most successful in the school's 104-year history, bringing in $38.2 million.

"The time is right for me and the time is right for Rollins," wrote Seymour, an English professor. "Rollins is in an ideal position to benefit from the renewal that comes with change."

Since Seymour came to Rollins in 1978 endowments of $10.6 million have grown to more than $30 million. The college has developed a business school, built a new library and established a program of evening classes.

Total enrollment is about 2,500, McGovern said.

Youth shot to death at friend's home

MIAMI — A 15-year-old boy was shot to death Thursday while listening to music at the home of an older friend, police said.

Metro-Dade County police spokeswoman Lucy Fitz identified the victim as Gabriel Navarro, who was shot in his 17-year-old friend's southwest Dade County home.

Navarro was visiting the home of the older boy, and the two were listening to music in the family room when the shooting occurred, Fitz said. She declined to name the older youth.

A third juvenile, also unidentified, told police that when she heard a shot from another room, she ran into the family room, where she found Navarro on the floor with a gunshot wound from a small caliber pistol, Fitz said.

The youth was air lifted to Jackson Memorial Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

County considering billing company

BRADENTON — Manatee County officials hope they can recover some of the costs incurred earlier this week as a result of a sulfuric acid spill at the Royser Phosphates Inc. complex at Port Manatee.

Tom Strickland, deputy public safety director, said the county plans to bill Royser for about $100,000 to cover overtime, equipment costs and other expenses incurred by the county in the operation.

Strickland said Wednesday that includes $7,000 per day for housing 170 prisoners at the Sumner County jail after they had to be evacuated from Manatee County near the chemical complex, plus $2,000 an hour for sheriff's personnel to guard the prisoners.

Acid began leaking from the 400,000-gallon storage tank Monday afternoon and created a dangerous cloud of poisonous vapor when it mixed with rain, prompting the sheriff's department to close U.S. Highway 41 and U.S. Highway 301 until Tuesday morning.

Public access cable show causes stir

TAMPA — A county commissioner threatened to cut off funding for public-access cable television unless the producers of "Richie's Screw Show" clean up and tone down the raunchy late-night program.

The controversy arose Thursday as commissioners discussed their decision Wednesday not to use $600,000 in cable TV funds to help support the financially troubled Tampa Bay Performing Arts Center.

"It was certainly not my impression when voting yesterday that I was condoning this type of programming," Seivey said in a Thursday memorandum. "I was under the impression I was voting to give the citizens of Hillsborough County access to educational and informative shows."

Host Richie Palavoda's late-night program usually is called "Richie's Show," but a segment shown last weekend had the extra adjective in the title and was rife with down and dirty language.

Hillsborough County Commissioner Jim Seivey said he would prefer that tax money support more wholesome programming on Paragon Cable Co. and Jones Intercable.

Erin moves into North Atlantic

MIAMI — Hurricane Erin picked up speed but was expected to weaken as it moved toward the cooler North Atlantic waters Friday.

At 5 a.m. EDT, Erin's center was centered near latitude 23.3 north, longitude 99.3 west, or about 450 miles west of the westernmost Azores.

Erin was moving toward the northeast at 20 mph, up from 10 mph on Thursday, and little change in motion was expected Friday. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center predicted Erin would gradually lose its tropical circulation pattern as it crossed the 50th latitude this weekend.

Erin was a moderate hurricane that posed a danger in Atlantic shipping lanes but has not threatened land throughout its northward trek. Erin formed as a tropical depression Aug. 17 and reached hurricane strength Tuesday.

Judge bows out of shopping case

CLEARWATER — Pinellas County Circuit Judge Howard P. Rives has removed himself from the legal battle between Home Shopping Network Inc. and GTE Corp. and another judge will be named to hear a series of Home Shopping motions, including one for a new trial.

A jury ordered Home Shopping and two top executives Aug. 2 to pay $100 million in damages to GTE Florida and GTE Communications Inc., both subsidiaries of GTE Corp of Stamford, Conn.

Home Shopping, a video retailer based in Clearwater, has filed motions seeking a new trial, reversal of the judgment or a reduction in the amount of damages. The company also has sought to have Rives disqualified from the case.

Eaton also ordered Johnson to undergo random monthly drug tests for the first year after she completes treatment, and to undergo followup treatment and counseling at The Grove treatment center in Sanford.

Johnson also was ordered to report any pregnancy to her parole officer and, if pregnant, to seek prenatal care approved by the court.

As part of her probation, Johnson is ordered to complete 200 hours of community service, to obtain her GED degree or a high school diploma, and to take a vocational aptitude test. She is to obtain employment within six months of her release from the treatment center, and to then repay her costs of treatment and court costs, and to make an attempt to support her children.

Johnson, who did not comment during the hearing, could have received up to 30 years in prison, and her pre-sentence report recommended she serve seven years in prison.

However, both James Sweeting, Johnson's attorney, and Jeff Dean, former assistant state attorney who prosecuted the case, recommended Judge Eaton sentence Johnson to no jail time.

Sweeting told Eaton the case was a "novel" one and asked that his client be allowed to continue treatment at the Temporary Living Center.

Dean told Eaton he had always considered the case against Johnson a child abuse case, not a drug case. "I think the court has sent an appropriate message to pregnant women who use drugs that 'if you don't get treatment yourself, the system will step in and force you to.'"

of Transportation and the Federal Aviation Administration — warns that delays will drive the costs even higher.

The added service in Sanford is needed to relieve congestion at Orlando International Airport, the report stated.

Working toward that end, the Sanford Airport Authority is completing renovation of its terminal and facilities in preparation for scheduled service and has hired a marketing specialist to promote the airport to airlines and cargo companies.

Sanford airport this year will account for about 197,000 "general aviation" takeoffs and landings of the approximate 2 million in the East Central Florida region, which includes Orlando, Daytona, Kissimmee and Melbourne. Annual takeoffs and landings of commercial, military and general aviation flights at Orlando International equal 288,665.

Florida has 22 commercial airline-service airports, 16 reliever airports that provide an alternative to commercial airlines and an additional 68 general aviation airports, including Sanford's, that provide business, air cargo, aircraft storage and maintenance services.

The report shows the 20-airport East Central region in greatest need of improvements among all the Florida regions. The report states the region's need for $1.35 billion in improvements over that period.

"Unless quick decisive steps are taken, what has already happened on many of our streets and highways will begin to happen in the skies over Florida," said Herbert Godfrey, director of aviation for Broward County.

"Within five years, we are facing the prospect of an aerial traffic jam that could slow down the state's dynamic business growth and make flying a problem-plagued way to travel in Florida," Godfrey said.

Tourism, development and business growth are driving the need for more capacity, according to the report, which cites several problems:

• Surface access to airports is "a serious problem in south Florida and is an increasing problem in central Florida."

• Tall structures built near airports "are a serious, emerging problem ... (because they) limit airport capacity by reducing the number of usable runways for aircraft landings and takeoff, causing congestion."

• Vast areas are reserved for

California fugitive's manuscript leads to arrest

United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — A California fugitive charged with forgery and wanted for questioning in his wife's 1987 death outlined his life on the lam in a discarded manuscript that led to his arrest Thursday, police said.

Homicide detectives arrested Charles John Russ, 39, after reviewing the manuscripts a motel employee found in his trash can.

Russ was wanted in San Diego on charges of forgery and writing bad checks, and also is wanted for questioning in the killing of his wife, Pamela, said police spokesman David Steele.

"Apparently he's an aspiring writer. He wanted to forward these manuscripts to a publisher. I guess with the intent to publish them," Steele said. "It didn't outline the death, it just mentions after her death, this is what he did as a fugitive on the run."

Russ, recently featured on the television show "America's Most Wanted," used the alias Patrick Donovan and had been staying at a motel on Hollywood Beach, police said.

A few days ago, a motel employee was emptying the trash into a bin when he came across a sheaf of papers Russ had discarded, Steele said.

"He noticed some manuscripts in the garbage. It outlined what this gentleman Russ was doing as far as being a fugitive on the run after his wife's death," Steele said.

"He (the employee) thought it was quite interesting and because of the nature of it, he turned it over to police," Steele said.

Homicide detectives also were intrigued by the manuscript and checked their crime computers. On Tuesday, Sgt. Darron Castiglione learned that Russ was wanted in California, issued an alert and notified the FBI that Russ was in the area.

Officers spotted him walking along Hollywood Beach and arrested him at 4:27 a.m. Thursday, Steele said. Russ was transferred to the Broward County Jail, where he is awaiting extradition to California.

"There may be some poetic justice in all of this," said Mark Allen, Russ's brother-in-law, who lives in the San Diego area. "Yesterday (Wednesday) was my sister's birthday."

Steele said he did not know whether Russ had mailed other copies of the manuscript to a publisher, or whether he had used his real name in the manuscripts.

The body of Pamela Russ was found next to her Mercedes Benz in La Jolla, Calif., Feb. 1, 1987. Investigators concluded she had been run over by her own car and that the killer had fled on foot.

Russ, who owned a telecommunications company in Cardiff, left the San Diego area seven months later, after allegedly conning his mother-in-law, Ginger Allen, out of her life savings of $83,000.

Woman accused in attack

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - A woman who allegedly got out of her car and brandished a knife against another woman was charged with aggravated battery after allegedly stabbing the other woman with a boxcutter in Altamonte Springs Wednesday.

Burma Elaine Poole, 23, 124 Jackson St., Altamonte Springs, was arrested by Altamonte Springs police at the Gate gasoline station, State Road 436, where the attack reportedly occurred at about 2:40 p.m. Wednesday.

The victim Jacqueline Humphrey, 27, 506 Oak St., Altamonte Springs, suffered a very minor injury, police said. Bond for Poole is $2,000.

Two arrested on DUI charges

SANFORD - The following person faces a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

• Lawson Clark Dennis, 31, of 2401 Main St., Sanford, was arrested at 8:16 p.m. Thursday after his car was clocked traveling 80 mph on Interstate 4.

• Harry Fredrick Mead, 48, 8348 Orange Blvd., Sanford, was arrested at 11:25 p.m. Wednesday after he was found parked on the side of County Road 46-A, Lake Mary.

Investigation continues in triple fatal auto crash

By SUSAN LORREN
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD - A city police internal investigation continues today into the decision of a police sergeant to pursue a fleeing car into Orange County early Thursday that ended with the traffic deaths of two youngsters in that car and the driver of another vehicle.

The Florida Highway Patrol investigation into the head-on collision which occurred at 2:48 a.m. on state Road 50, west of Orlando, also continues.

A third occupant of the car that fled from Longwood, Jessica Wright, 14, of Longwood, remains in critical condition in Orlando Regional Medical Center.

The driver of the fleeing car, Italo Caffarena, 15, of Lake Mary, was dead at the scene, as was the other passenger in his car, Emily Goldsmith, 13, of Longwood.

The driver of the car that authorities said was struck head-on by Caffarena's car, Diane Wilson, 20, of Howey in the Hills, was also dead at scene. Her eight-month-old son Duovan, who was riding in a child restraint seat, sustained a broken leg, but was released from the hospital yesterday.

Caffarena, who only had a learner's permit, not a driver's license, had taken a his uncle's rental car without permission. Capt. John Cernia of the FHP said today. The three youngsters, Cernia said, had slipped out of their homes and had gone for a joy ride.

The chase began at about 2:30 a.m. when Longwood police Sgt. Wayne Roberts, who was driving west on State Road 434, signaled for Caffarena, who was driving east, to dim the bright lights of his car. When the lights didn't dim, the officer turned and initiated a traffic stop. Caffarena fled, leading the officer on a high-speed chase on U.S. Highway 17-92 to west State Road 50. The crash occurred when Caffarena's car traveling at 80 to 90 mph crossed the double centerline of the road and hit Wilson's eastbound car, authorities said. Wilson's car, Cernia said, was traveling at about 55 mph and neither driver had a chance to apply their brakes.

Goldsmith was an eighth grader at Milwee Middle School in Longwood, where Wright is in the second grade. Caffarena, who was born in Lima, Peru. He was a student at Bishop Moore High School.

Gas was plentiful despite forecasts

From staff and wire reports

NEW YORK - Drivers' apparent resistance to higher pump prices both nationally and in Seminole County, coupled with refineries operating at near peak capacity, have foiled forecasts of tight U.S. gasoline supplies and lines at service stations, oil industry experts said.

In the spring, industry leaders such as Exxon Corp. Chairman Lawrence Rawl, Phillips Petroleum Co. Chairman Pete Elias, and Texaco Inc. President James Kinnear were predicting a tight gasoline market this summer.

Buyers Up, a Ralph Nader consumer group, issued an early June report warning that unless there was an unprecedented increase in U.S. refinery production or imports, "gasoline shortages and consequent price gouging are a probability."

Gasoline prices traditionally rise during the summer driving season as demand rises and supplies tighten.

Instead there generally has been plenty of gasoline nationwide and prices at the pump have fallen about 5.5 cents a gallon since peaking for the year at an average $1.1843 a gallon in late May, according to the authoritative Lundberg Letter, which regularly surveys station prices.

Lundberg also says wholesale prices charged retailers have fallen on average 10.6 cents a gallon from their May highs.

Pump prices still are about 15 cents on average above where they were at the beginning of the year, the Los Angeles-based newsletter says.

In Orlando, unleaded self-service gas hovers at $1.03 per gallon, according to the American Automobile Association (AAA) in Daytona Beach, unleaded self-service gas is at $1.01 as of Aug. 22, they said.

Retail gasoline prices should continue to fall about a penny a gallon each month for the next several months, but probably will not return to their January level, said Tom Burns, manager of economics for Chevron Corp. in San Francisco.

"Refinery margins were too low. They're now coming back to a level approaching that of other manufacturing industries but are still too low to justify oil companies building new capacity," Burns said.

He said the rapid April price escalation at the pump of more than 10 cents a gallon following the March 24 Alaska oil spill "got the consumer's attention."

Officials warn of bogus gas tax refund offers

By J. MARK SANFELD

SANFORD - A spokesman for State Attorney Bob Butterworth warns Florida-licensed motorists against responding to a fraudulent gasoline tax refund offer from the state.

"They're phony," said Trisha Spillan, spokesman for the Florida Department of Legal Affairs. "The rebate is non-existent. Please disregard them."

The duplicated typewritten forms have been passed from hand to hand to mainly the elderly and those with low incomes. They state that if the recipient was a licensed Florida driver in each of the three years of 1976, 1977, 1978, then that person is eligible for a $75 refund for overpaid gasoline taxes from the "Capital Department of Legal Affairs."

Spillan said the attorney general's office has received at least 1 million of the forms, beginning in 1986. She said the refund has some basis in truth. Former Attorney General Jim Smith sued 12 independent gasoline companies in 1982, charging they conspired to overcharge gasoline taxes from motorists in 32 Central Florida counties including Seminole County, said Spillan.

The gas companies were subsequently convicted of the conspiracy, Spillan said. They were ordered to pay a total of $1 million to the motorists of the 32 counties, she said. However, the refunds were $20 per person, not $75, Spillan said.

Spillan said the deadline to apply for the refund passed on March 13, 1986. The refund was advertised in major newspapers through the Central Florida area, she said. After the deadline passed, Spillan said the state began receiving bundles of the forms.

Kelley's letter surprised area DOT official

By J. MARK SANFELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD - The acting district secretary of the Florida Department of Transportation said he was surprised to receive a letter from Seminole County commissioner Jennifer Kelley Thursday stating he was taking an unreasonable amount of time to produce documents for her.

Thomas Barry, acting secretary of the DOT District 5 that includes Seminole County, said from Tallahassee Thursday he was surprised by the tone of Kelley's letter written to him Aug. 22. Barry said he was not intentionally preventing her from seeing the file, but it had been misplaced and he has been unable to locate it.

"If and when the file is found, the commissioner will be the second person to know about it," Barry said. He said he is not trying to prevent Kelley from seeing the file, which may contain information affecting land owned by a relative. "That has not been alleged, nor is that close to the truth," Barry said.

The letter stated Kelley had been waiting for about two weeks to see the file "an amount of time I construe as reasonable for you to be able to produce Public Records. Furthermore, as a member of the Seminole County Expressway Authority I feel that your additional delay in producing these Public Records is unreasonable."

The letter prompted Seminole County commissioner Fred Streetman, chairman of the expressway authority, to call district DOT officials in DeLand Wednesday and apologize for any misconception the letter may have caused. Streetman said he wanted to assure DOT officials Kelley did represent the authority in making the statements.

Barry said the file, which contains information about the proposed widening of Interstate 4 in Seminole County, had been misplaced from the unlocked file room where it is normally stored. He said DOT district offices have been contacted by telephone and by memos in an effort to locate the file, but to no avail.

Barry said it is not uncommon for DOT employees to take a file out of the room without leaving behind a "sign-out" card. The person who took the file out may have left the file on his desk without realizing it when another task diverted his attention from it, Barry said.

Kelley and two associates, Bill Jacobs and Craig McNair, had spent about a week in DOT district offices in DeLand and Winter Park copying files, Barry said. Jacobs, a Winter Springs commissioner, is employed by Kelley's architectural firm as a title searcher, Kelley said. McNair, former county internal auditor, is a certified public accountant for the firm, Kelley said.

Local NAACP members to join Washington march

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN

SANFORD - Civil rights activists from Seminole County this weekend will join the Rev. Jesse Jackson and several thousand Florida and national members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for a march on Washington, D.C., protesting five Supreme Court decisions on minorities and women handed down this year.

Turner Clayton, Seminole County NAACP president, said local chapter members will join NAACP members from across the country for tomorrow's march at noon. The group left today from Ocala, where it met a caravan of Florida members.

Benjamin Hooks, NAACP national president, has compared this weekend's protest to the 1917 Silent March of civil rights activist W.E.B. DuBois in New York City. DuBois was followed by 5,000 adults and children who marched silently down Fifth Avenue protesting Jim Crow segregation laws, lynching and race riots in Waco, Tex., Memphis, Tenn., and East St. Louis.

Hooks called for the march July 13 during the NAACP annual convention in Detroit.

NAACP members will protest the Supreme Court decisions handed down during this session of the court on affirmative action, minority job set-asides and on-the-job harassment.

Is sky safe?

The rash of recent airliner crashes and emergencies has invariably been followed by a stock reassurance from the aviation industry and federal regulators: It is safer to fly today than ever before. While this assertion is statistically correct, there are certainly areas in which the safety record could — and should — be improved.

For example, the Federal Aviation Administration was taken by surprise with the sudden increase in maintenance problems affecting the nation's large fleet of aging jets. Now, some sticky questions are being asked about the failure of rear engines in jetliners, some with disastrous results. And no one disputes the growing shortage of experienced mechanics and the potential impact on safety.

Despite these concerns, the industry can point to statistics showing that the fatality rate during the 11 years since airline deregulation is half what it was for the 11 years before deregulation. Last year, in fact, was one of the safest years ever for scheduled U.S. airlines. A total of 285 passengers died in three accidents, 270 of them in the bomb explosion aboard a Pan Am Jet over Lockerbie, Scotland, in December.

By comparison, the National Transportation Safety Board records more than 45,000 highway deaths in the United States every year.

Still, public concern is growing in response to such chilling accidents as the recent crash in Sioux City, Iowa. The cause of that tragedy is still being investigated, but the earlier structural failure of a 19-year-old Aloha Airlines Boeing 737 drew attention to a major flaw in FAA airworthiness procedures.

Because of the danger of failure in jet engines, including the Sioux City crash that claimed 71 lives, other maintenance procedures may now also be scrutinized.

The lesson is that inspections and maintenance alone are not sufficient to keep jetliners airworthy indefinitely, as may be supposed. After a series of accidents suggesting that dangerous metal fatigue is occurring sooner and in more places than expected, the emphasis is on compulsory replacement of parts or repairs at stated intervals, even if there are no visible signs of wear or damage.

Yes, it is safer to fly now than ever before, so there is no need to fear air travel. But the aviation industry and the FAA have an obligation to keep improving standards until flying becomes as safe as it can be.

Forces of nature vs. Plymouth Rock

The news that Plymouth Rock is cracking up, the victim of wind and waves, is hardly surprising. Officials at the Massachusetts historical attraction seem to have a sound plan to repair the six-ton boulder.

Wind and sea have been pounding away at shore rocks since the Earth began, breaking them into smaller and smaller pieces and finally into sand. It is a natural process.

But Plymouth Rock, situated in Plymouth Harbor, is an important site in U.S. history. There, in 1620, the Pilgrims first set foot on the soil of their new homeland and began the progress that has brought America to its present prominence.

The rock first split in 1774 and was patched in 1880. But crude methods used at that time resulted in a visible crack in the rock that was never properly repaired. Modern methods will almost certainly yield a less-prominent, though better-minded, repair.

In recent years, rehabilitation and construction experts have worked hard to restore and refurbish such American monuments as the Statue of Liberty and the White House. Plymouth Rock may be quite a different matter, but its preservation is certainly in the best interests of history and of the country.

Warfare in new era hard to end

WASHINGTON — Guerrilla warfare has become the principal arena of armed conflict between communist and non-communist nations in the nuclear age, with terrible results for the nations in which these wars have been waged.

A principal lesson of these "wars of national liberation," as they are known in Marxist-Leninist doctrine, is that it is far easier for superpowers to start surrogate conflicts than to end them. The "Reagan Doctrine" of aiding anti-communist insurgencies helped force the Soviets out of Afghanistan, but did not end the brutal Afghan war. And despite U.S. and Soviet commitments to a peaceful resolution of the conflict in Cambodia, the settlement now in prospect could return elements of the genocidal Pol Pot regime to power.

In this hemisphere the legacy of the Reagan Doctrine is a lost war in Nicaragua. The beleaguered contras, now consigned to oblivion by agreement of Nicaragua's neighbors in Central America, were originally armed by the United States for the supposed purpose of pressuring the Sandinista government to cut off aid to the Marxist rebels in El Salvador. But the Nicaraguan "freedom fighters" quickly took on a life of their own, becoming the vortex of the Reagan administration's most controversial foreign policy.

Throughout the Reagan years, domestic political debate over the contras was dominated by competing mythologies that bore little relationship to military and political realities in Central America. The conservative myth was that the contras were "the moral equivalent of the Founding Fathers" and the legitimate heirs of the 1979 revolution that toppled the corrupt Somoza regime. The liberal myth was that the contras were murderous brigades who lacked any support other than that provided by the CIA.

The reality was less dramatic than the myths.

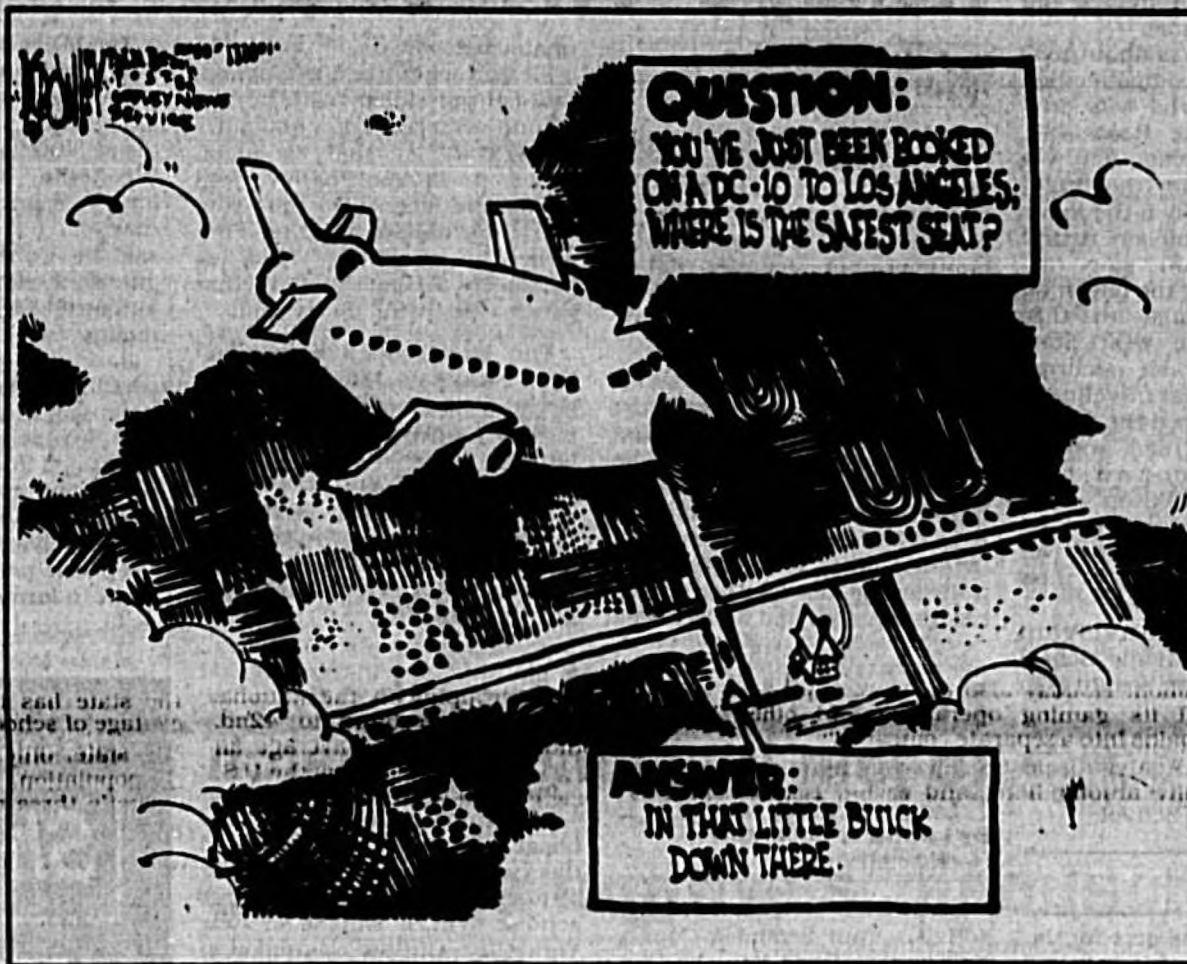

The legacy of the Reagan Doctrine is a lost war.

Many contra soldiers were genuine rebels with personal grievances against a Marxist regime that dishonored its democratic promises and was armed to the teeth by Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Both sides conducted crude propaganda campaigns in the United States, egged on by the conservative and liberal mythologists. Each accused the other of atrocities, and such human-rights groups as America's Watch documented atrocities on both sides. But some soldiers in all wars, including some American soldiers, commit atrocities, and the countervailing propaganda on this issue was not decisive. What was decisive was the cuckoo scheme of Ollie North and his friends to funnel profits from the Iran arms deal to the contras. The Iran-contras scandal turned the contras, through no particular fault of their own, from an unpopular cause into an indefensible one.

The presidents of the five Central American nations who met this month in the Honduran resort town of Tela did not kill off the contras. All they did was recognize the political reality that now prevails in the United States, where the Iran-contras affair soured whatever slim chance contra supporters may have had of rallying public opinion for the rebels.

FDA's generic drug control lax

WASHINGTON — Though the HUD scandal has captured the headlines, another holdover scandal from the Reagan era has the potential of causing far more damage to the average American: the Food and Drug Administration and generic drugs.

Generic drugs are chemical copies of brand-name pharmaceuticals whose patents have expired. There are currently some 8,000 of these cheaper alternatives to expensive drugs on the market. Generics now account for almost one-third of the multibillion-dollar prescription drug industry. Before a generic drug can be brought to market, it must pass a series of bioequivalence tests that show whether it is identical in composition and medical effect to the drug it imitates. Then, while it remains on the market, the generic-drug producer must periodically prove that the drug is being manufactured in a manner consistent with federal law and continues to be an effective copy of the original drug.

However, in a scandal that has slowly evolved over the past year, some generic-drug makers stand accused of cheating on bioequivalence tests to win FDA approval of marketing products different from what had been approved, and, in some cases, of bribing FDA officials to win product licenses. The FDA stands accused of laxity in its regulation of the generic drug industry, and of trying to sweep the whole thing under the carpet when the facts started to come out.

Rumors of problems in the FDA's generic-drug division began circulating more than a year ago. Investigators from Rep. John Dingell's (D-Mich.) House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation began trying to subpoena FDA records. They were opposed by the FDA's general counsel, Thomas Scarlett. But gradually they began unraveling a rather sordid tale.

Forced into action by the ongoing congressional probe, the FDA began its own investigation. While it still will not reveal all that it has found, certain things have been made public.

The agency admits that some FDA chemists and generic-drug reviewers have taken "illegal gratuities" — bureaucratiae for bribes — from generic-drug makers. Three have been indicted and two have already plead guilty. Other indictments are rumored to be forthcoming.

So far, the FDA has removed about a dozen generic products from the market. Included is a generic form of the anti-hypertensive drug Diazide, made by Vitarine Pharmaceuticals Inc. The company admitted cheating on the product's initial tests: It simply loaded the test capsules with the actual drug it was trying to copy.

Reportedly, several other generic-drug manufacturers are being investigated for using the same method to pass bioequivalence tests. Others are being investigated about whether they made high-quality, expensive test samples, only to market cheaper versions once the drug was approved.

FDA general counsel Scarlett was recently forced to resign after FDA Commissioner Frank Young refused to give him a vote of confidence. Young, head of FDA for the last five years, is also said to be in trouble. Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, Young's boss, seemed to make that clear when he recently ordered the FDA stripped of authority to conduct its own investigations of possible criminal matters.

One congressional investigator says that as far as he is concerned the FDA investigation points up a policy weakness that was widespread during the Reagan years:

"They believed government should get out of the regulation business. They believed that industry should effectively regulate itself, and that the government should only occasionally review the paperwork. That's what was happening here and in a dozen other Reagan regulatory agencies. We are only now starting to see the result."

So far, most of the drug companies accused of cheating are small. But sources say that at least 15 more are under investigation, including some of the biggest names in the generic-drug industry. Should they be found to have improperly brought drugs to market the entire industry would be placed under a cloud.

Dingell isn't sure the FDA should be trusted with the job. He noted, during a recent hearing, that we can "no longer be reasonably confident that the FDA is able to detect the entry of unsafe or ineffective generic drugs into the nation's pharmacies." Can the consumer trust generic drugs, and can it trust the federal agency that is supposedly regulating that industry? Billions of dollars, and the health of millions of Americans, are riding on the answer.

A scandal has slowly evolved over the past year.

Soviets keep quiet on space failures

STAR CITY, U.S.S.R. — The United States prides itself on running a safer space program than the Soviet Union, but one statistic mars the record. More American astronauts have died on the job than Soviet cosmonauts.

The Soviets are secretive about their failures, but on our recent trip to the cosmonaut training center, Star City, Soviet space officials took advantage of glances to speak candidly, if anonymously, about those failures.

So far, the United States has lost 10 astronauts — seven in the Challenger explosion in 1986 and three in a fatal fire on the launch pad in 1967. As soon as we have been able to determine, six Soviet cosmonauts have died in space flight or in training. It is possible that more died in the early days of the program and that their deaths were kept a secret even from the people who run the Soviet space program today.

This time line of deaths, disasters and near-misses was pieced together from intelligence sources. Soviet sources and author James Oberg, a Houston space engineer who is an expert on this subject:

● 1960 — More than 100 people (probably none of them cosmonauts) were killed when a rocket exploded on a launch pad in the Soviet Union, according to a classified Central Intelligence Agency report.

● March 23, 1961 — Cosmonaut Valentin Bondarenko was burned to death in a high-oxygen environment experiment. He accidentally dropped alcohol-soaked cotton on a hot plate.

● February 1968 — One of the original six cosmonauts, the "Sochol 6," stepped in front of a train during a drunken stupor and was killed. He had earlier been drummed out of the program for arrogance, and his face was carefully excised from official photos.

● April 23, 1967 — Commander Vladimir M. Komarov was killed when the main parachute harness on his capsule twisted, and the capsule crashed on re-entry. His mission had been plagued with problems. The Soviets sent Komarov up alone in a three-man Soyuz rocket. In early communications during the flight, Komarov could be heard shouting to his ground controllers, "Devil machine! Nothing I lay my hand on works!"

● March 27, 1968 — Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space, died while testing a MiG-15 jet fighter. His ashes, along with Komarov's, are buried in the Kremlin wall near the Lenin Mausoleum.

● January 1970 — Commander Pavel I. Belyayev died from an undisclosed condition that may have been related to his space flight five years earlier — possibly bleeding ulcers. "Probably he didn't get the proper treatment at the proper time. So that's why he died," one Soviet official admitted to us.

● June 30, 1971 — Three cosmonauts — Georgi Dobrovolsky, Vladislav Volkov and Victor Patsayev — died when their capsule re-entered the atmosphere after an otherwise successful mission to the Salyut space station. With no clue that anything was wrong, the helicopter recovery crew was shocked to open the capsule and find the cosmonauts dead.

● 1977 — Cosmonaut Yuri Romanenko accidentally floated out of his capsule, untethered, into space while cosmonaut Georgi Grechko was on a spacewalk. Grechko caught him before he floated away. Cosmonaut Alexander Serebrov told us that more international cooperation would make space safer for astronauts.

At least six Soviet cosmonauts have died in space flight or in training.

Poll

students and parents to choose which public school in their communities the students will attend. Thirty-one percent were opposed.

In contrast to previous polls that found most Americans wanted less federal influence in education, 69 percent of those surveyed said they support a required national curriculum, 70 percent back national achievement standards and 77 percent favor standardized national testing.

The study also found for the first time that the public favors, 68 percent to 44 percent, increasing the amount of time a student spends in school. But the authors cautioned that "no decisive majority has emerged" on the issue.

Eighty-three percent of those surveyed said more should be done to improve public schools in poor areas and 63 percent said they would pay higher taxes for that purpose.

"The public is more receptive to higher taxes. This is ... a major change," said Alec Gallup, co-author of the study and co-chairman of the Gallup Organization. "In the past, they almost invariably said 'no' to higher taxes."

Education Secretary Luro Cavasso hailed the poll as evidence Americans support the administration on choice, which he believes will force schools to improve so that they can keep their students.

"The president has been calling for it, I have been advocating it, and now it is clear that the American people overwhelmingly support it — a major restructuring of our education system, with school choice as the cornerstone," Cavasso declared.

But the National Education Association, the teachers' union that opposes many choice plans, pointed out the poll only asked about choice within a community and not within larger areas — such as a state — as many plans have called for.

Asked about the impact of choice, 21 percent of those polled said they believed it would improve all schools, 14 percent said it would hurt all schools and 51 percent said it would improve some and hurt others.

Choice was favored more strongly by people ages 18 to 29 and by non-whites and drew its weakest support from people 50 years and older.

For the fourth straight year, Americans said drug use was the major problem in their local schools, with 34 percent listing it first, followed by a lack of discipline, 19 percent, and a lack of proper financial support, 13 percent.

In grading their local public schools, 8 percent of those surveyed gave them an A; 35 percent, a B; 33 percent, C; 11 percent, D; 4 percent, F; and 9 percent did not know.

Asked to grade the nation's schools, 2 percent gave an A; 20 percent, B; 47 percent, C; 15 percent, D; 4 percent, F; and 12 percent did not know.

British

to four different areas of America to learn how planners here protect and preserve the environment in the face of rapid growth.

Young is a member of the House of Commons as a conservative Tory. He represents 100,000 people in West London. He was also a former undersecretary for the environment in the Thatcher government for five years. He and his wife are leading environmentalists in their country. Lady Young is responsible for the preservation of greenery in their village of Cookham located 30 miles west of London.

Young said while planning his overseas trip he wondered: "What is interesting to see on the environmental front?" The British Embassy led the Youngs to the International Sierra Club which found that some things happening in Lake Mary would be interesting to investigate.

A highlight of the day yesterday for Young was a presentation of the Lake Mary Boulevard Beautification program. Randall Morris, who spearheaded the concept and chaired the 12-member study committee responsible for its design, gave the presentation. Also providing information were Seminole County Planner Tony VanDerworp and Assistant Planner Dick Boyer.

With charts and graphics, Morris showed Young how Lake Mary Boulevard will be converted to a highly landscaped, clutter-free roadway in conjunction with its widening process from two lanes to four and six lanes expected to begin sometime this year and continue over the next 20 years. The plan is a joint effort of the cities of Lake Mary and Sanford and Seminole County through which the roadway runs.

Landowners of parcels abutting the corridor will need to comply with beautification standards if they plan to develop anywhere along the nearly eight-mile stretch from Markham Woods Road to Highway 17-82. Morris told Young that the cost will be under $2 million and that a one-cent "green penny" tax on fuel has been proposed by the county to fund it. It will cost a motorist who travels an average of 15,000 miles a year about $7.50 more, Morris said. About 7,000 to 10,000 trees, a combination of live oaks and "a variety of hardy trees which give a beautiful canopy effect" will be planted along Lake Mary Boulevard, signs will drop to 15 feet high, and buildings no higher than 35 feet must be built with a setback of from 40 to 60 feet. About 20 other roads in the county are targeted for the same beautification plan.

"In 20 years, the road will be spectacularly beautiful to drive down," Morris said.

While Young said the idea was an impressive one, because of more centralized planning in England, the approach to such a plan there would be entirely different.

"The British treasury is against hypothecation," he said. The question of "what can you afford" would most likely be asked before undertaking a plan as extensive as the one for Lake Mary Boulevard.

"This is so difficult to translate into British concepts. In England, what tends to happen is someone decides what is the high standard, and it's by these standards that a road gets widened," Young explained.

And because Britain does not have "strip centers" like here, Young said "to some extent, this question wouldn't arise" because aesthetics are already included in their planning.

Young said the idea of involving the landowners in the beautification process of a road "is an interesting one. You don't have the rights in England to do what you want with your land so the pressures are different. It's easier to plan and control things. We are 60 million people in an area a fraction of the size of Florida," he said.

The society here he said was "much freer, more open and prosperous." He also described the U.S. as more "money-driven."

"Money talks here," he said.

So far, Young said he was impressed by many of the environmental practices in Florida and elsewhere in the States.

He said he liked the way we recycle water and noted that in England, where "water shortages are not impacting on land use," there is no such thing as efficient.

"It's an interesting concept using different grades of potable water," he said.

Young said he and his wife, who have already visited Disney World, will take a trip down the Wekiva River to "look at wildlife."

They will be leaving on Wednesday.

However, Young said he wants to come back in several years to see what Lake Mary Boulevard will look like.

Dow sets all-time high

United Press International

NEW YORK — Stock market prices opened higher Friday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues, extending gains won in the previous session that catapulted the market yesterday to its highest closing levels in history.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which soared 56.53 points Thursday, was up 2.85 to 2737.49 shortly after the market opened today. Advances led declines 439-299 among the 1,230 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early turnover amounted to about 13,349,000 shares.

The stock market roared to its highest level in history Thursday as the Dow Jones industrial average surged 56.53 points to 2734.64 and shattered the previous record set two years ago.

Takeover news and firm bond prices powered the late-afternoon rally that drove other market indicators to all-time highs in the heaviest trading since mid-June.

The Dow's stunning close eclipsed the previous all-time high of 2722.42 set Aug. 25, 1987, which marked the apex of a five-year rally in stock prices.

Six weeks later, on Oct. 19, 1987, the Dow plummeted 508 points to 1738.74 for its largest point loss in history. The closely followed the crash in December 1987 gained nearly 1,000 points since that crash.

Most analysts doubt expect a recurrence of that collapse, but many expressed doubts whether stock prices would be able to hold onto their latest gains over the next few sessions.

In recent weeks, the Dow surpassed its previous record close during several trading sessions but retreated before the closing bell. Analysts said setting the historic high became a psychological block, which the market approached with caution before finally making it history.

"We saw a little nervousness heading into the new high, but there was no real giveback; and a push late in the day was all it took," said Trade Latimer, market analyst with Josephthal & Co.

Broader market indicators, most of which recorded all-time highs earlier this summer, also set new records. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 3.45 to 195.29 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 6.92 to 351.52. The price of an average share gained 66 cents.

Advances outpaced declines, 1,167 to 353, among the 1,989 issues traded. Volume swelled to 225,520,000 shares compared with 159,640,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Stock prices began to rise at the opening bell on news that Holiday Corp. had agreed to sell its Holiday Inns chain to British brewery and hotel conglomerate Bass PLC for $2.225 billion. Holiday also announced plans to spin off its gaming operations and other units (which are in separate companies).

Analysts said the takeover news sparked a rally among hotel and casino issues, which spilled over into the broader market.

$543.86 per person — the national average is $642.11 — ranking the state 41st in per capita spending for grade schools.

Using SAT scores and graduation rates to judge educational performance, the survey found Florida lacking, though Dye said achievement is not directly related to spending.

SAT scores recorded by Florida students have declined since 1972, dropping in the national ranking from 22nd to 42nd. Students, on average, average an SAT score of 980, below the U.S. average of 904.

The high school graduation rate in Florida — 58.6 percent, adjusted for migration — puts the state dead last in the nation. The national graduation rate is 71.1 percent.

Florida's colleges are also not measuring up to other states in graduating students. The state ranks 48th in the number of bachelor's degrees conferred per 1,000 population, 44th in conferring of master's degrees, and 37th in conferring of doctorates.

Dye said he thinks the large number of service jobs in Florida may be a cause for students dropping out. High schools, which tend to focus on college-bound students, might retain potential dropouts by emphasizing vocational and technical education, he said.

Florida is one of the fastest-growing states and ranks seventh among the 50 states in school-age population. But that ranking is misleading because the state has the smallest percentage of school-age children of any state, only 15.7 percent of the population.

That's three points below the national average of 18.7 percent and well below top-ranked Utah, where 28.5 percent of residents are ages five to 17.

The low percentage of schoolchildren helped Florida to rise from 37th in 1982 to 16th in 1986 in per-pupil allocations — $4,353 per pupil, slightly above the national average of $4,237.

The state's pupil-to-teacher ratio, 16.6 to 1, also beats the national average of 17.4.

In higher education, Florida ranks sixth in the nation in both percentage of college-age residents (ages 18-24) and in enrollment, yet it ranks 50th in dollars allocated for each state college student — $4,095.50. Nationally, the average is $5,812.70.

helicopters are pitted against automobiles as a sort of competition. "The extent of highway congestion and ground trip times often directly affect the level of rotorcraft activity in an urban area," the design report reads.

The study will be conducted with a $64,478 FAA grant, along with money from DOT and the Orlando Metropolitan Planning Council, who is sponsoring the survey.

The study got underway Friday with the steering committee's first meeting in Orlando. The committee members were appointed to represent agencies interested in helicopter activity, to review the engineer's technical report, to make recommendations to OMPC and to provide technical input for the study, said Steve Berardo, Hoyle Tanner manager of aviation planning and manager of the study.

Jitters

"It might even be a good idea to pretend you are the school bus and drive the route they'll take so they'll feel comfortable," Krogh said. "The more the child knows about what's coming up, the less he or she will have to fear."

It is also a good idea to have the children meet their teachers before school starts.

Whether a parent should spend the first few class hours or days with their child depends on the parent, Hayes said.

"If the parent is anxious, the child will pick up on that and have a hard time focusing on the teacher and what's going on in the classroom; in that case, it's probably better for the parent to leave," Hayes said.

Assuring children that teachers are in touch with parents also calms fears, Hayes said, and open houses and other parent-teacher-student get-togethers can be effective in forging a sense of belonging to the school.

New measures against Noriega weighed

WASHINGTON — The United States compared the Panamanian regime of Gen. Manuel Noriega to Adolf Hitler and said Noriega will soon become an international "outlaw."

American officials also hinted Thursday they were prepared to act unilaterally to topple Noriega after the Organization of American States failed to negotiate the strongman's removal from power in Panama.

A four-member commission appointed by the OAS foreign ministers reported Wednesday it had not been able, in three months, to mediate the terms under which Panama would return to civilian democratic rule.

The OAS foreign ministers ended their marathon strategy session early Thursday morning. The U.S. representative, deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, warned that if Noriega does not relinquish power by Sept. 1, the date set by the Panamanian constitution, "Then the Noriega regime will have declared itself to be an outlaw among civilized nations and we should treat it accordingly."

Eagleburger said every OAS member nation "has the obligation to isolate this outlaw regime." He did not suggest any specific actions, although U.S. officials talked earlier of further tightening the existing economic embargo as a first step.

Accusing Noriega of giving safe haven to drug traffickers, the laundering of drug money and permitting his country to be used as a cocaine transshipment point, Eagleburger compared Noriega to Hitler.

FDA criticized on generic drugs

WASHINGTON — Flaws in the Food and Drug Administration crippled its regulation of the generic drug industry and "could deprive the public of competitively priced drugs," an inspector general's report said.

In a report prepared at the request of Congress and the FDA, Health and Human Services Department Inspector General Richard Kusserow said his investigators found serious weaknesses in the operation of the FDA that allowed drug companies to obtain special treatment.

"The generic drug approval process depended in large measure on the 'honor system' ... investigations to date have demonstrated that this can no longer be relied upon. Increased surveillance and independent testing is necessary," an 11-page report said Thursday.

The problems cited include failure to rotate companies' drug applications among FDA reviewers and lack of a quality control system to ensure drug firms receive equitable treatment.

"Internal control weakness significantly impairs FDA's mission of assuring a fair generic drug review process, allows employees involved in the process to violate ... standards of conduct (and) could deprive the public of competitively priced drugs," the inspector general warned.

Study documents acid rain harm

WASHINGTON — Reducing industrial sulfur emissions would help restore Northeast lakes damaged by acid rain and would prevent impairment of waterways in the southern Appalachian Mountains, federal researchers said.

The Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday a study of 3,200 Northeast lakes found that cutting sulfur emissions by 30 percent in the next 50 years would roughly halve the number of "dead" lakes — those too acidic to support aquatic life — and decrease greatly the number susceptible to periodic damage.

In a similar study of 1,200 southern Appalachian streams, the EPA concluded none is acidic now but 129 probably would suffer damage if current sulfur emission levels remain the same in the next 50 years. Another 203 streams probably would become vulnerable to damage under that scenario.

Preliminary analyses of streams in the mid-Appalachian region — Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia — indicated acid rain damage will spread and probably at a faster pace than in the southern Appalachians, the EPA said.

Chlorine cloud forces evacuations

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A cloud of toxic chlorine from a sewage treatment plant injured four people late Thursday and forced police to evacuate residents of 20 homes and temporarily close about five miles of Interstate 95.

A ruptured plastic pipe caused the chemical leak at the Alexandria Waste Water Treatment Plant shortly after 10 p.m., said Alexandria Fire Department spokeswoman Jane Davidson.

The chlorine spilling from the pipe quickly turned to vapor and created a toxic cloud that forced authorities to evacuate residents from about 20 nearby rowhouses in the city's Old Town section, Davidson said.

PTL leader gets 8 years

United Press International

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Lawyers for Richard Dortch, once second only to Jim Bakker at PTL, told a federal judge that the "glitter, glamour, glibness and greed" made him think it was permissible to fleece the faithful at PTL.

But U.S. District Judge Robert Potter — dubbed "Maximum Bob" in Charlotte — rejected defense requests to sentence Dortch to no more than six months in prison for his role in a series of money-raising schemes at PTL.

"My daddy used to say, 'There's always some good in the worst of men and some bad in the best of men,'" Potter said. "And Mr. Dortch fits that bill. He has committed a fraud and a rather large fraud at that."

"Mr. Dortch," the judge added, "I think you ought to serve some time."

Dortch faced up to 120 years in prison before he turned state's evidence two weeks ago, agreeing to testify against Bakker in exchange for a lenient sentence. He was ordered to serve two consecutive four-year terms and pay $300,000 in fines.

Dortch's lawyer, Bill Diehl, argued told the judge his client was as much a victim of Bakker's out-of-control spending as anyone else.

"(Dortch) went there to do good and got caught up in the four G's — glitter, glamour, glibness and greed," Diehl said. "He got blinded by the television camera, by having people at his beck and call, by having cars always waiting to take him somewhere."

Once a respected leader in the Assemblies of God church, Dortch left his position as Illinois superintendent in October 1983 to join Bakker at PTL.

A month later, the two men began selling lifetime partnerships at PTL, promising anyone who gave the ministry $1,000 four days and three nights of lodging per year for life in an alcohol-free, tobacco-free setting.

The partnership sales continued for 3 1/2 years, raising $158 million which was illegally put into the general fund, from which both men reaped more than $4 million in salaries and bonuses, the government contends.

But PTL collapsed after Bakker was forced out in March 1987 over his one-time fling with church secretary Jessica Hahn. She threatened the ministry with a $12 million lawsuit, and Dortch diverted $265,000 in ministry funds to keep her quiet.

Diehl conceded that Dortch acted unwisely, especially when it came to proposing bonuses at a time when PTL was bordering on financial collapse. But he said Dortch is contrite over his part in the PTL scandal.

"You see here a man who is not blaming his problems on anyone else — not blaming it on Satan and the devil and everyone else," Diehl said. "He's not saying, 'The devil's out to get me.'"

Voyager about to end its mission

United Press International

PASADENA, Calif. — Fulfilling a dream, the Voyager 2 probe zoomed past the ringed planet Neptune late Thursday and sailed on to a long-awaited flyby of its icy moon Triton today, closing out a once-in-a-lifetime grand tour of the outer solar system.

Twelve years and 2.7 billion miles from Earth, the aging spacecraft raced a scant 3,000 miles over Neptune's frigid cloudtops at 8:56 p.m. PDT Thursday, plunging over the north polar region and dropping behind the planet as seen from Earth. Voyager 2 hit a top speed of about 61,150 mph along the way.

Fifty-five minutes later, the spacecraft sailed back into view, on time and on course for a dramatic flyby of Triton, an exotic moon with a transparent atmosphere and a surface that may feature glaciers of frozen natural gas.

But because of Neptune's vast distance, changes in the probe's radio signals confirming the Neptune flyby did not reach flight controllers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory until 1:02 a.m. PDT Friday — four hours and six minutes after they left Voyager 2 at a speed of 186,000 miles per second.

The daring, low-altitude encounter was the fourth and final planetary flyby in Voyager 2's epic tour of the outer solar system, putting the spacecraft closer to Neptune than it has been to any planet since launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Aug. 20, 1977.

Four hours out of step with actual events, scientists were receiving radio data from Voyager 2's passage behind Neptune even as the spacecraft was making its closest approach to the strange moon Triton, flying along a trajectory designed to carry it within 24,000 miles of the pinkish satellite.

"I think of this as the culmination of perhaps the greatest journey of exploration in this century," said Bruce Murray, former director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. "It's certainly setting a high-water mark in American achievement."

By flying so close to the icy blue ball of gas, Voyager 2 was able to use Neptune's gravity to bend its trajectory southward, over the north pole and behind the planet as viewed from Earth. That set up a flyby of the mysterious moon Triton five hours after the close encounter.

Drug kings declare war on Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia - Drug-financed hit squads fighting a "total war" against the government blew up political offices and set fire to politicians' houses to prevent the extradition of cocaine kings to the United States for trial.

The so-called "Extraditables" commando group claimed responsibility for the wave of terror in a statement delivered to the Colombian news media Thursday and warned of further attacks against a wide range of targets.

"We declare total war on the government, on the industrial and political oligarchy, on journalists who have attacked and abused us, on judges who have sold out to the government, on extraditing magistrates, on the presidents of trade unions and on all who have attacked us," the statement said.

The attacks represented the first reprisals by drug traffickers since last Friday, when President Virgilio Barco promised to extradite the leaders of narcotics rings to the United States, where many of them face trial for drug offenses.

In New York, meanwhile, federal prosecutors indicted suspected Medellin cartel kingpin Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha and eight others Thursday on heroin trafficking and money-laundering charges. Five suspects were in custody in New York, but Gacha and the others are believed hiding in Colombia.

Gacha, already indicted in New York and Florida, is among 12 suspected traffickers Washington has asked Bogota to extradite. He is alleged to have placed bounties on the heads of New York Mayor Edward Koch and Rudolph Giuliani, who was the U.S. attorney at the time of the threat.

Colombian authorities have arrested thousands of suspected drug traffickers and confiscated their property in a sweeping crackdown after the slayings last week of a superior court judge, a police chief and a leading presidential candidate, all of whom had taken a stand against drug trafficking in Colombia, the source of most of the cocaine consumed in the United States.

Minister of Defense Gen. Oscar Botero said Colombia would "meet the challenge of the cocaine terrorists," indicating that the government would not back down from its pledge to root out and extradite drug cartel leaders.

The government also released the names of 11 people it described as British or Israeli mercenaries who allegedly were hired as instructors for drug-financed commando units or right-wing death squads.

The Extraditables, described by police as an organization of hit squads trained and financed by the drug cartels, previously have claimed the slayings of many judges, police officers and journalists, including Justice Minister Rodrigo Lara Bonilla in 1984 and Attorney General Carlos Mauro Hoyon in 1988.

Most of Thursday's attacks were in Medellin, a provincial capital 170 miles north of Bogota and home of the world's largest cocaine cartel, according to U.S. drug officials.

Police said a bomb exploded Thursday in the offices of opposition Social Conservative Party, killing passer-by Oscar Marin, 32.

Soviets congratulate Mazowiecki

MOSCOW - The Soviet government congratulated Solidarity activist Lech Mazowiecki on his confirmation as Poland's prime minister, expressing confidence the Warsaw Pact allies will continue their "traditional relations of friendship."

Mazowiecki, in an interview published in the official Soviet government newspaper Izvestia, said the Poles "remain faithful to allied commitments stemming from our membership in the Warsaw Pact organization."

Ethnic strikes spread in Soviet Moldavia

MOSCOW - A 4-day-old strike by ethnic Russians and Ukrainians in Soviet Moldavia spread as workers in more than 50 factories joined strikers already protesting a proposed law requiring they study the Moldavian language.

The strike in Moldavia, a small republic between Romania and the Ukraine in the southwestern Soviet Union, is the latest in a series of recent labor protests by Soviet workers emboldened by President Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms.

Opposition leader in Korea indicted

SEOUL, South Korea - The Seoul District Prosecutor's Office indicted opposition leader Kim Dae Jung today in connection with a controversial trip to North Korea by a member of his Party for Peace and Democracy.

Kim was charged with violating the National Security Law by not reporting to authorities about the secret North Korean visit by Suh Kyong-won, who is under arrest and indictment on spy charges.

French ships reach Lebanon

United Press International

BEIRUT, LEBANON - French warships remained far off the Lebanese coast today after slowing their advance in the face of Moslem threats to fire on the fleet and stage reprisal attacks in Paris.

The warships cruised less than 200 miles from the Lebanese coast, far out of range of hostile Syrian and Moslem militia artillery.

The Syrian-backed Moslem forces have threatened to fire on the French ships if the naval force intervenes to help Christian forces in Lebanon's civil war.

Meanwhile, fierce overnight clashes were reported between Christian and Syrian-backed forces along Beirut's 3-mile-long demarcation line.

The fighting with tanks, mortars, rockets and machine guns erupted after midnight and continued until sunrise Friday, police said. Several shells crashed into residential areas close to the "green line" that divides the capital into Moslem and Christian halves.

Police said radar-equipped Syrian artillery positioned in west Beirut also pounded three Christian sea outlets north of Beirut, drawing Christian fire in retaliation.

There were no immediate reports of casualties on the latest fighting, police said. At least 705 people have been killed since the current round of violence broke out last March.

The shelling coincided with the arrival in Beirut of an eight-member delegation from the European Economic Community to evaluate the emergency aid needs of the Lebanese population.

The team, which will be led by the French ambassador to Beirut Rene Ala, includes representatives from Spain, Italy, Belgium, Greece and the Brussels-based European Commission as well as two French experts.

The delegation is scheduled to meet with the country's Christian and Moslem officials.

In Paris Thursday, French Defense Minister Jean Pierre Chevenement announced a reduction in the eight-ship French force, saying a destroyer and an oil tanker were being relieved of duty and a frigate was being pulled back. The move left the aircraft carrier Foch, an oil tanker, two frigates and a landing ship stationed off the coast of Lebanon.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Blyleven wins 10th straight

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bert Blyleven hurled a four-hit shutout to earn his 10th straight victory Thursday night, leading the California Angels to a 5-0 triumph over Kansas City that snapped the Royals nine-game winning streak.

Rookie John Orton collected his first three major league hits and drove home his first three runs, with a bases-loaded double that highlighted a four-run fourth inning.

The victory, coupled with Oakland's 6-2 loss to the Texas Rangers Thursday, moved the Angels within 2 games of the Athletics in the American League West, Kansas City, who had won the first three games of the series, are 4 1/2 games out of first place.

In other action Thursday Minnesota downed Chicago 6-4, Cleveland clubbed Seattle 5-2, Toronto ripped Detroit 11-3, Texas tripped Oakland 6-2, and New York split with Baltimore, winning 5-1 in the opener while Baltimore took a 9-2 decision in the nightcap.

COLLEGE HOOPS

Valvano may soon know fate

RALEIGH, N.C. — Jim Valvano's future as basketball coach and athletic director at North Carolina State may be clarified Friday.

In separate meetings Friday, the University of North Carolina Board of Governors will hear the report of a six-month investigation into Valvano's program, then the N.C. State Board of Trustees will discuss that report and recommendations from UNC President C.D. Spangler Jr.

Valvano, who has been basketball coach since 1980 and athletic director since 1986, is at the center of an eight-month controversy arising from allegations of corruption and academic abuse in the book "Personal Fouls."

Spangler, who appointed the special committee that investigated the allegations, is expected to suggest or perhaps ask that Valvano resign his position as athletic director. It is considered doubtful Spangler would also request Valvano be dismissed as coach.

IN COURT

Edwards pleads no contest

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Jay Edwards, a former All-America basketball player at Indiana University, pleaded guilty Thursday to one count of misdemeanor battery against a female college student.

Edwards, 20, had been charged with two counts of battery for allegedly striking Beth Ann Irish, 20, of Indianapolis, during a party in April.

In a plea agreement, Edwards accepted a one-year probation from Monroe Superior Court Judge Kenneth Todd. The other charge was dropped.

During sentencing, Todd urged Edwards to "cultivate a little self-restraint" in his life, to which Edwards replied, "Yes, sir."

Todd also ordered Edwards to pay court costs and $70 in medical costs.

Hearings on the case were delayed three times, and a trial had been set for Sept. 21.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Magrane mows down Braves

ATLANTA — Joe Magrane tossed a three-hitter for his sixth straight victory and Pedro Guerrero homered and drove in three runs Thursday to lift the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Magrane, 17-7, struck out five and did not issue a walk.

Tom Glavine, 12-7, took the loss allowing seven hits in 7 1/3 innings, walking two and striking out three.

Atlanta jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the second. With two out, Tommy Gregg singled and scored when Jody Davis doubled down the right-field line.

St. Louis evened it 1-1 in the fifth. Terry Pendleton led off with a single and went to third on a single by Jose Oquendo. Pendleton scored when Tony Pena grounded into a double play.

In the only other National League game Thursday, Pittsburgh downed Houston 3-2 in 14 innings.

Rebels take indoor title

16-and-Under tournament next for 14-and-Under team

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

The Rebels, a 14-and-Under indoor soccer team, won the championship in its age division at the American Soccer Center last week with a 4-1 victory over the Seminole Chargers.

Both teams came into the showdown with identical 8-1 records.

Now, after winning the league title, Coach Mark Keymont and Assistant Coach Earl Nellis have concentrated the team's effort on preparing for high school play.

Keymont, who earned high school All-American honors while playing for Bishop Moore before playing at the University of Tampa, will take the team to Melbourne next weekend to participate in a 16-and-Under tournament.

"We have a bunch of talented athletes," assistant coach Earl Nellis said. "We don't expect to win too many games in the 16-and-Under tournaments. We're really playing so the players can gain experience before they enter high school."

Still, the coaches feel the team will definitely be a very competitive unit when they take the field this weekend.

"It's not going to be a cakewalk for a team to beat us," Nellis said. "If you do beat us, you must earn it. The finals are Monday for this tournament and we hope to still be playing."

Nellis hopes the experience will pay off for the team members and help them as they continue their careers in high school and possibly on through college.

"For the players to get any kind of notoriety, they must play well in high school," Nellis said. "That's what club soccer is all about, helping the athletes improve their talents until they get to the high school level."

The team is made up of players from the Altamonte Springs, Longwood and Winter Springs areas. The players are Daniel Baylor, Ronnie Dager, Ryan Fleischer, Jason Hackworth, Mike Johnston, Ian McTigue, Dustin Meredith, Scott Powalisz, Alex Ryan, Kevin Strada, Lars Tedamanson, Vinnie Perotti, Shaun MacKenzie, Paul McKeby, Jeff Thornton and Joe Schuyler.

Johnston and Hackworth led the way offensively in the victory over the Chargers with Powalisz, Thornton and Strada playing well on the defensive end. McTigue was the keeper, allowing just one goal.

"They are a very, very competitive team," Nellis said. "That's why we moved them up in level of play so they could improve even more."

Going head to head

A college coach once said, "Football is not a contact sport, it's a collision sport." Lake Brantley High School currently has one of the county's most highly regarded practitioners of this "collision sport" in senior defensive end David Swan (left). On Wednesday, Swan and teammate Jason Vantek (right) had a chance to get together to hone their skills a bit.

Bucs sign Igwebuike

United Press International

TAMPA — Kicker Donald Igwebuike ended a 40-day holdout Thursday by signing a two-year contract with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Tampa Bay's all-time leading scorer was seeking a raise from $170,000 to $300,000 per season and the Buccaneers had been offering $275,000. Igwebuike, who has never missed in 30 career field goal attempts from 34 yards or less, won three games with last minute kicks in 1988.

"I'm glad it's all over," said the 28-year-old Nigerian, who converted 19 of 25 field goal attempts last year. "It was really hard for me to sit out because the team is finally kicking butt and I wasn't part of it."

The Buccaneers, who won their first two exhibition games by a combined margin of 68-23, have two holdouts remaining. Top draft choice Broderick Thomas, an All-American linbacker from Nebraska, is still unsigned and veteran defensive end Ron Holmes remains out of camp and has asked to be traded.

The Buccaneers also signed a wide receiver Thursday, adding second-year pro Everett Gay after he was waived by Dallas. Gay caught 15 passes for 203 yards and

Winter diamond leagues set registration dates

From staff reports

Now that the youth baseball season is finally over, it's time for the youth winter baseball season.

Both the Seminole and West Seminole Pony leagues will be registering players this Saturday for their winter instructional leagues. The Seminole Softball Club will be registering players for its winter program on Sept. 2 and 6.

● Seminole Pony League: Registration will be Saturday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Five Points Complex on State Road 419, just east of U.S. 17-92. Play will be offered in all divisions from Pinto (7 and 8 year olds) through Colt (15 and 16).

The registration fee is $35 and, for families with more than one player, $30 for each additional child. Any player new to the league must bring proof of age (a birth certificate). Also, a parent or legal guardian must be present.

For more information call 323-5570.

● West Seminole Pony League: Registration will be available between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the West Seminole Pony Complex off State Road 436 in Longwood on two dates, tomorrow, Aug. 26, and again on Saturday, Sept. 9. Players between the ages of 5 and 14 are invited to participate.

Players new to the league must pay a $45 registration while returning players will pay $30. A birth certificate is not required for the winter instructional league, but a parent or legal guardian should be present when registering.

For more information, call league treasurer Terry Butler at 788-7489.

● Softball players who want to participate in the Seminole Softball Club's winter instructional program can register on Sept. 2 between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. or on Sept. 6 between 6 and 8 p.m. Registration will take place at the softball complex on State Road 419.

Registration is open for girls between the ages of 6 and 19. The fee is $30 and proof of age is required. Again, a parent or legal guardian should be present when registering.

The Seminole Softball Club's winter season begins play on Sept. 16.

National reactions vary over Rose being banned from baseball for life

United Press International

As he has done so many times over the years, Pete Rose had America talking baseball Thursday.

From Manhattan sidewalks not far from where Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti announced the ban, to the site of the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa., to major-league ballparks across the country, to radio talk shows everywhere.

Only this time, the subject was not so much about barreling slides into home plate as it was about justice and gambling, bookmakers and tax evasion, drugs and rehabilitation.

"I think it's a sad day for Pete and for baseball," said Larry Doughty, Pittsburgh Pirates senior vice president and general manager of baseball operations. "And I'm sure that since he and the commissioner reached a compromise agreement that it will work out best in the long run."

Former baseball executive Buzzie Bavasi told San Diego radio station KSDO punishment was called for.

"When it comes to baseball, I'm a purist," he said. "Pete Rose is a young man who knows the rules of baseball better than anyone. It seems to me he did bet on the Reds and the commissioner had no alternative but to suspend him."

"The integrity of the game has never been a problem to me; there may have been a problem with the integrity of Pete Rose. He didn't throw any game that I know of, but he made bets on baseball and he should face the consequences."

Rose found more compassion from a 77-year-

"He's doing the same thing a lot of people do," the man said. "We have lottery tickets, legalized gambling. He didn't fix any games."

Attending the Little League World Series in Pennsylvania were members of the Cincinnati Reds — past and present.

"It's a sad day for baseball and for Pete," said Hall of Fame catcher Johnny Bench, who played with Rose on the Reds' great teams of the 1970s. "Pete feels in his heart that he will be reinstated."

Added Chris Sabo, the Reds injured third baseman: "He broke a rule and the rule was there," he said. "The team will be happy that the thing is over with."

Reds outfielder Paul O'Neill was making a promotional appearance in a clothing store in Lexington, Ky.

"I was pretty surprised that it came on so quickly after all that has happened," he said. "Everyone is sad that someone of Pete's stature is gone from baseball."

"Everyone is saying now that he won't get reinstated, but a year's time can mend a lot of wounds. In a year's time, everyone will be able to look at this thing a lot better."

Yankees pitcher Dave Lillfont said Rose did not receive a fair shake.

"Guys who are repeatedly arrested for drugs or are even first-time offenders, they get a slap on the wrist," he said before Thursday night's game with Baltimore at Yankee Stadium. "This guy didn't get any warnings and he's banned for life."

Hikma comes alive to upset Mickelson

United Press International

ANDOVER, Pa. — Ted Hikma, who claimed one of the last spots in the match-play field in a playoff early Thursday, came back later to upset Phil Mickelson in the 69th U.S. Amateur golf championship. Hikma, 23, of Renton, Wash., who tied for 56th after two days of stroke play and was one of 34 players vying for 10 spots in the field of 64, defeated Mickelson, the second seed, 3 and 2 at Merion Golf Club.

Edgman O'Connell of Ireland, who finished one shot ahead of Mickelson to lead the field after stroke play, had to come from behind after 14 holes to advance, defeating Tim Jackson of Memphis, Tenn., 3-up.

In another match, Danny Yates of Atlanta, who lost in last year's final to Eric Meeks, defeated Buddy Alexander of Gainesville, Fla., the 1986 winner, 4 and 2.

Two-time Amateur champion Jay Sigel of Berwyn, Pa., defeated Dave Cunningham of Michigan City, Ind., 3 and 1, and Andrew Hare of England ousted Darren Veitch, a freshman with the Toronto Maple Leafs, 5 and 3.

Hikma, who recently graduated from the University of Washington, won the first two holes and never trailed in his match against Mickelson, 19, of San Diego, a member of the U.S. Walker Cup team that lost to the Great Britain-Irish squad last week.

Record round gives Hayes one-stroke lead

United Press International

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Mark Hayes teed off seven birdies and an eagle to finish with a record-tying 5-under-par 63 Thursday and a one-shot lead in the $500,000 Chattanooga Classic.

Brad Faxon, the 1986 Chattanooga champion, was second at 7-under 65 at the par-70, 6,640-yard Valleybrook Golf and Country Club. Both Hayes and Faxon played in the morning, before a series of thunderstorms interrupted play in the afternoon.

Play was halted three times in the afternoon for a total of 3 1/2 hours before the round finally was suspended. A total of 58 players remained on the course when play was called for the day.

"I hit it real good on the range and hit good shots at (Nos.) 1 and 2, but I was 1-over and had to make an 8-footer for par at No. 3," Hayes said. "The putt on the third hole didn't ignite me, but it did put out the fire."

The eagle at the 501-yard, par-5 17th hole enabled Hayes to tie the scoring mark, held jointly by Robert Thompson (1987), Faxon (1986), Tommy Armour III (1986) and Greg Twiggs (1984).

Faxon set his record the same year he set the four-day record with a 19-under-par 281.

Hayes twice put together a string of birdies, four out of five from Nos. 5 through 9 and three straight at Nos. 12 through 14.

"Today, I putted better than I used to," said Hayes, the 1977 Tournament Players champion. "When you're putting bad month after month you want to quit. It has been weak point over the years."

Hayes tied for 56th after two days of stroke play and was one of 34 players vying for 10 spots in the field of 64, defeated Mickelson, the second seed, 3 and 2 at Merion Golf Club.

Edgman O'Connell of Ireland, who finished one shot ahead of Mickelson to lead the field after stroke play, had to come from behind after 14 holes to advance, defeating Tim Jackson of Memphis, Tenn., 3-up.

King, Jones fire 6-under in LPGA opening round

United Press International

BUFORD, Ga. — U.S. Women's Open champion Betsy King sank a 25-foot birdie putt on the final hole Thursday for a 6-under-par 66 and a first-round tie with defending champion Rosie Jones in the women's World Championship.

King, who has won five LPGA Tour victories and a record $626,000 so far this year, and Jones, who has yet to win this year after three 1988 triumphs, played together in the first of eight twosomes in the select 16-player field.

Jones held a 6-under-par lead after the par-5 16th hole, where she needed only to tap in a 1-foot birdie putt. But King got a share of the lead back at No. 18 when she ran in her birdie.

The two wound up four strokes ahead of their nearest pursuers — Patti Rizzo, Patty Sheehan, Beth Daniel, Colleen Walker, France's Marie-Laure de Lorenzi and Britain's Laura Davies. Japan's Hiromi Kobayashi, who played the back side in 5-under after turning in a score of 4-over heading out, and Jane Geddes were another stroke back at 71.

Rounding out the scoring in the select field of the world's top lady golfers were LPGA champion Nancy Lopez and Juli Inkster at even-par 72. Sherri Turner and Penny Hammel at 73, Pat Bradley at 74 and Tammie Green at 75.

a touchdown with the Cowboys last year.

John Carney, who replaced an injured Igwebulke for the final month of 1988, has been kicking in the pre-season for Tampa Bay, converting 4 of 6 field goal attempts and all eight extra point tries.

"Iggy worth $275,000 or $300,000? That's not for me to say," said Coach Ray Perkins, who kept in contact with Igwebulke throughout the holdout. "It depends on what he can do for you. If your kicker can kick it out of the end zone every time and is pretty accurate on short and long field goals, he may be worth more."

Perkins has been critical of Igwebulke's short kickoffs in the past and has not ruled out the possibility of keeping two kickers.

"I know he was a good kicker last year, but kickers aren't like football players," Perkins said. "One year he can do real well and the next year he stinks out the place. I'm not saying Iggy's going to do that, but kickers can vary that much."

IN BRIEF

Computer drawing to be held

Two Tandy 1000 HX computers will be presented to the winner of the "Look Smart, Be Smart" drawing to take place at Altamonte Mall at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 26. One computer will be given to the school of the winner's choice, and the other will be his to keep.

The drawing is being sponsored by Tandy, the Altamonte Mall Merchants Association, the National School Volunteers Program and Dividends to recognize those who volunteer time and effort for children's sake.

Anyone is eligible for the prizes, said Maria Savanick, administrative assistant at Altamonte Mall. She said one may enter the drawing at the mall's information booth up to noon Saturday, and Dividends will have its own information booth set up.

Race open to rafters, vendors, exhibitors

Reservations are being taken for those interested in exhibiting or selling food at the "anything-but-floats" River Raft Race, to be sponsored by the DeLand Fireman's Association on Sept. 16. Contact the Mainstreet DeLand Association at 904-738-0849.

Rafters should contact Mike Bailey or Roger Ryle at 904-738-5915, ext. 2863, for entry packets and details.

Activities will begin on the St. Johns River in the morning at Quail Hollow, winding up with a street party and awards presentation in downtown DeLand. An estimated 15,000 people attended last year's raft race.

Jazz guitarist taking center stage

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — What? A high-quality jazz band in all of Seminole County?

Mike Arena doesn't need to prove to anybody that his Altamonte Springs Community Jazz Ensemble can hold its own in the field of classic and contemporary jazz music. But it does help to establish one's credibility when a jazz great like Nathan Page performs with you.

Page will perform with the Altamonte Springs Community Jazz Ensemble in a free concert on Sunday, Aug. 27, from 7-9 p.m. at the Altamonte Springs Eastmonte Civic Center. The center sits south of the intersection of State Road 436 and S.R. 427 (Longwood Avenue).

The concert, titled "A Sense of Sound," is free and open to the public.

Arena, a Sanford resident, has been in Central Florida for 11 years. Although he has known Page for 10 years, this is his first chance to work with him, he said.

Page, dubbed by some critics as a contender for the title of "jazz guitar king," just returned from a tour of Los Angeles and Montana, Arena said. He said Page still has found time to sit in the audience at the ensemble's concerts, which Arena directs.

Arena compares Page to George Benson, the late Wes Montgomery and contemporary jazz musicians all rolled into one.

"When he does improvise, he plays musical lines that are still melodies within themselves," Arena said. "Some jazz artists, when they improvise, try to play as many notes as they can. As for my own taste, as with Nathan's, I go by the old Count Basie philosophy of 'simple but effective.'"

A native of West Virginia, Page is self-taught, having first picked up a guitar at age 7. Until he formed his own quartet in 1974, he played with such luminaries as Roberta Flack and Liza Minnelli.

Page lives in Altamonte Springs, but has toured internationally and appeared in concerts at Carnegie Hall, Avery Fisher Hall and the Hollywood Bowl. He also has appeared in such Broadway productions as Raisin and Beastie, and made guest appearances on the television shows of Johnny Carson, Merv Griffin, Phil Donahue and Steve Allen.

Jazz Times magazine bragged

Contemporary jazz guitarist Nathan Page will perform his relaxed style of melodies and harmonies with the Altamonte Springs Community Jazz Ensemble in a free concert Sunday.

CORRECTION

Due to a typographical error, the incorrect date was given Thursday for the first practice of the 1989-90 season of the Seminole Community College Community Chorus. The practice, open to prospective new members, will be Monday, Sept. 11, from 7-9:45 p.m. on the stage of the SCC Fine Arts Concert Hall.

Their hubbies' snoring is now unheard of

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby.")

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after I married Mark, I discovered that he snored. When I told him he snored, he denied it. Abby, his snoring sounded like a chicken bone in a garbage disposal!

Finally I decided I had had enough of his denials, so I bought a tape recorder and learned how to use it. One night after Mark fell asleep, I held the microphone under his nose and got about 10 minutes of snoring. Then I reversed the tape, turned up the volume and nearly blasted him out of bed. (Thank heavens he didn't hit me.)

Only after I threatened him with a nightly rerun did he agree to see an ear, nose and throat specialist for an examination. The doctor discovered several polyps (small growths) in Mark's nose, which he said could be the cause of his snoring. The polyps were removed in a simple surgical procedure, and now my darling snores no more! Pass this on.

PEACE AT LAST

DEAR PEACE: Not all snoring is due to growths in the nose, but it's well worth a trip to a doctor to find out.

DEAR ABBY: On our honeymoon I was horrified to discover that I had married the world's champion snorer. I used elbows and feet for temporary relief. Now we sleep in twin beds and I keep a yardstick under my bed. When Michael starts snoring, I get the yardstick and whack him with it. Now, as soon as he hears me reaching for the yardstick, he shuts up.

MICHAEL'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: I've been sleeping with a piece of wedding cake under my pillow every night since June 17 because I heard it would get me a man. Is this true?

ALWAYS A BRIDESMAID

DEAR ALWAYS: I can't guarantee you a man, but you'll get plenty of ants.

DEAR ABBY: I surely do sympathize with people whose friends' smoking makes them sick.

I had the same problem with my dad. He would always smoke cigars in the car. One time when I was about 7, he was smoking a cigar in the car, and I said, "Dad, your cigar is making me sick."

He replied, "No, it's not." Then I said, "Yes, it is."

each year. The ensemble consists of five trumpets, five trombones, five saxophones, piano, bass, guitar, drums and auxiliary percussion.

The ensemble recently has added a vocalist, Don Kirby, who plays auxiliary percussion.

"I'm really gratified with the response that I'm getting from the musicians," Arena said of the volunteer ensemble members. "They make all the work that I put into this worthwhile."

Radio personality Don Kirby of WLOQ-FM 103 will emcee the concert.

Religion

Burns tends to All Souls' needs

By Barbara Brown
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Father Tom Burns smiles and his a twinkle goes in his blue eyes when he says he was shocked during the height of the 1960s Woodstock era.

Burns, 41, recently joined the All Souls Catholic Church at 808 S. Oak Ave., Sanford, assuming the role of pastor in February. He was pastor of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi in Apopka for 11 years before coming to Sanford.

His layman's garb, nose collar, worn during a recent interview does not detract from Burns' deep respect for priesthood and the Catholic religion.

He utters no words when he talks about religion and its application to everyday life and worldly problems.

Catholicism today is swinging like a pendulum between tradition and contemporary life, Burns says. "It's probably going in both directions at the same time."

That's because besides ethereal matters, today's Catholics are turning their attention to earthly concerns, he says. "There is definitely a growing interest in personal piety and devotion, but there is equally a great deal of interest especially among Catholics with higher levels of education to be involved in justice and a reformed society," Burns says.

Today's problems which seem unresolvable to most people all have solutions to Burns. He says we don't have to feel "like a hapless creature" while watching drug, the AIDS disease and nuclear proliferation threaten our planet to extinction.

"We have the technology to solve problems. We just don't choose to use it. We know what we need to do," Burns says with heartfelt conviction.

Burns describes himself as a realist and says one of his hobbies is science. "I don't think there is any conflict between faith and reason. Reason and science can take us into entirely new realms — the world of the unknown vision," he says.

Burns holds a bachelor's degree in philosophy from Catholic University in Washington, D.C. and a master of arts degree in theology from Washington Theological Union in Silver Spring, Md. Before coming to Florida, he was a college chaplain in Albany, N.Y.

He says he is "grateful" to have been attending school during an age when a new consciousness was shaping the philosophy of the future America.

"The Woodstock age, in which I was a collegian during that time, was a fun age to live through. As a member of the Church, at that time we had a great dream about what the Church could be, how it could solve problems, how we could live internally as brothers and sisters within the Church. I am very grateful my education for the priesthood was during that era because it's given me a real freedom of spirit to do my work," he says.

Besides his education for priesthood, Burns has earned a degree from Rollins College which permits him to do diagnostic counseling; however, he says other responsibilities prevent him from doing any type of long-term counseling.

As pastor of a church, Burns is responsible for the operation of the parish. "Everything ultimately stops at the pastor's desk," he says.

Take heed role models: someone is always watching

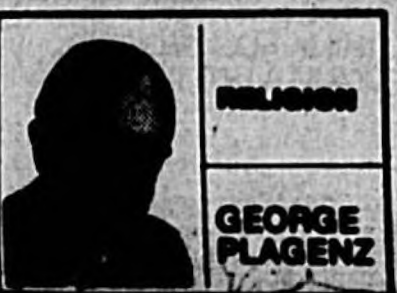

The New York Yankees of the 1930s and '40s were probably the classiest sports team in history. In his book, "Summer of '49" (Morrow), David Halberstam tells the story behind the old Yanks.

Manager Joe McCarthy was "an old-fashioned man," writes Halberstam, "and is largely credited with making the Yankees the elite organization of baseball. They traveled first-class, they always wore jackets and ties. McCarthy wanted them to look like professionals whenever they were in public."

"You're a Yankee," McCarthy would say. "Act like one."

Joe DiMaggio was the classiest Yankee of them all. He was always conscious of his obligation to play well, says Halberstam. Late in his career, when his legs were bothering him and the Yankees had a commanding lead in the pennant race, columnist Jimmy Cannon asked him why he played so hard.

DiMaggio's answer was, "Because there might be somebody out there who has never seen me play."

McCarthy made the Yankees of that era aware that someone was watching them, on the field and off. It is the mark of heroes — in sports and in life — to be conscious of their role as a model for others.

Each of us, as a matter of fact, is a role model, for good or bad. Someone is always watching us, taking notice of the way we live our lives, how we react to trouble or adversity, the way we make use of our gifts of nature.

And from what they see in us and in other people, they put together a life of their own. The kind of lives we lead pretty much depend on what we see in other people.

Even at many of these times when we are not aware that someone is watching us, we are influencing another's life.

Evelyn was whistling a tune that Velma half-recognized.

"What is that tune?" Velma asked.

Evelyn proceeded to relate this incident:

She was waiting for the train one gloomy, drizzly January morning — the train that would take her from her home in suburban Ossining to New York City. She was feeling depressed, not only by the weather but by the dreary schedule of events that awaited her at her office.

On the station platform, she noticed a striking woman she had never seen before. The woman was whistling softly.

"She whistled through two bars," said Evelyn, "before I recognized the song. It was one I sang often as a child: 'Precious Lord, take my hand. / Lead me on, hold me stand. / I am tired, I am weak, I am worn.'"

Evelyn glanced back at the stranger. Her face was happy, even peaceful, "while I was miserable," said Evelyn.

Right at that moment, the Featherstone hotel whizzed by, splashing mud on the woman's face.

"I watched in fascination," said Evelyn, "as the woman rummaged in her purse, fished out a tissue and wiped away the dirt without a break in the melody. I picked up the tune and carried it with me the rest of the day."

Who was that stranger? Evelyn Bence never found out. The woman was a face in the crowd of commuters standing on the train platform in Ossining, N.Y., one cold, bleak January morning.

But someone was watching her — someone whose life was lifted from its lonely frustration that gray day.

Auschwitz convent has Jews disgruntled with Catholic Church

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Leaders of major Jewish and Polish-American groups called for an end to inter-faith hostilities over the sensitive issue of a Carmelite convent at the former Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland.

The convent of contemplative Carmelite nuns was established in 1984 at a site on the edge of the camp where the Nazis stored the deadly Zyklon B gas used to exterminate Jews and others.

The convent is meant to be a place of prayer for victims of the camp but Jews insist the site has a unique and special significance for their faith where as many as 2.5 million Jews were put to death during the Holocaust. Another 1.5 million Poles and other Europeans were also executed at Auschwitz.

In 1987, Jewish and Roman Catholic leaders signed an agreement that promised that the convent would be relocated by February 1989. But the deadline for moving passed and the 14 nuns have remained at the site.

Under the agreement, the nuns were to move to a new Center of Information and Prayers that would promote Christian-Jewish cooperation.

The failure of the nuns to move has sparked a number of protests at the site, including a July 14 incident in which seven Jews staged a sit-in and had to be forcibly removed.

Following that incident and other demonstrations at the site, Polish Cardinal Franciszek Macharski of Krakow said the "actions make it impossible for me to continue to construct the center."

Construction of the new center has yet to begin and Macharski has given no timetable as to when it might.

Failure to resolve the controversy has led to increased tension between Jewish groups and the Vatican.

In the statement issued by the Polish-American and Jewish groups, the leaders said it is necessary to "revive the original understanding, including establishing a site for the interfaith center and reflecting the sacredness and importance of Auschwitz in Polish and Jewish history."

The text discusses the challenges of modernity and the need for a renewed faith. It mentions a "new evangelism" and a "new center" in Santiago de Compostela, Spain. The text is dense and somewhat repetitive, but the main message is about the importance of faith and the need for a renewed spiritual life.

Pope prays for a Christian, humanist Europe

United Press International

COVADONGA, Spain — Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass before a crowd of 6,000 people, using the last major speech of his three-day Spanish visit to voice hope for a Europe without borders based on Christian principles.

The pope said Mass under bright sun in the main square of the small town of Covadonga in the Picos de Europa mountain range. Prince Felipe of Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, was among the dignitaries present.

Praising Covadonga's past — the reconquest of Spain from

Arab domination began there in the early 8th century — he called for "a Europe without frontiers, which does not repudiate the Christian roots at its origins."

Earlier, John Paul, who led a world meeting of youth during the Spanish trip, visited the grotto sheltering the "Santina de Covadonga," a wooden statue of the Virgin Mary. He prayed and placed a rosary in the hands of the carving.

The first day of the pope's 43rd trip outside Italy, John Paul addressed about 400,000 — mainly European youths at the medieval pilgrimage town of Santiago de Compostela in northwest Spain. He called for a Christian, humanist Europe.

He also urged the youths to shun "evils of modernity" and devote themselves to a "new evangelism."

After Sunday Mass in Santiago, John Paul issued a new appeal for "all responsible parties" to observe a cease-fire in Lebanon and open talks for a lasting, just settlement.

In the regional capital of Oviedo on Sunday, he blamed the failure of Marxist societies on their atheistic concept of work — but also criticized materialism in the capitalist world.

Prayer To St. Jude

Most holy Apostle St. Jude Thaddeus faithful servant and friend of Jesus the name of the Father who delivered thy beloved Master into the hands of the enemies has caused thee to be forgotten by many but the Church honors and invokes thee universally as the patron of hopeless cases and of things despised. Pray for us who are so needy, make us, I implore thee of that particular privilege accorded to thee to bring visible and speedy help where help is almost despaired. Come to my assistance in this great need that I may receive the consolation and succor of heaven in all my necessities, tribulations and sufferings and that I may bless God with thee and all the elect throughout eternity. I promise thee, O blessed Jude, to be ever mindful of the great favor, and I will never cease to honor thee as my special and powerful patron and to do all in my power to encourage devotion to thee. Amen. LL

Obesity not linked with hypothyroidism

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 28-year-old female diagnosed as hypothyroid. I'm being treated but am still gaining weight. Because the situation is also complicated with emphysema, I can't take diet pills. Will these disorders correct themselves?

like a copy of any of these reports should send $1.25 each to P.O. Box 91389, Cleveland, OH 44101-3389. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR READER:

Hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid gland) is readily treatable with thyroid replacement in pill form. The amount of replacement varies from patient to patient. Hence, your doctor—after measuring the thyroid level in your blood—can adjust the dose of medicine to meet your needs. This is a straightforward problem that most doctors can address. The presence of emphysema, an uncommon lung disorder in a person as young as you are, should not affect the amount of thyroid supplement you require.

You raise an interesting question about thyroid disease and weight. Physicians have traditionally assumed that because hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid gland) is associated with weight loss, hypothyroidism must be marked by weight gain. This is not the case. Hypothyroid patients may be puffy from fluid retention, but they are usually not obese. Therefore, if you are overweight, you will have to diet. Thyroid replacement alone will not be sufficient to control your weight gain. Ask your doctor to suggest a suitable diet for you, as well as to adjust the dose of your medicine.

Incidentally, diet pills are not the answer for you—or for anyone with a weight problem. Although they may cause an initial shedding of unwanted pounds, they have unpleasant side effects—such as insomnia and over-stimulation—and can only be used for short periods. Most people who take appetite suppressants end up gaining back all the lost weight. Therefore, diet pills can be viewed as an inefficient and temporary expedient, having no long-lasting benefits. WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
The play of today's six-no-trump contract is a good test of bridge players' reflexes. After the opening lead is made, declarer can quickly see that he has 11 top tricks. He can make a 12th trick if the Q-10 of diamonds in dummy is worth anything. If not, perhaps dummy's spade jack can provide the needed trick. So declarer should win the first trick in his hand and immediately lead a low diamond toward dummy. Meanwhile defender West should also be doing some thinking. As soon as the dummy appears, West should prepare himself for what he will do if South plays a low diamond. Of course, what he should do is play low without hesitation. Declarer must be missing the jack, and there is no point in giving away a problem by undue hesitation. If the play goes just this way and declarer does misguess, he will play out all his tricks including the ace of diamonds (who knows — the king might fall). Finally he will take a losing spade finesse and be set. The play would be the same in six clubs. But give North a weaker spade suit — A-10-6, for example — and the club slam would make with proper play. Declarer should draw trumps, play out the hearts and K-A of spades, and ruff dummy's third spade. Then let declarer play ace and a small diamond. Even if he misguesses, East is locked in with the doubleton jack of diamonds and will have to give declarer a sluff and a ruff to let him make the slam.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Oost
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 26, 1989

You should fare quite well in the year ahead in any dealings you have with large organizations or social clubs. Although their purposes are at a variance, you will still manage to link them together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be a bit of a wheeler-dealer today and there is a possibility you might pick up one tab too many to suit your aching wallet. Don't try to buy acceptance. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Shrewd tactics can gain you successful end results today, but you might not like yourself too well if deep down you feel you've taken advantage of less alert cohorts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A venture you're presently promoting can stand on its own two feet, but be careful you don't cloud up the deal by trying to embellish it too much. Be both factual and sincere.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you might become involved in an arrangement where you'll share a material interest with someone. To avoid misunderstandings, don't seek or expect more than your fair portion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you might be inclined to vacillate much more than usual. This could cause complications and miff a close friend, because this person will feel your original decision was firm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your ambitious urges will be very pronounced today and it could drive you to do things from which you'll get little enjoyment. Take time to smell the roses.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is a possibility you may take a gamble on something today whose outcome is highly questionable, despite the fact your common sense will tell you not to do so.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If a member of your family is entitled to your praise for something done for you, be lavish with your gratitude.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll not be without your share of ideas and concepts today. However, it's best you try only those which you are absolutely practical and shelve the others for further study.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your financial prospects appear to be mixed today, yet when you tally the final score, your gains should outweigh your losses by a slight margin.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though you're likely to be in a friendly, receptive mood today, you could still be extremely sensitive regarding the way others treat you. Try not to be too analytical.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's best not to accept something you've long desired at the cost of offending a friend or associate. Later, you'll be able to have what you want without any strings.

Smith, Griswold recite vows

SANFORD — Anne Holleyman Smith and David Brian Griswold were married in a 2 p.m. ceremony on Saturday, July 22, at All Souls Catholic Church, Sanford, with the Rev. William Ennis officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. C.F. Brooke Smith of Sanford.

The bridegroom is the son of Florence Griswold of Eustis.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a long-sleeved gown with sequined bodice, satin skirt with lace trim, and cathedral-length train. It featured a Queen Anne's sequined collar with pearl drops and netted yoke. Her headpiece was a halo of flowers with veiled puff, with the veil to the lower back being trimmed in pearl.

She carried a bouquet of white carnations with baby roses, aqua baby's breath and an ivy cascade.

Attending as matron of honor was Stephanie Gandy of Cocoa, wearing an aqua, tea-length gown with lace bodice and satin skirt. She carried a bouquet of aqua and peach carnations.

The bridesmaids, dressed to match the matron of honor, were Lisa Brochart of Orlando, Karen Sullivan of Ocoee and Sandi Graham of Sanford.

James Spears of Eustis served as best man.

Groomsmen were Brian Griswold of Orlando; and Wayne Bowron, Blake Griswold and Steve Allman, all of Eustis.

Mr. and Mrs. David Griswold

A reception followed at the home of the bride's father.

The newlyweds took a wedding trip to the Caribbean and have settled in Eustis.

The bridegroom works as an ophthalmic technologist for Dr. Juan Cardenas in Pine Hills. The bride is employed as office manager for Dr. C.F. Brooke Smith in Sanford.

Ceremony joins Woodruff, Davis

LAKE MARY — Susan Elizabeth Woodruff and Jon Jeffrey Davis were married in a 7 p.m. candlelight ceremony on Saturday, June 24, at Markham Woods Presbyterian Church in Lake Mary, with the Rev. Don T. DeBevoise officiating.

The bride is the daughter of John D. Woodruff Sr. of Sanford and the late Carrie Elizabeth Woodruff.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Davis of Richmond, Va., and Hope Davis of Richmond.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a white satin gown with sweetheart neckline, bodice trimmed with Venice lace and pearls, a full skirt with chapel-length train and off-the-shoulder, double-puff sleeves trimmed with roses.

Her headpiece was a circular crown of white roses and pearls with fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of bridal pink roses and stephanotis.

Kathleen Simcoe of Lake Mary, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a tea-length gown of pink lace over pink satin, with scalloped neckline and pink satin sash. Her flowers were pink lilies, pink roses and stephanotis. Her haircomb was adorned with pink roses.

Bridesmaids, dressed to match the matron of honor, were Betsy Fisher, Marietta Frison of Winter Park, and Delia Vincent and Ashley Vincent, both of Richmond, Va.

Kenneth Davis, father of the bridegroom, attended as best man.

Groomsmen were Robert Anderson and Stewart Dowdy of Richmond, Va.; Arthur Woodruff of Sanford, brother of the bride; and David Woodruff of Birmingham, Ala., brother of the bride. Flower girl was Katie Woodruff of Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Jon Davis

Ring bearer was Christopher Simcoe of Lake Mary.

A reception followed at the Sanora Clubhouse in Sanford. Assistants were Elise Cornell, Denise Swain, Mary Joyce Bateman, Joyce Hetzel, Joyce Sawyers, Marguerite Terwilliger, and Jeannette Bluemke.

The newlyweds took a wedding trip to Saint Kitts in the West Indies and have settled in Altamonte Springs.

The bridegroom is owner of JDT Landscaping and Irrigation in Altamonte Springs. The bride is a school teacher.

'McCloud' returns in TV movie

By United Press International

LONDON — McCloud is back and he is green, environmentally speaking.

The rough-and-ready deputy marshal is now 10 years older and a U.S. senator from New Mexico in a new TV movie based on the old television series.

Forget the law and order issues of the 1970s. McCloud is returning as a hero for the '90s: an ozone-friendly, compassionate, multinational-bashing environmentalist who fights crime and pollution on two continents.

He also has switched networks, from NBC to CBS.

Dennis Weaver, who played Sam McCloud for the seven seasons it ran on NBC, returns to the character with which most people still associate him, despite the passage of 12 years since it was dropped from prime time.

In the new CBS movie, tentatively called "The Return of McCloud" and scheduled to air in the coming season, Sen. McCloud tangles with the sinister CHEMTEL Corporation. McCloud takes on polluters on the Senate floor and on the streets of London following the murder of his niece, a researcher at CHEMTEL's British headquarters.

He has his share of problems in London — as, in the original series, he had trouble adjusting to New York City.

In London, his western drawl and the cab driver's rhyming cockney slang are mutually baffling. The police are unappreciative of an American cowboy in London, telling him, "We'd like you to visit the Tower of London, not reside in it."

McCloud later is nearly jailed when CHEMTEL frames him for a murder and he has to elude Scotland Yard.

The film is being produced in Pinewood Studios outside London and several landmarks are being used as backdrops. Leeds Castle is the home of CHEMTEL, which McCloud must penetrate to prove the company is suppressing evidence of a natural cure for cancer and has killed his niece to keep her quiet.

McCloud at one point borrows a police horse for a chase around Trafalgar Square and the Strand before returning the horse to St. James's Palace.

It may be a gentler, kinder McCloud, but he can still ride a horse and track a crook.

The movie reflects Weaver's own interests — one of Weaver's conditions before agreeing to return to the role.

"I think an artist has a responsibility to say something," he explained in an interview.

Weaver said "The Return of McCloud" is not his soapbox, but it does say something.

"We're saying there are individuals who are willing to sacrifice lives for greed," he said. "It's all around us, the whole arms race, the whole cold war."

Unlike McCloud, Weaver said he will not seek political office, though he has considered the idea. He believes he can be more effective on the outside.

In 1983, he helped start L.I.F.E. (Love is Feeding Everyone), a service that takes left-over food from bakeries and supermarkets and distributes it to church groups and social service agencies. He has also served as spokesman for two hunger relief organizations and has traveled to Moscow.
