Dodging the rain drops

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary Summer Track Series got off to a soggy start Monday night at Don T. Reynolds Stadium. See Page 1B.

Kids charged with vandalism

SANFORD — Three Sanford juveniles have been arrested by Sanford police in connection with thefts and vandalism at Seminole High School.

According to police Commander Dennis Whitmire, officers responding to an alarm at the school caught the three teen-agers coming out of classrooms. "They were carrying such items as baseballs, T-shirts, jackets, office supplies, rubber gloves and two kitchen knives," Whitmire said.

"They had apparently broken into the biology room, as well as two other rooms in the main school, then into a storage area," he added.

Whitmire said one of the hallways had been covered with graffiti including the words, "Satan Rules," "Save our land — Join the Klan," and other KKK and satanic words.

Two of the boys were 13 years old, and the other was 14. None of their names have been released.

Whitmire said each of the three have been charged with armed burglary, grand theft, writing obscenities on a school building, and criminal mischief.

Task force meeting

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary's recently formed Land Development Code Review Task Force will hold its first meeting Wednesday, June 22, at city hall.

On the agenda is the election of a chairman and vice chairman of the organization, followed by a charge to the task force, to be given by Mayor Lowry Rockett.

Rockett, as well as two members from the city's Planning and Zoning Board, and two from the Business Advisory Board comprise the membership of the review task force.

Also scheduled are evaluation of recent changes in the city code, identification of new issues or proposed changes, and the setting of future meetings.

The meeting will be held beginning at 6:30 a.m. at Lake Mary, City Hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Suspect in rape nabbed

SANFORD — Sanford police say a suspect in the rape of a 14-year-old girl was nabbed following a foot chase Saturday.

Paul Garret Robinson, 25, of 12th Street, has been charged with kidnapping, sexual battery, carnal intent with a person under 18, and resisting arrest without violence.

According to police Commander Dennis Whitmire, at approximately 2:15 a.m. Saturday, Robinson grabbed a 14-year old girl, picked her up and carried her to an abandoned house in the 1500 block of W. 15th Street, where he allegedly raped the girl.

Whitmire said officer Tony Esoff, who was investigating the case, later spotted Robinson in a parking lot near French Avenue and 13th Street, and chased him on foot for approximately five blocks before apprehending him.

Meeting postponed

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Affordable Housing Awareness Clinic scheduled for tonight at the Altamonte Springs Civic Center has been postponed. A new clinic is being planned, but no time, date or location has been announced at this time.

The clinic is to deal with buying a home, obtaining financing and other home purchasing matters.

For additional information, phone 324-9123.

Interstate to be widened; rail system to link Sanford, Orlando

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — In the not-too-distant future you might park your car and hop on an expanded Interstate 4, traveling in a high occupancy vehicle to Orlando. Or you might opt for a train ride from Sanford into Orange County.

Officials yesterday aired several plans possible for the interstate expansion.

The lengthening of the exit ramps to Lake Mary Boulevard and addition of two more entrance loops at the present intersection, are expected. Specifics on the locations are tentative at this time.

As now being proposed, I-4 could be widened to as many as 10 lanes with light rail running down the median.

The expansion isn't expected soon however. It may not come about for another 25 years.

Department of Transportation and Regional Transportation Planning officials met with Lake Mary city leaders yesterday. They explained plans which will greatly expand the exit/entrance ramps in Lake Mary.

Regional Planning Manager Mark Boggs explained that the plans for Lake Mary are part of an overall master plan which will expand and improve the entire Interstate-4 area from the Polk/Osceola county line to Interstate-95 in Daytona Beach.

"What we want to do now," he said, "is explain to each governmental body exactly what we are proposing for their jurisdiction, and get input from them in helping us develop our final plans." Boggs and DOT's Corridor Planner Alice Gilmartin presented maps showing the entire local area from Orlando into Volusia County.

One of the major plans calls for the addition of a park-and-ride lot near Lake Mary, which would have its own interchange, but be served by expanding the length of the entrance ramps presently at Lake Mary Boulevard.

Lake Mary's City Planner Matt West made the first suggestion for changes to the plan. DOT is proposing the park-and-ride lot be built north of the present interchange. "This will take it into some very valuable property," West said. "If you do that, some of the proposed development, especially the Primera area, won't be practical."

Leonard Nimoy, who for years played Mr. Spock on the Star Trek television series and in the big screen films, was the featured speaker at the Star Trek convention at the Orlando North Hilton in Altamonte Springs recently. Nimoy, whose screen image was detached and unemotional, spoke warmly with Trekkies about his experiences on the series. He showed a series of bloopers and outtakes from the film Star Trek IV. Above, potential crew members for the U.S.S. Enterprise received instructions from Star Fleet officer Debora Nelson before Nimoy spoke to them. At left, Nimoy joked with the recruits. Saving Lake Jesup

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — This fall will see the start of the greatest environmental focus on the 10,000-acre Lake Jesup south of Sanford.

The St. Johns River Water Management District will spend $105,000 to hire three staffers to spend their time studying ways to clean up the lake, one of the most polluted in the state. Two team members, a top-level engineer and senior scientist, will analyze existing and new data. A technician will collect samples from the lake and enter all the data in a computer.

Maurice Sterling, project manager in the water district's Department of Water Resources, said he hopes the team will be assembled by August. Sterling said the two senior professionals will supervise studies performed by consultants. The technician will aid by collecting data, he said.

The money for the team and studies comes from pollution fines collected by the state. The money is part of $375,000 appropriated by the Legislature under the Lake Jesup restoration bill sponsored by Rep. Marvin Couch, R-Oviedo. The bill also created the Friends of Lake

Teachers to receive two percent raise

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Teachers in Seminole County have reached an agreement with the school district that will give them at least a two percent raise for the next year.

This June agreement is the earliest the two sides have ever finalized talks, union officials said.

"We are very, very pleased with how this went," said Gay Parker, president of the Seminole Education Association, the union which represents the district's 3,000 teachers. "I think everyone is smiling over this one."

Parker said negotiations, which for several years had been difficult and required the intervention of a mediator, have been easier in the past couple of years.

LONGWOOD — City commissioners will conduct a work session June 27 on the proposed adult entertainment ordinance to fine tune the document before the first reading July 5.

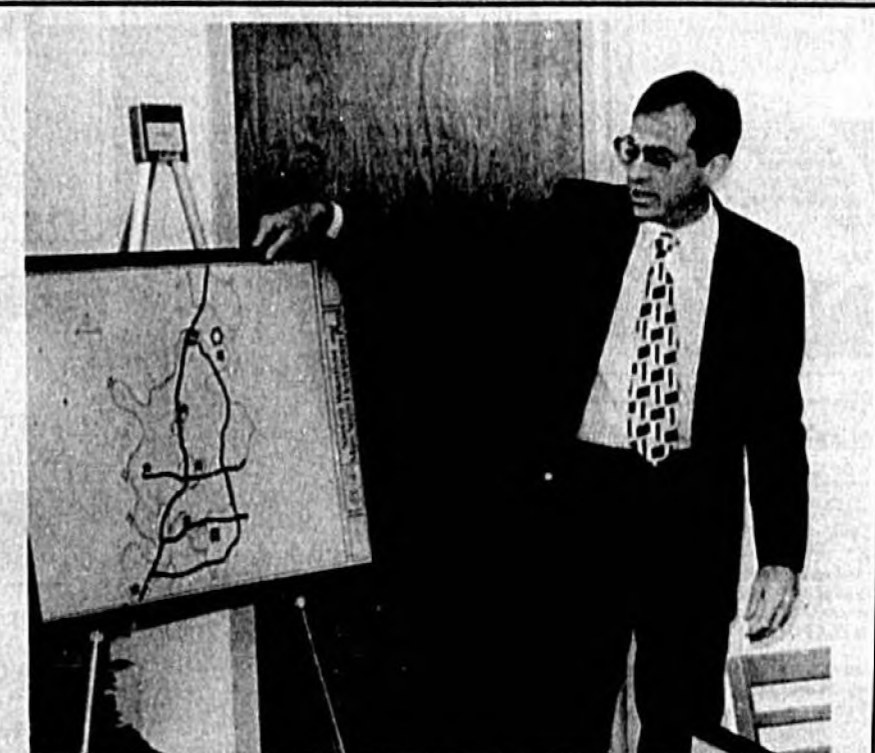

A few points including distance requirements from churches and residences, door widths and shower specifications were questioned. Changes in the document which is over 50 pages long, will be ironed out next week in preparation for the first reading at the commission's first regular meeting in July. The meeting was moved to July 5 due to the Fourth of July holiday.

In other business, the proposed deannexation of a portion of Highway 17-92 was set aside after city

Extradition planned for Gudinas

ORLANDO — Police plan to extradite an inmate in a North Carolina jail and charge him with murder in the beating death of a woman while Orlando prepared for thousands of World Cup visitors.

Investigators over the weekend traveled to Beaufort, N.C., to question Thomas Lee Gudinas, 20. He was being held at the Carteret County Jail on an auto theft charge.

"The one key that really told us that this was our guy was a fingerprint that matched that of Gudinas that was found inside the victim's checkbook that was in the victim's car," said Orlando police spokesman Mike Holloway on Monday.

The car was found abandoned in an apartment complex after a man matching Gudinas' description was seen driving off in it the morning that Michelle McGrath, 22, was killed in downtown Orlando, Holloway said.

Air bags fail to save lives

SOUTH BAY — A Bradenton couple and their infant son were killed in a head-on collision on U.S. 27 near here, troopers said.

"Even with airbags they wouldn't have survived," Lt. Jim Howell of the Florida Highway Patrol said of the Sunday crash.

"There was no braking, no evasive action, just — whack."

Eneel St. Jusma, 30, Lyseul Cesar, 22, and their son, 9-month-old Stanley Cesar, died after St. Jusma rode off the shoulder of the two-lane highway, over-corrected to get back on and slammed into an oncoming van, Howell said.

The two adults were wearing seatbelts and the infant was properly strapped into a baby seat, but all were fatally injured, the trooper said.

A second child, 3-year-old Cesaly Cesar, was in stable condition Monday, while the Clewiston couple in the van also remained hospitalized. Clive Sullivan, 46, was in critical condition, while his 30-year-old wife, Susan, was in fair condition.

New attraction features superheros

ORLANDO — Spider-Man, X-Man and The Incredible Hulk will have their own attraction at a new theme park planned at Universal Studios in Orlando.

Marvel Entertainment Group Inc., owner of the Marvel Comics characters, is joining with California's MCA Inc. and Rank Organisation Plc of London to create the new attraction.

MCA and Rank own the Florida park that will be incorporated into the new complex, to be called Universal City Florida when it opens in 1999.

"Marvel's role at Universal City Florida will give Marvel fans a firsthand, high-tech experience with their superheroes," Terry Steward, president of Marvel Entertainment Group, said Monday.

Highway violence widespread

MIAMI — Two women say they are being chased down Interstate 4 by a man pointing a gun at them. Three Florida Highway Patrol officers intercept the vehicles and arrest the pursuer. No gun is found, but marijuana is.

"The duty officer kept the driver and passenger calm while the vehicles were reaching speeds of 100 miles per hour," FHP Capt. Ken Howes said Monday.

The incident east of Tampa early Sunday evening will be part of an FHP report on highway crime. The summary confirms what many motorists fear — highway violence is frequent and widespread.

From January through April, 512 incidents have been reported statewide, dominated by 245 reports of rock throwing. About 11 percent of the reports involve firearms, and about 14 percent end with arrests.

Geographically, Miami is far and away the leader, the Florida Panhandle has a rash of rock throwings, and gun incidents are widely scattered across the state.

The FHP began counting highway violence for the first time last July in response to a growing awareness of crime on the road.

"It's something that used to not be a problem," Howes said from his Tallahassee office. "There is a problem out there, and we're trying to address it. We just have to do the best we can."

To encourage reporting, 10 cellular phone companies agreed to create a special phone line for free trouble calls by the state's 1 million cellular customers to the FHP. Calls to the star-F-H-P line have generated drunken driving and reckless driving arrests, Howes noted.

About 41 percent of the incidents reported in the first four months of the year have come from the Miami FHP troop. The squad assigned to Florida's Turnpike is second with 18 percent of all reports.

The largest number of firearm reports came from the West Palm Beach area with 12, the turnpike with 11 and Tampa with eight.

Rock-throwing came primarily from Miami with 41 percent, the turnpike with 26 percent and the Panhandle with 13 percent of the reports.

Proposed school may harm students

Center would use Orlando Naval Training Center

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — A School for Applied Technology proposed by an educational consortium as a way of helping students and private industry has come in for criticism.

One expert called it "the privatization of education." Another said he was concerned the proposed school might drift from the true intent of education.

"The purpose of education is really to train you to use your mind for the rest of your life," said Judah L. Schwartz, director of the Educational Technology Center at Harvard.

The plan for the special technology center, to be housed at Orlando's Naval Training Center, is being pushed by Orange County's public school system, Valencia Community College and the University of Central Florida.

In addition to high school training in job skills, students would be able to earn a vocational training certificate or degrees from the community college and university within the same complex.

The navy base is scheduled to close within a few years.

Local educators are following a movement that has gained momentum in recent years: to prepare more students for industrial or technical jobs.

Their proposal was designed to specifically address the area's economic needs to meet the naval base Re-use Commission's requirements, said Michael Hooks, who leads the consortium of schools.

"We think we have the best of both worlds," said Hooks. "We are going to be able to provide the general liberal arts, but we'll also be able to provide the technical education."

Some educators say such training would be at the expense of general studies and could harm some students who later find out they do not want a technical career.

"Things like the choices being made here are really being made by a narrow agenda wanting to funnel students into particular kinds of jobs," said Bill Tally, a researcher of technology's use in education.

"This picture is the privatization of public education that's going on in the country," he said.

But Gene Bottoms, director of a vocational education program used by 329 schools in 19 states, said Orlando officials were on the right track.

"If they pull off this kind of high school that blends real challenging academic tasks with technical studies, they'll be addressing a problem that's in many states in the South," Bottoms said.

"Your largest enrollment in high school is in something called general, which means kids are prepared for nothing."

How does your garden grow?

If April showers bring May flowers, what do you suppose these June downpours will bring in July? These marigolds might like a little more sunshine, but most people's gardens should be benefiting from all of the moisture.

New leader seen as moderator

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — He was a poor seminary student who slept in his car because he couldn't afford a motel while attending his first Southern Baptist convention in 1961, says the Rev. Jim Henry.

"Now look how good God's been to me, 33 years later," Henry told his congregation Sunday, days after being elected president of the 15-million-member Southern Baptist Convention.

Henry wept as he talked about his humble beginnings and how his father predicted his election shortly before he died three weeks ago.

His election at the convention's annual gathering in Orlando is expected to have a moderating influence on the organization that has been dominated by conservatives since 1979.

Mayor Glenda Hood, who doesn't attend Henry's First Baptist Church of Orlando, did so on Sunday to give the pastor a key to the city.

"It's important for church leaders to work together with government and community leaders," she said.

"To have Brother Jim in this new position . . . is going to be very important in that partnership," she said.

The feeling that Henry's election meant an end to divisiveness was echoed by other church leaders.

"I think it signaled the fact that healing is taking place and that people want to see that more and more," said the Rev. Ralph Carter, pastor of Brushy Creek Baptist Church in Greenville, S.C.

John Roberts, editor of the Baptist newspaper in South Carolina, acknowledged that Henry was less involved in the political movement than his opponent, Fred Wolfe of Alabama. But he said he didn't "see any crack in the wall. This is still a very conservative convention."

Coast-to-coast warnings needed

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — When another Hurricane Andrew threatens Florida, state officials would like an official "hurricane warning" to go into effect from coast to coast.

But federal weather officials reserve those full-scale warnings for coastal counties and instead issue "high wind" warnings for inland counties.

State officials are concerned anything less than a hurricane warning for interior parts of Florida won't give people the sense of danger they face from an Andrew-like storm racing across the state.

"If it's more than 75 mile per hour winds, why not call it what it is?" said Frank Koutnik, an assistant to state emergency management director Joe Myers. "It's not called 'high winds.' It's called a hurricane."

Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center, said inland counties experience "all kinds of variations" from hurricane-force winds. He said hurricane warnings are meant for the coastal counties where the effects of storm surges and severe winds are more uniform.

"It gets a little more complex as you get away from the coast with topographical effects," Sheets said. "It's kind of streaky. It's not a uniform distribution of winds as you go across."

Forecasters plan to use a new Doppler radar system to provide specific warnings to local areas about the type of weather they can expect when a hurricane hits, he said.

Hurricane warnings are issued 12 to 24 hours before a storm is expected to hit land with winds exceeding 75 miles an hour. Andrew was a Category 4 storm with sustained winds of 145 miles an hour when it hit south Dade County on Aug. 24, 1992.

High wind warnings are issued when sustained winds of at least 40 miles an hour and gusts of at least 58 miles an hour are expected.

Earlier this year, state officials asked Sheets about changing the policy about hurricane warnings for inland counties. Their concern comes at a time when the state is taking a much more aggressive approach to disaster response planning.

"I truly don't understand all the nuances of why that is difficult for them," Koutnik said.

While the high winds warning will remain for interior counties, the hurricane center will alert local emergency management officials about the possibility of hurricane-force winds and warn the public in advisories they issue when a storm approaches.

Drug find

Casselberry police arrested two persons Sunday in connection with reported drug related activity. Police said they were called regarding a vehicle on S.R. 436 which was blocking traffic. They reported finding two men apparently passed out in a pickup truck. When they checked the vehicle, police said they located a number of baggies of cannabis, which totaled approximately 140 grams and some alcoholic beverage in the vehicle. Paul Christopher Cook, 18, 2206 Smoketree Court, Longwood, and Jeremy Michael Thomas, 20, 622 Tomlinson Lane, Lake Mary, were both arrested. Cook was charged with possession of cannabis with intent to distribute approximately 140 grams, possession of drug paraphernalia, and possession of alcoholic beverage by a person under 21. Thomas was charged with possession of cannabis with intent to distribute, possession of drug paraphernalia, and possession of alcoholic beverage by a person under 21.

Over-stayers

Sanford police arrested two persons Sunday found in a motel room in the 3000 block of S. Orlando Drive. According to the arrest report, the two had rented the room Friday night, but were found to still be there on Sunday. Sandra Lee Presley, 35, of 8125 Lake Ross, Sanford, was charged with obtaining lodging with intent to defraud. Charles John Nicola, 38, of 2341 Celery Avenue, was charged with obtaining lodging with intent to defraud and resisting an officer without violence. Police said Nicola was also found to be wanted on a warrant from Volusia County for failing to appear on a charge of battery, a warrant from Hillsboro County for burglary, two warrants from Pinellas County for petit theft and violation of probation on a conviction of driving under the influence of alcohol, and a warrant issued by the State of New Jersey for burglary.

Double charges

Sanford police arrested Benjamin Jay Fisher, 18, of 205 E. 18th Street, on Sunday. Police, called to a residence in the 1700 block of Magnolia Avenue, were reportedly told that Fisher had performed a sexual act in the presence of a child. They also found he had reportedly done a similar act in the presence of children at a residence in the 1800 block of Sanford Avenue. He was located at his residence by police and charged with two counts of lewd and lascivious acts in the presence of a child.

● $400 in items were reported missing Sunday from a residence in the 1400 block of Forest Drive.
● A bike valued at $249 was said to be missing Sunday from a garage in the 2500 block of El Portal Avenue.
● A cordless telephone valued at $99 was reported missing early Monday from a residence in the 2700 block of W. Airport Blvd.
● Police located two vehicles Sunday hooked together, and parked in the 1800 block of W. 16th Street. Both the Plymouth Van and Chevrolet sedan were reportedly stolen.

FDA to debate thorny issue

Will home tests for AIDS help or hinder fight?

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration takes up the difficult question this week of whether allowing home test kits would help or hinder the fight against AIDS.

Three companies want FDA approval to sell such kits in drugstores. Users would prick a finger, mail in a blood sample and find out by telephone if they have HIV, the AIDS virus.

"This could change the shape of the epidemic," said FDA Deputy Commissioner Mary Pendergast. "You have to look at the macro issues of public health and at what's this going to do to human beings."

Seeking guidance, the FDA has convened an advisory committee meeting on Wednesday to hear some 80 people argue the issue.

Supporters say home testing will help more people learn they're infected so they can get treatment and stop spreading the deadly virus. At least 40 percent of the estimated 1 million HIV-infected Americans have never been tested.

Critics fear the kits won't include proper AIDS counseling, that children would use the tests or that employers would secretly — and illegally — test workers.

Then there's the question of anonymity. Eleven states require named reporting of HIV patients, names states keep secret under strict law, and others require face-to-face AIDS counseling. How will companies sell home kits under those circumstances and protect confidentiality? wonders Almee Berenson of AIDS Action Council.

The FDA has long maintained that trained health workers must do HIV testing, and in 1990 it rejected the first planned home test kit.

Now, "lots of things have changed," Pendergast said.

Public clinics are overwhelmed by demand for free AIDS tests, expecting 5 million requests this year. People already learn test results by phone from clinics too busy to tell them in person. There are more drugs to help patients stave off full-blown AIDS — if they know they're infected.

But the FDA still has questions: Does telephone counseling really work? Will people use home kits properly? Will labs test accurately? How will home testing affect tracking of the AIDS epidemic?

Manufacturers insist the tests will save lives.

"The enemy is the virus," not private competition to clinic testing, said Elliott

Millenson, whose Direct Access Diagnostics created the Confide HIV test.

The bright blue box contains AIDS information written by former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and detailed, illustrated instructions telling users how to prick a finger and dab three blood spots on the special paper.

Seven days later, users would call the lab, identifying themselves with their kit's unique code. Those who weren't infected would hear the news from a recording that gives information about staying HIV-free. People who were infected would talk to a counselor who would discuss HIV and refer them to a clinic or national AIDS hot line.

A survey by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which supports the home tests, found 20 percent of Americans would prefer them to existing tests.

But AIDS organizations are divided. Some like the kits but others warn there's little proof they'll work. They say the poor or embarrassed patient — the target of home kits — won't spend $30 buying something plainly labeled "HIV test," but the worried well will make manufacturers a big profit.

"We're balancing risk," said Jeffrey Crowley of the National Association of People With AIDS. "We want the benefit to outweigh the harm."

Dream a little dream of ... Bill Clinton?

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — In bedrooms across America, Bill Clinton is a nightly visitor.

He plays his sax. Enjoys a Scotch on the rocks, no twist. Whips up a little snack, or gets a little loving — at least until the alarm clock rings.

Call him President Dreamweaver. Clinton is a fixture in the dreams of some constituents, and one of those dreamers recently assembled a book of those nocturnal appearances called "Dreams of Bill."

Julia Anderson-Miller, a publishing house art director, dreamed of Clinton giving her a relaxing neck massage. When she woke up her neck felt better, and she decided to find out if anybody else had dreamed a little dream of Bill.

"We fell in love and had great sex," one dreamer wrote of the President. "He was married to Hillary and I was single. Al Gore yelled at me and told me I was a homewrecker!"

Or this: "He was trying to be a 'really cool' president and was hosting 'Saturday Night Live' and wearing jeans, a black vest, and no shirt."

Or maybe this: "I dreamed Bill made me a ham sandwich from a beautiful sugar-cured whole ham. ... Nice spicy mustard, real vine-ripened tomato, and green lettuce. He handed it to me on a china plate and said, 'That'll be $116, please."

These and 267 other dreams were sent to Anderson-Miller after she and her husband placed ads in newspapers around the country asking, "Have you ever dreamt of BILL CLINTON???"

Twenty-three people had "visited" Bill in the White House. Nine kissed Bill. Seven had dinner with Bill. One kissed Hillary.

Then there were the erotic encounters. Eight women slipped into the arms of Morpheus, and wound up in the arms of Bill Clinton.

When the Bill of their dreams wasn't being president, he held an assortment of other positions — and none of them were dream jobs.

"I was on line at a buffet-style restaurant — the type you find on the New Jersey Turnpike — and Bill Clinton was working the cash register," wrote one dreamer.

Bill was employed at Dominick's grocery store, wearing a "Bubba" nameplate. He was a traveling light bulb salesman. A veterinarian. A priest, saying Mass. A clown at a children's party.

In one case, Clinton provided executive clemency: "When Bill Clinton happens to come to town and finds out John is in jail, he not only has him released immediately but invites him as his guest for dinner."

Food, of course, is a Clinton dream staple. Bill shows up at McDonald's and the Chicken Box, a defunct Florida restaurant. And food does Bill in: "Someone referred in passing to the death of Bill Clinton by food poisoning," wrote another dreamer.

It's not all sweet dreams. There was this bizarre tale involving a man, his grandmother and the nation's leader:

"I fell asleep and when I awoke I noticed I had been stabbed repeatedly. ... I called my gram. I told her I had been stabbed, and she said to me, 'I warned you about him, and I asked, 'Who?'"

"She replied, 'Bill Clinton. He's been going around stabbing people who have relatives in Arkansas.'"

Good night, Bill.

Stamp sale decision shows power of stamp collectors

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A contrite Postal Service had planned to destroy 150,000 stamps picturing the wrong cowboy in its Legends of the West series. But that was before stamp collectors shouted, "Whoa!"

Like any business, the post office has to make money to get its job done. And it doesn't want to anger its best customers. For the post office, that means stamp collectors, and the initial plan to destroy the incorrect stamps offended them mightily.

The saga started back last fall, when postal officials announced the new stamps planned for this year.

When family members got a look at the part of the Legends of the West package honoring cowboy Bill Pickett, they complained that the picture showed the wrong man — it actually depicts Pickett's brother, Ben. The post office apologized and recalled as many of the stamps as it could.

But some stamps had already been sold, resulting in howls from angry stamp collectors who feared a few incorrect stamps would command astronomical prices from dealers.

And when collectors yell, it pays the Postal Service to listen. Others may buy more stamps, but they also stick them on letters, forcing the agency to work for the money. Sell a stamp to a collector and it's all profit — $200 million last year alone.

"The decision to recall created a commotion," said Bill Welch, editor of American Philatelist magazine. And Wayne L. Youngblood, editor of Scott Stamp Monthly, termed it no less than a "breach of faith."

The Postal Service for years has promised collectors that it would never intentionally create a rarity that most collectors could not afford.

Destroying the remaining erroneous Bill Pickett stamps, with some already in circulation, would "certainly generate more than a little bad blood between collectors and" the post office, Youngblood wrote.

Sam Winters, chairman of the board that governs the Postal Service, agreed and announced the decision had been reversed.

"We here would be pretty unanimous in saying that releasing the stamps was the only thing they could really do," said William W. Cummings, contributing editor for Scott Stamp Monthly.

If all of the incorrect stamps could have been destroyed it probably would not have been a problem. But 183 sheets of the Legends of the West stamps — each containing one incorrect Pickett stamp — were sold before postal officials realized the error and recalled them.

One of the 29-cent stamps sold at auction for $4,620 and others have changed hands privately for large sums, Youngblood reported.

Meanwhile, millions of collectors who strive to build complete sets of stamps, including every version issued by the post office, would have been priced out of the market.

"People have had stamp collections handed down from generation to generation and now, all of a sudden, if Winters hadn't stepped in and made the decision, there would have been people that had a gap in their collection," said Azeazy S. Jaffer, the Postal Service's manager of stamp services.

Grammar check

Reading, language and math test scores for second, fourth and eighth graders in Seminole County schools were released recently. Sanford area middle school figures were higher than last year, even though averages for the total school district were lower.

We believe language skills are more important in life than most people realize. People form their first opinion of a stranger based on the way he or she speaks.

Think about it. You meet a person who says, "Me and him went to the store," or perhaps, "I ain't said that I done went to the store, y'know what I mean, but I be goin' soon, y'hear?"

In some people's speech, the words, "y'know" may appear a half dozen times in the same sentence. Listen to people talk. You won't have any difficulty finding this to be true.

This person may have graduated from high school with honors, or even from college. He or she may have outstanding typing skills, mechanical ability, or sales potential. But based on that person's way of speaking, few employers will hire him.

When a student enters the job market, he or she will be hired based on what a boss thinks will be gained through the employment. A bad verbal impression will directly reflect on the entire business. As a result, that student probably won't be hired.

Certainly, there are a few jobs that are difficult to fill. Many are dirty, smelly, and what most people would consider the bottom of the employment level. People with poor grammar often have to resort to this type of job. And others will easily identify you as being at the bottom of the rung if you look like it and sound like it.

For years we have heard about the necessity to dress properly. If you dress successfully, you will be successful. We take that approach with grammar. Regardless of how you are dressed, if you speak properly, you will (without even trying) have more respect from others.

A year from now, the Sanford Herald will be publishing the next eighth grade basic skills comparison. We hope our school-age youngsters, as well as those beyond school age, will realize the harm they are doing to themselves by using poor grammar.

There is reading, writing and arithmetic. But regardless of how much you know, if you can't use proper language, others will never consider you intelligent.

Ban the nets

Recent worldwide developments involving plunging oceanic fish stocks underscores the importance of the "Ban the Nets" amendment that will be on November's ballot and also elevates it from a local issue to a global one.

No longer can commercial fishing interests accuse concerned citizens of crying wolf in predicting collapse of fish stocks. It's happened.

Front-page articles in the New York Times, Wall Street Journal and others, including a CNN documentary, highlight the facts. Every single United Nations classified food fish is now categorized as depleted.

The U.S., Canada, Japan and more have all experienced a sudden collapse or steep decline in fish stocks resulting in tens of thousands of job losses (40,000 in Canada). Thirteen of the 17 principal fishing zones in the world are now depleted.

The situation is so grave that the United Nations has convened a special conference to "stave off the destruction of the world's fisheries."

What caused this dramatic collapse? All parties agree that the major two factors are high-tech nets and too many commercial fishermen.

Unfortunately, as Floridians we don't have to go any further than our coastal waters to see what this deadly combination can do to fisheries. Our list of collapsed and depleted fish species is a testament to that. Every species in our waters targeted by commercial netters have either collapsed, required a moratorium, or been severely depleted. Our fisheries are so poor that the netters are now targeting bait fish, roe-bearing females and lower quality species.

It's time Floridians joined California, Texas, Georgia and South Carolina in ridding our waters of these indiscriminate killers. We all should vote yes for "Limiting Marine Net Fishing" this November.

Set-asides foster dependence

San Diego's black-owned construction firms are up in arms. Since a U.S. district judge struck down the city's set-aside program last year, ruling that it was unconstitutional, minority contractors have seen their share of city construction work decline by more than two-thirds.

San Diego's Equal Opportunity Contracting Program had required white companies to give 20 percent of their city projects to businesses owned by blacks and other ethnic minorities, and 7 percent to companies owned by women.

Many other major cities — including Atlanta; Baltimore; Detroit; Newark, N.J.; Philadelphia; and Washington, D.C. — have operated similar set-aside programs. Without these government-enforced set-asides, advocates say, black enterprise is sure to decline.

But set-asides hardly are the boon to black economic development that advocates suggest. While a few black firms profit, a handful of black entrepreneurs get rich, and a small number of black workers get decent jobs for the duration of the set-aside contract, set-asides have only a negligible impact on the growth of the black business sector.

In fact, an argument can be made that set-asides actually are harmful to black commerce. Such programs have fostered minority dependency on government largesse. They have been riddled with fraud. And, most important, they have failed to accomplish their primary goal, which is to increase the rate of black self-employment.

An increasing number of black entrepreneurs, like John Robinson, president and CEO of the New York-based National Minority Business Council, recognize the deleterious effect of set-asides.

"It's a misnomer," Robinson told Black Enterprise magazine, "that when people think about minority businesses, they feel set-aside program is going to devastate or eliminate the minority business community. A lot of black-owned companies are moving toward the mainstream business sector because many of them understand that you have to go mainstream if you're going to exist and continue to grow."

A black-owned company that exemplifies the kind of mainstreaming to which Robinson referred is TLC Beatrice International, which boasts annual sales of more than $1.5 billion.

It was only 11 years ago that Wall Street lawyer Reginald Lewis founded TLC Group Inc., a company that designed paper patterns for home sewing. In 1984, Lewis' company acquired McCall Pattern Co., the nation's second largest pattern maker. In 1987, TLC acquired Beatrice International in a leveraged buyout.

While Lewis was one of the few black entrepreneurs to take advantage of the takeover boom of the 1980s, in recent years an increasing number of black companies have turned to the equity markets to finance expansion of their operations.

In 1992, for instance, Black Entertainment Television, a Washington, D.C.-based cable network, and Granite Broadcasting Corp., a New York-based firm that owns several network TV affiliates, became the first black-owned companies to go public in more than two decades.

This represents the wave of the future for black business.

Minority contractors have seen their share of city construction work decline by more than two-thirds.

Advice for graduating teens

Note to teens: It's graduation time. Before I get to the usual boring adult advice, I will make a startling confession:

I am the world's worst mentor. If I'm overreacting that, it is in a shameless attempt to distance myself from your parents. They have for years suggested that they are perfect, which explains why you seldom listen to them. Truthfully, I have neither abused nor disrespected any student for whom I committed to "be there." But Brigida deserved better.

"Look," I'd warned the director of The Washington Post's mentor program. "I know how I am — You know how I am. Any girl who gets me as a mentor has got to be pushy, someone who'll call, remind me she's there."

I'd already participated in the program in which Post employees act as mentors — advisers, confidantes — to students at the District's Eastern High School. A good mentor often will take a kid to the theater, talk him through problems, help her with job applications. Sounded great.

But I soon learned that family, job and community commitments left little time for reaching out to a student clear across town. The first girl I mentored was smart, quiet, impressive — and saw me exactly twice.

Brigida Prosser, I knew, would be different. Like her divorced mom, Alberta — a North Carolina sharecropper's daughter who in 1968 surprised herself by landing a job at the Library of Congress, where she still works — Brigida is a go-getter. On our first meeting, the aspiring fashion buyer said, "I promise to call...I can be pushy."

She could also be busy — with her church, boyfriend, school commitments. We've spent two years mostly missing each other.

Now Brigida, who just graduated, is preparing to study marketing at Grove City College in Pennsylvania. At a congratulatory lunch, I gave her book money and a gift from her favorite store. But I felt bad about things I'd never said, tips that I'd give anyone beginning their excellent adult adventure. Then I realized I could still share them with her, and with others:

Dear Brigida, Before speaking to teens, I always wonder what lasting advice I could give that could compete with the message you get from TV, radio, movies and friends. Which of my truths will "stick to your bones?"

I've settled on three. With three, one may hit the mark, maybe even stay around. My truths, which I'm always relearning, are hopelessly old-fashioned, but the best stuff usually is. Never believe people who tell you what you can't do. They'll limit you by erecting an invisible fence around your potential. I don't just mean teachers or friends who think your abilities can't support your dreams, or even a culture that may question your worth based on your gender, economic status or skin color. The most dangerous "limiters" may be people who love you. Some will tell you not to take risks because they fear you'll get hurt; others can't help extending their own narrow self-vision to you. Some insist that "they" will never let you — an African American, a woman, whatever — make it in the world. You can love these people, even understand them. But don't listen.

And remember — for many people, the loudest negative voice is the one in their own head. Shut it down. Then do the necessary work to show all naysayers they're wrong.

Make "Does this serve me?" your mantra: Asking it constantly reminds you that the essence of life is choice. With some actions, the risk factor may seem small (defying your mom, smoking a cigarette "just once," seeing a movie rather than working on a project). Others clearly are more serious (hanging out with druggies, saying a pressured "yes" to a demand for sex). Either way, asking, "Does this meet my needs, really serve me?" — and answering honestly — can save you heartache.

Remember God is in you: The oldest truth is the most valid. The largest, truest, only real force on earth is within you, always available. Take time to feel it. Use it. When you do, you can see love all around you, even in this hostile world. And you'll find yourself giving, sharing your good. When you're feeling disconnected, try church. Recently my son, 8, said after Sunday school, "I never want to come here, Mom, but when it's over, I feel washed. You get dirty during the week."

You've got the power. Never give it away. Letting other people's opinions overly influence you has the same effect as living life by someone else's values — it wears you out. Inauthenticity is exhausting. But that's four things, isn't it? No matter. The bottom line is the same for each: You are magic. I'll be watching to see how you transform the world.

Love,
Donna

Parents vs. nonparents at the job

I'll admit I sometimes get a little annoyed when our secretary is off with a sick kid and the boss sends me on an errand she would ordinarily do. My office is closest to hers, so when he comes up empty searching for her, he finds me.

I'm lucky enough to work for a good company headed by a man who tries to be fair, and any feelings of annoyance have always been balanced by the fact that I'm totally ga-ga over our secretary's kids and she shares them with me. I want her to be at the assembly when her daughter wins almost every award her elementary school gives out, and holding them close when they have fevers. I want America's children to have as much of their parents as they can get.

Yet there are plenty of childless workers who feel left out of the perk line in this age of flextime and on-site daycare.

More than 20 percent of workers polled by Hewitt and Associates, an employee-benefits consulting firm, said they are made to assume more responsibilities and work longer hours to cover for parents taking time off with their children.

Some nonparents also complain about a double standard in industry: Companies struggling to be compassionate to workers with families don't always consider the needs of childless workers who want to take an ill pet to the vet or think it's important to be at home when the termite guy comes. Nonparents don't understand why it's OK for the fellow at the next desk to be off five days with a sick child, but it's not all right for them to take off a day or two for personal business.

They've come to realize that when the boss hits them with a spur-of-the-moment request to attend an after-hours meeting, it's a lot easier to ask them than the woman hurrying home to fix supper for a toddler and a kindergartner. "I already have plans" sounds pretty lackluster compared to a 2- and 5-year-old waiting at daycare to be picked up and fed.

Leslie Lafayette, a high-school English teacher in Sacramento, Calif., says she's tired of doing more than her fair share. She started the Childfree Network, a support organization for nonparents, and claims 2,500 members in 33 states.

"My experience has been that people without kids have always come in second best and are expected to shut up about it," Lafayette told The New York Times recently.

A few companies are trying to make sure their childless employees feel included in the new atmosphere that supports families: Corning Inc. grants leaves of absence for personal projects such as volunteer work, and the Kodak Co. grants leaves for "a compelling personal need or education" or "a unique personal experience." Kodak spokesperson Kathy W. Olson told The New York Times. The guiding principle is that as long as the job gets done, employers can afford to be flexible with employees' personal lives.

Recognizing that single and childless employees may need personal time, and implementing programs to accommodate them, should be better for parents, too. If all the personal time off is extended to parents, many employers will practice subtle discrimination against prospective employees with children.

Applicants with kids will be expected to miss more work and be less willing to work overtime, and an eager person with no family ties can look much more appealing.

Yet there are plenty of childless workers who feel left out of the perk line in this age of flextime and on-site daycare.

American teen in Singapore prison free, eager to go home

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

SINGAPORE — Michael Fay, the American teenager whose logging for vandalism dragged Americans and Asians into a vicious cultural clash, walked out of prison today saying he was in good shape and eager to go home.

He looked pale and thinner after 83 days behind bars but sounded cheerful as he told reporters: "I am happy to be out. My health is good. I'm looking forward to the future very much."

"I am looking forward to going back to my own country. That's all I have to say," he told reporters outside the U.S. Embassy after a shower, rest and change of clothes.

Fay, 19, was given four strokes of a rattan cane on top of a four-month prison term and a fine equivalent to $2,244 after pleading guilty to spray-painting cars and other mischief.

After a tearful reunion with his mother, George Fay said the youth would have a medical checkup at the U.S. Embassy. But the embassy said the younger Fay did not ask for a checkup and one was given.

It was therefore impossible to Judge the after-effects, if any, of the May 5 lashing. Flogging reportedly can permanently scar the buttocks and cause mental trauma.

But the political fallout lingered on, with Fay's father again denouncing Singapore's attitude to human rights.

The lashing sentence had provoked protest from President Clinton, and divided Americans between those who saw the punishment as inhumane and those who wished their own courts would treat vandals so harshly.

At Clinton's request, Singapore authorities reduced the sentence from six strokes to four but steadfastly defended their brand of justice, saying it keeps the city-state clean, safe and prosperous.

Saying he was "angry and bitter," Fay's father said the Singaporeans "have done a wonderful job of building up this country from virtually nothing. Now, however, with their justice system, they're in the process of tearing it down."

Wearing a baseball cap and looking subdued, Michael Fay walked out of Queenstown Prison with his father, his mother, Randy Chan, and her second husband, Marco Chan.

The younger Fay pushed through a crowd of reporters, saying in a testy tone, "I'm not going to answer any questions," and the family drove to the Chan's apartment.

George Fay said his son was "on cloud nine" but badly needed a bath and was anxious to phone his stepmother, Jan Fay, in the Dayton, Ohio, suburb of Kettering.

attorney Richard Taylor advised it would require a voter referendum.

Action was also deferred on a resolution opposing any gambling or casino activities in Seminole County because one commissioner was unable to attend the Monday night session.

The resolution opposes such activities not only here but in abutting counties as well and requests jurisdiction be granted to local governments should legislation be enacted authorizing gambling.

The commission also OK'd by a 4-to-0 vote the conditional use request by property owner Mike Hattaway for a vehicle sales business on State Road 434 east of Grant Street. Under the conditional use, the site may be used for "Auto, marine, recreational vehicle, truck sales, mobile homes (new and used) sale and rental facilities and lots." It has not been specified what type of vehicle sales is planned for the property.

The commissioners also approved on first reading changes in the comprehensive plan and future land use plan for three property owners in Rand Addition on Pine Avenue and one property on Wilma Street.

The commissioners approved a revised list of sidewalk projects slated for work this year and will seek competitive bids. The $35,000 total project involves construction of four sidewalks on Wilma, Lakeview, Georgia and Wayman for a total of 4,186 linear feet.

Work on next year's budgets will continue July 18. The commission worked for a brief time Monday night on its own budget but deferred work on other department proposals until city administrators has an opportunity to do more work on the requests.

Convention Center somewhere near the northeast corner of the present intersection." West said, "and if this is proposed as planned, that may prevent that from happening."

West suggested the park-and-ride lot and connecting interchange be located south of the present boulevard overpass.

DOT's Gilmartin said consideration may be given to having the High Occupancy Vehicle (HOV) exit and park-and-ride lot closer to E.E. Williamson.

DOT also has planned another park-and-ride lot in the Sanford area, to possibly be located near the newly opened Cracker Barrel restaurant on Hickman Drive.

Boggs explained the widening proposal. "When we came up with our first I-4 widening plans," he said, "we had estimated, that to serve the traffic flow expected in the near future, I-4 would have to be widened to 22 lanes."

"But we can't always be looking out for the individual motorist who wants to drive alone in his own car," he continued, "so we are looking for less lanes, but more car-pooling, bussing, and transit light rail as a solution."

Boggs presented four alternatives being considered. While he did not give any estimate of overall costs, he had them labeled according to the total cost.

The most extreme I-4 project would call for six general-use lanes, four special High Occupancy Vehicle lanes separated by barriers, light rail transit from Sanford to the Orlando area, and high speed rail through the entire 75 mile length of the corridor.

The least expensive would include six general use lanes, two for HOV's, extensive express bus service, and high speed rail, but not through the median area, between Orlando and Sanford.

Other projected plans were combinations of the high and low cost proposals.

Boggs said that the expectation for right-of-way procurement would have I-4 approximately 400 feet in total width, rather than the present 300 feet.

Depending on what plan is selected, Boggs explained that the park-and-ride facility may also become a rail station for the light rail transit.

Gilmartin summed up the proposal. "We want to determine within the next six to nine months what we will be doing, adding one lane each way to I-4, or expanding it even further."

She continued, "By the year 2010, we should have some type of fixed rail service, whether it's in the median of I-4 or some other route along present CSX rail tracks. That should be determined in four years or more."

West voiced one final concern. "The need for planning as soon as possible is important," he said, "because even in that short time, four to five years, we could easily be built out, and coming along with changes and land acquisitions would give us real problems."

"Our prime concern right now," Boggs said, "is to obtain opinions from each municipality and county in the area, so we can get on with finalizing our plans. What we have not is not solid, but it's the starting point, and we will be working on fine-tuning the plans."

Boggs and Gilmartin explained that once plans become more finalized, a series of public meetings will be scheduled throughout the entire area of involvement, so that the public as well as governments, can learn what to expect in the I-4 expansion plan.

Raise

"But this year was practically a pleasure," she noted.

Parker led the union bargaining team which negotiated with the district team, which was led by Ken Bovic, executive director of employee and government relations.

In less than two weeks the sides had come to a happy compromise in their offerings.

Because of budget restrictions the last few years, teachers have been asked to do without, Parker said. Three years ago, more than 100 teachers were laid off in order to make ends meet. Most of those teachers have been rehired.

All teachers will get a two percent raise. In addition, there will be more money paid to teachers based on their years of experience and on their educational level.

"It's a fair contract, I believe," Parker said.

Also, negotiations produced an agreement that calls for the district to pay the full amount of the teachers' health insurance premiums and up to $100 deductibles for teachers whose cars are damaged or vandalized while on school district property.

Parker said an agreement was also reached that will give an increase in supplement pay to those teachers who coach a sport or sponsor a club or class.

"I'm glad we were able to address that issue this year," she said. "We have needed to address that one for several years."

While the negotiating teams have agreed to the terms of the contract, the members of the union must still approve it with a vote. Parker said she believes the members will not be polled until the high school teachers return to work on Aug. 16.

If the teachers approve the contract, the school board must give it their OK before it will be put into effect.

Lake

Jesup task force made up of local citizens, environmentalists and government agency representatives.

Lake Jesup has been the focus of increased attention since the 1980s. Then, the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, now Department of Environmental Protection, banned all sewage wastewater dumping in the lake. The last sewage treatment plant went "off line" from dumping to the lake in 1985.

Scientists believe the effluent dumping contributed to a deep layer of muck in the lake. The muck covered the sandy shoreline needed for fish reproduction and the thriving sport fishing industry faded away.

During the late 1980s and into the early 1990s, an informal task force of state agency representatives formed to find ways to restore the lake. Through the efforts of former state senator W.W. "Bud" Gardner of Titusville, the group received $172,000 from several agencies to study restoration methods.

Spearheaded by the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, the group focused on exposing the bottom of the lake to allow the muck to harden. The "drawdown" requires continually pumping water out of the lake. Drawdowns were used successfully to restore fishing in other lakes, including Lake Tohopekaliga near Kissimmee.

Originally, the group estimated the drawdown would cost somewhere from $3.5 million to $6.5 million. But when the potential costs began to climb to $20 million, the group disbanded last year.

Couch's bill called for a broader-based committee to examine all of the restoration options and their impacts. The bill also tasked the water district with performing water quality tests, map the lake muck and study restoration methods.

O.J. Simpson's lawyer goes on the offensive after plea

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's lawyer began attacking the evidence against his client and stressing his anguished mental state after the football hero pleaded innocent to murdering his ex-wife and her friend.

Simpson was forlorn and morose and occasionally shut his eyes as he appeared in court Monday, wearing a dark suit jacket and white shirt buttoned to the neck. He was not allowed to wear a tie, belt or shoelaces because he has been under a suicide watch.

He responded "Not guilty" to charges of murdering Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, and twice answered "Yes" when Municipal Judge Patti Jo McKay asked if he had been correctly identified and whether he understood the charges.

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark later told reporters that Simpson was the "sole murderer" and that there is evidence he planned the slayings.

Simpson's lawyer, Robert Shapiro, said at a news conference that his 46-year-old client remained on medication and under a psychiatrist's care.

"He is very, very depressed, exceedingly emotional," Shapiro said.

Shapiro said Simpson fled instead of surrendering on Friday because he was trying to commit suicide at his wife's grave in Orange County, but was talked out of it by his lifelong friend Al Cowlings, who was driving the white Bronco seen by millions on national TV.

Prosecutors have not decided whether to charge Cowlings.

Shapiro questioned reports about bloodstains in Simpson's car and driveway, saying police tests could not prove the blood matched Simpson's DNA tests, which are more conclusive, could take several months to complete.

"The conclusion of the chemist was that there is no conclusive evidence of blood spots. I think the closest that they came was a chance of one in 15 people having the same blood type," Shapiro said.

Shapiro also noted that four doctors examined Simpson and found "no evidence of any body scratches whatsoever." He said Simpson had small paper cuts on his left hand and a slightly larger cut that he probably sustained when he slammed down a glass after being informed of his wife's death.

News reports have quoted unnamed police sources as saying Simpson had scratches on his body when he was questioned by police the day after the bodies were found. Goldman fought fiercely for his life, investigators say.

Clark, the prosecutor, would not discuss specific evidence.

Ms. Simpson, 35, was nearly decapitated and Goldman, 25, was stabbed 22 times, Time magazine reported.

At the arraignment, Shapiro demanded a preliminary hearing as soon as possible, and the judge scheduled it for June 30. Preliminary hearings force prosecutors to publicly present their evidence to determine if a case should go to trial.

Shapiro also asked for a special neck pillow for Simpson's cell so he could sleep. The judge said that would be up to Simpson's jailers.

A grand jury also is investigating the murders. If it indicts Simpson first, his case would go directly to trial without a preliminary hearing.

A man who lives in a guest house on the Simpson estate balked at testifying Friday before the grand jury but testified on Monday, sources speaking on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press.

Kayto Kaellin, a housekeeper who took care of Simpson's children when they were visiting, apparently knows where Simpson was on June 12, the sources said. They did not describe his testimony.

Prosecutors refused to discuss the grand jury proceedings.

Meanwhile, two Los Angeles police officers used dogs to search for evidence in a vacant field near the O'Hare Plaza Hotel in Chicago, where Simpson went the night of the murders.

They said they were looking for the murder weapon, probably a 15-inch knife, and a shirt, jacket and shoes. A gym bag, sunglasses and socks were found, but it wasn't known if the items belonged to Simpson, the Los Angeles Police Department said.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

Rally gives Cubs win

ORLANDO — Chris Petersen's RBI double in the seventh inning started a three-run rally, leading the Orlando Cubs to a 5-2 win over the Carolina Mudcats in the Southern League.

The game was tied 2-2 at the bottom of the seventh. That's when Petersen cracked his second double of the game, scoring Mike Hubbard and giving Orlando the lead. Austin Manahan followed with a single that scored Petersen, and Doug Glanville capped the inning with a double, scoring Manahan.

Doug Harrah (3-2) picked up the win in relief. Roberto Rivera picked up his first save of the season. Michel LaPlante (3-6) took the loss.

AROUND THE STATE

Lopez new UF baseball coach

GAINESVILLE — Andy Lopez, who guided Pepperdine to the national championship in 1992, was named Florida's baseball coach.

The 40-year-old Lopez replaces Joe Arnold, who resigned June 1 after 11 seasons at Florida.

In six years at Pepperdine, Lopez led his teams to four NCAA Regional berths and four West Coast Conference championships. Thirteen of his players earned All-American honors, and 31 signed professional contracts.

A 1975 graduate of UCLA, Lopez compiled a record of 241-107-3 (.691) at Pepperdine. Including six years at Division II Cal-State Dominguez Hills, his record is 409-259-5 (.611).

Florida went 40-23 last season under Arnold, who resigned citing the need for a new direction in the program and his life.

Miami makes promotions

CORAL GABLES — Linda Venzon has been promoted to assistant athletic director for communications at the University of Miami, and John Hahn has been promoted to sports information director.

Venzon joined the Hurricanes as sports information director in 1990. Hahn has worked in Miami's SID office since 1986.

Home runs key Suns victory

JACKSONVILLE — First-inning home runs by Tommy Adams and Arguinedez Pozo started the Jacksonville Suns to a 6-3 victory over Greenville in the Southern League.

Tony Barron's home run, with a runner on in the fifth, made it 6-0. All of the runs came off Greenville starter Jason Schmidt (6-3).

Jim Gutierrez (5-7) pitched the distance for Jacksonville, allowing six hits.

Don Robinson's home run broke up the shutout and Tim Gillis hit a solo homer.

AROUND THE NATION

Els wins marathon

OAKMONT, Pa. — Ernie Els regrouped after a bogey, triple-bogey start to play the last 18 holes of the U.S. Open in one under par and defeat Loren Roberts on the second sudden-death hole.

Colin Montgomerie, the other member of the first three-way playoff since 1963, was eliminated after shooting a 7-over-par 78 on the Oakmont Country Club course to the 74s posted by Els and Roberts. Els, a 24-year-old South African, is the first foreign winner since 1981 and only the fourth since 1927.

After a rocky round in which all three players saved their best for last, it ended with a two-putt par on No. 11 after Roberts found first the rough and then the sand, making bogey when his 35-foot par putt spun out.

Reds may sign Gant today

ATLANTA — Ron Gant, released by the Atlanta Braves after the outfielder broke his leg in a dirt bike accident, will sign a two-year contract with the Cincinnati Reds, WSB-TV reported. Citing an unidentified source, WSB said the Reds will announce the signing at a news conference today in Cincinnati.

AROUND THE WORLD

Seeds win at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England — Pete Sampras had 25 aces to open defense of his Wimbledon title, 7-6 (7-4), 7-5, 6-3 over Jared Palmer.

Martina Navratilova, Andre Agassi, Boris Becker and Stefan Edberg also advanced.

No. 4 Navratilova, the nine-time champion playing Wimbledon for the 22nd and last time, beat Claire Taylor of Britain 6-2, 6-3.

No. 12 Agassi beat Andrea Caudenzi of Italy 6-2, 6-7 (7-3), 6-3, 6-2; No. 7 Becker defeated David Wheaton 6-2, 6-4, 6-3; and No. 3 Edberg beat Ellis Ferreira 6-2, 7-6 (7-3), 6-4.

And around the corner... 15 runners decided to run on the opening night of the 1994 Lake Mary Summer Track Series despite water puddles on the track at Don T. Reynolds Stadium Monday night. There will be three more Monday night meets, excluding the Fourth of July, starting at 5:30 p.m.

Neither rain, or... Wet conditions can't stop Lake Mary track series

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Threatening weather or not the 1994 Lake Mary Track Series got underway at Lake Mary High School's Don T. Reynolds Stadium Monday night.

While the rain did wash away the field portion of the event, 15 hearty runners still decided to get in a little action and took part in a race with all of the runners starting at the same time and deciding if they wanted to run a 400-meter, an 800-meter or a metric mile.

While the meet is run by gender and age group, information was not received as to what group each runner competed in, so the runner and his or her time will not be listed below.

The only runner to go the 400-meter distance was Michael Gibson who covered the distance in 2:00 flat.

Completing the 800-meter distance were Chris

Amrico (2:36), Michael Meador (3:43) and Shawn Pawlakowski (3:58).

Running the metric-mile were Robert Pautienus (4:42), Steve Kozloff (4:53), Vin Ambrico (5:42), Les Barkley (6:11), David Meador (6:22), D.J. Lewis (6:38), Steve Pratt (6:38), Sharon Pautienus (6:45), Lionel Bonck (6:48), Brenda Meli (6:49) and Katy Pierce (8:57).

The final three installments of the four-meet series will be held on June 27, July 11, and July 18, all Monday nights.

The series will take off for the 4th of July.

The meets are open to athletes from 8-and-Under to 50-and-Over. The age classes between the two extremes are 9-10, 11-13, 14-18, 19-29, 30-39, and 40-49.

Events for athletes in the 8-and-Under and 9-10 age groups include the long jump, 50-meter dash, 800-meter run, 200-meter dash, and 4 x 100-meter relay.

Available to the 11-13 division are the long jump, triple jump, 100-meter dash, 800-meter run, 400-meter dash, and 4 x 100-meter relay.

The rest of the age classes will compete in the long jump, triple jump, 100-meter dash, 1,600-meter run, 400-meter dash, and 4 x 100-meter relay.

All events in all age groups will feature competition for male and female participants.

The entry fee is $1 per person per meet. Each competitor is limited to four events. Runners will be presented to the first, second, and third place male and female finishers in all age groups.

Competition in the long jump and triple jump will begin at 5:30 p.m. The running events are scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. Athletes are allowed to compete in shoes with 1/8-inch or 5-mm spikes.

For more information, contact Mike Gibson (333-2370) or Lionel Bonck (321-8854).

Post 53 B-team continues streak

From Staff Reports

ORMOND BEACH — The future of Seminole High School baseball is looking brighter all the time.

Monday night at the Ormond Beach Sports Complex' Kwantis Field, Sanford Post 53 won its third straight American Legion B-League (players aged 16 and Under) game, 7-6, to improve to 4-2 on the young season.

The victim this time was the Ormond Beach Red, which is made up primarily of players from Daytona Beach Seabreeze High School.

"That was a very big team," said Post 53 B team head coach, and the assistant varsity head coach at Seminole High School, Larry Holbrook. "They had some huge kids. Their pitcher must have 6-foot-6."

The difference in the game was a three-run uprising by Post 53 in the top of the sixth inning that broke a 4-4 tie and gave the local squad a 7-4 lead.

Jimmy Rabun came on in relief of starting pitcher Chris Youmans in the bottom of the sixth inning and got the final four outs to preserve the victory.

The ultimate winning run came home on a squeeze bunt by Andy Hall that plated Phillip Eubanks.

"It was a great job by (Andy) Hall," said Holbrook. "It was a no ball, two strike count and he laid down a beautiful bunt."

Holbrook praised both Hall and Alan Gehr, who are getting their first varsity experience this summer.

"Andy Hall and Allen Gehr impress me every time they step on the field these days," said Holbrook. "Andy had never played on a regulation baseball field (90-foot bases) until this summer and Gehr was a sparingly used player on the junior varsity. Gehr has come on since the middle of the JV season and he's been going gang busters. He's growing up a little bit, that's for sure."

Leading Post 53 were Dax Kemp (three-for-three, run, two RBI), Rabun (two-for-three, double, run, two RBI), Eubanks (one-for-three, three runs, RBI), Chris Louwama (one-for-four, RBI), Brad Jenkins (one-for-four, run), Andy Hall (RBI) and Gehr (run).

The team will start a week-long homestand on Wednesday with a doubleheader against Port Orange starting at 2:30 p.m. The team will also be at home on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. All games are played on Alumni Field in the Seminole High School Baseball Complex.

Sportsmen, it's license renewal time

Special to the Herald

TALLAHASSEE — Most hunting and fishing licenses issued by the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission expire June 30.

Florida residents can purchase 1994-95 hunting and fishing licenses from county tax collectors and their subagents at the following prices: combination hunting and fishing license, $22; hunting license, $11; fishing license, $12. Resident fishing licenses are valid for 12 months from the date of purchase; all other licenses are good June 1, 1994 to June 30, 1995.

Licenses for nonresidents are: fishing, $30; seven-day fishing, $15; hunting, $150; hunting (Alabama residents), $100; 10-day hunting (not available to Georgia residents), $121; and 10-day private hunting preserve, $15. Tax collectors and their subagents are authorized to charge additional issuance fees.

Also available to residents are Sportsman's Licenses for $66, which includes hunting and freshwater fishing licenses; and Type I wildlife management area, archery, muzzleloading gun, turkey and Florida waterfowl stamps.

The cost for the five-year licenses are: freshwater fishing, $60; saltwater fishing (excluding snook, crawfish and tarpon tags), $60; and hunting (includes Type I wildlife management area, archery, muzzleloading gun, turkey and state waterfowl stamps), $270.

Holders of five-year licenses are exempt from price increases and any new stamp requirements created while their licenses are valid.

Children under age 16 are not required to have fishing or hunting licenses, however they must pass a state approved hunter safety course before hunting in Florida. Residents 65 or older are also exempt from license fees, but must carry a Senior Citizen exemption certificate. These certificates are free and are available from county tax collectors.

A similar free certificate is available to residents who are totally and permanently disabled.

In addition, no license is required of residents for recreational fishing with a cane pole (no reel) using live or natural bait or with a hand line, provided the fishing is not in a fish management area and is in the resident's county of residence.

For more information contact your local tax collector's office or the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission and request copies of the 1994-95 Florida Fresh Water Sport Fishing Guide and Regulations Summary and the 1994-95 Florida Hunting Handbook.

Foster leads points

Special to the Herald

DAYTONA BEACH — NASCAR Vice-President Jimmy Foster claimed his fourth win of the season in the Gatorade Florida Legends Series at Auburndale Speedway Saturday and took over the season point lead.

Foster, from Ormond Beach, took the point lead away from Daytona Beach resident Richard Mitchell, who was at a BF Goodrich Legends Cars National Tour race in Alabama. Also getting past Mitchell was Ormond Beach's Robert Ham, who finished eighth Saturday, but still got enough points to move into second place.

Foster has 115 points, while Ham has 103 and Mitchell 100. Ron May from Neptune Beach is fourth with 85 points and Ted Richard from Port Orange is fifth with 83 points.

The next race in the series will be this Friday night at Volusia County Speedway in Barberville. A full night of racing action starts at 7 p.m.

Brazil shows off talent against Russia in World Cup opener

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Brazil impressed everyone with its brilliance. Saudi Arabia did so with its persistence.

Still, only the favored Brazilians got a victory in the World Cup on Monday.

Goals by Romario and Rivaldo led Brazil to a 2-0 win over out-manned Russia. The score could have been double or even triple that.

"There was a total supremacy by Brazil and we even lost several chances to score, three or four," Brazil coach Carlos Alberto Parreira said. "We expected to feel the pressure in our first official game in 30 days in front of the world, but it went very good."

"And I'll tell you, the trend is for the team to improve as the tournament progresses."

That would be bad news for the rest of the field. Brazil was superb, sparked by the magic of Romario and Bebeto up front. Romario scored on a smart deflection of Bebeto's corner kick. Romario also was tackled in the penalty area to set up Rivaldo's goal on the first penalty kick of the tournament.

"If we had such strikers as Romario and Bebeto, we would be the winners," Russian coach Pavel Sadyrin said.

The Russians don't even have four strong players who boycotted the World Cup rather than play for Sadyrin. And they were without their captain, Viktor Onopko, who was suspended for the game.

"It's always unpleasant to lose the game, but this was explainable because we played against a better team," Sadyrin said.

The Dutch were supposed to be much the better team against the Saudis, who were making their World Cup debut. But, despite being outshot 20-9, Saudi Arabia was tied with the Netherlands deep in the match.

Goalkeeper Mohammed Al-Deayea was outstanding in front of the net. The problem was that he wasn't there when it counted most.

Substitute Gaston Taument scored the game-winner in the 86th minute after Al-Deayea strayed well out of the net to deflect a high kick from the left side that was headed for Ron de Boer. Al-Deayea missed, and the ball took one bounce before Taument scored on a header from 15 yards.

"I didn't see the goal," de Boer said. "I didn't know what he was doing there, but I managed to get a piece of the ball."

Then Taument got his head on it and sent it into the unguarded net.

"I've never scored a goal like that before; I can't remember anything like it," Taument said.

Today at Chicago, defending champion Germany met Spain in the second game for each; Argentina and Greece debuted at Foxboro, Mass., while Nigeria and Bulgaria got started in Dallas.

In other World Cup news: —Two Romanian and a Swede in Michigan for World Cup games died in separate traffic accidents.

—U.S. starters Eric Wynalda, who scored their only goal in a 1-1 tie with Switzerland on Saturday, and Claudio Reyna might miss Wednesday's game against Colombia.

Wynalda has a severe rash. Claudio Reyna is bothered by a right hamstring injury.

"I have faith that both of them may be able to play," Milutinovic said. "If they don't play, then I'll think about what I have to do as an alternative."

IN BRIEF

Summer cheerleading camps

The University of Central Florida will hold two overnight summer cheerleading camps for girls ages 8-18. The camps will be June 27-30 and July 18-21 and will be held in the UCF Arena and in the university's gymnasium.

Those attending will learn fundamental techniques involved in performing jumps and partner stunts, building pyramids and tumbling. They will learn how to design cheers and perform sideline dances and routines. These techniques will be combined to create cheerleading routines that will be put to music and choreographed according to each participant's ability.

Awards will be given during the camp to motivate and encourage participants.

Those needing lodging will be housed in the Collegiate Village Inn near UCF. Daily meals will be served at the facility. The cost of each camp, including lodging and meals is $165 per person, $135 per person excluding lodging.

For more information call Linda Gooch at (407) 823-2143.

Hobby: Writing about the X-1 plane

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

WINTER SPRINGS — Faster than a speeding bullet...Sound familiar? No, this isn't a Superman story but one that carries much speed. The X-1 plane broke the speed of sound on Oct. 14, 1947 and Sanford born, Louis Rotundo, can fill one in on most any detail surrounding that event. What began as an interest, then a hobby to dabble in, later turned into a passion to find the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Rotundo set out to put to rest all the myths and rumors. He became so involved that his research in uncovering the facts about this phenomenal aircraft evolved into writing a book on the subject.

"My interest began after the book, 'The Right Stuff,' he said. 'I also saw a book in the bookstore about the X-1. The more I researched, the more I found that so much was just myths.' The deeper he dug, Rotundo found that many of those truths came to light. He said, lightheartedly, 'I tell people if you liked 'The Right Stuff,' then you'll love the real stuff,' (referring to his book).

Rotundo also discussed how he came up with the name for his book. "Into the Unknown/the X-1 Story." "I'd had the book done and waiting at Smithsonian Press with no title for six months," he said. "Felix Lowe, the director at Smithsonian Press, kept saying, 'Don't worry, it will come to you. Finally, one night I was at a dinner party and I was discussing the book with someone. Suddenly I said it. I said it seems like we're going into the unknown.' There was one thing that amazed Rotundo about his comment. He mentioned that many years before, Bell Aircraft's chief test pilot, Jack Woolams, had made a statement about flying into the unknown. Rotundo speculated that the phrase must have stuck in his mind all that time and then came to light. Preceding the dinner party he knew he'd found the title for his book.

After a conversation with Rotundo, one might believe he was a part of the X-1 program. His knowledge was impressive as well as comprehensive. According to Rotundo, his findings supported the fact that the X-1 was built strictly for research and experimentation and was never modified. Although the X-1's first supersonic mission was in 1947, some do not realize that it flew into central Florida on Jan. 25, 1948. "The first 10 flights of program. "General Chuck Yeager read my book in draft form and made some wonderful comments," he said. "Dick Frost was the project engineer of the X-1. Chalmers 'Slick' Goodlin was the second test pilot of the X-1. Jack Woolams was the man who was chosen to break the sound barrier, but he was killed in an airplane crash unrelated to the X-1. No one I spoke with had a bad word to say about him. Walt Williams was with Project Mercury. He later retired as the chief scientist of NASA." There were many other men with the program. Rotundo pointed out that most of the people involved in this program later became very famous in the aviation industry.

As Rotundo concluded, he said, "In 1946 we thought there was a sound barrier and a limit to how fast man could fly. Yes, one day we thought there was a limit to how fast we could fly. We found the only limit wasn't a physical limit but a limit to man's knowledge. On one level my book is about the interesting history of 50 flights of the X-1. On another level it's about the fact that man can challenge the limit. It just turned out to be a lack of knowledge and information rather than a physical barrier."

Louis Rotundo is married to Sherry Par. Rotundo is a lobbyist and represents the state of Hawaii. They are residents of Winter Springs. He also bragged a bit of an autographed picture he has of three of the X-1 men, Dick Frost, Slick Goodlin and Tex Johnson. He possesses the only signed copy in the world. The thing that also makes this photograph so unique is the fact that these three don't speak to each other anymore.

Rotundo's book is available at Waldenbooks, B. Dalton and Bookstop.

War on drugs thought wasteful by some

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I published letters from some readers who disagreed that drugs should be legalized. Today we'll hear from some of the surprisingly large number who favor legalization.

DEAR ABBY: I commend you for sharing your misgivings about America's war on drugs. You are not alone. Milton Friedman, George Shultz and William Buckley (to mention a few conservatives) have all looked askance at the results of indiscriminate drug prohibition: overcrowded prisons, eroded civil liberties, disrespect for laws in general, and a huge, growing black market.

Countries like the Netherlands regulate popular use of alcohol, tobacco and cannabis without fear of social collapse. Is it surprising that while the Dutch government trusts its citizens to behave moderately, drug abuse is less of a problem there? American kids perceive the contradiction of our government telling them to "just say no," while continuing to subsidize the tobacco industry.

ADVICE

OREGON READER
DEAR ABBY: I'm an inmate convicted of possession of an excess of one ounce of marijuana, which is a felony here in Georgia.

I wholeheartedly agree on the legalization of certain controlled substances. I have smoked marijuana off and on for 30 years — since I was 19 — and I have known people who have smoked it who are now in their 50s and 60s. All are reliable family people, and none have committed a violent crime.

In Atlanta last February, there was a smoke fest and 30,000 people gathered. Pot was smoked openly, there were no arrests, and everyone behaved in a proper manner. Look at Sweden and other countries where pot is legal, and you will see it has done no harm to their people.

INMATE 321943, FORSYTH, GA.

DEAR ABBY: While many will find the idea of legalizing drugs morally repugnant, people don't seem to realize that with the stroke of a pen we could eliminate the following:

— Wasted money and human lives spent on continuing the war on drugs — which was clearly lost long ago.

— Street gangs, and the violence and death associated with them. (They survive on drug sales.)

A majority of robberies, burglaries, carjackings and muggings — which are mostly perpetrated by addicts in need of money for drugs.

Morality is one thing, but when are we going to wake up and solve all these major problems with one simple bill? A prescription system might be the most sensible solution.

COMMON SENSE IN SHERMAN OAKS

DEAR ABBY: I believe our government's scare tactics have backfired, making criminals out of decent citizens. In addition, no one can estimate the quality of drugs sold illegally under the table by crooks. If drugs were treated the way alcohol and cigarettes are — regulated and taxed — our country would be a much safer place. I am an occupational therapist with the U.S. Navy (Please withhold my name for obvious reasons.)

MADRID, SPAIN

DEAR ABBY: I completely support your realistic views concerning legalizing drugs. The prohibition of drugs empowers drug lords! Take away the profit, and the criminal element would have no interest in promoting them.

Bravo, Abby! Keep preaching the decriminalization of drugs.
ON YOUR SIDE IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow: One more letter on the legalization of drugs.

Silicone implants can damage chin tissue

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've seen numerous articles on breast silicone implants, but I've never read anything concerning silicone implants elsewhere in the body. In 1979 I had facial surgery and a chin implant. Are there signs I might watch for that would indicate a problem? Is there a way of checking it without removing it?

DEAR READER: The problems with silicone breast implants arise when the prostheses leak silicone into the surrounding tissues, causing fever, arthritis and a condition that resembles lupus.

Although a leaky prosthesis is always a possibility, for practical purposes breast implants seem to be the most common type and cause the most trouble -- perhaps because thousands of women have them.

Your chin implant is a potential cause of tissue damage. However, such prostheses appear to be statistically safer than breast implants that contain silicone. If you are free of symptoms, you can relax.

On the other hand, if you have fever, muscle aching and arthritis, you should return to your surgeon for further evaluation and advice. Sometimes special X-ray tests will identify silicone leakage, but more often the only way to tell whether the prosthesis is intact is to remove it and examine it.

You raise an important question about a topic that is very much on the minds of people who have had cosmetic surgery, as well as the surgeons who implanted the devices and the companies that manufacture them.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a diabetic on Micronase daily. I've developed what my doctor says is a diabetic itch that he and a dermatologist have been unable to help me with. What's the answer?

DEAR READER: Diabetics often develop skin problems. One of the most troublesome is a fine rash, associated with dryness and intense itching. Whether this is due to infection or circulatory deficiencies is unknown. The condition often responds to topical creams containing lanolin (to add moisture to the skin), as well as to stricter control of blood sugar levels. I might add that all medicines have the potential to cause allergic reactions, including rash. Micronase, a pill to lower blood sugar, is no exception.

MEDICINE

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Garrison Keillor wrote, "Some luck lies in not getting what you thought you wanted but getting what you have, which once you have got it you may be smart enough to see is what you would have wanted had you known."

Today's deal, which occurred during a world championship match between Argentina and Italy, must have left the Argentinian North-South pair feeling like that.

He then drew three rounds of trumps and, when they split 3-3, claimed 12 tricks: six spades, four hearts and two minor-suit aces.

At the other table, the Italians reached six spades, but the declarer misplayed, losing two diamond tricks. Yet the contract should have been made. South ruffs the club lead in hand, draws trumps and cashes his top hearts. Now he continues with the ace and another diamond. Even though East tops dummy's queen with the king, he must return a club to dummy's ace, giving declarer access to the 13th heart.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 22, 1994
In the year ahead you could be extremely fortunate in arrangements that simultaneously affect your self-interests and your social interests. Opportunity could through these channels.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be an attentive listener today when socializing with friends. Someone you know may have information that could be very valuable to you today. He or she will willingly share it. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Associates might tell you things today that they wouldn't dream of discussing with others. Because this confidence won't be betrayed, it will strengthen relationships.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) One of your best assets today is your ability to improve upon the ideas of others. Your chart indicates you might apply your skills in three different areas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today you could be extremely lucky both financially and where your career is concerned. Intensely your focus in both of these realms simultaneously.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you might have occasion to utilize in a positive manner a painful negative lesson you experienced in the past. An old misfortune could become your good fortune.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not discount your intuitive perceptions in your worldly affairs today, especially those of a financial or commercial nature.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) On your own you may be only reasonably effective today. However, if you can ally yourself with a partner who has what you lack, the combination could be dynamite.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be reluctant to take on a few extra responsibilities today. You're remarkably equipped to handle challenging situations with a high reward potential.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to keep all lines of communication open today, because good news might try to break through. You won't want to miss any information that is significant.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something in which you're presently involved could have much greater potential than you may realize. Try to investigate this matter in more detail today.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you have to make a major decision today, don't be afraid to ask advice from wise counselors who have helped you previously. Their suggestions could be constructive.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Those bright little ideas you get today could help you improve something that is already reasonably successful. Do not treat them with indifference. Copyright 1993 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
