A Small Town "Goes To Town"

Twenty-three miles from the state capital, with a population of 60,000 persons, there was a town of Cambridge, Wisconsin, where the merchants stood discomfitedly in their door-ways and watched the daily stream of shoppers going to the nearby city. Faced with the glimmering prospect of always being a small town near the big merchandizing center, the merchants became impatient with viewing their empty stores and lack of patronage.

Thirty of the 36 merchants in the little village of 527 souls decided on a campaign to pit their wits against the big city emporiums. The leading business men of the town tried to get every merchant in the community to modernize and to stock up with the latest goods. They altered and they modernized and they put on their shelves goods that would do credit to a town ten times its size. The local bank went the limit in co-operating with the movement, and the local paper kept the people informed of every day's progress.

When the remodeled stores with their fresh stocks were thrown open to the public the crowds that were on hand were unbelievable. Not only did the home people stay at home to do their buying but thousands of shoppers from the surrounding country came to see the revolution and to take advantage of the excellent shopping facilities and the high type of merchandise for sale.

The merchants experiencing a new thrill of increased business and spurred on by the new people their program was bringing to town, intensified their selling campaign. Sales were held, bargains were offered and big advertisements were carried in the newspapers. The result of the whole campaign was that Cambridge is today a city of happy merchants, who have found the way not only to compete on even terms with big city merchants in neighboring towns but surpass them, and whose tills are overflowing with money.

Watch The Pardon Board

The Pardon Board meets this week and public interest is strongly centered on this group of men who will say whether or not certain criminals will be released before their prison terms have expired. The Tampa Times sees this public interest and the publicity given to the meeting as having a salutary effect on the Board.

"Widespread public protests against the secret jail delivery by the Pardon Board last June have had a good effect in at least one respect," says the Times editorial writer. "The Board members, in preparation for next week's session—at which it seems virtually the entire population of Florida's prisons will appeal for release—have given the county judges and prosecutors an opportunity to express their views before the cell doors are flung open.

SANFORD TWENTY YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Rosseter of East Sanford have gone into town to reside in their Magnolia Avenue home. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Edwards have returned to their home in Waverona, Ga. Mrs. Edwards has been the attractive guest at the McDougal home on Celery Avenue for several weeks. At 9:00 o'clock Monday morning Sept. 18, in the Baptist Temple the Froebel Kindergarten will open for the winter season. The director, Miss Margaret Wight, graduated in June from one of the best training schools in the country, and it is her intention to conduct the Kindergarten along the most modern and approved lines, using the best of materials for the children's work. She will be assisted by Miss Ruth McDaniel. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Bradford announces the birth of a son on Sept. 9 at Carterville, Ga. He has been named Samuel Watt, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Bradford will return to Sanford at an early date. Mrs. Walter L. Morgan left on Wednesday for Philadelphia where she will join Mr. Morgan for a visit to various eastern cities. Mary Louise is the name of the little daughter who arrived in the city Tuesday, Sept. 12, to reside permanently with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nickel. Mrs. J. H. Ferguson is spending a few weeks with her daughter at Carrabelle. John Merrill, Franz Coates, Earl Paxton, and Benjamin Whitner expect to leave Sunday night for Gainesville where they will enter the University of Florida. Sanford is proud of her boys who want a higher education and will watch their career with much interest.

"PICK A WINNER" CONTEST WILL BE HELD THIS YEAR

Upon entering Wert's store contestants will be given a slip of paper bearing a word. That word is the "key" word and no one else can use it. Also on the slip of paper will appear a number. This number simply means that no man sign his name on a corresponding number which Mr. Wert will present. Both The Herald and Mr. Wert will do everything to explain any details of the contest during the first week. Each contestant must visit the Wert Jewelry store and secure the "key" word which must be written on Mr. Wert's advertisement in the space reserved for the same. Both the guessing chart and Mr. Wert's ad (properly filled in) must be turned in at The Herald office or in the mail before 5 P. M. Friday of each week. Only Saturday games count. Just to make the contest more interesting and to keep one person from telling another what the "key" word is it was decided to give each contestant a different

Sullivan Says Thomas Is Good Information Source

Socialist Candidate Seen As Island Of Clarity In Foaming Welter Of Strange U. S. Dogmas

By MARK SULLIVAN
WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Among the persons now emanating light or heat, or both, on the American political stage, one who is worth following is Mr. Norman Thomas, candidate of the Socialist party. I counsel "following" Mr. Thomas, not in the sense of adhering to Mr. Thomas's political philosophy, but of listening to him for the sake of information. Any person hungry for some island of clarity in the foaming welter of strange dogmas now chattering at American ears will find Mr. Thomas possessing exceptional exactness of mind. While he is partisan, while he pleads for Socialism as his formula for America and while he opposes the other philosophies of society, both the new ones and the old ones, he is clear-sighted in his vision of America's situation and of the forces now loose in the world.

I say this preliminarily to taking for a text a sentence from a recent speech of Mr. Thomas at Wilmington, Del., as reported by The Associated Press. Mr. Thomas is described as saying that America in the next few years "will be started on the road" to either Socialism or Fascism. To that statement one might assent provided it be put in a different way. I would say that at this moment forces and persons pushing America toward Socialism, and those pushing America toward Fascism, are more alive and energetic than the forces which tend to hold America to its traditional pattern of society and government. But I do not exclude the possibility of America remaining as it is, with some modification.

Let us look at the situation in terms of the political parties in this campaign. We can dismiss the terms of these will get more than a few hundred thousand votes. I doubt if Mr. Thomas expects more, and I doubt if Candidate Browder of the Communist party expects more. If a new form of society comes to America—either socialism or its opposite, fascism—with a few years it will not come through any of the parties formally dedicated to a new order. It will come through transformation of one of both of the two old parties.

The only possible outcome of the election next November is Democratic victory or Republican victory. It is common for opponents of Mr. Roosevelt to say that some variety of socialism. This is far from necessarily true. Mr. Roosevelt is not, consciously, a communist. Certainly he is not a fascist. He has not, consciously, aimed toward dictatorship. True, some of the steps taken during his administration have led toward a changed social order. And it might well be that another Roosevelt administration would take America farther toward a new order. But this is not necessarily true.

Within Mr. Roosevelt's circle, the principal influences making toward a new social order are his radical advisers. Mr. Roosevelt by temperament prefers these advisers to the conservative heads of the Democratic party. If Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected and if his radical advisers continue to have as much power as they have had, then certainly America would be carried toward a new order. But Democratic victory in the coming election carries another possibility. If Mr. Roosevelt is elected, so will a strongly Democratic Congress be elected. And the Democratic party as a whole longs to increase Democratic again, long to get rid of the influence of the radical advisers around Mr. Roosevelt. It is with that expectation that many Democratic leaders are "going along" with the program of re-electing Mr. Roosevelt. Speaking without any authority, I imagine if we could search the minds of senators like Mr. Glass, of Virginia, we would find them waiting for the day of Mr. Roosevelt's re-election, and expecting, on the day after, to begin the purging of the New Deal.

This expectation is held not only by Democratic leaders who have already expressed dissent from the New Deal but by many who have so far supported it. It would not be too much to say that a large majority of the Democrats in the next Congress will be eager to get rid of the New Deal and the radicals, and to make the Democratic party what it would normally be under, for example, such a President as ex-Governor Smith or Mr. James M. Cox, had they been elected. If the Republicans win the coming election, what will follow? The Communists charge Governor Landon would take the country to Fascism. Candidate Browder, of the Communist party, urges Communists to defeat Landon as their imperative task.

But charging Governor Landon with Fascism is just nonsense. Candidate Thomas, of the Socialist party, who does not approve of Governor Landon, nevertheless abhors him of Fascism. "It is," says Mr. Thomas, with an incidental touch of absurdity and dangerous misleading to call this modest, conservative, rather bewildered Kansas a Fascist." It is Candidate Lemke, of the Union party, and his backers, Father Coughlin and the Rev. Gerald Smith who, in Mr. Thomas's view, more nearly approach the Fascist patterns. Mr. Thomas declares the real wish of Governor Landon is "to go back somewhere in American history—to Coolidge, McKinley or maybe all the way to Jefferson." Mr. Thomas thinks that to go back is impossible. And, in a literal sense, it is impossible. I doubt if Governor Landon wants to go back; in any literal sense. I suspect Governor Landon in his campaign speeches will show that he proposes to preserve the American system, but that he contemplates modifications, modifications which will preserve the system but at the same time make it more satisfactory to a larger number of people than it has been during recent years. In all his arguments Mr. Thomas starts with a premise which I think debatable. Practically all radicals of every variety, Socialist, Communists, Fascists and many milder reformers, start with the same premise, the premise that for a particular reason the existing American form of society cannot survive. They say that collectivism of one variety or another is inescapable. "The machine age," says Mr. Thomas, "makes collectivism inevitable."

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Several occurrences in world affairs, including one or two most to these American people, have given encouragement to those who consider the best approach to peace is through machinery such as the League of Nations. Among the first was the seemingly timid policy of Great Britain in dealing with the Italian-Ethiopian affair. As one states foreign relations committee member showed it, England "pulled in her socks and swallowed her pride" for the sake of peace. He suggested that in years past, England might not have pulled in her socks nor swallowed her pride. Other reasons have been advanced for the British policy, that the country was not prepared for a war and was fearful some of her colonies, notably India, would get out of hand. These other reasons, are accepted as contributing factors by those peace-minded persons who favor an organized peace, but only as factors. They insist that an entirely new philosophy of avoidance of war is an increasingly important influence.

When the first efforts were made to bring Americans out of the danger zone, the state department urged Americans to accept transportation out quickly, because the time might come when the United States could not assure a way out at any given moment. To some it sounded like telling the Americans remaining in Spain that they were staying at their own risk, and could not expect protection that might involve conflict. Reaction was prompt. Protests arose at such a policy, and the state department followed it up with a warning that this government in no sense was relieving Spain of responsibility for safety of Americans in the revolt area. But the gesture had been made. The refusal of major nations to halt Japan's strides into China and Britain's claiming and acquiescent hand in dealing with the

Lombard Powell Star in 'My Man Godfrey'

"Some screen characters," says William Powell, "are just 'ink' people, while others are 'flesh and blood.' The first sort is written into a script, then portrayed by some actor, but does not necessarily ever come to life. That kind merely exists for the time an audience views the picture.

"But the 'flesh and blood' character takes on vitality even as it is first placed on the typed page. The motivation, the spoken lines and the action of that sort of personify all that and glow. Such a character is convincingly real because it actually lives in the actor's mind while he is writing the story. It keeps on living long after people see the production.

"When an actor is given the role, the former fictional being waxes and breathes, talks and feels and lives. Every player always hopes for that sort of a part. 'Godfrey' is that sort of 'flesh and blood' character. He appeared to be one when I read the script. Then when I started to portray him, I felt that he and I were walking around the set together like Siamese twins.

William Powell stars with Carole Lombard in Universal's 'My Man Godfrey,' which opened at the Ritz Theater on Sunday.

"After I read the screen play of 'My Man Godfrey' I thought about how he would act, speak, smile; how he would look at people, stand before them, walk across a room; how he would show his humor and humanness. I figured out what sort of a fellow he was, what his breeding would be, what he knew; what his preferences and background were. When I felt that I was thoroughly acquainted with 'Godfrey,' I began to impersonate his character and shed my own. I ate, slept and behaved 'Godfrey' until I was the man himself.

Georgy La Cava directed 'My Man Godfrey.' The cast supporting William Powell and Carole Lombard includes Alice Brady, Gall Patrick, Joan Dixon, Eugene Pallette and Alan Moubray.

Ritz Books Comedy Drama Film With Herbert In Lead

"Love Begins at Twenty," the new First National production which comes to the Ritz Theater on Tuesday, is said to be one of the most hilarious comedy romances of the present show season. The original play by Martin Flavin, introduces some of the most original angles imaginable to which have been added sparkling dialogue and treatment by the screen writers, Tom Reed and Dalton Trumbo. Warren Hull and Patricia Ellis have the romantic roles. Their path of true love has been blocked by Patricia's mother, who accuses Warren, the handsome grocery store clerk. Dorothy Vaughan who houses Hugh Herbert, her henpecked husband and other members of the family, and oversteering throws up to them that she has wasted her life by not marrying a mythical Harold McCauley whom she on-downs with all the virtues of the manly sex.

The redoubtable Hull finally manages to straighten things out and leaves for his honey moon, after tipping the poor little squashed out Hugh to be a man for once and assert himself. He hates to do it, but he manages to get up courage to put his feet on the parlor table and blow tobacco smoke right into his wife's best curtains. He knows he has heard the last of Harold McCauley, who is Robert Gleckler, playing under the character

"Oh, cheep, cheep, cheep, cheep," he cried.
"You poor little chicken," quacked Mrs. Quacko, as she picked him up and put him back on Mr. Quacko's shoulder. "You weren't hurt, were you? Oh no, fortunately you fell where the grass is long and the ground soft. It frightened you for a bit, didn't it? Mr. Quacko, you'd better go more slowly.

The chicken was soothed by the tone of Mrs. Quacko's voice. They could not mean to hurt him. It was impossible. He had never really known ducks, had never liked the little he knew of them, but these ducks were really being kind.

"I'm not hurt much," he gasped. "We'll be home in a very few minutes," quacked Mrs. Quacko. But as they drew near the pond all the chicken saw was the dark water as the sky growing almost black.

Oh, his moth's wing where he could run at such a time. Oh, to shut out the dark night which he did not understand at all. Oh, how his feet hurt and he was not sure whether the tumble had bruised him or not.

"What's that I feel, tears?" quacked Mr. Quacko softly, as he felt some light, light drops on his feathers.

"Come, give him to me," said

Hollywood Talks

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 14.—(AP)—The crowds about the big studio gates in Culver City are larger nowadays, and gather earlier. Inside the lot there is a new air of curious expectancy, and occasionally a twittering stenographer or office girl or waitress exclaims proudly and excitedly: "Guess what! I saw her today. Yes! Studio guides escorting visitors pass by one stage and whisper, almost reverently: 'Sorry, this one is closed.'"

All of which means that Greta Garbo is back at work. Stage 21 is sacred, for there "Camille" is in the throes. From within come bulletins on progress and events— notably, as fitting sequel to the fact that Garbo's Camille had met Robert Taylor's Armand, that recent one about Taylor's rescue of Garbo from peril on the set.

It is etiquette on the lot that one does not stare at Garbo. One glances covertly, even though the heart be in the throat, or looks the other way as she approaches. One must not embarrass Garbo, ever. And yet, when it comes time for her closed car to draw up before the door of Stage 21, there is usually an uncommon number of workers who find themselves with urgent business in the vicinity.

The other day a young woman in make-up, garbed in early American costume, stood near the stage entrance with the others. She was due on her own set at 8, but she had arrived at 7:30 to be on time for this. So she was standing there, waiting—but let Joan Crawford, Garbo fan, tell her own story:

"I like to see Garbo once in a while," she said, "and I hadn't had a glimpse of her in nearly a year. I know it sounds trite, but she is always an inspiration. I saw her car coming, and then I became nervous. I tried to hit my excitement, but I was afraid it would show in my face. I held a newspaper before my face—and when I took it down, she was inside. I had missed again!"

It is an odd commentary on Garbo that other stars—many of them more potent than she at the box-office—are as interested and curious about Garbo as visiting movie fans. One player will tell that she knows Garbo's shyness to be real and painful and not an act; another will wonder if the faced Garbo elusiveness is got mixed with business sagacity, but are interested very politely to be sure.

And the bulletins continue: Garbo that other stars—many of them more potent than she at the box-office—are as interested and curious about Garbo as visiting movie fans. One player will tell that she knows Garbo's shyness to be real and painful and not an act; another will wonder if the faced Garbo elusiveness is got mixed with business sagacity, but are interested very politely to be sure.

Mrs. Quacko. And she took the little chicken and lifted him gently to the ground. "Now for some of my good brook liniment for your feet." She bandaged the feet once again.

But the tears continued to fall. It was night, dark night. Mrs. Quacko understood.

"You'll feel better soon, I know you will," she whispered, and she spread out her wing. Under it she put the little chicken.

GIRLS SAVED FROM 'PHANTOM'

An extortionist who styled himself "The Phantom" threatened to harm Lue Saunders (left) and Eleanor Young, New York debutantes, unless $10,000 were left at a lonely spot on Long Island. Federal agents posing as hitch-hikers, drunks and roadside lovers frequented the rendezvous and arrested a youth who gave his name as William J. Butler of Brooklyn. (Associated Press Photo) is merrier these days; or Garbo has overcome shyness to this extent that she lets extra watch her rehearsal; or Garbo has invited Basil Rathbone, her Karenin of "Anna Karenina," to visit on her set, at etera.

To all of which the ready "So what?" is not the sufficient answer; for Garbo remains the only movie actress whose very moods make news.

Women's College Plans General School Outline

Four Integrated Courses Announced For 1936-37 Schedule

TALLAHASSEE, Sept. 14.—In keeping with modern education trends, Florida State College for Women this week will launch a program of general education as outlined in its revised curriculum adopted last fall after a two-year study.

The college officially opened today with Freshman Week, Classes beginning Sept. 21st. The revised curriculum, which applies to the first two years of college work, seeks to give the student a broader general background for her foundation work before the student is called upon to select the major subject in which she wishes to specialize. The general education program will include only freshmen this year.

Four integrated and required courses in biological, physical, and social sciences and in "humanities" will be offered in the general education program which is effective in all divisions of the college except the School of Music.

Fields which the integrated courses include are: Biological Sciences—botany, zoology, physics and bacteriology; Physical Sciences—physics, chemistry, astronomy, and other subjects; Social Sciences—sociology, economics, geography, history and political science; "Humanities"—English, art, philosophy, and later, music appreciation.

Summer heat set off a fire alarm at San Jose, Calif., industrial plant.
