SAIGON (AP) — Outmanned and today in the northern area, they reported killing 70 Communist troops Sunday, and the U.S. Marines reported a bloody standstill at least 140, the U.S. Command announced today.

Marine casualties were 34 killed and 78 wounded in the six-hour battle just below the demilitarized zone. It was the seventh day of stepped-up military activity in the northern war zone, and there was no sign of any letup.

South Vietnamese troops also were heavily engaged Sunday and today in the northern area. They reported killing 70 Communist troops Sunday, and the U.S. Marines reported a bloody standstill at least 140, the U.S. Command announced today.

Industrial Board Slashed + Lock Up 2 Pools + No Recreation Center

City Gets Revised, 'Skeleton' Budget

A revised $1,006,330 balanced budget cutting $5,000 from the Industrial Board, closing two swimming pools, eliminating a Goldboro recreation center but including that controversial lakefront paving project was presented to the City Commission for approval last night.

Commissioners wanted more time to study City Manager W. E. Knowles' "skeleton" budget which keeps the millage rate at 16 and agreed to discuss it in more detail within the next week.

The biggest surprise in the proposed new budget was a $3,000 slice of the Industrial Board's $48,411 budget. The $3,000 cut would curb advertising and promotional materials.

The budget also includes $12,418 for materials to pave a 100-car parking lot of the marina complex. Originally, the commission declined to consider the paving and voted for a stabilization project.

Knowles also proposed knocking off $20,000 for a down payment on a proposed $100,000 Goldboro recreation center which was supposed to have been constructed on State Farmers Market property on 13th Street.

At the same time both the Goldboro and Ft. Mellon Park pools were stricken from the budget at a savings of $12,555. However, Knowles left some $500 in the pool budget for maintenance.

Knowles also virtually knocked off the Youth Wing activities at the Civic Center at a savings of $100, proposing it be closed from Monday through Thursday and kept open on Friday and Saturday.

The proposed operating budget was $1,006,330 before yesterday. However, Knowles met with department heads in the morning and sliced off some $172,901.

The anticipated revenue has been estimated at $1,179,231 and surplus to contingency at $117,901, giving the city a contingency of $117,901.

In the revised budget memo Knowles said this budget "merely" delays items, projects and equipment. If adopted, this will mean that next year's budget will be larger and more of a hardship.

Department budgets hardest hit were firemen, who suffered losses up to $50,000, recreation, police and streets.

Ignore Planner On 46

Despite the pleas of the County Planner the County Commission by a 2-2 majority today overrode the zoning board and agreed to rezone an area of SR 46 from Agricultural to Commercial.

Effort by the Commission to determine need and ways and means of regulating private utility companies in Seminole County apparently hit a blank wall with a report by Engineer Cal Conklin that compliance with county franchise law was "selective" by the utilities.

Conklin of the firm of Clark, Dietz and Associates gave a comprehensive one and one-half hour report to the Board on necessary measures to implement the local bill passed by the Legislature some years ago to regulate utility companies in the county.

The report was made at no charge to the county.

If the county should decide to implement the law, utilities which are municipalities would not be affected, Conklin said, and "participation by private utilities would be purely voluntary."

In other business, the Commission deferred action until the next meeting on request of the City of Winter Park to use the Ocala Outlying Air Field for "hot pursuit training" by the Winter Park Police Department. Recommendations were requested of the county attorney as to the county's liability if use is permitted and of the sheriff to determine if county police agencies could benefit out of the training.

W. L. LAYER, president of the Seminole Education Association, will speak to the Pine Creek PTA tonight at 8 p.m. Layer will discuss sanctions and the crisis in education.

Small Turnout At Equalization

Most property owners in Sanford apparently are satisfied with the recent reappraisal, if attendance at the Board of Equalization meeting last night is any indication.

Considering 80 per cent of Sanford property owners had their valuations raised, the City Commission heard complaints from only about 30 residents.

The majority of them were persons with fixed incomes, who cited jumps from $90 to $200 and said "high taxes would run us out of town."

The board said it would review all complaints and has scheduled another meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The biggest property owner complaint was from Sanford Plaza, Inc., represented by attorney, C. Vernon Mize. Mize asked the board to reconsider the plaza valuation hike from $20,000 to $28,000.

Other property owners complaining were about rental properties — "when the base is moved out we'll feel the pinch" and that valuations had come up some 40 to 50 per cent during a two-year period.

Some 8,000 parcels were revalued between $500 per cent of the sales price. The total revaluation figure totaled $55,380, 530 and jumped over $5 million over the previous year. Non-exempt property was estimated at $40,769,656.

Port Working Plans Ready By Sept. 30

Andrew Carraway

First graders at Pine Creek Elementary School in Sanford will not be faced with double sessions due to a plan worked out by Principal Herold Heckelbach. The Herald learned today.

Four additional teachers will be hired to work with those already on hand in first and second grades, cutting the teacher-pupil ratio down through a system of "team teaching," Heckelbach advised.

This will be of especial value in first grades where teachers now are handling from 25-35 children per classroom, he said.

Preliminary working plans for the construction of the Port of Sanford will be submitted by Sept. 30 to the Seminole County Board of Commissioners, Sparta, Fla. S.C. also reported last night that the completed construction plans will be submitted to the board about Dec. 1 for advertising for bids to build.

Chairman Andrew Carraway expressed the hope that "the port will be in operation and doing business by this time next year." He expressed this view as the board approved an advertisement for the Florida Journal of Commerce's annual directory.

Kenneth Bassett, newly appointed board member, was elected secretary.

Approval was given—subject to two revisions of a contract with Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to which HUD agrees to bid for the purchase Thursday.

Krider Defends Role Of Chamber

By JANE CASSELLBERRY

"From the looks of things you don't need any help," John Krider, director of the Seminole Chamber of Commerce told a group of South Seminole citizens Monday referring to the building boom in South Seminole County.

Speaking before the sponsored businessmen's luncheon group at the Trade-Wind Cafeteria, Krider stated, "South Seminole stands to gain the most from Disney World, Florida Tech and the Navy Training Center, but you must do it yourself... use your own ingenuity and the Chamber of Commerce will give help where needed."

Murmurs of discontent have been heard from area businessmen, who feel the Chamber is helping Sanford to the exclusion of the rest of the county and proposals have been made either to form their own South Seminole C. of C. or join with Maitland.

Krider told the group that two previous attempts to organize a South Seminole C. of C. with his assistance failed for lack of funds. "It would take a minimum of $25,000 a year to operate effectively," he stated. He told the men they would be better off supporting a stronger Jaycee organization rather than joining the Maitland C. of C. which he referred to as "an ice cream and cake group only interested in parades and beauty contests."

Ken McIntosh Keeps Hands Off 'Bingo'

State law supersedes local law, Casselberry City Attorney Kenneth McIntosh told the Casselberry Council last night and thus laid to rest controversy which has been brewing in the municipality concerning whether bingo should be permitted in the city.

McIntosh reported the state bingo law "is not enabling legislation but active legislation" and authorities bring out guest games, "present city law not withstanding," according to him. He said he had gained from the attorney general's office earlier yesterday.

Final remarks by McIntosh on the subject, "I recommend no action be taken on Ordinance 150" brought resounding applause from the nearly filled meeting room at the Woman's Club Building.

In Casselberry Record Breaking Budget Proposed

Budget totaling $174,242.50 for fiscal 1967-68 was recommended to the Casselberry City Council last night by Mayor Arthur Wheatley.

Major items of revenue anticipated in the record breaking proposed budget include: electric tax, $55,000; utilities tax, $30,000 and fines and forfeitures, $20,000.

Largest departmental allocation in the proposed budget went to the police department with $41,000. Other large allocations are $27,000 for professional and community services; $25,000 for reserves for capital improvement; $20,197, road board and $14,550 for mayor's budget.

Council Vice Chairman Charles Woodruff suggested the board meet within the next two weeks to "work out" the budget.

Why All The Fuss

About six months ago the associate editor in an "Around the Clock" column reported the city of Sanford would have to purchase back the Naval Air Station surplus property. At that time the city was estimated to cost $1,000,000 and the city would borrow the money to pay for it.

Nobody made a fuss about it then. So why now?

What disturbs the Herald is when a subject as important as the Navy base comes up. City Hall immediately goes into a state of alarm. They are afraid to tell us taxpayers the truth. Last week two General Services Administration officials agreed to come into Sanford to discuss the acquisition of the facility.

"Confidentiality" — was the word City Manager V. E. Knowles gave to the conference and warned all five commissioners not to tell the press.

Of course, the Herald found out about it and we immediately went to work contacting GSA officials in Atlanta.

"No comment" was their answer.

The associate editor of this paper attempted to do all in on the conference and the answer from the city manager was: "It's off-the-record but I'll fill you in after the meeting."

If it's okay for the city manager to fill us in after the meeting why can't the press attend and see what happens either estimated the cost?

Who's kidding who?

It makes you wonder if someone isn't hiding something.

Getting back to the NAS mess.

What also disturbs us even more than the fact the taxpayers have to foot the bill for the base, is the chance we may still lose the facility to some branch of the civilian government like the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Anyway that's what the city manager said after the meeting.

And we weren't there so, we have to take his word for it.

Right?

The Department of Defense says the bill will be ours.

The GSA says maybe?

And the city says — Shhhhhhhhhhh! Meanwhile, the rest of us are still in the dark. Perhaps we'll find out when they want to pass a bond issue.

Analysis Of The News

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gale W. McGee, Wyoming Democrat, says Michigan Gov. George Romney must have the "clearest mind in America, he changes it so often."

It's when Romney himself talked of "brainwashing" that he got into trouble.

Here are some examples of how Romney says one thing at one time and something else at another, going back to 1961.

On Feb. 8 of that year he backed President Johnson's decision to launch retaliatory air strikes against North Vietnam.

And a month later Romney was saying the United States should take a stronger stand.

But by Dec. 10, 1963, asked if American air strikes should be stepped up, he said this country should be cautious.

"Every step we take," he said last May, "may be against better bombing because that would cause more problems."

On Nov. 16, 1963 he said he didn't expect the war to end at the bargaining table "but only when they'd rather kill their families than risk their lives." He had already said a negotiated settlement would be a mistake.

By May 6, 1967 he was saying the United States should encourage the South Vietnamese to negotiate with the Viet Cong.

Last Aug. 16 he said someone who thought North Vietnam could be brought to the bargaining table by just bombing wasn't thinking soundly.

In November, 1965 Romney went to Saigon with other Democratic members of the Senate and American officials there, and came away saying "we are doing the morally right thing."

The officials couldn't have given him a sunny picture because he said things might get worse before they get better.

But on April 5, 1966 he was already questioning whether it was right to fight the war, on July 5 he wasn't sure the time and place were right for a show trial, and on March 1967 Romney said he was going to have to determine whether or not to get involved in civil war.

By May 24, 1967 he was saying "the biggest mistake we have made in the Vietnam war is in getting involved."

Twice, in 1965 after a White House briefing by Johnson and other top officials for him and other governors, and in 1966 at a governors' conference, Romney said he had been asked to administer the policy.

On May 16, 1965 the only specific point of disagreement he raised about the Vietnam situation was in continuing aid to countries whose ships carried supplies to North Vietnam.

But later he said Johnson didn't have an effective policy, that Johnson had made a mistake in getting involved, and called his policy "clumsy, ill-timed and poorly coordinated."

Starting as far back as July 25, 1965 he was saying there was need for more information about the war and that Johnson was misleading the people by covering up mistakes. He has made repeated statements like that.

Then last week, referring to his 1963 visit to Saigon when he placed a bet on a show trial, he said he had been "brainwashed" and now thinks he had no need to get involved in civil war.

This was too much for the Detroit News, which had supported his three successful bids for the Michigan governorship. It suggested he abandon any idea he might have about the presidency, saying he lacked the ability to achieve stability in presidential politics.

Last July the newspaper said Romney might be "physically ignorant of what the realities are in Vietnam."
