Budget session slated tonight

LONGWOOD— Public works and the water and sewer budgets will be discussed by the city commission at tonight's 7 o'clock work session on the proposed 1988-89 city budget. This is the third session on the proposed $9,753,857 budget and City Administrator Gene DeMarie is expected to present revised figures reflecting changes directed by the commission in earlier sessions.

Commissioners are expected to address a 30 percent utility rate increase, which DeMarie said was required to allow continuation of current service without allowing for expansion of the system. In addition to the need for funding major repairs and replacement, the city is faced with major debt service payments for the purchase of sewage capacity from Seminole County and hookup to the county's sewer system.

Man convicted of cat-painting

WADESBORO, N.C. (UPI) — A man who spray-painted his neighbor's cat red from neck to tail has been convicted of cruelty to animals.

Anson County District Judge Fentress Horner convicted William Hightower Tuesday and ordered the 66-year-old to pay $40 in court costs.

Neighbor William Porter testified that his cat, Bullet, came home April 19 with red paint sprayed from neck to tail.

"It was for identification," said attorney Charles Collins, who represents William Hightower. "The cat had been messing with his bluebirds and walking all over his wife's car. The owner just let the cat run free."

Bumper sticker bill gets axed

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — A proposal to ban the display of obscene bumper stickers in Louisiana has been vetoed by Gov. Buddy Roemer.

"It is just unwise legislation," Roemer said Tuesday in explaining his veto. "It could cost us a ton" of money to defend the laws for their constitutionality in court.

Roemer vetoed two bills. One, by Rep. V. J. Bella, R-Berwick, described six words as being obscene and mandated they be no bigger than 1/2 of an inch if displayed on a vehicle bumper sticker. That is about the height of print on a regular newspaper page.

Candidate must return funds

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Jeff Etchberger, Republican District 3 county commission candidate, will have to refund all of his contributions received prior to July 5 because he accepted the funds illegally.

In his campaign contribution report filed with Supervisor of Elections Sandy Goard's office last week, Etchberger reported receiving $6,450 in 11 separate contributions between June 22 and June 30, the end of the last quarter's reporting period. All of those funds will have to be refunded, Goard said Wednesday.

Etchberger, former Altamonte Springs city manager, appointed his wife, Bobbi, as his campaign manager and opened his campaign account at Sun Bank in Altamonte Springs on June 22. However, he failed to submit the document declaring the name of his campaign treasurer and his bank to Goard's office until July 5.

State campaign financing laws state a candidate cannot receive or spend contributions to further his campaign goals until the treasurer is appointed, the campaign account is opened and the document declaring both is filed with the local elections official's office.

"I was not aware I had to file the forms before I could receive funds," Etchberger said.

Goard gave Etchberger until 5 p.m. Friday to file an amended report for the period before July 1.

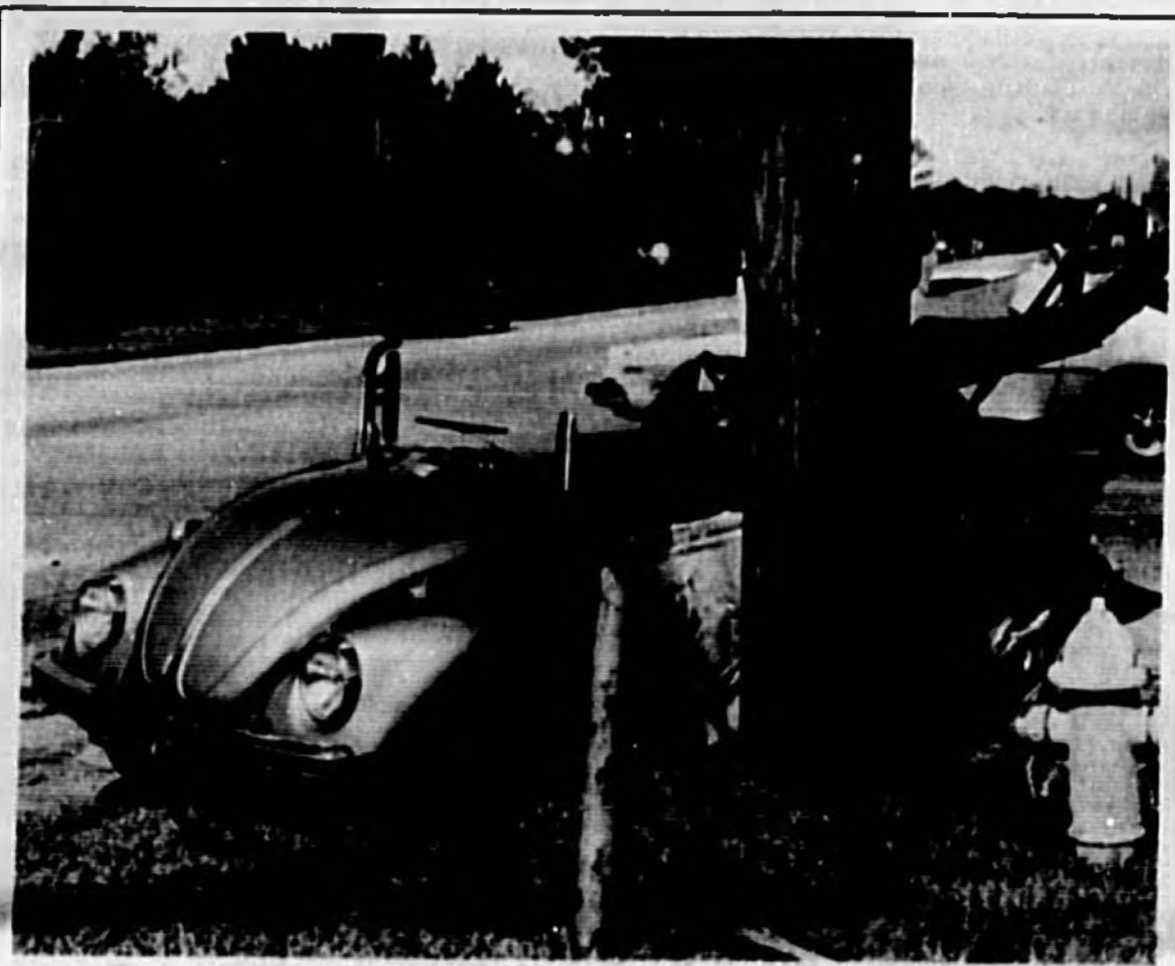

Etchberger said Wednesday most of the 11 checks, including four for $1,000, had been returned. He said the contributors had been sympathetic.

"A lot of them didn't realize they could contribute up to $1,000 and said they'll give more," Etchberger said.

Etchberger is a professional consultant, recently to the City of Longwood in preparation of the city's budget and review of its departments. Although Etchberger holds no county license to provide consulting services in the county, he said he always works as a contract employee of the agency or firm and therefore is not required to hold a county license to provide services.

Etchberger was a contract employee with I&P Financial, Inc., an operating company of I&P Marketing, Inc. of Winter Park, to provide services to Longwood, he said. He said he contracted with the firm rather than work directly for the city to avoid a possible conflict of interest for his sister-in-law, Longwood Deputy Mayor Lynette Dennis.

Man hospitalized after crash

SANFORD — A Lake Mary man is in serious condition today in the Orlando Regional Medical Center with injuries sustained in an automobile accident Wednesday morning on State Road 46A.

Gilbert B. Oglie, 64, of 112 Park Place, Lake Mary, was flown by AirCare helicopter to the Orlando Regional Medical Center after he was extricated from his 1970 Volkswagen by rescue personnel. According to a report from the Florida Highway Patrol, Oglie was north bound on Old Lake Mary Road at 9 a.m. when he apparently failed to stop at a stop sign at the intersection with State Road 46A.

The Volkswagen was struck broadside by a 1987 Chevrolet driven by Shirley Arnette

Personal worth disclosures show Keiner atop pack

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Warren Keiner, Democrat candidate for the District 3 commission seat, listed the highest personal net worth of any candidate for county office to date with a net worth of more than $1 million as of June 30.

Keiner's opponent Fred Streetman, incumbent Republican Seminole County District 3 commissioner, listed the second highest personal net worth of more than $900,000.

Keiner and Republican Jeff Etchberger qualified for the District 3 commission campaign Wednesday. Republicans Dick VanDerWeide and Jennifer Kelley, and Democrat Amos Jones qualified for the District 5 commission race.

Donald Myers, Republican candidate for tax collector and incumbent Robert Hughes, superintendent of schools, along with school board president Joseph Williams, also qualified Wednesday.

Keiner listed a personal net worth of $1,056,091. His assets, including his $188,000 Longwood home and numerous stock and bond holdings, totaled $1,127,306. His liabilities, a loan and an amount owed to Paul Voske of Weitsdale, totaled $146,215. His 1987 income, including $7,703 from his Cypress Graphics photography business, totaled $66,532.

Streetman, along with District 5 Republican candidate Ned Johnson, Republican supervisor of elections candidate Sarah Britton and school board candidate Nancy Warren, qualified for the 1988 county elections Tuesday.

Monday, Dave Knickerbocker, Republican District 1 candidate kicked off the week-long qualifying period, followed by Republican Sheriff John Polk, Clerk of Court David Berrien and Supervisor of Elections Sandy Goard. Two Republican tax collector candidates, Barbara Christensen and Ray Valdes, also qualified Monday as did Property Appraiser Bill Suher.

County candidate qualifying continues until noon Friday. Candidates are required to sign an oath declaring that they are registered Seminole County voters and are seeking no other office. They are also required to file a personal income and net worth statement and pay a filing fee of 5 percent of the county salary or 3 percent of their school board salary.

Streetman listed a net worth of $909,282 as of June 1988. He listed assets of over $1 million — $1,087,082 — and liabilities of $127,800. His principle assets are half-interest in his business, Streetman & Associates, Inc., worth $125,000 and half-interest in an office and warehouse

Site plan ties up Longwood commission

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — A site plan for Southern Design and Construction's proposed warehouse to be built in the Baywood Industrial Park seemed a routine matter, but it took three motions by the city commission before it finally passed.

The Local Planning Agency had recommended approval of the site plan. The hangup Monday night was caused by two recommendations by City Planner Chris Nagle, who wanted the applicant to move the location of the dumpster to the rear retention area and to build a masonry or wood facade on the street side of the building. The LPA did not require these items because of the poor appearance of adjacent buildings which have their dumpsters in the front and were not required to have a facade.

David Cayton, the property owner and applicant, told the commission a facade would add $4,000 to his cost. He also objected to moving the dumpster, claiming the retention area is critical because there is no place else to put it on the property and the garbage truck would have difficulty turning around. He said he is afraid the weight of the truck and the dumpster would destroy the paving in his parking lot.

A motion by Lynette Dennis to approve the site plan subject to compliance with Nagle's recommendation was defeated, as was a motion by Commissioner Hank Hardy to approve it as recommended by the LPA. Finally a motion by Commissioner Rick Bullinger requiring the dumpster to be in the rear of the building, but eliminating the facade requirement, was passed unanimously.

In other business, the commission approved a conditional use request for one year for Precision Automotive to locate an auto-light truck repair service at 260 E. Palmetto Ave. in a 9,800 sq. ft. multi-tenant metal building. The building would be located in light industrial zoning, but across the street from residential property.

A hearing on the conditional use submitted by Amoco Oil Co. for a filling station/convenience store on State Road 434 across from Harbour Isle Way was continued until Aug. 1 because required drawings had not been submitted.

The commissioners also voted unanimously to:

- Approve a contract with Montgomery, Preservation

Parks board member quits under pressure

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Rhonda Kramer, wife of city attorney Michael Kramer, has resigned from the volunteer Parks and Recreation Advisory Board after at least one commissioner objected to her appointment.

Businessman Bret Segrest has been named by Mayor Dave Gunter to replace her.

Deputy Mayor Lynette Dennis said the naming of Kramer to the advisory board June 20 had come as "an absolute shock" to her. "After I went home, I thought about it," she said, "and it didn't seem like the right thing to do when we have so many in the population to draw from. When you have couples working for the city and serving on boards you begin to get a political network. I didn't think it was right so I spoke to (City Clerk) Don Terry and (City Administrator) Gene DeMarie and told them about how I felt."

Reportedly, when Gunter refused to withdraw his appointment of Kramer, she was told to decline the appointment or face an embarrassing public airing of the matter.

No announcement was made Monday of Kramer's resignation, but when asked later about what happened.

Budget of $161 million proposed for schools

By JOYCE HERALD
UCF Intern

SANFORD — Seminole County School Board Members met briefly yesterday to receive the county's proposed $161 million school budget for the 1988-89 fiscal year.

Superintendent Robert Hughes presented the board with the tentative plan that will add staff, programs and new school buses to the district's resources.

Expenditures for the district's 45 schools and 39 departments are projected to increase nearly $20 million. The report cites uncontrollable costs such as a 50 percent increase in employer-paid premiums for hospitalization insurance for employees, expenses for asbestos and radon testing, and increases in utility costs as contributing to the increase.

Although the projected increase in the budget is more than 14 percent, local property owners will only see a 2.3 percent increase in their property taxes for schools, or about 18 cents per $1,000 of assessed property value, if the budget is adopted.

This means a property owner with a home assessed at $80,000 with a home-stead exemption of $25,000, will pay $9.74 more for school taxes.

Last year the homeowner paid $419.74 in school taxes. This year he will pay $429.50, if the plan is approved.

The tentative budget sets aside funding for several new staff positions.

An additional teacher for each elementary school has been proposed as well as seven instructional assistants for specific learning disability classes at the elemen-

POLICE BRIEFS

Three arrested in marijuana sting

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — An Altamonte Springs couple who allegedly made a deal to buy a pound of marijuana from a police agent were arrested at their house, where the transaction was reportedly made.

Altamonte Springs police reported finding additional marijuana in the house of Kevin Phillip Massey, 31, and Jennifer Duncan Massey, 37, of 820-B Orienta Ave. They also arrested a third suspect, Hugo Nicholls, 35, of 564 W. Notre Dame Drive, who arrived during the bust. He was cited for possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana after two marijuana cigarettes were reportedly found in a search of his car. He was being held in lieu of $500 bond.

The Masseys were each being held in lieu of $1,000 bond on complaints of possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana, possession with intent to distribute, and conspiracy to possess more than 20 grams of pot.

Police report receiving a tip that Mrs. Massey wanted to buy a pound of pot. They contacted her and arranged for a meeting, which culminated in a visit to her house where she and her husband allegedly accepted a pound of marijuana from the agent. The agreed price of the pot was $400, police said.

Stolen cars recovered

SANFORD — Two automobiles reported stolen in Sanford were recovered by police.

Police believe a 1977 Chevrolet Camaro, stolen from National Auto Sales, 1120 S. Sanford Ave., on Monday, was the same car left abandoned at Seminole Gardens Apartments early Tuesday morning and arrested a man hiding under a porch.

Police reported determining the car Richard Inman, 18, of 22 Seminole Gardens, allegedly abandoned at about 3:32 a.m. Tuesday, had been stolen from the dealership. Inman was booked for the theft at 9:50 a.m. Tuesday and remains jailed in lieu of bond.

Police noticed the car driving through the parking lots at Seminole Gardens Apartments without license plates at 1:30 a.m. and pursued the vehicle. A driver and passenger jumped out of the car and fled on foot.

Police report a police dog found Inman hiding under steps at Seminole Gardens after he reportedly ran from them.

Police also recovered a stolen 1984 Cadillac, valued at $8,500, at the Academy Manor Park parking lot, off of Academy Avenue, Tuesday morning.

Cleophas White Jr., of 110 Rollins St., noticed the car on blocks after getting up at 11 a.m. and called police. The car was reported stolen in Orange County on Monday.

Man accused of assaulting boy

WINTER SPRINGS — A Winter Park man accused of sexually assaulting a 9-year-old boy on several occasions while visiting the boy's Winter Springs house was arrested on a complaint of committing a lewd and lascivious act. He is being held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

The boy reported the assaults to his mother July 8 and that led to the arrest at 4 p.m. Wednesday of Robert Jake O'Connor, 30, of 1050 N. Orlando Ave. He was arrested at his work place in Casselberry.

The boy alleges that he was molested in his bed at least twice. During one attack, he said, he tried to escape, but was threatened and pulled back to bed.

Accused of battery, robbery

OVIDO — A man captured at the scene after he allegedly kicked open the door to a neighbor's apartment, beat the resident with a jack and stole $40, remains jailed on a complaint of aggravated battery and robbery.

Randy Brown, 28, of Apt. 3, The Douglas Bldg., Oviedo, was arrested there at 1:20 a.m. today, after the victim, Melvin Hinson, 30, of Apt. 4, fled to call police.

Police said they met Hinson, who told them of the attack, and returned home with him to make the arrest. Hinson was treated for minor injuries at a local medical facility. Police reported the pair apparently argued over Brown's alleged demand of money from Hinson, which a woman who had been Hinson's girlfriend reportedly owed Brown.

Drug sting fails but arrest made

SANFORD — A drug deal between a City County Investigative Bureau informant and a suspected cocaine dealer didn't pan out, but CCIB agents report pursuing the suspect from the scene and arresting him after he allegedly ran and threw away a bag of cocaine.

The initial contact with Bradley Gene Cox, 25, who refused to give an address, was reportedly made on 24th Street at Sanford Avenue at about 8:50 p.m. Wednesday.

He was followed from there after the planned deal soured, and was confronted by an agent on Mitchell Court East. Cox reportedly ran, jumped a wall and threw away a bag before he was captured. The bag recovered by agents contained 56 grams of cocaine, they said.

Cox is being held without bond on a complaint of trafficking in cocaine.

Guest arrested on burglary count

WINTER PARK — A 23-year-old Winter Park man accused of burglarizing the bedroom of his cousin while a guest in her rural Winter Park house, faces charges of grand theft and dealing in stolen property.

Jason Andrew Lucas of Sedgfield Apartments #172 is accused of selling some jewelry he allegedly stole from the bedroom of Shannon Pease while Pease was on vacation June 22.

Also stolen from Pease's room, which she locked before leaving home, were items of clothing and furniture, which along with the jewelry had a total value of $500, a Seminole County sheriff's report said.

Some jewelry was pawned in Casselberry, and more was sold in Orange County, a sheriff's report said.

Lucas was arrested at home at 2:38 p.m. Wednesday. He remains jailed.

According to the police report, Jesse Burke, 49, of 1508 W. 15th St., was crossing the railroad tracks at Sixth Street and Avacado Avenue at 9 p.m. when he was jumped by two men. The attackers robbed Burke of $30 after beating him

Murder suspect caught at hotel

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — An escapee from a jail work release program, who is suspected in the murder of a 36-year-old Orlando man, was captured in Altamonte Springs Wednesday and was booked into the Seminole County Jail for grand theft auto.

Cory Allen Skinner, 26, of Orlando, was also booked on a complaint of defrauding an innkeeper. He was arrested by Altamonte Springs police at the Altamonte Hilton about 11:20 a.m. Wednesday. At the time of his arrest he reportedly had the 1987 Oldsmobile of murder victim Richard Egner. He also had allegedly used Egner's stolen credit cards to pay for hotel services.

The use of the credit cards led Orlando police to the Inn Wednesday morning, accompanied by Altamonte Springs police. Police reported taking Skinner into custody outside Egner's car at the Inn.

Egner's body was found by his parents in a closet at his house Tuesday, police reported.

Robbery is a possible motive in the murder, police said. Skinner, a convicted forger and thief in Palm Beach and Monroe counties escaped from a state work release program about one month ago. At the time of his capture there was an outstanding warrant charging him with escape.

Strange weather gets curiouser

By FRED H. COOPER
Herald staff writer

This unchanging weather we're having seems to be changing so often you can just about predict anything and get it. The folks at the National Weather Service office controlling weather in Seminole County tells of a daily caller, an admitted schizophrenic, who reveals his hallucinations regarding the weather. Don't you just wonder if the poor man's fantasies aren't often more accurate than those hightech jobbies often imposed on us.

Today is that tomorrow you worried about yesterday and now you know the weather is the same. Yes, it will probably rain this afternoon but it will be scattered about so if it doesn't rain on you, just drive a few blocks and enjoy the shower. The clouds are holding the temperatures down however. Just think, only the high 80s yesterday, and if they hold their heavenly positions, the same temperature range will repeat today — 70s to 80s.

If you're planning to plant something today or tomorrow, don't. It seems that the moon is in Libra so it's the time for pruning or raking or something except planting. If you feel you must, however, consult your moonwatch.

The rest of the nation seems to be as confused, weatherwise, as we are.

A cascade of rain that turned "dust to mud" drenched patches of a Farm Belt choked by the fourth-worst drought in U.S. history but failed to take much sizzle out of the heat wave in the East, while record hot weather in the West is speeding up melon harvest but hurting the grape crop in California.

A cold front triggered showers and thunderstorms from the Great Lakes and western

New England through the drought-ravaged Ohio and Tennessee valleys into Arkansas and much of southern Texas to New Mexico Wednesday.

The storms dumped 4 inches of rain in Kentucky, 3 inches in Missouri and from 1 to 2 inches in most other areas, the National Weather Service said. More than 7 inches fell in Salem in southern Indiana.

Showers and thunderstorms early today swept from southern Maine across Maryland, southern New York state across West Virginia and western Virginia, and Ohio across Mississippi and northern Alabama. The wet weather stretched over northern Lower Michigan and Wisconsin, across central and south central Texas, and from southwest Arizona across Southern California.

But the crop-wilting drought is persisting and forecasters warned the rain will vanish in some areas and dry weather will return by the weekend, once the cold front that spawned the storms Tuesday and Wednesday has disappeared.

Heavy rain is forecast through Monday, however, for southeast Texas, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee, New England, and the Atlantic Coast states.

The NWS said the 1988 drought is ranked fourth in coverage in U.S. history. The percentage of total area covered by either extreme or severe drought conditions stood at 43 percent as of July 9, increasing from 33 percent.

(Reports by United Press International and data provided by the National Weather Service were used in compiling this report.)

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Bush: No 'slash-and-burn' candidate

WARREN, Mich. — Vice President George Bush is refusing to be drawn into an exchange with Democrats who have spent hours of national television time bashing his record and reputation.

In a campaign swing that will take him through eight states in five days — including today in Greenville, S.C., where Democrat Jesse Jackson was born — the Republican presidential candidate chose Wednesday to ignore the harsh attacks from the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, asserting that he had not heard them while fishing for four days in Wyoming.

"I'm not too good at being a slash-and-burn candidate," Bush said, suggesting the sharp attacks may show "a little desperation" on the part of Democrats.

Bush refused to speculate on his choice for a running mate, saying the process has just begun and that he probably would not name his selection before the GOP convention. He did say Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas would have to be on any list.

North wants trial moved back

WASHINGTON — If Oliver North is prosecuted in the Iran-Contra case this fall, the retired Marine will get a "political trial" that violates his right to a fair and impartial hearing, his lawyers say.

In a 25-page legal brief filed late Wednesday, North's attorneys asked U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell to delay his Sept. 20 trial until March because of the repercussions of an autumn proceeding in the heat of a general election campaign.

They also argued it would be "absolutely impossible" to be prepared for trial by late September, citing the need to review a million pages of documents, to interview scores of witnesses and to file stacks of court papers.

WORLD BRIEFS

Israelis kill two, wound 14

JERUSALEM — Soldiers shot and killed two Palestinians and wounded at least 14 others in the Israeli-occupied West Bank today, Palestinian sources said, and violence flared a third straight day in Arab East Jerusalem.

Schoolchildren and older youths hurled stones at police and Israeli and Palestinian cars in the main commercial district of Arab East Jerusalem while other Arab demonstrators erected roadblocks of burning tires and garbage in outlying areas.

The violence spread to one southeastern neighborhood of Jerusalem, where at least two residents had windows in their homes broken by Palestinian children from the nearby Arab village Jabal Mukaber, witnesses and police said. One resident said it was the 10th time this year Palestinians had stoned her home.

In the West Bank town of Nablus, soldiers opened fire on Palestinian demonstrators, killing at least two and wounding at least 14 others, Palestinian sources said.

Armenian protests continue

MOSCOW — Protests persisted in Armenia and the disputed Nagorno Karabakh region despite a new Kremlin crackdown signaled by a decision to strip an Armenian nationalist leader of his citizenship and expel him from the country.

Wednesday's announcement of the punishment of Parury Airtikyan was reminiscent of the harsh actions of previous Soviet regimes and came one day after the Kremlin ordered an end to months of nationalist unrest over Nagorno Karabakh.

The predominantly Christian Armenian enclave tried to secede from the Moslem republic of Azerbaijan this month, but was prevented from doing so by a ruling from the central Soviet Supreme Soviet in Moscow.

Nagorno Karabakh is 80 percent Armenian but has been part of Azerbaijan since 1923.

10 dead, 13 wounded in prison riot

MORELIA, Mexico — Inmates at a prison in central Mexico took guns from their guards and sprayed bullets around the penitentiary during a riot and escape attempt that left 10 prisoners dead and 13 people wounded, officials said.

A statement from the Michoacan state governor's office said prisoners, penitentiary officials and guards were wounded in the rioting and breakout Wednesday at the Centro Penitenciario in the central highlands state of Michoacan.

Most of the prisoners involved in the gun battle and breakout were jailed on drug trafficking, homicide and bank robbery charges.

Now it's the Duke's turn

ATLANTA — Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis steps to the podium of his party's national convention tonight to outline his autumn battle plan against the Republicans and to draw his vision of the nation's future.

The 40th quadrennial gathering acclaimed the Massachusetts governor its standardbearer Wednesday night in the traditional roll call of the states. The final tally was 2,876.25 for Dukakis and 1,218.5 for Chicago civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, who culminated his 1988 White House campaign Tuesday with an electrifying address to the convention.

California, where Dukakis clinched the nomination by winning the big June 7 primary, gave the governor 235 of its 363 votes, which put him officially over the 2,082 necessary to claim the party's highest prize.

Dukakis watched the balloting on television in his downtown hotel suite with his wife, Kitty, his family, friends and aides. When California Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy announced his state's vote, Dukakis raised his right fist slightly, kissed his wife and accepted a kiss from his mother, Euterpe.

Family and friends toasted one another and aide Joe Warren addressed his boss as "Mr. President" — prompting Dukakis to caution jokingly: "Be careful, Joe. You don't want to put the evil eye on me."

In a fresh demonstration of the full-contact unity nurtured and celebrated during the convention, Jackson's national campaign chairman, California

Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, moved for Dukakis's nomination to be unanimous.

Delegates, alternates, party officials and honored guests roared thunderous approval. The Omni Coliseum, again packed to the eaves, quickly filled with signs saying "Dukakis for President '88." The crowd chanted "We want Mike!"

They will get him tonight — when the 54-year-old son of Greek immigrants delivers his acceptance speech, which he suggested publicly Wednesday would not approach the fiery passion of the address by his defeated rival.

Also tonight, the convention will nominate Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas as the party's vice presidential candidate — likely a potent weapon in the campaign against Republican Vice President George Bush, who claims the Lone Star State as an adopted home.

To allow California to put Dukakis over the top in delegate votes, the states engaged in a elaborate dance during the roll call of saying they would "pass" so the magic numbers would fall to the Golden State. The same deals will occur tonight so Texas can give its senior senator the votes for the nomination.

Dukakis's July 12 choice of the patrician, wealthy Bentsen as his running mate disappointed Jackson and his supporters, and the preacher-politician threatened to challenge the Texan for the No. 2 spot.

After a tense weekend of political skirmishing, Jackson and Dukakis resolved their differences Monday, allowing the party to proclaim itself a well-oiled fighting machine against the GOP — a theme struck time and again during this week's Democratic National Convention.

The peace pact provided for rules changes and platform language Jackson wanted. But more important for the Democrats' Nov. 8 prospects, it allows Dukakis to roll into the fall campaign with a unified party more confident of victory than at any time since 1964.

The Democratic ticket will leave Atlanta promptly Friday for a three-day swing through Texas, California, North Dakota, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

In Topeka, Kan., Senate Republican leader Robert Dole urged Bush Wednesday to name a running mate soon to avoid giving Dukakis and Bentsen "a head start" on the fall campaign. Dole, who unsuccessfully challenged Bush for his party's nomination, is considered a potential Bush running mate himself.

In other developments during the third day of the convention:

— New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who chose not to seek the presidency this year, warned Democrats of the duties to come with a November victory: "The sense of unity will last, certainly, through the election, (but) then it will begin to be strained because after that ... you have to start producing."

— Coretta Scott King, who by all accounts has had hard feelings toward Jackson for the 20 years since he seized attention after her husband's assassination, told him in a convention speech: "Martin would be proud of you, and we are all proud of you."

— Again, the Atlanta fire marshal closed the Omni when it reached its seating capacity of 12,500. Tuesday, many delegates were closed out of Jackson's address; those locked out Wednesday included Monday's keynote speaker, Texas Treasurer Ann Richards, Reps. Les Aspin of Wisconsin and Peter Rodino of New Jersey and Bert Lance, a Jackson adviser and Carter administration official.

Dukakis's name was placed in nomination by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, and in another show of unity, the "Jesse" signs were put away and "Duke" signs filled the Omni to the dome.

Convention '88 notebook

United Press International

ATLANTA — Scenes from around the Democratic National Convention:

OK, OK, let's go
Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, giving the speech to nominate his gubernatorial colleague from Massachusetts for president, spoke so long beyond his allotted time that convention Chairman Jim Wright first tried to signal him from off-camera. When that and the increasing disinterest of convention delegates failed to end the speech, the TelePrompTer in front of Clinton displayed a sign reading: "Please — your time is up." The "please" flashed insistently.

Clinton ended his allegedly 20-minute speech 32 minutes after it began.

Whose speech is it, anyway?
Wright, the speaker of the House, told reporters he had a little problem with the TelePrompTer for one of his own speeches before the convention. The Texan said he finally had dictated it, practiced it once and even had memorized the first line — but when he reached the podium to deliver it, "I said the first line, looked at the TelePrompTer and there was Byrd's speech."

Robert Byrd, the Senate Democratic leader from West Virginia, spoke on a completely different topic. Wright was forced to wing it. "Maybe I should have given Byrd's speech," he mused later.

Here today, gone today
Wednesday's celebrities to be locked out of the convention floor because of cramped space included Monday's convention folk hero, Texas Treasurer Ann Richards, who gave the stirring keynote address; Sen. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., who presided over the Watergate hearings; Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.; the House Armed Services Committee chairman and Georgia native son Bert Lance, budget czar for President Carter.

To make matters worse, as Richards' car headed toward the exit, security forces would not let her outside the gates while the convention was meeting, and she had to turn around and exit the back way.

They're ba-a-a-ck
Nixon, Humphrey, Kennedy and McCarthy are running again in 1988.

But that's Missouri's Jay Nixon, no relation to the former president; Minnesota's Skip Humphrey, only the son of the former vice president, and California's Leo McCarthy, no relation to Eugene.

They're all seeking Senate seats, while Patrick Kennedy, son of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is seeking a state Senate seat in Rhode Island.

Of his name, a rather unfortunate one for a Democratic politician, Nixon figures, "It could have been worse. I have a first cousin named Richard. There was a time when he couldn't cash his own checks."

Been outside lately, pal?

The loudest complaints during convention week have been about Atlanta's hot, sticky, miserable weather, the kind that freezes hair and robs convention-goers of appetites and energy.

But there he was in the souvenir gallery — a man actually selling, or trying to sell, fur coats.

Iraq shells Iranian villages

United Press International

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iraqi gunners sent artillery shells crashing into Iran's border villages today, killing one person and injuring two others, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said.

Iraqi shells fell on the villages of Denaran, Sanjveh and Islamabad, in Iran's northern Azarbaijan province, IRNA said.

"One civilian was martyred and two others were injured in the Iraqi shelling," the official agency said, adding five homes were also destroyed.

Iraq did not immediately confirm the Iraqi claim the day after its foreign minister took the initiative and proposed a five-point peace package he said would put to rest the sincerity of Iran's resolve to end nearly eight years of war between the two nations.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz asked U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar Wednesday to arrange a meeting in New York between Iranian and Iraqi representatives.

Perez de Cuellar told reporters in New York that he is sending a U.N. military team to the two warring nations to prepare the ground for a truce, but did not say when it might start.

Aziz warned that Iran may have announced it was accepting U.N. Resolution 598 calling for peace talks and an immediate cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war simply as a ploy to gain time to reorganize its weakened and demoralized armies.

Among other points in his package, which the official Iraqi News Agency described as "a practical step toward the implementation of the resolution," Aziz demanded that Iran pledge to stop attacking Persian Gulf shipping.

Charter hearings are important

Lee Roy Rice and Harry Stewart continued a great American tradition Tuesday night during discussions on a charter for Seminole County.

The first renowned duo on a similar scene was Thomas Jefferson in his protracted debates with the great Federalist Alexander Hamilton. The basic tenets of states' rights were born of Jefferson's philosophy and endured through most of the early years of the Republic.

Debate during the hearing on the charter thus far has centered on the fundamental question of prevailing authority — cities or the county. Reasoned arguments by both sides marked that hearing, and the ones held previously. The result will hopefully be a well crafted document placed before an informed electorate with the best interests of both the county and the cities protected.

The main deterrent to this projected conclusion is a glance at attendance figures. Members of the advisory committee outnumbered the audience. The committee is comprised of 16 members who have committed their time and energies to the task of developing a charter proposal to be presented to the county commission and subsequently offered to Seminole County citizens for acceptance or rejection on the November ballot. The result of that election will affect the hundreds of thousands of residents of this county.

The purpose of the hearings is for the populace to hear the proposals and citizens are encouraged to voice their opinions. The committee has sought out individuals who know the experience of charters in other counties. Many sides have and will be presented, some with fervor. Yet, unless more citizens attend the hearings the possibility of input by the electorate is diminished.

The Charter Advisory Committee will conduct its final public hearing tonight at the Casselberry branch of the Seminole County Library. You need not have read the "Federalist Papers" or even know the concept of a charter government to attend. The purpose of the hearing is to hear and to learn. The committee members have shown their willingness to listen and obviously want residents to know as much as possible.

Tuesday evening only nine people were in the audience: nine concerned, interested citizens. Let us hope nine times nine, or more, attend tonight. Seminole County deserves the best planning possible, and that can best be accomplished when its residents are well informed — and voice their opinions.

Stony Mike Dukakis' view of victory

ATLANTA (NEA) — Let's travel back in time to relive one of the great sports highlights of yesterday — the sixth game of the 1975 World Series between the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Red Sox.

This was no ordinary sports event. Indeed, it is remembered by countless fans more than a decade later as the contest in which Cincinnati's Pete Rose — "Mr. Baseball" himself — turned to a Boston player in a late inning and proclaimed it to be the most exciting game of his career.

Having won three of the first five games, the Reds needed only one more victory to capture the series — but the capacity crowd of more than 35,000 that packed Boston's Fenway Park on that memorable autumn night was determined that its Red Sox would not be vanquished.

Among those who had come to cheer on the home team was Michael S. Dukakis, a lifelong resident of the Boston area then in the first year of his first term as Massachusetts' governor.

Boston quickly took a 3-0 lead in the first inning — but Cincinnati tied the game 3-3 in the fifth and was leading 6-3 by the time Boston came to bat in the bottom of the eighth.

When the Red Sox placed two men on base, Bernie Carbo was dispatched to the plate as a pinch hitter — a decision that dismayed many hometown fans who rated Carbo's batting skills as somewhere between barely adequate and thoroughly mediocre.

But Carbo astounded his critics by walloping a home run, thus tying a game that some Red Sox fans feared was already lost. As Carbo rounded the bases, the crowd rose and cheered uncontrollably. Some present say Fenway Park trembled.

An impassive Mike Dukakis calmly surveyed the bedlam but displayed virtually no emotion himself.

Neither team scored in the ninth, and the game went into extra innings. The tension reached a feverish level by the time Boston catcher Carlton Fisk came to bat in the bottom of the 12th.

Fisk hit a home run, giving Boston a victory in the game and 3-3 tie in the series. The stadium erupted in a display of emotion seldom seen even in Boston, where the outcome of baseball, basketball and hockey games is a very serious matter.

Mike Dukakis stood with the rest of the crowd, but he was less interested in joining in the joyous celebration than in promptly proceeding up the aisle and getting to his car as quickly as possible.

In the ensuing years, Dukakis has been very sensitive about that story. He insists that he cheered as long and as loud as anyone in the stadium — but both politicians and journalists seated near him during the game say they will never forget his striking lack of enthusiasm.

Indeed, nobody every accused Dukakis of displaying much passion in public. He is quite appealing on television (an asset crucial to success in a presidential campaign), and he wears well over a long period of time — but his preferred form of communication is prose rather than poetry.

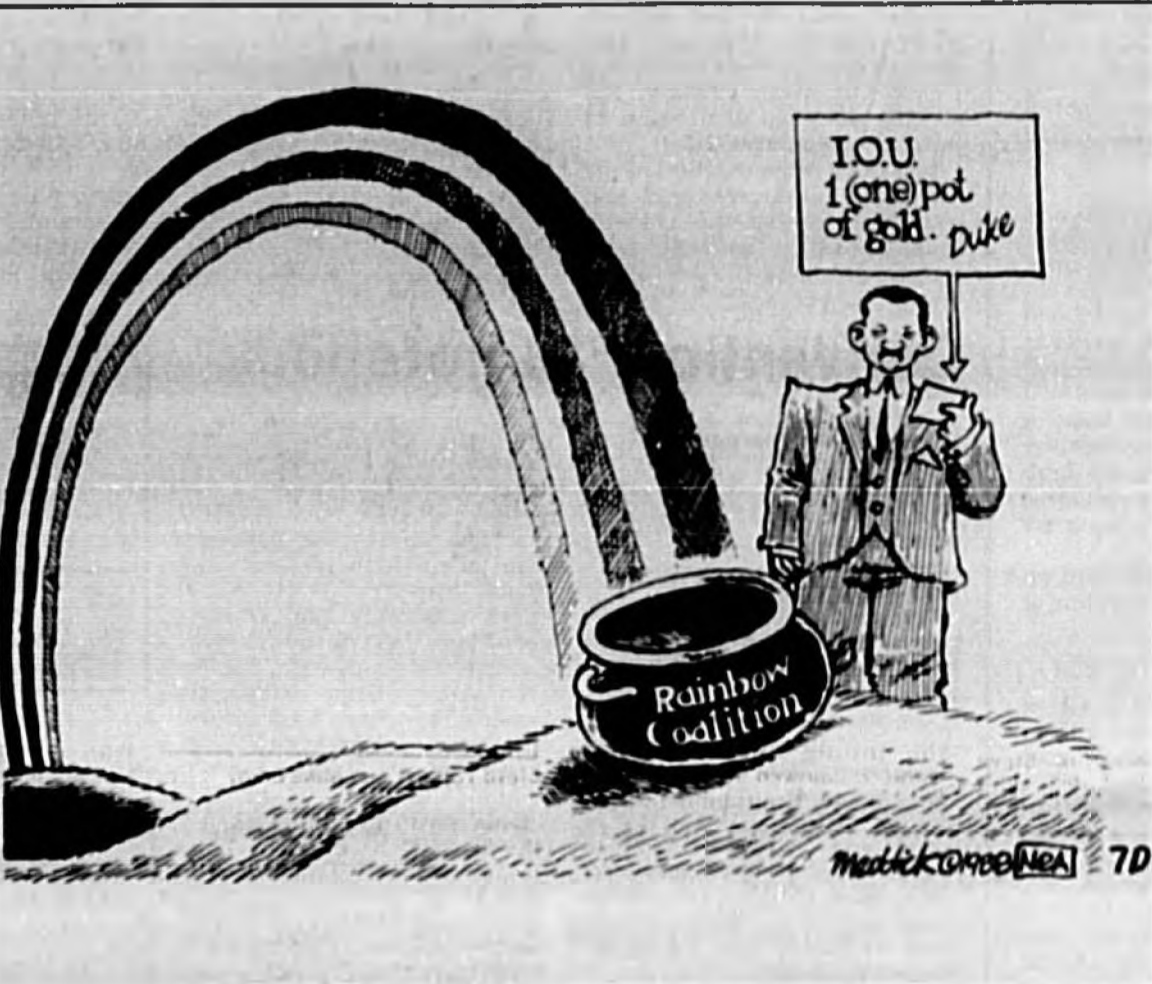

Remarking upon Dukakis' lack of charisma already has become something of a cliché — but weaknesses in one context can be strengths in another.

In a crisis, for example, Dukakis could be expected to be cool, calm and collected.

Jackson's stereo sound jars

BOSTON—This is the image that lingers on, Jesse Jackson preaching before the NAACP on the night after Dukakis chose Bentsen. Jesse Jackson closing on an eloquent and haunting word: "The thing I know, I may not be on the ticket, but I'm qualified. That's what I know. I'm qualified...qualified...qualified."

The word echoed again and again in the hall until it was dimmed by applause. Qualified. It wasn't meant to be an epitaph or even a grace note to the campaign, but Jackson's emotional acknowledgment of what it was all about. One clarifying moment.

The Jackson campaign always had its own duality, a stereophonic message coming out of its single speaker. It was the Jesse Jackson for President Campaign. It was the I Am Somebody Campaign.

Jackson Action: It was about electing delegates and winning respect. It was about being nominated and being acknowledged.

The star of it was a man who wanted to be both a Democratic Party insider and leader of a movement of outsiders. A man who wanted to be accepted as a full partner of the powerful and a surrogate for the powerless.

The stereo sound was sometimes jarring, but it was also stirring while there were primaries to be won, delegates to be counted. When people asked "What does Jackson want?" he could display resentment. Why he wanted to be President.

But there was always more to it than that. The other side. And when the delegate count was in, when Michael Dukakis won, when he chose Lloyd Bentsen, when he treated Jackson as if he were, say, John Glenn, the split became clearer.

Jesse Jackson knew all along he wasn't going to be chosen vice president. Whatever the politics, the racial politics as well. It would have been a profound mismatch of man and job. Jackson as Number Two? Jackson as Yes Man?

A friend, a psychiatrist prone to such questions, wonders why Jackson said he would accept the job of vice president the night before he surely knew it would not be offered. Could it be, she asks, that this illegitimate child who grew up on the outskirts of his own father's life had set himself up for rejection? Was this why he was still asking days later for some amorphous "respect and responsibility"?

Maybe so. A quest for entry, for acceptance, may have had its roots in such a personal history. "I am qualified," said Jackson. The search for legitimacy in its widest sense comes powerfully close to those words.

But politics are more than autobiography. In the emotional speech to the NAACP, Jesse repeated his memory of Thanksgiving spent waiting for his mother to come home with leftovers from the white folks' table. The personal, experience of being kept "outside" a high-goal family may not be as important as the collective experience of being kept outside the mainstream society. That is also what has connected Jackson to black and poor America.

His teasing interest in the job of vice president may well have been a way to keep the two Jackson campaigns in harmony a little while longer. He seemed genuinely surprised at the news of Bentsen. But was it, as he said, because he wasn't told directly? Was his "sense of indignation and...insult" roused only by the poor communication?

Or was it the recognition that the Jackson for President campaign was finally over. And he hasn't yet charted a way to continue the I Am Somebody Campaign.

This is the problem facing Jackson now. How do you maintain a crusade after the election is over? It's one thing to stop running for office. But it's quite another to halt the machinery that is running for respect.

Running for President was a profound, prideful symbol of success. When Jesse says he is still running, it's because he hasn't figured out how to declare a victory that will fuel the continuing race for pride, acceptance, legitimacy. Not just for himself, but for his constituents.

The easiest thing in the world is to go back outside, disappointed, disaffected. Outside is a familiar place to many Jackson followers. It's far harder to hail a win in the race for respect and go on. But Jesse may have tested a victory speech before the NAACP. No, he said. He didn't win. But at last, "I am qualified...qualified...qualified."

It's far harder to hail a win in the race for respect

State's IG moves fast

WASHINGTON — When Sherman Funk joined the State Department as its first official inspector general, his professional buddies thought he was crazy.

It's tough enough to be an internal watchdog in charge of publicly thrashing your own agency for squandering money and the like. Most federal agencies have an inspector general, but the State Department only caught on last year. When Funk was hired away from his position as inspector general of the Commerce Department, his friends predicted he would be stepping on diplomatic eggs wherever he turned. He was pleasantly surprised.

His toughest reports have been warmly received

Funk says some of his toughest reports have been warmly received by the very people he called on the carpet. In two recent reports, Funk bashed top officials in the U.S. delegation to the United Nations for spending too much on housing and for using State Department chauffeurs for personal business.

Instead of dismissing him as a meddling nitpicker, U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters commended Funk in writing. And in a telephone conversation, Walters thanked Funk for sound suggestions and told him he'd look for a "hatchet job."

That is pretty high praise considering one of Funk's reports pointed out that the government spends $235,960 a year to put Walters up at the elegant Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York. An ambassador has to live somewhere, and the State Department argues that Walters' accommodations are befitting his rank.

But other less important workers are putting on the ritz, too. Funk's report stings the U.N. staff for shelling out exorbitant amounts to pay for housing that our diplomats might not be able to afford on their own in pricey New York.

One apartment at 800 Fifth Avenue costs taxpayers $55,800 a year to rent. That's $13,000 more per year than units available on lower floors at the same posh address. New Yorkers pay a premium for a view from the higher floors of the city that never sleeps. In this case, the State Department paid a premium for an apartment that was not slept in. No one was assigned to the apartment for the first eight months of the lease, in late 1986 and early 1987, a stretch that totaled $35,000. When an official finally was assigned to the digs, he was so low on the totem pole that his salary was less than the annual lease.

Funk and his investigators put it best: "The representational responsibilities of (the employee) cannot serve to justify such an expensive unit."

As a result of Funk's sleuthing, two members of the U.N. delegation had to reimburse the State Department more than $1,500 each for using chauffeur-driven government cars 188 times on personal business and between their homes and the U.N. office. Joseph Vernon Reed and Herbert Okum have already paid for their questionable rides, according to Funk. His investigators coded up $3,133.39 paid in overtime to chauffeurs for the personal trips.

"The State Department does a great job politically, but it is weak in management," Funk told our associate, Stewart Harris. In addition to making examples of the officials who forget their fiscal responsibility, Funk is spreading the word by sponsoring management seminars for American diplomats.

Delgado vows to remain in race

LIMOGES, France (UPI) — Tour de France leader Pedro Delgado, who tested positive for drug use last week and is awaiting the results of a second urinalysis, vowed Thursday to stay in the race until it ends Sunday in Paris.

Delgado, who held a lead of 4 minutes and 6 seconds over Steven Rooks of Holland at the start of Thursday's 19th stage, earlier had told Spanish reporters he would drop out if the second examination confirmed the presence of drugs.

If the second exam was positive, Delgado would receive an automatic 10-minute penalty that would drop him to seventh in the overall standings.

Williams makes Olympic Team

Lyman grad wins 400 hurdles

United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — Altamonte Springs' Schowanda Williams, a Lyman High School graduate, won the women's 400-meter hurdles Wednesday at the U.S. Olympic Trials to earn an automatic bid on the 1988 U.S. Olympic Team that will compete in Seoul, South Korea.

Williams, who led Louisiana State University to the NCAA outdoor title, ran the 400s in 54.93, fastest by an American in 54.93, fastest by an American this year. Leslie Maxie took second in 55.29 and LaTanya Sheffield third in 55.70. American record-holder Judi Brown King was fifth.

In order to be competitive at the Olympic Games, experts say the 21-year-old Williams will have to drop about two seconds off her time. If she does drop that time, Williams will be a candidate for a medal at the games.

Williams is one of two Altamonte Springs residents who were attempting to make the Olympic Team. With Williams already in, gymnast Brandy Johnson will try to make it 2 for 2.

Elsewhere on Wednesday, Butch Reynolds beat Danny Everett to run the fastest 400 meters in 20 years and Joe DeLoach upset Carl Lewis in the 200 Wednesday night at the rain-soaked trials. Reynolds was timed in 43.93 seconds in the 400 final, the second best time in history. Lee Evans' 42.93 in high altitude at the 1968 Mexico City Olympics remains the world and American record.

Evans' mark is the second oldest standing world record in track and field behind Bob Beamon's 29-2 1/2 in the 1968 Olympic long jump. Both were accomplished on the same day.

Reynolds, a former Ohio State star, became the first quarter-miler to crack 44 seconds at sea level. Reynolds' 44.10 was the previous fastest at sea level.

Everett, the NCAA champion from UCLA, posted a 43.98 and college teammate Steve Lewis ran 44.37. Kevin Robinson took fourth in 44.61.

"I knew going in I had good competition," Reynolds said. "My whole intention was to run this race to win."

The top three finishers will represent the United States in the Olympics, comprising what is probably the most formidable team in history.

Lewis, who had won his last 14 200 races since 1986, finished in 20.01. Roy Martin took third in 20.05. World 200 champion Calvin Smith finished fifth, but will compete in the Olympics at 100 meters. Despite the loss, Lewis qualified for three Olympic berths — the 100 and 200 meters and the long jump. He also will likely anchor the 4 x 100 relay team in Seoul. At the '84 Olympics, Lewis won four gold medals and he will have the opportunity to duplicate that feat. It rained heavily all day and

Qualifiers

Olympic team qualifiers

Men's 200 meters — 1. Joe DeLoach, 21. Bay City, Texas, 19.94 seconds, 2. Carl Lewis, 27, Houston, 20.01, 3. Roy Martin, 21, Dallas, 20.05

Medal chances: Excellent Lewis and DeLoach have been consistent at or under 20 seconds this year. Martin has made an amazing comeback under Coach Bobby Keyes. All three will be in contention for the gold medal. Lewis will be trying to win four gold medals for the second time.

Men's 400 meters — 1. Butch Reynolds, 24 Akron, Ohio, 43.93 seconds, 2. Danny Everett, 21, Los Angeles, 43.98, 3. Steve Lewis, 19, Fremont, Calif., 44.37

Medal chances: Excellent Reynolds, Everett and Lewis are the three best 400 meter runners in the world. If they stay healthy, they should win at least two, and probably three, medals in Seoul. A world record is likely too, if one of them doesn't break it later this summer.

4 x 400 meter relay: These three, with the addition of fourth place finisher Kevin Robinson, should win easily in Seoul. They will probably break the world record set by the U.S. in 1968 at Mexico City.

Women's 400 meter hurdles — 1. Schowanda Williams, 21, Altamonte Springs, 54.93, 2. Leslie Maxie, 21, San Francisco, 55.29, 3. LaTanya Sheffield, 24, El Cajon, Calif., 55.70

Medal chances: Poor. In a year of two, this trio may challenge the world's best. But in Seoul, they'll have to improve nearly two seconds to be in contention for a medal, and that's not likely.

Reynolds, the bronze medalist at last year's World Championships, broke from the blocks quickly in the 400, but Antonio McKay was first out. See Track, Page 7A

Altamonte Juniors pound Windermere

By MARK BLYTHE

ORANGE CITY — The Altamonte Junior All-Stars pounded out 16 hits and were backed by the one hit pitching of Steve Tolbert as it rocked defending champion Windermere, 19-1, to advance to the finals of the District 14 Tournament Wednesday night at Valantine Park.

Altamonte will return to action this Friday at the same location and will play the winner of the Apopka-Windermere matchup tonight. Altamonte has two chances to lock up the tourney as it still undefeated.

"Windermere is a much better team than they showed to-night," Altamonte coach Baird Lyons said. "We just had a big momentum shift go our way in the first inning and they kind of fell apart."

Windermere threatened in the top of the first when James Kruger reached on a lead off walk. Rob Brown then reached on an error to place runners on first and second. After a flyout the runners advanced when the throw in second was off target and bounced away to place runners on second and third with one out. John Alexander then grounded to Tolbert who threw in the plate to just get Kruger before getting a popout to end the inning.

Altamonte came right back to score three runs in the bottom half of the inning to get its offense going. Cornelius Cotton led off with a bunt single and stole second, the throw to second went into center field and past the Windermere with Cotton scoring easily on the error. Pablo Abreu then reached on a bunt single before being caught stealing. After the second out of the inning Andy Thompson walked followed by a triple by Mike Elliot. Scott Johnston continued to perform well at the plate as he followed with a run scoring single to right to give Altamonte a 3-0 lead.

"The first inning was the key to the game," Lyons said. "We were able to prevent them (Windermere) from scoring and we came up with three runs of our own. I think we took command from that point on."

Altamonte put the game out of reach in the second inning with five more runs with Tolbert leading off with a single. After an out Abreu ripped a triple to right center. Frank Harmer then walked and stole second with Abreu scoring on a passed ball that sent Harmer to third. Elliot then reached on an error that scored Harmer. Elliot then stole second and Johnston stroked another run scoring single. Marcus Bullock then walked as did Nakia Roberts to load the bases. Tolbert also walked to bring home a run and up the lead to 8-0.

Altamonte then erupted for 11 runs in the bottom of the third to run away and hide from Windermere. After an out Harmer walked with Thompson reaching on an error to give Altamonte runners on first and second with one out. After the second out of the inning Johnston connected on his third run scoring single of the game. Roberts followed with a run scoring single followed by a Tolbert single that placed runners on first and third. Cotton then walked to load the bases with Abreu drawing a run scoring walk. Harmer then belted a three run triple before Thompson walked, stole second and scored on a triple by Elliot. Danny Seidenfaden and Mike Lyons both walked to load the bases before a passed ball moved the runners up with Elliot plating Altamonte's final run of the night upping the lead to 19-0.

Windermere managed to get on the scoreboard in the fourth inning when Tolbert allowed to walk and his only base hit. Tolbert finished the game with two strikeouts and four walks and kept the Windermere batters off balance all night.

Windermere used four pitchers but were still unable to shut down Altamonte's powerful offensive attack that has scored at least eight runs in each contest of the tournament.

Altamonte will now wait and see what it will play in the finals on Friday.

"Windermere will probably be fired up when they play Apopka," Lyons said.

Oviedo Majors stay in the hunt

PINE HILLS — The Oviedo Majors enjoyed life in the winners' bracket for three consecutive games, but they also proved Wednesday night they can come through while starting elimination in the face.

Jay Busse and Rich Ditore combined on a no-hitter and were backed by an impressive defensive display as Oviedo downed South Daytona, 3-2, Wednesday in the losers' bracket final of the District 14 playoffs.

Oviedo now moves on to the District 14 championships against Winter Garden tonight at 7 p.m. Oviedo, with one loss, must defeat unbeaten Winter Garden twice to win the district. While Oviedo ousted South Daytona, Winter Garden eliminated Apopka Wednesday.

Busse, a towering 12-year-old lefty, went four and two thirds innings while Ditore came on and pitched out of a jam in the fifth and went on to complete the no-hitter. Busse fanned seven batters, five in the first two innings, and walked four. Ditore recorded one strikeout and one walk.

While the pitching and defense were at their best, Todd Bellhorn provided the big blow on offense for Oviedo. In the top of the first, Mike Regienius walked, took second on a passed ball and Bellhorn followed with his third homer of the playoffs, a shot to straightaway center, for a 2-0 Oviedo lead.

Oviedo opened the lead to 3-0 with an unearned run in the top of the second. Andy Taylor walked, took second on a wild pickoff attempt and scored when Brian Hendrix reached on an error.

South Daytona scored twice in the bottom of the second to tighten things up. Ronny Hopkins started it with a walk but Busse struck out the next two hitters. Tyson Thomas was then hit by a pitch and Hopkins scored when Jacob Werthum reached on an error. A wild pitch scored Thomas.

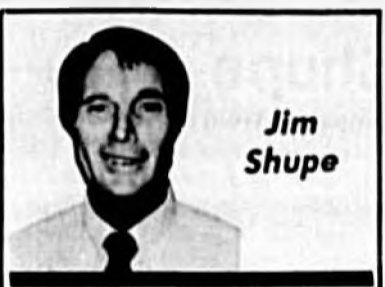

South Daytona put together a major threat in the bottom of the fifth when it put runners on first and second with no outs. That's when Ditore came on in relief and he recorded a big strikeout for the first out. The next hitter lined a shot to Busse at first base and he gloved it and stepped on first for the inning-ending double play. It was Busse's second unassisted double play in as many games.

Live bait best bet for offshore anglers

Offshore anglers are missing a good bet by not using live bait on deep water reefs, wrecks and other structures. Live bait is the best offering for king mackerel, and July and August are two of the best months for this speedy gamester.

Small boat anglers can even catch kings in the buoy line of Port Canaveral or around the bell buoys at the mouth of the New Smyrna inlet when waters are clean and bait is present.

Some will disagree, but mullet are the best live bait for big king mackerel. Mullet are streamlined and hardy, and will troll all day, if necessary, at 1,000 rpm's. A few anglers swear by menhaden, or "pogies." Menhaden are easily cast netted as they swim in huge schools, but they are hard to keep alive and do not troll well because of their deep, thin body structure. They tend to plane and it is hard to keep them swimming behind the boat without flip-flopping in the water.

Jim Shupe

King mackerel are aggregating to hook, as their triangular shaped mouth has a small biting surface in which to provide hook placement. They also attack the rear portion of the bait, which often has no hook.

Experienced live-baiters use at least two hooks when trolling livies for kings. Even with two hooks, it is easy to miss a lot of strikes. For this reason, myself and many other anglers use three treble hooks when trolling live baits for king mackerel. You may troll for hours without a strike, and it sure hurts to miss a fish when you finally have the opportunity.

Before each trip, I always make up at least a dozen "traces" or three hook rigs. Using two separate lengths of wire leader, I attach all three trebles (#1, 3561 E Mustad) with the two lengths of wire. I leave around 4 inches between the first two hooks and 3 inches between the second and the third hooks. I then run a 5-6 foot length of leader wire from my fishing line to the trace. When a king is caught, it is simply a matter of snipping off the old trace and twisting on a new one. It is both dangerous and foolish to attempt to remove three trebles from a thrashing king.

When hooking a live mullet, insert the first hook through the upper lip of the bait, and the second hook in the middle of the back. The third treble goes between the back fin and the tail. Make sure to leave a loop, or a little slack in the wire as you hook your bait. This will allow the mullet to swim freely.

Jim Shupe and his crew caught these giant kings, three of which are over 40 pounds, on live mullet.

Farrell, Tribe stump A's, 5-4

United Press International

John Farrell avoided predictability and recorded a career-high 10 strikeouts — a pattern the Cleveland pitcher would also like to elude.

"I was able to throw three pitches for strikes," said Farrell Wednesday after the Indians defeated the Oakland Athletics 5-4. "They couldn't sit on any one pitch. There wasn't any one pattern that I was following."

"I knew I was getting a few strikeouts. I wasn't going to be concerned with that. I'm not a strikeout pitcher. When I'm at my best, I'm getting ground balls."

Doug Jones tied a Cleveland record with his 23rd save.

Farrell, 10-6, scattered nine hits over 6 2-3 innings and walked only one en route to the victory. Each of Farrell's last five victories has halted a Cleveland losing streak, this time a three-game skid.

"Against Oakland, everybody has the capability of hitting the ball out of the ballpark," said Farrell, who watched the A's score 20 runs and collect 35 hits in the first three games of the series. "I think the difference today was recognizing they have that capability. It forced me to use more than one pitch whereas, against another team, I might be more one-dimensional."

Jones converted his 10th straight save opportunity by pitching 2 1-3 scoreless innings, matching the club save mark set in 1984 by Ernie Camacho.

"He's (Farrell) basically the kind of guy who throws his fastball over the plate and gets a ground ball or throws his changeup over the plate and gets popups," said Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards. "When he gets his strikeouts, his slider is working."

Dave Stewart, 12-9, took the loss despite recording his ninth

Stewart retired the first five Indians, but Cory Snyder doubled and Brook Jacoby walked with two out in the Cleveland second. Willie Upshaw, who has driven in seven runs while hitting in eight straight games, then singled in Snyder with the game's first run. Chris Bando, hitting 10th at the time, followed with a single that drove in Jacoby and Upshaw and gave the Indians a 3-0 lead.

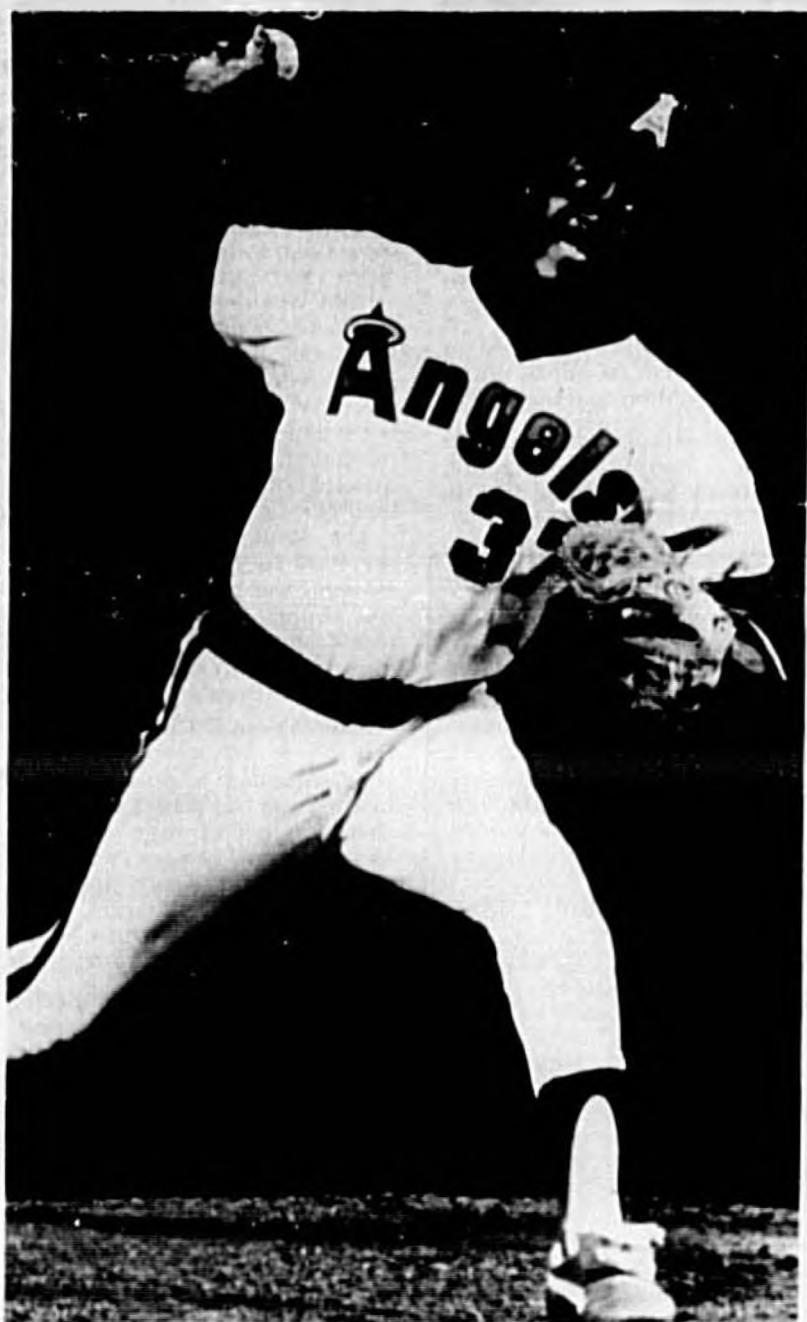

With two out in the Cleveland third, Julio Franco singled to extend his hitting streak to 17 games. Joe Carter walked and Mel Hall doubled in both runners, extending his hitting streak to 16 games and lifting the Indians to a 5-0 lead.

Royals 4, Brewers 0

At Milwaukee, Willie Wilson singled in Bo Jackson with the go-ahead run in the 13th inning and Charlie Leibrandt and Jeff Montgomery combined on a five-hitter. Montgomery, 3-1, pitched five scoreless innings in relief to get the victory. Filer, 5-4, took the loss.

Red Sox 9, Twins 7

At Boston, Todd Benzinger ripped a three-run homer in the 10th to cap a four-run Red Sox rally and give Manager Joe Morgan his seventh victory without a loss. Minnesota had tied the score in the ninth and

Angels 7, Blue Jays 6

At Anaheim, Calif., Wally Joyner hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning to snap a tie. John Cerutti, 4-6, suffered the defeat. Greg Minton, 3-1, was the winner and Donnie Moore hurled one inning to notch his fourth save.

Ortiz, Walk keep Pirates rolling

United Press International

Eleven victories in 12 games has the Pittsburgh Pirates smelling a pennant — or at least talking about it.

Junior Ortiz stroked a tie-breaking, two-run double and Bob Walk won his sixth straight decision Wednesday night, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to their 11th victory in 12 games, 3-2 over the San Diego Padres.

The triumph enabled the Pirates to close within one game of the first-place Mets. New York was rained out at Cincinnati.

"I don't think it's too early," said Ortiz, referring to pennant talk. "We're playing pretty good now. We come to the ballpark and say, 'hey, we're so close, let's go out and play our best.'"

Pittsburgh's backup catcher began his major-league career with the Pirates in 1982, was traded to the Mets in 1983 and was dealt back to Pittsburgh in time for the 1985 sixth-place finish.

The Padres had the tying run on third in the eighth inning. Roberto Alomar led off with a double off the left-field wall to chase Walk. Bob Kipper retired Tony Gwynn on a fly ball, and Jim Gott entered to strike out Keith Moreland.

John Kruk reached first after singling off the glove of Gott, with Alomar taking third. Benito Santiago struck out to end the inning.

"We have to get a couple hits together," Padres Manager Jack McKeon said. "We haven't had any bases on balls either, and that hurts us."

"We have a lot of young players, who when the count is 3-1, automatically think it's going to be a fastball belly high. If you're going to hit a 3-1 pitch, don't make it a weak ground ball to second. We're not selective."

Walk, 11-4, scattered nine hits over seven innings, walked only one and struck out none in moving his record to 6-0 in his last 10 starts. Gott pitched 1 2-3 innings to earn his 14th save.

"To contribute to a team so exciting is fulfilling all my dreams," said Gott. Pittsburgh's relief ace. "Sometimes I feel like I'm cheating the guys who bust their butts for eight, nine innings and I come in a get a couple hitters and feel the thrill of winning the game."

Dennis Rasmussen, 7-7, suffered his first loss as a Padre, allowing three runs, two earned, on six hits over six innings, with three walks and three strike outs. He was 5-0 in seven starts since joining San Diego in a trade with Cincinnati.

The Pirates snapped a 1-1 tie in the fourth when Bobby Bonilla singled with one out and Mike Diaz drew a two-out walk. Ortiz hit a double into the left-center field gap, scoring both runners.

San Diego pulled within 3-2 in the sixth on Gwynn's leadoff triple and Moreland's RBI ground out. Gwynn extended his

Bosox make Morgan full-time

United Press International

BOSTON — Joe Morgan, who guided the Boston Red Sox to six straight victories after taking over for fired manager John McNamara, will be the club's manager for the remainder of the season, General Manager Lou Gorman announced Wednesday.

"We felt that having the interim (tag) in there was putting a monkey on his back," Gorman told a news conference. "Let's take that monkey off his back and make him manager the rest of the year."

"He's obviously turned the ballclub around," Gorman said. "There's no point in looking at someone else right now. That search is done."

"I managed Triple-A baseball for 12 years and I never once got a call from any (major-league) club," Morgan said. "This was kind of shocking to me because I knew I could manage and I knew I was doing a good job in the minor leagues."

Morgan, 57, was named interim manager Thursday as the Red Sox opened a four-game home series against the Kansas City Royals following the All-Star break.

At the time, the Red Sox were nine games out of first place in the American League East with a 43-42 record. They swept the series with the Royals and had won the first two games of their series against the Minnesota Twins entering Wednesday, putting them in third place.

five games behind the first-place Detroit Tigers.

Gorman said Morgan had not been offered a contract to manage in 1989, but the team had stopped interviewing managerial candidates.

"We'll wait until the end of the year and evaluate it," Gorman said. Morgan, in his 37th professional season, managed the Red Sox Triple-A team at Pawtucket from 1974-82, was a scout for two years, then joined McNamara's staff in 1985 as first base coach. In 1986, he was the bullpen coach and became third base coach in 1987.

Morgan managed in the Pittsburgh Pirates system from 1966-73, except for 1972 when he was a Pirates coach. He was a minor-league infielder/outfielder from 1952-66 and had four brief stints in the majors with five clubs.

In 16 seasons of managing in the minors, Morgan's record is 1140-1102, a .508 percentage. He managed several of the current Red Sox players — including Wade Boggs, Marty Barrett, Rich Gedman, Bruce Hurst, and Jim Rice — during their minor-league careers.

"The players I had at Pawtucket make it easier on me," Morgan said. "They convey to the other fellows on this team what kind of manager I am. Fellows like Hurst and Barrett can help me out in that respect and I think they already have."

Morgan, who immediately showed a more relaxed, easy-going personality than his predecessor, was not concerned about his interim status.

BASEBALL CENTRAL

PHILADELPHIA — Phillies catcher Lance Parrish took batting practice Wednesday for the first time since last week's All-Star game.

Parrish suffered a lower back strain on July 5 and did not play again until he caught two innings in the All-Star game and aggravated the injury.

Philadelphia placed Parrish on the 15-day disabled list Monday, retroactive to July 13, and Manager Lee Elia said he should be ready to play when he can be activated.

"I felt pretty good," Parrish said. "I hit off the tee (Tuesday) and I felt I was ready to hit live pitching."

Parrish also detected an improvement in his injury.

"Maybe there's a little bite there but it's much better than it was," he said. "But I never thought hitting would be a problem. The real test will be getting behind the plate and catching for nine innings."

PHILADELPHIA — After missing the first seven weeks of the season because of pneumonia and pleurisy, Phillies relief ace Steve Bedrosian entered Wednesday night's game with 17 saves, tied for the National League lead with Cincinnati's John Franco.

Bedrosian, who in 1987 saved 40 games and won the National League Cy Young Award, has not recaptured last year's form.

McKay faded around the second curve and Everett assumed the lead down the stretch. Reynolds caught the UCLA junior and held on, grimacing across the finish.

"Coming in, I knew three or four people here could have run under 44," Everett said. "I got out well, kept a relaxed tempo and the home stretch was just a foot race."

"With better conditions, you probably would have had three people under the world record."

Lewis, who had run his first three heats like he could break Pietro Minna's 9-year-old world record of 19.72, took the lead. As he did in the first three rounds, Lewis eased up and DeLoach passed him with about 15 meters left. DeLoach, the NCAA 100 meters champion, and Lewis hugged at the finish.

The men's decathlon started Wednesday under the rain and was set to end Thursday. The United States has no noteworthy decathletes who could challenge in Seoul.

The final in the men's pole vault was postponed until Thursday night because of the wet conditions.

Mary Decker Slaney, who has already clinch an Olympic berth at 3,000 meters, won her first-round race in the women's 1,500 meters in 4:11.99. She'll run in the semifinals Thursday and in the final Saturday if she advances.

Market moderate, prices dip

United Press International
NEW YORK — Prices opened lower today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.
The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 13.34 Wednesday, was down 8.00 to 2102.60 shortly after the market opened.
Declines led advances 452-228 among the 1078 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 6,050,000 shares.

The stock market Wednesday snapped a two-day retreat and managed to push prices slightly higher in moderate, uninspired trading.
"There is just a great reluctance on the part of investors to participate," said William Tiritilli, vice president at Rodman & Renshaw Inc. in Chicago.

Dollar opens slightly up; gold, silver drift lower

United Press International
The dollar was higher today in light trading on most major foreign currency markets. Gold drifted lower.
In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar rebounded against the Japanese yen in Tokyo, closing at 133.50 yen, up 0.45 from 133.05 on Wednesday.
In Europe, the dollar started the day trading in Frankfurt at 1.8535 West German marks, up from 1.8498 on Wednesday.
The dollar opened in Zurich at 1.5405 Swiss francs, up from 1.536, in Paris at 6.2545 French francs, up from 6.2475, in Amsterdam at 2.092 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0915, and in Milan at 1,373.50 lire, up from 1,370.80.
In London the pound opened at $1.7115, compared with $1.7085, and in Brussels currency markets were closed for a public holiday.

Traders in London noted the Bank of England sold pounds for West German marks and other European currencies in what appeared to be an attempt to smooth the pound's strong advance.
In early New York trading, the dollar was lower against key foreign currencies in thin trading.
On the bullion markets, concerns that Peruvian mine workers would return to work sent gold and silver prices falling on major markets in what traders in New York described as brisk and heavy trading.
The London morning gold fixing was $443.20, off $2.55 from Wednesday's close.

Vermont bank victim of fraud

United Press International
BURLINGTON, Vt. — A Bank of Vermont official confirmed Thursday that his bank has been swindled in a nationwide wire fund scheme.
Executive Vice President John Ewing said the scam was under investigation internally and by the FBI. Ewing refused to discuss a published report that pegged the loss at an estimated $400,000.
"There is a problem and it's under investigation," Ewing said.
FBI agent John Markey said an escaped convict is suspected of running the scam from somewhere in the Los Angeles area.

The suspect, Tanya Marie Smith, 28, was serving a 13-year sentence for bank wire fraud when she escaped from prison in Alderson, W. Va., last January, officials said.
There is no indication Smith has ever been in Vermont, nor is there evidence that she had help from inside the bank, officials said. She is suspected of attempting 56 fraudulent transfers nationwide, half of them successful.
A source in the Vermont banking industry has reportedly said that about $400,000 was electronically transferred out of the Bank of Vermont to an unauthorized person.

U.S. defector describes his escape on Soviet TV

United Press International
MOSCOW — U.S. naval intelligence expert Glenn Michael Souther, who defected to the Soviet Union to escape an FBI espionage investigation, says he is happy with his new life in it, safe but misses his family and hopes they understand his decision.
Speaking Wednesday on the Soviet television program "Camera on the World," the 31-year-old Souther said he was "very lucky" to escape from the United States, where he said he was under investigation and constant surveillance by the FBI.
The hour-long documentary portrayed Souther as a pacifist who was persecuted solely for his interest in the Russian language and Soviet culture. Souther neither confirmed nor denied he was a spy for the Soviet Union, saying only that he had been under investigation.
Wearing a blue jacket, red tie and grey sweater, Souther nervously waved his hands in the air and visibly tensed as he recalled his escape.
"For a month and a half they were like shadows, following me everywhere," Souther said, referring to the FBI. He said he was failed by agents driving a Chrysler LeBaron automobile.

"I made a decision. I bought a plane ticket out of the country. I was very lucky to get out," Souther said.
"My mother and my family know nothing about my being here. It is difficult to be here without them," he said, his eyes downcast in one of the few displays of emotion during the program.
Souther also went into great detail about the capabilities of U.S. spy satellites and the handling of nuclear weapons aboard U.S. ships.
Souther, who was last seen in the United States in June 1986 before fleeing to Rome and eventually the Soviet Union, surfaced Sunday when the President of the Supreme Soviet granted him political asylum and Soviet citizenship.
He is the second U.S. intelligence worker to be granted asylum in the Soviet Union in the past two years.

Longwood employee requests in-house grievance hearing

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald staff writer
LONGWOOD— Longtime city employee Valerie Hockenberry, who was transferred to the public works department as a secretary after her suspension with pay from the police department, has officially requested an in-house grievance hearing.
The former administrative secretary to Police Chief Greg Manning was suspended Feb. 22 by then Acting City Administrator Don Terry based on an investigation of the handling of the Police Benevolent Fund.
Manning and Captain Terry Baker were also suspended with pay, requested a police review hearing and the panel voted 3-2 there was not enough evidence to support the charges or penalty (Manning had been told he would be fired). Charges were reduced and the two men were reinstated at the same rank.
Hockenberry, although ineligible for that type of hearing under the city's personnel policy, has the right to a grievance hearing before a panel made up her department head, an employee of her choice and an employee of the city's personnel director.
City Administrator Gene De-

Marie said members of the panel have been named and will probably conduct the hearing on Aug. 2 or 3. He said normally Manning would be on the panel as her former department head, but had withdrawn his name because of the conflict of interest. Purchasing Director Rhonda Ledford was chosen as the least biased department head to serve in his stead. Personnel Director Lois Martin automatically is on the panel and Police Sgt. Russell Cohen was chosen by Hockenberry.
Hockenberry was reinstated at the same rate of pay on April 18 with a six-month special probationary period. Terry withdrew allegations of misappropriation of public funds and misfeasance, violation of the code of conduct for city employees, but was critical of her handling of the Police Benevolent Fund in view of the fact it also contained city funds.
Terry said in his April 14 letter to Hockenberry that she owed the city an obligation to make certain the books and records were maintained in an accurate and complete manner. He said even though Manning or Baker made no attempt to train her to perform the record keeping, it didn't appear she made any effort to obtain assistance or training to better enable her to fulfill these duties.
Hockenberry, who also cashed checks and handled cash involved in various transactions, received loans from the fund. Terry said her failure to properly document many transactions could create an appearance of impropriety and cause the city and other employees embarrassment, and was a violation of the city's Code of Conduct.
She was told she would be evaluated at three months and at six months with only work performance and compliance with city and departmental rules and procedures while in her new position to be considered.
During her probationary period, she is eligible for any general wage increase, but no merit bonus or promotion, but after successfully completing the six-month probation, she will revert to regular employee status.
Terry, now back to his city clerk duties, said he does not know why Hockenberry is pursuing the grievance procedure since she was "reinstated at the same pay grade and never lost a dime." He said he had written "a nice evaluation" for her in her public works position and she has already served half of her probationary period.

Resigns

Gunter would say only that Kramer had asked to withdraw her name because she was too busy with other things and didn't have the time to serve on the committee.
Kramer was one of three persons appointed to the board the same night. The advisory board was down to one member after all the members except 15-year-old Cynthia Coombs resigned. One member resigned because she was moving and the others in protest over lack of support from the city commission and Parks and Recreation Director Bill Goebel and the appointment of a teenager to their board.

Commissioner Rick Hullington still has not made his appointment.

County candidate to pay $400 fine for late report

SANFORD — Amos Jones, Democratic candidate for the District 5 county commission seat, will be required to pay a $400 fine for filing his campaign financial report late.
The report was due by 5 p.m. July 10, but the supervisor of elections office did not receive it until Tuesday, said Sandra Goad, elections supervisor. His fine was $50 a day for the eight days the report was late, beginning July 11.

ary level.
The proposed spending plan also calls for a dropout prevention coordinator to streamline the district's dropout prevention programs.
Funding to replace 30 of the county's school buses has also been outlined in the proposal. The replacement plan is part of the district's continuing effort to eliminate buses made before 1977.
The pre-1977 buses lack special safety features required in newer buses. Seminole County currently has 80 of the older buses still in use.
Salary increases for the staff of the school system have also been included in the budget. However, because the school board and union negotiators are currently involved in collective bargaining the figures are not yet available.

A committee overseeing requests for additional staff, programs and equipment for the new budget year trimmed requests from $8.3 million to $1.8 million.
Hughes called the proposed plan "an uphill positive stroke." He explained that several months ago legislative funding "looked very dim," but that it "turned out better than we thought, even though it's not enough."
A work session for board members to discuss and ask questions about the proposed budget is scheduled for 3 p.m. Monday.
A public hearing on the budget will be held at 7 p.m. August 3 at the school board's offices, 1211 Mellonville Avenue. Board members will adopt a tentative budget that evening after the hearing.
Final adoption of the new budget is scheduled for September 14.

Peer pressure works, for better or worse

By BRIAN HEDBERG
Herald People editor

What looks to be "good friends" in a teen's eyes may be "bad influences" in the eyes of their parents. But Mom and Dad must step gingerly in guiding their children to better influences, so that a teen-ager does not feel forced to choose between his family and his friends, says an adolescent program director.

A power struggle can result if parents forbid their child from seeing certain of his friends, said Clara Martinez, director of CareUnit of Orlando, a chemical dependency treatment center for adults and adolescents.

"The kid may make up his mind he'll see his friends anyhow," Martinez said. "I think it works best if it's done in a democratic way. Sit with the child and guide him through his choices of friends. Don't take away his friends without providing an alternative."

Martinez recommends encouraging a child to hang out with the right crowd and structuring activities, such as neighborhood barbecues, to introduce children to better influences.

"These are the years when friends become a crucially important anchor in our lives," writes Lillian Rubin in her book, Just Friends: The Role of Friendship in Our Lives.

As teen-agers struggle to assert their independence and as family relationships grow increasingly tense, teens will turn to those who best understand their conflict—their peers. Rubin writes, "To support the struggle, to ease the pain, to help in the passage, to share our secret hopes, angers, fears, fantasies and love—for this we turn to friends."

According to Letty Cottin Pogrebin's book Among Friends, teens rank worries about losing their friends "way up their list with concern about their looks, grades, their parents' safety, world hunger, poverty and violence."

"Because of the importance teenagers place on their friendships, many parents are rightfully concerned about the influence peers may play in forming a teen-ager's values," said Ken Estes, director of public relations for the CareUnit programs corporate office in Irvine, Calif.

Any drastic change in behavior or personal appearance is an indicator that one's little ones are not rubbing elbows with the right crowd, Martinez said.

Wrong friends would include those who get one's child into trouble or stimulate truancy from school, said Dennis Smith, CareUnit education coordinator.

"Who I relate with is a good indicator of what I think of myself," Martinez added. "If I don't think of myself very highly, I'll go and interact with those who think of themselves as bums."

"Create a climate in your home where they feel comfortable in having their friends over, so you can get a sense of who their friends are," said Henry Harlow, CareUnit director of community relations. "If a child will not come over, a red flag should go up in your mind."

The punishment should fit the crime, Harlow said, when it comes to collaborated misbehavior by one's child and his friends.

Should they get into minor trouble together at school, it would be extreme to prohibit all interaction, Estes said. Instead, it might be more appropriate to cancel their weekend plans to attend a concert, he said.

If friends are caught cheating on a test, however, a parent's actions should be more severe, he said.

"Whenever you place restrictions on a friendship, make sure your teen-ager still has options as to whether the relationship continues," Estes said. "Let your child know that it's up to him or her and the friend to behave themselves so they can still see each other."

Estes recommends forbidding all contact if the friend gets into major trouble, such as driving drunk or dealing drugs.

Part of the natural psychological maturation of a child is the increasing ability to take risks, Harlow said, whether they be positive risks—such as sports, drama classes, or debate teams—or negative risks—like drug and alcohol use.

Harlow said parents should not only encourage positive risk-taking, but model it themselves. "Behavior that is reinforced tends to recur," he said. "And when people see high-status role models perform a behavior, they are more likely to reproduce it."

Ken Henderson, therapeutic recreation specialist at CareUnit, suggests families working on constructive projects or recreational activities together. This, he said, fills the dangerous gulf left when parent-child activity is not present.

"Kids may abuse drugs as a recreational outlet" because their families are not actively interacting with them, Hen-

Qualities of teen-age friendships

- For girls aged 11 to 13, friendships are based on mutual activities for the sake of being busy and cooperating but not necessarily closeness.
- Girls aged 14 to 16 demand loyalty, trust, security, and support from friends and were desperate if they could not get such.
- Girls aged 17 to 18 are calmer about relationships with girlfriends and more secure about their boyfriends.

- Boys are more relaxed and distant from their friends, wanting them mostly for cooperation, amiability, and aid in times of trouble.
- Those aged 18 to 25 socialize more than any other age group yet report having the fewest close friends and think of themselves as slightly, moderately or very unhappy.

Can't find a swimsuit? Well, how about a winter coat?

By HELEN BURGORAP
Newspaper Enterprise Association

It's 90 degrees in the shade. Your sandals sink into the molten asphalt, and you could fry an egg on the driver's seat of your car.

Want to buy a winter coat? Amazingly, July, August and September may be the best time to buy coats—as well as other fall goods—if fashion and selection are important to you, say apparel-industry experts. That's because stores, as they have for decades, are bringing in seasonal merchandise months ahead of the time in which it is designed to be worn.

Of course, if it's summer clothes you want, there are still some around. And they're on sale, too! As for the selection, well, you should have thought about that in February.

Some apparel manufacturers argue that the current widespread practice of "rushing the seasons" is inefficient and unprofitable, since it forces stores to put clothes on sale just when the consumer needs them. But they note that the custom has become so deeply entrenched that there isn't a snowball's chance in August of ever returning to the days of selling fall clothes in the fall and spring clothes in the spring.

"It's a vicious circle we've gotten ourselves into," says George Green, president of Cole of California, Inc., an L.A.-based swimwear company.

"It's a shame for the consumer, who would like to be able to buy a swimsuit in the summer," Green notes. "I also believe that the business that's lost by not having a good selection of swimwear in the stores in July and August is enormous. Ten years ago, July used to be the biggest month for swimwear sales. Now it's June."

One of the most important reasons for rushing the seasons, notes J.P. Radley, president of Pauline Triguere, Inc., is that "every store wants to be the first kid on the block with the new toys."

The corollary to this is that once one store puts certain merchandise on sale, its competitors have to follow suit if they don't want to lose their customers.

Retailers also fear getting stuck with merchandise that might have to be warehoused until the next year.

"The retailer cannot empty his store of summer merchandise one day and fill it up with winter goods the next," explains Joseph B. Siegel, vice president of merchandising for the National Retail Merchants Association, whose members include the nation's department stores.

Stores haven't always rushed the seasons. Back in the 1930s, when apparel was mostly made domestically and money was tight, retailers would maintain relatively shallow stocks and constantly reorder items that did well.

Enter our vacation contest, tell about your trip's thrills, spills

Only half a month remains in the Sanford Herald's best and worst vacation contest. That gives you a little time to drive off and experience a good or bad vacation if you haven't yet.

Embarrassing: Maybe in trying to be an urban cowboy to impress your wife, you were thrown while "conquering" the mechanical bull at Coldwater Cattle Country in Lubbock, Texas.

Miserable: Perhaps when you first came to Florida—Land of Sunshine—as a non-resident, the sky opened up and you endured drenched clothes and flooded streets.

Priceless: You might have won a promotional shopping spree to Macy's.

Uplifting: Ever take a once-in-a-lifetime balloon trip?

There are many stories in the naked city waiting to be told, and only you can tell yours. Everybody has at least one vacation experience that would make interesting reading. In celebration of summer, the favorite time for getaways, we invite our readers to tell us about "My Believe-It-Or-Not Vacation."

In entering our contest, follow these instructions: Type or print clearly your name, street address, city and daytime phone number at the top of your entry. Then write your vacation experience, good or bad, without embellishing the truth.

Write as much or as little as you want, but the Herald reserves the right to edit as necessary. Mail to Vacation, c/o The People Editor, P.O. Box 1657, Sanford, Fla./32771. Or bring to our offices at 300 N. French Ave. Deadline for entries is noon on Monday, Aug. 1.

The top winners in the categories of best and worst vacations will have their experiences featured in the Aug. 14 edition of the Herald. Photographs should not be mailed, but winners will be asked permission to reprint any available photos from their vacation.

DEAR ABBY: Last June (1987) I went back to Torrington, Conn., for my 50th high school reunion. I live in Augusta, Ga., and drove 900 miles to get there. Classmates came from California, Texas, Oregon, Utah and heaven knows where else. Out of a class of 300, 153 classmates showed up.

It would have been a perfect reunion—except for one thing—there was no class picture! When I asked the chairman of the reunion where the photographer was, he told me, "There isn't going to be any." I couldn't believe I had heard correctly, but Abby, I had! I was furious and demanded to know why not. He chuckled and said, "One of the committee members pointed out the fact that while the grads were having their class picture taken, their spouses would be bored, standing around and doing nothing, so we decided to skip the picture."

I argued, pleaded, begged and even offered him a check for $1,000 to hire a photographer that very night. Well, I was turned down, and the golden opportunity was lost forever.

What a letdown! Everyone I spoke to felt the same way I did. We all knew that our chances of ever getting together again like that were nil.

The thrust of this letter is to advise all future 50th anniversary class reunion committees to be sure this doesn't happen to you. It left a terrible taste in many mouths.

LUVERNE PHILLIPS
HINSON

DEAR LUVERNE: The decision concerning a group picture for a 50th high school reunion should not have been made by two people who would deprive an entire class of a memorable souvenir. And for such a fatuous reason, my type-writer is smoking!

DEAR ABBY: Well, it happened again, and I must vent my anger. Sorry, but you are elected.

As a church secretary, I get memorial contributions every day or so in memory of someone who has died. Abby, I just received one for $3! The tightwad who sent it will get the same recognition as the person who sent $100 yesterday. One cannot buy a decent card for that amount, much less a small bouquet of flowers.

Should we refuse to accept memorial contributions for less than $15? Is there some way we could let the family of the deceased know that Mrs. Tightwad sent us $3 and Mr. Generous sent $100? Would it be totally inappropriate to mention the amount in the acknowledgement I mail to the family of the deceased?

I need some of your ingenuity.
SLOW BURN
IN TEXAS

DEAR SLOW BURN: Neither you nor I know how much the next person can afford to give.

The fact that a memorial contribution was made is important—the amount is not. Contributions in any amount are acceptable, and it's not our place to label the tightwads and the generous.

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you, but want to tell you how I handled being ignored on my first Mother's Day.

My husband also said to me, "You're not my mother!" (It was the mother of his adorable twin daughters, however.) The following Mother's Day, I bought for myself a lovely pair of diamond earrings from the twins, using my husband's credit card.

I wrapped them prettily and set the package out with a card, and with great fanfare presented it to myself in front of the babies and Hubby. After I unwrapped it, I ran to the phone and called my mother and the rest of my relatives and friends to tell them of this wonderful "gift." I received for Mother's Day, adding with each call that I couldn't imagine how my husband was going to top this for next year!

When he realized that he had paid for this costly gift, he changed his tune, and since then he has not missed one Mother's Day, birthday or anniversary for the past 20 years. He correctly figured it was the cheaper way to go! Sign me...

Some migraines are estrogen-sensitive

Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been having migraines — vomiting, pain, etc. — for 20 years. They usually come with my menstrual periods. I'm now 42. Because of fibrous tumors, I've started having heavy bleeding with my periods and my doctor has suggested a hysterectomy. Estrogen causes an increase in the frequency and duration of the migraines. I've read that artificial onset of menopause can also cause more headaches. Can you suggest a way out of my dilemma?

DEAR READER: Some migraine headaches appear to be estrogen-sensitive. However, this should not be a reason for you to refuse a hysterectomy if there are valid medical indications for surgery.

To begin with, you need not take hormones after hysterectomy; they are not absolutely necessary in all women. Second, if your doctor wishes you to take estrogen, the type and dose can be altered to minimize the frequency and duration of your migraines. Third, prophylactic treatment of migraine, using drugs such as beta-blockers, often prevents the headaches from occurring.

I suggest that you seek a consultation with a neurologist, a specialist in nerve disorders and headaches. Working with your gynecologist, the neurologist may be able to hit on a plan that will solve your dilemma and, at the same time, allow you to undergo whatever gynecological treatment you need. For example, by using beta-blockers and sequential hormone therapy, you may be able to avoid the headaches and the surgery altogether.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 28 and just moved to a new area. Recently, I had my initial physical assessment by my new physician. He asked me to disrobe but to leave my bra on. During the physical it stayed on until it was time for my breast exam. Only then did he have me remove my bra, which then remained off. I've had physicals before. Sometimes I was given a gown or a sheet and sometimes I wore nothing, but never before did I get to wear only my bra. Can you explain why he would choose this procedure?

DEAR READER: I believe that your doctor's approach was a matter of personal preference. (C)1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

West's leap to four clubs propelled North-South into a precarious slam. Part of it was due to confusion. North meant his five-club cue-bid as simply showing a club control and slam interest. South thought that North might be asking him to bid another suit, and he did have four spades to the ace. Anyway they got there, and it was now up to South to make it.

He won dummy's ace of clubs, ruffed a club and drew the trumps in two rounds. With no clear indication of the diamond-spade distribution in the West hand, declarer now cashed the ace of spades. His hope was that West would hold K-x or Q-x and not be shrewd enough to unblock the suit. He now played three rounds of it, ending in his hand and exited with a low spade. When West showed out, East took the setting tricks with the Q-10.

The winning play, after drawing trumps, is for declarer to take three rounds of diamonds without cashing the spade ace. He can then get off lead with a low spade, keeping the ace in his hand. West will be locked in with the singleton king and have to give declarer a ruff and a ruff and his contract. This line of play also prevails when West starts with K-Q or K-10 or Q-10 in the spade suit, and can work even if West begins with 10-x or the singleton 10 if declarer correctly analyzes the position.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Teens

erson said.
A teen-ager who spends his evenings alone and isolated has suffered a personality dysfunction somewhere along the line, Smith said. Although everyone need "times of space," the consequences of isolation include depression, trouble sleeping and eating, and inability to relate to parents, Martinez said.
Martinez advises the parents of a withdrawn child to concentrate on his strengths. If one of his natural talents is musical ability, a parent might send him to a band camp where he can relate to peers on the level of what he is confident in, she said.
"We have a need to belong and to be a part," Martinez said. "When teens begin to become independent from the family nucleus, they'd better be merging into a group where they feel they belong."

A national survey cited by Daniel Levinson in his book Seasons of a Man's Life found that the majority of men questioned said they'd never had "an intimate male friend of the kind they recall fondly from boyhood or youth."
"Studies indicate mental health can be measured by the ability to establish and maintain intimate psychological relationships," Martinez said.
Harlow said men's support groups have resurged lately "for the purpose of having psychological intimacy with other men and to break out of the psychological rigidity of the John Wayne image. I remember watching John Wayne on TV and saying to myself, 'There must be something wrong with me. I could never be like that.'"

A survey by Psychology Today magazine found that a majority of 40,000 respondents said their closest friends were those they met as youngsters. Naturally, then, children who are moved frequently cannot form relationships of much depth and often feel insecure and unstable, Henderson said. Or they may cope by forming relationships close enough to meet their needs in a short period of time, Martinez said.
Two marketed books that are part of CareUnit's philosophy and methods: The Parent's Guide, by Don Dinkmeyer and Gary D. McKay; and Children: The Challenge, by Rudolf Dreikurs, M.D. The former is for a family workbook for families of older children, the latter an information counselor for parents of young children.

Dieters need not feel deprived

If you think "diet" and "deprived" are synonymous, think again. In fact, the key to successful dieting may be to give up feeling deprived.
Confused? Linda Webb, M.S., R.D., nutritionist for Lipton Lite Cup-a-Soup explains. "The downfall of many diets is the feeling that we can't have the foods we want or like to eat. Too many times, diets can seem like an endless list of boring foods that have little taste appeal to the dieter."

The solution? Indulge in your favorites! According to Webb, "No foods should be excluded from a healthy diet. The key to successful weight control is learning how to include favorite foods in a balanced, reasonable diet."
That balanced diet should be based on the following foods: whole grain breads and cereals; fruits and vegetables; lowfat dairy products and lean meats, poultry and fish. To this basic diet, include reasonable portions of other favorite foods.
To cut calories from some old favorites, Webb offers the following tips and strategies:

• If you're hooked on ice cream, save money and calories by buying inexpensive store brands—they're made with less butterfat. Try ice milk or fruit sorbets, too.
• If you love French fries, try the frozen ones. Ten have only 125 calories.
• Make your favorite refrigerated pie without the piecrust and save 115 calories per serving. Simply put the pie filling in a paraffin glass and chill.
• When eating out, share your dessert with a friend—it tastes the same, whether you eat all or only half!
• Love fried chicken? Try this alternative: Remove skin and
