

POLICE BRIEFS

Fake refunds bring arrest

CASSELBERRY — A department manager at Service Merchandise, U.S. Highway 17-92, Casselberry, is accused of stealing $7,500 from the company during the past year by writing fake refund vouchers, Casselberry police report.

Winfield Scott Renshaw, 21, of 3217 Whistler Lake Lane, Casselberry, was charged with grand theft at the store at 11:55 a.m. Tuesday. Bond is $1,000.

Second arrest in auto theft

SANFORD — A suspect reportedly implicated by a 16-year-old boy arrested earlier in connection with the theft of a car from Interstate 4 at State Road 434, has been charged with grand theft auto and auto burglary.

Brian Keith Chambers, 18, of 141 Sunset Drive, Longwood, was arrested at 10:40 p.m. Tuesday at the jail. His co-defendant was arrested after the car was dropped off at Longwood Villas, Altamonte Springs, following the theft, Seminole County sheriff's deputies reported.

Clerk accused in theft

FERN PARK — A clerk at Zayre's, State Road 436, Fern Park, was arrested there at about 7 p.m. Tuesday after security personnel reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies the clerk allegedly sold $111 worth of cosmetics to an accomplice, who paid less than $2 for the goods.

The accomplice, who is 15, was arrested along with Georgetta Lashawn Redding, 20, of 609C Fenton Place, Altamonte Springs. Redding is charged with retail theft and carrying a concealed knife that was reportedly found in a sheath in her purse, bond is $500. The girl was charged as a juvenile and released to her mother.

Two arrested on DUI charges

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

- Delsen Jakes, 33, of 1324 Oleander Ave., Sanford, was arrested at 5:26 p.m. Tuesday after his car hit several mailboxes on Seventh Street and Pecan Avenue in Sanford. He was also charged with driving with a suspended license.
- Scott David Bowersox, 23, of 54 S. Cortez Ave., Winter Springs, at 5:22 a.m. today after his car was in an accident of 1936 Lake St.

Two jailed after weapons find

CASSELBERRY — A Seminole County sheriff's deputy arrested two men after finding a pistol and a knife in a car during a traffic stop. The men were arrested on a concealed weapons charge.

Stephen Hugh Campbell, 36, and Thomas Charles Harvey, 33, both of Kissimmee, were arrested at 12:13 a.m. today. The deputy reported stopping the suspects' vehicle because it was weaving.

Group golden wedding anniversary celebration scheduled for Sunday

SANFORD — Couples married 50 years or more are invited to the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Golden Wedding Anniversary Celebration Sunday.

Dave Farr, chamber executive director, said 52 couples have applied to renew their vows during the 2 p.m. ceremony at the Sanford Civic Center. A reception will follow.

A limousine will transport the longest-married couple to and from the celebration. Clarence and Mary Gardner, married for 68 years, will be honored as the longest-enduring match.

Door prizes for couples with the most children and grand-children will be awarded.

The public is invited to attend the celebration. For more information, call the chamber at 322-2212.

Rally to help pay Suggs' bills

By SANDRA BOUCHANINE
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — In an attempt to raise money to defray costs of Chuck Suggs' medical bills, the Lake Mary Centre Chuck Suggs Memorial Road Rally will be Sunday, May 7 from 1 p.m. to about 4 p.m. in the Lake Mary Centre parking lot on Lake Mary Boulevard.

There will also be a Fun Day Saturday, May 6 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. when rally participants and visitors can pre-register and enjoy carnival games, food, beverages and entertainment.

The rally is sponsored by Hardy Development Group Inc., Lake Mary, owner of Lake Mary Centre, and Pepsi-Cola Bottling Group, Orlando, which is donating soft drinks. The event is to help raise money for the remaining $10,000 in medical costs which mounted when Suggs underwent a rare heart and lung transplant at Harefield Hospital in London. Suggs died at the age of 15 in London two months after surgery when the organs rejected his body.

Fundraiser Officer Dale Barnett said they expect about 600 to 800 people and about 200 cars to participate in the road rally.

"We've had such a good response," she said.

Lake Mary Mayor Dick Fess said this is the second rally for Chuck Suggs and the first one they are actually dedicating to him. He said involvement in this year's rally is high.

"Last year, they had 51 cars. This year, they plan on having about 200 and will cap it out at 250. The interest is really going," Fess said.

The drivers in the rally will take 2 1/2 to 3 hours to drive their cars along an approximate 100-mile designated course through the Central Florida area, answering questions at certain points along the way.

Trophies will be given in beginner, expert and corporate classes.

Barnett is the local officer of the Children's Organ Transplant Association (COTA) at the Longwood office, which has been handling the Chuck Suggs Fund for about two years. The company's headquarters are in Indiana.

The funds are being deposited in an account to COTA, a non-profit organization, which are deposited into a trust fund set up at Sun Bank. So far, the association has raised about $150,000 which has helped pay for the surgery, hospital and medical costs, and lodging for the Suggs family while they lived in London for one year. Barnett said the funds never reach the individuals, but go directly into the Chuck Suggs account. Excess funds go into a revolving account to help other children in need of surgery.

Entry fee for the rally is $30 for individuals and $100 for corporate sponsors. Anyone wishing to make a donation may send a check payable to the Children's Organ Transplant Association specifying it for the Chuck Suggs Fund, to Sun Bank Trustees, P.O. Box 3838, Orlando, Florida, 32802.

For more information contact Barnett at 339-9205.

SHA to review management team proposals

SANFORD — The Sanford Housing Authority will meet Monday at noon to review proposals from professional management teams applying to operate the agency.

The authority received five applications before the Monday deadline, interim executive director Linda Williams said. A sixth proposal postmarked before May 1 and forwarded from city hall will be eligible for consideration, she said.

"I'm not sure how (the commissioners) will go about selection," Williams said. The commission will establish a selection process at the Monday meeting, she said, but she did not know if they would make a selection at that time.

In March the authority commission voted to adopt professional management of the agency's 480 public housing units.

Budgetary illusion

With a wink and a nod, President George Bush and the Democratic leadership of Congress have decided to declare a mutual victory in this year's battle of the budget deficit. As in the past, however, the bipartisan agreement presented before television cameras in the Rose Garden is more a political contrivance than a fiscal plan.

On paper, the accord for 1990 will cut the deficit from its present level of more than $160 billion to $99.4 billion. This creates the impression, at least, that the White House and Congress are meeting the target imposed by the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law. And if, in fact, the 1990 shortfall is less than $100 billion, the deficit will decline to about 2 percent of gross national product, compared with 6 percent in 1986.

But, truth be told, the dramatic progress projected for 1990 is to a large extent illusory; the actual deficit is likely to be much higher than $100 billion. The discrepancy between political perception and budget reality is explained by a number of macroeconomic factors, fiscal gimmicks and governmental sleight of hand.

First, the budget deal assumes that interest rates will fall, that inflation will ease, that the economy will continue to grow at a healthy clip. These rosy assumptions, drafted by the Office of Management and Budget, defy the consensus forecasts of private economists and the Congressional Budget Office. If the record-setting expansion that began in late 1982 runs out of steam by 1990 — and many, if not most, economists expect it to — the resulting recession would send the deficit soaring again.

Second, the proposed savings and higher revenues contained in the Rose Garden agreement are not likely to be realized in full.

The plan projects, for example, a $500 million cut in the growth of the food-stamp program. But this "cut" is merely a one-time accounting change to write off the estimated value of stamps that have been lost or otherwise removed from circulation over the years and are no longer expected to be redeemed. The savings in real dollars is zero.

The deal also specified $14.2 billion in additional revenues to be raised from several doubtful sources. This includes $5.3 billion in tax increases (although the signers of the accord prefer to call them tax "changes"). Yet neither President Bush nor the Democratic chairmen of the tax-writing committees in the Senate and House is willing to take the first step toward implementing this provision. Among the other uncertain revenue raisers are sales of government assets worth $5.7 billion, stricter Internal Revenue Service enforcement worth $500 million and higher user fees for government services worth $2.7 billion.

Finally, the Rose Garden pact continues to disguise the true size of the deficit by borrowing about $70 billion in surplus Social Security funds. These reserves, which were intended to be set aside to provide benefits when the huge demographic bulge of the baby boom retirees, are instead being spent to paper over the deficit. Thus, even if the overly optimistic projections of the agreement pan out, the true 1990 deficit will be not $100 billion but $170 billion.

At best, the budget accord is another stopgap that once again defers the hard choices for another year. Such bipartisan business-as-usual plays well in the political world of Washington, even though it impresses no one in the economic reality of Wall Street.

Vote shows Congress is in disarray

WASHINGTON — In the first major budget showdown of this Congress, many Democrats joined with Republicans in defeating a key amendment to a bill aimed at providing funds for housing, the homeless and the war on drugs. The shockingly wide 252-172 vote showed that deep splits remain over budget issues despite the recent White House-congressional accord.

The Appropriations Committee had previously drafted a package of $4.9 billion in "emergency funding" for critical needs for now through the end of the current fiscal year in September. It had not indicated, however, where the money was going to come from. The committee assumed that, since almost everyone agreed the additional funding was necessary, the deficit would simply be allowed to grow another $5 billion.

But then Republicans indicated they were prepared to make political hay from this example of Democratic spending. So the Democrats decided to make the supplemental bill a pay-as-you-go proposition. That's when the trouble started.

There was no agreement on where the money should come from. Finally, Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., suggested that, since no one could decide where to cut, the cuts should be made everywhere. Foley submitted, for the Democratic Leadership, an amendment calling for an almost across-the-board cut of 0.51 percent from most discretionary programs.

Foley's argument, offered during almost three hours of extremely bitter debate, was that no federal agency could say that it did not have a half percent of fat in its budget.

But that's not what opponents said.

Most Republicans, and not a few Democrats, zeroed in on the fact that a half percent would translate into a $1 billion Pentagon cut.

Defense Secretary Richard Cheney, following the time-honored tradition of threatening to cut where it would do the most political damage to members of Congress, wrote Minority Leader Rep. Bob Michel, R-Ill., that if he had to cut $1 billion between now and September, the money would have to come from the National Guard budget, research contracts, and from the release of some 28,000 servicemen whose paychecks are the backbone of the local economies where they are stationed.

To listen to the Republicans' floor argument, the proposed cut would have left the country all but defenseless while the national economy would have been thrown into a recession by the cancellation of Pentagon contracts. President Bush, said Michel, was ready to veto the supplemental money package if it included any cut in the Pentagon budget.

Ironically, the day before, when Cheney presented his new budget to the House Armed Services Committee, he sounded much different. "I'm told that as much as half of some budgets are wasted. My problem is that I don't know which half."

Not only Republicans were upset at the across-the-board cut idea. So were 92 Democrats who joined with 149 Republicans in shooting down the Foley plan.

Some spoke against the Pentagon cut, but most were concerned that the across-the-board approach being proposed would cut specific domestic programs they had championed.

no agreement over where the money should come from.

Activist values still operative

BOSTON — The Sixties have taken another curtain call. Abbie Hoffman is making his last appearance on the cover of People magazine. The dates there mark his birth and death: 1936 to 1989. But the photo of Abbie in his American flag shirt is Vintage 1969.

It is no surprise to this observer that the eulogies for Abbie have also been obits of an era. Some people are like that. So identified with one moment or one movement, that everything they do becomes symbolic, wrought with meaning.

What does it mean to the counterculture if a Jerry Rubin becomes a capitalist? What does it mean to the women's movement if a Gloria Steinem wears a miniskirt? What does it mean to the radicals if Abbie Hoffman commits suicide? It is a struggle to see the individual when a life becomes a public statement.

But the postmortems of Hoffman have an edge to them that has become uncomfortably common among people when they talk about the Sixties. The coverline on People puts it succinctly: "He was the madcap firebrand of '60s protest, but when times changed, he didn't."

The not-too-subtle message of the headline writer was that the icon had become the amehronism. The message in that message is that a person's politics must evolve or become extinct. The cautionary tale in this obit is that people either leave behind the Sixties — its values as well as excesses — or get trapped.

This modest round of Sixties-bashing over the cremated body of a man who called his place of residence "The Woodstock nation" may be particularly unseemly. The activist and supreme clown was more a victim of his own body chemistry than the times. But it fits the popular image of "Sixties people" that has emerged in the Eighties.

"There is some idea that they are all either Mercedes-drivers or manic-depressives," says Todd Gitlin, author of "The Sixties." There is a notion that the activists of that decade are now either successful Yuppies who trimmed their politics to fill their bank account or failed Yuppies who let it all hang out until they couldn't get it back together. Either cop-outs or burn-outs.

If this reading of the Sixties legacy has an aura of revenge, a tinge of I-told-you-so, that's to be expected. Americans have yet to sign a domestic treaty about the Vietnam War. The civil war over values that was the "Sixties" is equally unresolved.

Today many an old adversary is there to take, as Gitlin says, "the revenge of the conservative culture on those who were rebellious." They find vindication in the belief that the Sixties "kids" have either come home to tradition, prodigal son and daughter, or have been lost. It is a serious and smug misreading. The Eighties are not the Sixties. To behave as if they were would be as absurd as to go on petitioning the Pentagon to stop the war in Vietnam.

At the same time, values are not trendy items that are casually traded in. Those whose values were warmed in the cauldron of the '60s don't see Yuppie and Yippie as two choices of the '80s, but as two warnings. They are warnings about the importance of growing up and the dangers of giving up.

Warnings about the difficulty of living a daily life that is both moral and practical. "Everyone who is 'out of the Sixties,'" says Gitlin, "has a struggle finding a way to live that is suited to someone who has a stake in society and is continuous with what they were when they were young."

"These people wrestle with questions: How do you raise kids, spend money, what do you do about politics. For them, everything becomes an ethical question, a political question."

You can see the wrestling matches everywhere: In the latest comics where the quintessential Sixties kid, Doonesbury, worries whether his duty as a breadwinning father means he should take a job making cigarette ads. In the supermarket and over the kitchen table where decisions are made about gasoline brands, disposable diapers and politics. And in community work, where they are carrying on.

Abbie Hoffman said in an interview that he wanted to die with his integrity intact. Many of the people who once laughed with him are trying to live with their integrity intact.

Don't write their obits yet.

Military does little to combat faulty spending

WASHINGTON — A hotline in the Defense Department puts whistle-blowers just a touch-tone away from reporting waste and mismanagement. Why then would any top military officer risk breaking the rules when it's so easy to get caught?

Maybe because the good-old-boy system in the services until recently guaranteed that complaints to the hotline about top brass end up in the Bermuda Triangle.

Take the case of Army Gen. Alonzo Short Jr. Last year an Army worker placed an anonymous call to the hotline complaining that Short had charged the Army for unnecessary trips to a base in Arizona and was about to spend $700,000 to install a kitchen and bath in his office.

If the remodeling plans were in the works, the Army should have moved quickly to investigate the charges. But four months after the tip was turned over to the Army Inspector General, the investigation was barely off the ground. The Army had cleared Short of the travel allegation but had not yet looked into the remodeling.

The Army refused to tell us the outcome of the investigation, and Short did not return our phone call to his current post at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

The details of the initial Short investigation are in an internal Defense Department memo stamped "OFFICIAL USE ONLY," which is highly critical of the way the individual services have handled the hotline calls. "Issues such as this speak to the lack of sensitivity and responsiveness typical of the (Army Inspector General) office," Defense Department hotline operator Leonard Trahan Jr. wrote in the memo, obtained by our associate Stewart Harris.

Investigations of top officers have been mishandled for years by the Army, Air Force and Navy. Each service has an inspector general who is often chummy with the generals under investigation. The poor working stiffs in the inspector general offices risk their careers if they do their jobs well. Many inspectors are rotated back into the regular ranks when their tour with the inspector general is finished. No wonder they get weak in the knees when it comes to investigating big wigs.

Defense Department Inspector General June Gibbs Brown didn't like the setup and asked that the job of investigating top officers be taken away from the services and given to her umbrella agency, Deputy Secretary of Defense William Taft IV recently granted her wish.

Besides botching investigations, the Army investigators drag their feet, giving the generals plenty of time to rationalize their excesses.

It took 294 days for the Army to dismiss allegations that Maj. Gen. William Streeter converted a five-ton Army truck into a recreational vehicle. The Army also cleared Streeter of allegations that he bought 10 office chairs for $359 apiece, reupholstered them for $300 each and then sent them to surplus because he didn't like the color, according to the Defense Department report. The tipster also accused one of Streeter's majors of spending $897 on golf balls.

That major took the rap on some of the allegations while Streeter skated. The major was fined $500 and removed from the promotion list, according to the report. Streeter has since been promoted. Streeter did not return our call and the Army declined comment.

they get weak in the knees when it comes to investigating big wigs.

They are warnings about the importance of growing up and the dangers of giving up.

School transportation funds fall short of district's needs

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — The school board of Seminole County receives state money to assist with the transportation of students to zoned schools, but the money covers only about 70 percent of the cost of busing students who meet the criteria.

District Director of Transportation Benny Arnold said, "As an association, the school transportation directors around the state have been lobbying the state legislature to give weighted funding to the types of busing we must provide."

So far, such pleas have fallen on deaf ears, according to school officials.

State law mandates that students who live more than two miles from their zoned school be provided with bus transportation free of charge.

Students who live within a two mile radius must provide their own transportation or provide proof that walking is a hazard to their safety. About 650 students fall into the latter category. Their transportation is paid through the school board operating fund without state assistance.

According to Arnold, it costs about 50 cents per mile to operate a school bus. That cost includes the cost of gasoline, oil and maintenance. Bus drivers are paid an average of $8.50 per hour.

About one in three buses, especially those which transport exceptional education students, also has a person to assist the students getting on and off and maintaining general order. Those monitors are paid an average of $6.50 per hour.

The exceptional student buses carry only 25 percent of their capacity, thus increasing the per student cost of operating the bus.

Transportation also is provided for girls enrolled in TAPP (Teen Age Pregnancy Program) and After TAPP. The girls are responsible for their babies during the ride, including providing their own safety approved child carriers.

"Because of the nature of the program," Arnold said, "many of the girls come from the far ends of the county to the Crooms School of Choice (where there is a child care facility) and Seminole High School. We have to almost provide door-to-door service to these students."

The transportation department also provides buses for all extra-curricular trips, including field trips of an educational nature, athletic events, performers, and other activities in which students are representing their schools off-campus.

"We have had about 3,000 field trips so far this year," Arnold said. "All of last year we only had about 1,500 extra-curricular trips."

Until two or three years ago the transportation department provided buses to each school for that function and the schools provided their own drivers.

"We never knew who was driving the kids," Arnold said. "And the buses were not being properly maintained. This way is much safer for all involved."

The Seminole County school district transportation department is proud of its safety record. There have been no serious accidents involving students on school buses.

Last month, a team of district bus drivers placed third in the state Road E Competition.

"We're proud of our service," Arnold said. "We want to do the best for our students."

The school board will look at the routing procedures for busing Friday. There will be an opportunity for public input at the meeting.

College is goal of many seniors

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — While published reports in Seminole County say that only about 65 percent of the district's graduates will go on to a two- or four-year college, a random sampling of students at Seminole and Lake Mary High Schools showed those who do plan to go have very definite goals.

Marsha Campbell, an 18 year old senior at Seminole High, said she was going to Seminole Community College and then transferring to the University of Central Florida to study accounting.

"A woman can't make it without a college degree," Campbell said. "It's still easier for a man to get a job with less education. A woman needs more to get a job where she can live a good life."

Citing similar reasons, Lake Mary senior Wendy Jardon, 18, plans to attend the University of Florida in the fall. "I want to make good money," the future advertising executive said. "Lots of it."

Jardon said she chose UF because her sister is already there and is enjoying herself. "Fun is part of what college is all about," she said, adding that studying was also important.

Matt Geans, 17, wants to make a career for himself in the Marine Corps after he graduates from Lake Mary in June, but he'll start by enrolling in a ROTC program at the University of Florida. "In the 50s you could work your way up through the ranks (military or civilian) with nothing more than a high school diploma, but not in the 90s," he said.

The strictness of the military training coupled with standard college fare appeals to Geans. The University of Florida ROTC program includes a mandatory two hour study session every day.

Some students couldn't imagine not going to college. It is, for them, the only viable next step.

"Oh yes, of course I'm going to college," said Ginger Albers, 18, a senior at Seminole High School. "I'll be at Rollins in the fall."

Albers said her future, which she hopes will include a career in communications, will be brighter with a college degree.

Seminole senior Corey Argrett, 19, is the exception to the rule. He has no immediate plans for college. Rather, he plans to continue his job at McDonald's through the summer and then enlist in the military. "College is good," he said, "but I don't need it when I go into the service."

But, noting that there was no time limit on when one could enroll in higher education courses, Argrett added, "If I want to go back to school, I can still go later."

Sanford man to go on trial for threats, shots

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Trials for a 70-year-old rural Sanford man convicted earlier this year of throwing a metal can through the windshield of his neighbor's car, have been set for next Thursday and Friday on charges of writing threatening letters to his neighbors and firing a gun in public.

Merle Parker, who lives on Lake Avenue near Lake Jesup, has been in the Seminole County jail since December and has been held without bond since he was convicted of throwing the can.

He was scheduled to be tried Wednesday on charges of improper exhibition of firearms and discharging a firearm in public, but the trial was continued to next Friday, May 12, at the request of the state attorney's office.

May 11, Parker is scheduled to go on trial on a charge of making written threats to kill or do bodily harm. He is accused of writing a threatening letter last November to Steven Pfeiffer who also lived on Lake Avenue.

The weapons charge stems from a Nov. 20 incident in which Parker is accused of firing a weapon while standing near his home.

Exxon captain pleads innocent to charges

United Press International

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The fired captain of the Exxon supertanker that spilled 11 million gallons of oil into pristine Alaska waters pleaded innocent to misdemeanor charges he was drunk and negligent, but may face more serious charges from a grand jury.

Joseph Hazelwood, 42, of Huntington, N.Y., who dropped his extradition fight and returned to Alaska to face charges of operating the tanker while intoxicated, reckless endangerment and negligent discharge of oil, said nothing during a seven-minute arraignment Wednesday. His attorney entered innocent pleas to three misdemeanors that carry a maximum of two years, three months in jail and an $11,000 fine. But during the arraignment, prosecutors announced that a grand jury was hearing evidence involving more serious felony charges in the March 24 grounding of the tanker Exxon Valdez in Prince William Sound.

Defense lawyers asked that bail be cut in half to $25,000, but Assistant District Attorney Mary Anne Henry argued that Hazelwood's bail stay at $50,000 cash, and Judge David Stewart agreed based on the "magnitude of the charges" and the grand jury investigation.

Trip is reward for American Indian children

By SANDRA BOUGHANINE
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — About 41 native American Indian children will come to the central Florida area to visit Mickey Mouse and Shamu.

The American Indian Association Inc. in Winter Park, a 35-member group made up of native American Indians and others interested in their culture, will sponsor the children's three-day visit from May 22 to 24.

Anna Helms, a Lenni-Lenape Indian who is president of the organization, said her group has found lodging at a YMCA camp in Apopka where there will be cabins, showers and a swimming pool. She and John Swindle of Longwood, who is mixed-blood Cherokee and Irish, are working through the organization to make the children's trip as memorable as possible.

They said small area "mom-and-pop" restaurants have volunteered to provide breakfast and lunch to the children at no charge. One of those is the Longwood Cafe, operated by Carson and Nancy Gray. The Grays will be serving 150 breakfasts.

The 41 children who are visiting live on a reservation in Wisconsin. They are underprivileged Winnebago Indians ranging in age from 11 to 18.

"Just like any other children, they love Mickey Mouse and Shamu," Helms said.

The trip is considered a reward for the oldest child of each family who has stayed in school. Swindle said that on the reservation there is an "awful lot of suicide, alcoholism and a high drop-out rate." The reward is to encourage the children to stay in school.

Swindle moved to the Longwood area from West Palm Beach and has been an active member of the American Indian Association for the past six months. He said, as an American Indian, he understands the problems the children face growing up in a society where they are considered a minority. Swindle's father, a full-blood Cherokee Indian, met and married his Irish mother in Georgia. His blue eyes offset his other features, which are traditionally Indian. He wears his long hair in two braids which end in leather wraps. Another unusual touch is the beaded baseball cap he wears. Swindle said he never got to know his father because he committed suicide when Swindle was only two years old.

"We walk in a double world. It's not easy for Indian kids as far as education," he said. He said American Indians cling to a culture which keeps its own "self expression." Swindle said the Indian values are "honor, living with that honor, respect for your family, for your name, for your word, for the Creator and for the Earth." Swindle said he is impressed by the help the association has received from local people to host the children. "From the grassroots level, we have been helped immensely," he said. Swindle credited the Grays of the Longwood Cafe and Fort Liberty of Kissimmee, which will provide lunch for the children. They also thanked Longwood residents Sherry Booth and Dave Torrance who have introduced them to people.

The 20-year-old association is for "Indian people to exchange ideas." It also sponsors students for college scholarships.

"We are sponsoring three students for college. We are hoping to get land for a cultural learning center," Helms said.

Their third annual pow-wow featuring "tribes from all over the country" will be held the first weekend in November.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Administration touts FSX deal

WASHINGTON — Opponents of the U.S.-Japanese FSX jet fighter deal rejected assurances by the Bush administration that the pact is good, but conceded they will fail to block the project.

"We all understand that by approving FSX we are making a profound error in judgment for this country," said Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J. "It is an extraordinarily bad arrangement. Everyone is a loser and no one is a winner."

Addressing administration witnesses who explained the deal Wednesday to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Torricelli said, "You will win this fight. We will wage a good fight. There will be a vote, but in the end the FSX will proceed."

The agreement, approved last week by President Bush, involves U.S.-Japanese co-production of an updated jet fighter based on the F-16 built by General Dynamics, one of the world's most advanced jets. The United States will get 40 percent of the development work, and if the jet goes into production, will receive 40 percent of the development work. The deal could be worth as much as $3 billion to the United States.

Committee continues Wright probe

WASHINGTON — The House ethics committee, trying to finally wrap up its investigation of Speaker Jim Wright, is delving into the details of a controversial oil well deal that profited Wright.

The committee heard testimony Wednesday from a San Antonio, Texas, businessman who last week refused to appear before the panel. Additional testimony was expected today from other previously reluctant witnesses.

Morris Jaffe spent more than five hours with the committee. On leaving, he told reporters he met with the panel "to try to straighten out some questions about Sabine Lake (the oil well site), which I intended to do to the best of my ability."

Jaffe was one of five witnesses who last week challenged the committee's authority and refused to testify when committee investigators traveled to San Antonio. The committee subsequently reaffirmed its subpoena and ordered the five to testify in Washington.

Committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., declined to discuss Jaffe's testimony, but said no conditions or limits had been placed on the witnesses' testimony.

EPA reports on indoor pollution

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell blasted the Bush administration for foot-dragging on an EPA report describing serious hazards and high medical costs associated with indoor air pollution.

"It is unacceptable for the administration not to have completed or made available this report seven months after the law required it to be completed and made available," the Maine senator said Wednesday at a Senate Environment and Public Works subcommittee hearing.

Mitchell said the report — still awaiting formal administration approval — provides "convincing documentation" of the hazards of indoor air pollution, yet the administration seems "unwilling" to address the issue.

The draft report, drawn up by the Environmental Protection Agency and released by subcommittee Chairman Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., said "sufficient evidence exists to conclude that indoor air pollution represents a major portion of the public's exposure to air pollution and may pose serious acute and chronic health risks. This evidence warrants an expanded effort to characterize and mitigate this exposure."

Anti-trust laws may be relaxed

NEW YORK — The Bush administration is on the verge of proposing a major relaxation of anti-trust laws so that high-technology giants such as IBM, Motorola, and AT&T can work jointly to produce high-definition television equipment. The New York Times reported today.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, who heads up a White House project on high-definition television technology, Tuesday told the Times, "I think there's a pretty good probability of changing the anti-trust laws. I think Congress is ready to do it."

Mosbacher said high-technology television, or HDTV, was likely to be the first product category to take advantage of the proposed legal changes.

HDTV boasts a very sharp visual image, comparable to that found in motion pictures, and is widely expected to comprise the next generation of television technology.

Debate over budget continues

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Opponents of the bipartisan fiscal 1990 budget accord between President Bush and congressional leaders prepared new assaults at the spending plan after the first attempt to alter the agreement was defeated.

The Senate voted 64-31 Wednesday to kill an amendment by Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., that would have violated the original budget agreement by taking $3 billion from the Pentagon and giving it to various education programs.

The budget pact announced April 14 by Bush and a bipartisan group of congressional leaders gave the Pentagon $305.5 billion in budget authority for fiscal 1990 and prohibited lawmakers from making any changes in that amount.

"I do not believe the president of the United States is going to veto defense appropriations because we are two-thirds of 1 percent below the (bipartisan budget) agreement," Simon said.

But Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, while sympathetic to Simon's goal of more education funding, urged colleagues to reject what he called an "irresponsible course of action" in violating the budget pact.

"We have made a deal. Let's keep the deal," Mitchell said.

While the budget agreement survived its first key test vote on Capitol Hill with the rejection of the Simon amendment, opponents of the spending plan in both Houses were prepared to offer several more amendments, including one that would send budget negotiators back to the bargaining table to come up with a plan that produces more serious deficit reduction.

Opponents believe the $1.16 trillion spending and revenue outline for the budget year starting Oct. 1 is a fiscal charade, obscuring the nation's deficit dilemma.

Some House Democrats planned to offer an amendment today to cut $2.5 billion from the Pentagon to help pay the costs of the catastrophic health insurance program enacted by the last Congress.

Central Park victim emerges from coma

United Press International

NEW YORK — Her first words were hoarse and barely audible, but they spoke volumes to the family and doctors of the Central Park jogger who had been languishing in a coma since she was beaten and raped by a gang of youths.

The 28-year-old woman spoke just a few words and struggled for a brave smile at times Wednesday. Her doctor declared her out of the coma, although noted she probably will not remember the details of the brutal attack that shocked even violence-numbed New Yorkers.

"All in all, I think she has shown significant improvement since last week, but especially in the last two days," Robert Kurtz, assistant chief of surgery at the hospital, said at a news conference.

The Wall Street investment banker, who already had been breathing on her own but still was being fed through a tube, recognized her name and family members while gradually emerging from the coma since Tuesday, doctors at Metropolitan Hospital said.

Her voice was extremely hoarse, weak and barely audible, but she recognized her first name Tuesday when doctors held up a printed sign, Kurtz said. Doctors and nurses in her room burst into applause when she spoke her first words, which have been limited to single-syllable responses, he said.

The woman held up two fingers on each hand when she was asked to, said Kent Duffy, the hospital chief of neurosurgery.

"Harring medical complications — she should continue to show slow, steady neurological improvement," Duffy said, but he expressed caution about her chances of a complete recovery without permanent brain damage. "The odds are still stacked against her," he said.

Doctors said she will suffer some memory loss, not just about April 19, the night she was attacked, and her time in a coma, but also "retrograde amnesia" about certain parts of her life prior to the incident.

Meanwhile, another Central Park jogger, a 42-year-old woman, was sexually assaulted Wednesday morning by a 12-year-old boy with two 13-year-olds. The teens, spotted near the scene apparently trying to break into a car, led police to the younger boy.

The 12-year-old later was arrested and charged with juvenile delinquency for allegedly grabbing the woman's breasts and buttocks.

Six teens have been indicted on rape charges in the earlier attack on the investment banker from Pennsylvania. Two others have been charged with assaulting a male jogger during two-hour hours of random violence in the moonlit park.

The woman had been in a coma since being found unconscious April 20.

Judge orders jury to work more hours

United Press International

WASHINGTON — With longer hours and shorter lunch breaks, the jury in Oliver North's trial is getting some pressure from the Iran-Contra judge to spend more time deliberating the criminal case of the ex-White House aide.

The jurors entered a 12th day of deliberations Thursday with no indication that they are nearing a verdict.

North, who has been awaiting the verdict at his lawyers' office, was heckled by a small group of people when he went to lunch Wednesday. One demonstrator followed North and his lawyers into The Palm, an expensive restaurant, but was escorted out.

Chief trial prosecutor John Keiser joked, "We're running out of books," and the judge teased, "Well, I understand there's a movie you could watch" — a reference to this week's TV miniseries, "Guts and Glory: The Rise and Fall of Oliver North."

North, 45, a former National Security Council staff member, is charged with 12 felony counts from the Iran-Contra scandal.

Missile compromise expected

United Press International
BRUSSELS - NATO diplomats say they are confident that high-level consultations will produce a compromise on modernization of nuclear weapons before a summit by the Western alliance late this month.
 "Some proposals are on the table for consideration," a diplomat said Wednesday. "We remain optimistic that a comprehensive concept will be completed for the May 29-30 NATO summit, although a lot of work remains to be done."
 West Germany opposes modernization of NATO's short-range nuclear missiles in Europe until 1992 and is promoting speedy negotiations with the Soviet Union to reduce or eliminate the missiles.
 The United States, Britain and the Netherlands oppose the West German proposal, while the rest of the 16-nation alliance are divided on the issue.

 In Ottawa, a government spokesman said Canada has proposed a compromise on NATO short-range nuclear forces that calls for the modernization of missiles during negotiations for their reduction, but not complete elimination.
 The Canadian proposal was sent Monday to governments of the United States, Britain and West Germany, which are at the center of the split in the Western alliance over the missiles issue.
 Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, visiting the United States this week, was to discuss the matter personally with President Bush today while External Affairs Minister Joe Clark takes up the issue with Secretary of State James Baker.
 Tuesday, West Germany lobbied Italy and France to back its call for NATO negotiations with Moscow, as West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl traveled to Rome and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher went to Paris.

 The trips were part of an intense round of meetings among European leaders to discuss the short-range missile issue before the NATO summit.
 "Various diplomatic efforts are being conducted at present to find a compromise," one diplomat said. "Most countries have made their positions clear but although there are differences, we hope to have a compromise by the summit."
 State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler denied a New York Times report that the United States formally submitted a working document at NATO headquarters in Brussels on Wednesday, saying, "Technically speaking, we haven't tabled a proposal."
 Tutwiler said the U.S. view remains that there should be no separate negotiations on short-range missiles.

WORLD BRIEFS

Communist leaders become defensive

MOSCOW - Ranking Communist Party members are threatening not to run in the next elections for city and district governments because of the trouncing their colleagues took in the first round of balloting in March.
 V. Melnikov, first secretary of the Komi region, told the party establishment at an April 25 meeting that first secretaries of cities and districts feel "there is a 100 percent chance they will not be elected."
 "They are stating that in the present circumstances they will not participate in the elections," Melnikov said in a rare account of proceedings in the Kremlin inner sanctum published in full by the Soviet press.
 "Right you are," a chorus of voices affirmed.
 The admission galvanized Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who was presiding over the Central Committee plenum devoted to the March 26 parliamentary elections in which scores of party establishment figures lost to independents.
 The exchange left Melnikov stuttering that the Communist Party apparatus, which has ruled unopposed since November 1917, was being lured so badly by the campaign against bureaucracy that balloting was futile.

Pope criticizes apartheid

LUSAKA, Zambia - Pope John Paul II, basking in an outpouring of affection from more than 500,000 well-wishers, told African diplomats that the South African system of apartheid "must be overcome" but through reconciliation, not violence.
 A private evening meeting with African diplomats and international relief workers Wednesday climaxed a hectic day of sermons, speeches and huge crowds that carried the pope from Lusaka to the country's depressed northern Copper Belt mining area.
 Everywhere he was greeted by rainbow-hued traditional costumes, tribal dancing, songs and laughter. In the northern town of Kitwe he was showered with gifts of chickens, pumpkins, traditional axes, fruit and gourds.
 Turning from scripture to politics, the pope told the diplomats that racism and its expression in "systems of social, economic and political discrimination" such as South Africa's apartheid regime, are clearly contrary to the church's teaching of faith and love.

Canada's opposition leader to resign

OTTAWA - Opposition leader John Turner, who served briefly as prime minister in 1984 and led an emotional campaign against the free trade agreement with the United States last year, said he will resign as Liberal party leader this fall.
 Turner served as prime minister for 80 days in 1984, before losing back-to-back national elections to Conservative Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. He said Wednesday he would leave as soon as the national executive of the Liberal Party could determine an appropriate date for a leadership contest. It will likely coincide with the party's bi-annual meeting set for October.
 "I believe it's time for fresh leadership," Turner told reporters after months of speculation about his possible resignation.
 Mulroney, visiting Boston where he was to receive an award for negotiating the free trade pact, said he was surprised by the announcement.

Danes find Palestinian weapons

COPENHAGEN, Denmark - Police investigating a string of armed robberies linked to a Palestinian terrorist group stumbled onto a cache of weapons and explosives in an apartment near Copenhagen airport.
 "There was enough here to start a small civil war," a police spokesman said Wednesday of the arms recovered a day earlier.
 The spokesman said police found 26 anti-tank missiles, 220 pounds of plastic explosives, 62 hand grenades, 12 anti-tank mines, and a "large assortment" of machine guns, pistols and other automatic weapons.
 Police were alerted to an apartment near Copenhagen airport while investigating an automobile involved in an accident at Birkerød, 13 miles north of the capital.
 The vehicle, whose driver was in intensive care Wednesday, contained part of the booty from a major armed robbery at Copenhagen's main post office last November in which thieves killed a police officer and made away with $800,000.

From United Press International reports

Chinese students in streets again

United Press International
BEIJING - At least 150,000 student marchers and Chinese workers broke through police lines Thursday in Beijing's main square and staged a massive new protest against the government's refusal to open talks on demands for political freedom.
 Rallied by the anniversary of a historic student movement in 1919, throngs of protesters defiantly overwhelmed police for the second time in eight days to sustain the strongest challenge to the communist government since the nation's founding in 1949.

Several thousand students were also marching in Shanghai, foreigners reached by telephone said.
 At least 50,000 students from Beijing and a dozen other cities, joined by 3,000 reporters from state-controlled media, marched for five hours from the city's northwest in a pincer movement encircling central Tiananmen Square.
 "We want to speak out, but we can't," read a banner carried by journalists from the Beijing News Workers Association. It was the first time government-paid reporters had actively joined the 3-week-old democracy campaign, which has demanded greater press freedom.

 Long lines of police cordoned off the square at early morning, but as in a major protest last Thursday, student marchers confronted uniformed officers 10-rows deep. Minor scuffling broke out but the marchers simply swarmed past the police.
 Crowds of Chinese workers jumped over barricades and pushed past police lines throughout the square, parking the sprawling plaza and gathering around the Monument to the People's Heroes, an obelisk at its center, to cheer and applaud as the marchers streamed in.
 "Long live democracy," the marchers chanted. "Protest the lies of the government," read one of the multicolored banners the students carried.
 Although many of the average Chinese in the square remained onlookers, large numbers roared approval for the protesters. The crowds at least equaled the 150,000 who the week before had mounted the biggest anti-government demonstration in Beijing since 1949.
 In line with the government's assurances it would not use force, the thousands of police around Tiananmen retreated.

Marchers protest against Noriega

United Press International
PANAMA CITY, Panama - More than 100,000 opposition supporters jammed the city's main shopping street in a noisy protest against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, accusing the Panamanian strongman of trying to steal Sunday's presidential elections.
 "Not one day more," the demonstrators chanted Wednesday in a reference to the de facto rule of Noriega, the country's military leader.
 The anti-Noriega activists jammed the Via Espana, the city's main shopping street, singing, shouting and waving the flags of the three political parties that have banded together in an effort to defeat Carlos Duque, the pro-Noriega candidate.
 Opposition candidates running in Sunday's election against a coalition of pro-Noriega parties led the throng - one of the largest anti-government demonstrations ever in Panama - in songs and anti-Noriega chants.
 Opposition spokesmen for the Civil Democratic Opposition Alliance, known by its Spanish acronym ADOC, said 250,000 people attended the rally. Independent observers and foreign journalists said the crowd probably numbered between 100,000 and 150,000.
 The pro-government National Liberation Coalition, known by its Spanish initials as COLINA, headed by Duque, said more than 500,000 people would attend its own final campaign rally today.

 Although opposition leaders had warned that Noriega supporters might try to provoke violence at Wednesday's rally, no incidents were reported.
 "I am here because there must be change in my country. Noriega must go," said Fernando Hernandez, a marcher who was tearing down pro-Noriega posters and replacing them with those of the ADOC.
 Also Wednesday, the U.S. Southern Command, a force of about 10,000 U.S. troops stationed in Panama to guard the Panama Canal, reported that several U.S. soldiers and their families were held at gunpoint by Panama Defense Forces personnel Saturday while their homes were searched.
 A statement from the Southern Command said about 25 Panamanian soldiers cut telephone lines and entered apartments in a building housing both Panamanian and U.S. servicemen.
 The Southern Command said the Panamanians were apparently searching for a radio transmitter but said none was found and no U.S. citizens were arrested.
 No U.S. citizens were injured during the search, the latest in a series of incidents of harassment of U.S. forces by the Panamanian military, the command said.

Arafat concludes visit to France

Appeals to U.S. for Palestinian elections

United Press International

PARIS — PLO chief Yasser Arafat concluded an unprecedented official visit to France with an appeal to the United States to devise a plan for elections in the Israeli-occupied territories similar to a U.N. independence program for Namibia.

"I would like to address myself to the American administration," Arafat said at a news conference Wednesday at the end of his meetings with French officials. "Four months ago you accepted a plan for elections in Namibia. I also accept that plan. I agree on the application of the Namibian accord in Palestine."

Arafat mentioned Namibia several times during his visit as a model to follow for the establishment of an independent Palestinian state in the territories, and made it clear he regards the idea as crucial for Middle East peace.

"It's the last chance for peace," he told Europe-1 Radio in an interview. Such a plan would involve an Israeli withdrawal similar to the South African troop pullout from Namibia with elections to be held at national level under supervision of a multinational peacekeeping force. The United States helped mediate the U.N. independence program for Africa's last colony.

It was Arafat's first official visit to a permanent Western member of the U.N. Security Council and his meetings with President Francois Mitterrand and other officials drew strong Jewish protests.

Mitterrand, who asked Arafat to clarify his position on the controversial Palestine Liberation Organization Charter, said Wednesday that the PLO leader's declaration several hours after their meeting that the 1964 document is null and void was "the beginning of the clarification" that he had sought.

Israeli leaders, who say the charter demands the destruction of the Jewish state, responded skeptically to Arafat's remark on the document.

Arafat told Europe-1 Radio Wednesday that he expected the Palestine National Council, the Palestinian parliament-in-exile, would formally abrogate the PLO charter.

He dismissed criticism by Palestinian hard-liner George Habash of the radical Palestine Front for the Liberation of Palestine, who said Arafat did not have the right to abrogate the charter.

Israelis outraged at attack by Arab

United Press International

JERUSALEM — An attack by an Arab who stabbed to death two elderly Jews in West Jerusalem was seized upon by Israelis as evidence that Palestinian terrorism continues and the PLO cannot be trusted.

The knife-wielding Arab, shouting "God is Great," killed the two men and wounded three others Wednesday in the worst attack against Israelis in Jerusalem since the start of the Palestinian uprising.

In the hours after the stabbings, enraged Israelis attacked two Arabs who walked by the scene and members of Ahiat canbon Rabb Meir Kahane's ultra-right Kach Movement assaulted several passing Palestinians.

At the nearby outer wall of Jerusalem's Old City, police dispersed Kahane and his followers with tear gas. The rabbi and 10 supporters were arrested and charged with illegal assembly and disturbing the peace.

Police arrested the assailant and an hour later a mob of several hundred Israelis shouted, "Death to the Arabs. Death to the Arabs."

Extra police and paramilitary border police were deployed in the city center and Arab Jerusalem to thwart revenge attacks.

In the Israeli-occupied West Bank several hours later, a Palestinian who said he was looking for work stabbed a Jewish resident at his home in the Ezrathim settlement, Israel Radio reported. The Israeli was stabbed five times but not seriously and his assailant fled, the radio reported.

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, while visiting New York, extended his condolences to the families of the two elderly men killed and said such incidents would "only strengthen the Jewish people's resolve to preserve the unity of Jerusalem, the capital of Israel."

"Terrorists have proven yet again their bravery and expertise in low and dastardly deeds against old people, children and innocent citizens while Arafat spouts empty declarations in Paris," Kollek said.

On Tuesday, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat told French television the PLO charter calling for Israel's destruction was "null and void."

Kollek asked Israelis not to take the law into their own hands.

OCTOBER 1910 BIG THINGS FOR SANFORD

The Golden Future Fairly Bristling with Promise

Not Only Big Fruit and Vegetables, but Big Bees, Big Porkers, Big Dairying and Big Money

Big is Sanford already, in the eyes of every part of the state, her neighbors jealously observing her present and prospective importance. The strides made in two years past are enormous. Two years ago we numbered a bare three thousand; Now six or seven thousand. Two years ago we had no cement sidewalks; Now miles of them. Two years ago we had not a particle of pavement; Now streets and avenues beautifully bricked, all through the city. Two years ago we had no electric plant; Now both lights and power. Two years ago we had no really handsome blocks or public buildings; Now behold them risen and rising. Two years ago the idea of street cars, although suggested, was laughed at, scorned, and the suggestors made almost a butt of ridicule; Today the cars are running and carrying, even in the past dull summer season, great numbers of people. More cars will be required to accommodate the winter traffic.

The good doctor has a good sense of humor

DEAR DR. GOTT: Three times within the last few months, you have written columns about nurses. In certain instances, you have been complimentary and demeaning about these health professionals. Have you got a problem? Are you anti-nurse or something?

DEAR READER: Quite the contrary.

I have the greatest respect for nurses. I value them. I work with them daily. I appreciate the problems they face. Nursing is a noble profession. My wife is a nurse.

Nurses and doctors are required to work in an environment that has become increasingly risky and frustrating with diminishing job satisfaction. There are various causes for this situation, one of which is that nurses are undervalued and underappreciated. They deserve more respect from doctors and the public; they need to become more integrated into health care decisions.

Having said this, I must add that nurses — like doctors — sometimes take themselves (not their work) too seriously. Unfortunately, health professionals often lack a sense of humor. When I poke fun at nurses and doctors, I mean not to demean but to point out our amusing foibles.

The British have a national pastime. They parody everything they respect. I believe this activity is completely appropriate.

DEAR DR. GOTT: With my pregnancy 15 years ago I developed varicose veins. They are especially painful during the first days of menses. What is the connection, if any?

DEAR READER: Varicose veins are leg veins that become stretched, dilated and unsightly. They are made worse by pregnancy because the developing fetus puts pressure on the pelvic veins, causing the leg veins to balloon out.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Since three no trump would have no play with a heart lead, North made a good decision to insist upon a suit contract. Still, 11 tricks in diamonds were not just waiting on a platter. In fact, since declarer failed to exercise proper care, he was set. East played low on the opening lead, and South won the king of diamonds. He immediately ruffed a heart and played a second diamond. East won the ace of diamonds and returned a diamond. East got in with a good trump trick later, and West made the A-Q of hearts to set five diamonds two tricks. What went wrong?

Declarer must recognize the need to retain trump control. Since he will need to set up the club suit by ruffing one round, he must avoid shortening dummy's trumps. So, after winning the first trick, he should go to dummy with a spade to play a second diamond. East will rise with the ace and return a heart. Now declarer will ruff in dummy, then play K-A and ruff a club. He can then return to dummy with another spade and play on clubs. When East ruffs, declarer overruffs and plays the third spade. East still has a trump winner, which he can take at any time, but that is only two tricks to the defense, and five diamonds will make.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osoi
YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 5, 1989

Exciting times could be in the offing for you in the year ahead concerning projects you may develop through your own initiative. Use your imagination, because you could be luckier than usual with things you originate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're still in a favorable cycle pertaining to things that you either originate, manage or control. Positive strokes will have beneficial, long-lasting effects. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Where your ambitions are concerned today, it's best that you discuss your intentions only with people who are directly involved. Don't feel obligated to reveal things to others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) General conditions are rather favorable for you at this time. You should begin to see improvements in both in your social life and valued relationships.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Continue to focus your efforts on furthering your most important, ambitious interests. Don't be fearful of competition or challenge. Lady Luck will be having the way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today is a good day to start looking ahead a bit and to make plans for what you hope to accomplish over the next few weeks. You'll do better when you have targets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Any promising situations that look like they could serve as additional channels to supplement your earnings should be fully explored at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Friends will be desirous of associating with you today. There is something indescribable in your presence that will attract them to you as metal is attracted to a magnet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec.

21) Don't be hesitant about taking on extra responsibilities or duties at work today. Show your boss how truly capable you are; it may be a revelation which could lead to a promotion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're now in a favorable role where your popularity is concerned, especially with members of the opposite gender. This should begin to become obvious to you as of today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today could be an unusual day of endings and beginnings. Two involvements may be successfully concluded and two new ones will be started.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) As of today you are entering a favorable cycle for learning and retaining information. If there is some special knowledge that can help better your lot in life, make every effort to acquire it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something you've been wishing for that you feel would give you a greater sense of material security could start to happen for you at this time. Be patient, because it may be slow developing.

Chile's volcanoes loud, furious. By United Press International. LONQUIMAY, Chile — The earth roars out a warning here, spitting out a boiling column of smoke and disgorging red glowing lava onto the sides of a growing volcanic cone. Weeks of strong earth tremors culminated Christmas Day 1988 when the volcano Lonquimay, about 400 miles south of Santiago, awoke from a drowsy 100-year slumber with a deafening explosion. 'The 1988 Chilean volcano like Lonquimay is a warning,' said Jorge Fernandez, a professor of geography and climatology at the University of the Frontieres, Temuco, Chile.

What you don't know won't hurt you? It's hard to believe there are people who really believe that. Let there be dark. They don't want to confuse you with too much information about the cost overruns in military procurement...or shady operators who fly into town by night to fleece widows...or the details about how government contracts are handed out. But let there be light, we say. And we're in the lighting business - bringing you in-depth investigative news accounts, information, background, comment and interpretation about our complex world. We try hard to handle this difficult job with accuracy, good judgment and fairness. We've worked hard to put this newspaper together for you to make it useful, interesting, truthful. If we make mistakes, let us know. We'll try harder. That's what journalistic integrity is all about, too.
