ARMS PARLEY NOW DRAFTING 5-POWER PACT

Certain Points May Be Adopted By French
And Italian Envoys
In New Agreement

LONDON, Apr. 10.—(AP)—Naval conference experts were understood to have been put to work this afternoon drafting a five-power agreement which both Foreign Ministers, Briand of France and Grandi of Italy have tentatively agreed to sign as a outgrowth of American intervention this morning.

CALVIN COOLIDGE SAYS HIS PUBLIC LIFE IS AT AN END

Ex-President Writes
He Is Relieved Since
White House Career

NEW YORK, Apr. 10.—(AP)—Former President Calvin Coolidge in a copyrighted article in the May issue of Home & Interiors, magazine, which exclusively affects the other three powers will be involved than the two Latin countries will not be involved.

The decision to add this policy was reached this morning after Secretary Stimson had visited Foreign Minister Briand and Hugh S. Johnson had conferred with Foreign Minister Grandi.

Briand is said to be enthusiastic over this solution and Grandi has also indicated his willingness to sign. The Italians have earlier been left out of negotiations recently and Grandi is not conversant with the trend of affairs as are the other delegations.

Therefore, he naturally wishes to know about what he is expected to sign before he definitely agrees to put his name to it.

Increase In Potash Results In Greater Celery Production

By the use of a larger quantity of potash on celery, a greater production per acre is said to be the result according to reports from eastern test crop areas in the Sanford section during the past two years.

In such an experiment with potash a special agricultural agent from Gainesville has come to Sanford and located local growers to the experiments. The plan of the demonstration is to test a higher percent of potash upon the percentage that the grower is using.

A one acre plot of celery was grown on the farm of E. R. Smith, during the past year, in this particular area, according to C. H. Wilder, agricultural agent and research director of the N. V. Potash Company. About 50 percent potash was used, which only five percent was used before this result was obtained before any other area of Mr. Smith's farm.

On similar demonstration with R. F. Cooper in 1929 the yield was increased 130 percent, per acre, with larger studies and no blanching.

Mr. Wilder, who has supervised the several experiments at local farms, Verton, Lutz, and in this city, has expressed him self as being well satisfied with the results obtained from the demonstrations with potash.

Assault On Dry Law
Crushed In New York

ALBANY, N. Y., Apr. 10.—(AP)—Another legislative assault on New York State in the national prohibition law had failed today. The Republican majority crushed a Democratic effort to force a vote on a bill proposing state manufacture and sale of six percent beer and 15 per cent wine by mail.

The vote came in motions to discharge from committee the Post-Carden bill.

There is no state prohibition enforcement law in New York. In the Senate it was 56 to 42 against party, 27 Republicans against and 22 Democrats for the motion. The Republican wall crushed the Democratic wall.

The motion to postpone the bill and during the three day convention will discuss topics ranging from the lumber tariff to forest fires.

BILL IS CARRIED

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10.—(AP)—The treasury and post office appropriation bill carrying the congressional allotment of $25,000 to a jury in supreme court for payment of $250,000, breach of promise to against Charles F. Harmon, 65 year old millionaire bachelor.

OTTAWA, Ont., Apr. 10.—(AP)—Extension of the shipping period for Florida vegetables to Aug. 1 has been extended to Aug. 15 under regulations of the U.S. Public Health Service, and its extension, effective July 1, does not affect the shipping of vegetables from the state of Florida to Canada.

The Christian's Hope—For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a sight is it, why doth he yet hope?
But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it. —Romans 8:24.

RURAL NIGHT

I hear rain falling and a rung bell
Of Monitor fad along the dark, Thrumming the wet, soft wind to tell.

The slumbering hour. A dog's long bark.

Answered from afar in miniature, Honors the wolf-rum pristine hills.

Where dreamers in lonely deeds endured.

A hundred freshets. The darkness fills,
Waiting the jubilant full song
Of some bird awakened from a dream.

Or broken wings. Silence turns on,

Troubled, into silence, and I seem

In memory under the roof of youth—
Same tall, same hard, same wak-

With Apel urgent on the earth To come down to wait, and rain sweet sky.

The Philosophy Of A River Pilot

The period in the life of Samuel Clemens that had to do with his learning to be a steamboat pilot on the Mississippi River was an important one for him, not only because it gave him the material which he later used in "Life on the Mississippi", but also because it gave him his pen name which was to become better known than his real name—"Mark Twain" was the call of the river leadsmen when he measured two fathoms of water in the channel, and this cry became so familiar to Clemens that he took it for his own, and called himself Mark Twain. We feel that he gained a great deal more than name from his study of the river, and it seems to us that some of the lessons he came by in learning to pilot his steamboat on the Mississippi might easily be applied to every man's task of keeping an even keel, a steady hand, and a clear head in his voyage on the river of life.

Back in 1830 when the glamour that Mark Twain later captured and perpetuated in his books hung over the steamboat life on the Mississippi, as a small boy Clemens hankered after a pilot's license with the same romantic ardor with which the youngster of 1930 wishes for a license to fly an aeroplane. When he became a young man, he prevailed upon a certain Mr. Bixby of the Paul Jones to teach him the Mississippi from New Orleans to St. Louis. Twain confessed that at first he thought all a pilot had to do was to keep his boat in the river and as the river was wide, he did not consider that "much of a trick". But he was to learn, just as men learn in life, that to keep the boat in the river without hitting a snag or running aground is, as they say in Virginia, "right much of a trick".

He learned that the river changes in appearance with every variation in light, that on a dark night, he must sometimes steer the boat head on into what seemed to be a solid wall of land, and when the water was lit by the stars, that floating timber had a surprising likeness to a cape. Gray mist and moonlight were also contributing factors in baffling the pilot, and the only way to play safe was to know the shape of the river so well that nothing could fool him, and to realize that the actual shape was always changing. He discovered that the wind made reefs in the water where there were no reefs and that light effects could make water appear to be where there was no water.

Finally, in the words of Twain himself, "When I had trained my dull memory to treasure up an endless array of soundings and marks, and keep fast hold of them, I judged that my education was complete, so I got to tilting my cap to one side of my head and wearing a toothpick in my mouth at the wheel." It was then, just at the point when he felt that he knew it all, that he learned his best lesson. Mr. Bixby left Twain alone in the pilot house to run a crossing. To test him, Bixby asked innocently, "How much water is there in the crossing?" Twain replied that one could not get bottom with a church steeple. Bixby answered, "Oh, you think so, do you?" And with this disturbing remark left him.

The boat captain mystified and terrified the young pilot still more by running in to ask where Mr. Bixby was. Twain began to imagine all sorts of things. He thought he saw shoal water ahead, and to frighten him even more completely, he heard the mate yell for the leads. The leadsman, measuring a really bottomless crossing, cried out, "Deep four," "Mark three," "Mark two," and finally, "Quarter less twain". That made nine and a half feet and the boat drew nine.

Terror overcame the young pilot. He could not even give the signals on the bell, but dashed to the speaking tube and yelled at the engineer, "Oh, Ben! Oh, back the immortal soul out of her!" Then, he heard an outburst of laughter from the hurricane deck, and turning, he saw a smiling Mr. Bixby who asked, "Didn't you know there was no bottom in that crossing?"

"Yes sir, I did," answered Twain.

"Very well," said Bixby, "then you shouldn't have allowed me or anybody else to shake your confidence in that knowledge. Try to remember that. And another thing, when you get into a dangerous place, don't turn coward. That isn't going to help matters any."

A whole cluster of morals clings to this old river philosophy, philosophy as good on land as on water. How many men when they know they are right can stand firm against the doubting Thomases? How many can keep their heads in time of danger? And how many, when they have barely learned the rudiments of life, do not judge that their education is complete, and mentally tilt their caps to the side of their heads and wear toothpicks in their mouths at the wheel as the young pilot did, thinking that they know it all and can't learn anything else? We feel that even men who have no ambition to become steamboat pilots could learn a lot from Mark Twain's "Old Man River".

The Call For Service

Calling attention to the fact that the ills of the state can be cured in the legislature if capable and efficient business men are elected in the June primary, the Tampa Tribune urges the people to draft men for office who are able to deal with the problems confronting this state. As is often the case in a government like ours good men have something else to do, don't wish to be bothered with politics. But if they want a remedy for high taxation, if they want to save Florida from greater financial difficulties than it has already faced, they must make the sacrifice. The Tampa Tribune says:

"A good business man, a man of affairs, who, although he may have an aversion to politics, recognizes the demand of the state for construction service in legislation, should not be entirely dead to the call of fellow citizens who think as he thinks and who ask that he make the sacrifice of a portion of his time in order to represent his county in the Legislature. It is not only the capable man but the unselfish man that we need in the next Legislature. The man who has something to sacrifice when he serves the people is the man who will give the best service to the people."

The man who has nothing to protect or advance save his own personal political ambition, who stands for nothing in his community, but office-seeking and the fruits thereof, should be kept out of the legislature—and, of all times, at this time."

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

By Robert Barry

Until the White House offices are restored, springtime tourists now ascending the National Capitol by train load and congested highway are out of luck. Presidential handshaking is taboo.

Facilities are not available in the temporary Executive Offices for the long lines of high school boys and girls who come to town at this season.

The only way it could be handled would be for the lines to form on the West Executive Avenue steps of the State-War-Navy Building, form a queue up the stairs to the second floor, parade through Secretary Akerson's office into that of the President and cut and down the stairs again.

Leaving Mr. Hoover's known aversion to the handshaking race-ket entirely out of the question any fair study of the situation would have to be adverse to youngsters who would like the thrill of returning home to say they had shaken hands with the President even at the rate of fifty a minute.

The mysteries of the Bureau of Standards and the thrill of holding a million dollars in currency in one hand in a Treasury Department vault scarcely can overcome the chagrin of an Easter tourist who fails to return to tourist shops with powder smoke and a President even at the rate of fifty a minute.

There have been suggestions that the President might pause long enough at the foot of the steps of the State-War-Navy Building to pose for the picture with the assembled tourists. That might seem like Herbert Hoover had an interest in one of those photographic concerns which invariably break into banquets, tell every one to look in one direction, fill the room with powder smoke and have a President even at the rate of fifty
a minute.

So long as the President's offices have been across the street from the White House there have been crowds on the steps at 1 P.M. when he goes to his temporary office at 1 P.M. when he returns to the White House for lunch, and at 6 P.M. when he calls it a day at his desk.

The crowds at the 1 o'clock hour have become very large as the Easter school vacation becomes more widespread, and the tourist trains arrive so often the hotel managers take on what happens in the evening of the evening of the group picture.

There are quite a few factions strapping over the planet's name.
One group wants to call it Hercules, Baetus, Vulcan or some mythological name. Others demand a modern moniker. The best of all we have heard so far comes from the Literary Digest. The Digest is willing to conduct a poll to determine whether we shall name the planet Baney, Rover or Lindy.

The Anti-Saloon League objects to this offer. The League claims of the Literary Digest that the planet will grab a majority of the ballots and call the planet Old Taylor.

Another proposition is to have Calvin Coolidge name the new celestial sphere. If Mr. Coolidge can keep the history of the United States in 500 words, it would be no trick at all for him to write up a name for a planet that is six times larger than the earth. They are willing to pay Mr. Coolidge his established rate of $2 a word for composing a name for the planet.

A suggestion that has also met with favor is to have Thomas A.
Edison quit stowing goldfinger for a couple of weeks and invent a name for this infant of the solar system. Mr. Edison has politely declined. In fact, on account of his age, he hasn't even heard of the planet yet.

Henry Ford is in favor of calling it Model X, and has offered to put a spare tire around it, such as the planet Saturn has.

The notion of calling the planet

Starkie, is again a candidate for the railroad commission and we are for him. No finer man ever lived than Eugene S. Matthews.
He is very successful in the conduct of his own business, and a worthy custodian of the office tip which he desires reelection.

J. N. Milton of Baker county says he will not be a candidate in the Democratic primaries this year, for the reason that in the last general election, while voting for the rest of the Democratic ticket, he cast his ballot for the Hoover elector. Mr. Milton says he always tried to confine himself to the truth and to take the oath required to qualify. I do not feel that I would be speaking the truth if I did not speak the truth.

The different factions are bound to continue their wrangle and the upshot of the matter will be that the planet is finally named like this.

A pretty girl from every community of Europe and each of the forty-eight States will be picked by a complicated process and sent promptly down one-piece bath suits and promenade on the Boardwalk. All will but one will drop out from sunburn or exhaustion. The remaining girl will be crowned Miss Universe.

At the end of the third night after the banquet and ball, Miss Universe will gather under a bunch of spotlights and pick a name on a card of a derby. That will be the new name.

And the chances are that the planet will be christened Baby

Paramount or Princess.

UNCOMMON SENSE

BY JOHN BLAKE

As long as you know you are on the right road don't worry about the detours.

They may be winding and billy-and hard going. But they will lead back into the main highway in time, and that is all you care about.

The right road, of course, is the road which leads to where you want to go.

The choice of the destination is yours.

I assume that it is a wise one.
But stick to it, and don't get lost.

Don't let anybody tell you when you are half way there that some other road is easier and has fewer detours and that there is more to see along the way.

If you have chosen the right road through life it is not going to be easy.

There will be hard and steep hills and rough places.

There will be dangerous going here and there.

Oftentimes you will have to turn back and be sure you are headed right, for you cannot afford speeding now and then, and when you do that you are likely to run past the signs.

But whatever difficulties you meet, don't

MEXICAN BANDITS TREAT KIDNAPED ONE MAN KINDLY

J. E. Bristow Is Shown Every Courtesy Before Ransom Is Paid

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Apr. 10—(AP)—Although J. E. Bristow, San Angelo oil and mining operator was held for ransom for nearly a month before he was freed by Mexican bandits, the kidnappers showed him every consideration, gave him the best of their food, and promised protection if he returned to the vicinity to operate his mineral properties.

Details of Bristow's imprisonment in a mountain fastness of Western Mexico and of his subsequent release after his son, Captain Ogle Bristow, paid a ransom were printed today in the San Angelo Morning Times.

The mine operator was released yesterday near Abundancia, Nayarit. After payment of $15,000 ransom Bristow was placed astride a donkey and escorted by a mess messenger to the village where his son and other members of the rescue party were waiting.

In return for their friendliness Bristow said he taught the bandits how to play poker. On several occasions when his captors got drunk his life was in danger but each time he was protected by the chieftain, Cruz Delgado. During his entire captivity Bristow said he slept at Delgado's side.

When ransom negotiations were ended his captors celebrated with a party. Turkey was killed, wine was procured and a feast prepared.

Then, as Bristow left his captors all shook hands with him and told him if he would return to the mountains to work his mining property, they would see he was protected.

Although tired and unkempt, with a month's growth of beard, Bristow showed no sign of physical hardship. He told of his experiences before leaving Abundancia for Tepic, where he will make a statement to Mexican military authorities and rest several days before starting for his home here.

Troops were assigned to guard the party to Tepic and newspaper reports from Mexico City told of their safe arrival at Tepic.

There was rejoicing today in Bristow's home here and the happiest person in his household was his wife, who had not seen her 60-year-old husband in three months.

Her anxiety was relieved by a telegram from her son which said "Dad with me." Ogle Bristow, the son, a former Oklahoma football star, journeyed on airplane to Tepic two weeks ago to negotiate with the bandits for the ransom. The elder Bristow had gone to Mexico to look over a zinc mine he had purchased.

Bishop Asks Chance To Answer Charge Hurled By Tinkham

NEW YORK, Apr. 10—(AP)—Bishop Francis J. McConnell, president of the federal council of churches of Christ in America, today made public a telegram he sent to Senator Caraway, chairman of the Senate investigating committee, requesting an opportunity for a representative of the council to be heard by the committee in answer to charges made by Representative Tinkham, Republican, Massachusetts.

At Washington yesterday, Senator Caraway announced that both the council and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals would be given another opportunity to reply to Tinkham's charges. The announcement was made on the heels of the New Englander's attack.

Bishop McConnell's telegram, sent to Senator Caraway yesterday, said:

"As president of the federal council of the churches of Christ in America I respectfully request opportunity for a representative of the council to appear before the Senate investigating committee at your convenience to reply to Congressman Tinkham's allegations against the federal council, as reported in the press today."

Ingalls Testifies As To Naval Plans To Build Airplanes

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10—(AP)—David S. Ingalls, assistant secretary for aeronautics, today informed a Senate committee, engaged in a $25,000 study of the feasibility of instituting a new program of development of racing airplanes.

Ingalls made the statement before a subcommittee of the Senate naval committee, while defending the navy against what he called "idle" charges.

The committee called Ingalls after listening for two days to Lieutenant Alford J. Williams who asserted that he resigned from the navy because he felt obliged to carry through experiments in a high-speed plane instead of carrying out orders to go to sea, even private though he had contributed about $90,000 to his project.

Williams said that the navy study was initiated last fall, after the influx of the Mercury in Europe. The navy abandoned its program in 1921, he recalled, "for reasons of economy."

The program was delayed until the witness said, after it was decided to send Williams to sea.

At that time, he said, Williams' own private lawyer said that that project was "through."

RESOLUTION REPORTED

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10—(AP)—The Norris resolution for an investigation of campaign expenditures was referred to the Senate committee on elections and referred to the audit committee for approval of expenses of the proposed inquiry.

POLICE MAKE RAID

BOMBAY, India, Apr. 10—(AP)—Police today raided national Congress headquarters here and arrested the secretary, Ali, as well as Mehr Ali, a commander of the national militia.
