

College Graduates Are Facing Better Chances For Jobs

versity graduates are far more promising than they were a month ago.

"With rapid changes in governmental procedures, the upward trend in business and industry, and the far-reaching improvements in our social structure, I believe the college graduate of 1933 will find unprecedented opportunities for higher achievement," commented Dr. George H. Denz, president of the University of Alabama.

"A year ago practically no graduating students were finding jobs," said Dean Fred H. Turner, of the University of Illinois. "This year many students have told me that they are leaving the university and will soon start to work."

President C. H. Martin, of George Washington University, Washington, D. C., said nearly all its 1933 graduates had been placed, and Dean Edward A. Fitzpatrick, of Marquette University, Milwaukee, requested more requests for information about the ability of seniors.

Increased opportunities for graduates of professional and technical courses were noted, with several presidents commenting that the Civilian Conservation Corps was utilizing virtually all forestry graduates as supervisors.

"The forecast for this year for University of Main graduates," said President Harold S. Boardman, "seems to indicate a decided improvement in opportunities for technical students. About double the number of engineering students have already been placed in comparison with last year."

All but three graduates of the textile school at North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering have obtained positions, reported President E. C. Brooks, who said partial reports from other divisions were encouraging.

"So far as teaching positions are concerned," said President Albert J. Critt, of Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., "the college has placed more seniors this year than at this time last year."

President Ralph W. Sweetser of Arizona State Teachers College at Tempe expressed the belief the "deflation of public schools" had reached bottom, with a better teacher employment condition to be expected soon.

Chancellor E. A. Burnett, of the University of Nebraska, noted an improvement in the number of jobs open to those planning to enter business. President Charles W. Pursey, of South Dakota State College, said insurance and farm loan companies having management of farm land were inquiring for college men, and that home economic graduates were in demand as dietitians.

Although Ernest C. Moore, president of the University of California at Los Angeles, said opportunities for teachers and in some other fields seem to be attractive, he found a more favorable outlook in business fields. Monroe E. Festsch, provost of the University of California at Berkeley, reported a demand for those trained in social service.

Chancellor C. M. Scellings, of the University of Georgia, President George W. Hightmire, of Ohio State University, Dean Edward Ellery, of Union College, and a few others described conditions as unsatisfactory at present, but expressed a belief opportunities would increase within the next year.

Chess Club Plans To Stage Tournament

So that it may be possible to determine within the next few weeks which members of the Sanford Chess Club are the more adept at the game than others, officials of the club on Tuesday night announced a regular meeting held at the Elks Club that tournament play will begin that evening, and that all future scores will be counted in the standings until the tournament ends.

When the tournament is ended, it will be possible to select capable teams to be sent to other cities to appear in inter-club matches.

Under this system of play, each club member will play two games with all other players. A large attendance is anticipated for next Tuesday night's meeting.

The results of Tuesday night's play are as follows: W. J. Huk five, lost one; R. F. M. Salvatore won one lost one; C. J. Marshall and A. B. Lavejoy, won three and lost three each; Henry Nickel, won one, lost two; A. J. Lossing, won two, lost four; George Schmal won one, lost three; Jim Sharn won one, lost four; G. S. Selman and G. A. DeCotes, won none lost two each.

Mother Is Charged With Kidnaping Baby

CINCINNATI, June 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Virginia Rogers, 31-year-old mother of two children, was held for grand jury action under $25,000 bond today on a charge of stealing a child to satisfy her desire to have another baby of her own. She is alleged to have taken the six-week-old daughter of Mrs. Madeline Stuedel, 21, from its home recently. Physicians said the woman suffered from the belief that she was pregnant to have a child and the conviction that she was mistaken left her with a desire to possess a baby nevertheless.

NEW CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EDIFICE

BOSTON, Mass., June 8.—Word that no further contributions to the fund for the building of the new $4,000,000 home now being erected for The Christian Science Publishing Society need be made after July 1, was announced here recently at the Annual Meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Members from many lands—more than 5000 in all—heard the message from the Directors, read by Mr. Charles E. Heitman, chairman, which hailed the "sacrifice and unselfish efforts" of those "who have made possible the completion of the new Publishing House without delay and without debt."

Announcement was made of the election of the following officers: President—Miss Mary G. Ewing of Brookline, Mass.; Clerk—Ezra W. Palmer of Brookline, Mass.; Treasurer—Edward L. Ripley of Brookline, Mass.

Miss Mary G. Ewing is a native of Quincy, Ill. She received her schooling in that city and in Chicago. Christian Science was first brought to the attention of her family through the healing of her father, Judge William C. Ewing. Her mother, Mrs. Ruth B. Ewing, subsequently became a pupil of Mrs. Eddy, and a teacher of Christian Science. Miss Ewing first received instruction in Christian Science from her mother, and later in 1910, from the Board of Education of The Massachusetts Metaphysical College in a Normal Class.

The new president served as a Second Reader of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Chicago, of which she is a member. From 1918 to 1926 she was a member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church. She retired from that Board to become a Trustee of The Christian Science Pleasant View Home and The Christian Science Benevolent Association in Boston,

Tribute Paid To Cyrus H. Curtis, Noted Publisher

On behalf of the family it has been requested that friends refrain from sending flowers.

Mr. Curtis was head of the Curtis Publishing Company which produces the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies Home Journal, and Country Gentleman, and also was president of Curtis-Martin News-papers, Inc., publishers of the Philadelphia Morning and Evening Ledger, Philadelphia Inquirer and New York Evening Post.

Best known to the world as a publisher, there are many who can testify to his philanthropy. His name has been mentioned in millions of dollars.

Mr. Curtis left one child, Mrs. Louise Curtis Bok, widow of Edward W. Bok, who was for many years editor of the Ladies Home Journal.

City flags and those at the University of Pennsylvania were placed at half staff. Mr. Curtis was a trustee of the university.

Starting as a newsboy with a capital of three cents, Cyrus H. Curtis became one of the wealthiest publishers in the country and the owner of widely read weekly and monthly magazines and newspapers. He always attributed his unusual success to his good fortune in choosing lieutenants to conduct his various enterprises.

"The main point with me always," he once said, "has been the getting of somebody to do the job better than I can do it. I know what I want, but I can't always do it. The success of our organization is due entirely to the people I have found, the right men in the right places."

Mr. Curtis' life was one of continuous activity, the outstanding feature of which was the building up of more or less moribund publications and making them vital factors in the communities in which they circulated. He began when he was 12, and it was not an easy beginning. His lot, in fact, was much harder than that of most of the boys of his time, due to the poor circumstances of his parents. Mr. Curtis once described this family condition thus: "My father and mother had all their capital do to ven the wheels going around without letting the neighbors know there was no oil to lubricate them."

His first break into business on his own account was in his home town of Portland, Me., and was prompted by the patriotic desire of this boy of 12 to adequately celebrate Independence Day. The story of that venture as told in reminiscences of the publisher was that he had three cents and asked his mother for more. She had none to give him, and suggested that a way to get money was to earn it.

"If I earn any will you let me

George W. Childs and others had so stirred his ambition that he wanted to become the owner of a Journal of that type.

Mr. Curtis' first venture after his arrival in Philadelphia in 1876 was the establishment of the Tribune and Farmer, a weekly devoted to agricultural topics. He had as his partner, his brother-in-law, Hamilton Mayo, and the editor of the periodical was Professor Thomas Meahan.

In the Tribune and Farmer was a department for women, of which Mrs. Curtis was editor. So successful was this department that Mrs. Curtis conceived the idea of a publication for women, and The Ladies' Home Journal with Mrs. Curtis as its directing head was the result. The next year, 1884, Mr. Curtis disposed of the Tribune and the Farmer to E. D. Sniffen, who removed it to New York.

The Ladies' Home Journal grew apace. Mrs. Curtis was later obliged to give up its editorship on account of increasing domestic duties and Edward W. Bok succeeded to the post.

In 1897 Mr. Curtis carried into effect his desire to acquire a magazine that would interest men readers as the Ladies' Home Journal had women. He purchased the Saturday Evening Post, an antiquated weekly, a mere shell of what it had been in the day of Benjamin Franklin. Its circulation had fallen away to 2000. The change in ownership was the beginning of the Saturday Evening Post's phenomenal success under the editorship of George Horace Lorimer.

Between the time of the purchase of the Saturday Evening Post and the date of his purchase of the Public Ledger, Mr. Curtis returned to the agricultural idea that had distinguished his first venture in Philadelphia. He bought the Country Gentleman in 1911. It was then published in Albany, N. Y. Removing it to keep it?" he is said to have asked.

Philadelphia, he enlarged its scope, publishing it in the big Curtis plant in Independence Square.

Mr. Curtis was born at Portland, Me., June 18, 1850, the son of Cyrus L. and Salome A. Cummins Curtis. His full name was Cyrus Hermann Kotschmar Curtis, being named after his father, an old German organist of the church in Portland attended by the publisher's father. Mr. Curtis was married twice. His first wife, who was Miss Louise Knapp, of Boston, and whose help made a success of The Ladies' Home Journal, died in 1910. His second wife was Mrs. Kate S. Pillsbury, of Milwaukee, a second cousin.

"Certainly," replied the mother. Young Curtis bargained with another newsboy who had three papers left and being anxious to wind up his day readily sold the three papers for three cents each. The next morning he was able to purchase a larger stock and this continued until he had gained the confidence of the manager of the paper and was able to make larger purchases on credit.

Mr. Curtis said that while employed as a newsboy he learned to like the smell of the papers and the printing press. He saved some money and invested in a small printing press on which he printed a paper of his own. This was successful to a degree, but a fire destroyed his property. He was too old at 16, he thought, to return to peddling newspapers and accepted a job as errand boy in a drygoods store at $3 a week. In spare time he sold advertising on commission and made a success of it because he wrote the advertising copy and presented to prospective customers his finished product with his argument to purchase space. Another venture into the publishing business was a failure—so far as money-making was concerned. At 26 he was attracted to the birthplace of the Declaration of Independence by the centennial celebration of America's independence. There he confined himself to the publication of various magazines until Jan. 1, 1913, when the purchase of the Philadelphia Public Ledger marked a departure in his publication enterprises. To this he later added an afternoon edition, the Evening Ledger.

Mr. Curtis' purchase of the Public Ledger, a venture in which he was joined by John Gribbel, of Philadelphia, was said to have been the fulfillment of a boyish dream. Admiration for that newspaper under the ownership of Philadelphia, he enlarged its scope, publishing it in the big Curtis plant in Independence Square.

Mr. Curtis was born at Portland, Me., June 18, 1850, the son of Cyrus L. and Salome A. Cummins Curtis. His full name was Cyrus Hermann Kotschmar Curtis, being named after his father, an old German organist of the church in Portland attended by the publisher's father. Mr. Curtis was married twice. WHY DO "B.O." ADS ALWAYS TALK ABOUT SOAP?

WHEN HOT WATER IS HALF THE BATTLE?

Many homes that do not have a plentiful supply of hot water, try to make up for it by using plenty of soap. But, Hot Water is necessary for true cleanliness.

The research manager of a large soap company says, "A soap which has a good degree of solubility in cold or lukewarm water would show a greater cleansing effect in HOT water, due to... better penetration and greater ease of softening... the fatty or oily matter..."

Let's not be fooled by cold water and soap. Hot water is a necessity and the clean, safe, modern way to heat it is electrically. Ask any employee or your favorite electric dealer how economical it is to heat water with your Thrifty Three, 75-2¢ electric rate.

SAFE FROM ALL EVIL: The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil...

In those states which have held their repeal elections, prohibition seems to be about as popular as a drunkard at an Anti-Saloon League meeting.

It's about time for Col. William McHenry Howe to resurrect that old war-time song, "Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag and smile, smile, smile."

Making out an income tax report this year will be almost a pleasure.—Tampa Times. Personally we should prefer to have an income big enough to be taxed.

Henry L. Doherty is said to have purchased the Roney Plaza Hotel in Miami Beach for one million dollars. Which just goes to show what a man can do with his money if he wants to.

Seminole County school teachers are to be congratulated upon being paid in full. It has about reached the point where if a man bites a dog, that's nothing, but if school teachers get paid, that is news.

Under the terms of the Wilcox municipality bankruptcy bill, 30 percent of the bondholders must petition the federal court before a city can come under its provisions, and then no settlement is conclusive unless it is approved by 60-2-3 percent of the bondholders.

Another bill which passed the Legislature would prohibit hunting or the discharge of firearms within half a mile of the Tamiami Trail between Fort Myers and Miami. Whoever thought that up should be given credit for using his head. In the old days out west they fired at buffaloes from the car windows of the first trains which crossed the prairies. The result was the practical annihilation of great buffalo herds.

On board the S. S. President Roosevelt bound for the London Economic Conference, Secretary Hall, who more than ten years ago predicted the depression which would follow the persistence in a strict American economic policy, recommends the encouragement of foreign lending.

As a result of the Morgan investigation, which Congressmen have decided that they should repeal the profit and loss sections of the income tax laws by which Mr. Morgan and many other wealthy stockholders have been able during the past three years to escape payment of income taxes. Now the business is on the upturn and capital gains will once again become capital gains which should be taxable under the present law. Congress would change the law as to prevent deductions of capital losses, and incidentally, would tax the tax on capital gains.

The Revolt in Congress

When Roosevelt assumed the presidency on March 4, he had Congress completely under his control. All he had to do if he wanted a bill passed was just to send a memorandum down to one of his leaders on Capitol Hill and it was done. Congress was passing bills so fast, as Will Rogers said, that they didn't have time to read them; they just waved at them as they went by.

But the honeymoon is over. For several months we have been hearing about the new dictatorship which was being set up in Washington. It was said that Roosevelt was the most powerful man in the world. Authority had been delegated to him by an obedient Congress which not even the kings of old could claim.

It wasn't the kit-bag episode by which an Administration official contracted to pay around a hundred thousand dollars more for a collection of toilet articles than Army headquarters insisted they could have bought them for, which caused the revolt in Congress.

And it wasn't even the powerful industrial control bill with its huge public works expenditures calling for $220,000,000 a year in additional taxation, and giving the President the power to regulate hours of labor and scales of wages, though there has been some debate over this.

It was veterans' appropriations. President Roosevelt during his campaign had promised the people to reduce the federal operating expenses by a billion dollars, and he had said he would bring the budget into balance and keep it there.

Since then Congressmen have begun to hear from back home. Most of them are up for re-election within a year. It would be a simple matter for any ambitious young man to run for Congress against an incumbent who had voted for pension cuts, and he elected.

Hence, the revolt. Congressmen simply aren't willing to incur the ill will of the veterans. They are determined to vote them another $170,000,000 in a desperate effort to insure their re-election next Spring.

The more crossing of the Atlantic in an airplane no longer captures the imagination of the public. One must at least fly around the world before the populace lifts an eyebrow over an aeronautical feat.

The young Texan is having no picnic thus far in his solo flight. Unfavorable weather, a broken landing strut, a disconnected gas line, and an attack of nausea, caused by escaping vapors, have combined to dim his chances of success, but have not weakened his determination.

It is interesting to note that when he landed his plane on an island off the coast of Norway his was the twenty-first non-stop crossing of the Atlantic by air. If he had happened a few years ago his acclaim would have been colossal, but as it is, his name is only added to the ever-increasing list of ocean spouters, which is as follows:

WILL THEY PAY?

BY DOBBY RICHARDSON

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh installment of a simple explanation of the problem which may be believed to be an insurmountable barrier preventing recovery from the depression. It will tell you in plain language how the price of 1933 farm products was determined by the price of 1932 farm products.

A simple rule of thumb test of the soundness of a loan, applied by commercial banks, is to determine whether it is "self-liquidating," whether the loan provides means for its own payment. For instance, a bank will usually lend a successful merchant most of the money needed to purchase goods for sale in the Christmas season, because it is expected that the sale of these actual goods will provide the cash to liquidate the loan and give the merchant his profit besides.

The war loans from the United States to the Allies lacked the essential feature of a good commercial loan. They were as if a merchant had come into a bank and said: "Gangsters are constantly attacking my store. If I don't stop they will put me out of business. I do business with your bank, and although you have no great personal stake in the fight, I wish that you would help me clean up the gangsters, because if they get control of my store, they will certainly hurt business in general in the city, and that won't do your bank any good."

G.O.P. EFFORT IS BLOCKED IN FIGHT ON BILL

Two amendments outside the committee's aide were approved after hours of debate. One, by Borah, provided that no code of fair competition should be agreed to by industries in co-operation with the administrators if it involved "combinations in restraint of trade, price fixing or other monopolistic practices."

The words "geographical area" were stricken out, although Reed said they had been suggested by Hugh S. Johnson, who will be administrator of the industrial provisions, on behalf of President Roosevelt.

Both countries were, from an international point of view, in bad shape financially. Each had an appalling load of internal debt. Northern France was a wilderness that must be rebuilt at once at whatever cost—the British industrial system was disorganized by the war, and many of the foreign markets upon which Great Britain's pre-war prosperity depended had been usurped, temporarily at least, by the United States.

Trade restrictions have made impossible the international discharge of obligations in goods; and this has intensified the scramble for gold with which to discharge debt or to protect credit. This scramble has, in accordance with the law of supply and demand, raised the price of gold and decreased the real prices of commodities and goods.

MUCHLY PRAISED LONDON POLICE TO BE REFORMED

One Of Steps Will Be To Improve Educational Standards

LONDON—The London policeman—probably the most unambiguously praised official on the face of the earth—has just been made the subject of proposed far-reaching reforms.

It is traditional that foreign emissaries visiting London after complaining of the English climate, always finish up ecstatically, "but your policemen are wonderful!" Now Lord Trenchard, in his annual report as Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, seeks to improve both the condition and service of "the man in blue."

The London police system today is substantially that inaugurated by Sir Robert Peel in 1829, and Lord Trenchard feels that the time has come to modify it into closer correspondence with contemporary needs. If his plans are approved by Parliament the London policeman may cease to have reason to repeat the Nineteenth Century jingle, first sung in one of Gilbert and Sullivan's still popular comic operas—

When constabulary's duty to be done—to be done, The reforms cover a number of happy one—happy one.

The reforms cover a number of points. One of the most important of them is to raise the standard of education in the force as to enable the humblest constable to feel like Napoleon Bonaparte's follower—that he carries a potential field-marshal's baton in his knapsack.

"It seems to me no longer possible," Lord Trenchard says, "to shirk the problem of how to secure a steady supply of the best brains from every available source." Year by year, Lord Trenchard continues, the criminal grows "more skillful, more mobile." His remedy is to attract a larger proportion of recruits from the universities and secondary schools to replace what he describes as "9 percent of constables who fail to secure promotion or never try for it."

For this purpose not only is the ladder of promotion from the bottom rung up to the highest posts to be made easier to climb, but a certain number of appointments are to be made from outside to junior officer-ships, halfway up, so as to shorten the time it may be necessary to wait before it becomes possible to abolish the present out-of-date arrangement whereby the more senior officers of the force are all ordinarily drawn from military or civil services disconnected with the police.

Another change is to introduce a short-service system for the lower ranks, thereby facilitating the passage into more appropriate employment of those who prove to be round pegs in square police holes.

Other innovations are to improve discipline and diminish the proportion of the force engaged upon work other than that of crime prevention. One of them is to limit the activities of "Federalization" and "Branch" boards, bodies inside the force which were originally started to facilitate the representation of grievances, but which were originally started to facilitate the representation of grievances, but which have now developed into what Lord Trenchard finds to be sometimes of the nature of propaganda organizations detrimental to discipline.

Another new arrangement is to reduce the use of policemen on street traffic control and on such privately remunerated employment as that of gate-keeping at football matches and greyhound race meetings.

Need for these changes has arisen because the London policeman's ordinary duties have been growing in heaviness and responsibility. These duties are to maintain safety and order amongst 7,000,000 people.

JUST AMONG FRIENDS By Joe Strauss

persons were found to have turned in $8,000,000 immediately prior to the visit by the agents.

Another 444 contended they had disposed themselves of gold some time ago or else that their names were erroneously on the list, and these reports were verified by the investigators.

On the list presented to the treasury by banks 249 fictitious names and addresses were found. There are approximately 10,000 names on the list now being worked upon by the police department and this is but the first batch. Cummings said it was impossible to estimate how many persons would be revealed in the check-up as gold hoarders.

The attorney general declined to say when action would be taken against those who defied the government by refusing to surrender their gold and gold certificates, but he said "they will be held up to scorn before their fellow citizens."

"Somebody is going to be prosecuted," the attorney general said. "That is certain."

Assessing his desire was not to find victims but merely to obtain compliance with the President's orders, the attorney general again indicated that publication of the names of hoarders might be resorted to first.

"If necessary to make an example I shall prosecute cheerfully", Cummings added.

Linen Suits Are In Vogue Among Chicago Arbiters

By RUTH COWAN
CHICAGO, June 9.—(AP)—Suit yourself in linen, new summer sheers, silk creps, gingham, seersucker or almost any material fancier—but include a two or three-piece suit in the wardrobe.

That's fashion's dictate and it seems to be well carried out judging from the smartly suited women seen about town—at a Century of Progress Exposition, the race track, along Michigan Boulevard, at country clubs.

Linen suits are everywhere, and they range in weight from printed handkerchief linen to the sturdy quality found in men's linen suits. A rich golden brown and natural linen is a smart combination. One chic number "in a Michigan Avenue shop had a brown skirt, a vest and short swagger jacket of the natural linen. Another model had a sleeveless blouse of brown with skirt and short pocket of natural linen.

The effect of another outfit in both instances is obtained by substituting the short jacket with a long swagger coat or duster of linen. These can be had separately.

Black and white is a smart combination. And so are linen suits, with blouses of handkerchief linen or linen lawn in polka dot or floral prints in red or blue.

Another store is showing snappy suits in seersucker—striped in red, blue or brown—with accompany-

NAMES OF MANY GOLD HOARDERS AWAITING ACTION

WASHINGTON, June 9.—(AP)—The names of 37 persons who hold $283,064 in gold yesterday were turned over to the criminal division of the justice department by Attorney General Cummings for possible prosecution under President Roosevelt's executive order.

Cummings announced that in the few days since justice agents were set to work investigating cases listed by the treasury, several millions in gold had been turned into the treasury in compliance with the act which makes it illegal to possess more than $100 in gold or gold certificates.

Cummings said 42 persons after being interviewed by the agents had turned in $47,469, and 408 ing cotton blouse in the color of the stripes.

And still another had little suits of brown or red checked gingham, the blouse-coat of which has peppy short sleeves. Other stores are showing suits of white pique.

A State Street department store is featuring a clever youthful suit—a crepe-low cut tennis frock, a gingham blouse and a crepe jacket with cap sleeves.

BAER IS WINNER OVER SCHEMLING IN HARD BATTLE

Technical Knockout Is Registered In 10th Round Before 65,000

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, June 9. —(AP)—A rollicking, hard-punching, young fighter from California, handsome Max Baer came out of the West with the charge of another Jack Dempsey last night battered down Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion of the world, in 10 breath-taking rounds before an amazed crowd of 65,000.

the ninth, and then, with such savagery as the ring hasn't seen since the departure of the old man mauler, crushed the teuton in the 10th.

It was one of the biggest upsets that the modern ring has seen as Schmeling, favorite at as high as 4 to 1 before the battle started, never had a chance since the opening bell on Dempsey's first big promotion venture sounded.

The short, crushing right hand punches that knocked out Johnny Risko, Mickey Walker, and Young Stribling, bounced off Baer's wide grinning countenance as though the German were punching a brick wall. And in turn the long armed Californian, punching short and with the power of a five-inch shell in his right hand, battered the German about as he pleased.

Through the first three rounds the huge Baer, with 13 pounds of weight in his favor, inches in height and reach, tossed Schmeling around the ring whipping left hooks to the body, banging rights to the head, laughing at the German.

Baer then seemed to bide his time until the ninth when he caught Schmeling full on the side of the head with one of the terrific right crosses that had been shaking the German from the first punch on. Casually the tremendously muscled Baer moved in and belted Schmeling again.

As Schmeling, swelling about the eyes, faltered into the ropes Baer seemed to sense that the end of the battle was near. He tore in, caught Schmeling in a corner and whaled away with both hands.

The gong sounded, Baer kept punching, and as Schmeling tottered a bit as he started for his corner, he waved a befuddled protest to Referee Arthur Donovan.

Too badly hurt to recover in the short minute rest between the ninth and 10th, a mark for the terrific blasts Baer loosed with fury reminiscent of the night Dempsey battered Luis Angel Firpo into flintic oblivion in the Polo grounds.

Teeth bared in a snarl, body hunched over and away to give momentum to each punch, the curly-thatched Californian smashed Schmeling's head with one terrific wallop after another. The crowd, sensing the birth of a new punching menace to all the heavyweights, screamed as Schmeling sank slowly, his knees bent, and Baer leaned into him with one final crushing right to the jaw.

Schmeling went to the floor in a sprawl and the roaring of the crowd was so great Referee Donovan could only read the knockdown timekeeper's lips as he tolled off the seconds.

The Cotton Wardrobe

Like lots of temperamental people, cotton is either on the crest of the wave or way down in the trough. It's been coming in the back door of fashion and staying in the kitchen for many years; but such a year as appears to be had year it started sneaking in the front door, and this season it's well as little have added to the roll up to the porte cochere in its own limousine. What goes for cotton goes for linen, too. Not since the days when every little girl had to put on a fresh linen frock at four every afternoon has linen
