A river runs through it

Mullet Lake Park, in northeast Seminole County, has been closed to the public since Wednesday. The camping area has been closed for several weeks. The closure was caused by high water in the St. Johns River, brought about by the heavier-than-usual amount of rainfall. The headwaters of the St. Johns are located in Brevard County, east of Seminole, causing the waters to be unusually high. In Sanford, Lake Monroe is less than a foot below the top of the seawall. At Mullet Lake Park, roadways are flooded (above) and the launch ramps and dock areas are under water. County officials say the park will not be reopened until the water level goes down, and the park is checked for safety, and cleaned up.

Mullet Lake Park is the only county park closed because of the heavy rain, but the city of Lake Mary has closed its Liberty Park until the waters subside.

Illegal racial gerrymandering?

Judges asked to overturn Sanford congressional district

Staff and Wire Report

A three-judge panel said it will decide as soon as possible whether to throw out a congressional district that encompasses Sanford because it was created primarily to elect a minority candidate.

Jacksonville radio talk show host Andy Johnson wants the federal judges to throw out the district held by Rep. Corrine Brown, a black Democrat from Jacksonville who defeated Johnson in 1992.

After hearing arguments from both sides Thursday, the judicial panel will issue a written ruling "as soon as we can," said U.S. Circuit Judge Joseph Hatchett.

Johnson led a group of residents that sued last year, saying the district was the result of illegal racial gerrymandering. The lawsuit was on hold until the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in June that race cannot be the predominant reason for crafting a district's boundaries.

District 3 has been described as a "gnawed wishbone," and one federal judge compared it with "something lifted from a Rorschach test."

The district meanders over 250 miles through 14 counties, including Duval, Volusia, Orange, Seminole, Alachua and Marion, and 39 cities and towns, including Sanford. About 51 percent of the district's voters are black.

Rod Sullivan, the lawyer representing Johnson, said Brown's district is clearly unconstitutional based on the Supreme Court's latest ruling. The high court decided in a Georgia case that districts created solely to elect a minority violated white voters' equal protection rights.

"I don't believe reasonable people can actually debate this point," Sullivan told the judges.

He asked the judges to order state lawmakers to Impact fees: Some may go up, others down

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — An oft-postponed decision on Lake Mary's impact fees, has been postponed once again. Although an ordinance was scheduled for second and final reading Thursday night, the Lake Mary City Commission found it necessary to place the matter on hold until the next meeting.

Mayor Lowry Rockett explained that an attorney and a representative of a home builders organization were unable to attend the meeting.

Letters regarding the matter had been received by the commission from Robert Ort, president of the Public Resources Management Group, Inc., and Homebuilders Association of Mid Florida.

An attorney for the home-builders had told the city one of the objections was the police impact fee, where he determined the "brunt of the increase has been unfairly apportioned to residential rather than non-residential development."

Rockett said he believed the letter writers should be on hand during final dreading and discussion. The next regular meeting of the city commission will be on November 2. It is expected that meeting will begin one hour later, but an announcement will be made regarding that at a future time.

The proposed impact fee ordinance deals with impact fees charged by the city. If adopted as presently suggested some of the fees may be

Year round school ends... almost

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Parents, teachers and school volunteers packed the Seminole County school board meeting room beyond capacity, knowing they would have the opportunity to speak one last time on the matter of year round education.

They squeezed into all the available seats, stood in the aisles, sat pushed against the walls and slumped in corners of the lobby.

"School districts all over the country have abandoned (year round education)," said Brenda Adkins. "It has been proven to be one of the most expensive ways to educate our children."

Adkins drew applause when she asked the board to "work with (the parents) to keep families together".

Board members, too, said they are ready to phase out the year round calendar as they can afford to do it.

They agreed to spend the time between now and the next board meeting on Tuesday working with staff to prepare a new common calendar for most elementary, middle and high school students that will run from the end of July through the end of May.

That calendar is expected to be used for the 1996-97 school year.

Speaker after speaker asked the board to reconsider the decision

Officers kill in Bradenton, Miami

Two young men are dead and two police officers suspended with pay after shootings in Miami and Bradenton.

In Miami, a 17-year-old robbery suspect died Thursday morning in a shootout with a Metro-Dade detective. Investigators say Kevin Lawler fired first and more than once before being shot in the head by William Hladky, who was named his agency's Distinguished Officer of the Year in 1983.

Hladky was on other business, driving an unmarked car, when he saw Lawler steal two women's jewelry at gunpoint. The detective followed the youth to a gas station, jumped out, identified himself and ordered Lawler to stop. Investigators say, "The subject pointed a semiautomatic pistol at the officer and fired multiple shots," said police spokesman Denis Morales. "In defense, the officer returned fire, causing fatal injury to the subject. The officer was not injured. The subject's weapon was recovered near his body."

"I heard a man say 'Stop!' or 'Hold it!'" said Doretha William, who was at a nearby bus stop. "Then I looked. The young guy was walking by the (gas station) door. The policeman fired his gun.

"I didn't see no gun. If (Lawler) had a gun, he must have had it in his pants."

Also Thursday, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement was investigating the death of a 24-year-old shot by a Bradenton officer after a chase.

Patrick Pierre was dead on arrival at Manatee Memorial Hospital shortly after the 6:15 p.m. shooting Wednesday.

Christmas stamps feature fake snow

CHRISTMAS — The sun shone brightly Thursday as snow fell on the Central Florida community of Christmas.

"It looks cool. It looks Christmasy to me," said Vickie Prewett, an employee at Fort Christmas, where two new U.S. postage stamps were unveiled celebrating the 1995 holidays.

About 400 collectors showed up for their chance at first-issues, stamps postmarked on the day of release by the post office that released them.

One of the new 32-cent stamps bears an image of a Victorian angel and the other is a turn-of-the-century sledding scene.

The snow that blanketed the area wasn't real. It was created by Universal Studios Florida for the ceremony.

Hope keeps them laughing at 92

SHALIMAR — Some of the memories he always gives thanks for had faded and many of the jokes were, timeworn. But 92-year-old Bob Hope kept his fans laughing at a benefit for a military widows' home.

Hope brought along ageless singing sensation Tony Bennett, who credits the comedian with giving him his big break, and actress Jane Russell. The show attracted more than 3,000 people to a junior high school football stadium Wednesday night.

Hope was escorted to the stage and held onto the microphone for support. When Ms. Russell joined him on stage, Hope was unable to remember some of the stories she told about their early years in show business together.

"We always thought Bob was the greatest, but I have more respect for him now," said Air Force veteran Howard Burgett, 78, who came from East Point, Ga., to see the show. "Look at the man, the shape he's in, and he's still out entertaining the troops."

Hope's appearance was brief early in the three-hour show that also featured songs by his wife, Delores, Bennett and The Armen of Note, an Air Force jazz ensemble.

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ron Fogelman presented Hope with some golf balls, an Air Force golf shirt and an open tee time at any Air Force golf course in the world.

The foundation will use proceeds from the show to support two apartment complexes it operates, Bob Hope Village at Shalimar and Teresa Village in adjacent Fort Walton Beach. The two communities are surrounded by Eglin Air Force Base and Hurlburt Field, headquarters of the Air Force Special Operations Command.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Eye of the storm CIA spies on natural disasters

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — As Hurricane Opal bore down on Okaloosa County, Fla., the CIA was watching. The spy agency also had its eye on the Missouri River when it overflowed its banks last May.

Using the same techniques it applies to assessing the situation on the battlefields of Bosnia or the Persian Gulf, the CIA is helping federal disaster relief officials get an accurate picture of the impact of natural calamities.

At a time when the agency is eager to improve its image, the CIA was delighted to talk Thursday about this kind of spying — to a point.

"I really can't get into a lot of detail about how collection works," said Connie Miller, head of the CIA's disaster response team.

Natural disasters are an exception to the legal ban on domestic activity by the CIA. It uses its formidable collection and analytical skills to help officials at the Federal Emergency Management Agency determine which roads are open, which areas are flooded, where is the worst damage to housing.

Mike Chalmers, a FEMA intelligence officer, said that when an earthquake struck Southern California in January 1994, CIA analysts came up with the fact that 23 languages were spoken in the hardest-hit area, information essential for communicating with victims.

Sensitive to concerns about any domestic activity by the CIA, officials said more than once that when FEMA asks the CIA for help, the request is first scrutinized by the relief agency's lawyers and then is run by CIA legal counsel to make sure it is allowed under federal law.

Miller wouldn't discuss all the tools at the disposal of the CIA.

Most of the data comes from photo reconnaissance by satellites and aircraft which is then analyzed and fed into computers. To complete the picture there is an element of what in the spy business is called HUMINT or human intelligence.

In the case of disasters HUMINT presumably is what people are getting from news reports and conversations with local officials, as well as from the Internet. But the details fell within the area that Miller was unwilling to discuss.

"It's the kind of information we provide to the Department of Defense in military situations," said Miller. "It's one of the things we're good at."

Chalmers said his agency has access to a wide range of sources.

"I can call up the Air Force and say I need a U-2 spy plane," he said. In that case, the photos would be shipped to the CIA for analysis.

The best available examples of what this cooperation produces are computer-generated maps that use color codes to show the areas of greatest damage.

A map of St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands right after it was hit by Hurricane Marilyn in September showed areas of devastation as bright red and heavy damage as violet. The map noted that the runways at Harry S. Truman Airport were clear of debris.

A map of Florida's Miramar Beach area after it was hit by Hurricane Opal pinpointed flooding in dark blue and noted where a shorefront road was washed out and where another was blocked by sand and a third by debris. The map also showed the location of hospitals, churches and schools.

Hurricane damage often bears a eerie resemblance to the havoc from bombing. "We look for bomb hits," said CIA analyst Ted Donaldson. "We look for these same kind of features."

Sentiment runs against O.J. in panhandle

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY BEACH — Not rain or a media frenzy could keep O.J. Simpson off the golf course a third straight day.

Simpson high-fived his three golf partners Thursday and waved at some fans, but sentiment continued to run against the former football star relocating in the Florida Panhandle community.

For the second straight day, a small airplane pulled an aerial banner over the area. "Go Away O.J.," it read. A local couple paid $200 to have the banner towed Wednesday, but it was unclear who paid for it again Thursday.

However, the frantic movement of about 30 reporters and photographers running about the community was starting to become almost as big a story as Simpson's presence.

Television newscasts and the local daily newspaper featured the media frenzy, playing Simpson in the background.

"Keep the Juice off the front page and O.J. will go away," editorialized Panama City's daily newspaper, The News Herald.

The newspaper did not publish a story on Simpson's visit Thursday, but in an editorial asked residents not to take part in the circus surrounding his visit.

"We become the fool who allows himself to be conned," the editorial said. "We can do better than that."

Caravans of reporters and satellite TV trucks went from course to course in pursuit of Simpson before finding him at the fashionable Bay Point development. The pack included reporters and photographers from New York's tabloid newspapers, television tabloid magazines and news stations in Miami.

Reporters and photographers staked out three different country clubs before locating Simpson playing in a light drizzle on the Club Meadows course at Bay Point.

Simpson, for the first time, did not play at the Hombre Country Club, where he had golfed Tuesday and Wednesday. Simpson and three companions hopped the course to avoid the media. He later quit playing and stayed on a cart because his knees were giving him trouble.

Asked by reporters if his legs were hurting, Simpson responded, "Always do."

But he ignored questions about whether he had gotten away with murder when he was acquitted in the slayings of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Pro football picks: Brady's hot!

Well, here we are in week eight. I've never been one to brag, but I have been on fire. I've had Vegas people calling at all hours of the night, and the I.R.S. is threatening me with an audit. It seems that everyone, including my mailman Dennis, went with my upset selection of Denver (+3) over the Raiders. I loved that game, but what about the LOCK OF THE WEEK? Carolina as a slight underdog has brought my record to 8-0. I believe I wrote, "Call me crazy, but I see them winning by ten points or more." The final score? Carolina 26 New York 15. I promised to let you know if Jerry Greene had accepted my "football analysis" challenge, and I didn't. I was surprised that the old guy wasn't willing to bet a rib dinner that The Orlando Sentinel could pick football games better than The Herald. His exact response was,

"I can't due to contractual agreements." Whatever you say Jerry.

Focusing on Florida's teams let's talk about the Dolphin mishap in New Orleans. As I said at the beginning of the season, Miami goes as far as Marino can take them. I don't have anything against Bernie, I love the guy, but without The Man, Shula's team is in trouble. The Dolphins find themselves with big problems, as the Colts and the Bills rolled to victories. I've been trying to warn people that the Colts are for real, and their beating of the Niners proves it. Fortunately, the Dolphins play the worst team in the NFL this week so they should get a win.

Let's talk about my team. The Bucs had The Bombrero rocking Sunday as they pulled off a giant win. The offense looked great, and as usual the defense was spectacular. Rumor has it, that after the game Warren Moon was found curled up in the locker room mumbling, "Hulk, Hulk, Hulk." Hardy "Hulk" Nickerson has once again proven he is one of the premier linebackers in the League. Sam and the Bucs had this game all along, to win in overtime just sweetened the victory. One more win on the way to the playoffs.

Property Appraiser Suber to run again

From Staff reports

SANFORD — H. W. "Bill" Suber has formally announced his candidacy for re-election for the office of Seminole County Property Appraiser.

He plans to officially kick off his campaign on Wednesday, Nov. 29, at a fund-raising breakfast at the Country Club, hosted by his re-election committee. Bill Suber

In a press release announcing his intention to seek re-election, he said, "The taxpayers of Seminole County have always been cost conscious and Suber has moved to develop systems that create efficiency and save tax dollars."

The statement says Suber began a cooperative effort with several cities in 1989 to develop a computerized building permit system which has led to greater accuracy and has made tracking permits much easier. In 1993 he helped develop an interlocal agreement with the Board of County Commissioners to create a county-wide computerized mapping system to help eliminate duplication of effort, increase efficiency, and provide better service to the public.

Suber says the introduction of this system created a cost saving to taxpayers of approximately $76,000.

He pointed out that under his leadership, "The Seminole County Property Appraiser's office was a pioneer in the use of the Automatic Homestead Renewal, and was one of the first to implement pre-filed applications for Homestead Exemption, both of which created greater efficiency and made the process of filing an application for exemption easier for the public."

Since being elected in 1990 as a Republican, he has received numerous awards, and has been recognized for his professional and technical abilities by the State of Florida, American Society of Appraisers, and recognized as an Accredited Senior Appraiser and Certified Florida Appraiser.

The position of Seminole County Property Appraiser is scheduled to be on the countywide ballot next year.

On the waterfront

Two years ago, there was the promise of high-speed boat racing planned for the Sanford lakefront. The races, in what are known as "tunnel boats" were billed as involving drivers from around the nation and the world.

No one in Sanford had a tunnel-hull boat of that type however, and few had heard of them. Yet they were capable of going from a standing start to speeds of over 100 miles per hour in just five seconds. They could make a 90 degree turn without having to slow down. They were hot!

Several thousand spectators went to the Sanford lakefront to watch these boats in 1993. They must have told their friends and neighbors, because by 1994, the number of spectators had climbed tremendously, and the number of boats entered in the race also increased.

This Saturday and Sunday will be the third time Lake Monroe will have these slick boats skimming over its surface in competition for national championship points. Racers are coming from all across the nation as well as several European nations.

Certainly, it may interrupt fishing off the shore in the area east of the Monroe Harbour Marina area, and it may cause the need for some traffic rerouting and detours. But it will only be for this Saturday and Sunday.

As has often been said, Sanford has a tourist attraction few cities in the nation have, a location on the shore of a large beautiful lake. We are pleased that the lake is being put to use in this manner.

Next weekend, more boat racing. On Oct. 28 and 29, the Halifax Sailing Center will hold a big sailing regatta, again on Lake Monroe from the marina to the Fort Mellon Park area. Approximately 60 sailboats are expected to grace the waters of the lake.

We know people who enjoy boating or at least watching these watercrafts, will be flocking on the lakefront for these two weekends.

We urge others to do likewise. Sanford's lakefront is being put to use as a major tourist attraction. We are having events not even the major theme parks are holding. The shore of Lake Monroe will be the place to be, and the people of Sanford should be pleased. We're using the lake as it should be used.

LETTER

Arbor Day

I am forwarding a copy of a letter to John Rosenow, president, National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, Neb. dated Oct. 2, 1995:

Dear Mr. Rosenow: I feel called upon to bring to your attention a very discouraging incident which occurred right after the Gulf War shortly before I became disabled and later required double hip replacement surgery.

I had started to set up a business, "Starbright Nursery" at 5456 Lake Ave., Sanford, FL 32773, and had contacts with wholesale tree suppliers. I notified all local newspaper and TV stations that I had ordered a supply of 300 fast growing poplar trees from a tree farm in Pennsylvania, and would give one to every family of a U.S. serviceman or woman who had served in that conflict. I noted that I was prepared to increase that order if requests required it.

But - sit down for this! - Not a single newspaper or TV station published my offer. I could not cancel the entire order because 100 trees were on the way, but I did cancel the other 200. I put the small trees in gallon containers, but when later I was admitted to the VA hospital in Gainesville, my daughter was not able to keep the trees cared for, so only about 6 survived. I was gone for over a year, and no longer have the nursery because I'm wheelchair bound, following double hip replacement surgery.

I felt nauseated when recently, comments on at least one of the TV stations acknowledged Arbor Day. Almost 100 young trees died because nobody cared enough to publicize my offer to Central Florida veterans of the Desert Storm affair.

I still admire the work of the Arbor Day Foundation, but I have not forgotten - nor forgiven - the classic "snub" I got from the news media of Central Florida.

Hong Kong braces itself for 1997

HONG KONG - The proverbial visitor from Mars, looking at Hong Kong today, would never suspect that anything was amiss. The incredible harbor, surrounded by mountains and teeming with all sorts of activity, has never looked lovelier. There is new construction everywhere, and tourists throng what must surely be the world's largest collection of shops. This unique city - for a century and a half a British crown colony, but with an overwhelmingly Chinese population - looks, at first glance, almost arrogantly sure of itself.

Yet there is only one subject of conversation in Hong Kong today, and it is murmured more often than shouted: "1997" - or, specifically, July 1 of that year, when the Union Jack comes down and the red flag of the People's Republic of China goes up. What will happen to Hong Kong then?

Under the so-called Basic Law, negotiated between Britain and the PRC, Hong Kong will pass under Communist control, but Peking's official policy will be "one country, two systems": Hong Kong will be allowed to continue its free-wheeling capitalist ways for at least 50 years, and to govern itself (save in matters "such as" defense and foreign policy) independently and democratically.

The real question, of course, is whether the Communists have any intention of abiding by these promises. It would be greatly in their own interest to do so, because Hong Kong is the goose that lays the golden egg: a source, as presently managed, of enormous profits to the Communist regime. But do the Communist bosses in Beijing recognize this? And even if they do, have they the self-restraint to leave Hong Kong alone?

There are almost as many views on this question as there are people in Hong Kong (6 million). Many famous Hong Kong businessmen have already transferred their domiciles and their movable assets to Bermuda.

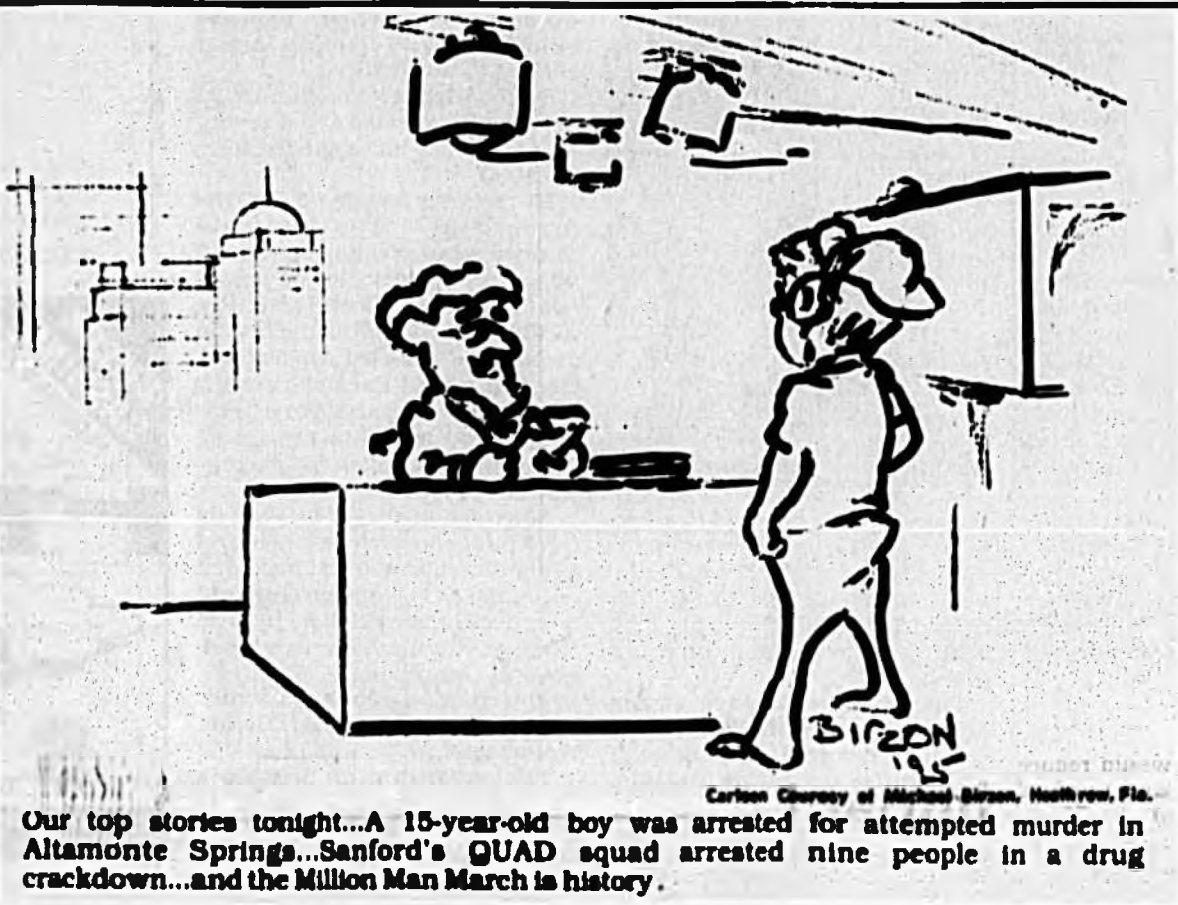

The proverbial visitor from Mars, looking at Hong Kong today, would never suspect that anything was amiss.

or elsewhere. Hundreds of thousands of people have either managed to arrange for legal residence abroad and departed, or are hanging desperately on to foreign passports.

Of the rest, the relatively few who have forged ties with the incoming Communists are understandably optimistic. (Theirs is the money behind all that new construction.) The rest are despondent, or at best resigned. They voted, in recent elections, overwhelmingly for the few brave political leaders who are still speaking up for freedom. But does it really matter?

The best guess is that, immediately after July 1, 1997, what will happen is... nothing. The Communists will take everything over, then spend some months just pinching themselves to make sure their fantastic luck isn't empty a wonderful dream.

Then, slowly, inevitably, inexorably, they will begin to impose their will, in a thousand ways, great and small. They are, after all, Communists, and not accustomed to being contradicted. As Robert Byrne once wrote of playing chess with Anatoly Karpov, "For a while nothing much seems to happen, and then you slowly realize that rigor mortis has set in."

Our top stories tonight...A 15-year-old boy was arrested for attempted murder in Altamonte Springs...Sanford's QUAD squad arrested nine people in a drug crackdown...and the Million Man March is history.

Female genital mutilation in U.S.

BOSTON - We don't want to believe that it happens here. Stories about this most brutal of traditions are supposed to carry foreign datelines.

Female genital mutilation - a label as grisly as it is accurate - only happens in places where ancient ritual still overwhelms reason. It happens among people who regard a woman's sexuality as so dangerous that it must be eliminated. It happens in communities where women are taught that mutilation is the price of belonging.

Across the world, somewhere between 100 million and 130 million women and girls have been mutilated in infancy, at puberty, in pregnancy. They've had their clitoria amputated, their labia cut away, and then were sewn together in ceremonies too painful even to read about.

This is the fate of nearly every woman and girl in Somalia. Of 90 percent of the females in Ethiopia. Of half in Egypt. You can read all about it in reports at international conferences.

But now we are learning that female genital mutilation has been imported to America.

The numbers are still uncertain. No one has yet properly gathered data from the immigrant communities where daughters are being mutilated by the dictates of their homeland tradition. The estimates range from the hundreds to the thousands. But the anecdotes and the testimony are piling up.

When Rep. Pat Schroeder first began talking about FGM in America, many of her colleagues regarded it as, in her words, "more feminist ranting." Even an aide refused to believe that it was a serious problem until he went with Schroeder to a Denver school, where a teacher said, "You see those two Somali girls, let me tell you what happened to them last week."

Now evidence comes from horrified doctors who encounter mutilated women on the examining table or in the delivery room. It comes as well from immigrant women themselves, telling their stories and trying to save the next generation of children.

In October's Atlantic Monthly, Linda Burstyn writes about families who import someone from home to perform these so-called "circumcisions" in America. She repeats the words of a taxi driver in Washington who approved this practice because he "wasn't going to let my daughters have those things!" She tells about mothers who believe that without FGM their daughters will be grotesque, unmarriageable, and tells about a grandmother who fears that her baby granddaughter "will grow up horny. She'll be like American girls."

By every measurement, genital mutilation on a minor is child abuse. In England, Sweden and much of Europe, it's been made illegal. In

We don't want to believe that it happens here.

France, a mother was jailed for having her two daughters cut. But not a single case has been prosecuted in America. Indeed, just three states - New York, Minnesota and North Dakota - have made FGM on minors a felony.

Our reactions has been muted by ignorance and squeamishness. It's been tempered as well by some perverse respect for cultural "differences" - that neutral word which can lump together clitoridectomies and folk dances. It's been tamped down by a bizarre analogy made between female "circumcision" and male.

But at last human rights groups like Equality Now are supporting the work of activists who live in the communities where FGM goes on. At the same time, Congress is finally confronting this reality.

Two bills, sponsored by Pat Schroeder in the House and Harry Reid in the Senate, would make it illegal to perform FGM on a child in America. As part of the foreign appropriations bill that's now in conference committee, these bills would also provide funds to find out how widespread the problem is and in which communities.

Another strategy proposed by Schroeder would try to stop FGM at the border by adding a requirement to the immigration bill. All new immigrants would be told they cannot bring this "tradition" with them.

Just weeks ago, the U.N. conference in Beijing was full of talk about gender and violence. The speeches were sprinkled with painful references to the horrors of this ancient rite. Schroeder was not the only woman to listen, wince, and realize, "how lucky I was to be born in America."

We have to make sure that luck holds and extends to every female. The U.N. plan of action was indeed a take-home document. This country too has to say no. Not here. Not anymore.

Gulf Coast eager for FEMA dollars

WASHINGTON - Some Republican lawmakers have apparently decided that the drive to cut government down to size shouldn't apply to their own backyards.

Alabama Sen. Richard Shelby, who bolted the Democratic Party for the GOP last November, wants the government to provide low-cost flood insurance for 320 "pristine" acres along the Gulf of Mexico. The land is currently owned by a local developer, Larry Drummond, who wants some help from Uncle Sam.

Drummond is also a big Shelby supporter. Since 1991, he and his family have given $18,000 to Shelby's campaign through personal donations and political action committee contributions.

Standing in Drummond's way is a 1982 federal law called the Coastal Barrier Resources Act, which passed with bipartisan support when Congress wisely decided it was time to get government out of the business of insuring flood insurance for hurricane-prone areas. Before the law passed, any developer who built homes along the shore could take comfort in the knowledge that the Federal Emergency Management Agency would pick up the tab if something went wrong. Liberals liked the law because it would help protect pristine coastlines from new development. Conservatives liked it because the government would no longer be stuck with a huge tab every time a hurricane hit.

Not surprisingly, FEMA's flood insurance is far cheaper than anything available from companies operating in the open market, which generally refuse to issue policies in areas where hurricanes are common. But since many homes had already been built along the coast, the new Coastal Barrier Resources System, which encompasses areas covered by the act, only included areas that had not yet been developed. Those who had already built in these areas were allowed to keep their government flood insurance, which usually costs less than $1,000 per year.

"No one is saying you can't build (in coastal areas)," said Melissa Sagun of the Coast Alliance, a conservationist group. "The law just says that the federal government won't give you backing if you want to build in these areas."

The act worked as intended until last year, when a group of Florida lawmakers helped pass a "technical corrections" bill that removed certain Florida properties from the system. After looking at a number of properties, the Fish and Wildlife Service admitted it made some mistakes when it originally mapped out the system. As a result, some areas had their designation changed as a way of correcting the record.

This year, some of the same lawmakers decided to try again. The Florida delegation, led by Rep. Tillie Fowler, R-Fla., again sought to get some local property owners exempted from the act. Only this time, the Fish and Wildlife Service didn't buy their argument. In the Senate, meanwhile, Shelby introduced a bill that would get Drummond's property removed from the act's jurisdiction and into the federal flood insurance program.

"We understood that there was a factual error that occurred in the mapping of that property," a Shelby spokeswoman told our associate Jan Moller. Still, she added, the Drummond bill is not a top priority right now given the other budget issues to be resolved.

Some lawmakers have decided that the drive to cut government down to size shouldn't apply to their own backyards.

Launch try 7: Columbia blasts off in a vapor cloud

By MARCIA BURN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — After six vexing delays, space shuttle Columbia and its crew blasted into orbit today on a science mission that will foreshadow life on NASA's planned international space station.

The 4.5 million-pound spaceship rose from its seaside pad at 9:53 a.m., three minutes late because of a minor communications problem that was quickly resolved. An unusually thick cloud of white vapor enveloped the shuttle as it left the pad, blocking it from view for several heart-stopping seconds.

The seven astronauts were thrilled to finally be on their way.

"We can't wait to get to work," shuttle commander Kenneth Bowersox said.

The shuttle reached orbit 8 1/2 minutes after launch.

Columbia was three weeks late taking off because of bad weather and all sorts of technical trouble. Its six launch scrubs tied a shuttle record, set by Columbia nearly 10 years ago.

Low clouds and rain this morning almost forced a record-breaking seventh delay. NASA said the weather improved enough to allow a safe flight; there were only thin, wispy clouds over the launch site. As they headed to the launch pad this morning, crew members wore their red, white and blue baseball caps backward for good luck.

Scientists were stressed, in any the least, going into the latest countdown. They had been stocking and restocking Columbia with laboratory specimens since launch try No. 1 on Sept. 28, and were running low on protein crystals, cells and potato plants for future launch attempts.

Columbia is loaded with $101 million worth of science experiments.

During the 16-day mission — one of the longest shuttle flights ever — Bowersox and his crew will grow protein and semiconductor crystals, study fluids, set controlled fires and tend to potato plants. Researchers say these crystals could lead to improved medications and faster computers.

redraw the state's congressional district plan, something the Legislature failed to do in 1992.

A three-judge panel, that included Hatchett and District Judge Roger Vinson, approved the 23-district plan three years ago. District Judge Maurice Paul has replaced Judge William Stafford on the new panel.

Lawyers for Brown, the state, the U.S. Justice Department, a group of black residents and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People argued that race was not the main reason for creating the odd-shaped district.

At most, they said, the panel should modify its 1992 order and tell the Legislature it could submit another congressional plan if it wished.

They said a major difference between the Supreme Court decision and the Florida suit was the redistricting plan in Georgia was approved by lawmakers, not the court.

"This court knew what it did and knows why it did it," said George Waas, an assistant attorney general arguing for the state. "The buck had to stop somewhere and it had to stop with this court because the Legislature couldn't do it."

House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, has said lawmakers may have to be called into special session later this year or in early 1996 to draft new congressional districts, depending on how and when the judges rule.

Wallace has said he expected the congressional plan to be overturned.

In another legal challenge, a handful of voters in the Tampa area has filed suit to invalidate the state Senate district held by Jim Hargrett, a black Democrat from Tampa. Negotiations are under way to try to reach a settlement to revamp that district.

The 120-member state House redistricting plan has survived one challenge by Hispanics.

they made more than five years ago that brought year round education to Seminole County.

Applause filled the room each time a speaker detailed the lack of academic merit or the lack of common time together for families.

"At a time when it seems the family is being attacked from all sides, it seems ironic we are fighting the school board to have time together with our families," Debbie Canguel said. "I don't want my tax dollars spent on a system that no one says works. Please, please give us a common calendar for all students kindergarten through 12th grade."

Many parents were upset with the board's apparent unwillingness to move away from the year round concept.

"YRE is still a sacred cow to you," Carl Stevens, a father and a 23-year veteran at the head of a middle school classroom. "You are apparently committed to this calendar."

Stevens was applauded when he suggested the remediation that intersession provided was academically inadequate and inappropriate for students.

"How can you think that a child who is getting D's and F's at the end of 12 weeks can make that work up in four days? A remediation program needs to be in place during the 12 weeks."

He noted that the current system caters to the procrastinator who figures he can put off the work until intersession and then "go for the quick fix" and still earn the grade.

Parents noted that children "need the summer off" to mature and to simply "be kids".

Melanie Elkins was lauded by the audience for her questioning of the school board on why they "continued the fad" of year round education.

"We don't want it, teachers don't want it. Why continue the fad?" she asked. "Am I only important to you at election time? Is the rest of the time only lip service?"

Many said they believe the school board is out of touch with the public. They suggested that the board needed to "leave (their) personal agendas behind in order to better represent those who elected (them)".

Among those speaking in favor of the common calendar was Tom Marcy, the district's executive director of secondary education, who spoke on behalf of the district staff.

"It is the considered opinion of the staff that a common calendar is highly desirable for the school system," he announced to the applause of those in attendance.

Among the stated reasons for that belief, he said, were that the common calendar would reduce the "inefficiencies and much of the confusion that has been experienced with the current multiple calendar configuration; communication within the system as well as communication with "stakeholders" would be enhanced with a common calendar; a common calendar would improve employee morale and reduce burnout; and transportation problems would be reduced and the cost of busing students would be reduced.

Finally, he noted, the development of a common calendar would be a "good faith response to the preponderance of community and employee feedback to the school board."

But, most important, Marcy and many of the parents said, was the matter of curriculum.

"A common calendar would resolve the issue of eighth graders who take a foreign language at the high school.

"There would be a greater sense of continuity in the learning experience without the regular shut downs and start ups of the year round calendar.

"Quality, on-going and extended learning activities can be developed for students to enhance achievement opportunities beyond the regular 180 day calendar.

Hagerly said he saw no way the return to the traditional calendar could be made completely by the next school year, and that a few schools will be on the multitrack calendar until the money was available to build the needed schools.

"I believe the multitrack calendar will always be a tool we can keep in our box to use when we need it," he said.

In addition Midway and Pine Crest elementary schools will remain on a separate schedule regardless of the board's decisions to accommodate the Break the Mold projects at those schools.

Though, during Thursday evening's work session, the board warmed to the idea of the common calendar, which they had nearly rejected as recently as Tuesday, they do force some problems.

"We have to look at the big picture, and the big picture is telling us the money isn't there," said board Chairman Sandy Robinson.

The school board made no official decision last night. The matter is scheduled for a vote at the 7 p.m. board meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 24.

The board meets at the district offices, 1211 S. Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

Impact

increased while others are proposed for a decrease.

Impact fees are monies charged to compensate for additional services required by new construction, both business and residential. The current levels have been in existence since 1991.

The ordinance will call for an increase in fees for residential development, but give a slight decrease in the rate for non-residential construction.

At the present time, the residential household impact fee charged by Lake Mary is $420. The ordinance calls for the amount to climb to $601 per unit. According to previous discussions and as the result of a study undertaken by the city, the increase is due in part to increased police and parks capital needs.

The impact fee for non-residential use is 16.1 cents per square feet of building area. The new ordinance would reduce this to 14.8 cents per square foot. As an example, a business building, occupying 20,000 square feet of space would have paid $3,220 in impact fees. With the reduction, the same building would be required to pay $2,960.

Lake Mary officials say the recommended decrease is based partially on the mutual aid agreement with Seminole County Fire Rescue, and the neighboring cities of Sanford and Longwood.

The recommendations are the result of a study by the consulting firm of Dyer, Riddle, Mills & Precourt, as well as the Public Resources Management Group.

When the ordinance came up for its first reading, the city commission approved the increase in impact fees subject to it being phased in over a two year period beginning January 1 of this year, with the full increase going into effect on January 1, 1997.

The fees which will be reduced would become effective upon final approval of the ordinance.

ALICE MAE KIMBER
Alice Mae Kimber, 74, Valencia Street, Sanford, died Thursday, Oct. 19, 1995 at her residence. Born March 24, 1921 in Naches, Miss., she moved to Central Florida in 1962. She was a retired social worker. She was a member of Sanford Meadows Seventh Day Adventist Church.

Meadowlark to speak in Sanford

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford Civic Center will be hopping February 21 at 7 a.m. with the humorous antics of former Globetrotter, Meadowlark Lemon. Strang Communications has arranged for the "Clown Prince of Basketball," as he is affectionately referred, to be the guest speaker at the Fifth Annual Seminole County Prayer Breakfast.

This legendary hero has charmed audiences with his skill of the game of basketball and knowledge in the world of sports. Children of all ages have imitated his style.

Lemon has traveled from center court to the pulpit to share his message of hope to a lost world. After becoming a Christian 12 years ago he later founded Meadowlark Ministries in Scottsdale, Arizona.

With Bible in hand, Lemon now proclaims his faith in an effort to encourage youth in a positive way. He schedules evangelistic engagements at various churches throughout the country and internationally.

To attend this breakfast with Meadowlark Lemon a corporate sponsorship for a table of eight is $150; individual tickets are $15. Seating is limited and expected to sell out.

Mail checks to Seminole County Prayer Breakfast, P.O. Box 961446, Lake Mary, FL 32796-1446. For further information contact Geoff Koach at Strang Communications at 333-0600.

Minister speaks on subject of sorrow

SANFORD — The world is so full of tragedy that whenever you happen to read this column you will surely be able to recall a recent local or national tragic event. We often feel powerless after such things occur, so it may help us learn the following biblical principles on the subject.

First, one should remember that sorrow is a part of life. The Bible says in Job 14:1, "Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble."

We may not think about it, but the longer we live, the more we are likely to see sorrow. In fact, Babylon was condemned for her arrogant belief that she was indestructible, that she would never see grief (Isaiah 47:8; Revelations 18:7). Therefore, we simply need to prepare ourselves for the time that sorrow will come to us.

There are various sources of sorrow in life, such as carelessness, meanness, incurable diseases, etc. However, the general reason for the sorrows that we experience is the presence of sin into the world. We must realize that we bring unpleasant consequences upon ourselves when we transgress God's will.

For example, during the time of the conquest of the land of Canaan a man named Achan was stoned because he stole the treasure plundered from Jericho.

Because of David's sin with Bathsheba, he experienced the sorrow of the loss of the little child, but there was also the guilt of having wronged God. David wrote, "...my sorrow is continually before me. For I will declare mine iniquity; I will be sorry for my sin." (Psalms 38:17-18). The Apostle Paul sorrowed for his fellow Jews who would not obey the gospel of Christ (Romans 9:2-4).

It is initially difficult to see the benefits of a sorrowful situation. Time will be kind to the one who will yield to God's will because they will be made a better person.

A bar of steel worth $2 can become $150 worth of needles. It can also produce a multitude of watch springs worth $100,000. Although the same amount of steel went into each product, the difference is how much the steel was cut and manipulated for the final product.

In the same way, sorrow shapes and sharpens us to make us more valuable. We can think of suffering and sorrow as being an effective fertilizer that produces a fruit of harvest (Hebrews 12:11).

During times of sorrow and grief, the Lord may seem far away from us. The Psalmist asked, "Why do you stand far off, O Lord? Why do you hide yourself in times of trouble?" (Psalms 10:1).

Once we get over the initial shock we can begin to think clearly and to trust in God. He has given his people relief from their sorrow in a wide variety of circumstances, from the return from the captivity (Isaiah 14:3; Isaiah 35:10) to the work of the apostles after Jesus ascended to Heaven (John 16:20).

Similarly, we are promised that we are given strength to endure the trials that will come our way. As for coping in this life, Paul assures us, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to His purpose." (Romans 8:28). Don't blame God for disasters, but believe in his promise that He can make everything that happens to us work for good in our lives.

The ultimate comfort on the subject of sorrow is the description of a beautiful place, Heaven:

Dan Wheeler
Minister for the South
Seminole Church of Christ

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." (Revelation 21:4). Sorrow is only temporary, but God's goodness is eternal.

Walking in the light

SANFORD — As the audience filed from the church building lights were dimmed or turned off. Worship services for the Wednesday night Bible class and singing night had come to a close.

Since my family were still making way to the muggy parking lot guess who ended up with the last night in the house duty? Right, Me.

Filing through the corridor of the classrooms light filled my path. Suddenly, with the action of my right hand all was dark.

At least five classrooms were ahead on each side. My eyes found it difficult to adjust to the blackness. Stopping to focus on the 30 feet of nothing surrounding me I choose to set my sights on the brightness at the end of the hall.

With a smile and like a true trooper I advanced to my destination. As I walked, brisk at first and then slowing, I was reminded of how followers of Christ must not get "caught up" in the darkness of the world. We should keep our eyes on the light of the Lord.

In Psalms 27:1, the Bible says, "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" What an appropriate verse to recall while descending from the darkness to the light.

SANFORD — Many members of the YES (Young Energetic Seniors) program from First United Methodist Church in Sanford agreed that the presentation on Senior Friends, given by Ellen Rollins from the Central Florida Regional Hospital, was a most enjoyable and educational time. All attending appreciated her service very much.

YES was organized about 1987 by the minister's wife, Carolyn Bule, and was temporarily called the "Fifth Street Irregulars" until the present fitting title was chosen. This special group of older adults, late sixties to nineties, come together for Christian fellowship.

The group has maintained exceptional leadership in the past. Those involved in this capacity include Carolyn Bule, Mildred Baugh, Mabel Chapman, Bob Briggs and Mari Briggs. Lucy Fitzgerald, with strong support of the members who select places to go and things to do, tries to make this group very exciting.

Together all have enjoyed programs at the church such as presentations on Iceland, Turkey, England, the Holy Land and the tulips of Holland. Many have been guests in the home of Miriam Andrews for Christmas parties and various luncheons in others homes. Book reviews, "The Bird Lady", videos, game days and numerous other programs have caught the attention of group members.

Exciting trips such as horse racing in Ocala, Leu Gardens, the Elks Childrens Hospital, Methodist Children's Home, Wesley Foundation at Stetson University in Deland, and Blue Springs Park to see the manatees were scheduled for the group. Adventures to the Space Center, Church Street Station, Cactus Farm and more were on the agenda.

Much success for the travels goes to Bob Briggs, with his ever ready smile and driving the church van as well as his help in so many other ways. His wife, Mari, is found often performing the duties of hostess.

Enrollment is always open to all. For those wanting something interesting to do or someplace to go the members invite others to join the group on the second Tuesday of each month.

The church is located at 419 S. Park Ave. Call the church office at 322-4371 for more information.

• CHICAGO (-7) vs HOUSTON. Chicago barely got by the Jaguars, but return to Soldier Field. The Oiler's defense will keep it close, but the Bears win for the hometown crowd.

Bears 18 Oilers 10

• MIAMI at N.Y. JETS. The bookies haven't set a line yet, and I'm disappointed. If the "Jest" can't get fired up for Miami, they should forfeit the rest of the season. Believe it or not, this one will be close.

Dolphins 23 Jets 20

• CLEVELAND (-14) vs JACKSONVILLE. Conventional wisdom says the Browns are due for a blowout at The Dog Pound. I'm not a conventional person. The Jaguars still remember how it feels to win. Brunell is keeping them in every game. The Brownies will squeak this one out, but it will be close. Take the points and run, don't walk to the bank.

Browns 24 Jaguars 10

• NEW ORLEANS (-4) at CAROLINA. The Saints are all proud of themselves for beating a battered Dolphins squad. Taking the keys out of the lockers helped this team, but it won't save them from a fired up Panther team. Until the Saints can run the ball, they are extremely vulnerable.

Carolina 17 Saints 13

• DETROIT (-3) at WASHINGTON. Detroit is a great team, but the Skins have a way of looking good at home. This one could go either way as Barr Sanders keeps looking to get back in form. He's looked great in the McDonald's and Cadillac commercials, but that doesn't help on Sunday.

Lions 23 Redskins 21

• TAMPA (-3) vs ATLANTA. This will be a real test for Sam Wyche. Can he keep the boys focused? Atlanta has the ability to score a ton of points but Tampa has the talent to avoid that. I know it sounds too good to be true, but I see the Bucs going 6-2. It all boils down to Difer.

Bucs 18 Falcons 15

• DENVER (-8) vs KANSAS CITY. This is the second big game for Elway in as many weeks. This is a great matchup as two Division rivals clash in a key game. The Broncos can't afford to let K.C. get too far ahead in the standings, but I'm not sure they can stop them. I wouldn't bet this game for the world.

Broncos 27 Chiefs 24

• GREEN BAY (-4) vs MINNESOTA. Both of these teams are trying to catch my Bucs, so I wish they could both lose. Minnesota has to be upset about losing in Tampa, but things won't get easier in Green Bay. Holmgren has dedicated this game to Big Al, who may play on key third downs.

Packers 27 Vikings 13

• OAKLAND (-8) vs INDIANAPOLIS. Who are they trying to kid? The Colts are much better than eight point underdogs. The Hoosier - less Raiders will have a difficult time keeping up with Harbaugh and Faulk. Did you see the Raiders cheating against the Broncos? It didn't work, but it might this week.

Raiders 23 Colts 17

• SAN DIEGO (-9) at SEAT-

TL. This is kind of an ugly game, but I have an uncle that lives in Seattle so I'll go with the Seahawks. If Humphries plays I could be wrong, but Mirer and the team are due for a win. Beau is an absolute warrior. He and Nickerson should fight each other on pay-per-view.

Seahawks 31 Chargers 26

• SAN FRANCISCO (4) at ST. LOUIS. The Niner's are limping along, but you have to be careful with the defending champion. If the Rams heed my advice they should win. Take the points.

Rams 17 Niners 13

Every week I issue what I consider to be the best pick against the spread in the schedule. This is the game that after research and contemplation, I feel most confident about releasing as my LOCK OF THE WEEK. This is the first week of the season that I've let emotion play a factor in my selection. This week, I, along with most football fans, learned that Buffalo Bills head coach Mary Levy underwent surgery for cancer. In this column I affectionately refer to him as the "Old Grouch." I do this because he is one of the few coaches left from the "Old School." In an era of football where players make more money than coaches, he doesn't hesitate to demand respect for the game. As a lifelong Bills fan, he has been a welcome relief to coaches that allow whining, taunting, and other nonsense that pollutes the game. This Monday night will be the first game the "Old Grouch" has missed in 46 years of coaching. I'll miss him.

In "Win One For The Gipper" style the Bills (+1) quality as my LOCK OF THE WEEK. I really think this could be a rout, the Bill's players sincerely love this man, and it would be a great gift. Good luck this week, and save the painting for a nice Fall Sunday.

LAKE MARY — Senior Night was a common theme Thursday in Seminole County high school girls volleyball. Seminole honored Vilaphone Rattanavong and Andrea Russo before its match against Lake Howell. Russo plans to study physical therapy at the UCF, while Rattanavong will pursue architecture at FSU.

"Vilaphone has played three years of varsity volleyball, and she can play anywhere on the floor," said Seminole coach Beth Corso. "Andrea filled an important spot on the team this year, and she did a fine job."

Lake Mary recognized seniors Monica Camardee, Traci Tombros and Traci Woodall prior to its match against Bishop Moore. Tombros was only in the Rams program for two years after transferring from Bishop Moore, while Camardee and Woodall played their entire high school career there.

"Traci Tombros got here at a good time, because we needed player who had some power," said Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry. "Traci Woodall lends herself to all parts of the game, and Monica has been one of our best servers. All three of them worked very hard."

SANFORD — The Lake Howell High School Cross Country team ran away with a sweep Thursday in the Just For Feet-Seminole Invitational at Seminole High School.

The Silver Hawks boys had four runners in the top 20 individual finishers, led by runner-up Chris Kenpink, to give the team a whopping 23 points (53-78) victory over Pine Ridge, who had the individual champion in David Gardner. Lake Mary, Seminole and Oviedo rounded out the top five teams.

The Lake Howell girls' squad, paced by individual champion Cally Howell, was even more impressive, placing five runners in the top 10 and six in the top 20 to crush the field by 42 points. The Silver Hawks finished with 30 points, while Bishop Moore was second with 72. Oviedo, Lake Brantley and Trinity Prep finished third through fifth.

"Those five players have been on this team for a number of years," said Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen. "They have a lot of character, and it showed in the way they played against Seminole."

Sewell served Lake Mary to a 6-0 lead in game one before Hale, Hornreich, and Gill stretched the advantage to 9-2. Greg Pegram, Tori Carl, David Campbell, Erick Ho and Chris Louwama then collaborated on nine service points to pull Seminole into an 11-11 deadlock.

Sewell and Hale then served the Rams to a 14-11 lead, but Louwama responded immediately with three straight service to tie the score 14-14. Jason Hawkins then closed out the game with two service points. Sewell had 15 service points and one ace for Lake Mary.

The Rams got off to another fast start with a 9-3 lead in game two, paced by four service points from Sewell. The Tribe answered the challenged immediately when Sam Junto piled up five service points to make the score 9-8. Gill served Lake Mary to a 12-8 lead, but Seminole came right back to take a 14-13 advantage as Campbell and Pegram each collected three service points.

"They gave us a good fight," Whalen said. "We could have pulled out the second game, but we wanted to give our seniors some extra playing time. We went back to our regular starters in game three, but Seminole still played a great match. That is the best I have ever seen them play."

Game two would later feature ties of 14-14 and 15-15 while the teams traded side-outs eight times. Lake Mary had match point at 15-14 after a service point by Larsen, but Campbell and Brent Bradshaw then combined to score three service points as Seminole evened the match.

"We played really well tonight," said Seminole coach Beth Corso. "We let the scoreboard put pressure on us in the third game, but this is the best match I have seen us play this season. Our team had an outstanding performance."

Sewell, Dilmore and Larsen served the Rams to a 6-1 lead in game three that would never be seriously challenged. Bradshaw cut the margin to 9-4 for Seminole before Lake Mary took six of the next seven service points scored in the match to close out the action. Jeremy Dilmore had four service points and two aces for Lake Mary, while Hornreich and Messier each had a service point.

Pegram had 14 kills, 10 blocks, and five service points for Seminole, while Louwama had 13 kills, eight blocks, seven service points and three dinks. Bradshaw and Campbell had seven service points for the Tribe, while Junto had five, Tori Carl had four and Ho had one. The Rams finished the regular season at 18-1 overall, while the Tribe came in at 11-6 on the season and 5-5 in the SAC. Both teams will play twice Thursday in the first round of Volleyfest '95 at Lake Mary.

Seminole's Greg Pegram (left) goes high to block a kill attempt by Lake Mary's Jason Hawkins Thursday night. But the Rams would prevail in the end in an excellent three-game match.

"We were trying to have a little fun out there because it was senior night," Harry said. "We got a little too relaxed in the second game, but this was a good win for us."

Camardese, Debbie Duber and Stephanie Dale put the Rams out in 7-2 very quickly in game two by combining on seven service points. Bishop Moore cut the lead to 9-8, but Manz, Duber and Dale pushed Lake Mary's advantage back to 13-9. The Hornets cut the lead to 13-12 with three straight service points before Camardese closed out the match with two service points.

Bishop Moore won the junior varsity match 15-13, 16-14 over Lake Mary to start a busy night at the Lake Mary gym.

Will diet improve diverticulosis?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with diverticulosis and was not given any instructions about diet. My doctor suggested I take Metamucil -- forever. Is this disease the same as diverticulitis?

DEAR READER: As people age, they usually develop small pockets that bulge out from the intestinal wall. Known as "diverticulosis," this condition is harmless and causes no symptoms.

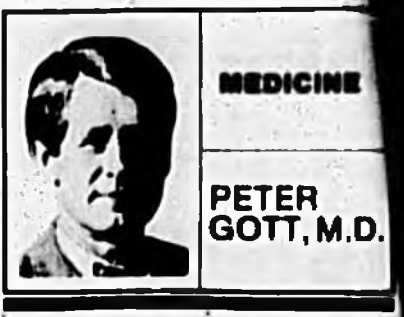

However, on occasion, these pockets can become infected, leading to severe abdominal pain and, often, intestinal bleeding. This affliction is called "diverticulitis" and it requires treatment with antibiotics. Severe cases may need surgery, especially if bleeding is present. The diagnosis is made by special X-rays or a test called colonoscopy, during which a gastroenterologist examines the intestinal lining with a fiberoptic instrument.

There is no consistently recommended diet for either condition. Many physicians suggest the use of added fiber, such as Metamucil, to aid evacuation -- and, thus, prevent diverticulitis. However, there is no proof that it works. I suggest that you follow your doctor's advice; the Metamucil will certainly not harm you -- and it may help.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After each meal, I experience sharp pains in my left shoulder. I've had X-rays, blood tests and a cardiogram that were normal. My doctor doesn't believe this is a serious problem but it bothers me.

DEAR READER: Upper intestinal disorders, such as peptic ulcer, can cause pain in the shoulder. "Referred pain" is the term doctors use to describe pain that is perceived in a location somewhat removed from the source of the problem. As another example, gallbladder disease often causes referred pain to the right shoulder. In my opinion, you should see a gastroenterologist, who will probably perform endoscopy, a test during which the specialist examines your upper intestine. This procedure may reveal an unsuspected ulcer, hiatal hernia or other abnormality. Ask your

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Fish is supposed to be good for the brain. But maybe bridge is better, as it keeps the mind active. And once you reach an advanced age, you can use Dennis Wolfberg's line: "There's one advantage to being 102. There's no peer pressure."
However, there are peers who play bridge. Arguably the best, Lord Harold Lever, died last August. He played today's deal in the sixth match between the House of Commons and House of Lords in 1980.
If the bidding looks strange, there was an extenuating circumstance: the score. It was rubber bridge with North-South 60 on and East-West 90. So, Lever, South, responded one no-trump to try to end the auction. However, Mrs. (now Baroness) Oppenheim, West, wasn't going quietly. Hence her dangerous two-diamond overall.

West led the diamond five: three, jack, queen. A club to the 10 and jack was followed by the diamond eight; nine, 10, heart six. West switched to a subtle spade five. After winning with the king, East returned his last diamond.
Lever went up with his ace, successfully fished dummy's club queen and cashed the club ace, getting the bad news. He continued with the spade ace and spade jack, overtaken with his queen. Again, bad news, but West had no defense. Her hand had counted out, so Lever had an answer to any discard.
When West threw the diamond seven, Lever exited with his last diamond. West cashed the club king, but then had to lead away from the heart king. Eight tricks in and another rubber won.
Phillip Alder's book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available.

Helping kids cope with divorce

In the past years, the number of children affected by divorce has increased more rapidly than the number of divorces granted. Recent data reveals that one out of six children under 18 lives in a home with a divorced parent. Three out of five divorces involve children and divorces in which children are involved tend to involve more than one child.

In the past, the effects of divorce on children have been assumed to be largely negative. However, recent research suggests that contrary to much popular opinion, divorce itself does not necessarily have a negative impact upon a child's development. Whether a child's adjustment to divorce is negative or positive seems to depend more upon the way in which parents explain it to the child and the way in which they help the child cope with it.

The following principles and suggestions will help parents

CONSUMER FOCUS

cope with the task of telling children that their mother and father are no longer going to live with each other:

1. Before acknowledging that there has been a decision to separate, make certain the decision is firm. Many younger and even older children, clinging to the hope their parents will reconcile, indecisiveness on the part of the parents will only build up false hopes and increase the children's anguish.
2. When telling the children about the divorce, tell the truth. Children are very perceptive and can tell when they aren't being told the truth. Be honest with them about the divorce and they will be better able to cope with it. Use discretion.

3. Telling the truth does not mean every gruesome detail must be told. Discretion must be used in deciding what things will be shared with the children. Kids don't need to know every intimate detail of their parents' lives.

4. Avoid belittling the spouse. Divorce is a difficult enough time for a child without having to be faced with all the bad things of one or both parents. In most cases the child loves both parents, if faced with the loved ones telling about all the weaknesses and faults of the other, the child is faced with some very difficult emotional conflicts.

5. Let your child have his feelings about the divorce. He or she may shout and throw tantrums, but these reactions are normal. If the parent(s) deny them or belittle them, children are denied the opportunity to work through their feelings about the divorce.

6. Finally, try to give some ideas about what the immediate future will be. Where will they live? Where will they go to school? Will they see each parent? These and other questions run through the minds of children. Failure to provide as realistic-factual answers as possible will probably lead the children to fill in with their imagination the answers they see.

In telling the children about divorce it is important to remember the age and maturity level of the child(ren). You would't anymore tell a teenager, "Mommy and Daddy don't get along anymore," than you would tell a 5 year old that "Mother and Dad's lifestyles aren't compatible anymore." The way children are told about divorce will affect the way they respond to it.

Mom shocked at pills she found

Dear Mary: I'm in a shock and don't know how to react. Last weekend I put my daughter's clean underwear away because she was at work. When I opened her drawer, I found a package of birth control pills. I can't believe that my daughter, she has always been a good student and loving daughter, is having sex, but why else would she have the pills?

Part of me is afraid to confront her with what I found because I don't know what to say or how to deal with it. I think she senses something is wrong because things have been real tense between us this week. I've raised this girl right, and she knows that sex outside of marriage is a sin.

I don't know whether to confront her with this or to pretend I don't know. I'm confused and heartbroken. How should I handle it?

MOM
Dear Confused and Heartbroken: Since your daughter was at work, I'll assume she's at least 18 years old. Most adolescents are experimenting with different behaviours as they go through the dark night of adolescence, trying to define who they are. Unfortunately, experimentation with sexual activity, alcohol and other drugs is not uncommon during this period.

Since it appears that you have had a good relationship with her, I hope that you can maintain an open, honest and direct line of communication. If you can trust yourself not to "lose it," I suggest that you tell her what can happen, let her know that she has taken the necessary steps to prevent pregnancy. Be very careful about taking a disciplinary stand that you cannot maintain.

If you tell her she can't date, you are inviting trouble such as sneaking out or running away. Reaffirm with her your convictions about sex outside of marriage and that you want her to share that conviction for her own safety and emotional health.

If you fear your reactions when talking to her about this subject, seek the support of someone you trust, either in your church, your family or a paid professional.

Wife fails to see humor in widow's calls to husband

DEAR ABBY: About six months ago, my husband received a telephone call from a recently widowed woman. It seems they had a brief affair 30 years ago when he was 20 years old and living in another state.

I was present when he received this call. We both thought it was funny and laughed about it.

Well, last night, he received a second call from this woman, and again he carried on a friendly conversation with her. (She started out by asking if I was home.)

I no longer think that this is funny. I think my husband should have stressed that he was a married man, and advised her to get on with her life.

Abby, I was widowed five years ago and I went through much pain and loneliness, but never did I call a married man in an effort to resume an old relationship. Never!

I expect there will be future calls from this woman, and I am hurt my husband didn't nip this in the bud. It is probably just an ego trip for him, but I feel a little less trust in him now than I did before. If the situation were reversed and I was getting the calls, I doubt if he would approve. Am I wrong to feel hurt?

DISILLUSIONED
DEAR DISILLUSIONED: No. Obviously, you feel more than just "hurt". You feel threatened--perhaps without cause. Let your husband know that the phone calls concern you, and ask that he discourage this woman from phoning again. If she refuses, you have reason to be upset.

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Loves to Move" caught my eye because I could have written it. Her words are a carbon copy of my feelings.

Since I was 12 years old, I've found an unnatural delight in changing residences. At the time, my father's job required many moves--sometimes to another state. I considered each move a challenge.

After I married, my moving slowed down, because my husband didn't go along with my "gypsy" inclinations. Twenty-one years later, I divorced my husband and moved three times a year for the next six years.

Then, I married a man who was just like me, and during our 24-year marriage, we moved approximately 60 times.

Two years ago, I was left a widow. Abby, I am almost 75 years old, and I'm still moving.

I wanted to write this letter to show "Loves to Move" that there is someone else like her.

I would have written sooner, but I was in the middle of moving. You may use my name.

SIGNE CAGLE IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR SIGNE CAGLE: I've heard from many readers who have written to say they hate to move, but you are the one of the few to say you love to move.

When I telephoned you to ask permission to use your name, you assured me that everything you wrote is true. Thank you for an unbelievable--but authentic--letter.

DEAR ABBY: Over the years, you have done many columns on the conduct of guests. I think my mother summed it up best when she said, "Guests can do anything and act any way they please in my home, but I decided who is invited back."

I've been reading your column and your sister's forever. You should both be on the bench.

BERNARD RUDD, JUDGE, SUPERIOR COURT OF NEW JERSEY

DEAR JUDGE RUDD: Thank you. But Ruth Bader Ginsberg already has "our" seal.
