Price of presents in '12 Days of Christmas' declines

PHILADELPHIA — Treating your true love to all the gifts in "The 12 Days of Christmas" won't cost as much this year — but it's still enough to make Santa blush.

The annual tongue-in-cheek survey found that the prices of pear trees, swans and gold rings dropped compared with last year, while the costs of maids-a-milking, geese-a-lying and other presents in the song held steady.

Buying all the gifts, from the 12 drummers drumming to the partridge in a pear tree, would cost $12,481.65 — a 21.3 percent decline from last year's prices, according to PNC Bank's annual Christmas Price Index, released Monday.

But the Pittsburgh-based bank calculates the "true cost of Christmas" by adding all the gifts given each day — 364 presents, including 12 partridges in pear trees, 36 calling birds and 24 turtle doves. They come to $51,764.94 — a 29.4 percent decline compared with last year, the bank said.

The drop was the first since 1988, when the index fell 0.8 percent.

PNC started publicizing the index in 1984. Before that, it was an in-house newsletter intended for fun, "and to prove that occasionally us economists do have a sense of humor," PNC economist Rebekah Fickling said.

Greater supply caused the seven swans to go from $7,000 to $3,600. The Philadelphia Zoo, which supplied figures for all the birds in the song, said the population of the endangered North American trumpeter swan has risen from 73 to more than 14,000 in the past 60 years, thanks to the efforts of breeders.

Five gold rings dropped from $450 last year to $325 for Christmas 1995, while the price of a pear tree went from $19.99 to $12.50 because of a sale at the nursery that supplies PNC with the cost.

Only the price of lords-a-leaping rose, from $3,012.83 to $3,182.57.

Because the minimum wage remained at $4.25, one hour of eight-maids-a-milking still was $34 (cows apparently not included).

Costs for pipers piping and drummers drumming came from Musicians Union Local 77, nine ladies dancing from a local dance company and 10 lords-a-leaping from a ballet company, Fickling said.

Prices may vary in different parts of the country, said Fickling, "and it doesn't take into account if your true love lived far away."

Shipping and handling isn't mentioned in the traditional Christmas carol.

The Sanford Police Department won't be moving to the old First Federal building downtown after a study concluded the move wouldn't be cost effective.

Bank building nixed as cop headquarters

SANFORD — The Sanford Police Department will continue to shop for a new place to set up housekeeping. And that suits Chief Ralph Russell just fine.

The department's 111 employees, including 89 sworn officers, are crowded into their current facility at 815 S. French Ave., but Russell believes the city's proposed move to the First Federal Bank of Seminole building on First Street would be less than cost-effective in the long run.

Russell's reaction was bolstered at last evening's city commission meeting by a study done by architect Keith Reeves of the ISK Reeves firm.

The report concluded the First Federal building, while having adequate space to accommodate the SANFORD — The Seminole County school district has made it a point to try to teach strong values to the students who come to them.

"We want to make sure these young people come away from school with the values that they need to make good choices in their lives," said Edie Valentine of the district's prevention office. "We want our students to be good citizens of this community."

Each month, students from kindergarten through 12th grade are given a "Value of the Month" to ponder and to talk about in class. The values relate to various aspects of the students' lives.

Teachers and administrators are encouraged to talk about the values with the students and help

Deadly sex Criminal transmission of HIV virus added to prostitution charge

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — A Casselberry woman may be the first person in Seminole County to be charged with criminal transmission of the HIV virus.

The 32-year-old woman was arrested last Tuesday evening for assignment to commit prostitution by Seminole County sheriff's deputies. She later told deputies that she was HIV positive.

Deputies said she got into a car with an undercover CCIB agent outside a Fern Park night club and offered to perform sexual favors in exchange for $20. She told the agent he did not have to use any sort of protection such as a condom.

She was arrested on the prostitution charges and while she was being driven to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility, she told the agent that she was HIV positive.

"Even if there is no sex act," Ed McDonough, public information officer for the sheriff's office, said, "the charge of criminal transmission is

The kids' store, but so much more

LAKE MARY — They've learned a great deal about business, but the more important lesson is that of compassion.

The students in the YMCA after-school program at Lake Mary Elementary School operate a small convenience store in the school's cafeteria. They sell candy, chips and juices that little people crave in the hours between the last class and the time that their parents arrive to take them home.

The store has been a learning experience for more than a dozen youngsters involved in the program.

Releasing records

TALLHASSEE - Gov. Lawton Chiles said he will ask a Washington company to release records about misleading phone calls the firm was paid to make for the governor's campaign.

But the governor, in a letter to the Republican senator investigating the calls, said he had no power to compel National Telecommunications Services Inc. to turn over anything.

Company head Mac Hansbrough would not comment Monday on his decision to ignore a subpoena from the Senate Executive Business, Ethics and Elections Committee. He referred all queries to the Chiles campaign.

The campaign said it paid $570,000 to the company to make 1.1 million calls last year, including an estimated 70,000 calls to older voters where callers did not identify themselves as representing the governor's campaign.

Senate ethics committee Chairman Charlie Crist, R-St. Petersburg, will convene hearings on the phone calls Dec. 5.

Lighthouse gets its glow back

MIAMI - Miami's oldest structure, the 170-year-old Cape Florida Lighthouse in Key Biscayne, is getting its glow back.

The re-lighting of the darkened landmark is scheduled for July 27, eve of the Miami Centennial.

"Philadelphia has the Liberty Bell, San Francisco has the Golden Gate Bridge, New York has the Statue of Liberty. Now, Miami will have this lighthouse," said Maggi Cook, director of Dade Heritage Trust, which is supporting the $1.5 million restoration.

The lighthouse, first built in 1825, is now surrounded by a nine-story ring of scaffolding to enable teams of brick masons to repair, restore and replace its intricate facade.

Haitians sent home

MIAMI - The Coast Guard has sent home 581 Haitians, the newest refugees in a recent exodus that now tops 1,000 a week.

That is more than half the 1,989 Haitians intercepted in all of 1989 who had hoped to reach U.S. shores.

Guy Victor, director of the Haitian Refugee Center here, said Monday impending elections in Haiti may be the reason for the recent increase. He attributed the influx to smuggling operations.

"Whenever there is an election in Haiti, people are always talking about violence," he said. "Because (smugglers) know some group is going to disrupt the process, this is the time to organize."

The most recent group was intercepted Sunday aboard a rocky 75-foot boat, about 170 miles southeast of Miami. The vessel was first spotted Saturday off Andros Island, Bahamas.

One man, suffering from severe dehydration, died onboard the Coast Guard cutter.

Officer died in off-duty accident

CRESTVIEW, Fla. - An Air Force officer stationed at Hurlburt Field died in an off-duty skydiving accident when his main and reserve parachutes both failed.

Major Monte Earl Kirkpatrick, 40, died Saturday during a jump from 13,500 feet near Bob Sikes Airport in this Florida Panhandle city where he lived, the Okaloosa County Sheriff's Department reported.

He was one of two people killed in Florida skydiving accidents over the weekend. Gregory K. Jordan, 37, died Sunday when his parachute also apparently failed to open near the Umatilla airport in Lake County.

Kirkpatrick followed proper procedure by releasing his main chute when a control line crossed over the top of the canopy, but his reserve chute then also failed, said Scott Hallock, a friend and fellow skydiver from Shalimar.

Service fees hinder emigration

WASHINGTON - Hundreds of Cubans who have received U.S. immigrant visas have been unable to emigrate because the service fees charged by the Cuban government are excessive, the State Department asserted.

"We believe these fees should be reduced," spokesman Nicholas Burns said Monday.

He commented on U.S. and Cuban officials opened two days of talks on migration issues in New York.

Before departing for the United States, each Cuban migrant is required to pay a combined total of $750 for a medical exam, a passport and an exit visa. With a minimum of 30,000 Cubans guaranteed U.S. residence visas annually under an agreement reached last year, Cuba makes about $15 million in hard currency from these transactions.

Cuba says the services provided are expensive, and the fees are down 15 percent from their previous level.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Overseeing public-private groups

By ADAM YEMANS Associated Press Writer

TALLHASSEE - Public-private partnerships for economic development, the film industry and other state economic efforts need more scrutiny to ensure they're doing their jobs, an audit concludes.

Gov. Lawton Chiles has touted his efforts to link government and business resources into quasi-public organizations headed by business executives instead of bureaucrats.

But Florida's auditor general said the state needed greater oversight of the quasi-public organizations, some of which have received millions of dollars in public money.

In an audit this month, Auditor General Charles Lester recommended a variety of changes for how the Department of Commerce oversees the budgets and performance of a handful of the public-private groups created under the Chiles administration.

The organizations include Enterprise Florida, which handles economic development strategies; the Florida Entertainment Commission, promoter of the film business; and the Florida Sports Foundation, which promotes athletics.

"The Legislature and state agency officials retain a stewardship responsibility to ensure that the privatized program, activity, or function is implemented, and continues to operate, in a manner which is in the best interest of the state," the audit said.

Commerce Secretary Charles Dusseau, in a written response to the report, disputed many of the audit's suggestions. He said the auditor general and commerce department have "a fundamentally different philosophy" of how the state should monitor the organizations.

Dusseau said the state wasn't supposed to "micro-manage" the public-private operations.

"The department is getting out of the business of promoting economic development through traditional government mechanisms to better take advantage of the private sector expertise," he said. "The least desirable outcome would be for us to recreate a rule-bound bureaucracy when our goal is the exact opposite."

The auditor general's report was the latest critical salvo at Chiles' pet economic development programs.

Earlier reviews by the governor's inspector general, Harold Lewis, and Comptroller Bob Milligan criticized the entertainment commission for lax administrative and management practices.

Chiles has said he hoped the criticism would not hamper his efforts to expand Enterprise Florida, created in 1982 and run by a group of business executives.

The governor wants to give all of the commerce department's economic development duties to the public-private organization. Lawmakers, skeptical that the organization would do a better job than the state, blocked the move this year.

Lester said the commerce department had designed adequate "oversight controls" for tracking contracts between the state and the public-private groups, but that the measures hadn't been fully implemented.

Dusseau said more regulations weren't needed. Instead, he said, the commerce department would try to educate the people who run the public-private organizations.

"It is clear that some start-up problems have occurred which may have been prevented if these boards of directors had better understood the legal environment in which state government operates," Dusseau said.

Enterprise Florida has received $11.4 million in state money over the past two years. The entertainment commission has received $350,000 in public money.

The sports foundation received no tax dollars this year. It received $700,000, the bulk of its funding, from the sales of license plates with professional sports team logos.

Recommendation: Streamline Cabinet system

By The Associated Press

TALLHASSEE - Critics of Florida's unique governor-and-Cabinet system say there hasn't been much change from the days when a debate over a mule purchase lasted an hour.

Six decades later, the state's top leaders still spend several hours every two weeks discussing technical changes to rules, resolving minor disputes among agencies and deciding whether landowners can build 20-foot docks.

Since the Cabinet has a combined salary of about $700,000, some say there are better ways for the state's top elected officials to spend their time.

Others fear Florida could lose a unique example of truly democratic government. Cabinet meetings have been compared to old-fashioned town meetings where citizens can voice their opinions on nearly anything.

A commission appointed to study Cabinet reform is preparing to recommend sweeping changes that would greatly strengthen the power of the governor, abolish one state agency and expand the duties of the secretary of state and commissioner of education.

The proposed changes, to be presented to Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet at their Dec. 12 meeting, require legislative approval and likely will face opposition.

The commission will suggest placing four agencies that now answer to the governor and Cabinet - the Departments of Revenue, Law Enforcement and Veterans Affairs and the Florida Highway Patrol - under the sole control of the governor.

The Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles would be abolished and its duties, including issuing driver's licenses and vehicle registrations, transferred to the secretary of state, which handles those chores in most other states.

About a third of the 200 laws detailing administrative duties now assigned to the governor and Cabinet would be given solely to the education commissioner. Decisions over broader policy issues would be left unchanged.

"We felt the governor and Cabinet ought to spend their time on the policies and not on administrative, clerical duties," said former Gov. Bob Martinez, a member of the Cabinet reform commission.

"It allows the governor and Cabinet to be more active directly with the broad issues that come before them," Martinez said.

The Cabinet includes the secretary of state, attorney general, comptroller, treasurer, agriculture commissioner and education commissioner, all of whom are elected statewide and serve independent of the governor.

Florida's 100-year-old system was designed after the Civil War as a way to limit the power of the state's governor, although it has gradually changed through each new state constitution and volumes of legislative changes.

Prior attempts to change the Cabinet system, one as recently as 1991, have met defeat because of fears that too much power would be given to the governor. Agency heads also historically have opposed changes that would wipe out their departments.

Although the proposed changes would limit the scope of the Cabinet's duties, the reform commission felt strongly that issues of statewide concern - primarily the environment - remain under the Cabinet.

Atkins loses death row appeal

By JACKIE MALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A state judge has rejected an appeal from a killer scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair Wednesday for the 1981 murder of a 6-year-old Lakeland boy.

The next step for Phillip Atkins, 40, is the state Supreme Court.

In Bartow, Circuit Judge E. Randolph Bentley rejected the appeal from the bench Monday but had not yet issued a written appeal, said Michael Minerva, head of the state office that handles legal appeals for death row inmates.

Gov. Lawton Chiles signed Atkins' second death warrant in mid-October. Atkins' execution is scheduled for 7 a.m. Wednesday.

Atkins was condemned for the kidnapping and murder of Antonio Castillo in September 1981.

Atkins, then 26, picked up

Antonio in their neighborhood, drove him to a wooded area and molested him. When the little boy later threatened to tell his parents about the incident, Atkins beat him to death with a steel pipe and his fists.

Atkins had a history of homosexual activity with children. His parents first noticed his deviant behavior at age 15 and tried to get help for him.

Atkins survived his first death warrant when a federal judge granted him a stay less than 24 hours before he was scheduled to go to the chair in April 1989.

Meanwhile, a circuit court judge in Orlando denied the appeal of another death row inmate scheduled for execution Friday.

Jerry White, 47, is condemned for the murder of James Melson during a grocery store robbery in March 1981 in Orange County. White has survived two previous death warrants.

Orange Circuit Judge Bob Evans on Monday refused to delay his execution or to hear further evidence that he didn't get a fair trial. The judge said he did not believe the outcome would be different with the new evidence.

White was 32 when he entered a grocery store in Taft where he shot Melson, a customer, in the back of the head. Store owner Alexander H. Alexander also was shot and paralyzed.

Another customer, Henry Tehani, entered the store with his daughter but refused White's order to enter the freezer with the other two victims. White's gun misfired, and Tehani fled and called police.

White had a long criminal record, including armed robbery and aggravated assault, when he shot a man in the head in a fight over a woman.

Photographer pleads innocent in slaying

By ANNE SHOGAN
Associated Press Writer

TORRANCE, Calif. — Police are reportedly trying to find women who were photographed in chilling deathlike poses by a man who pleaded innocent in the slaying of a model.

Bail was set Monday at $1 million for Charles Rathbun, charged with murdering Linda Sobek, a former Los Angeles Raiders cheerleader.

Deputy District Attorney Stephen R. Kay, who co-prosecuted Charles Manson, will handle the case. He said he would decide later whether to seek the death penalty.

There are no signs of blood or weapons in the dozens of photographs discovered at Rathbun's home, but police are trying to contact the women to find out if they are all right, the Daily Breeze of Torrance reported. The photos clearly portrayed death, a source told the newspaper.

Homicide investigator Mary Bice said Monday that she was unaware of the photographs and that police didn't believe the free-lance photographer was a serial killer.

Rathbun, 38, was arrested Wednesday after trying to shoot himself at his home. He attempted suicide again in jail, slashing his wrists. On Friday, he led investigators to Sobek's body, buried in a shallow grave in the rugged, remote Angeles National Forest.

He said she died accidentally when he struck her with a sport utility vehicle while trying to show her how to do "doughnuts," a series of tight spins. Rathbun specialized in car magazine and calendar photos.

But an attorney for the Sobek family said he had heard indirectly from the Sheriff's Department that the 27-year-old model died from asphyxiation.

"I don't know how the asphyxiation was accomplished," Wayne Willett said.

Without elaborating, Willett said that at least three models, all friends of Sobek's, told him of having bad experiences with Rathbun.

Coroner's office officials discounted Rathbun's claim that Sobek was struck by a vehicle, and said full autopsy results would take two weeks.

Preliminary results showed "the injuries are not consistent with an automobile-type accident," coroner's spokesman Scott Carrier said. There also were no signs she had been shot, stabbed, sexually assaulted or sustained massive head injuries.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department is also investigating whether the Sobek killing is tied to the 1992 death of another model whose body was dumped in the Angeles National Forest, the source told the Daily Breeze.

Investigators who seized a computer at Rathbun's home were examining files for information about the disappearance of Kimberly Pandelios, the newspaper said.

Rathbun has relatives in Ohio, Michigan and other states, and detectives were checking to see if there were any unsolved killings in those areas, as well as locations he may have visited as a photographer, the newspaper said.

"We may be looking at a serial killer," the paper quoted the source as saying.

But Bice disagreed. "We are not operating under any assumption of a mass murderer or serial killer," she said.

Start thinking before drinking

It was sad to see the number of accidents and arrests over the Thanksgiving four-day weekend caused by driving under the influence of alcohol (DUI). No doubt, many families were devastated because one person couldn't control his or her use of alcohol.

Just as during any holiday season, an accidental death will carry one through the years to come, and what should be special events in future years will always be the anniversary of tragedy.

Perhaps with the four days off work many people take for Thanksgiving weekend, there are more DUI cases than normal. July 4th and several other holidays have become just as hazardous on our streets and highways.

Only one holiday, New Year's Eve, has seen a reduction in DUI arrests in recent years. We suspect it's because law enforcement is out in full strength that night, to prevent any disasters and to protect other motorists and pedestrians from possible danger.

Don't let the traditional New Year's Eve drinking binge make them appear as though they are the worst. Unfortunately, as statistics have proven, there were many DUI motorists on the roads this past weekend. They probably didn't expect there would be as many officers out on patrol as there were.

For most everyone, any type of drinking to excess is unhealthy. It also produces a hangover, which is never easy to handle the morning after, especially if one must go back to work.

But drinking then driving is even worse. In these cases, even a few drinks are dangerous. While a person may believe he or she is capable of walking straight or handling a vehicle at 85 miles per hour, there is always a problem in making snap decisions.

Suppose someone else who has had a few more belts comes careening down Interstate-4 at high speed. You may have to swerve to avoid a collision. With a few drinks however, you may not have immediate control you need, even though you may believe you do.

The Sanford Herald normally lists names of persons arrested on charges of driving under the influence. There are usually a few reported each day in the northern area of Seminole County.

Over the holidays however, the number often climbs way beyond the norm. The result can be death, injury, or vehicular damage. No one wants that.

Keep in mind, the term "DUI" used by law enforcement these days has changed. The charge used to be "driving under the influence of alcohol." Now, it could be influence of alcohol or drugs. Arrests are made regularly on both charges.

Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's Eve, or other major holidays are supposed to be happy times for individuals and families.

Yet no matter how many law enforcement officers are out patrolling the roads on our holidays, the only way we'll ever see a reduction in the future is if people start thinking before they start drinking.

A few drinks or a few puffs may be fun for a moment, but they could produce years of sorrow for others. Is that what we want?

Look at it from Gingrich's standpoint

WASHINGTON—Look at it from House Speaker William Gingrich's standpoint. His Contract With America not only helped to restore GOP control of the Congress but did so by electing a freshman class of young Republicans committed to downsizing the federal government and bringing the budget into fiscal balance. Why shouldn't he have threatened to "shut down the government for a month" if that's what it took to force President Clinton to give up his resistance to the Republican budget proposals. After all, the Republicans had a mandate to carry out their pledge.

But did they? Robert Theobald says they had no such thing. What looked like an historic Republican victory—the basis of the "mandate"—was more accurately a Democratic loss. Is the New Orleans-based futurist spitting semantic hairs? He doesn't think so.

"It is only as one looks beyond America's borders that one can see the distinction. Incumbent governments throughout the world are profoundly unpopular. Indeed, the dominant party in Canada was essentially wiped out in their last election.

"Throughout the world, citizens feel that the policies of the party in power are failing. It does not matter whether they are left or right."

Theobald is not the first observer to note that the 1994 GOP electoral victory was less than a mandate. The Washington Post's E.J. Dionne, for example, recently pointed out that the victory amounted to 52 percent of the vote in House elections for which only 39 percent of the electorate turned out. Not quite revolutionary, that.

But Theobald's point has less to do with the size of the vote than what he sees as its essential message: The incumbents are missing the point.

"There is a broad and deep sense that nobody speaks for the average citizen who wants real issues addressed and less time spent on ideological fads," he told me the other day. "This is the real reason Gen. Colin Powell spoke so clearly to so many people: he was not willing to pander to the extremist positions which dominate the airwaves and the press."

There are two points in that—and it's far from clear what can be done about either of them. The recent commented upon point is the recent tendency of office-seekers to drive the issues to extremes—to draw sharper distinctions than the voters feel on issues ranging from welfare to abortion to the size of government. As the response to Powell's almost-candidacy showed, most voters flop around in the middle, moving to one extreme or another only when politicians cut out the middle ground.

The other point is that there are "real issues" that are going unaddressed. Are there?

Theobald's answer, no doubt influenced by his own ideological leanings, is a ringing "Yes."

"At least a quarter of American adults are ready for forward-looking change," he says. "They are aware that the patterns of the industrial age must change dramatically if a high quality of life is to be achieved. There is an acceptance of the ecological realities which require the end of our commitment to maximum economic growth and maximum employment. People are willing to pay for higher environmental standards with money, so long as the burden is fairly shared. They are also willing to earn less income as the cost of purchasing more leisure."

Is the New Orleans-based futurist spitting semantic hairs? He doesn't think so.

Poles allow Walesa time to go fishing

WASHINGTON — Polish President Lech Walesa may find a silver lining in his stunning electoral defeat last week. In a 1991 interview with us, Walesa lamented the simple pleasures in life he would not be able to enjoy until he was defeated.

"I like everything I don't have and which I cannot do," he said. "For instance, today the weather is so nice I would like to go fishing. Maybe I would like to go with you and have some fun. But ... I don't have the time or the freedom ... Which means that I've got to like what I have (as President)."

In a foreshadowing of his fate, Walesa continued: "I must do it in the best way I can, and wait for the best results -- wait until they kick me out because it was done well, or because it was done poorly."

He added with a chuckle, "They will probably judge it as bad."

It took a strong man to singlehandedly stand up to the former Soviet Communist empire and the puppet regime in Poland. But when those same unyielding qualities were applied as president of a newly democratic country, it made Walesa into an autocrat who was often unwilling to listen to others. The hero could not convince the Polish people he had the right vision to navigate the country toward a democratic future.

We have interviewed Walesa several times since he scrambled over a wall at the Lenin Shipyard in 1980 to lead strikers in the movement that began the destruction of the Iron Curtain. As a result, we've had the chance to see Walesa's evolution up close and personal.

The happiest we ever saw him was during a 1990 visit to Odanak, when he was banking in new-found Polish freedom and not yet arriving in a national leadership post. His 1990 visit to the United States -- when he became the first non-head of state to address a joint session of Congress since Marquis de Lafayette in 1824 -- was still a rosy memory. The one-time unemployed electrician had been interrupted 25 times by congressional applause.

Walesa wore a tie for the 1990 interview, but under the table he was wearing bedroom slippers. He was also full of jokes. He said there was an up-side to the bad old Communist days: It was good for his marriage because wife Danusia refused to argue with him in public. "Many people didn't like their flat being bugged," he explained, "but I liked it because my wife knew it was bugged and she didn't quarrel with me."

Walesa's mood was much more morose a year later, when our associate Dale Van Atta visited him just a few months into his presidency. Walesa was struggling with the messiness of democracy. At one point there were 70 registered political parties, with 74 more waiting for registration. Some were dubbed "couch parties" because all of their members fit on one sofa.

"This is the tragedy of the new system," Walesa said. "There are so many people who are not able to choose between these parties. Poles are overcome with choices."

As time went on, Walesa became increasingly frustrated with the legislative branch, which opposed him at every turn. He didn't keep his temper well. And he developed a mercurial tendency to make overnight shifts on issues. The joke among Poles was that Walesa stated his opinion thus: "I am for it. I am totally for it. In fact, I am against it."

Walesa was learning about democracy, but just not fast enough.

Polish President Lech Walesa may find a silver lining in his stunning electoral defeat last week.

DAVID S. BRODER

Quayle sitting out campaign

WASHINGTON—For the first time in 20 years, Dan Quayle is sitting out a political campaign, but he still plays the presidential election game in his head. He is worrying about two dates—his Dec. 15 and next Labor Day weekend—and what they may do to Republican chances of regaining the White House.

The first date, he pointed out in an interview last week, is both the filing deadline for the New Hampshire primary and the final date for negotiating a deal between the White House and Congress on a seven-year balanced budget. The second date is the time tentatively chosen by Ross Perot for his new independence Party to pick its 1996 nominee.

To Quayle, those dates spell a double whammy for the GOP and the man he considers its likely but not certain nominee, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Three weeks before the New Hampshire filings close, no one has stepped forward to challenge President Clinton. That frees Clinton to sign onto a modified version of the Republican balanced budget, thus taking the issue of taxes and spending out of partisan conflict in the 1996 campaign.

Quayle, who saw how divisive and energy-consuming it was to quell conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan's challenge to President Bush in 1993, marvels that Clinton has sidestepped such a threat. Even President Nixon was tested by two House Republican backbenchers in 1972, after a first term that was less divisive (at least within the GOP) than Clinton's first three years.

Why are no liberals challenging Clinton? Quayle asks in genuine wonderment. The answer probably says more about the weakness of the left and the scarcity of alternative leaders than about Clinton's strength. But the rewards for the president are enormous.

As Quayle says, the Republican nomination battle, however brief it may be, will inflict wounds on the winner. Meanwhile, Quayle points out, an unchallenged Clinton can use the $26 million of contributions he's raised and the federal matching money to build his advantage by targeting advertising in the battleground states of California and the Midwest.

Barring some domestic or foreign blunder on Clinton's part, Quayle says that means that Republicans "will be down in the polls going into San Diego," when the Republican convention opens on Aug. 12, just as they were at convention time in 1992—a hole they never escaped.

And three weeks after San Diego—in another echo of 1992—Perot will, Quayle believes, launch another presidential bid of his own. "I assume we get Perot again," Quayle said, "and that is bad news."

That assumption and that judgment were near-universal at the last big GOP gathering of the year, last week's meeting of the Republican Governors Association in Nashua, N.H., where Quayle was interviewed.

Perot insisted on last week's "Meet the Press" that his expensive effort to get ballot position for his Independence Party is not a sign he wants to run again himself. But those protestations are simply not believed by worried Republicans. If Perot really wanted to recruit another candidate, they say, he would arrange to nominate one earlier—and with a clearer system than the vague process Perot has described of collecting signatures from 10 percent of the party members and then competing in some sort of satellite-linked set of local convention halls.

Former Gov. John H. (Jock) McKernan of Maine, the state where Perot was drumming up ballot-access signatures earlier this month, said he was "very concerned" that the maverick businessman will be free "to spend $25 million of his own money on his campaign." Maine was Perot's best state in 1993 and even if he falls well short of the 30 percent he won then, he could help Clinton carry it again, McKernan said.

That view was widely shared among the governors, who are Dole's main bulwark for the nomination and the Republicans' best hope of winning the election. As Dole said in his talk to the Nashua meeting, Republicans now govern in 31 states with 379 electoral votes—109 more than needed to reelect the presidency. "All you have to do," he said, "is deliver your states."

But coast to coast, the governors' Perot presence would make that task much harder. And they think he will run. "I can't see him sitting it out," said Gov. Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin, which Clinton carried last time with a boost from Perot. "He has had a huge ego."

"Perot would hurt us in Illinois," another Clinton state sure to be targeted by the Republicans, said Gov. Jim Edgar.

Quayle is far from alone in his sober assessment of the difficulty in beating Clinton.

He still plays the presidential election game in his head.

ownership of the facility. According to Reeves' report, which was hastily prepared in five working days, it would cost more to renovate the building for use as a police station than it would to either renovate and expand the current facility or to build a new building from the ground up.

Reeves said it would cost about $4.5 million to build a new facility. That amount would include $4,050,000 to build (at an average of $120 per square foot) the 33,750 square foot facility the department needs to accommodate their current force plus $486,000 in professional fees.

He said to renovate and expand the current building would cost approximately $3,492,258. That cost would include about $2.4 million to expand the current 13,569 square foot building to meet current needs and $339,225 to renovate the existing space.

Additional money would be needed to acquire adjacent property to use for parking. To lease and renovate the First Federal of Seminole property would be far costlier, Reeves said.

Leasing the facility would cost about $202,500 per year and renovating it for use as a police facility would cost about $354,300. That cost over the next decade would far exceed, he noted, the amount of either of the other options.

"I think it was a good report," Russell said. "I'm satisfied with the results." Russell and fire chief Tom Hixon will probably approach the city commission next with a proposal for a public safety facility that could accommodate all the needs of the city, he said. He did not give the details of what such a facility might include or where they might want to put it.

imparting marketable job skills and bringing math lessons to life. Recently, the children in the program decided that some of their profits, which had been previously reinvested in the business, could be more appropriately used to help out those in need during the holiday season.

"They wanted to buy food for people at Thanksgiving and, maybe, food and gifts for people during Christmas," explained Kelly Jiminez, one of the after school program coordinators.

"They wanted to do their part to help those in need."

The fourth and fifth graders who run the "Kids in Control" store, recently took $300 in profits and used the money to purchase grocery store gift certificates for needy families at Thanksgiving.

"They chose to do this themselves," Jiminez said. "This is something they really felt strongly about."

Jiminez said the youngsters have been learning about the realities of the world around them through a variety of projects, including the store.

Before they opened the store to other after school participants, the fourth and fifth graders filled out applications, went through the interview process and went to a training session before being hired to work in the store.

Each student was assigned to a job at the store ranging from operating the cash register to stocking the shelves to pricing and ordering the inventory.

To keep a job at Kids in Control, a youngster has to also keep up with his or her school work and homework and they must have good marks in the area of behavior in school.

Jiminez said the youngsters contacted local government agencies and church organizations to get a list of needy families in the community when they chose to donate to the community at Thanksgiving.

Four families were selected and each was given a $75 gift certificate to a local store.

Sue Pierce, with the Seminole-Brevard State Attorney's Office, said to the best of her knowledge this is the first case of criminal transmission of HIV that her office will prosecute.

The maximum penalty on the charge of criminal transmission is five years in jail.

The woman is still in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. She is being held in lieu of $4,000 bond.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Words of encouragement

WASHINGTON — As a skeptical GOP-led Congress gears up to examine details of the peace plan that would send U.S. troops into Bosnia, President Clinton has words of encouragement from the Republican he needs the most, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

"Whether Congress agrees or not, troops will go to Bosnia," Dole said on Monday, moments after Clinton addressed a wary nation. "We need to find some way to be able to support the president."

While stopping short of declaring outright support for sending 20,000 U.S. troops to serve in a NATO peacekeeping force in Bosnia, Dole made it clear which way he was leaning.

"I obviously want to support the president," said Dole, R-Kan., who is the front-runner for the GOP presidential nomination. However, many other congressional Republicans said they remained opposed to Clinton's plan.

Budget talks

WASHINGTON — Eleven months in the making, yet inevitable from the start, negotiations between the Clinton administration and Republican lawmakers over conflicting visions of how to balance the federal budget are ready to begin.

Both sides say talks are likely to begin this evening in the Capitol on how to eliminate deficits, the chief goal of Republicans who took over control of Congress in January. The two sides have agreed to seek a plan to balance the budget by 2002, but they disagree over how much to carve from Medicare and a host of other social programs, making eventual agreement far from certain.

McDonough said law enforcement personnel "arrest prostitutes all the time," but that the women don't admit to their HIV/AIDS status.

McDonough did not know why the woman admitted to deputies that she had the disease.

the youngsters understand what the value is. The December "Value of the Month" is generosity, which the district defines as "unselfishness demonstrated by caring, concern and caring."

Students will be encouraged to put together gift baskets for the needy and to discuss other ways they can help the community. Administrators, support staff, teachers, cafeteria workers, custodial staffs and transportation employees are being asked to show their generosity in a number of ways.

"We hope these acts of generosity and kindness will last all year long," Valentine said.

Kendra Sanders said she likes the "Values of the Month" at school but thinks that they are soon forgotten by her schoolmates.

"It's like the McDonald's sandwich of the month," she said. "Do you remember what last month's sandwich was?"

Benissa Field said she might not remember what last week's value was, but she thinks it's a good idea for students to learn some values at school. The concept is more important than remembering what was the name of the value, she said.

"I think some of us don't get this kind of training at home so it's good that the ideas are given to us at school," she noted.

Valentine said the values are those that cross all ethnic or religious boundaries. They are universal and were selected because they are those which help all students serve the community better.

Trains helps UCF win opener

ORLANDO — Howard Porter and Harry Kennedy each scored 21 points as Central Florida won its season opener, 101-74, over Palm Beach Atlantic Monday night. Brad Tice was 6-for-6 in a 13-point effort. Reid Ketteler had a career high 13 points. Eric Riggs added 11 and Sanford's Brad Trains scored eight points on 4-of-4 shooting and grabbed a team-high five rebounds.

Anderson leads Magic

ORLANDO — Nick Anderson scored 31 points and the Orlando Magic made four free throws in the final minute to hold off the Detroit Pistons 95-93 for their fifth consecutive victory. Joe West made a free throw for a 3-point lead with five seconds left. But the Pistons' Lindsey Hunter apparently thought his team trailed by only 2 and dribbled the length of the floor for an uncontested layup at the buzzer. Dennis Scott finished with 18 points and Arneferne Hardaway, the NBA's second-leading scorer, had 16 on 5-for-13 shooting from the field and 5-of-10 free throws. Anderson was 9-for-17, 7-for-11 from behind the 3-point arc. Allan Houston and Terry Mills each had 19 points for Detroit. Hunter finished with 18. Grant Hill added 13. Orlando improved the league's best record to 12-3, despite the absence of injured All-Star center Shaquille O'Neal. The Magic can equal a franchise record for victories in a month by beating Dallas at home on Thursday night.

Lightning set team record

ST. PETERSBURG — Daren Puppa made 45 saves and Shawn Burr had a goal and an assist as the Tampa Bay Lightning beat the Los Angeles Kings 3-0 for their fifth straight victory. Puppa registered his first shutout this season and helped Tampa Bay establish a franchise-high winning streak. Los Angeles dropped its fifth in a row, losing every game on its road trip.

FSU beats Howard

TALLAHASSEE — LaMarr Greer scored seven points in less than a minute to spark Florida State to a 28-point halftime lead and the Seminoles went on to beat Howard 97-81. James Collins scored 26 points to lead Florida State (1-0) in its season opener while Greer, a 6-5 sophomore point guard, added 18 points and a game-high nine assists. Seven of his 14 first-half points came in a 19-0 run. Kirk Luchman finished with 16 points and a game-high nine rebounds and freshman Randell Jackson and junior college transfer Kelvin McClendon added 10 points each for FSU.

Miami routs FAU

BOCA RATON — Steve Frasier led a balanced attack with 17 points as Miami defeated Florida Atlantic 76-56 Monday night. Frasier did most of his damage from the outside. He was 5-of-6 from 3-point range. Steve Edwards and Steve Rich each scored 12 points for Miami (2-0) and Alex Frasier added 10. Craig Buchanan and Rob Ritter each scored 14 points to lead Florida Atlantic (0-1).

Sailfest ahoy

More than 700 boats expected on Lake Monroe

By ANDY GIBBLIN
 Special to the Herald

SANFORD — Preparations for this weekend's 1995 Seminole County Sailfest, expected to draw more than 700 boats and up to 3,000 sailors from December 1-3, are in full swing. Fifteen sanctioned events ranging from State Championships to North American Championships are scheduled for the weekend.

Celebrity sailors, including ESPN sailing analyst and America's Cup navigator Peter Isler will participate in clinics, seminars and exhibitions throughout the event. Ed Baird, coach of New Zealand's 1995 America's Cup winner, is also scheduled to attend, along with 1992 Olympic medalists Kevin Burnham and Morgan Reeser, and America-3, the first all-women's team in America's Cup history.

Bob Roth, who is in his first year as the regatta's volunteer Executive Director, predicts a record attendance.

"Several classes are actively involved, hosting championships and special training clinics at this year's regatta. The Laser class, a class participating in the 1996 summer Olympics, expects more than 100 boats," Roth said. "With the new sanctioned events, including the Hobie and Vanguard classes, the 1995 Sailfest could be the largest regatta ever held in North America."

More than 50 classes of sailboats will share eight separate race courses. The event is open to all

Village Paints wins Co-Ed tournament title

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Village Paints erased the memories of a late-season slide to claim the championship of the mini-tournament of the Sanford Recreation Department Co-Ed Fall Slowpitch Softball League at Pinehurst Park.

Using a 27 hit attack that featured six extra base hits, Village Paints outscored surprising Uncle Nick's 23-13 to complete a two-game sweep and win the trophy.

The newest league in Sanford had the usual growing pains and started with several blowouts, but as more players were added to the teams the league started to improve and was very competitive by season's end, as shown in the tournament.

Uncle Nick's, which went 0-6 in the regular season, used a pair of three-run innings to take a 7-3 lead and held off a late game rush to eliminate the regular season champs, Half-N-Half (which was 7-1 and had a seven-game winning streak), 7-6. The Uncle Nick's defense came up big in the top of the seventh inning, throwing out the tying run at the plate to end the game.

Village Paints, which opened the season 4-1 but fell to 4-3 before winning its final regular season game, then dodged the upset bug as Brian Curtis ripped a bases loaded, two out triple in the bottom of the seventh inning to give Village Paints a 12-10 victory over Crazy Wings/Todd's Produce (4-4 in the regular season).

Uncle Nick's tried to carry the momentum from the upset over to the championship game, taking a 9-5 lead in the top of the second inning.

But Village Paints was not to be denied as it scored two runs in the second inning to cut the lead to 9-5, then started to pull away with six runs over each of the next two innings, eventually building a 20-9 advantage in the top of the sixth inning.

Raiders finally at home

SANFORD — The Seminole Community College men's basketball team had a rough Thanksgiving weekend as it dropped three games at Pensacola Community College. The Raiders lost to Kankakee (Ill.) Community College 91-74 on Thursday despite 27 points from John Mobley. Arnett Young had 13 rebounds for SCC in the loss.

In Friday's action, Mobley scored 24 points and Young grabbed 12 rebounds for SCC in a 98-86 loss to Pensacola. The Raiders lost an 80-78 heartbreaker to Delgado (New Orleans) Community College Saturday. Mobley had 19 points and Eric Washington had 13 rebounds for SCC, but Delgado scored the winning points with 3 seconds remaining in the game.

SCC, now 1-9 on the season, plays its first home game of the season at 8 p.m. today against Polk Community College. The women play at 6 p.m. against St. Petersburg.

Despite the rough start, SCC coach Bernard Merthic remains optimistic.

"The guys are coming together as a unit," Merthic said. "John Mobley is stepping up his game and adjusting to the point guard role. I feel the guys will continue to come together. We're tired of being on the road, and we're hoping for a big turnout tonight."

Rectal pain may be linked to operation

DEAR DR. GOTT: Many years ago, I had surgery for a rectal fissure. I am now 82 and for the past few years have suffered from persisting rectal pain at the site of the operation...

DEAR DR. GOTT: I went through an uneventful menopause at 52. Now, at 60, my doctor has put me on estrogen. I also take Synthroid and Xanax...

DEAR READER: I'm unclear why your physician chose to prescribe estrogen so many years after you finished menopause...

If so, you should be aware that hormone supplements may increase the risk of breast cancer. Therefore, I advise you to discuss this issue with your doctor...

My doctor says there is no infection. He's thrown up his hands and I don't know where to turn.

DEAR READER: Rectal fissures are cracks in the rectal lining, usually near the anal opening. If they don't heal on their own, they may require surgery.

However, as in your case, that may not be the end of the story. The affected area can become infected, leading to chronic pain and swelling...

From your brief description, I cannot tell whether you have an infection or painful scarring - or even, perhaps, a new fissure. A surgeon or gastroenterologist could solve this mystery by examining you and performing a test called anoscopy...

Ask your doctor for a referral or independently seek a consultation with either of the specialists I mentioned.

If you have an infection, treatment with antibiotics may solve your problem. In contrast, scar tissue would require either further surgery or a technique to stretch the shrunken rectal tissue.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Medical Specialists." Other readers who would like a copy should send $3 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158...

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am looking for a diet to cure endometriosis.

DEAR READER: I'm sorry to say you won't find one. Endometriosis is caused by collections of uterine tissue that are deposited, during fetal development, in various locations inside the abdomen.

When a woman begins menstruating, these "islands" of tissue bleed also, causing abdominal pain that can be severe. The condition is diagnosed by ultrasound and biopsy.

Medicine, such as birth control pills, that inhibit menstruation, often help the pain of endometriosis. Sometimes, surgery may be required to remove large areas of endometriosis which can interfere with fertility.

Diet will not affect this condition. I suggest that you consult with your gynecologist to see if medication would help your condition.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

You should also know that too much thyroid supplement (Synthroid and others) can accelerate osteoporosis. Consequently, make sure you have periodic blood tests to make sure you're receiving the proper amount...

To answer your specific question, estrogen, Synthroid and Xanax (an anti-anxiety drug) are safe to take together.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Making money from paper

By Phillip Alder

Money comes and goes all day long on Wall Street. And if you were to visit one of the stock exchanges, you would see many of America's best bridge players trading. The skills needed for each pursuit are similar.

I was shown today's deal by Jim Krekorian, who trades at the American Stock Exchange in New York City. He played in the two-no-trump contract at a tournament in East Brunswick, New Jersey.

You might not like the auction, but that's how it happened. North opted not to correct two no-trump back to three spades.

West guessed well to lead the diamond seven: three, king, five. Back came the diamond 10, suggesting that the suit was 3-3.

Krekorian ducked this trick, but won the next, having discarded two low spades from the dummy. Now came the spade queen: two, six, seven. So, the spades were apparently 3-3. Declarer continued with the ace and king of hearts. When the 10 appeared on the second round, Krekorian concluded East had started with only a doubleton. This marked East with 3-2-3-5 shape.

Declarer played a spade to the jack and ace. When East switched to a low club, Krekorian went up with his ace, cashed the heart queen and returned the club eight. East could take the jack and queen of clubs, but then he had to give the last two tricks to the spade king and club 10 in the dummy. Krekorian's eight tricks were two spades, three hearts, one diamond and two clubs.
