SOME RANDOM THOUGHTS WHILE WALKING IN THE

If the city makes good its threat to fight County Commission ruling on the landfill. They can't lose . . . That's because of the County dump operation.

Achooo!

A few weeks ago the county health department ran an intensive anti-measles campaign . Did anyone pay attention? Of course not . . . Only some 600 showed out of 5,000. County health officials giving you all one last chance. Vaccines will be given at both Sanford and Seminole Plazas Friday between 4 and 8 p.m. I wonder how many will show up.

An official of the Housing and Urban Development Administration met with representatives of the City Commission, Zoning Board in Pete Knowles office yesterday. The city was told it wouldn't have to spend $25,000 to get recertification under federal programs . . That would mean with any luck we could get grants for code enforcement and community facilities programs in six months. We just have to get some planning to keep city plans on a continual basis. . . . At the next City Commission meeting we suspect City Manager will be given the green light to approach county plan-

Flooding forced the evacuaroads in low-lying areas along braced for a predicted overnight accumulation of 10 inches or

Forecasters said rivers in Pittsburgh would crest at flood stage of 25 feet today and from 5 to 6 feet above flood stage at communities upstream. The snow followed a weekend of steady rain. Two suburban Pittsburgh families fled their homes when the rain and snow loosed a cascade of mud, trees and debris on five homes. No injuries were reported. Rain drenched eastern Pennsylvania where the downpours started Saturday night. Philadelphia measured 1.45 inches at the International Airport. In the northeastern section - in the anthracite belt - the rain changed to snow. The western end of the Pennsylvania Turnpike and the northeasten extension of the turnpike were snow covered and that brought out the plows and the road-cindering crews. There were no reports of flooding in eastern Pennsylvania.
