Country grub—that's what I like to the farm I'd like to hike.

In your joy. Oh, the canned stuff—Here in town is just a bluff. At a meal compared to what people in the country get. Everything has gone so high. Look like stars up in the sky. In the town's the place for style. But country grub beats it all. What can beat a good peach cobbler? Good hot gravy, turkey, gobbler. Blackberries a dozen ways. Jelly just like the fair about it. Jeron cream and golden butter. Make a fellow fairly stouter. Just to try to let about it. Though I'd like to fairly about it. That's what I call loving—say. Take me back—oh—miles away. To the old home that I know. Long ago when skies were blue. When the world was bright with dreams.

City life ain't what it seems: I'd leave the swiftest city club. For just one day of country grub. —Exchange.

It would be a saving to them, as in the present plan they have to buy more fresh vegetables than they can use. TRICK LURES SOLDIERS ON.

Boer Subterfuge Helps the British in Clash With the Germans.

Wounded men in the hospitals of Boulogne relate these incidents of fighting between the British and Germans. One of the men told of a trick which the British learned in the Boer war: "The enemy before sending their infantry against our positions opened a hot artillery fire. Our artillery replied at first warmly, and then gun after gun of the British batteries went silent.

"What's up now? I asked a comrade. There were a few minutes more of artillery firing from the Germans, and then their infantry came on in solid formation. We received them with rifle fire. Still they came on, and still we mowed them down. They were getting closer, and we could plainly see the dense masses moving. Then suddenly the whole of our artillery opened fire.

"You see, the cunning had not been silenced at all, and it was a trick to draw the Germans on. They went down in whole fields, for our guns got them in open ground, and of course, they soon had enough. It was impossible for those behind to come on past the dead."

APPALLING DESTRUCTION.

Graphic Portrayal of Ruin Wrought at Liege and Vise.

A Reuter's dispatch from Ostend says a small party just returned from a visit to Liege describes the destruction wrought by the war as appalling.

"All along the road to Vise," said one of the party, "there was nothing to be seen but walls blackened by smoke, the remains of factories burned by fire, mounds of earth freshly dug—the sepulcher of the first Germans to fall.

"And then comes Vise. What a painful sight for those who knew the proud city, so typical of Walloon gaiety, and now nothing but a mass of ruins, while many of the inhabitants lie all over the place, their chests riddled with bullets.

"At last we entered Liege. The inhabitants stood at the thresholds of their homes, silent and anxious, but afraid to speak. The streets in the middle of the town were a deplorable aspect. Many houses had been abandoned. Their doors and windows were shattered and their contents had been removed. Nobody but soldiers was to be seen."

GERMAN WAR AUTOS MARVELS.

Carry Scythas to Mow Down Fences and Hedges.

Stories were printed recently about the Germans having armored motor cars armed with machine guns, which tore through the lines of the French and Belgians and mowed down all before them.

Another story of the use of new war inventions is told by Arno Doeb, a correspondent of World's Work, who arrived in London from Brussels. He says the Germans are using auto trucks which are marvellous. Equipped with scythes, they mow right through wire fences and hedges if the roads and fields do not suit the drivers.

These trucks are said to be heavily armored, and they are able to resist anything except artillery fire. They enable the German forces to make forty miles a day. Their number seems to be unlimited.

IN A LITERARY BROTHERHOOD

Men of Great Literary Attainments Whose Friendship Has Been Made a Matter of History.

It was Rosetti, the great friend, who described Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton, the famous poet, novelist and critic, as "A Hero of Friendship." Feelings of almost brotherly love existed between Watts-Dunton and Tennyson, Browning, James Russell Lowell, George Borrow, Millais, Holman Hunt and Swinburne, to mention but a few of a famous literary brotherhood. Indeed, the intimacy which existed between Swinburne and Watts-Dunton, which might well be described as one of the most beautiful friendships in the history of literature and art, led to their being referred to as "David and Jonathan."

For many years they were never separated. They lived together at the Pines, Putney, took their summer holidays in company, and practically spent every working hour together, discussing literary matters and affairs. All Swinburne's papers were left to Mr. Watts-Dunton, and it was hoped that he would write the famous poet's biography.

Like many other literary men, Mr. Watts-Dunton cared little for society, although occasionally he was lured forth to play the "lion" at big receptions. It was on one such occasion that a guest came up to him and shook his hands in such an effusive manner as to embarrass the novelist.

"Face," said the stranger, "you don't know me from Adam."

"My dear sir," said Mr. Watts-Dunton, "I never knew Adam."

It is said that this was the only occasion when Mr. Watts-Dunton perpetrated a joke. At the same time he was one of the kindest of men, and, unlike other recluses, took the greatest interest in the affairs of the world. Wireless telegraphy appealed to him very much, and the story of the rescue of the passengers and crew of the Volturno moved him to tears.

"It was the grandest thing of my time," he once exclaimed, "the summoning of all those ships to the rescue."

The novelist, by the way, was a great believer in hard work. All his life he was accustomed to getting up at six o'clock or soon after, and going to bed at 11 at night, and he could invariably be seen each afternoon during the fine weather taking his two-mile walk across Putney Heath by the road he and Swinburne so often trod together.

The Gentleman.

As a finished product, the gentleman seems to do everything very easily, but that ease like the ease of the habit, can only come by effort. He is socially secure; but whatever his station, he was not born so, for no man ever is socially secure by birth, even if he was born to be a king. The test of a gentleman is the pleasure others take in his society, and not in his wit or his virtue of his learning, but in their ordinary social relations with him. And this pleasure he cannot give merely by being on good terms with himself.

TRICE'S TRUMPETEER

(Articles Published under this heading furnished by M. P. A. Bureau, Jacksonville)

In the 1910 campaign the prohibition speakers and newspapers used with great gusto a story of alleged fact, and it is starting the rounds again, "by request of a reader." I will pay $25.00 to the first person who will establish the truthfulness of the article, by furnishing me with the names of the judge, prosecuting attorney, defendant's attorney, the defendant, the twelve jurors and the name of the court house where the dramatic episode occurred, and the postoffice address of each of the persons included in this list.

So that you may identify the story I quote some striking sentences from it, as follows:

"Prisoner at the bar," said the Judge, "Have you anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon you? I have, your honor. I stand before this bar convicted of the willful murder of my wife. But may it please the court, I want to show I am not alone responsible for the murder of my wife. Think you that the great Judge will hold me, the poor, weak victim of your notions, alone responsible for the murder of my wife?"

The article is unquestionably a fulmination of the unbridled imagination of some clever writer. Who feels justified at weighing the hearts of his readers by the sacrifice of truth. Yet it is quoted as an actual happening and as such is solemnly proclaimed by press and pulpit and from political platforms.

People who are forever and eternally harping against the use of stimulants, because some men use them in a forbidden manner and rob themselves of reason, ought at least to be consistent enough not to rob them of their faculties by false or specious reasoning. It is a crime equally as grave as the one complained of.

As sentimental fiction the article is clever. As a record of history it is unquestionably false. As laying down the fundamentals of divine or human law it is disgustingly specious.

This same desire to shift individual responsibility for personal acts throughout all the centuries has made many men ashamed of our common ancestor, Adam. Idiots and lunatics are not responsible for crime, if the mental deficiency be of an unavailing nature. But from the age at which we know right and wrong we are individually and solely responsible for personal infractions of the laws of society.

If any other rule prevailed it would only be necessary for a villain harboring a desire to murder and kill to fill his brutal self with some concoction that would make him drunk and then go out and satisfy his fiendish desire, without responsibility. And it would not be necessary to go to an open saloon to drink a drop of whiskey.

Dialoical as crime is today, not a new one has been added to the decalogue in two thousand years. Indeed, many may have become obsolete from non-use. Only the instrumentalities of crime and the devious ways of escaping merited punishment have kept pace with the boasted progress of the ages, perhaps a little in advance. No avenue of escape is more popular at this time than the cowardly desire to shift responsibility for crime to innocent shoulders.

It is a denial of the Omnipotent power of God to claim that plain preaching will not save the vilest sinner, if he wants to be saved. It is base deception to teach weak humanity it can be saved by the legislature. It is a denial of the wisdom of God to contend that He sent His son into the world to save mankind and failed to inspire Him with understanding and foresight to point out every means of salvation for all time to come. It is a denial of the honesty of Jesus to say that He failed in the fulfillment of every purpose for which He was sent. It is tantamount to an accusation of treachery against Jesus Christ to claim that sane drinkers are accessories to the crimes of rum-soaked demons, inasmuch as He not only did not preach against sane drinking, but at one time at least actually supplied the wine for a multitude of merry-makers.

Every act of Jesus was an example of good, for the benefit of humanity, to be followed just as He set the example as long as the world stands.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Patron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing all my work." "If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

MORE ABOUT THE KUDZU

THE GREAT FLORIDA FEED FOR CATTLE AND THE WAY TO GROW IT

BY J. C. PATTERSON

Editor Sanford Herald:

Thanking you very kindly for publishing the article on cattle and kudzu I again send you, as per my promise, some more information as to the kudzu and trust it will induce the farmers and cattle men and fruit growers, not alone in Seminole and Orange counties but in every county of the state to make use of this most valuable and wonderful plant. Possessing within itself every element required by nature for the production of muscle, sugar, starch and fat. In other words the kudzu as per analysis contains 17.48 per cent of protein, 30.20 per cent starch and sugar, 1.67 per cent fat, one-third more of the muscle building element, protein, than the shipped feed and some samples nearly double that. We have other grasses, such as Rhoda and Para, and also millets and sorghums. But all these require to be replanted every year, fertilized and cultivated. The grass of the Rhoda and Para is very coarse and the stock, even cows, must have some grain feed to live on and the same with all the legumes. The alfalfa comes nearer to the kudzu, but this cannot be given to stock except in connection with other feed, because it would destroy the kidneys, and gives the animals the bloat and alfalfa can only be grown all over the United States. What we need is a forage that stock can grow fat on the year round. I have mentioned several of these valuable crops that make great yields but their period of mature life is short, making frequent plantings necessary in order to have complete successions. All the legumes, with the exception of the kudzu are more or less bad about dropping their leaves and shattering, while curing and harvesting. And a heavy rain on them or any of the grass hays or fodders while curing means serious injury, if not ruin. Kudzu overcomes all the difficulties and has many other features in its favor. One planting lasts for many years and it may be cut or pastured at any time during the season, from the middle of April in north Florida till frost, and where a growth is left on the ground stock will feed on it all winter. The kudzu is a self fertilizer. It draws its nitrogen from the air through its leaves and fixing it in the soil by means of bacteria in the tubercles on its roots, and again by its deep root system draws potash and phosphoric acid from the subsoil, and this is also the reason the kudzu will stand more dry weather than any other legume, because by the capillary actions it draws up moisture from the soil. Kudzu is propagated by means of the plants that have rooted from the joints of the vines, and when transplanted carry with them the tubercles on the roots that are needed to inoculate the soil of the new field, so as to provide for fixing the nitrogen from the air into the soil. In planting kudzu first plow the land, deeply harrow it, then check it into rows 8 1/2 feet apart each way, setting a plant at each check. Lay tap roots along the bottom of the furrow, with crowns slanting upward to within two inches of the surface, covering them with loose earth to the level of the surface. This requires 1,000 plants per acre. Give them level cultivation during the first season. A row of cotton may be grown between each row of kudzu the first season if desired. After this they will need no further cultivation, as the vines will run all over the ground the next season and take root at the joints growing so rapidly as to choke out all other plants, even such pests as Nut Johnson and Bermuda grasses. Yet it is an easy matter to get rid of the kudzu if desired, for the plants will only sprout from the crowns and can be killed by cutting off these crowns with a disk plow in hot dry weather in summer. For this reason there is no danger of kudzu ever becoming a pest. Kudzu will be an excellent crop to replace cotton in the boll weevil sections. The demand for the hay is strong and there is no danger of raising too much, as it can be sent to all parts of the world for a market. After the first season there will be no further expense, except for harvesting the hay, which requires much less labor than making cotton and it will enrich the soil, instead of making it poorer as cotton does. This will avoid having to buy fertilizers. It is free from insect enemies and diseases also. And for the various reasons will be far more profitable than cotton. Will say that this kudzu should be planted in every grove. It shades the roots from the hot sun, it fertilizes the soil and eliminates all pests, such as nut grass Bermuda and Johnson grasses.

In conclusion will state that all the information given about the kudzu is not the opinion of any person or persons, but solid, undeniable facts acquired by many, many years' experience in the United States and by centuries in Japan. Now comes the question why not cultivate something that possesses within itself all the good elements required for all stock and that can be grown cheaper and better and more abundantly in our beloved Southland, not alone for our own home use but to export to other states this absolute animal food?

This wonderful forage plant that remains green and growing below the frost line eight months in the year and twelve months in the year above frost line, and that yields such large tonnage to the acre and hordes of mules will only require one-third of grain when fed on the kudzu.

I have no plants for sale, but owing to the fact that there are more orders booked ahead than Mr. Pleasant can fill he will give any orders sent by me the preference, but the orders ought to be sent as soon as possible. The money must come with the order, $40 per 1,000 or $5 per hundred. The shipping season is from December to March. Will be glad to attend to this for any one. Receipt will be sent for your money and duplicate shipping receipt from Mr. C. L. Pleasant, Chopley, and I will see that you get full and complete instructions to prepare your soil and how to plant it with your orders.

I have only one interest, that is, to see every farmer and cattle raiser plant and raise this wonderful forage legume, and cultivate the thousands of acres now lying dormant, and especially the country inland about the lake region and in and around Chuluota, the cattle Paradise of Florida. Will write further on this and other valuable industries lying all about your very doors. J. C. PATTERSON

For all we have and are
For all our children's fate,
Stand up and meet the war!
The Hun is at the gate.
Our world has passed away
In wantonness and wrath
But steel and fire and stone
Though all we know is pain
In our hearts, in our eyes,
In our strength, in our pride,
In our love, in our life,
Once more we hear the word
That shrieked earth of old:
"No law except the sword,
Unheeded and uncontrolled!"
Once more it knits mankind,
Once more the nations go
To meet and break and bind
A crazed and driven foe.

Comfort, content, delight
The acre slow, bright gain
They survived in a night,
Only ourselves remain
To face the naked days
In silent fortitude,
Through perils and dismay
Renewed and re-renewed
Though all we made depart.
The old commandments stand:
"In patience keep your heart!
In strength lift up your hand!"

The Commercial Club will meet tonight at the City Hall and every public spirited citizen of Sanford should be in attendance. There will be many matters of interest to come before the club and a full attendance is desired.

H. A. Lumsden of Orlando is reported to have raised 60 bushels of corn to the acre near that city. Last March he planted 12 acres of corn and predicted the above yield. He claims that his process is a secret.

An exchange says that a new attachment for automobiles is out. It is a music box and when the car is driven less than twenty miles an hour it plays "Home, Sweet Home." When the car is driven faster than thirty miles an hour it plays "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The despised Florida sweet potato that formerly ranked with the razor back hog in value is now bringing 60 cents a peck in the home markets and the hog is bringing well, it is going up every minute, all of which reminds us that there ought to be money in potatoes and hogs in Florida regardless of the white sand that you hear so much about but never see.

We learn from the press that young Will Hetherington has broken into journalism on his own hook and started a paper in Dade City. Not having received a copy of the paper as yet we cannot pass judgment but are willing to bet odds that it is a true Hetherington product which is good enough for us. We wish this worthy scion of the house of Hetherington all the success which he is bound to have and sincerely hope that the youngster can demonstrate that his early training has not been wasted. If there is any family in the state press better than the Hetheringtons—father, mother and the boys—we have failed to find it.

WHOLESALE RESIGNATIONS It is reported that Cary D. Landis, solicitor for this judicial district will resign soon. The rumor has evidently been confirmed by Mr. Landis for there are several candidates for the place already announced. This will probably call for the action of the several county executive committees in making recommendations to the Governor. The position is an important one and care should be exercised in selecting a successor to Mr. Landis. Incidentally it might be remarked that there seems to be something of an epidemic of resignations from solicitors of late. Solicitor George Raney, of Tampa, resigned a few days ago, as did Solicitor James Saunders of Miami. It would be interesting to know if there is any propulsive cause back of these resignations.—Reporter-Star.

FLORIDA WILL WIN Never has there been a more concerted effort on the part of the people, and especially the newspapers of Florida, to press upon the minds of the rest of the world the superiority of this wonderful land of ours. From the chief executive down, and in the most forceful language of the command of the various exhorters, the wonderful possibilities that are here, needing only to be worked out, are being heralded to the world, and it is certain that sooner or later this seed will bring forth fruit abundantly. Florida has perhaps more virgin soil, more room to offer those seeking a new location than any other state, and even if this were not so, the fact that here, as perhaps nowhere else, can be grown various fruits and vegetables throughout the year, the winters amounting to practically nothing, especially in the southern portion. Florida therefore offers opportunities to the home seeker, the investor, not to be found elsewhere. The people of the country have their eyes on Florida and the time is not far distant when they will have their feet on Florida soil. The state will be tilled from end to end and from corner to corner, and should the shortage of food already beginning to be complained of in Europe continue Florida will soon be in position to take care of the greater portion, while the rest is looked after by the less fortunate states as to location, climate, etc. Surely no brighter future ever loomed up before any state than that now abounding its rays over this fair land of flowers, and soon it will blossom as the rose.—Ft. Myers Press.

GENERAL LAW FOR SENATE It is extremely probable that Senator N. P. Bryan will be appointed judge of the U. S. circuit court of appeals. In the event the appointment is made within the next thirty days it will be Governor Trammell's duty to appoint a United States senator to serve until his successor is elected at the November election. Governor Trammell has intimated that should it fall to him to make an appointment he would like to appoint a newspaper man, giving recognition to the great service the newspapers have rendered to Florida in its development along all lines of endeavor. Doubtless the Governor has some editor in mind worthy of the high honor, but he could not bestow it more deservedly and with greater satisfaction to the people of Florida than by appointing a citizen of his home county, Gen. E. M. Law, editor of the Bartow Courier Informant. Few men in Florida have rendered greater service to the state and the south than this grizzled old veteran who is nearing the last milestone of his career. As a soldier he served the south valiantly and with honor to himself that entitles him to the love and esteem of every son of the Lost Cause. He is the ranking living Confederate major general, but aside from his service to the state and the south during the great civil conflict, he has served the state well in other walks of life. As president of the South Florida Academy at Bartow and in many other institutions he devoted many of the best years of his life to the cause of education. In his declining years as editor of one of the leading newspapers he is still rendering great service in the upbuilding of Florida. His entire life has been devoted to the public service and while able and worthy he has never been honored with public office. True an appointment for so brief a time would be purely honorary, but it would be a fitting recognition of the services of a man whom the whole south adores. It would be an appointment which none could criticize and which would redound to the credit of Governor Trammell.—Orlando Sentinel.

MAILING COUNTY PAPERS Six years ago the commissioners of Osceola county, at the request of the editor of the Tribune, but who at that time was editor of the Kissimmee Valley Gazette, inaugurated the scheme of subscribing for a number of copies of the local papers, the same to be mailed weekly to parties in the north and west who were seeking information regarding this section.

After a thorough test of the scheme, the commissioners were convinced that it had been of incalculable benefit to this county, and the subscription was continued until December 1st of last year, and was discontinued then because the state comptroller decided that such an expenditure by the commissioners was not warranted by law.

The last legislature passed a law allowing the commissioners to levy a one mill tax for publicity purposes, and when the annual levy was made at the July meeting, a half mill was placed against property for that purpose, which means that the scheme of mailing out the local papers will be renewed, possibly at the regular meeting of the commissioners Monday.

Not a week passes but what several hundred copies of the Tribune are mailed to people in the north and west, who desire information as to conditions pertaining here, and last week twenty-eight hundred were sent to Detroit, Mich., for distribution among those in attendance at the G. A. R. reunion. The expense of printing and mailing out these papers was borne entirely by the Tribune and it is hoped the commissioners can see their way to shoulder this debt in the future, as they know the entire county profits by every man induced to come here through reading the Tribune.—St. Cloud Tribune.

The world's greatest financier is the Florida farmer's housewife. Her daily investments exceed in shrewdness the clever transactions of Wall Street and no business concern or corporation, however ably officered has ever been able to approach her in economy. She is the nation's ablest trader and her transactions more nearly reflect the progress and prosperity of the country than the reports of our clearing houses.

All legislation, financial or otherwise, ought to be so plain that the housewife can understand it. Our legislators, state and national, shoot so far over the head of the average citizen that those who are unable to employ an attorney and accept his statements in blind faith must forever remain in ignorance of our laws. Of course we have so many laws that no human can expect to read them and survive the ordeal, but any person who feels an irresistible impulse to legislate should try his proposed law on his neighbor and get it down where the common people can understand it before attempting to put it on the statute books.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL

AN IMPORTANT MATTER FOR THE INLAND CITIES OF FLORIDA

What shall we do with the refuse produced by our modern, complex conditions of living?

The healthfulness of every community, no matter how small, depends upon the proper solution of this problem, for this refuse is poisonous and in its disintegration it develops conditions decidedly dangerous.

The problem is one that must be solved for each community according to existing natural conditions. A city built on hills close to a fast tide water moving stream is ideally located, for its sewage may be drained into the stream and be quickly carried away and out of the zone of possible infection activity. The opposite would be in an inland town where nature had provided but little variation in general level.

The principal means of transmitting typhoid fever is the common house fly, but this little pest does not bear the entire blame, for a polluted water supply is dangerous to the extreme. The existence in many parts of the state of subterranean caverns or sinkholes, was believed until recent years, to provide a solution of the matter, the sewage could be run off into these places and there be left to be filtered back into the earth. But it was discovered that these caverns and sinkholes frequently were connected with the sources of supply which made possible the contamination of water used by large communities, and often these were at considerable distances from the deposit of the sewage.

Florida's last legislature properly adopted some rather stringent laws regulating and forbidding this method of sewage disposal. This action complicated the matter for some inland towns, without making the solution any less important.

The adoption of settling tanks, particularly of the Imhoff type has apparently solved the problem. This city has been adopted for a city as large as Atlanta, Georgia, Rock Grande, in Florida, has never proved its operation entirely satisfactory, even under adverse conditions. It is in successful use in many cities of Germany and elsewhere.

The sewage of the average community, which is carried through drain pipes or sewers by the medium of water, is more than ninety per cent fluid. The proper handling of this refuse involves the separation of the fluids from the solids and their separate disposal. The solid matter is allowed to sink by gravitation to the bottom, where it settles into "sludge" and the gases arising from its decomposition escape harmless into the atmosphere. After several months it becomes practically innocuous and is then removed and may be used for filling low lands, etc.

The liquid flowing from the Imhoff tank is very dilute. It seldom requires treatment to rid it of bacteria other than by dilution with running water or, in extreme cases, by passing it over trickling beds, which consist of masses of broken stones several feet in depth. This insures a thorough exposure to air and the process of oxidation renders its contents inoffensive and harmless.

The construction of this type of tank involves the treatment of the solids in a separate chamber into which they sink from the liquid mass of sewage. Their subsequent changing into the harmless "sludge" by the development and escape of gases, is so arranged that these gases do not pass through the liquid effluent above, and the disintegration of the solids and the liquids are always separate and do not interfere. This principle effects the practically complete separation of the two masses, so that the escaping fluid when passed over "trickling beds," is almost clear water, in which ordinarily fish may live, and it is harmless when run off into the earth. The state board of health considers the Imhoff process for sewage disposal thorough and safe and urges its adoption by Florida communities, where natural conditions do not permit the employment of gravitation toward large and actively moving bodies of non-drinkable water.

Spared Listeners and Himself. For humor, combined with brevity, it would not be easy to rival the French cleric, who, on the festival of St. James, was called upon to pronounce a panegyric on the saint. "My brethren," he said, "twelve months ago I preached a eulogy on the eminent apostle whose festival you celebrate today. As I doubt not, you were all very attentive to me, and as I have not learned anything new of him, I have nothing to add to what I said at the time."

THE HIGHER COST OF LIVING will always remain a problem to you if you do not at some time face the issue of making ends meet with the means at hand, but the problem will be SOLVED that day when you assert yourself master of the situation and say: "I will not spend more than I earn, but I will save for tomorrow regardless of the sacrifice." With the facilities of this institution at your service, it is akin to criminal to neglect your opportunity for saving and financial betterment and we urge upon you to BEGIN TO SAVE TODAY PEOPLES BANK OF SANFORD WE WANT YOUR BUSINESS M. WAREHOUSES FOR FARM PRODUCTS

Continued From Page One. Circumstances prices should have remained nearly stable, but the actual result was a heavy fall in prices of wheat in our markets, though every well informed man knew that there was not surplus wheat if the world were taken into reckoning. This exposes the two essential weaknesses of our present system from the standpoint of the producer: First, a lack of storage facilities, and second, a lack of proper relation between warehouse receipts and our bank credits.

Grain and Cotton Cash Crops. Grain and cotton are the farmers cash crops. The farmer works on a closer turn over more than any other wealth producer. The result is that he must realize on his products when they are ready for the market. The essentials of all foreign rural credit banking systems are that the farmer can secure advances on his products at any stage during their growth and repay the loan when the product goes into the hands of the customers. Thus there is no room for the vast army of middlemen which has grown up around the American grain fields—all of them reaping where they have not sown. But we have not perfected any system by which the actual producer of grain can warehouse it and secure a reasonable advance on its actual market value. Thus under our system we force the crops into the hands of speculators on the very day of harvest and many months before the crop is actually consumed.

The new banking and currency law is designed to facilitate advances on grain in store. The only question now is, "Who shall have the advantage of this law?" To present a receipt of the highest integrity it is necessary to organize warehouses, licensed after rigid inspection by the national government, with inspectors and weighers, examined and licensed by federal authority, the products in store to be inspected and certificated by these licensed inspectors, the warehouses to be bonded by the United States and all operations to be under the supervision of the national government.

Under these conditions a warehouse receipt for staple agricultural products stored in one of these bonded warehouses will present the highest form of security to any bank; it will be recognized by the Federal Reserve Board when presented by a member bank. We will thus have connected our grain fields with the federal treasury and have taken the first step in a rational finance system for the American farmer.

This warehouse receipt will ultimately drive the speculator out of business. It will substitute a system of legitimate storage by owners and producers for the present system of speculative future sales where no intention exists, either on the part of buyer or seller, to assume actual ownership of the grain. We will thus avoid wild fluctuations in price of prime food commodities which are the source of the speculators' profits. The actual result will mean higher average prices to the producer and lower average prices to the consumer; but, greater than this, will be the impetus given to agriculture which will grow out of the knowledge that the producer will receive the full reward of his labor. Thus out of the world's calamity

Masculine Outfit for Tiny Boy

ON THAT happy day when the baby boy discards drosses and proudly disdains them forever afterward he dons a distinctly masculine outfit like that pictured in the pleasing illustration given here. Lace and thin fabrics are a thing of the past with him, and he is hereafter to be clothed in substantial stuffs to fit the rough-and-tumble experiences of his boyhood which lie before him. All the world over mothers might follow this manner of dressing the small man, and find it in every way the most satisfactory of styles. It allows the child absolute freedom, is easily kept clean and is smart in appearance. It is so simple in construction that the most ordinary of needlewomen can undertake the making. All the strongly-woven cotton, linen and plain woolen fabrics, and especially those that will stand tubbing, are used for the tiny boy. Serges, chevrets, velveteens (for dressy wear), gingham, coarse, unbleached linens, cotton or wool corduroy, pique and white linens (the last two for dress-up occasions in summer time) and other desirable fabrics make it easy to choose something for him. In the picture shown here the blouse is of a gray flannel, with collar and cuffs of a ribbed fabric in red. The pants are of the same material as the blouse.

The little gray hat of felt has a ribbon band of red and ribbon ties in gray. These ties and the lad's curls are all that is left to him of babyhood, and by the time his years amount to four they must disappear. It is usual to make two or three pairs of pants to one blouse and to provide a generous hem on the blouse in case of shrinkage. A belt made of two thicknesses of the material in the blouse and strengthened by machine stitching is best fastened with button and buttonhole. Wash fabrics should be shrunk before the suit is made. Plain fabrics make the most attractive clothes for little boys. On linens or other material suited to embroidering, small patterns appear on the cuffs and collars. Machine stitching makes an appropriate decoration also for boys' clothes. But no ornamentation at all is better than much ornamentation, and embroidery or machine stitching or braiding is to be sparingly used. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Flounces for Negligees. Flounces of mousseline de sole are used on the latest negligees of crepe de chine. They are gathered or cut circular, rippling full at the lower edge.

Letter From Will Beatty

Dear Sirs—Inclosed find check for $2.00 to pay my subscription to the Herald from Sept. 1914 to Sept. 1915. I would like to write you a long letter about my trip up here but haven't got the time and it would be too long a letter for you to read. But will say myself and family left Sanford, Fla., April 21 at 4 a. m. with two one horse wagons and traveled all through Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Washington, D. C., Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, then through New York state to Delhi, in all we traveled about 1,800 miles and arrived here July 28th at 4 p. m. Averaged over 100 miles every week. Both horses stood the trip fine. I expect to make this my home. I have a nice place here in the Catakill Mountains so send the paper to me here at Delhi, N. Y.

Yours truly, W. H. BEATTY, Delhi, New York.

REMEMBER YOUR LAST DOSE OF CALOMEL

You probably recall the bad after-effects of the calomel more than the sickness you took it for. You need never again go through with being knocked out for a day or two.

Next time your liver gets sluggish and inactive, we urge that you go to L. R. Phillips & Co for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic, a splendid vegetable liquid medicine that will start your liver as surely as calomel ever did and with none of the after effects of calomel. It is absolutely harmless both to children and adults and demands no restriction of habits or diet.

A large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic costs only fifty cents and the druggists who sell it guarantee it to take the place of calomel, and will refund your money if it fails in your case or if you are not satisfied.

Money in Florida Hens

Just let us give you a few figures to think over for a little while. There is room and opportunity in Florida for a billion hens. Suppose there were that many hens in the state and that each hen produced 250 eggs per annum. That would mean 250,000,000,000 eggs a year. It would mean more than 1,000,000,000 dozen eggs a year. If that many eggs could be marketed at the average price of 30 cents, that would be an income to Florida every year of $4,800,000,000 per annum! Can you beat it? Do you question it? I you do, take a piece of paper and figure it out how many acres of land in this state could raise chickens, how many hens to the acre could be raised and fed. And do you know that the amount of money from hen fruit alone would mean an income to Florida half as big as the entire income of America today? We'll give a prize to any one who will prove it can't be done. Now figure your heads off. Jacksonville Metropolitan.

None But Democrats

Usually about this time every two years the newspapers of Florida are urging the voters to register and save the party at the November election, hinting at dark and mysterious schemes, the Socialists, Republicans, Bull Moose, Populists, Independents and other political associations are about to work to throttle the untutored Democracy of the state and capture every office from governor to constable.

The people have become accustomed to this biennial warning and naturally pay little attention to it, but the war or the high cost of ink and paper have caused the newspapers to neglect this important work recently. However, the party

GRIPPING STORIES FROM EUROPE'S

OF HEROISM THEATER OF WAR

Individual Instances of Splendid Courage in the Face of Death.

Sailors Go Down With Ship Cheering Kaiser—Aviator's Daring Errand.

STORIES of unsurpassed heroism in the face of the enemy's fire on land and on sea and in the air continue to thrill a world of readers of the war news as the "battle of the nations" rages with undiminished fury.

An eyewitness of the loss of the German cruiser Ariadne and the German torpedo boat destroyer V-167 in the fighting between British and German warships off Heligoland relates the following story:

"The Ariadne attacked gamely, but a shell plumped her boilers, putting half of them out of commission. Despite this the light continued. The quarterdeck of the Ariadne took fire, but those of her guns that were still capable of being worked continued shooting. The enemy turned westward.

"The forecastle of the Ariadne was soon ablaze. Her magazine was flooded, but the gallant vessel was doomed. Her crew was mustered and gave three cheers for the emperor and sang the hymn 'The Flag and Germany Above All.'"

Shield Shells Overboard.

The London Telegraph's Harwich correspondent gives further narratives of the Heligoland fight, gleaned from British sailors. They say that many of the German shells which made hits did not burst, and to that fact they attribute the comparative lightness of the British casualty list.

"There were five shells in the boiler of the —," said one of them, mentioning the name of a destroyer. "If one of them had burst—well, it would have been all up with the ship."

"What did you do with them?" he was asked.

"Oh, we just shied them overboard. We've no room for such rubbish aboard our yacht."

In another instance it is related that a shell fell on the deck of a British ship. There was no immediate explosion. The sailors rushed at it and pushed it into the sea, a plucky act, but just what a sailor would do.

Went Down With Flag.

One incident has been described which shows the grit of the German sailors. I give it as nearly as possible in the language of my informant.

"We were hard at it with a German cruiser," he said, "and she was in a bad way, on the point of sinking. We could see her decks were in an awful mess, and her stern was in flames. It had been shot away. We could see only one man on the forecastle, but he was a plucky one. He hoisted a flag, and it was still there when the ship went down. I suppose he went down with her."

Describes Perilous Flight.

The following letter from a German military aviator is printed in the Brandenburger Zeitung:

"While our company still lay in garrison I received orders to start on a flight into the enemy's country at daybreak the following morning. We headed for the French border. Immediately my observer, a first lieutenant, called my attention to little black puffs of smoke, and I knew at once we were being fired at by hostile artillery. So we climbed to 2,000 meters.

"Next we noticed that three of the enemy's aeroplanes were pursuing us, but soon we outdistanced and lost sight of them. Later we heard that two of the enemy's aeroplanes had been brought down by our artillery.

"With a threefold hurrah we now flew over the border toward a battlefield of the war of 1870-71, which we reached without any further untoward incidents. Here we noticed long columns of troops marching from the south toward the northeast. We circled around the place and then started toward Mass.

"We were now continually fired on. I saw, among other things, how a battalion of infantry stopped in the street and aimed at us. Silently and quietly we sat in our tubs and wondered what would happen next. Suddenly I noticed a faint quivering throughout the whole aeroplane. That was all. As I saw later one of the planes had four holes made by rifle bullets, but without changing our course on we flew.

Lieutenant Campaigne of the French aviation corps, while flying over the German lines at the height of a mile, was subjected to the enemy's fire. A shell struck his machine, and he stopped the motor.

The aeroplane oscillated violently, but the lieutenant succeeded in volplaning into the French lines. He landed safely and gave important information concerning the German position.

Scorns Eleven Wounds.

A correspondent at St. Petersburg got the following incident through the censor:

"A Cossack hero, Kuzma Krachkov, who received eleven wounds in an outpost affair against the Germans and attracted the special attention of the emperor while in the hospital at Moscow and petitioned to be allowed to return to his regiment, has arrived at Vilna on his way to the front.

"A Russian who has just returned from the wilds of Novgorod province, far from the railways, gives an interesting account of the attitude of the peasantry toward the war and the action of the government in prohibiting the sale of alcoholic drinks. He says:

"I stopped at a little inn on the highway and ordered tea and something to eat. Some mujiks were there discussing their own affairs over the teapots. 'The Lord be praised, all Russia is happy now!' said one. I was interested to know why and was told in a surprised tone, 'Why they've shut the drink shops, and all our men are as rosy cheeked as lambs now.'"

Queen Would Fight.

The London Express correspondent at The Hague gives an interesting version of a conversation between King Albert of Belgium and Prime Minister de Broqueville, when the king expressed a determination of fight to the last.

The incident occurred in Antwerp when the king said to the prime minister in the presence of the queen: "If necessary, you, my dear minister, and myself will take our rifles and go to the field."

"So will I," said the queen, "and all Belgian women will go with me."

How Prince William Died.

The Hanover Courier prints this account by an eyewitness of the death of Prince William of Lippe, who fell in the assault on Liege.

"On the morning of the 6th we succeeded in getting on the northern walls of Liege, where, however, we were completely surrounded by Belgian troops, who drew ever closer around us and pressed us hard amid a hail of bullets. By order of his highness our detachment formed a circle, and we defended ourselves stoutly for some time till at length we saw strong reinforcements coming to our aid.

"In order to enable them to locate the exact spot where we were the prince rose to a kneeling position, pointed with his sword to the approaching column and gave me the order to raise the flag so we might be recognized.

"I raised the flag and waved it in a circle, which at once drew an extra hail of bullets from the enemy. The flag was shot out of my hands, while the same volley wounded the prince fatally in the breast and throat. His last words were, 'Remember me.'"

Hid as in Catacombs.

"As we moved through Malines," says a New York Times correspondent, "we found the streets deserted. I went down into some cellars and there saw the most uncanny scene I have witnessed during these eventful weeks.

"Underground passages extended in every direction, and everywhere on the earthen floors and along the walls, cooing with moisture, I perceived through the darkness the shadows of about 200 old men and women stretched on mattresses.

"They stared at me in terror. In vain did I try to reassure them. They only asked: 'Are they coming? Are they here? Are they coming to kill us?' "As I passed along I fully understood for the first time what was meant by the terror of the Teutons and why scores of thousands of refugees had fled from Malines."

Son Slain, Asks "Which One?"

A story is told of the bravery of French women and men in the present circumstances which is vouched for as true.

General de Castelneau and his three sons went to the front at the outbreak of the war, and Mme. de Castelneau retired to the south. One of the sons was killed in the early fighting. The parish priest undertook the delicate task of conveying the news to Mme. Castelneau.

"Which one?" asked Mme. de Castelneau simply, meaning whether it was her husband or one of her three sons who had been killed.

When the Thirty-fifth regiment entered Muelhausen an aged Alsatian offered the soldiers everything he possessed, pressing them to accept wine and food. After they had finished their meal the old Alsatian bade them farewell, saying:

"I am now going to fight to kill my son, who is in the Fortieth regiment of German infantry."

Prince Knits For Soldiers.

Queen Mary has all the "unemployed" members of the British royal household knitting socks and sewing for the soldiers and sailors.

A member of the royal family who is inconsolable is Prince Henry, third son of King George. Seeing him viciously kicking cushions around his room at Buckingham palace, a young staff officer queried respectfully:

"Feeling bad, sir?"

Almost in tears the prince answered: "You'd feel bad in my place. Albert's in it, and David (the Prince of Wales) will be going soon, but I can't go and fight. I'm expected to do something for the soldiers and sailors, and I've known what that something is? Knitting! How would you like to knit?"

Making of roses has become a popular fad in Sanford and the enthusiasm is contagious as a result of the regular Wednesday meetings for this purpose, informal morning and evening parties in various neighborhoods, luncheons, teas and spend the day parties, with an invitation to make roses is an excuse for these enjoyable and delightfully informal affairs and the roses grow in bunches. Mrs. R. E. Tolar will be hostess next Wednesday afternoon.

Upon the broad, cool porches, with their decorations of palms, ferns and potted plants, in the foliage of which twinkled myriad candles, were placed the card tables, and here too the dainty refreshments were served.

Volcanoes Again in Action.
Some of the volcanoes in the Sangir islands are in eruption. The streams of lava have burned down woods and cocoa plantations, and a rain of stone has caused damage throughout the whole surrounding country. Above a hundred houses have collapsed. Several of the Sangir islands, which are almost midway between Mindanao, Philippines, and Celebes, have active volcanoes, the most important being Gukong Abu, on Great Sangir, by eruption of which many thousands of lives have been lost. Its worst recorded outbreak was in 1711, 1812, 1856, 1883 and 1892. In the last mentioned year the northwest portion of the island entirely disappeared, carrying 2,000 people with it.

Worthy of Remembrance.
The two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Ephraim Williams, founder of Williams college, will be celebrated by that institution on October 8 next. Unlike most college founders, Williams was not a clergyman, but a soldier. For his fight against the French in Canada the commonwealth of Massachusetts gave him 200 acres, on which he erected Fort Massachusetts. Caught by an ambuscade of French and Indians, he was shot in the head in 1755 and died, leaving funds for the beginning of the college on the site of the fort.

New Idea in Education.
The moving picture has been introduced as a permanent feature of the German schools. Films for courses of bacteriology, anatomy and biology are already available in that country.

For Rusted Saws.
When the saw becomes rusted it may be removed with emery dust mixed with sweet oil. Apply this with a large cornucob.

LIST OF QUEER VOWS

SOME AMUSING AND SOME BORDERING ON THE TRAGIC.

Bachelor Who Swore he Never Would Look Upon a Woman Again Kept His Oath, Though It Cost Him Much Money.

There is no limit to human folly or perverseness, and many of the vows that rash people make are foolish as well as perverse.

Eighteen years ago a California man lost his sight during an illness, and there was danger of total blindness. His wife was exceedingly pious, and vowed that if her husband's sight was restored she would crawl on her hands and knees once a year to a neighboring church in token of her gratitude. He recovered his sight, and once a year his wife has kept her vow.

It was surely nothing but folly and obstinacy that inspired the vow of an old bachelor that he would never look on a woman's face again. In order to carry out his vow he had a high wall built around his house which he never left, and inhabited men for his woman servants. Later, when new houses sprang up around his own and his grounds were overlooked, he had them covered with a roof and artificially lighted. He kept his strange vow to the end of his life, which, however, came within seven years.

The most recent of these foolish makers of vows is a native of Brussels, who has sworn that he will make a tour of the world walking backward. It is to be hoped that his fate will be happier than that of the man who swore that he would never rest until he could walk on the ceiling like a fly, and who lost his reason without gaining his wish.

There was "mothed in the madness" of the great French painter Zelm, who vowed that he would never leave his studio until a certain important picture was finished. He gave instructions that the door should be locked in his studio and that door should not be opened under any conditions, his meals to be handed to him through a hole in the door. Thus he worked for months during the crisis that ended in Napoleon's famous coup d'etat and his accession to the throne, of which Zelm knew nothing until his picture was completed and his door unlocked.

Another French artist, Gericauld, was equally determined to allow no distraction to interfere with the painting of his great picture, "The Wreck of the Medusa." He had his head shaved and vowed that he would never allow his hair to grow until his work was done. The vow he religiously kept, in spite of strong temptation to break it, and the reward of his heroism was the most perfect painting of his life.

It was for a very curious reason that an old lady who died a few years ago condemned herself to more than 30 years' confinement to her home. She had married a widower, as miserly as he was unromantic, and he insisted that his second wife should wear the clothes left behind by his first wife. The wife was as ruthless as her husband was resolute, and she determined that until she could have her own clothes she would never leave the house—a vow she kept until her death.

Bank-Notes Made of Silk.
Bank-notes made of silk of a particular shade that will baffle the bank-note forger are now possible. As is known, most of the expert bank-note forgers use photography to obtain their best results; but a recent invention makes it possible to use a dye of a particular shade that cannot possibly be photographed.

Discovered by a woman, this invention is a new process for waterproofing fabrics without rubber and dyeing them in the same operation. Linen, cotton, or other materials to be treated by this process are placed white into one end of the machine and brought out at the other end a few minutes later colored, waterproofed, and dry. Fabrics so produced, the inventor maintains, can be used in hundreds of trades, from aeroplane building to bank-note making.

The Electoral College.

Hamilton says: "It was desirable that the immediate election of the president should be made by men most capable of analyzing the qualities adapted to the station. A small number of persons, selected by their fellow citizens from the general mass, will be most likely to possess the information and discernment requisite to so complicated an investigation." It is unnecessary to say that by imperceptible changes the spirit of the Constitution has disappeared, and that for generations the "electors" have been the mere automata by which the people register the result of their vote.

Smile Right.
When in doubt—smile. It is a safe play at almost any stage of life's game. But be sure it's the right kind of a smile—not the fawning smile, not the smile of fear which is better described as a grin, but the smile which says that the world is a pretty good sort of a place if you don't take it too seriously—the smile that says: "Come on in, the joke's a good one."—Pictorial Review.

They Don't Know.
Men talk about what they would do if they had $1,000,000, but nine out of ten lie about it. If they had $1,000,000 the first thing they would do would be to lay plans and concoct schemes for getting two.—Toledo Blade.

The Sanford Shoe & Clothing Co. are putting on a sale this week on all men's and boys' suits and summer underwear and expect to clean out all of these goods now on hand, in order to make room for fall stock.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found their announcement and it will be noted that everything in this line has been marked down to remarkably low figures in order to move this stock. VEGETABLE GROWERS MET IN JAX

There was held in Jacksonville on Tuesday a meeting of the representatives of a number of truckers' associations and growers' organizations from many parts of Florida with the view to the organization of an organization to cooperatively market the vegetable crop of the state.

Mr. J. D. Rooney, secretary of the Marion county board of trade was elected chairman of the organization committee, and a committee was appointed to recommend a form of organization. The committee on organization submitted a report, and general plan of organization is laid out along lines that promise success.

There will be local organizations in each county, which organizations will become members of the central body, with offices in Jacksonville. The central body will be the sales agents for the local organizations. It was the unanimous opinion of all that there must be established a standard package, that the picking must be carefully done, and the packing should be in a central packing house, so as to insure uniform and honest packs.

Those communities interested in joining this organization can send in their names to the Governor, and they will be forwarded to the proper persons. The name adopted for the organization is "The Florida Vegetable Marketing Bureau." With the support of the growers and with the right men at the head of this organization it should be a complete success. The plan of organization is one that has proven successful; it is not new or untried and cooperation among the vegetable growers will mean the stability of the industry, and the emancipation of the truckers from the handicaps under which they have suffered.—Florida Grower.

Car Was Wrecked

The big Cadillac touring car of Mr. J. P. Musselwhite was hit by a northbound Atlantic Coast Line passenger train shortly after three o'clock Thursday afternoon at the ice plant crossing, in the northern part of the city. The train was going at a lively rate and almost completely demolished the car, throwing it to the side of the track upside down.

Mr. Musselwhite was leaving the city bound for Sanford and reached the crossing just before the train. He was thrown from the car and the engine went dead directly on the track and before it could be pushed off the train had struck it, Mr. Musselwhite barely getting out in time to save himself. The train stopped as soon as possible and the crew and passengers poured forth, supposing that some one had been killed.

The car is so badly damaged that it will cost almost as much as a new one to make repairs.—Orlando Sentinel.

PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOR

Tallahassee, Sept. 10, 1914. Governor Park Trammell today issued the following proclamation to the people of Florida:

State of Florida, Executive Chamber. By the Governor a Proclamation.

Cotton is one of the great staple crops of Florida, and is the "money crop" upon which depend upon a very large measure the prosperity and well being, the independence and the comforts of great numbers of our people and of large sections of the state.

Cotton is, however, a product which has always been a subject of speculation, and its selling price has consequently been exceedingly sensitive to the general condition of the world's money market. It is a product a considerable portion of which is exported to Europe, hence directly affected by conditions prevailing in Europe.

The commercial conditions of Europe, as the world knows, is at this time one of complete paralysis. How long that condition will last it is now impossible to predict, but it would certainly appear that the war is on such a gigantic scale that from sheer exhaustion of resources it must terminate in a relatively short time.

While the European war lasts and until the struggling nations can adjust their affairs, the great cotton industry of the south is threatened with a period of depression. The depression can be avoided, or can certainly be vastly minimized, if our people stand together and support the price of this great southern crop until financial conditions become more normal and the world's demand for our staple restores and advances its price.

The general commercial situation is certain to become more settled and better adjusted within the next few months, and the south's splendid cotton crop will then be in great demand at satisfactory prices. During the present period of uncertainty and distress, however, it is peculiarly incumbent upon all of our people to stand together in a patriotic spirit of helpfulness to our fellow citizens and to our country and prevent the sacrifice of millions of dollars by our farmers through an unnecessary depression in the price of cotton.

To this end, I, Park Trammell, Governor of the state of Florida, do earnestly request and urge that each citizen of this state who can afford to do so, go into the market at once and buy from farmers unable to hold, one or more bales of cotton paying therefor not less than ten cents a pound; that the citizens of all sections of this state, and especially those sections wherein cotton is raised or is handled, proceed at once to organize local and county associations or clubs for the purpose of stimulating in each locality the purchase and holding of cotton at the minimum price suggested; that committees be appointed to canvass the various committees to assist in making sale of at least one bale or more to each citizen who is able to purchase; that the merchants and other creditors in the cities and towns of the state where cotton is handled reach agreements, through associations or otherwise, to buy cotton raised in their respective vicinities at not less than ten cents per pound or to accept it at such price in settlement of accounts or as (Continued On Page 5)

GERMANS ARE IN FULL RETREAT

THEY HAVE EVACUATED BRUSSELS AND EXPECT TO MAKE A STAND AT LIEGE

RUMORS OF A PLOT TO DETHRONE THE KAISER ARE RIFE IN CAPITALS OF EUROPE—SUPPRESSION OF WAR NEWS IS SAID TO HAVE ANGERED THE BERLIN PEOPLE

London, Sept. 15.—The first stage of the battle of the Marne appears to have been won by the allies, but the main German army is still intact and the supreme clash is coming. More desperate engagements are expected this week. A chain of forts from Metz to Diedenhofen forms a strong pivot for the Germans left, while river courses and dense forests on the frontier give the retreating Germans an opportunity for defense.

London, Sept. 15.—The Ghent correspondent of the Daily News says he has confirmed the statement the Russian troops are in Belgium. He asserts that the Russian army has been cut at Countenberg, between Brussels and Louvain by Belgians reinforced by Russians.

Antwerp, Tuesday, 11 a. m.—Germans are evacuating Brussels for Liege, where stand is expected.

London, Tuesday, 11 a. m.—Rumors of a plot to dethrone the Kaiser are rife in Berlin and other German cities. News of German disaster long suppressed is responsible.

Report from Berlin states German cruiser Hela sunk by British marmes on Sunday, locality not given.

Rotterdam, Sept. 15 (Via London). The report of a German war correspondent in the field, as received here from Berlin, says: "Towards the end of August, the French endeavored to arrest the advance of the German troops through Belgium by attacking their forces at Eprenay and on the German left wing at Metz and Saarburg. In these attacks the losses of the French and British were very heavy.

The German right wing, composed of three corps, then attempted to outflank the allies by a movement to the left past Amiens, which movement was successful and led to a rapid advance on Paris.

"Since September 5 there have been heavy engagements in many places. An attack on the Germans from the direction of Paris over the town of Crecy, and the Department of the Aisne, was successfully withstood by General Von Gluk.

Paris, Sept. 15.—Pursuit of the retreating German armies by the British and French forces continued today with vigor, according to the French view.

Despite their great numbers, the German withdrawing movement is being carried out with rapidity and cleverness. The main body appears to be approaching the Belgian frontier, while the German left wing seemingly is gaining shelter in German Lorraine.

So far as known, the fleeing invaders, who, after wonderful forced marches into France, made such a stern attempt to break through the lines of the allies defending Paris have abandoned more than sixty cannons of various caliber and thirty machine guns because their exhausted horses were unable to drag them fast enough to keep up even with the foot wearing infantry. Enormous amounts of ammunition and war stores also were left on the route of the Germans, which is thought a difficult marshy country, rendered almost impassable in some places by heavy rains, which threaten to continue.

HARBOR BILL HAS BEEN CUT

Washington, Sept. 12.—Republican opposition to the river and harbor bill coupled with the falling customs revenue because of the European war, had the effect today of inducing Democratic leaders to strike out $18,500,000 of the $52,000,000 originally proposed. It is not yet satisfactory, however, to the Republicans.

Senator Simmons, in charge of the measure, said the revision was generally on a pro rata basis. The largest flat reduction was in the appropriation for the Mississippi, which was cut from $8,000,000 to $6,000,000. The item for purchase and improvement of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal was entirely stricken out but a provision was inserted authorizing the secretary of the treasury to negotiate for the purchase of the waterway.

Killed Big Gator

Pensacola, Sept. 15.—The largest alligator in West Florida and the most destructive has been killed in a lake near Red Bay, in Washington county. To reach the point it is necessary to go from Pensacola in a boat up Choctawhatchee bay and then through inland about eighteen miles. There the alligator, with numerous others, made its home. It was brought about by Levi Miller and Tom Ward, who received an order from a northern firm for thirty-five alligator skins and they sought the lake, which is the center of an immense swamp. After midnight they ventured out in a boat with lights which blinded the gators, which they found in immense numbers. Among those killed was the big alligator. It measured nineteen feet in length and six feet across the shoulders. There was great joy when the hunters emerged the next morning with the big alligator, for the people living for miles around said they had suffered for more than twenty years because of the gator's depredations. Only a week ago a $200 mare, owned by one of the residents, ventured into the swamp and was killed by the alligator, while two full grown cows had been killed the week previous. Sheep, hogs and goats that went into the same swamps never returned. For years parties had attempted to kill the gator and its hide showed where it had been shot many times in the past.

Cannot Ship Oysters

It is an old saying that oysters are good every month in the year that has an "R" in it, and they are, and many of the oyster men were under the impression that they could be shipped during the month of September, but in this they are mistaken. According to the shell fish law, Section 7, oysters can be taken from cultivated leases and sold in the local market during the month of September, but no common carrier can transport oysters before the first of October. The above information was furnished by F. S. Sams, the Deputy Shell Fish Commissioner at this place, in response to a query to Commissioner of Agriculture in regard to shipping oysters during this month. The oysters in this section are very fine now and the oyster men are selling them in the local market, but they have no desire to violate the law governing their shipment.—New Smyrna Breeze.

COMMERCIAL CLUB MEETS

ENTHUSIASTIC BUNCH OF BOOSTERS AT CITY HALL

The Commercial Club is coming back. With the opening up of all fall business and the return of most of its members from their summer vacation, the club is looking on new life and this season promises to be one of the most profitable in many years, not only to the merchants of Sanford but to the Commercial Club as well and it is the opinion of its members that the club will be able to accomplish more this year than it has in many years.

The regular bi-monthly meeting was held last Friday evening in the City Hall. While the attendance has not as yet reached the maximum on account of many members being out of town, the leading business men of the city and the men who have the interests of the city at heart were nearly all there. It is expected that the next meeting will register a full attendance.

Many matters of interest were brought up for discussion. The committee on county roads reported that the county commissioners had agreed to put the road force on the Oviedo road and leave them on this work until this road is thoroughly repaired and in good shape. From there the force will go to the Geneva road and complete that, thus giving to the citizens of the two leading towns in the county a good road to the county seat.

The next meeting will be held in the regular meeting place on Friday evening, Sept. 25th at 8 p. m. Let every citizen of Sanford, whether a member or not come out and attend these meetings. There is no factor which will make us any more like a good live wide-awake Commercial Club.

TO LEGISLATE FOR FISH PROTECTION

That the Fish Protective Association of Florida, with headquarters at Welaka, Putnam county, will make a determined effort to secure the passage of a general statute law for the protection of the great fishing industry of Florida, is evidenced by the following bill, which will be introduced at the next session of the legislature:
