

Man Jailed For Threatening Deputy And His Family

A Longwood man arrested and charged with striking a Seminole County sheriff's deputy had a charge of corruption by threat against a public servant added after he repeatedly told the lawman he was going to kill him, his wife and family.

According to a sheriff's report, Nanette Marie Kimball, of 134 Clyde Ave., Longwood, told a deputy that her husband came home drunk at 5:56 p.m. Friday and she wanted to get a few items from their home and leave. When the deputy arrived with the woman, her husband reportedly came out of the house yelling at the deputy and telling him that he had no right to be there and to get off the property.

The lawman reported that the man, who had been drinking but was not too drunk, continued to yell, stuck his finger in his face, and then hit him on the chest. The deputy then knocked the man off balance and handcuffed him on the ground.

At that point the deputy reported, the man said that not only was he going to kill his wife, but he was going to kill the deputy. When the man was warned about making such threats, he reportedly continued, saying he was going find out where the lawman lived and repeatedly said he was going to kill the deputy and members of the deputy's family even if it was the last thing he ever did in life.

Being held in the Seminole County Jail in lieu of $8,000 bond was Harry Lee Kimball, 36, of 134 Clyde Ave., Longwood.

a bench warrant for failure to appear in Seminole County Court for sentencing for discharging a gun in public was arrested and charged at the same time with lewd and lascivious assault upon a child.

According to an arrest report, County Judge Alan Dickey ordered Robert Lewis Suss, 38, of 510 Dew Drop Cove, arrested after he reportedly failed to appear Oct. 1 in court for sentencing on the weapon charge, a misdemeanor.

While Suss, a self-employed investment counselor, was being arrested Friday at 9:45 a.m. with the judge-issued bench warrant, he also served and arrested with a capias warrant from the State Attorney's Office charging lewd and lascivious assault on a child, a felony. He was arrested at the county's probation department, Park Avenue, Sanford.

Details of the alleged assault were not included in the arrest report.

Suss was being held in lieu of $9,000 worth of bonds, $1,000 on the charge of failing to appear and $8,000 on the assault charge.

According to a sheriff's report, a man went to the home of George Clark, of Sanford, about 6:14 p.m. and asked for money he said was owed him. Clark reportedly told the man that he could not pay him at that time. After hitting Clark on the head and body, the man broke into a shed and attempted to take some tools for collateral, according to the report. The tools, however, were too heavy so the man broke into Clark's pickup truck and took a CB radio.

Charged with burglary and battery is Dezo Klaus Turos, 20, of 509 29th St., was being held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

TRAFFIC STOPS, DRUG ARRESTS

Two cars stopped for traffic violations netted Oviedo police three drug arrests Friday.

Shortly before 10 p.m. at Station Road and state Road 434, an officer pulled over a 1979 red Maverick for having no license plate visible. He reported that the driver and passenger appeared to have been drinking. After he asked the men to get out of the vehicle, he noticed a plastic bag containing what appeared to be marijuana in the car. A subsequent search produced marijuana seeds and a pipe for smoking the material.

Charged with possession of marijuana and paraphernalia were Brook Allen Chenoweth, 18, of Box 188, Cockman Road, Geneva, and Larry Mitchell Poston, 22, of Orlando. Both were released on $5,000 bond each.

In a second traffic stop at 11:51 p.m. Friday, an Oviedo man was arrested for possession of marijuana.

According to the arrest report, an officer stopped a red Nova because its tail lights were not working. Since the driver could not produce a driver's license, the officer used information on the car's registration for a computer check. While awaiting the results of the check, a recruit-trainee with the officer noticed a bag of marijuana in the car. An open glove box also contained a number of unidentified pills.

Charged with possession of marijuana and the pills plus having no driver's license with him and bad tail lights is Conley Michael Kelly, 27, of Oviedo. He was released on $5,000 bond.

Lawsuit, Prosecution Possible

Teen Denied Care By Religious Mother Dies

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — A teenager whose medical care was the object of a custody battle sparked by the refusal of her Jehovah's Witness mother to allow blood transfusions, has died despite court-ordered treatment.

Melissa Acosta, 16, died shortly before noon Sunday at Martin Luther Hospital, a spokeswoman said.

"It's better that she left," Thomas Acosta said moments after viewing his daughter's body. "She looks peaceful now. She looks happy, she doesn't hurt anymore."

"I've been praying for her to pass away. I couldn't stand it that she was up there with all those machines stuck in her. There was no reason for her to live anymore."

But, he said, "Seeing your daughter lying there... it hurts."

The father's lawyer, Henry James Koehler, said he would seek a court-ordered autopsy.

"I may file a civil suit, or the district attorney may wish to prosecute," he said.

Melissa suffered from lupus erythematosus, a degenerative disease that attacks the kidneys and other organs. She was comatose for a period and suffered seizures and painful internal bleeding.

Her father went to court June 25 seeking custody or an order to remove control of his daughter's medical care from his ex-wife, Susie, who had kept Melissa from receiving blood transfusions, plasma exchanges or dialysis because they conflicted with Jehovah's Witness doctrines.

The court gave temporary custody to the state and Melissa was moved to the Anaheim facility and the care of a kidney specialist. Melissa was later allowed to live with her mother, but her outpatient treatment was monitored daily by the court. She suffered a relapse Sept. 4 and went back to the hospital with internal bleeding.

Court-appointed doctors testified during the Acosta's custody hearings that Melissa would die without immediate treatment.

Jehovah's Witness doctrine does not allow blood transfusions, which doctors said were necessary for proper diagnosis and treatment.

Minister Ruben Cobas said in late June the sect was not against medical treatment for Melissa.

"We just believe that blood has been forbidden by the Bible for reasons of health," he said. "The doctors and courts don't tell you that several thousand people die from complications from blood transfusions."

"The doctors can't guarantee that even if Melissa received all the care they could think of, she will surely survive. And if a child dies, they will blame it on the delay, not on their method of treatment."

Would-Be Killer Sentenced To 5 Years

A Sanford man who pleaded guilty to attempted first-degree murder has been sentenced to 5 years in prison.

Standly Dvoine Bryant, 30, of 146 Academy Ave., must serve at least three years. He was given credit Wednesday for 180 days already served.

Bryant was arrested after a March 29 barroom shooting left his 26-year-old wife, Beaste Bryant, hospitalized with head and chest wounds. She has since recovered.

Mrs. Bryant was found by a Sanford police officer lying next to a pool table in the Tango Bar, 1013 W. 13th St., Sanford, at about 7 p.m.

Witnesses at the scene said Bryant ran from the bar shortly after the shooting and within minutes after arriving at the bar an officer was dispatched to 1303 W. 12th St., Sanford, to pick him up.

According to police reports, Bryant called the police to say he wanted to turn himself in for questioning.

Bryant, a brakeshoe repairman, could have received up to 15 years in prison, although the state-recommended sentence is 3-7 years.

In other court action, a Georgia man pleaded guilty to trafficking in marijuana, a plea that carries a mandatory minimum 3-year sentence and $25,000 fine.

Tom Henry Patton, 64, of Riverdale, entered the plea Friday before Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. who set Oct. 26 for sentencing. He could receive up to 7 years behind bars.

Patton was arrested Feb. 22 with two other Georgia men and a DeBary couple after selling marijuana to undercover agents. He was the fifth and last person to plead in the case.

Patton initially failed to appear at his 8:30 a.m. plea hearing Friday and Mize issued a bench warrant for his arrest. However, after it was learned Patton had been waiting in his attorney's office, the warrant was withdrawn and he entered his plea at noon.

On Sept. 10, four of the five people arrested in the case pleaded guilty. Two have been sentenced.

Robert Poyner Adcock, 35, of 63 Estrella Drive, DeBary, was sentenced to 6 years with a minimum mandatory incarceration of 3 years plus a $25,000 fine for trafficking in marijuana. James Veal, 61, of Decatur, Ga., was sentenced to 5½ years and also must serve at least 3 years and pay a $25,000 fine.

Janie Kasaab, 32, of 154 Angels Road, DeBary, and Richard Thomas Patton, 29, Tom Patton's son, also of Riverdale, Ga., await sentencing later this month.

A Winter Springs woman who was arrested for driving under the influence and then was charged with possession of cocaine and hashish, when she was being booked in the Seminole County jail has pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine and drug paraphernalia.

Karen Louise Bokath, 21, of 859 Sheoah Circle, arrested June 12, was sentenced to 3 years probation by retired Circuit Judge Humes T. Lasher. She could have received up to a year in the county jail.

According to court records, officers who searched Bokath at the jail reported finding small quantities of cocaine along with a variety of pills including aspirin and caffeine in addition to drug paraphernalia in her purse.

The paraphernalia included a scale, mirror, straw and a razor blade, usually used with cocaine. A small pipe, a marijuana smoking device, a holding clip and several other items possibly related to the use of marijuana were also found, according to a sheriff's report.

Will The Debate Make Much Difference?

By Clay F. Richards
UPI Political Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Underdog Democrat Walter Mondale did what he had to do and held his own in his first debate with President Reagan — now it is up to the voters to decide whether it makes any difference.

Mondale stood up to the "great communicator," made the points he wanted to make and didn't make any serious mistakes. Reagan, as expected, gave his usual smooth performance in front of a television camera.

The first presidential debate Sunday night gave the American viewing public a clear view of two contrasting candidates for the nation's highest office.

At a time when Mondale is far behind in all the polls, it gave the voters a chance to focus on the Democratic contender and see where he stands in comparison to the current occupant of the White House.

Reagan, running on his record and saying that Americans are better off than when he came to office, asked for four more years to finish his job of reducing the impact of government on the American way of life.

Reagan said he had reduced inflation, reduced taxes, created 6 million new jobs, restored America's respect in the world, rebuilt the national defense and lowered interest rates.

Mondale, saying Reagan was laying a tremendous burden on future generations with high budget deficits, said the administration's social cuts have hurt the poor. He said it is time to bite the bullet and face higher taxes to lower the deficit.

The Democratic nominee said in a second term Reagan would take a "meat ax" to social programs, particularly Social Security, Medicaid and student aid programs.

On a wide range of topics — religion, abortion, leadership, agriculture, defense, arms control and the economy — the two contenders laid out their proposals in clear and concise terms.

For the first time Mondale was able to take his message directly to millions of American voters. He did so in a calm, articulate manner with none of the whining tone that has damaged some of his campaign appearances.

Reagan also came prepared, armed not with stories and anecdotes, but facts and figures to back up his statements.

As Mondale put it: "I think tonight, as we contrast for the first time... the American people will have the chance to weigh the two of us against each other."

Debates historically have not had a major impact on the polls or the outcome of the election. But this year there is a feeling among many political leaders and reporters that the voters were paying little attention to the election. The first debate could help put the campaign in focus.

'School Marm' Walters Keeps Things Under Control

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Barbara Walters moderated the nationally televised debate between President Reagan and Democrat Walter Mondale like a tough school marm in an unruly classroom.

The stern-faced ABC news correspondent patiently explained the rules before the test of words began Sunday night and then demanded quiet by an at times noisy audience and obedience by the candidates.

Once, she even admonished Reagan and Mondale, as if they were a pair of misbehaving pupils, for using their rebuttal time on certain questions to try to score points on other issues.

"I'm sitting here like the great school teacher letting you both get away with things because one did it, the other did it," Walters said shortly after the 90-minute debate began.

She said, "May I ask that in the future the rebuttal stick to what the rebuttal is."

Reagan and Mondale didn't dare challenge her. Later an appreciative Walters gave them a verbal pat on the head.

"You're both very obedient; I have to give you credit for that," Walters said before announcing the final round of questions.

She didn't find the audience as cooperative.

Twice she scolded the "invited guests" for cheering or clapping, saying the action was rude and disruptive and took time away from the debate.

Still, some members of the crowd at the Kentucky Center for the Arts found it impossible to stay mum. Their outbursts of laughter and applause became more restrained, however. Muffled patting of hands replaced spirited clapping.

Walters slapped the wrists of the campaign staffs of both Reagan and Mondale in an opening comment for their inability to agree on four journalists to serve as debate questioners. Just three were selected.

"I have been involved now in four presidential debates either as a moderator or as a panelist," Walters said. "In the past there was no problem selecting panelists."

"Tonight, however, there were to have been four panelists participating in this debate. The candidates were given a list of almost 100 qualified journalists from all the media and could agree on only these three fine journalists."

"As moderator and on behalf of my fellow journalists I very much regret, as does the League of Women Voters (the debate's sponsors) that this situation has occurred."

WORLD IN BRIEF

British Reported Targets Of Shiite Fundamentalists

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The Lebanese Army today closed all crossing points between the Christian and Moslem halves of the capital as the British Embassy postponed its scheduled reopening pending security improvements.

"The delay involves security, but I cannot say more," an embassy spokesman said. British diplomats on Sunday said they had hoped to return today to the embassy, which was closed late last week for work on its security system.

British Ambassador David Miers was not available to comment on a London newspaper report that the embassy offices were closed and diplomats dispersed because of an "acute danger" of an imminent terrorist attack.

The Foreign Office declined to comment on the Sunday Times report that also said Britain was considering withdrawing all of its diplomats from Lebanon.

Army Quells Racial Unrest

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The army today patrolled the black township of Soweto to help stop new outbreaks of racial unrest that have left at least 80 people dead nationwide in the last six weeks.

The troops were deployed alongside police Sunday for the first time since bloody protests erupted in South Africa's black ghettos over political rights, black education and rent hikes.

Ephraim Tsabalala, mayor of Soweto, an impoverished township of 1.5 million people about 10 miles southwest of Johannesburg, warned the government's plan to use the army to back riot police could lead to "more deaths than now and that is something we cannot afford."

Deployment of the troops coincided with new clashes Sunday between police and blacks.

Peres Arrives In U.S.

United Press International

Shimon Peres, making his first visit to the United States since becoming prime minister of Israel, said the focus of his trip will be the future of American aid to his financially beleaguered country.

Peres has said he would not ask for more U.S. money, although he said Sunday he wanted to focus his trip on "the future of American aid to Israel" in addition to discussing issues in the Middle East.

Israeli government sources two weeks ago said he would ask Washington for $700 million to $950 million in emergency aid in addition to $2.6 billion already approved by Congress.

Israeli news media have speculated Peres may try to rearrange the proportion of military and economic aid or perhaps delay the timetable for repayment.

figures and not with either reminding people how bad things were under Walter Mondale or in presenting people with a vision of the future," Dolan complained.

The Sunday night clash was the first of two debates between the candidates. The final confrontation is set for Oct. 21 in Kansas City, Mo., on foreign policy and national security issues. The vice presidential candidates meet for 90 minutes on Thursday for a debate in Philadelphia.

Mondale was aggressive in the debate, which ran 102 minutes, 12 minutes longer than scheduled, but avoided the rancor that slipped into the exchanges he had in the primary season with other Democratic aspirants. Several times, Mondale made a point of praising the president, saying Reagan did "some things to raise the sense of spirit and morale and good feeling in this country."

But his attacks frequently were pointed as well. He said Reagan failed to offer a real plan for lowering the federal deficit, while saying the Moral Majority would select Supreme Court justices in a second Reagan term.

Reagan sounded many of the themes he used against Jimmy Carter in 1980 and used one of the lines that proved most effective in his 1980 debate with Carter: "There you go again."

When Mondale kept accusing the president of planning to raise taxes, Reagan responded with an audible sigh and said, "You know, I wasn't going to say this at all, but I can't help it. There you go again. I don't have a plan to tax or increase taxes. I'm not going to increase taxes."

Mondale, however, appeared ready for that refrain, the most commonly remembered line from the '80 debate. Mondale reminded Reagan that he used the comment to accuse Carter of unjustly predicting that Reagan would cut the Medicare program.

"And what did you do right after the election? You went out and tried to cut $20 billion out of Medicare," Mondale said.

The candidates locked horns over the legality of abortion — a subject that has become a highly charged campaign issue and prompted one of the night's harshest exchanges.

Reagan pointed to a case in California in which a man who beat a pregnant woman so severely that her child was born dead. California passed a law to prosecute anyone who abuses a pregnant woman and causes the death of a fetus.

"Now isn't it strange that that same woman could have taken the life of her unborn child and it was abortion, and not murder, but if someone else does it, that a murder," Reagan said.

Mondale said Reagan's example had nothing to do with abortion. He said somebody "went to the woman and tried to kill her."

"In America, on basic moral questions, we've always let the people decide in their own personal lives. We haven't felt so insecure that we've reached for the club of state to have our own point of view. It's been a good instinct and we're the most religious people on earth," Mondale said.

The Democratic challenger also doggedly insisted Reagan will be forced to raise taxes in order to reverse the huge federal deficits that have been spiraling out of control.

"The president takes the position it will disappear by magic, it was once called voodoo economics," Mondale said in recalling the phrase that George Bush used against Reagan four years ago — before he became Reagan's running mate.

"Give us a plan," Mondale taunted.

Mondale said he respected Reagan's position on religion, but said he was upset by the "intrusion" of fundamentalists who want to shape the federal government to their own religious views.

Some of Mondale's harshest words dealt with proposals Reagan made early in his administration that would have cut Social Security and Medicare.

"The fact of the matter is that the president's budget wanted to cut Social Security by 25 percent," Mondale said. "The president says if you want to know what his program is for the next four years, look what I proposed in the past — so you know what's going to happen."

Reagan argued that he only proposed reductions that were supported by House Democrats in an attempt to save the Social Security program from going broke.

"A president should never say never ... but I'm going to break that rule ... I will never stand for a reduction of Social Security benefits," Reagan said.

A flap developed over selection of the journalists who made up the panel, primarily because both camps had freely exercised veto power. In the end, one slot was never filled after reporters balked at last-minute invitations.

The three journalists were Diane Sawyer of CBS, Fred Barnes of the Baltimore Sun and Jim Wieghart of Scripps-Howard. Barbara Walters of ABC served as moderator.

Refugees Fear Arrest At Home

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Some of the 140 East Germans taking refuge in the West German Embassy in Czechoslovakia fear arrest and imprisonment if they abandon their bid to emigrate to the West and return home, news reports say.

"The State Security Service interrogated me several times and made me take back my application to emigrate. They threatened me with imprisonment," a bearded young refugee said in an interview broadcast Sunday night on West German television.

The man was among a number of refugees who spoke to West German television last week before fleeing into the embassy in the baroque Lobkowitz Palace in Prague and refusing to leave unless granted permission to emigrate to the West.

The refugees, including 30 children, sleep on chairs and floors in almost all the rooms in the building and share four toilets with the 10 West German diplomats, the West German newspaper Bild am Sonntag reported Sunday.

The occupation is a major embarrassment for East Berlin, whose communist leaders this weekend marked the 35th anniversary of the establishment of the East German state with the motto "The German Democratic Republic Is My Home."

There has been no mention of the incident by East German media, but East Germans can receive West German television.

The refugees began arriving at the embassy about two weeks ago and the staff was forced to close the building on Thursday night after more than 80 had entered.

Even so, eight East Germans scrambled over an 8-foot iron fence around a garden at the back of the embassy Friday morning and got in through a rear door, reports said.

Bild am Sonntag said 50 East Germans had slipped into the embassy since it was closed. Bild and another West German newspaper, Welt am Sonntag, reported a total of 140 refugees, including 30 children, were inside.

Negotiations between Bonn and East Berlin reportedly hit a deadlock, with East Germany refusing to grant the refugees permission to emigrate, but promising them freedom from prosecution if they go home.

One woman interviewed by West German television was dubious about the pledge.

"We will be put in jail and our children in re-education homes," she said.

A man who was interviewed said he was committed to emigrating.

"We have broken off all our links at home," he said. "What can we do?"

Bild am Sonntag said one of the refugees is a doctor who has been giving tranquilizers to those who need them.

The newspaper said the Soviet Union was insisting the East German government take a hard line because the refugees are hurting the image of the Soviet bloc.

It is the third time this year East Germans have occupied West German diplomatic missions demanding to emigrate to the West.

Nicaraguan Elections Are Still On

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Nicaragua's ruling Sandinista Party is committed to a Nov. 4 national election despite pressures from the United States for a delay, junta leader Daniel Ortega reiterated.

Before completing a four-day California visit Sunday, Ortega spoke at a fund raiser at the home of actress Elizabeth Montgomery and her actor-husband, Robert Foxworth, where he asked members of the entertainment industry to help increase public awareness about U.S. involvement in Central America.

Earlier, Ortega told a panel of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel that efforts by a multinational group of mediators to fashion an election compromise between Nicaragua's leftist government and opposition groups had ended.

Winning Smile

Seminole High School student Krista Louise Henry was the winner in the Altamonte-South Seminole Jaycees' Seminole County Junior Miss Pageant held Sunday night at the Lyman High School auditorium. Miss Henry, who plans to study drama at Rollins College, displayed her acting talents for the judges. She was awarded a $300 scholarship from the Jaycees and a $500 scholarship by the Central Florida Computer Institute of Winter Park. She is scheduled to compete in the state pageant on March 5 in Pensacola and if successful there will go on to the national contest in Mobile, Ala. next July. First runner-up was Mellanie Jayne Boyd, the Herald's Seminole High School correspondent, who won a $300 scholarship. Second runner-up was Darlene Faye Krampe of Lake Brantley High School, winner of a $200 scholarship.

entirely came loose shortly before 4 p.m. EDT.

"All of a sudden it went down — boom," said Horace Robinson, a fisherman who saw the accident from a nearby bridge.

"The thing that was carrying the house was coming along fine. Then they got to right there (on the causeway) and it all tumbled down," said another fisherman, Nieves Gallardo.

The structure crumbled onto the bridge, sending a wave of rubble over several lanes of traffic. Traffic was halted on both sides of MacArthur Causeway and a massive traffic jam ensued.

A Miami police spokesman said the causeway would be blocked off at least until midnight.

Howell, who formerly owned the house with his wife, Dorothy, said the 16-room house was built in 1916 by Frederick Rand for Charles Munroe Brown, a furniture magnate. Brown leased it to John Ringling North of the Ringling circus family and later to Manuel Gomez, ex-president of Cuba, Mrs. Howell said.

The ocean-side house featured floors made of Florida pine without the use of nails, and large windows that kept a constant breeze flowing, making air conditioning unnecessary.

The walls, made of coral rock, were 18 inches to 24 inches

Good Nutrition Crucial In Building Up Muscles

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 24, male, 5 feet 11 and weigh 175. I do stretching exercises and lift weights. I'm interested in building muscle tissue now that I've worked off most of my body fat. I read that amino acids are essential for building muscle. Do they convert the body fat into energy? I'm taking multivitamins now, but shouldn't I take more concentrated doses of these vitamins? I want to build muscle the healthy way, without using steroids.

I have some bad eating habits. I only eat meats, bread, potatoes and corn, no green vegetables at all. I know this is not healthy, but I simply cannot eat the other stuff. Are there any vitamins I can take to make up for this lack of green nutrition?

DEAR READER — Proper nutrition is very important for developing muscles. You need a balanced diet, and you should include green vegetables in your diet. You need the bulk and minerals they supply. In addition to the vitamins. However, if you take a general-purpose multivitamin tablet, pill or capsule, it will meet all your vitamin requirements. Taking additional amounts will not help you, nor will it improve your muscle-building program.

You need enough calories to provide the energy you need. If you don't get enough calories, the protein in your diet will be used for energy and your muscle-building program will suffer. Each pound of new muscle contains 100 grams of protein, which must be supplied by your diet. You can easily get the complete protein you need from lean meat and milk. The complete proteins they contain have all the amino acids you need or can benefit from.

Of course, you have to follow a proper exercise program, too. I have discussed the main points of diet and exercise for muscle building in a new issue of The Health Letter, Special Report 18, Strength Training: How and Why.

Carbohydrates are important in a muscle-building program. They provide the muscle glycogen that is the main source of energy for your initial exercise period. Those short-duration maximum contractions mostly use glycogen that is already stored in your muscle.

DEAR DR. LAMB — At age 5 I had a right inguinal hernia repair. Then, as a teenager, I noticed that my erections were horizontal. At 30, I had a left inguinal hernia repair. Since then, although I have a full erection, it isn't even horizontal, but is pointed down.

DEAR READER — Hernia surgery would not have any effect on erection or subsequent sexual performance, but there are many other reasons for minor variations, many of which have no effect on sexual performance.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Expert partnerships always have careful guidelines to determine whether a four no-trump bid is asking for ace or simply inviting a slam. Even when four no-trump is invitational, the normal expert agreement is that the partner of the four no-trump bidder will answer aces when his hand warrants accepting the invitation. So it was with the current deal. The five-club bid by South showed either zero or four aces, and North carried on to six with confidence.

The bidding was fine, but our declarer got trapped in the play. Cover the East and West hands, and plan what you would do in six no-trump with the opening lead of the spade jack. South won the spade queen in dummy and promptly led the queen of clubs. When that lost to the king in the West hand, the slam was set because declarer no longer had sufficient entries to dummy. He needed to get to dummy twice, the first time to lead to his jack of hearts and the second time to score the heart king.

The winning line after winning the spade queen is to immediately lead a heart to the jack. If that wins, declarer simply gives up a club to the king and collects 12 tricks. If it loses, he can still play ace of hearts, get to dummy with a diamond to throw his third diamond on the heart king, and then fall back on the club finesse.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY
OCTOBER 9, 1984

This coming year you are apt to fare better in enterprises where you rely on yourself rather than on others. Think twice before entering into partnership arrangements.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you're very tactful and diplomatic when dealing with others. However, today, you might step out of character and be accused of being domineering. Major changes are in store for Librans in the coming year. Send for your year ahead predictions today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't permit others to put you in a position today where you are forced to work under pressure. Keep them out of your affairs and set your own agenda.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec.

21) Steer clear of situations today where you may have to side with one friend against another. Regardless of who you choose, you'll be wrong.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not be the one who initiates a domestic rumble today. If you assume a "don't do as I do, but do as I say" posture, you'll be asking for trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is not a good day to impose your ideas on others. A philosophy that has proven beneficial to you may not be tailored to their needs.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Business dealings are likely to be more complicated than they appear on the surface today. It will prove wise not to accept things at face value.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In a situation where you share a vested interest with an associate, bend over backwards to be fair today. Selfishness will create complications.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Co-workers won't appreciate it today if you act as a self-appointed supervisor. Do your thing and let them do theirs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Members of the opposite sex might not see you as charismatic as you envision yourself to be today. Be careful or someone may puncture your ego.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not stray from your own sphere of influence today. If you try to project your authority in other areas, you're in danger of being out of bounds.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to be tolerant today of persons who are not in accord with your ideas. They are entitled to their opinions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Instead of spending extravagantly, put something away for a rainy day. If you don't, when you need it later, your wallet may be holding only faded photographs.
