BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

A GOOD NAME THE BEST ASSET:—A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favour rather than silver and gold.—Proverbs 22:1.

In England they have many die hard just as they have in this country, but we never know before that they also have many "Die British." Tomatoes come over there are insisting that Britishers buy only British made tomatoes for their graves. Hence, the slogan, "Die British."

Another person we feel sorry for these days is Colonel Lindbergh whose personal satisfaction over seeing the slayers of his son punished must be more than offset by the revival of the unpleasant memories of the whole tragedy.

Someone is quoted in the Daytona Beach Sun-Record as saying, "My business would be better if there were more of the NRA and fewer violations." The trouble with that is if there were more of the NRA, there would be more violations.

According to Foss Hathaway, the government proposes to encourage home building by providing credit facilities for lending eighty percent of the value of the lot and the completed home. In other words if you have a $1,000 lot, you can build a $3,000 house on it, and borrow 80 percent of $4,000, or $3,200 on it. Such credit arrangements will stimulate a great deal more home building than any Homestead Exemption Amendment will.

Interviewed recently with regard to his present attitude toward the NRA, Henry Ford said that the depression will not be over until everyone goes back to work. Asked if that will be this winter, he replied, "If Santa Claus goes to bed, it will." "Who do you mean by Santa Claus? The government?" Mr. Ford was asked. "You know dang well what I mean," he said.

According to one authority on proposed changes in NRA set-up, new policies will embrace the elimination of price-fixing, the freeing of small industries from the code system, the elimination of production limitations, and separate treatment for natural resource industries, with competition terminated under strict governmental supervision. Re-organization along this line would revive much of the Blue Eagle's waning popularity.

Another gangster prisoner, trying to make a jail break, has lost his life because he read the newspapers but failed to read the newspapers. Getting his cue from John Dillinger who "shot his way out of prison" with a wooden pistol, Charles Mackey, restless in Ohio's state penitentiary, molded soap into the shape of a revolver and tried to hold up his guards. He was killed. He used the wrong kind of soap.

Advocates of the Homestead Exemption Amendment do not publicly admit that a sales tax will be enacted if the amendment carries, but privately they will tell you that a sales tax is unavoidable whether the amendment carries or not. However, they claim that it will be small, will not exceed 1% or possibly 2% per cent, and will be levied on the purchase of goods.

Too Big A Job

General Johnson's stormy patrol of the NRA is out. After a little more than a year as czar of American industry, the Administrator of the National Recovery Act has resigned. Though President Roosevelt has given assurances that the best features of the NRA will be preserved, it is difficult to imagine the Blue Eagle without the swash-buckling ex-cavalryman perched somewhere near its roost.

Hailed by everyone as an ideal choice to lead American industry out of the doldrums, General Johnson was praised for several months following his appointment as a fearless, fair, honest and intelligent executive. His experience as executive in charge of Selective Service, and his membership on the War Industries Board during the war, as well as his connection with a number of big industrial enterprises following the war, and his long military record were often cited as examples of his fitness for the job.

However, the job of running every business in the country is not an easy one. As a result of the delegation of power by the Congress to the President and through him to General Johnson, the Blue Eagle Chief-tain soon became the ruler of business with authority almost beyond comprehension. He could approve or disapprove any code which an industry might submit. He could raise or lower wages not only in the minimum group but also in the higher brackets. He could fix hours of operation as well as hours of labor to suit himself. He could raise or lower prices at will. And it is needless to add he made full use of the powers granted him.

It can be said to General Johnson's credit that his decisions were probably always prompted by the best of motives. But they did not always work to the best interest of capital, labor, or the country generally. It was perhaps too much to expect of any one man that he could run every business in the United States successfully. However this may be, it was not long before he had offended everyone. Management thought him partial to Labor and Labor thought him partial to management. Practically everyone of the thousands of rulings he was called upon to issue made someone sore.

General Johnson's plight reminds us strongly of the story of the man, the boy, and the donkey. In trying to please everyone, he succeeded in pleasing no one. Or perhaps the General was not trying to please anyone. If so, he succeeded admirably well. Wages have not been raised high enough to please Labor, as indicated by the recent textile strike. Yet costs of operation have been increased so greatly as to bring forth the almost universal protests of business and industrial organizations.

While it is probably true that General Johnson did as good a job as anyone else could have done under the circumstances, he strikes us as a pathetic example of a man who bit off more than he could chew.

That Tree Belt

It probably will not come as any particular blow to President Roosevelt that Comptroller McCull has ruled against the use of some $15,000,000 of the drought relief funds for the purpose of planting a tree belt from Canada to the Gulf. The decision was based on the technical point that the funds were appropriated for drought relief and that planting trees, even for the purpose of preventing similar droughts a generation or two hence, cannot be construed strictly as drought relief.

Although a similar plan is said to have been tried successfully in Russia many years ago, considerable doubt has developed as to the feasibility of the plan for this country since it was first suggested. Critics of the plan point out that it would probably cost nearer a billion dollars than a hundred million to plant a sufficient number of trees to do any good. Further, they say, that since the belt is in the drought area, each individual tree would have to be watered by man in order to keep it from dying during the first ten years of its existence.

Also there seems to be some question as to the results which might be expected from such a tree belt after it was developed. It would probably eliminate to a large extent soil erosion, and such moisture as did happen to fall from the heavens undoubtedly would be longer retained. But trees do not make it rain, no matter how wide the belt or how long. In such a drought as the country had this summer, the moisture in the soil would be quickly exhausted and very probably the trees themselves would suffer as seriously as the fields of wheat.

However, the most discouraging feature of the whole program is that it might work. By carefully nourishing the trees during their first twenty or thirty years it might be possible to construct a sufficient windbreak and to provide for the retention of sufficient moisture in the soil to make impossible such disastrous results as occurred this summer when the drought destroyed millions of acres of wheat and corn. Then one bumper crop would follow another until an even more drastic Agricultural Adjustment program would have to be devised by our descendants in order to eliminate the surplus production. Yes, we have a hunch that President Roosevelt was mighty glad to get the Comptroller's ruling.

SANFORD TWENTY YEARS AGO

One of the prettiest home weddings solemnized in Sanford recently was that of Miss Linda Laffler and Mr. Braxton Perkins Wednesday afternoon with the Rev. A. S. Peck, rector of Holy Cross Church, officiating. Mrs. Fannie E. Manson, one of Sanford's finest musicians, played the bridal music. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, William Laffler, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. J. D. Roberts. Miss Susanna Laffler, a sister of the bride, was the charming maid of honor. The bride was very lovely in a stylish going-away gown of Copenhagen blue and she had a bouquet of beautiful bride's roses.

The bride and groom took the afternoon train for Jacksonville where they left via Clyde Line for New York and other northern cities. Upon their return they will go to Jacksonville. The bride has spent her life in this city, her parents being among Sanford's earliest settlers, and she has a host of friends who wish to see her again.

More Light On The "Surplus Economy"

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

When Robert W. Deane, not long ago challenged the theory of an "economy of abundance" it led to a considerable disputation, rather facilitated by the fact that Mr. Deane seemed to have been a trifle hasty with his statistics and careless about his definitions. Such faults can scarcely be alleged against the research workers of the Brookings Institution, who have just issued their "America's Capacity to Consume" (the second of three volumes upon the relationships between production, consumption and savings in the United States. Yet, they arrive by rather different statistical methods) at Mr. Deane's conclusion that the "economy of abundance" is in an important sense a myth. In the peak year of 1929 about 40 percent of the population was living on a poverty or bare subsistence level. It is true that at that time the country had an "excess" productive capacity. Had the plant been run at full blast, however, on the average work week at that time of about fifty-one hours, it could only have turned out some $16,000,000,000 more consumptive goods than were actually produced. And how far would that have gone? An illustrative answer is given by another computation. If all the family incomes of less than $2,500 a year could have been raised to that very modest figure, the additional consuming power made available would have been more than enough to take up all the goods that it was physically possible to produce in 1929.

Since nobody can consume what has not been produced, this represents an outside theoretical limit to the abundance we might have had with our 1929 plant, and a family income of $2,500 a year at 1929 prices is certainly no very lavish abundance. It is far indeed from the satisfaction of even the most modest human needs and desires; yet it follows that if the work week is now to be reduced, on the "surplus economy" theory to forty or thirty hours, there must be still less available for consumption, even supposing very considerable improvements in productive efficiency. The calculation works out to show that even if a thirty-hour week were offset by a 25 percent increase in man-hour productivity, there would still be only nine-tenths as much consumption goods available as were consumed in 1929. So much for "solving the paradox of want in the midst of plenty" by doing away with the "plenty."

Unfortunately, there is another side to the matter. If in 1929 we were equipped to produce $16,000,000,000 worth of goods that never came into existence, despite the fact that 40 percent of the population was on the poverty line, then in another sense there was a "surplus economy." The gap is too large to be comfortable, and it is this gap (now greatly widened) between potential jobs and earnings and actual production that explains the scramble on the part of capital, labor and agrarian alike to limit the other fellow's production so that there will be some for the abundance we might have had with our 1929 plant, and a family income of $2,500 a year at 1929 prices is certainly no very lavish abundance.

Tampa Dentist Wins Right To Practice

TALLAHASSEE, Sept. 27. — (AP)—Dr. J. Hol Williams of Tampa Monday won in the supreme court his fight to reverse an order by the State Board of Dental Examiners revoking his license to practice dentistry. The board was ordered to restore his license. The court held that Dr. Williams' license could not be revoked by the dental board because the acts charged against him were committed during a time when a law prohibiting them had been declared unconstitutional by the Hillsborough county circuit court.

NYE APPLAUDS LEGION PLAN OF PROFITLESS WAR

But Senator Says Body Hasn't Looked Far Enough Into Future

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27. — (AP)—An American Legion plan to take the profits out of war was applauded yesterday by Chairman Nye of the Senate Munitions Committee.

Nye told newsmen the only trouble with the ex-service men's suggestion was that it didn't go far enough. John Thomas Taylor, Legion legislative representative here, predicted the national Legion convention at Miami next month would advocate stiff penalties for war-time profiteers and a universal draft law. He said commodity and labor prices should be "frozen" in event of war at an average of the prices prevailing for three years previously; and that the government should take away 95 percent of any abnormal profits.

Welcoming these views, Nye nevertheless differed with the Legion leader on government control of munitions-making.

"The private munitions manufacturer must be destroyed or regulated more closely than any other private business," the Senate investigator declared, making it clear he strongly favored governmental monopoly of the production of essential munitions of war.

"The government can't do that," Taylor contended in an interview. "It hasn't the facilities. It cannot hope to maintain, in peacetime, an industrial organization prepared to meet the demands of war."

"Government factories established to make munitions exclusively would drift toward dangerous idleness in times of peace. Under such a system the necessary skilled mechanics would not be available when an emergency arose."

Washington Daybook

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27. — There is a "Hoover policy" on the side of law today that seems for sensational turns before the last is heard of this Lindbergh case arrest. Back of it is the vigorous lawyer-sleuth, J. Edgar Hoover.

It is, to use his words, "not only to get the criminals themselves but also all those who have aided or harbored them in the slightest."

When he spoke, it was the country at large attacking crime through the justice department bureau of investigation which he heads. In the lesser aspect, it was a card-catalogue mind; a mind replete with painstaking addenda by which to develop clues.

That power now is definitely united with the police authority of New Jersey on one side and justice has been served against the killers of the Lindbergh infant.

No final disposition is expected for some time. Two and one-half years of detailed labor had to be put in before the big break came.

The latest break itself presents a mass of minute possibilities, each of which has to be tracked down to make the "Hoover policy" a more feared and valuable weapon against the lawless.

What does it mean? It means that simply nothing will be taken for granted until every last dollar of the $50,000 ransom that can be accounted for is accounted for.

Less than one-half has been located. Every bill above that is a potential lead to one who aided or harbored the kidnapers. Every one spent has passed through hands that might conceivably have been able to point to the guilty, but did not.

To carry the "Hoover policy" out completely means to trace those bills even more assiduously than in the months past; and—if the abduction was not a one-time job—more prosecutions. It has been done before, and by Hoover's men.

"In the Urschel kidnaping case," he reminded recently, "I arrested 15 who aided the man; and, what's more, every one. Before long the same story will find it unsafe to keep a man or ransom money away by our agents, and it will cease to be a task."

When he talks like that it explains why some say they would rather be hunted by "wolves" than by the federal men.

"The federal men" it must be remembered, however, must work and again work closely with state and local police authorities to achieve their ends. Both units have advantages, the federal from the great national resources of crime information at the justice department, the local from their peculiar knowledge of local conditions and criminals.

The best results will be gained from more co-operation than independence. The way the federal and state agencies team up now will be watched for that very reason.

They have the advantage of united national support. There is none of this sentiment called "heroizing of criminals" to bother them.

YOUR DAUGHTERS ARE WELL FED AT STATE COLLEGE

Be Glad You're Not Having To Prepare Food For 1700 Girls

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Sept. 27.—If the average Florida housewife gets sort of tired preparing a meal for her family, she may find some rest and satisfaction in these figures on how much the 1,700 girls at Florida State College eat.

When soup is served at a meal, the college kitchen is called upon to supply 160 gallons of it, or if the order is mashed potatoes, the girls eat 800 pounds, prepared with 15 gallons of milk and 10 pounds of butter.

A whole yardful of chickens is required to supply a meal. Miss Anna May Tracy, college dietitian, today said she orders 800 pounds of chicken when she selects it as the meat for a meal.

And eggs—for breakfast, 240 dozen are scrambled together. That's 2,880 eggs. There's nothing wrong with the appetites of these girls at Florida State College for Women, Miss Tracy points out.

While a housewife goes to the corner grocery and orders a three-pound roast, Miss Tracy calls for 475 pounds of beef, or 650 pounds of baked ham, or 800 pounds of fresh pork.

Four men in the college kitchen work six hours to prepare enough green beans for a meal—12 ham-pers. And if its spinach, or collards, or other greens, Miss Tracy orders 35 to 40 bushels. An order for carrots calls for 700 pounds, while one meal requires 28 crates of cauliflower.

And in addition to these foods—all of which are not needed in one day—the college uses daily 40 pounds of coffee, 100 pounds of butter, two barrels of flour, 150 pounds of sugar, 130 gallons of milk, and six gallons of cream.

When Miss Tracy orders ice cream for a meal, the college dairy must supply 65 gallons of it. Each day, the college bakery turns out 100 loaves weighing 2 1/2 pounds each, 230 dozen biscuits or muffins, 140 dozen cookies and 48 gallons of pudding.

The college claims its kitchen is the biggest in any educational institution in the South. It contains nearly half an acre of floor space. The kitchen employs 60 persons.

Special diets are arranged for students when necessary, and when ordered by the college physician.

Growers Attack "Bulge" Packing Of Celery Crop

Charles Dunn, Roy Symes, and George Balme were selected as alternates for Mr. Chapman, Mr. Melach, Sr., and Mr. Danner, respectively. The latter three selected the alternates, and the entire group ratified the action.

The "bulged pack" condemnation was introduced by Jake Bolly, West Side grower who warned his hearers that unless they immediately abandoned the idea of shipping "bulged pack" celery crates that often weighed as high as 100 pounds, a freight rate increase as high as 30 percent is not unlikely this season.

"We should demand of our organization," Mr. Bolly said, "that the size of our packages be limited to 71 pounds, no more and no less. I have learned that inspectors will weigh our celery crates this season, and if they are beyond the 71 pound limit, we're going to get higher freight rates."

Mr. Bolly also declared that an end should be put to the delivered sales plan of sending cars into northern markets and awaiting outcome of sales. He suggested that the growers of Sanford recommend to the Control Committee that growers and shippers be required to cut the size of their packs to 71 pounds, and that FOB shipping point sales should be substituted for the present delivered sales method.

The growers unanimously approved his suggestions which were

NRA BOARD TO BE HEADED BY CAROLINA MAN

Reynolds Tobacco Tycoon Is Chairman Of 5-Man Body That Will Direct Program

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. — (AP) — The new National Industrial Recovery board set up to administer NRA reported today it had organized with Clay Williams of North Carolina as its chairman. The Recovery board selected Leon Marshall of Baltimore as executive secretary.

It requested Colonel George Lusk to serve as administrative officer. He has been acting administrator in the absence of General Hugh Johnson who has resigned.

A two board command last night was placed by President Roosevelt over the NRA that Hugh S. Johnson once dominated single-handed.

One committee of six administrative officials was selected to set under the direction of Donald R. Richberg in performing the vital task of framing future policies of the government's relations to business.

A second, composed of two industrialists, two labor experts and a college professor, was named by Mr. Roosevelt "to administer, under my direction" the Industrial Recovery law.

On this board are: Clay Williams, president of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. A. D. Whiteside, former deputy administrator under the Johnson regime and president of Dunn & Humstreet. Sidney Hillman, New York labor leader.

Leon C. Marshall, professor in the school of law of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

Old Depression Nearly Conquered, Claims Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. — (AP) — Confidence that a unified attack "for a little while longer" would conquer "Old Man Depression" was expressed today by President Roosevelt in addressing the 1934 conference on the Mobilization for Human Needs.

To assembled leaders of a group at the White House, the President emphasized that it was up to local communities to carry the primary burden of relief.

He called it a privilege rather than a duty of the individual American to share in relief. "It is that personal appeal," he said, "a unity of effort for a little while longer will, I am confident, bring national success to our national unified efforts to bring Old Man Depression to the point where we can finally master and destroy him."

The President said there had been some inefficiency in emergency efforts to alleviate distress but that he looked forward to even greater efficiency.

He told the conference which is headed by Newton D. Baker of Ohio that it was his duty to see that "out of all that destitution is relieved and no family shall be entitled to public assistance if that individual or that family does not deserve it."

Private Relief Agencies Lauded By Herbert Hoover

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 28. — (AP) — Observing that "the kind of radiance of sympathy and encouragement which goes with voluntary efforts, cannot be reproduced by bureaucrats," Herbert Hoover yesterday lauded voluntary service in the relief of distress.

The former president was the guest of honor and the principal speaker at this city's community chest exposition. "We have needed every agency in the disasters of the past five years," he said, "and I know of no greater evidence of the growing idealism of our race than has been shown during this period. The twenty-odd million families who have had employment have with many courage and womanly sympathy taken the burden of support of that 4,000,000 families whose bread winners have been rendered idle for no fault of their own."

Atlanta, lying in both Fulton and De Kalb counties, voted 9441 for repeal and 3783 against repeal. The mayor said the legislative representatives of the two counties "should not dodge the issue by advocating any further referendum, for among their constituency, the referendum has been held, and it is decisive."

GOLD POLICY HELD NEEDED FOR RECOVERY

Advisory Council Says Return To Old Policy Must Precede Any Real Prosperity

CHICAGO, Sept. 28. — A return to the gold standard must precede any real or permanent recovery, the federal advisory council said yesterday in a statement to the federal reserve board and member banks.

The statement, agreed to at a meeting of the council in Washington Sept. 18, was issued by Walter Lichtenstein, secretary, and was addressed to the federal reserve board, the federal reserve banks and each member bank of the federal reserve system.

1. A return to the gold standard must precede recovery.
2. Currency of a fluctuating value is a deterrent to business.
3. A definitely stated program for balancing the budget is essential to restoration of business confidence.
4. The use of government money in competition with private capital should cease.
5. The steadily mounting government debt constitutes a danger to the public credit.
6. The currency and credit supply now existing are ample for an expansion of business and demands for currency inflation and without sound basis.
7. The history of inflation shows it ends in utter disaster for every class but one—the speculators.

Making one of his first addresses in a month Mr. Roosevelt spoke by radio to the fourth annual women's conference on current problems, sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

"We as a people are less inclined to believe those who would create fear or encourage panic," he said. "More and more people are doing their own thinking. The number of poll parrots in our midst is steadily declining for which we must be very thankful. More and more men and women are looking up to their own facts and forming their own opinions."

The President cited an instance yesterday of what he classed as rumors from Wall Street. In this case he said it was purported that three members of his cabinet, the secretaries of the treasury, labor and agriculture departments as well as the under-secretary of agriculture were resigning.
