School Board's Higher Levy No Tax Hike: State

When is a tax increase not a tax increase? When it's a this year from last year's $7. Seminole County School Board levy.

Or so they can say.

The tax rate for Seminole County residents will increase this year, but because of a quirk in the law, school officials don't have to call it an increase.

rate will rise to $7.13 per $1,000 of assessed valuation - not increase the total income, legally there will be no tax

But last year's tax revenue was subsidized by $819,000 from the state to compensate for tax dollars lost when the state enacted its $25,000 homestead exemption, Harris said.

When the state funds were eliminated this year, more Assistant Superintendent for Finance Roger Harris local tax dollars were needed to generate the same told school board members Monday night the overall tax amount of income. But because the higher tax rate will

The taxpayers will be paying what the state will fail to pay." Harris added. Harris also quickly agreed, however. that the public could be misled by such rhetoric and noted it in fact is an increase in the tax rate, albeit the district will raise the same amount of money from the levy as it did this fiscal year, but that the increase was necessary to offset the deficit from the loss of state. Since the district would have had to levy $1.87 per funds, although the tax base also increased. The increase in the tax base, according to Harris, was insufficient to make up the loss of state funds.

In addition to eliminating the funds to compensate for taxes lost through homestead exemptions the state also made changes in the way the districts can levy taxes.

A celling of $1.10 per $1,000 assessed valuation was placed on the discretionary tax the district can levy. See LEVY, page 4A

Zoo's Threat Fails To Budge Women's Clubs

By Donna Estes Herald Staff Writer

Despite the Central Florida Zoo's threat to sue, the county's combined women's clubs remained adamant Monday in their refusal to continue making a promised donation of $1,185 every three months because they're still not convinced the zoo won't be moved to Orange County. They voted to wait until the group can get advice from its. attorney and a decision from its full membership in October.

At a special meeting, the Seminole County Federation of Women's Clubs stood pat on a decision made nine months ago to stop quarterly contributions to the zoo because they don't want to give money amounting to thousands of dollars each year as long as there is a possibility the zoo will be moved to Orlando.

"We are not connected with the turkeys at Turkey Lake," said Grace Bradford, president of the federation, referring to the much talked about possible site of a relocated

"The zoo ain't moving." Newman Brock, president of the zoological socicty, told the women, adding that it's a shame there is such an air of distrust of the zoo by the federation.

Claudia Behrens, treasurer of the federation, said the organization has given the zoo over $9,000. She explained that the federation donates money to the zoo on a regular basis from two differe t funds. One donation comes from the interest earned from an $11,000 certificate of deposit that is sent automatically into the zoo bank account for food for the animals.

A second fund was established with money earned through the sale of property located on the Wekiva River and donated to the federation in 1924. When the property was sold in 1980, the federation agreed in writing to give the 200, $1,185 per quarter from that fund.

But, Mrs. Bradford complained, the federation has never received a report from the zoo on what its money is being used for, nor has the federation been invited to meetings or offered a positon on the board of directors, nor even listed among the donors to the zoo.

She reminded the women that the federation voted unanimously nine months ago on advice from its attorney. Kenneth W. Melntosh, to withhold the quarterly payments until absolute assurance is received that the zoo will not be moved out of Seminole County.

"We didn't mean for our money to go out of this county ever,"Mrs. Bradford

Melntosh received a letter from Brock In June, demanding release of the three quarterly payments and warning that if the payments are not made the zoo will take the federation to court to get the

Noting that the organization over the years has contributed money to many worthwhile causes, Mrs. Bradford said this is the first time, the recipient "of a handout has threatened to sue" us.

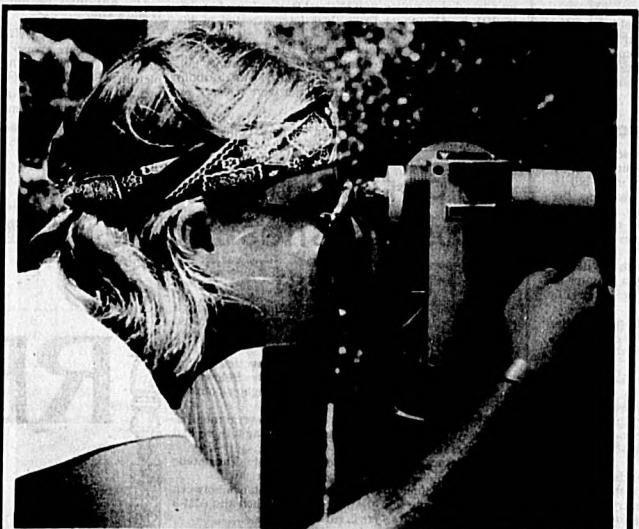

The vote of the women to stand pat for the time being on its previous decision came after Brock and past zoological society president Gerald Ruthery left the meeting.

Rutberg attempted to bring "peace to the valley" by suggesting a compromise whereby the zoo society would agree that the funding from the federation would end if the zoo were moved out of Seminole County, But Brock responded that he and Rutberg could not offer a compromise until the zoo board votes on

Prior to Brock's and Rutherg's arrival. Mrs. Bradford said scuttlebut has it that the zoo society will return the large mammals at the zoo to Circus World and Sea World, leaving only a few birds at the present zoo site, south of U.S. 17-92 and the lakefront, just outside the city limits of Sanford.

"I don't believe we have a county commission here that will let them hold on to that property if the zoo moves to Orlando," Mrs. Bradford said. The zoo society currently leases the property on which the facility is located from the county for $1 per year.

Getting In Line

With an eye to the future, Seminole County instrument technician Jerry Jandula surveys for placement of grading stakes for the widening of Red Bug Lake Road, called one the county's most congested roads. Four-laning of 1,000 feet of the road is expected to take a month and is preliminary to state construction of an overpass at the Red Bug-State Road 436 intersection in Casselberry.

Firm Gets Demolish Reprieve

Officers of two Sanford firms were given a new deadline of Aug. 5 to clean up and demolish an abandoned chemical plant on Country Club Road or the city of Sanford will do it for them and record a lein against the property.

The Sanford City Commission has been threatening to condemn and raze the old abandoned Chemical and Fertilizer Corp. plant at 2300 Country Club Road since late April because city building officials have declared it an attractive nuisance, a safety hazard and a fire hazard.

But on the suggestion of Commissioner David Farr, an additional two weeks was granted Monday night after an official of Liquid Foods Inc., which owns the immediately adjacent property, said his firm is buying the property and plans to demolish the building and clean up the parcel.

The official said all that is holding up closing the purchase on the property is a report on soil samples taken at the site certifying that no hazardous chemicals remain in the soil there. In addition. Liquid Foods attorney. Phil Logan, must approve a contract for sale from Seaboard Coastline Systems, owner of the parcel.

City Attorney Bill Colbert told the Liquid Foods representative that his firm could proceed with cleanup and demolishing the structure if Seaboard Systems approves without waiting for the contracts to be completed.

Commissioner Milton Smith told Spencer Douglass, who was president of the defunct chemical company, that he has been "dillydallying" with cleaning up the facility. Douglass is now president of Douglass Chemical and Fertilizer Company of Lake Mary.

Knowles showed color slides of a "half-hearted effort" to clean up the Chemical and Fertilizer Corp. facility a couple weeks ago when some grass was mowed and some minor clean-up took place.

The plant was abandoned soon after the April. 1982 hall storm in which it was damaged. City staff reported to the Commission in late April that the plant presented fire, safety and sanitation hazards.-Donna Estes

Refuse Decision Delayed

A decision on whether the city of Sanford will go out of the garbage collection business in favor of franchising the service out to private enterprise was delayed for two weeks by the Sanford City Commission Monday night to give the elected officials time to "chew on the proposal."

While city residents are paying $7.25 per month for city garbage collection now and stand to see that fee rise to $8.50 monthly on Aug. 1, the cost under the private enterprise system would be $7.24 monthly or Industrial Waste Services (IWS) has offered to do the pickups at a cost per customer to the city of $6.40 monthly and City Manager. W.E. "Pete" Knowles said that cost would rise to $7.24 monthly when administrative costs were added.

Under the proposal the city of Sanford would do billing and collecting for the firm and place a city supervisor in charge of answering complaints from the residents and seeing that the firm provides quality

Although IWS has discussed the ssue thoroughly with city staff. Knowles said that under the law the city would have to put the nonexclusive franchise out to bid and IWS might or might not win the City Commissioner David Fart said the board to make a decision would have to consider whether: city residents would receive as good service as currently provided by the city and would save money. Farr said it is obvious the people would save money and it looks like they would receive comparable service.

Mayor Lee P. Moore said the term of the franchise recommended is five years with the price guaranteed for three years. "At the end of the three years, the city has lost control of what the citizens will pay," he

However, Louis J. Forte, representing IWS, asked, "Who knows what's going to happen in five years?" He said with technical advances in the disposal of solid waste (garbage), it is conceivable the costs in five years would be less than today and thus the rates would be cheaper. He noted that any

'Hurricane Seminole' Tests County Preparedness

By Micheal Beha Herald Staff Writer

Winds of 95 miles per hour whipped through Central Florida Friday, dropping more than 12 inches of rain on the county and causing at least 17 deaths and untold damage in the area. But no one outside of Seminole County's Emergency Operations Center at the Five Points complex felt a thing. Even though Hurricane Seminole ripped through the area making 70 percent of the highways in the county impassable and spawning a series of tornadoes. That's because Hurricane Seminole was a "paper" hurricane. It existed only to test the readiness of officials who are responsible for the safety and welfare of county residents. The drill began realistically enough at 10 a.m. when county officials signed in and were assigned to their emergency operational groups. That realism set the tone for the day as nearly every calamity imaginable struck during the exercise in which officials tested their wits and the procedures

The drill's scenario was simple - a hurricane had struck the western coast of Florida and was heading toward Seminole County. Also heading for Seminole County were about 28,000 evacuees from the west coast. Emergency shelters had to be set up. Schools, churches and government buildings were converted into emergency shelters and emergency supplies were procured for the evacuees.

As the hurricane drew closer, things got worse. Residents in mobile homes had to be alerted to the danger so they could move to the shelters. The media had to be notified to make the general public aware of the coming storm. County firefighters, police, road crews American Red Cross were responsible for and other government employees were placed on standby alert to be ready to respond to emergencies. Hospitals were alerted to expect injuries.

By 11 a.m. the hurricane had been sighted in Seminole County and all emergency preparations were stopped. A tornado struck a Casselberry mobile home park. The rains caused extensive flooding adjacent to Lake Monroe, Lake ·lessup and Lake Harney.

At 11:15 the wind was blowing 90 miles per hour. But 25 minutes later, the wind had dropped to 35 miles per hour and officials initially thought the storm had skirted the area with only a minimum of damage. Then the eye of the hurricane was located over Lake

And although the winds had subsided, the reports had not.

A propane truck struck a tour bus, 15 people were reported killed and 20 were hurt. Heavy waves from Lake Monroe washed out U.S. Highway 17-92 between Lake Monroe Inn and the Central Florida Zoo. A tornado struck the zoo and two Bengal tigers escaped from the compound. Two firefighters were killed after a train carrying chlorine derailed.

County commissioners, Administrator T. Duncan Rose, Public Safety Director Gary Kaiser, Sheriff John Polk and school board officials are on the executive committee which makes policy decisions in disaster situations. The drill also pointed out the need for a large overlay map so that county Rose said the drill "was a massive officials can follow the storm and the request for aid.

Rose said county officials will prepare written reports on their roles in the drill, spelling out observations and potential weaknesses to the plan. Those reports will be worked into the county's emergency plan in a few months, he said. "We're going to be even better prepared."

Produce Broker Ordered To Pay For Tomatoes

A Casselberry produce broker has been ordered by Commissioner of Agriculture Doyle Conner to pay a Florida producer for four truckloads of tomatoes.

Under the state License and Bond law, Emerson H. Elliott, doing business as Emerson Elliott Produce of 261 Live Oak Boulevard, was ordered to pay $5,470 for the tomatoes, received in March and April 1982 from Homestead Tomato Packing Company, a Florida City grower and shipper.

Dealers in agricultural products are required to be licensed and bonded unless exempt. The law was enacted to protect Florida producers from nonpayment of goods covered by the law. It is administered by the Bureau of License and Bond. Division of Marketing, Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

Glenn A. Bissett, bureau chief, said Elliott could lose his license if he fails to comply. When contacted today. Elliot said he had not heard of the order and would check into it.

Bissett said growers and buyers usually do business over the telephone and the specifics of their agreements are often only implied based on traditional procedures of the industry, not written in contract form. "This way of doing business results occasionally in this type of dispute," he said.

Retiree Hits Top Lottery Jackpot - $8.8 Million

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) - Winning the largest ever payout - $8.8 million - in the history of North American lottery games means a new beachfront home for a retired steelworker and the end of his wife's 36-year waitressing

"My wife, for 36 years has been a waitress working the night shift. She's well-deserving of a beachfront home," Nicholas Jorich, 59, sald Monday after receiving a $336,158 check, the first of 21 annual installments, from lottery officials in Harrisburg.

He promptly handed the check to his wife, Marvein. Mrs. Jorich had quit her job when she learned her husband held the single winning ticket to the state's Friday Lotto Jackpot game. In addition to buying the home, Jorich said he plans to spend some of the winnings on his 18-month-old granddaughter.

Aid Vote May Be Delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) - House Speaker Thomas O'Neill fears possible stailing moves by opponents when the House takes up a bill to block U.S. aid to rebel forces battling the Sandinista government of Nicaragua.

The bill was the subject of a rare closed session one week ago. House leaders hoped to begin open debate on the bill today.

But O'Neill said Monday the "ultraconservatives" who support Reagan may try to stall action on the measure in hopes of forcing withdrawal of the bill.

The speaker said the same people opposed the nuclear freeze resolution and managed to drag out debate for several weeks before the measure was finally passed May 4.

The bill would require Reagan to halt U.S. aid to the rebel groups opposed to the leftist government of Nicaragua. Reagan says the aid is needed to stop Nicaragua from sending arms to leftist rebels in El Salvador, but opponents say it is an illegal effort to overthrow Nicaragua's Marxist government.

In place of the assistance to the rebels, the bill would provide $80 million for friendly governments in Central America to use in trying to halt the shipment of arms to guerrilla forces in the

Rail Yard Safety Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The National Transportation Safety Board, concerned that rail yard accidents involving hazardous materials could turn into disaster, is investigating whether safety standards and rescue plans should be improved.

The board ordered a hearing today to study tank car safety at rail wards near population centers. Testimony, which is expected to conclude Wednesday, also will focus on public emergency preparedness plans to evaluate measures that could lessen the likelihood of spills of explosive, flammable or toxic chemi-

In April, the Transportation Department proposed improvements in the safety standards for railroad tank cars However, the proposal would exempt from the tougher protective requirements a whole fleet of cars used to carry chlorine, a potentially hazardous chemical.

The board will adopt a set of safety recommendations following the hearing and subsequent investigation aimed at preventing accidents as well as lessening the severity of their consequences.

Car Sales Still Climbing

DETROIT (UPI) - Mid-July car sales rose 38.6 percent on a daily rate basis - the sixth consecutive period in which domestic companies have recorded an increase in sales.

The automakers had nine days in the July 11-20 period in which to sell cars and eight in the same period of 1982. This accounts for disparity in some of the figures.

In the 10-day period, the firms said Monday they sold 206,875 autos, up 38.6 percent on a daily rate basis from last year's 132,938. The daily selling rate of 22,986 cars per day was the best for the period since 1979.

Sales have now been up for six consecutive

The sales figures translate to an annual rate of 7.7 million cars, the best this year. During the similar 1982 period, the annual selling rate was

Burglary Suspect Falls Into Hands Of Police

A man armed with a tire iron jumped or fell on an Altamonte Springs police officer while officers were searching an Altamonte store for burglars.

The officer was not injured and the man was arrested and charged with armed burglary, according to Altamonte police reports.

The incident began when two men apparently hid in the Toys R Us store, 450 E. State Road 436, until the store closed Saturday night, police said:

A burglar alarm sounded at about 11 p.m. Saturday after the store was closed. Police officers called the store manager who opened the store for them.

As officers searched inside, an officer spotted a man walking and ordered him to "freeze," but the man ran, apparently escaping through a side door.

Officers continued searching the store and found an office door that had been pried open. One of the officers entered the office, and a man fell or jumped through a hole in a recessed ceiling and landed on the officer, police said.

The man, who was carrying a tire iron, ran to another area of the store, but was soon captured, police said.

The man, identified as David Wayne Freels, 19, of 2536 Eastbrook Blvd., Winter Park, told officers about an alleged accomplice, and Michael Robert Horrobin, 18, of 101 E. Altamonte Drive, was later arrested at his home, police said.

The pair are former employes of the store, police said. Both men were booked into the Seminole County jail. Freels was charged with armed burglary and Horrobin was charged with burglary. Both later were released on bonds of $1,500 each.

JAIL FRACAS

Two men were arrested after they set a small fire in the lobby of the Seminole County Jail and ripped a picture of Sheriff John Polk off the wall, authorities said. Correctional administrator Jim Schultz and Seminole deputies gave this account of the incident:

deputies responded to a report of a disturbance involving a boating party on Lake Brantley in southwest Seminole County.

Deaputies arrested two men in a boat on the lake and booked them into the jail. About 15 men and women who were also members of the boating party followed them to the Jail in order to pay their bond.

As the group waited in the jail lobby for the booking process to be completed, they became impatient and rowdy. Members of the group set a small fire in an ashtray, pushed a security camera up toward the ceiling and ripped a picture of Polk off the wall.

The group then left the lobby and walked out to the parking lot as deputies were called. One deputy found the missing picture of Polk behind the driver's seat in a white van in the parking lot.

Deputies arrested John Damon Prutsman, 25, of 110 Errol Estates, Apopka, and charged him with criminal mischief. Also arrested was Jeffrey Watts Sherry, 23, of 2100 Howell Bridge Road, Maitland, who was charged with petty theft.

Arrested earlier at Lake Brantley were Randy Bruce. 28, of 241 Oak Drive, Longwood, who was charged with disorderly conduct and violation of vessel safety regulations, and Michael Steininger, 22, of the same address, who was charged with disorderly intoxication. All four men were later released on $100 bond each.

MIAMI (UPI) - Immigration officials moved six Cubans to a detention center for questioning after the refugees and their fishing boat were intercepted by Coast Guard officials near the Florida Keys, authorities said today.

Brock was questioned intensely by federation member, Ruth Swinney, one of the founding members of SISTERs, Sanford's Interested Sarahs to Encourage Rejuvenation, the prime mover in relocating the zoo when the city of Sanford decided it could no longer afford to keep it in the early 1970s.

Mrs. Swinney was particularly interested in how the voting membership dues for the society were raised from $25 to $50, thus disallowing a number of Sanford persons who tried to vote in board elections several months ago.

Brock sald the dues were increased from 6 months to a year before that election meeting. He said by-laws will be further changed to require members to have paid dues some months prior to a general membership meeting where a vote for board members is to be held. The purpose of this, he said, is to prevent disruptions.

Mrs. Swinney said that many of those that Brock referred to as new members at that specific meeting were actually persons who stood good for a $100,000 loan that started the zoo society off and thus they had lifetime memberships. "The ones you are calling the new group was actually the old group," she said. Mrs. Swinney said those persons were—over a period of years.

denied a look at zoo society books. Prior to the meeting, Mrs. Bradford tacked up on a bullet board newspaper clippings of stories concerning the city of Orlando's apparent interest in having the zoo moved there and the feasibility study that was undertaken on the issue. When Brock said one couldn't believe everything one reads in the newspapers, Mrs. Bradford called newpapers "God's gift to the earth," adding the federation would not have known of the possibility the zoo might move to Orlando had it not been for the newspapers. Brock outline the report of the feasibility study conducted by the Dick Pope Institute at the University of Central Florida, saying the costs of the study were borne entirely by the city of Orlando, Orange County and the Phillips Foundation.

Mrs. Bradford, reading from a copy of minutes from a zoo board meeting, said the feasibility study showed annual attendance of 117,000 while it should be 303,000 at a different location and that the zoo is supported 60 percent by local residents and 40 percent by tourists.

Rutberg said the zoo made an oasis out of a swamp. He said that the zoo currently is operating in the black, adding that only 5 percent of the zoos in the nation can boast that.

Calling the tederation members "very dear friends of our zoo," Brock said he hadn't come to the meeting "to war with you ladies." He assured that the zoo will remain in Seminole County and if a decision were made to move the facility, it wouldn't be done overnight, but rather

Volusia's Proposed Leash Law Irks Central Florida Hunters

Hunters and dog owners from the Central Florida area looking angrily at a proposed leash law in Volusia County that they say will cause them great problems and may cost them money in unfair fines.

They also say it could eliminate all dog hunting in Volusia County, according to David Pell, secretary of the Central Florida Fox Hunters Association. Pell said a new leash law proposed countywide would require hunting dogs to be accompanied by their owners during a hunt and under their voice command. Pell noted that would be virutally impossible since when the dogs are under chase of their game, the owners couldn't get them to halt by voice command.

There is a meeting of hunters and dog owners set for Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the DeLand High School auditorium when a county commissioner is to address the group and explain how the new law would work. A public hearing also has been set fire Aug. 4 at the county commission chambers in DeLand.

Honduran Exercises Seen As Part Of Military Shield

By United Press International

U.S. combat troops will join Honduran forces in large-scale exercises for the first time to conduct six months of maneuvers that Pentagon officials view as part of a "military shield" to protect friendly Central American nations.

The joint exercises in Honduras are meant to "build up the capabilities of our forces to work together in the event of aggression" in Central America, a senior Pentagon official said Monday.

Up to 4,000 U.S. forces, half of them combat troops, will be on the ground in Honduras at one time, and the Marines will stage their first amphibious landing on Honduran soil, officials said. They spoke on the condition they not be identified.

The officials said they could not give details about the total number of Americans to be involved in the August-through-January manuevers because not all of the plans have been set.

Although American combat forces have been sent to Honduras previously to train Honduran and Salvadoran troops, the exercises will mark the first time that U.S. combat troops will be used in combined large-scale maneuvers with the Hondurans, the officials said.

The state Legislature did not approve a school funding package until late in June, giving district personnel a late start in their budget work.

The 1983-84 budget calls for the district to spend $122.8 million, up about 8 percent from last year's $113.5 million. It is basically a status quo budget, with few enhancements from last year's budget. Harris said.

One new expenditure is $207,588 for upgrading of the district's data processing system, deemed a top priority for the schools and the district office.

Also included is $163,500 for installing finishing kitchens at Milwee, Jackson Heights and Rock Lake middle schools. Wekiva and Woodlands elementary schools and Rosenwald Exceptional Child Care Center.

Board members want to review a $60,000 budget item for driver education programs at the district's six high schools. Currently $10,000 is designated for each high school to rent, purchase or lease cars for the program.

But because of declining enrollment in the program and the state's recent increase in graduation requirements, driver education programs could be made into after-school or summer school classes, said board member Nancy Warren.

The board voted to include $42,667 to expand the district's Officer in the Schools program. The money would provide salary and equipment for a deputy who would be assigned to duty during school hours at a school in the district.

But, Moore, also noted as he does whenever the city commission considers transferring any service to private enterprise that the city exists to provide services that its citizens cannot provide for themselves.

He said if the city is going to stop providing garbage and trash collection service, perhaps it ought to consider hiring Pinkerton guards to police the city and a private firm to provide fire protection, get rid of the city hall and go out of business.

Commissioner Eddie Keith predicted the people of Sanford aren't going to favor the city franchising the service.

Moore suggested the commission table the matter, "chew on it for a couple weeks" and be prepared to take action one way or the other at the Aug. 8 meeting.

Farr suggested in the interim that Knowles discuss possible franchising with some other firms and City Attorney Bill Colbert was asked to research the law about exclusive and non-exclusive franchises. Knowles said he believes if the city were considering granting an exclusive franchise that law requires that the issue be placed on referendum for the people to decide.

'Increased Support Of IMF Necessary To Protect American Jobs'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bipartisan supporters of an increase in the U.S. commitment to the International Monetary Fund argue it will buoy Third World imports and protect American jobs that are dependent on export

Proponents of the measure, bolstered by support from Secretary of State George Shultz and all of his living predecessors, hammered at that theme during debate in the House Monday on a $8.4 billion increase in U.S. pledges to the IMF, an international bank that raises money for needy countries.

The House resumes consideration of the bill today. with Treasury Secretary Donald Regan ultimately predicting victory, despite a close vote. The Senate approved a similar increase by a 55-34 vote June 8. During the two hours of general debate Monday, "House supporters said the legislation is crucial to the health of the world economy, including the one out of five domestic jobs that are dependent on exports. But opponents said it merely was a bail out for big banks that had made imprudent loans to Third World nations now in danger of default because of the worldwide recession. Meanwhile, Shultz and all the living former secretaries of state sent a letter to House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois irging support for the increased IMF funding.

Michel, who normally votes against foreign aid bills, told his conservative GOP colleagues he can vote for the IMF authorization because "it is not a foreign aid bill even though it looks like a foreign aid bill.

"I'm going to resist the temptation to ... give big banks a good swift kick in the assets," Michel said.

Before the debate. O'Neill said he would not bring the bill to a vote until the administration demonstrates it has enough votes to pass it. The bill would be open to amendment and already congressmen have indicated they would offer more than 25 changes.

The IMF, which includes 146 member nations, raises those funds by borrowing from better-off countries.

Although it lends primarily to developing nations, any member is eligible for loans if certain conditions are met. er The 88.4 billion increase in the U.S. share does not niver a direct transfer of funds, but a piedge the funds uld be available to the IMF in an emergency.

Vitamins

Are They A Guarantee Of Good Health Or A Waste Of $, Maybe Even Harmful?

By Marilynn Marter Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Millions of Americans have their own nutritioninsurance policy. They take vitamin pills as a backup for their regular food intake. Some go so far as to ingest nutrients in huge, supposedly therapeutic amounts. Whether they are any the healthier for the effort is hard to assess objectively. Indeed, they have prompted a controversy among health experts, many of whom insist that Americans are wasting millions of dollars taking excessive vitamin supplements and risking the sometimes harmful effects of overdosing in the process.

Eat a balanced diet, the experts say, and you don't need pills.

But can you honestly say you eat a balanced diet. taking in your full, recommended measure of vitamins and minerals each day?

And even with a variety of foods in your diet, you may be shortchanging yourself nutritionally if you:

-Are on a diet of 1.200 calories or fewer a day, or go on such a reduced-calorie regimen with some frequency. -Are a heavy smoker.

-Are more than a social drinker, consuming two or more ounces of liquor a day.

-Take birth control pills or other prescription or over-the-counter drugs or medications.

-Are under unusual physical or mental stress, experience excessive blood loss, are recovering from illness or injury or suffer from a chronic illness. -Are older than 55.

Research shows that people in those segments of the population are most likely to be in short supply of certain nutrients. Sometimes, the only way to make up those extra vitamins or minerals is with supplements.

Certainly, if you are on a diet, you will have a hard time making ends meet on the nutrient scale. While the most commonly recorded deficiency, particularly among women and small children, is in iron, other nutrients can be just as hard to cram into a low-calorie menu.

For instance, using just the best sources, it would take three ounces of pork to meet a woman's thiamin needs. Three ounces of liver provide all the riboflavin and niacin we need, but even if you love liver, you can't eat it every day. Without it, you'd need three cups of milk or yogurt and six ounces of tuna or chicken, and you still have a lot of other vitamins and minerals to make up in not too many remaining calories.

When it comes to the non-dietary assaults on our systems, the nutritional risk is even greater.

Women taking birth control pills have been found to have lower levels of the B vitamins (thiamin, riboflavin, B6. B-12 and folacin) and of Vitamin C. The depletion of B-6 is so severe that supplements are regularly recommended for women on the pill. Meeting the body's normal needs with foods would mean eating six ounces of beef or liver along with two sweet potatoes or a quarter cup of wheat germ.

As for other drug-related interactions, it is wise to be Antibiotics destroy some B vitamins and impede production of Vitamin K (needed for blood clotting). Other drugs, such as Methotrexate and medications for malaria and epilepsy, can induce deficiencies of another B vitamin, folacin. Certain drugs used to treat diabetes, tuberculosis and arthritis similarly block absorption of B-6 or B-12. And, in some cases, supplemental levels of certain vitamins can keep a drug from being effective.

Who's most likely to take vitamins? According to a Gallup poli, the prime user would be non-smoking, physically active female college graduate who watches her weight and holds in white-collar job.

It is accepted generally that cigarette smoking, apart from its other well-publicized health risks, is a substantial drain on the body's supply of Vitamin C. Smokers in one government study recorded blood levels of Vitamin C 30 percent to 40 percent lower than those of non-smokers. How should smokers compensate for this depletion?

Recommendations from nutrition experts cover as much an extra 100 milligrams of Vitamin C daily to taking u to 500 milligrams more for each cigarette smoked.

Drinkers should be aware that, in addition to damaging the liver (a storehouse for vitamins), alcohol is a drain on vitamins needed to get it out of the system and repair the damage it does en route.

Most people accept the use of multivitamin pills when food intakes are curtailed or eating habits are haphazard, says John L. Stanton, director of the Institute of Research in Food Consumption and Nutrition at Temple University in Philadelphia. But, he notes, "risk factors other than dieting or poor eating habits - such as smoking, heavy consumption of alcohol, chronic use of certain drugs, surgery or wound healing or chronic exposure to heavy air pollution'appear to be less well-understood by consumers as reasons for taking vitamins."

Also, as we age the body is less able to absorb some vitamins, and doctors consider age 55 or so to be a good time to start examining whether vitamins should be added to the daily routine.

In a recent poll of vitamin users, fully half indicated they were on some form of diet. Only a third, however, acknowledged being smokers. Others with a proven need for additional vitamins are even less likely to get them, suggests Stanton. "Vitamin users tend to be more health-oriented in that they are more frequently non-smokers, exercise more and diet more," Stanton says. VITAMINS AT A GLANCE

In a report on current vitamin usage for the Vitamin Nutrition Information Service. Stanton details these findings from a 1982 Gallup survey:

More than 60 million American adults (37 percent) take vitamin supplements. Vitamin usage is greater among women (42 percent) than men (31 percent). Also, the higher the level of education, the more likely respondents were to take vitamin supplements. Usage went from 27 percent among those with grade school educations to 46 percent among college graduates.

The vast majority of adult vitamin users (85 percent), says Stanton, take vitamins daily, with 68 percent relying on the daily multivitamin-mineral combination

Not surprisingly, people living on the West Coast (a mecca for nutrition addicts) took more pills than people elsewhere in America. There, 45 percent use vitamins compared to levels of 34 percent to 36 percent throughout the rest of the country.

Of those taking specific supplements, 31 percent use Vitamin C, 27 percent take B vitamins, 24 percent augment their Vitamin E intake, and about 19 percent take additional minerals, most often iron, zinc and calcium. In each of those groups, about haif also take multivitamin supplements.

Utilities Bond Default Largest In U.S. History

SEATTLE (UPI) — Chemical Bank of New York plans to go to the U.S. Supreme Court to try to recover $2.25 billion from the Washington Public Power Supply System and 88 other utilities — the largest municipal bond default in U.S. history.

The utilities borrowed the money to build two nuclear plants, which later were scratched.

The WPPSS default was formally declared Monday after WPPSS, commonly known as "Whoops," turned over $25.56 million to Chemical Bank, trustee for bondholders, but said there was no more money to pay the debt for construction on the terminated plants at Satsop and Hanford. Wash.

Washington State Supreme Court ruled last month public utility districts in Washington don't have to pay their share of the debt on the terminated projects.

Default became almost inevitable when the Chemical Bank will go to the high court against WPPSS, its 23 directors and the 88 participating utilities to recover the funds, said Berls.

Kissinger's Commission

President Reagan must accomplish two things if he is to defend Central America against a Soviet-Cuban campaign of subversion. He must create a sense of urgency in Congress and the country, and he must build a durable base of bipartisan support for U.S. policy in the region. The president made progress on both counts when he recently named Henry Kissinger to head a national commission on U.S. strategy in Central MAmerica.

Kissinger has his detractors, to be sure. And not everything he tried during his tenure as secretary of state and national security adviser during the Nixon administration turned out well. But no one Mr. Reagan could have selected possesses the unquestioned talent for statecraft and the enormous political prestige of Henry Kissinger.

What the Kissinger commission recommends will presumably command considerable respect in Congress, the country, and among U.S. ailies, including those in Latin America. No doubt Kissinger will then lend his formidable skills as a a policy advocate to the continuing debate over how wato meet the Marxist challenge in a region vital to U.S. security.

All of this augurs well for administration policies that, while fully justified, have not yet won shwidespread public support or the necessary bipartisan backing in Congress.

Even Kissinger's critics credit him with a shrewd grasp of geopolitics, which is what the struggle in Central America comes down to in the stiend. Mr. Reagan knows, as Kissinger surely does pas well, that American credibility — already battered by Vietnam and Iran, among other recent setbacks - could hardly survive a successful campaign to transform Central America into a Cuban-Soviet base.

And Mr. Reagan knows, as does Henry Kissinger, that peace in the world depends, at a minimum, on maintaining both American credibility and an acceptable balance of power.

No one can yet know, of course, what specifically the Kissinger commission will recommend. But, if past performance is any guide, Henry Kissinger will be the dominant influence on the commission and will shape its recommendations.

And, unless we miss our guess, those recommendations will reflect a Kissinger conviction that U.S. policy and U.S. interests in Europe, the -- Middle East, and Asia cannot be sustained if the United States fails to defend its own backyard.

Appropriately enough, the proposal for a bipartisan national commission on U.S. strategy in Central American came from Congress. And, appropriately enough, it had bipartisan support in the persons of Democratic Sen. Henry Jackson and Republican Sen. Charles Mathias.

President Reagan chose, wisely, to accept the suggestion. The commission should not be permitted to supplant the administration's responsibility to formulate policy. But a responsible commission, and especially one headed by someone of Kissinger's stature, should be capable of dramatizing the dangers in Central America while rallying mainstream Democrats to support an madequate U.S. response.

If that happens, Henry Kissinger and the president who appointed him will have performed admirably in coping with a festering danger that can only grow worse unless handled with the utmost skill and resolution.

Remember the song from the Broadway musical "Kiss Me, Katel", "It's Too Darn Hot?" It could well be the theme song for most of the nation this summer. The record breaking heat is becoming too much for man, beast, and crops.

With the temperatures in Seminole County in the high 90s and vacation time approaching it wasn't difficult to decide to head for the mountains of North Carolina. Surely the cool mountain air would give us respite from the sweltering heat.

Whitewater rafting in the exhibarating 46-degree waters of the Nantahalia River gorge provided at least temporary relief. even if it does tend to freeze your toes. Tubing on the rocky Deep Creek run in the Smokles proved another way to cool off tootsles and other parts of the anatomy. I

Getting there (and getting back) in a motor home was definitely not half the fun this trip. A bank near Charlotte, N.C. flashed 103 degrees while temperatures in Georgia and South Carolina were also well above the 100 degree mark. The thermometer outside my window registered a sizzling 106 degrees as we drove down the interstate highway - a figure later confirmed on the news broadcast.

It was time to pull over for a watermelon break standing in the shade of some pine trees. Everything in the Winnebago was hot to the touch and hot water came out of the cold water faucet. Perspiration was trickling profusely from knees, neck and clbows.

Desparate to escape the heat as we headed for home, we rushed like lemmings for the sea, which in this case was the beach at Hunting Island State Park near Beaufort, S.C. A dip in the warm surf wasn't all that refreshing, but a cold shower and a thunderstorm which lasted most of the night cooled things down a

An afternoon in air-conditioned darkness with the grandchildren and Superman at a Neptune Beach cinema offered another break from the sweltering weather and a device for squeezing the most from the last hours of vacation.

SCIENCE WORLD A New Hope For Alcoholics

By Jane Casselberry

By Jan Ziegler
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists have found a drug used as an antidepressant in Europe seems to block alcohol's effect on memory, appears to reduce desire for alcohol and may open an entire new way of treating alcoholism.

But a government researcher cautioned that the drug should not be considered a possible cure for alcoholism, "because I think that would be very cruel."

The drug is zimelidine, prescribed in Europe for treatment of depression or phobias. It is awaiting approval by the Food and Drug Administration for use in the United States as an anti-

In a study in this week's journal Science, researchers reported men who took the drug before drinking the equivalent of three to eight shots of 100 proof, whiskey performed 65 to 80 percent better on short-term memory tests than those who didn't take the

"The highest hope which one has is that somehow the drug could be helpful in treatment of alcoholism," said Dr. Markku Linnoila, a researcher with the National Institute of Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse and a co-author of the study. "We are intitiating studies in this

Linnoila, clinical director of the NIAAA intramural research program, said the drug appears to boost the brain's scrotonin mechanism. Serotonin is a chemical which transmita messages between nerve cella. Deficiencies in serotonin transmission have been associated with certain forms of depression, alcoholism, sleep disorders and impulsive, violent behavior, Linnoila said.

Zimelidine appears to block nerve cells' reabsorption of serotonin after messages are transmitted, thus leaving more serotonin between cells and making communication easier, the researcher said.

Alcohol depletes nerve cells of the serotonin and makes communication more sluggish.

Another study conducted by the Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto found zimelidine also reduced the desire to drink, possibly by altering the perceived affect of alcohol so it isn't as rewarding, he said.

"This may be the beginning of a long and arduous road to new approaches to the treatment of alcoholism using the serotonin mechanism," he said.

In other studies, zimelidine was found to have no effect on skills used in driving. The latest study supported this, finding no improvement in balance or visual tracking.

Currently, most alcoholics must rely on programs which combine withdrawal, counseling and will power.

Ten men age 22 to 27 participated in the study reported in Science magazine. Some received zimelidine along with orange juice-alcohol mixtures and some just placebos.

Those who took zimelidine performed 65 to 80 percent better on tests in which they had to recall short lists of words than their counterparts who took placebos, the study said.

WILLIAM RUSHER

Bad Week For Demos

NEW YORK (NEA) — There are times when I can almost manage to feel sorry for the poor Democrats. With the economy recovering robustly and even unemployment heading down to the single digits, they managed to come up with a midsummer controversy ("Debategate") that was easily worth two or three months of gaudy headlines. So what if the whole thing didn't touch Ronald Reagan personally? There could still be a congressional investigation, an FBI probe, demands for appointment of a "special prosecutor," conflicts in the testimony of high administration aides, and with luck perhaps even a contempt citation or two. A generalized odor of wrongdoing could be sprayed all over the Reagan White House, with gratifying negative effects on the popularity of the principal resident.

Then came the galvanizing announcement from Los Angeles that a videotape had surfaced in which Vicki Morgan, the mistress of the late Alfred Bloomingdale (a friend of Mr. Reagan's). could be seen indulging in sexual antics with Bloomingdale and various others. including a congressman, two Reagan appointees, and two longtime Reagan friends - all unidentified. As the attorney who claimed to possess the tape remarked, all this was, to say the least, at shocking variance with the rather starchy image and conservative political views of the Reagan team. Mr. Reagan's personal halo seemed doomed to get knocked still further askew.

The zeal with which the media took the videotape balt reminds one of how Hemingway's monster marlin struck the hook of the old Cuban fisherman. The next morning's "Today" show on NBC-TV opened at both 7 and 8 a.m. with a sultry photo of Vicki Morgan leering out of the screen. This was followed by anchorman Bryant Gumbel. who told us the essentials of the Los Angeles story and passed us along to newsman John Palmer, who repeated them all over again. The newspapers and the other TV networks were all following sult.

Then, within 24 hours, came the sickening news that the attorney who broke the story now said the tape had been stolen from his office. Almost worse, even the most superficial inquiries into the background and qualifications of the attorney began to disclose gaping holes in his apparent veracity.

Hastily the media backed oil of the videotape story and began trying to breathe a little life back into Debategate. Unfortunately, the American public, having been titillated with promises of a videotaped Republican sex orgy, were understandably reluctant to settle for shots of FBI agents entering the Hoover Institution in Palo Alto to paw through the Reagan campaign archives for copies of Jimmy Carter's briefing papers. It was rather like being promised a weekend in Acapulco with Brooke Shields and then having to spend it at home with your wife and mother-in-law instead.

But the worse was yet to come. The attempt to resuscitate Debategate was not yet 24 hours old when the House Ethics Committee issued its longawaited report on alleged sex and drug scandals on Capitol Hill. With commendable bipartisanship, the committee put the finger on one conservative Republic congressman and one liberal Democrat, charging each with sexual misconduct with teen-age congressional pages. A congressional staff employeocrats, the Republican congressman at least turned out to be straight, while the Democrat took the floor of the House to admit he was gay. and the accused staff member was revealed as chief of the House's Democratic pages and the scene of his cocaine purchases as the capitol basement.

Meanwhile, back at the White House, President Reagan watches the economic indicators turn dramatically upward. reflects that not a single American soldier has died in combat during his administration to date, and wonders what the opposition will try next.

JEFFREY HART Scandal, Scandal, Scandal

Just when we were sitting down to a long summer of headlines about the purloined Carter letters, and the thing was really building into a media event. it was pushed off the front page and the TV screen by two much juicier Items a fact which, all by itself, tends to define the objective seriousness of the Carter papers item.

First, this scandal was torpedoed by the claim made by Beverly Hills lawyer Robert Steinberg, evidently a direct descendant of P.T. Barnum, that he was in possession of videotapes of sex orgies involving the murdered model Vicki Morgan and various officials close to President Reagan, including a congressman. Steinberg was even seen on TV moralistically deploring Reagan's insensitivity to war, hunger and all the rest of it while his associates romped with the late Vicki.

Responding to revelations from the House ethics committee, Massachusetts Representative Gerry Studds took to the floor of the House, his remarks carried on close-circuit TV to the offices of his "stunned" colleagues, and admitted to having had homosexual relations with a teenaged congressional page. Studds was unrepentant, and protested that the ethics committee inquiry had invaded his private life. He said that he regarded the teenaged boy as a "consenting adult." By a strict legal definition, the 17-year-old was indeed, an "adult."

The next revelation was that Rep. Daniel Crane, of Illinois, father of six. and a pillar of morality, had been having an affair with a 17-year-old female congressional page. Crane was contrite, admitted that it had been a mistake, and begged for forgiveness. One of his aides, however - does this indicate the local sense of propriety among public men? - said that if every congressman who had been sleeping around were exposed we would have no Congress. He later "apologized."

The legalistic point made by Rep. Studds that the boy page was a "consenting adult" is hollow. Those congressional pages come from all over the country and they are sent there in good faith by their families. They are likely to be in awe of the public officials they serve, and, in any case, there is an enormous disproportion in power between a congressman and a page. The congressman is in a position to award prestige and favors. Rep. Crane argues that he has not violated his oath of public office, and this is technically true, just as Mr. Studda's point about the age of consent is technically true.

But both men have disgraced the institution to which they belong, and, in my judgment, they should resign or be expelled. We have had legal cases involving psychoanalysts, dentists, physicians and other professional people who have exploited their position to exact sexual favors, and of course there are grey areas in all of this - but members of the House of Representative having sex with congressional teenaged pages?

It is entirely possible that the revelations about Studds will constitute a political plus for him in his home district in Massachusetts, which includes Cape Cod and his friendly Provincetown. Rep. Crane will very likely be hurt in southern Illinois.

Administration Misread The Syrians

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has suffered some embarrassing setbacks recently in the Middle East. The president's optimistic "peace initiative" for the region has stalled; Secretary of State George Shultz's shuttle diplomacy hasn't even been able to work out the withdrawal of laraeli and Syrian troops from Lebanon.

Part of the problem is that the president gets conflicting reports from diplomats and intelligence agents in the fleid. This information is acreened by the president's top advisers who tend to pass on only what he wants to hear — information that makes his predetermined policies or campaign promises look good.

Top-level reports are also the product of a committee mentality - a consensus, with no rough edges to irritate a president or nag him with doubts. The president, in turn, is persuaded to approve plans that have little chance of

The president's advisers, for example, confidently predicted that Jordan's King Hussein would support the Reagan peace initiative. I disputed that rosy assessment in a column last December. Sure enough, Hussein refused to join in the Reagan plan, effectively killing it.

More recently, the administration pushed through a troop withdrawai agreement with largel that depended on Syrian cooperation. The White House seemed to think Syrian President Hafez Assad would agree to end his years-long occupation of eastern Lebanon. On April 29, I warned that this was unlikely: Assad has shown no indication that he will pull his troops out soon — or ever.

One reason for the administration's embarrassing misinterpretation of Assad's intentions may be the soothing syrup it was fed by the U.S. Embassy in Damascus. A secret cable to the State Department in early January demonstrates serious misjudgment of the Syrian dictator by our experts on the acene.

The secret cable, examined by my associate Lucette Lagnado, gave Washington advance knowledge of the Syrian-Soviet decision to deploy top-of-the-line Russian missiles in Syria. "U.S. intelligence community believes Syria is preparing at least two sites for surface-to-air missiles of type SA-5," the cable states, "and SA-5 equipment will soon be shipped to Syria from the

But the embassy took this ominous development calmly. "We doubt that the installation of SA-5s will make the Assad regime more 'adventuresome," the cable said.

Yet with super Soviet missiles to back him up, Asaad remains at least as "adventuresome" as he has always been: He has threatened a new war with Israel. He has ignored pleas from other Arab nations to pull his troops out of Lebanon. He has encouraged Palestine Liberation Organization extremists against Yasir Arafat. And he is suspected of backing major terrorist attacks, including the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

Incredibly, the embassy condoned the presence of Soviet personnel manning the SA-5 missiles, suggesting they would be a restraining influence on

Assad. "We believe that the Soviet involvement... would act as a constraint in their possible operational use...," the cable stated, adding: "Soviet control in the operational use of these missiles will act as a firm restraint on any adventurist inclinations by Syria (although President Assad is not in any event adventurist by nature)."

What worried the embassy most was the danger of a pre-emptive strike against the missiles by Israel. The embassy urged Washington to restrain the Israelis from such a move.

The embassy experts at least showed some appreciation of Assad's troublesome tendencies when they commented on the possibility that Israel would ask the United States to make an approach - in diplomatic jargon, a demarche to the Syrians warning against installa-tion of the Soviet missiles.

"We believe no U.S. demarche to the Syrians... would be able to prevent the installation," the embassy warned. They were right. The United States did protest - in vain.

WEST PALM BEACH - The combination of Jeff Blake and Tim Graham enabled the Sanford Nationals to stay alive in the Florida Little Major League State Tournament with a 7-5 eight-inning victory over host Okeheelee in a loser's bracket game Monday.

The Nationals play the winner of the today's 11 o'clock Panama City-Jacksonville at 8 p.m. Sanford lost Its opening game of the tournament Monday morning to St. Petersburg Fossil Park, 5-3.

In Monday night's do-or-die contest, Blake had three hits and ran the bases with reckless abandon as he scored the winning run in the top of the eighth inning

Graham, meanwhile, turned in a gutsy pitching performance, going the entire eight innings despite being tagged for 11 hits. Graham pitched out of numerous Jams as Okcheelee left 15 runners on base for Blake.

"He (Graham) really showed me something tonight," sald Sanford manager Sylvester "Slick" Franklin Jr. "He stayed tough the whole eight innings and pulled us

Okeheelee Jumped out to an early lead with a run in the bottom of the first. Shane Simpson and Mike Lang led off with singles to put runners on first and second. Jack Byrd then tapped a grounder to third baseman Anthony Merthie who stepped on the bag for one out, but threw wildly to second allowing Lang to go to third. Brantley Mitchell then drew a walk to load the bases and Scott Patrick walked to force in Lang for a 1-0 lead.

With the bases still loaded and only one out, Graham battled back and struck out the next two hitters to end

Drug Use Crackdown

NEW YORK (UPI) - Commissloner Pete Rozelle's crackdown on drug use in the NFL received widespread praise throughout the league Monday.

Cincinnati Coach Forrest Gregg, who had two players suspended, called the move "just something that had to be done" and others around the league echoed his thoughts.

In a harshly-worded, 11paragraph statement, Rozelle Monday suspended four players without pay through the fourth game of the upcoming season. The commissioner cited the players' violation of NFL drug policies involving the use of "Disciplinary suspensions, effective immediately, have been imposed on four NFL players for violations of league drug policies," Rozelle said. "They are Ross Browner and Pete Johnson of the Cincinnati Bengals, E.J. Junior of the St. Louis Cardinals and Greg Stemrick of the New Orleans Saints.

"After thoroughly reviewing the respective cases and meeting with the players and their representatives. I have determined that each player, due to his participation in illegal activities involving cocaine, will be suspended without pay through the fourth game of the 1983 regular season. None of the four players is permitted to attend training camp, practice sessions, meetings or otherwise use club facilities. All four will be eligible to petition for reinstatement following the fourth game of the '83 regular scason.'

Browner and Johnson admitted In federal court last month that they bought cocaine from an accused drug trafficker who was later convicted, while Junior and Stemrick have been convicted on cocaine felony charges.

"It had gotten to the point where some action had to be taken," said Gregg. "I feel it was just. I would certainly think the suspensions would deter other players from drug involvement. These suspensions mean these guys are going to give up four league games, which amounts to 25 percent of their pay."

Bengals linebacker Reggie Williams said the suspensions indicate that Rozelle is "starting to play hardball" with drug offenders. Cincinnati running back Archie Griffin said he regretted "that it had to happen to our team - but I guess something must be done."

All the Bengals players were told of the suspensions by the coaching staff at their afternoon practice Monday.

Along with Dunn's two hits and three runs batted in. righthander Ken Chapdelaine struck out three, walked two and allowed just five hits to pick up the victory. Lefty Tim Smith mopped up in the seventh inning.

Altamonte was also aided by some strange Niceville baserunning which took it out of a potentially big inning in the fourth. Bully Brunson walked to lead off the third and Harold Tennant rapped a ground ball through T.J. Scaletta at shortstop which rolled all the way to fence in Brunson raced all the way around to score and Tennant landed on third. Altamonte, however, claimed Brunson had missed second base in his haste to get home. The umpire agreed and signalled him out, thus crasing the run. On the next pitch, Morris Davis rammed a deep fly to center on which Ryan Lisle made an over-the-shoulder catch. Tennant, probably think there Niceville were two out, gingerly loped home without tagging. A Altamonte quick relay to third procured the final out.

'Little' Innings Propel Juniors By Crystal River

Merald Sports Editor

WINTER GARDEN - Altamonte's waited, and waited for the big inning Monday night against Crystal River.

It never came.

But enough little ones did to propel Altamonte past Crystal River, 5-3, in the opening round of the Little League Junior Sectional Baseball Tournament. Tonight at 8, Altamonte will send lefty Cory Prom against Pensacola Tri-County, a 4-3 winner over Jacksonville Highlands in Monday's first game. Highlands and Crystal River play at 5:30 p.m., with the loser going home.

"I think we took this game for granted," said Altamonte manager Frank Messina. "They looked small, their coach said we looked big. But we needed a game like this. We came alive when we needed too." And that was in the sixth and seventh innings. With the score tied 3-3, and time running out, Matt Lange expertly dropped a two-strike bunt down the first base line and beat it out for a single. He stole second and moved to third when an errant pickoff attempt by the catcher went into center field.

Chris Brock popped to third for the second out, but Eric Martinez drilled a clutch single into right field for a 4-3 lead. An inning later, Ernest Martinez led off the inning with a triple on which the left fielder missed a shoestring catch. Eric Birle followed with a base hit to right fleid which insured the 5-3 victory.

'We got the big hits at the right time," said Messina. "That fifth run was especially big. With the bottom of their order coming up and the way (Greg) Ebbert was pitching, it took the edge off."

Ebbert had been taking the edge off all night. The smooth lefthander with the unhittable lollipop curve yielded just two hits, struck out seven and walked three. Ebbert retired the first nine hitters in order. The walks, which all came in the third, led to Crystal River's first two in the fourth, however, Darryl Osteen. Shipley and Marc Estep walked to lead off the inning before Ebbert struck out Ronnie Browning. Mark Hickey drew another pass to load the bases. Steve Royal then dribbled one 10 feet in front of the plate which catcher Randy Green gloved. bert.

Ebbert received two outstanding defensive plays from center fielder Brock and right fielder Jeff Hagen. Hagen made an excellent diving grab of a fly ball in the second, and Brock did the same on a dying quall in the sixth for the third out.

Little League

Junior League Ali-Stars waited, and but couldn't get the runner coming home despite a diving attempt.

Robert Osteen then drilled Ebbert's next pitch into lest field to score Estep for a 2-1 lead. It was Crystal River's first hit of the game. Royal rounded the bag too far at second, though, and Eric Martinez picked him off.

With runners at first and third. Altamonte charged the third baseman, feigning a squeeze-play defense, and Green gunned down Royal who was attempting to steal second for the third out of the inning. The runner stayed at third, intrigued by the goings-on.

The two runs erased a 1-0 Altamonte lead acquired in the third when Brock hit a wicked liner to left for a double. Eric Martinez then popped a short fly into right field which the second baseman caught while backpedalling. Brock alertly slipped into third after the catch, and when the throw trickled away, he sped home for a 1-0 lead.

Altamonte, which had outscored the opposition, 56-7, during the district, continually played for the big inning, but it didn't materialize Monday. On three occasions in the first four innings with less than two out and runners on first and second in the first four innings, Altamonte chose not to advance the runners,

"The kids themselves want, to hit," said Messina about his biginning theory. "And we know all of them are capable of getting the big

Finally in the fifth the big hits started to come. The Juniors took a 3-2 lead when Eric Martinez doubled over the left fielder's head and went to third on a passed ball. Scott Stiles walked and stole second. Ernest Martinez followed with a base hit over abortstop to score his brother for a 2-2 deadlock.

Messina then flashed the suicide squeeze, but Jimmy Waring missed the bunt attempt, and Stiles was hung up. He was far enough down the line, nevertheless, to score when the catcher threw to third for a 3-2

Sometimes it's hard to tell whether the nickname "Murderer's Row" better fits the Minnesota Twins' batters or their

When their pitchers aren't getting murdered, the young Twins' hitters can do some murdering of their own.

It was the hitters' turn Monday night. Sparked by a 15-hit attack that included five home runs, the Twins had their best offensive performance of the season and crushed the Milwaukee Brewers 17-3 to win their fourth game in a row after a recent eight-game losing streak.

Tom Brunansky clouted two home runs, Kent Hrbek and Ron Washington smacked two-run homers and Gary Ward added a solo shot to help Frank Viola, 5-7, to an easy victory. Mickey Hatcher also chipped in with a pair of doubles, including a three-run hit in the first inning.

"We burst out a lot of times like this, but the key for us is can we hold the lead," said Hatcher. "We haven't been hot all year and I think this might be our chance to get hot. The worst part about our eight-game losing streak was that everybody on the team was slumping. But now everybody is hitting again.'

"We've hit left-handers well all year," added Hrbek. "We were bumming during our eight-game losing streak, but we all started to relax and now we're playing well."

Hatcher's three-run double and Brunansky's first homer keyed a five-run first inning against loser Mike Caldwell. 7-8. Rusty Kuntz opened with a double and with one out, Caldwell walked Ward and Gary Gaetti to load the bases. Kuntz came home on Hrbek's infield single and Hatcher then cleared the bases with a double but was thrown out trying for a triple. Brunansky capped the scoring with his first homer.

The Twins got three homers in the third for five more runs and a 10-0 advantage. Ward led off with his 17th of the season to center field. After Gaetti's single, Hrbek laced his seventh homer to right center. With one out, Brunansky singled and Washington smacked his third home run of the year.

Angels 5, Orioles 2 At Anaheim, Calif., Reggie Jackson, Mike Brown and Bob Boone each hit solo home runs and Tommy John picked up his 245th career victory in leading the Angels to victory. The triumph snapped California's three-game losing streak and pushed John's record to 8-7. John Shelby homered for Baltimore.

White Sox 7, Bine Jays 4 At Toronto, Harold Baines went 3-for-4 and drove in four runs and Rich Dotson and three relievers combined on a five-hitter to lead the White Sox to victory. Dotson, 10-8, scattered three hits over the first 6 2-3 innings in posting his sixth victory in his last seven decisions. Dave Stieb, 11-9, lost for the seventh time in his last 10 decisions. Yankees 6, Rangers 5

At Arlington, Texas, Dave Winfield delivered a two-out, two-run triple in the ninth inning to give the Yankees their victory. Rich Gossage, 8-3, picked up the victory in relief even though he was tagged for two hits in the eighth when the Rangers scored three runs to take a 5-4 lead. Rick Cerone and Don Paylor homered for New York. Royals 6, Indians 1

At Kansas City, Mo., Amos Otis singled home two runs and Hal McRae, Leon Roberts and Frank White each contributed an RBI double to give the Royals their victory. Paul Splittorff scattered four hits, walked three and struck out two over six innings to improve his record to 9-3 for the best start in his 13-year career. Dan Quisenberry held the Indians hitless the rest of the way for his 24th save.

Red Sox 3, A's 0 At Oakland, Calif., Bruce Hurst scattered five hits in pitching his second shutout of the season and Wade Boggs hit two sacrifice flies to spark the Red Sox to victory. Dwight Evans added a solo home run for the Red Sox, his seventh this year off A's pitching. Cardinals 9, Gianto 4

George Hendrick, who co-invented silence along with Philadelphia's Steve Carlton, usually lets his bat do the proverbial talking. But until Monday night, his hitting was little to shout about.

Hendrick broke a 1-for-26 slump with three hits, including a two-run homer for his first since June 11, to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 9-4 victory Monday night over the San Francisco Giants.

Hendrick, who along with Carlton declines to speak with reporters, had fallen from .351 on July 13 to .326 but upped his average five points with the three hits Monday night. During his drought, . Hendrick's St. Louis teammates still kept the faith.

"He was due," said Cardinals third baseman Ken Oberkfell. "But it sure would be nice to go 1-for-26 and still be hitting close to .330.

'It was nice to see him hit that long one (because) he's our RBI man. He has to hit for us to win. Even when he wasn't hitting home runs he was hitting the ball

Hendrick's 12th home run and a two-run double by Ozzle Smith highlighted a five-run first inning against Andy McGaffigan, 2-8, who was making his first start since June 18. Andy Van Slyke singled in the other run in the

Dave LaPoint raised his career record to 4-0 against the Giants and improved his season mark to 8-6. Johnnie LeMaster led off the game with a single but San Francisco did not get another hit until Bob Brenly's RBI single in the seventh. John Rabb then hit his first major league homer, a three-run blast, but Dave Von Ohlen pitched one-hit ball over the final two innings to clinch the Cubs 9, Dodgers 3 At Chicago, Mel Hall's three-run triple and Bill Buckner's two-run homer in a seven-run fifth inning lifted Chicago. Steve Trout, 8-8, pitched seven innings, giving up two runs and eight hits to earn the victory. Dodgers starter Burt Hooton, 8.5, took the loss.

Reds 4-1, Expos 2-8

At Cincinnati, Ray Burris pitched a five-hitter. Andre Dawson hit his 21st home run and Bryan Little scored four runs in the nightcap to give Montreal a split. Burris struck out seven and improved to 4-4. Reds starter Rich Gale lasted five inning and dropped to 3-4.

In the opener, Mario Soto pitched a seven-hitter and struck out 11 and Dan Driessen slammed a two-run homer to lead the Reds to a 4.2 victory. Soto, 11-9, hurled his major league-leading 11th complete game and took over the major league strikeout lead with 156. Dawson slammed his 20th homer as Expos starter Charlie Lea fell to 7-7. Montreal's Tim Raines singled once in nine at bats during the two games, but stole two bases to run his league-leading total to

Pirates 6. Padres 3

At Pittsburgh, Dave Parker had three hits, including a two-run homer and an RBI single to lead the Pirates to their 13th victory in 16 games. Rick Rhoden, 8-8, got the victory with help from reliever Cecilio Guante, who came in with the bases loaded in the sixth and struck out the side. Guante earned his third save.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Pass the word. Argentine Jose-Luis Clerc is back.

Clerc captured his second title in as many weeks Monday night with an exciting 6-3, 3-6, 6-0 triumph over Jimmy Arias in the championship of a $200,000 grand prix tennis tourna-

The tournament is sponsored by the District of Columbia National Bank.

The 24-year-old Clerc came to America two weeks ago not having advanced past the second round in nine of his last 10 tournaments. Last week, he won the U.S. Pro Championships at Brookline, Mass.

"I worked very hard for these four tournaments in America," Clerc said. "I feel pretty good now, and I'm going to try very, very hard for the last two tournaments (Volvo International in New Hampshire and the U.S. Open Clay Court Championships in Indianapolis.)"

The crowd at Stockholm's Olympic Stadium, built for the 1912 Games, will miss American sprint and long jump favorite Carl Lewis, who has yet to finish exams at the University of Houston before setting out for the Aug. 7-14 Helsinki championships.

A spokesman for the U.S. team said that Greg Foster, the top American 110-meter hurdler, would be running the 200 meters in Stockholm along with Elliot Quow.

With a personal best of 13.11 seconds, Foster is the favorite to win the gold medal at Helsinki in the 110-meter hurdles. In his absence today, Sam Turner and Willie Gault will be running the hurdles.

Turner has a best time of 13.17 while Gault. who was drafted on the first round by the NFL's Chicago Bears this year, has run 13.55.

Furious Brett Chases Ump After 'Tar' And Feathering

The object of his wrath was Tim McClelland and Brett's maniacal fury was such that it took five others to keep him from getting at the rookie umpire. It was just as well they did.

George Brett has phenomenal strength, and when he's as wild-eyed and beside himself as he was at Yankee Stadium Sunday, which is hardly ever, he's stronger

What triggered Brett's volcanic eruption was a two-out, two-run ninth-inning homer deep into the right-field seats off Goose Gossage. At least, Brett and the other 33.944 in the ballpark thought it was a home run, because there was no question about the ball being

But New York Manager Billy Martin pulled the book on Brett, claiming the pine tar on his bat was higher than 18 inches from the handle. The umpires measured it. then dramatically nullified Brett's home run and declared him out. So instead of the Kansas City Royals leading 5-4, the Yankees emerged the surprise winners.

As plate umpire and umpire-in-chief, it was Mc-Clelland who shot his right hand high in the air and signalled that Brett was out, thus turning around the result and ending the game. He did it only after consulting with Joe Brinkman, the second-base umpire and chief of the four-man crew. Brinkman had measured the pine tar on Brett's bat by placing it down alongside the front of home plate, which is 17 inches wide.

Yankees' dugout to protest Brett's home run because of all the pine tar on his bat. When the out call was made, the Kansas City third baseman bolted out onto the field from his own dugout and tried to get at McClelland.

"I quit," was Brett's initial disgusted reaction in the clubhouse, where he still hadn't calmed down over what happened. "Why go on playing any more? You quit after you've seen everything, isn't that right? I've seen everything now. That's what I should do if I had any guts, is quit. I should retire, get married, have some kids and settle down. What's the use of going on any more?" Brett was so incensed he trembled when he spoke. He

Dick Howser, the Royals' manager, kept the clubhouse closed nearly a half-hour. In the meantime, he called American League President Lee MacPhail's assistant, Bob Pishel, to lodge a complaint and said he would confirm his protest of the game Monday in a telegram to MacPhall.

"They (the umpires) said the pine tar was too high on my bat," Brett said to newsmen who clustered around him later. "I know all about the rule and the umpires have talked to me about it before. Normally, they tell you about it in advance. But nobody said anything about it his time. When the umpires told me about it before, I scraped some of the pine tar off. I didn't realize it was up that high on the bat this time. I've used the same bat for the past five-games and no one said a

The rule specifying precisely how high pine tar may be applied on a bat was written to keep players from blackening the bat to such an extent that tacks or corks in it could be concealed. Reminded of that, Brett said: "I don't use illegal bats; I don't use any cork. I don't need too. I want my bat back before I leave here. I'd like to use it in Kansas City. It's one of the best bats I've ever

The Royals tried to prevent the umpires from keeping All this was done after Martin had come out of the it as evidence. Someone tossed it to Gaylord Perry and the bat was passed along to Hal McRae and Steve Renko, but Brinkman finally obtained it. presumably to show to MacPhail. The umpire got it with the help of a number of security men who swarmed all over the field immediately after McClelland made his call.

> Many of the Royals thought the crew that umpired the game is nursing a grudge against them. They talked about a problem they had with Brinkman during their last homestand and how Brinkman told Howser he was going to "get" Willie Wilson and U.L. Washington.

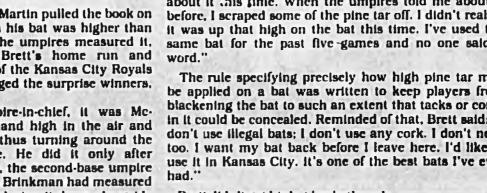

> Martin couldn't have been happier over the Yankees finishing their homestand at 9.2 and moving 13 games

Fire Department Offers Free Classes To Citizens

Someone once said that "the best things in life are free." Nowadays its hard to find anything that is free. But the Longwood Fire Department still feels that free things are best. and shows that attitude by offering free classes to area residents and clubs. According to Lt. Gus Carbonell, in charge of the training division at the fire station, their department offers basic instruction in first aid, sunburn, snake bites, the Heimlick Maneuver, and introduction to CPR.

"We would like the citizens to be aware of the fact that these programs are available," said Lt. Carbonnell, a feeling shared by fire chief Charles Chapman. The department can also help citizens obtain certification through the American Heart Association, by offering a four and one-half hour course. Paramedics is a highly demanded field, and they are greatly needed. The departmen has five licensed paramedics.

The Longwood Fire Department also offers free blood pressure checks, at any time of the day, to individuals who need to keep a close monitor on their blood pressure.

Attention Senior Citizens: The Retired Senior Volunteer (RSVP) of Seminole County is looking for more senior citizens who would like to volunteer their wisdom, skills and time by helping others. The volunteers of RSVP gave over 72,000 hours of time last year alone in volunteer work. Special skills and in-depth training are not needed. All volunteers need have is a desire to be active, share the experience of their years and want to be a helper of others.

Volunteers are needed to give time in the following programs: American Red Cross, American Cancer Society, Adult Literacy League, Humane Society, Legal Aid Society, H.R.S., Central Florida Zoo. Central Florida Regional Hospital. Florida Hospital, or to help in nursing homes as Casselberry Adult Day Care Center, Life-Care Center, Longwood Health Care Center, Florida Living Nursing Home. To help man information booths at courthouses, sheriffs' offices, work in libraries, the Grove Counseling Center, or even join the sewing circle and make baby clothes for B.E.T.A.

Transportation can be provided. according to Joan Madison, the director of RSVP, to individuals who need it. The RSVP program is a non-profit organization, run on the support of federal grants, the Seminole County commission, and contributions of concerned citizens. The only qualification for volunteers is that they must be 60 years old or

For more information, call RSVP at 834-6550. The RSVP office is located in a portable at Longwood Elementary School. If anyone wishes to be part of this active force of people, and work in any of the hundreds of places that only a part were mentioned, call RSVP.

Garden Of The Month The home and grounds of Mrs. P.L. Sentell, 2215 Cordova, has been selected as "Garden of the Month" for July by the Garden Club of Sanford. A club spokesman said,"The garden has a well-groomed appearance and is very bright and cheerful-looking with an abundance of daylilles and caladiums."

DEAR ABBY: I'm a newlywed with my own home. I told my mother that I always put out pretty little guest towels for guests to use, but nobody ever used them, and she said you ran a cute poem in your column about the problem a few years ago.

If you run it again. I'll cut it out, frame it and hang it in the powder room. Thanks.

SHIRLEY

DEAR SHIRLEY: it was written over 30 yers ago by Mabel Craddock of Ventura, Calif., who said she had grown weary of having her guests dry their hands on tollet paper, bath mats and even curtains, leaving her guest towels untouched. She framed it and hung it over her guest towels.

A Guest Towel Speaks

Please use me, Guest: Don't healtate. Don't turn your back Or vacillate. Don't dry your hands On petticoat. On handkerchief, Or redingote. I'm here to use: I'm made for drying. Just hanging here

Gets very tiring.

DEAR ABBY: I know you might consider this a weird question, but if it is published, I will have the written proof that I am right. Anyway, I would simply like to confirm my belief that South America and North America are two separate continents even though they are connected. My boyfriend insists that they are one continent called "America." I disagree, and there is no way of convincing him unless he sees it in print.

KNOW IT ALL IN NORTH AMERICA

DEAR KNOW IT: You win. North America and South America are separate continents. Occasionally they have been referred to as "The Americas," but each is a continent unto itself.

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

TLC owner Richard Hollands with restored van.

Beat-Up Bodies Made Beautiful Again At TLC

It's name is TLC Custom Body Shop and TLC is Plywood underlays the floor and the whole thing what owner Richard Hollands and his staff give to vehicles that come into the shop.

Hollands loves cars, he's worked for 19 years in painting and body work and he's not afraid to take "We specialize in rust work and fabricating our own parts," he said. The shop, located at 34161/2 S. Orlando Ave.,

Saniord, is busy, with work progressing on several cars at the same time. And what cars they are — vintage Mustangs, GTOs, '65 Falcon convertibles. Some of them have been towed in as empty hulks but they will leave as beautifully restored cars. Hollands' pride and joy is a van which he bought from Continental Foods and has restored completely. The bed of the van had been virtually eaten away and rust holes were everywhere. During the 500 to 600 hours of working on the van, new metal has been placed in the vehicle with and solvents. Hollands also has a unique call-back system. He wants customers to bring their vehicles in every six months for a check-up. If problems arise or

Exercise And Heat: How Hot Is Too Hot

DEAR DR. LAMB - How hot or humid can it be outside before a person has trouble with heat exhaustion? What can you do to avoid getting overheated? For athletes what is the maximum temperature for practicing? Does humidity have a role in determining the maximum temperature? It is very humid here and on those days I seem to get a lot hotter doing just a little your exercise before 9 a.m. activity.

A famous British scientist (J.B.S. Haldanc) showed years ago that with a wet-bulb temperature of 85 degrees, if you sat quietly your body temperature would not rise but if the temperature rose primarily of two amino above this level your body acids found in your food. temperature would begin to rise. Or if you started exercising your body tem- acid, perature would rise.

On the basis of his observation it is generally stated that a wet-bulb temperature (which is pretty humid) of 78 degrees should be the maximum for physical activity and safety. The reason we don't have more problems is that the humidity is not usually that great in most places, except along the seacoast or other bodies of water.

It has been carefully studied for years by the Food and Drug Administration. Probably no artificial sweetener has been so scrutinized. It can't be used by people whohave phenylketonuria. But individuals who have this rare disease can't use a lot of things that naturally contain phenylalanine. Equal is no different from the common foods in that regard. So unless you have phenylkelonuria, enjoy

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

There is near unanimity among experts that when you hold two 4-card major suits, you should respond one heart rather than one spade to partner's minor-sult opening.

This is of particular importance with a minimum type response. If South responds one spade, partner will rebid one notrump and play it there. We aren't going to go into all the ramifications of play at that contract except to state that North will make six or seven tricks.

After the one-heart response. South will play in two hearts. A very bad player may find a way to go down. Any ordinary player will make his contract, and someone might actually find a way to make an overtrick. In any event, the one-heart responders come out significantly better. What would happen if North held four spades and two hearts? The spade-suit fit would be found since North would rebid one spade, not one no-trump. The only way any four-four major suit fit won't be found is if the one-heart response is passed by, Note that there is an important corollary to this principle. If you always respond one heart with four cards in each major. then a response of one spade over a minor followed by a second response of two hearts shows five spades.
