Seminoles Due Sizeable Sum In Land Stea

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sem inole Indians in Florida may get a sizeable amount of money for some 32-million acres of land the United States obtained through a forced treaty 143 years ago, but it won't be soon. The Indian Claims Commission reserved decision Monday on the date of a hearing to determine how much the federal government must pay. The Indians contend that land in Florida was sold for $1.25 an acre at public auction around 1823 but a Spanish land grant of earlier years had set the price at $1.50 an acre. This, the Indians say, would sindicate their land was worth more than $40 million when the government took possession. Roy Struble of Miami, attorney for the Indians, urged that a hearing date be set within the next four months. But Craig Decker, Justice Department attorney, said the government would need 18 months to prepare its case. The commission said it would decide within a few days when the hearing should start. The commission has had the case since 1950. In 1964 it ruled that the Indians had established claim to most of the present state of Florida in 1823.

Computing Magic

It is not unusual to find that the neighbor who has been swapping stories about the gardens he is trying to develop in the face of contrary growing conditions turns out to be noteworthy for his high standing in the profession to which he is devoted.

Thus it was not entirely unexpected to find that a man with whom we had labored in the field of United Fund campaigns popped out from the pages of a banking industry publication as a tireless, studious and successful pioneer in the use of the computer in his chosen profession.

Of course the man is Richard W. Keogh, vice president and cashior, Florida State Bank of Sanford. He has recognized the fact that "data processing is gatting to be more of a challenge to banking than ever before in its history.'
