Why Did Court Not Uphold Manslaughter Dismissal?

JUDGE SALFI

By TENI YARBOROUGH
 Herald Staff Writer

Unless his lawyer appeals to the state Supreme Court and wins, Jerome Alexander Jowais will stand trial in connection with the May 1981 death of 13-year-old Laurie Anne Hebel of Longwood.

Jowais 18, of 1561 Kenlyn Drive in Forest City was arrested May 17, 1981, after a car crashed into a group of girls walking along Wekiva Springs Road just north of Altamonte Springs, killing one of them and injuring four others.

Jowais was charged with manslaughter by operation of an automobile while intoxicated or deprived of full possession of normal faculties, Florida Highway Patrol Troopers said.

Until recently it appeared Jowais would never stand trial on that charge after a Seminole circuit judge ruled state prosecutors failed to bring the youth to trial within the 180-day limit as provided in the state's Speedy Trial Law.

However, the Fifth District Court of Appeal in Daytona Beach reversed Circuit Judge Dominick J. Salfi's decision and ordered that the case be returned to Salfi and a trial date for Jowais be set.

Salfi said there is a possibility the appellate court's decision could be appealed by defense lawyer Leon B. Cheek III to the state Supreme Court. The judge added that if the case is not appealed, he will set the trial for the earliest available docket.

Cheek could not be reached for comment concerning any efforts to appeal the ruling to the Supreme Court.

"We're elated," said W.J. Patterson, executive director of the Sanford state attorney office. "I assure you that as soon as we get that case back in this office, we'll prosecute. We're very excited about the court's ruling." "I'm waiting on the higher court's mandate and once I have it, I'll place it on the next docket," Salfi said.

But what exactly happened that tragic night that left one girl dead and her two sisters and two friends injured?

What events led to the case's dismissal and why did the appellate court reverse that decision?

According to Trooper G.H. Schluter, a vehicle allegedly driven by Jowais was traveling southbound in the outside lane of Wekiva Springs Road at about 1:20 a.m. on May 17, 1981. Meanwhile, five pedestrians, including the now-deceased Miss Hebel, Mary Anne Hebel, 10, Susan Anne Hebel, 15, Jerri Fockler, 14, and Judy Smerlish, 13, were walking southbound along the roadway, although it is undetermined if the girls were actually walking in the roadway, he said.

Schluter said the vehicle did not leave the roadway but upon impact of the right front fender with the five girls, the car swerved to the left and then back to the right shoulder of the road and stopped.

The driver, who Schluter identified as Jowais, reportedly rendered aid to Miss Fockler and Miss Smerlish, the least seriously injured of the five, and took them to the Hebel home at 101 Shadow Lake Drive where he sought emergency aid for all of the girls, the trooper said.

Schluter reported Jowais blood-alcohol level to be .24 percent at the time of the accident. State law provides that a person can be considered legally intoxicated if his blood-alcohol level is .1 percent.

Schluter added that other conditions contributed to the fatal accident including the vehicle's speed, estimated to be about 45 mph, and the fact the girls were walking with traffic and should have been walking against the flow of vehicles.

Schluter arrested Jowais, charging

GOLDEN GAMES

Sanford's Golden Age Games became a media event this year. Camera crews from several cable television networks taped portions of the contests for later use. Even the British Broadcasting Corp. has been on hand interviewing 65-and up age bracket winner of the

20,422 Could Vote In 4 Cities

By DONNA ESTES
 Herald Staff Writer

Some 20,422 voters are eligible to cast ballots in the four Seminole County cities — Sanford, Lake Mary, Longwood and Casselberry — scheduled to hold municipal elections on Dec. 7.

The names of 31 candidates will appear on the various ballots for 10 city council or city commission seats and one mayor's office.

In Lake Mary, one councilman — Kenneth King — has been automatically elected to a second two-year term in office. In Casselberry, Charles Glascock, a former councilman, has been automatically elected to a one-year split term. Neither King's name nor Glascock's will appear on the ballot.

At the same time in all four cities, a total of eight charter amendments or a referendum question also will appear on the ballots.

In the Sanford election, a three-pronged question on the city charter will ask voters for their choice. Question 1 concerns a new charter without residency districts for city commissioners; question 2 concerns a new charter with districting and question 3 is retention of the old city charter. Voters will be asked to vote positively on only one of the three questions.

On Lake Mary's ballot are three charter questions as well. Voters will be asked to vote "yes" or "no" on question 1 which could revise the charter in detail; question 2, which would extend council terms from two to four years; and question 3, which calls for single-member districts for four of the five council members. The four would run within a geographic district and be elected by residents of those districts only. The fifth councilman and the mayor would be elected at large.

The Longwood ballot includes a charter amendment to extend terms of the city commissioners from two to four years. If the amendment passes, the terms of the two commissioners elected this year would be four years. If it passes, the terms of those commissioners in office and not up for election this year — June Lormann, Chick Pappas and Steven Uskert — would have their terms, now set to expire in January 1984, extended for a year.

In Casselberry a binding referendum is on the ballot on initiating a paramedic program, calling for an additional tax for at least two years of $1.25 per $1,000 assessed valuation of real property.

If approved, the new tax would be levied, beginning with the 1983-84 fiscal year.

City voters approved a similar referendum a year ago, but the state forbade the city from levying the tax because of the ballot wording.

Sanford's city election ballot pits A.A. McClanahan against incumbent City Commissioner David Farr while Patricia "Pat" Baxley is challenging Commissioner Milton Smith.

Some 8,842 voters are eligible to vote in Sanford. Three city council seats and the mayor's office are involved in Lake Mary's election.

The candidates are: mayor — Dick Fess, Vic Olvera and Walter Sorenson, incumbent; Seat 1 (one-year term) — Barbara Ball, George F. Duryea, Charlie Lytle and Susan A. Stern; Seat 2 (two years) — William "Bill" Durrenberger, Colin Keogh, Russ Megonegal and James D. Stern; Seat 5

Grindle Gears Up For State House

By DONNA ESTES
 Herald Staff Writer

Art Grindle, businessman, lecturer and humanitarian, was elected to the Florida Legislature from Seminole County less than two weeks ago. Already he is gearing up to serve his constituents full-time.

"I'm looking forward to it," said the 59-year-old resident of Altamonte Springs.

His son, Artie, has taken over management of his business ventures and Grindle already has hired a legislative aide. She is Gloria Warden, who formerly worked as state Rep. Dick Batchelor's aide. Batchelor was defeated in his bid for a congressional seat.

Grindle, a Republican, won the District 35 seat by defeating Bettye Smith. The seat had been held for four terms by Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs. In the Nov. 2 win, Grindle had almost 2,000 votes to spare in the district, which is wholly contained within Seminole County.

Hattaway, meanwhile, was defeated in his bid for a Florida Senate post.

District 35 includes 36 precincts, stretching from Altamonte Springs through parts of Longwood into Lake Mary and Sanford.

Grindle already has established offices in the 701 Building in Altamonte Springs, where he had his campaign headquarters. In addition he plans a satellite office in Sanford. "I want to represent the district from end to end," he said, noting he has been a Sanford businessman for the past decade.

"People know I've been active in the community for the past 10 years. I'm interested in economics, business, government and free enterprise," said the Chicago native.

"I've been in Tallahassee a number of times. I've worked with the Republican Party there. I think the people perceived that I could serve well there," he said of his election victory.

The father of a son and two daughters, Grindle said he and his wife, Phyllis, are very family-oriented. And he sees the revival of the family tradition, believing the closeness of family is healthy for the community. "We have let people know that family is one of our priorities that has a positive effect and they know what the family units have done for America."

IN BRIEF

Reagan Is Not Going To Funeral Of Brezhnev

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Reagan will not be going to Moscow for Leonid Brezhnev's funeral, but his signature will appear in a condolence book to be sent to the Soviet Union.

Making his first visit to the Soviet Embassy, Reagan was expected to go to the Victorian-style mansion Saturday to sign the book. He will be accompanied by his wife, Nancy, who also will pay her personal respects. They were expected to be met on their brief visit by Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin.

The president said the selection of former KGB chief Yuri Andropov to succeed Brezhnev came as no surprise to U.S. officials and he is "sure" they can work together.

The Reagans will be following in the footsteps of Secretary of State George Shultz who went Friday to the Russian Embassy.

Shuttle Into Third Day

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI)—With their satellite-launching duties a success, the pilots of the shuttle Columbia began their third day in space Saturday and prepared for a Sunday space walk to open the way for a satellite repair mission in 1984.

Astronauts Joseph Allen and William Lenoir, the flight engineers on the five-day voyage, are scheduled to spend 3½ hours in the ship's open cargo bay Sunday morning.

They will be wearing new pressure suits and carrying newfangled space tools to practice unscrewing parts of an electronics box similar to one that failed on an unmanned sun-watching satellite called Solar Wax.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is planning to send a four-man shuttle crew up to fix the satellite in April 1984, on the 13th shuttle flight. Two space walks will be required.

The spacemen were awakened early today to the loe-tapping Texan tune of "Cotton Eyed Joe" radioed up at 2:19 a.m. EST as the Columbia sailed over Australia on the 29th orbit of its five-day mission.

SS Decisions Unlikely

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A presidential Social Security commission is still wrangling over ways to raise up to $200 billion for the cash-short system by 1990, but a key Democratic leader says taking benefits should be considered.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform failed to agree Friday on how to bail out the old-age system despite private hurdles centering on hiking payroll taxes and trimming the annual cost-of-living payment to retirees. Its three-day session was scheduled to end Saturday.

"Anyone who sees a consensus developing is very optimistic," said Senate Finance Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., estimating chances of compromise at less than 50-50.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee said it may be necessary to tax benefits to make up the system's shortfall. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., also warned he would not accept drastic payroll tax hikes or big cuts in the annual cost-of-living payment.

Marshall Davenport, 57, grimaces in pain as he strikes the bar on an unsuccessful attempt in the high jump at Thursday's decathlon competition in the Golden Age Games. Davenport, of Naples, was successful later as he cleared 4-foot, 2-inches to win the event. Davenport finished second in the overall decathlon competition.

The Decathlon: A True Test Of Athletic Skill, Endurance

By MICHAEL BEHIA
Herald Staff Writer

The decathlon, 10 events designed to test the strength, skill and stamina of competitors, has turned out some of the world's greatest athletes.

The names Jim Thorpe, Bill Toomey, Rafer Johnson and Bruce Jenner — legends in track and field — are synonymous with the decathlon.

And while John Ulam and Gilberto Gonzalez may not go down in history alongside the others, their accomplishments are noteworthy nonetheless.

Ulam, 58, from Murrysville, Pa., won the 55-64 age bracket and Gonzalez, 69, won the 65 and up age bracket in the decathlon at this week's Golden Age Games.

Ulam captured the decathlon championship in 1980, but did not compete last year. In his absence, Donald Hull, 64, of Port Orange, took the championship.

This year's competition was a barnburner. The duo duelled in the sprints, with a controversial close victory in the 50-yard dash going to Hull. The dispute prompted to promise Ulam that if the men were within two points of each other at the end of the competition they would settle it in a run-off.

Where Ulam took the victory was in the discus and softball throw. He took first in those two events and captured third in several others.

Marshall Davenport, 57, of Naples, took second in the 55-64 age group, turning a first place in the high jump and a consistent all-around performance into a silver medal. Hull came in third.

Ulam's story is remarkable. He went into the Mater's AAU track program about eight years ago.

"Two years later, I had a minor coronary in a race," he said. "Doctors told me I'd never race again, but with hard work, here I am."

In the older bracket, Gonzalez, an international performer, easily captured first place. He recorded firsts in nine events. In the final event, the 220-yard dash, a pulled muscle hampered his stride and he settled for third place.

Lynn Thomas, 71, of Youngstown, Ohio, finished second in the event. John Cameron, 71, of North Port, Fla., finished third.

The grueling 10-event competition took its toll on the competitors. Gonzalez pulled a groin muscle in the high jump and may have to pull out of today's meet in Buenos Aires. Ulam aggravated a rib injury and coasted in the 220-yard dash. Hull was limping down the backstretch, but recorded a sub-30 second 220-yard time.

Other competitors were complaining about various aches and pains, but were already planning for next year.

One competitor who's looking forward to next year's decathlon is Hull who'll step up to the older age bracket to face three-time winner Gonzalez.

Marie Louise Holbert, 60, of Kirkwood, Mo., captured first place in the women's competition. Second place went to Harriet Boyd, 59, of Lake Mary, and third went to Kay Thompson, 59, of Lake Mary.

Girl Doused With Fuel, Burned

By TENI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

A two-year-old Altamonte Springs girl is being treated at Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs for second-degree burns after someone apparently doused her with kerosene and set the fuel afire.

Sallie C. Washington, of 516 Amanda St., was rushed to the hospital by her mother, Johnnie Mae Washington, at about 12:16 p.m. Friday where doctors treated her for burns on her right hand and forehead, Seminole County sheriff's deputies said. Doctors later released the young girl as an out-patient but will continue treatment of the burns.

Deputies said the young girl was playing in the front yard of the home of Grace Lewis of 104 Leonard St. with other neighborhood children. At about 12:16 p.m., Ms. Lewis said she discovered that the child had been set afire by an undisclosed person and notified the young girl's mother, who rushed her to the hospital, deputies said.

Deputies said the case has been turned over to counselors at the state Health and Rehabilitative Services Department and that their probe is continuing. No further details were available.

WOMAN GETS THREE YEARS PROBATION

A 30-year-old Orlando woman has begun serving a three years probation following her conviction of battery on a police officer.

Susan V. Truesdell was sentenced Wednesday following her conviction on the battery charge to a Casselberry police officer in September.

Ms. Truesdell, whose arm was broken in three places during a scuffle with Casselberry police who were attempting to arrest another man when Ms. Truesdell allegedly intervened, has filed a civil lawsuit against the City of Casselberry, the police department and one of its officers as a result of the incident.

POLICE SEIZE BOOZE, DRUGS

Authorities seized 27 bottles of alcoholic beverages, four kegs of beer and a small amount of cocaine during an early morning raid Wednesday of an Altamonte Springs lounge which does not have a liquor license.

Altamonte Springs police and state beverage department agents raided the Hotline Lounge, 803 W. State Road 436, at 3:05 a.m. and seized the illegal alcoholic beverages and drugs.

While no arrests were made at the time of the raid, police said arrests are pending.

The raid came after a one-month investigation by undercover agents who said that until about a month ago, the establishment had been a bottle club where customers brought their own liquor. However, customers then began paying a $7 entertainment charge and received alcoholic beverages free, although no entertainment was provided, police said.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH HITTING HUSBAND

A Casselberry woman was charged with aggravated battery Tuesday after her husband told police she hit him in the face with a stereo, threw him on the floor and left him with a broken arm.

Toyce Younkin, 47, of 530 Diane Circle, was arrested after her husband, Donald, 54, said his wife called him back into the living room after the couple had been fighting to talk out their

$293 Million Austerity Plan Will Be Considered

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—Gov. Bob Graham and the Cabinet will consider a $293 million austerity plan this week, including a 2.49 percent across-the-board cut in state spending, to offset a revenue shortfall.

Graham and top legislative leaders proposed the plan, calling it "the fairest and most equitable" way to adjust the state's budget to the lower-than-expected tax collections.

The three-part plan includes:

- Cleaning out the working capital "rainy day" fund for the remaining $12.9 million;
- Saving $199.9 million by the across-the-board 2.49 percent spending cuts, which will include state aid to local school districts;
- And saving $80.6 million through a series of technical budgetary maneuvers, including a postponement of a $44 million appropriation for the demolition of the existing Sunshine Skyway Bridge over Tampa Bay in 1985.

The plan, which will be considered by Graham and the Cabinet Tuesday, was immediately blasted by FTP-NEA, a teacher's union.

Barge Rams Skyway Again

ST. PETERSBURG (UPI)—Traffic over the ill-fated Sunshine Skyway bridge was shut down for two hours during the evening rush hour Friday when a barge rammed the bridge for the second time in three days.

The bridge was closed for seven hours Tuesday morning when a 300-foot barge broke loose from its moorings and struck the bridge.

Damage to the bridge was minor in both accidents, officials said.

A phosphate freighter rammed the western span of the two-bridge thoroughfare over lower Tampa Bay during a violent storm in May 1980, killing 35 people and wrecking the span.

"We closed the bridge as soon as they radioed in," Winters said. "Maintenance sent a team out but they found just superficial damage, nothing serious."

Measles Outbreak Spreads

United Press International

The measles outbreak among Miami area school children is spreading to other areas of the state.

School officials in adjacent Broward County and in Palm Beach County and the Tampa area moved to ward off a measles emergency such as the one declared in Dade County. The disease also has turned up in Charlotte County.

At least 118 pupils from more than 20 different schools in Dade have been diagnosed as victims of the 10-day rubella measles. It is the nation's largest active measles outbreak.

Walesa Is Reported Out Of Confinement, Headed Home

WARSAW (UPI)—Lech Walesa, fiery leader of the banned Solidarity union, left his remote internment center Saturday for home, the Interior Ministry reported as Polish martial law entered its 12th month.

"He has been released and left Arlanowo," the ministry said in a statement issued 11 months to the day after Walesa was detained along with thousands of other Solidarity union activists in the martial-law crackdown Dec. 13, 1981.

Arlanowo was the isolated hunting lodge near the Soviet border where he was held, an official Interior Ministry spokesman said.

"He left today," the spokesman said. "I don't know any more details. I don't know what time."

He said he could not tell whether Walesa had left by car or helicopter from the plush hunting lodge, isolated in the middle of a mountainous forest region about 5 miles from the Soviet border.

Andropov Begins Rule

MOSCOW (UPI)—Yuri Andropov Saturday began his first full day as the most powerful man in the Soviet Union after vowing to maintain his nation's military prowess because "you cannot beg for peace from imperialists."

Andropov, 68, who ruled over the feared KGB intelligence agency for 15 years before leaving in May to enter the political mainstream, replaced Leonid Brezhnev as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party.

Andropov told the Communist Party Central Committee that elected him to the top party post Friday, the nation's task is to "consistently put into life the home and foreign policy course of our party and the Soviet state which has elaborated under the guidance of Leonid Ilyich Brezhnev."

Iran Choosing Ruler

LONDON (UPI)—In a first step toward choosing a successor to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's Islamic regime is bringing together the country's Muslim clergymen in a council of experts, Iranian sources said.

At least 60 religious men were expected to be designated members of the prestigious council, which will decide who should become Iran's religious leader when Khomeini dies.

Daoud Parvizian, an official of the Islamic Republic News Agency who announced his defection to the opposition Thursday, told a news conference in London Friday Ayatollah Hossein Montazeri was widely expected to succeed Khomeini.

Feather Is Supported

An open thank-you to Commissioner Feather: A warm, heartfelt thank-you to a true champion of the people. He's the only commissioner who had the intestinal fortitude at Tuesday night's hearing to rebuke his colleagues for their inconsistent decisions regarding rezoning of lands in our charming Seminole County. From my view, he is the only commissioner worthy of the title and the only one who consistently and constantly has our citizens interests at heart. The others have constantly shown that big business pulls their weight and dictates their decisions. How sad.

Again, Commissioner Feather, thank you for caring enough about a small community of decent citizens who opposed a big, ugly, noisy, industry who is encroaching on our once quiet neighborhood.

Common Sense Should Prevail

In some states it is called "Strip Mining", here in Lake Mary they call it a "borrow pit." Call it by any name, these pits being dug in Lake Mary, denude the beauty, disallow any further use of the land, and forever scar the face of this earth with nothing left but a huge mosquito breeding area. Progress is fine, but common sense should prevail in requiring these areas be returned to some semblance of their former beauty and use. G.B.O. Sanford

Syndrome Group Formed

The media plays a major role in educating people about Tourette Syndrome. An amazing 96 percent of Tourette patients learned about their disorder through newspaper articles, or radio and television. Tourette Syndrome, a neurological disorder, often goes undiagnosed for an average of seven years. We are working hard to educate the public about T.S. because early diagnosis can help alleviate much of the pain and psychological damage done to both victim and family.

involuntary muscular movements, uncontrollable vocal sounds, and sometimes involuntary profanity. The onset is between the ages of 2 and 16. Males are afflicted about three times more often than females. Children with T.S. are viewed as bizarre, disruptive, and frightening. Frequently, they are subject to ridicule, rejection by their peers, neighbors, teachers, and even casual observers. Parents, too, are overwhelmed by the strangeness of their child's behavior. The child may be threatened, excluded from family activities, and prevented from enjoying normal social relationships. According to the Tourette Syndrome Association, the disorder is most frequently misdiagnosed as a psychological illness. Correct diagnosis may take an average of more than seven years to be made. Early diagnosis and treatment are urgent if the child is to avoid untold psychological harm. The longer the child is subjected to other people's beliefs that he is different or crazy, the more likely he is to believe it.

The Central Florida Chapter of the Tourette Syndrome Association is located at 409 South Orlando Avenue, Cocoa Beach, Florida 32931. They have free pamphlets and brochures as well as a film that explains more about the disorder. For further information, contact Eleanor Curry, at 305-783-3248. Thank you for your consideration.

Emergency Crew Thanked

As I was driving down Highway 436 in Altamonte Springs (Oct. 21, 1982), my mother began to choke. I immediately stopped and tried to help her, but I was unable to do so. Two young men also stopped to assist us. Finally, the Altamonte Springs Police Department

Price Makes A Difference

Recently I read with interest about the City of Sanford being dissatisfied with the benches in the city. It seems as though the benches are not kept up and are an eyesore and disgrace to the city.

The city awarded this bench contract on a bid basis about two years ago. The city Council minutes will reflect that another bench company refused to bid because "the city's contract criteria was too rigid... it would be impossible for a company to break even let alone make a profit under the stringent criteria set forth by the city of Sanford." It appears this has come back on the city now. I guess you really get what you pay for. Perhaps there is a lesson to be learned here?

Getting Lame Ducks All In A Row

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A local pundit, who has been around long enough to know better, found significance the other day in the fact that the forthcoming "lame duck" session of Congress would be a post-election assembly.

In the care and feeding of lame ducks might be useful. Lame ducks are with us every two years no matter what. They are lawmakers who either get knocked off in the congressional elections or else do not choose to run for reelection. Until their successors take office in January, they retain the duties and trappings.

Ordinarily, lame ducks don't do much except mope around, sign contracts to write their memoirs and pack their belongings for shipment back home. Some go abroad for their final fact-finding missions as leaders of the Western World. A few continue to issue press releases just as though nothing had happened.

Collectively, these activities are known as "the swan song of the lame duck." As far as I know, it has never been set to music or choreographed for the New York City Ballet.

What Pills Are Safe?

Q. I have severe arthritis and take aspirin in one form or another several times a day. The recent murders — where some demented people have poisoned bottles of over-the-counter drugs — have left me in a state of panic. How can we feel safe buying non-prescription drugs?

Growing Older

U.S. Rep.
Claude Pepper

A. All of us have been profoundly disturbed by the tragic events you refer to. Your fears are shared by the millions who have witnessed the consequences of these devastating crimes. But be assured that the drug companies and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration are taking immediate steps to prevent any recurrence of this criminal adulteration. The FDA is developing regulations to require tamper-resistant packaging for all non-prescription drugs, and, in the meantime, there are already several types of tamper-resistant packaging which do protect the contents and will allow you to purchase your medications with confidence.

sumer has the most vital role to play in defending against this type of crime. It is deeply disheartening that our society is victimized by grotesque actions that seem to threaten us all. But fortunately, we are able to mobilize quickly to protect ourselves and our loved ones. In this instance, we have alternatives to assure some peace of mind in the purchase of necessary medications. And further actions by our regulatory agencies, the companies themselves, and consumers can assure that we are not vulnerable to such violence in the future.

Q. I am 57 years old and have worked at the same company for 26 years. The company recently offered an early retirement bonus to all employees in my section who are 55 or over and have put in 20 years of service. They're offering a one-time bonus of $50,000 and are willing to pay our health and life insurance until we reach 65. It sounds real good, but something tells me to hold off.

A. The "open window" retirement plan you describe is similar to many being offered to older workers throughout the country. Employers in various industries are seeking to reduce their workforces, especially among higher-salaried employees.

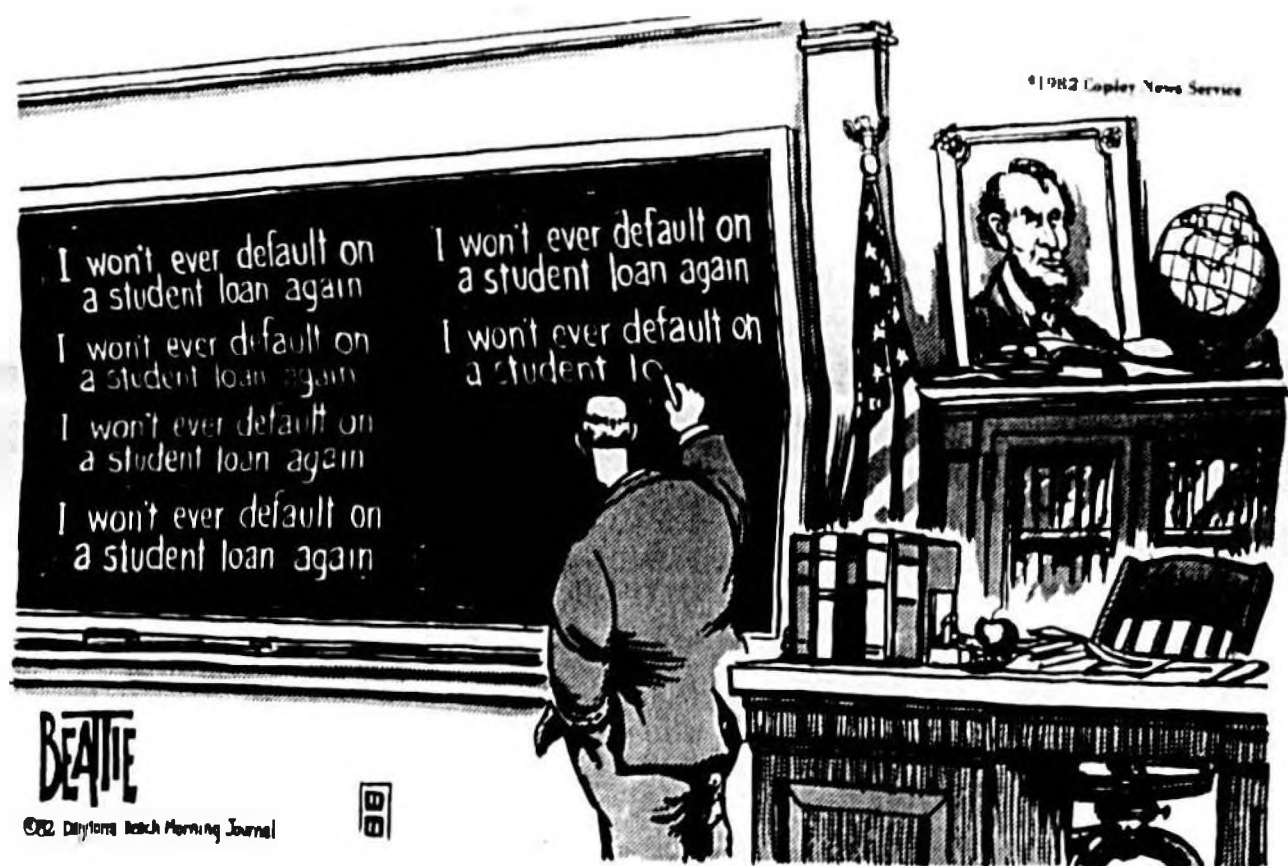

They anticipate that a voluntary reduction in manpower, prompted by attractive benefits, will cost them less in the long run than other alternatives such as lay-offs (which would affect younger workers with less seniority at lower salary ranges), salary freezes, or salary cuts. However, I would advise caution to anyone who is considering such an early retirement option, especially during the current economic recession.

While the incentives may seem very attractive, one should weigh their value over the long run. Workers who retire early are more likely to face financial difficulty later in life. On the average, one who lives to 65 can expect to live an additional 16.3 years. Ask yourself how substantial the offered benefits will be 10 years down the line? Twenty-five years into the future? What appears to be a nice pension or award now may be worth very little later considering inflation.

Many older workers who take advantage of such options expect to find other work to supplement their incomes. However, unemployment is now at its highest rate since World War II. There are 771,000 unemployed over the age of 55, as well as an additional 334,000 "discouraged workers" who have just given up on finding work. Once unemployed, older persons are often unable to re-enter the workforce, largely because of age discrimination. There is no question that for some, the opportunity to retire early with a financial bonus is a good one. But it is wise to ask yourself realistic questions about future security.

Write to Rep. Pepper in care of this newspaper. The volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Molester Law Changes Sought

(Mr. Harold Johnson is an editor at Public Research, Syndicated).

Irving Prager's office is a tranquil place. Situated on a wooded campus in this quiet residential community east of Los Angeles, the 42-year-old law professor's mildly cluttered study breathes the serenity that is perhaps peculiar to academia.

But Prager, who spent more than a dozen years as a federal and state prosecutor, is by no means detached from the concerns of the outside world. Indeed, he is one of the nation's leading authorities on a grim problem that touches communities everywhere — that of child molestation.

And, concerned over what he terms the "inadequate and unrealistic" measures that many states take against convicted molesters, he recently founded at the University of La Verne College of Law a research and consulting center to promote revision of relevant statutes across the country.

Child molestation, he maintains, "is probably the most commonly committed serious crime against persons in the United States." A precise determination of its frequency cannot be made, since no state or federal agency compiles statistics on this offense as a distinct category. However, according to Prager, studies of groups of adults asked to report confidentially whether they were victimized as children suggest that "between 1/3 and 1/2 of our entire population has experienced this sort of exploitation while growing up."

The problem is made more severe, he adds, by "its apparent tendency to grow geometrically."

"This is a result of what seems to be a connection between being molested as a child and molesting others on becoming an adult," he contends. "And since many convicted molesters admit to having abused scores of children, we could be faced with a vastly greater number of molesters when those abused children grow up."

Few states have "sufficiently come to grips with this alarming problem," he laments. For instance, despite the fact that leading mental health experts contend that child molesters are not mentally ill and therefore cannot respond to any known psychiatric treatment, laws in many states allow for the hospitalization rather than imprisonment of convicted molesters, and for their release on the recommendation of hospital officials. This often means that an offender is isolated from society only for very short periods of time.

The Children's Rights Center which Prager has established in La Verne will work with prosecutors, legislators and citizens groups around the country to help change such procedures. He is already advising groups in several states — including New York, Massachusetts and Colorado — on how to replace or modify statutes in those jurisdictions.

Prager is well suited for this task. A graduate of Georgetown University Law School, he was an assistant U.S. attorney in Los Angeles from 1968 to 1974 and a deputy district attorney in Ventura County, California for the succeeding seven years. He played a key role in the successful effort last year to abolish California's Mentally Disordered Sex Offender hospitalization program.

Under that program, sex offenders could be released as outpatients after spending as few as three months in the state hospital.

In place of the MDSO program, California adopted a new law, written in part by Prager, which provides for, among other things, mandatory imprisonment of child molesters and rapists. Prager terms the enactment of this legislation "the most dramatic change in this state's criminal code in decades."

A genial, soft-spoken individual who admits to being "fairly sedentary by nature," Prager was stirred to action on this issue by a 1978 murder case he handled as a deputy district attorney.

That case involved the savage abuse, mutilation and killing of a two-year-old girl by oft-convicted child molester Theodore Frank. Frank's most recent hospital stay — in California's Atascadero State Hospital — had ended just prior to the murder.

Despite the fact he told hospital officials he had molested over 100 children through the years, Frank was pronounced a model patient who responded well to treatment. Indeed, shortly after his release he was invited back to the institution as a guest speaker and an example of the success of extensive therapy.

Several weeks later he committed the crime for which he now occupies a cell on California's death row.

Prager recalls that, in developing background material for the Frank case, he discovered that the hospital made mistakes "hand over fist" concerning the suitability of patients for release.

He notes with somber satisfaction that the new statute he helped author has taken authority over the release of convicted molesters out of the hands of those who were so beguiled by Frank.

However, "There is still more to be done in the way of reform in this state," he adds. Specifically, he would like to see laws passed that "lessen the burden currently placed on molestation victims, to testify many times and to many people" during the course of the investigation and trial.

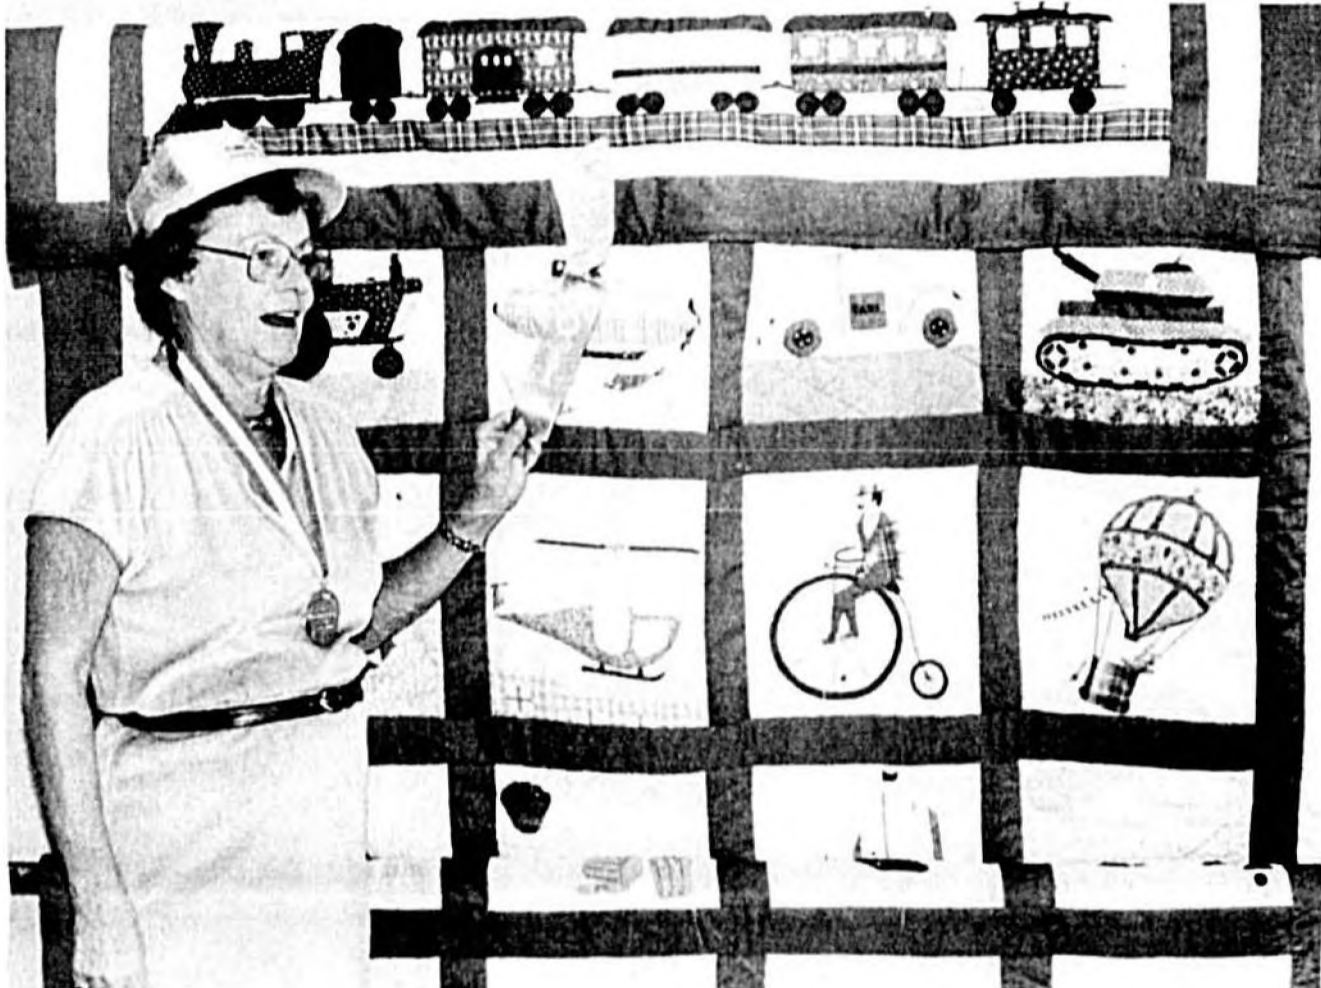

"Molestation is traumatic enough for the child without the legal system harrassing him or her unnecessarily," Prager asserts. "In terms of the psychological effects on its victims, molestation is as serious as rape."

Accordingly, he hopes that resources previously devoted to attempts to help the perpetrators of the crime will in future be employed to aid the victims.

ARTS 'N CRAFTS

The oil painting at right, "Old Man with Violin," won a gold medal in the art division at the Golden Age Games Hobby Show for the artist, Gloria McIntire of Orlando. It also took a first place ribbon in oil painting. Margaret Konepke of Zellwood Station proudly displays the gold medal she won for her quilt in the needlework division in the Golden Age Games Hobby Show held at the Sanford City Hall. The quilt called "On the Go," which took her about a year to complete, also won a first place ribbon in quilts category.

Nowadays, Nearly Every School Has A Computer

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Computers have not only arrived in the nation's classrooms, but will, in fact, be familiar as chalk and erasers in more than half the country's 16,000 school districts in the academic year just beginning.

The U.S. Department of Education says about one out of every four public schools — about 22,000 — currently has at least one microcomputer or computer terminal for instructional use by students.

The study shows these schools represent one-half of all secondary schools, 14 percent of all elementary schools, and 19 percent of all other types of schools — vocational, special education, combined elementary and secondary schools.

"Computers in the classroom mark a significant change in the educational process," said Willard McGuire, president of the National Education Association, the biggest teachers' union. "It is natural for teachers to have a number of questions about them.

"The so-called 'human issue' — whether computers will possibly replace teachers — is one of these questions, while a second is the effectiveness of the new instructional techniques."

One of the problems is that many kids have had their first introduction to computers via computer games — electronic sounds, bursts of color, explosions, and other exciting phenomena, as in Star Wars, Pac-Man, Galaxy, and similar games.

When they get to the classroom version of the computer, they've got to make a mind-set change. The brain tuned into Pac-Man and such now must focus on reading, arithmetic, and other academic subjects on the screen of the computer terminal.

A major challenge faced by teachers is making the computerized instruction just as interesting as computer games.

"Currently, teachers are spending hours adjusting computer programs — often written by computer company employees who aren't teachers — to classroom work, to the objectives of the academic courses, and to the learning experience of the student," said Javetta Richardson, program coordinator and member of the NEA's Instruction and Professional Development staff.

In the near future, other emerging technologies are expected to join computers in the classroom as the electronic era moves to front and center on the academic scene.

One example of what's ahead:

The NEA and the American Broadcasting Company have been working cooperatively on Schooldisc, a program that permits videodisc instructional material to be used with or without a computer hookup. A nationwide pilot program involving Schooldisc is being carried out by the U.S. Department of Education.

For parents and teachers who want to catch up or keep up, the NEA is selling "Computers in the Classroom," edited by Henry S. Kepner Jr., and featuring a foreword by Bruce E. Brombacher, 1982 Teacher of the Year.

The book, $7.95, is available from the NEA Professional Library, P.O. Box 509, West Haven, Conn., 06516. Stock number, 1825-7-30, must accompany order — presumably so the computer at the library can help fill the order correctly.

Balloon Procedure May Make Heart Surgery Unnecessary

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — It took about eight seconds for a 59-year-old Lake City woman to make medical history.

In eight seconds, a team of University of Florida doctors inflated a tiny plastic balloon inside the 59-year-old woman's heart — unclogging a blocked valve without surgery, officials announced this week.

The procedure, called valvuloplasty, spares patients from painful and costly operations when heart valves clog. Doctors insert a tiny balloon into the valve and slowly inflate it to push the blockage free.

The woman underwent the treatment in September, showing physicians the procedure can be successful in adults. Five children under 14 have undergone the process at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md., officials said.

"The significant factor in our successful valvuloplasty is the patient's 59-year-old age," Dr. Carl Pepine said. "An adult would be expected to have much thicker tissue surrounding the heart valves because the defect usually has been present since birth.

"Now, age does not appear to be a major factor in applying this non-surgical procedure," the cardiologist said.

Avoiding surgery can save patients thousands of dollars and spare them about 10 additional days of hospitalization and a two-month recovery period, Pepine said.

"Inflating the balloon is the most critical part of valvuloplasty," he said. "Ten seconds is about all the heart will tolerate. The expanded balloon completely occludes the valve opening, stopping up blood in the right chamber and preventing the blood flow into the rest of the body.

"Total blockage could produce hypotension (low pressure in the heart chamber) and slow the heart beat to a dangerously low level," he said.

Although it takes a balloon only eight seconds to clear a valve, the whole procedure takes about an hour and a half, Pepine said.

The most time-consuming step involves threading a tube containing the balloon into a leg vein, through the blood vessels and into the heart.

Using X-ray television monitors, doctors guide the tube through the body, similar to another technique — called angioplasty — in which balloons are used to unclog coronary arteries.

Once the job is done, physicians carefully slide the balloon back through the leg.

"Based on the success of angioplasty, our cardiology team had been considering the possibilities of valvuloplasty for about six months," Pepine said.

Heating, Cooling Grants Available From State Agency Starting On Monday

TALLAHASSEE — Low-income Florida residents can begin applying for grants Monday from the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS).

The program, authorized by Congress, is designed to help low-income families and individuals meet the costs of home energy. Assistance will be limited to a one-time only payment to eligible households. The program is not a crisis program and does not pay monthly utility bills.

HRS, which is administering the program, estimates that more than 150,000 low-income households throughout the state may apply for aid.

In order to qualify for assistance, households would have to meet income standards based on family size and total cash income of all household members. Income limits are $390 per month for an individual, $518 for two persons, $775 for four, $1032 for six, plus $128 for each additional person.

Payments will vary among eligible households based on differences in total household income, fuel type, the geographic area of the state in which the home is located and the number of persons in the home.

People interested in applying for assistance must do so by December 31. Applications are available at the Sanford HRS Economic Services office at 105 1/2 N. Oak Avenue, 322-1661, ext. 125, as well as other locations including Area Agencies on Aging, Community Action Agencies and county welfare offices. At some of these locations, staff members will be available to assist applicants in filling out the necessary form. Applications returned by mail must be sent to the address printed on the application. A decision will be made within 45 days of receiving the application. Applicants will be notified by mail whether or not they are eligible to receive assistance. HRS officials said all notices should go out by late January.

The Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program includes one payment for both heating and cooling expenses. There will be no separate application period for the cooling assistance later on.

Wanna Ride The Shuttle?

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — Space administration officials said they were not amused by an Illinois-based mail order company's selling places in line to ride the space shuttle for $20 each.

JS&A Products is offering readers of its catalog a chance to ride "America's first commercial passenger-carrying space flight" on the shuttle.

"JS&A will randomly select the six participants from a listing of those interested parties who apply," the offer says.

The advertisement is based on the company's petition to NASA to become the first business booking commercial air travel in space.

The catalog says the around-the-world shuttle trip would cost no more than the $5,440 price of a similar first-class trip aboard a jetliner.

The numbered certificates the company is selling for $20 each will be used in a lottery to be held at a future date. The lottery will select the people who get seats on a shuttle flight.

The lottery winners are guaranteed postflight press conferences and "homecoming festivities" organized by the JS&A public relations department.

"Some time during the flight you will be allowed in the cockpit where NASA astronauts will personally describe the flight systems to you ... You will witness the release of satellites from the space shuttle's bay ... see the satellites checkout procedure ... and finally you will be able to take snapshots of all this activity. The flight should never be boring," the JS&A ad promises.

The place-in-line certificates are being promoted as a novel gift for the holidays, but JS&A advises "those sincere" about taking a shuttle flight to write for information about the firm's negotiations with NASA.

"Please keep in mind that it may take years before such a flight is launched and besides, who knows what NASA will say when they read this," advises the catalog ad.

NASA spokesmen said they don't think the JS&A venture will get off the ground.

"I wouldn't hold my breath waiting, we don't book space shuttle flights through catalogs," said Joe Kukowski, chief of shuttle information at the Johnson Space Flight Center in Houston, Texas.

"I think it's important that we quash this thing right away because it looks like a sucker deal," he said.

Bill O'Donnell, a NASA spokesman at the Kennedy Space Flight Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla., said he has asked the NASA legal department to look into the JS&A advertisements.

"Of course, anyone can petition NASA for anything, but that doesn't mean they'll get an answer, and I'm not aware of any negotiations with those people," said O'Donnell.

"In the past, a number of organizations have booked space on space flights, like Pan American Airways, as a promotional thing looking toward when they may some day be flying in space. But I don't think they were asking for an exchange of money," he said.

Optimists Pick Top Students

Recently, representative from the Sanford Optimist Club visited Lake Mary High School.

On Oct. 27, 12 of Lake Mary's outstanding students were interviewed by the Optimists in reference to "Youth Appreciation Week."

The LMHS administration nominated and voted for students to receive recognition in each of the following categories: scholarship, leadership, athletics and music.

The nominees were: scholarship — Philip Haile, Elaine McDonagh, and Patti Lucas; leadership — Robbie Greenstein, Jolene Beckler, and Michelle Sawyer; athletics — Ed Ades, Kun Averill, and Iz Stone; and music — David Jones, Chris Porter, and Margaret Watson.

After the interviews were completed, the Optimists chose four winners: Philip Haile, Robbie Greenstein, Kun Averill, and Margaret Watson.

These four attended a special luncheon on Wednesday along with LMHS principal Don Reynolds.

Lake Mary's second "Homestay" is quickly approaching and with much anticipation. Spirit Week will be started with a series of dress-up days, culminating in the varsity football game against New Smyrna Beach at 8 p.m. on Friday.

Along with the presentation of Lake Mary's first homestay floats, this year's King and Queen will be announced. We're looking for a big turnout, so come out to LMHS this Friday.

Seminole Swimmers Make Waves

Making a big splash this year, the Seminole swim team has ended its season with a record of 6-6.

They placed fourth in our conference and sixth in the county. The members of this hard-working team will be listed in next week's column as Coach Knight was not available for comment.

All of the members of the team gave their best effort to show the spirit and pride of Seminole. They have made up one of the biggest teams the school has had in the past few years.

This week's Tribe members are Chon Gann and Phil Fausnight. For three years at Seminole, Chon has been both a trainer and a soccer player. He also received the Junior Class Citizenship Award. Phil is involved in the tennis and swim teams. He is also a member of National Honor Society.

This week's schedule includes:
Monday — yearbook assemblies: 2nd period, seniors; 3rd period, juniors; 4th period, sophomores.
Tuesday and Wednesday — yearbook sales.
Thursday — club photos; football at Spruce Creek.
Friday — state swim meet, University of Florida.

The Navratilova-King matchup lasted well over two hours and was in doubt until the end. King and Mayer won the second set, 6-3, and generally dominated the play with a combination of placement shots and teamwork.

Pacers End 76ers' Streak, 117-108

United Press International For the first time this season, the Philadelphia 76ers' had to do some explaining.

"We didn't do a good job getting back on defense and they were getting good outlet passes," said Sixers' Coach Billy Cunningham Friday night, after his team lost for the first time in seven games, dropping a 117-108 decision to the Indiana Pacers.

Bulls 113, Nets 105 At Chicago, Ronnie Lester scored 21 points and rookie Rod Higgins and Reggie Theus added 16 each to lead the Bulls. Mickey Johnson led New Jersey with 20.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Gooding's Will Open New 'Superstore' Dec. 1

On Dec. 1, Gooding's of Altamonte Springs will open its newest, largest and most complete "superstore" at the Marketplace shopping center in the Bay Hill area of Orlando, located at Doctor Phillips Boulevard and Sand Lake Road. This Gooding's store gives an added, innovative dimension to supermarket shopping.

The new Gooding's store, which will be open 24 hours daily, cover approximately 47,000 square feet and has approximately 25,000 items. Gooding's Marketplace store will offer high quality merchandise and services in categories ranging from a homemade ice cream and candy shoppe to a wine shoppe to a pizza and pasta shoppe, a cheese shoppe, a florist shoppe and a salad bar by the pound to go.

Gooding's Supermarkets have been a tradition in the Central Florida community for nearly 23 years with locations in Maitland, Daytona and Altamonte Springs.

Bank Merger Approved

Shareholders of Great American Banks, Inc., of Miami have approved the merger of Great American with Barnett Banks of Florida, Inc.

In a special shareholders meeting, a majority of Great American's outstanding shares was voted in favor of the Barnett acquisition. Shareholder approval was one of the conditions required for the pending merger which was announced June 28.

The $47 million acquisition still requires regulatory approval. Pending that, it is expected to be completed by the end of the first quarter of 1983.

Barnett is offering Great American shareholders a choice of 10-year tax-deferred senior investment notes or cash amounting to $17 per share. Barnett has a definitive agreement with ComBank Corp. of Winter Park to purchase its controlling interest in Great American. ComBank's position consists of Great American common stock as well as preferred stock and warrants which, if converted and exercised, would total nearly 56 percent of the outstanding stock.

Great American is a six-county banking organization made up of eight banks with 19 offices. The offices are in Hillsborough, Dade, Broward, Pinellas, Monroe and Alachua counties.

The merger would give Barnett a substantially increased market presence in fast-growing Hillsborough, and it would signal Barnett's first entry into Monroe County by the acquisition of Great American Bank of the Florida Keys in Tavernier.

Sun Stock Is Called

The $4.375 cumulative convertible preferred stock of Sun Banks of Florida has been called for redemption on Dec. 10 at a redemption price of $53.363 per share, which includes accrued dividends of 30 cents per share to the redemption date.

The shares of stock are convertible into shares of Sun common stock at the rate of 2.778 shares of common stock for each share of preferred stock. However, this conversion privilege expires at the close of business on Dec. 9. Shares of preferred stock that are not converted into common stock by Dec. 9 will be redeemed by Sun on Dec. 10 and will no longer be outstanding or accrue dividends after that date.

Sales For Scotty's Up 4%

Dennis W. Stults, executive vice president of Scotty's, Inc., has reported sales for the four weeks ended Oct. 30, of $23,824,000, an increase of 4 percent over sales of $22,794,000 for the corresponding four weeks last year.

Stults explained sales for the final three weeks were up 15 percent from those of last year. The first week of October 1982 was not comparable with last year because of a major chain-wide promotion in that week last year. A similar 1982 promotion was included in the prior accounting period.

Stults added the sales for the 17 weeks ended Oct. 30 were $99,323,000 or 7 percent over sales of $92,703,000 for the 17 weeks ended Oct. 24, 1981.

Stults also commented that builder sales in the last two months have reflected a strengthening in the housing and construction activity in Scotty's markets as compared with the previous several months.

Scotty's opened a new store in Tampa on Oct. 26, bringing the total stores in operation to 99.

Kautz Heads Farm Bureau

Walter J. Kautz was re-elected president of the Florida Farm Bureau Federation at the organization's 41st annual convention recently in Orlando. An active sugarcane grower, Kautz has been president of the 93,733-member group since 1969.

Apopka poultry man and citrus grower John Talton was re-elected treasurer.

Directors re-elected included T. J. Lawrence, of DeLand.

Diabetes Month Observed

During November, Walgreen drug stores will observe National Diabetes Month as part of the company's ongoing effort to help inform the public about health-related matters.

"Facts About Diabetes," a booklet valued at $1 and printed by the makers of Monoject insulin syringes, will be available free of charge to customers upon presentation of a special coupon made available in Walgreen advertising.

Since the symptoms of diabetes are often not present or easily detectable in its early stages, as many as 4 million of the 10 million Americans who suffer from diabetes are not aware they have the disease. Walgreens hopes distribution of information about diabetes will help alert these people and others to the need to be tested for diabetes.

Coors Coming To Florida

Coors beer will become available in Florida early next year, bringing to 21 the number of states served by the nation's sixth largest brewer, the company said.

Peter H. Coors, chief of sales for the Adolph Coors Co., announced the brewer's products will be marketed in Florida during the first half of 1983.

Florida ranks fifth in beer consumption among the states.

From Alaska To Iowa

Stromberg-Carlson Installs Systems

Stromberg-Carlson Corporation has placed in service the first System Century Digital Central Office in the state of Alaska, a 1,000-line DCO System for the Juneau and Douglas Telephone Co. in North Kenai.

Working out of this new switch are two 240-line Digital Satellite Units that provide telephone service to the communities of Millers Loop and East Spur. North Kenai is an oil exploration and fishing town 75 miles south of Anchorage.

The Juneau and Douglas Telephone Co. is an operating company of the Continental Telephone Co. of the Northwest.

Stromberg-Carlson Corporation also recently placed in service a fourth System

Century Digital Central Office for the Garden Valley Telephone Co. in Fertile, Minn.

This DCO System, which has 1,050 lines and 68 trunks, was preceded by the DCO systems in Bagley, Red Lake Falls and Mentor. Garden Valley Telephone now provides digital switching services to its subscribers in the four locations over a total of 4,650 lines and 265 trunks.

"In addition to a full line of custom-calling features, the DCO Systems in Fertile, Bagley and Red Lake Falls also have local automatic message accounting (LAMA) capability," reports James M. Bridges, President of Stromberg-Carlson.

Stromberg-Carlson, a member of the Plessey Group, is a leading designer and manufacturer of telecommunications equipment with headquarters in Orlando. Manufacturing facilities are located in Lake Mary; Rochester, N.Y.; and Ardmore, Ok. The Engineering Development Center is in Longwood.

Stromberg-Carlson also placed in service a System Century Digital Central Office for the Livingston Telephone Co. of California. "This DCO System with 4,591 lines and 211 trunks provides the community of Livingston with a wide range of custom-calling features as well as local and centralized automatic message accounting," according to James M. Bridges, Stromberg-Carlson president.

Stromberg-Carlson also recently installed a System Century switching equipment at Keosauqua, Iowa, which provides state of the art digital telecommunications service to five communities.

The new DCO System, with 1,020 lines and 102 trunks, provides telephone service to the outlying towns of Birmingham, Bonapart, Cantril, and Stockport by means of four digital satellite units.

All these elements of the system were placed in service together. "It was a successful cutover," said Bridges. "The DCO System in conjunction with the satellite units provides subscribers in these five communities in southeast Iowa a full range of custom-calling features as well as local automatic message accounting — LAMA."

Productivity On Farms Lag

American farmers may be the most productive in the world, but a leading U.F. agricultural economist says America's food system beyond the farm gate is experiencing a sluggish or negative productivity growth rate.

Dr. Leo Polopolus, new president of the American Agricultural Economics Association, says dramatic food price inflation in the last decade is largely the result of a less than fully efficient food marketing and distribution system.

He's calling on the U.S. Congress to enact special funding legislation to stimulate the same kind of intensive research and education in food distribution and marketing that has gone into the production aspects of agriculture. Food marketing and distribution costs now represent two-thirds of the consumers' food dollar, he said.

"Agricultural sciences have placed undue emphasis on production agriculture relative to food marketing and distribution," Polopolus said. Also, "private-sector research and development has become increasingly oriented toward product proliferation and marketing promotions instead of productivity considerations."

Polopolus, chairman of the Food and Resource Economics Department of UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences (IFAS) says farm prices last year were up only 1 percent, while marketing costs increased 10 percent. Over the past decade food prices have been going up over 13 percent per year fueling the inflationary spiral.

For Mobile Phone Service

Winter Park Telephone Joins Race

The Winter Park Telephone Co. filed application on Nov. 8 with the Federal Communications Commission for permission to provide cellular mobile telephone service in the Orlando area.

The Orlando filing area consists of nine cells covering approximately 2,528 square miles. This area will include parts of Orange, Seminole and Osceola counties. Initial serving capacity is 4,800 customers.

Cellular mobile telephone service is an extension of the existing mobile telephone system by advanced radio technology. The new service will allow customers to make calls while traveling in their vehicles throughout the metro area.

The service area is divided into a honeycomb of "cells," each with its own transmitting and receiving station. When a customer picks up the phone and dials a number, a radio signal is sent via the closest station to a centralized computer in the Mobile Telecommunications Switching Office.

As the unit moves out of range of one transmitter center into a new cell, the call is electronically "handed off" without interrupting the conversation.

Once the application is granted, Winter Park Telephone will begin acquiring the necessary facilities. Marketing and installation for the personal mobile equipment will be handled by a separate, non-regulated group.

The FCC ruled in March 1982 that two frequency blocks per area are to be made available immediately for competing cellular systems. One of the two frequency blocks is allocated for exclusive use by regulated telephone companies for two years. Radio common carrier companies may file competitively for licenses to provide service in the other frequency space.

Cellular service is an optional addition to local service. The rates at which cellular service will be offered are separate from local telephone rates, and will be borne only by subscribing cellular customers.

Any telephone company that currently provides service to any part of the Orlando Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA) is eligible to apply to the FCC for a license to provide cellular service. The Winter Park Telephone Company currently provides service within the Orlando metropolitan area.

The FCC accepted cellular applications for the 30 largest markets in June 1982. Another 30 markets, including the Florida cities of Jacksonville and Orlando, were opened for application in the November 8 filing.

Winter Park Telephone Co., a member company of United Telephone System, is a subsidiary of United Telecommunications, Inc. The United Telephone System, headquartered in Kansas City, Mo., is comprised of 26 telephone companies, located in 21 states. The companies service more than 4.8 million telephones in 3,000 communities nationwide. The United Telephone System is the third largest telephone system in the United States.

In University Riches

Patent, Trademark Royalties Add Up

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — At the University of Oklahoma it's GIPSY. At the University of Wisconsin it is rat poison. For the University of Florida, it is Gatorade.

Patents and trademarks on these and other commercially successful inventions by university faculty members have brought in millions of dollars to bolster college research programs across the United States.

Faced with declining enrollments and dwindling government funding, many schools are stepping up the search for patentable inventions, said Mark Elder, deputy director of OU research administration and head of the university's patent advisory committee.

"All of the major research universities have a substantial number of patents," he said. "Other universities — especially if they're private — have always pursued (patents) as a source of funding."

In many instances, industries contract with universities for research to solve specific problems and to make technological advances in defined areas.

Elder said industries are finding it more cost-effective to turn over more of their research to universities, which he said now perform about 80 percent of all basic research done in the United States.

Dr. Kenneth Hoving, vice provost for research administration at OU, points to the University of Wisconsin as an example of a patent success story.

The Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, an independent arm of the school, holds patents on several inventions, including Warfarin — a substance used both as a rat poison and a blood anticoagulant for heart patients, said Tom Hinkes, associate director of licensing for WARF.

WARF also has patents on drugs and medical and electronic instruments. The foundation held the patent for adding vitamin D to milk. WARF patent royalties pump about $6 million a year into UW research programs and have generated about $97 million in 50 years for the school, Hinkes said.

Elder said another lucrative invention by faculty researchers was the development of the "Gatorade" drink at the University of Florida.

Hugh Cunningham, spokesman for that university, said the school's share of the Gatorade trademark has yielded about $3 million in 10 years.

OU's income from patents has been more modest but the university has interest in at least one profitable patent — for a computer software package called the General Information Processing System, or GIPSY. Hoving said OU has received about $50,000 from it.

"We have not had the one invention that stands out," Elder said. "There's been no discovery of penicillin."

"Obviously we would like an invention of that magnitude. It would be very lucrative, and beneficial to the nation."

The university has a patent in the works on a process for using coal and has high hopes for inventions from research to be conducted at the school's planned $45 million energy center.

Hoving said pursuing a patent is "by far the best way of ensuring technology which is developed on the university campus reaches the public."

Patenting an invention can cost anywhere from about $2,000 to $25,000 and the time period from invention to actual retail marketing of a product using the patent can be up to 20 years, officials say. So university review committees must decide whether pursuing a patent would be worth the investment.

Distribution of proceeds from a patent vary, but OU's policy usually awards the inventing faculty member about one-third of the royalties.

With fewer than 1 percent of faculty members' inventions leading to profits, few university patents have struck the funding home lode.

But, Hoving points out, "All you need to do is hit on one or two."

Fibers Are Hair-Thin Threads Of Glass

Optical Fiber System Guides EPCOT Visitors

Forget about having to carry an old-fashioned guidebook at Walt Disney's newly opened EPCOT, the Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow.

The theme park boasts a new way of guiding visitors that is as futuristic as the park itself — and may become one of EPCOT's attractions in its own right, according to Southern Bell.

"The new concept is the World Key Information Service — WKIS for short," according to Southern Bell Manager Larry Strickler of Sanford, "which combines optical fibers, television sets and a computer. With WKIS, park visitors simply touch certain pictures on a TV screen.

"The information they want — such as restaurant menus, motel vacancies, or a map showing the best way to get to another exhibit — is displayed on the screen automatically within seconds," Strickler said.

Up-to-the minute information is stored in a central computer, said Strickler. Linking the computer with each TV screen is a network of optical fibers, the hair-thin threads of ultrapure glass that can carry vast amounts of information on bursts of light.

The only visible parts of WKIS are the 29 TV screens located throughout the park in five clusters. This network was designed, assembled and installed by Western Electric, the manufacturing arm of the Bell System.

Strickler said optical fibers were chosen over copper cables because the fibers are made of glass and transmit only light. So they are immune to electrical interference — an important characteristic when you consider the large amounts of power needed to operate EPCOT.

NEW COMMUNITY

With the toss of a few shovels-full of dirt, Paulucci Enterprises broke ground Friday on its Heathrow community, which is designed to include single family luxury homes, townhouses, condominiums, residential units, a shopping center, office buildings, a middle school, a golf course, other recreational facilities and the new headquarters for Paulucci Enterprises of Sanford. It is expected to cost more than $500 million. Participating in the festivities from left, are, Chuck Whittle, owner of Shannon-Whittle Construction Co.; County Commissioners Robert Soderstrom, real estate consultant to Paulucci Enterprises; Jim Branch, engineer; County Commissioner Bud Feather; Paul Porter, engineer; and Thomas Stevenson, director of real estate operations for Paulucci Enterprises. Heathrow, which will also provide its own utility company and develop water and sewage treatment facilities for the community, will be located on 1,268 acres along Interstate 1 at Lake Mary Boulevard, southwest of Sanford.

... Grindle Is Starting House Work

Grindle, who wears his patriotism like a banner on his sleeve and practices the principle, served in the quartermaster corps during World War II. He also believes strongly in education, having acquired a PhD from Sussex College of Technology in Sussex, England, a master's degree in management from Rollins College and a law degree from LaSalle Law School.

ART GRINDLE

Grindle has his own firm dealing in real estate properties and commercial investments, an advertising agency and an auctioneering and liquidating firm. He also has been an adjunct professor at Rollins, the Florida Institute of Technology and Nova University. Grindle's priorities during this two-year term in the Florida House of Representatives will include: — Jobs - "I think jobs are a function of business. We are not looking to government to produce those jobs. We want people in jobs that they are happy to be in and that are creative and benefit the community. We can produce those jobs, if we can work out a way to make it attractive for business to survive and grow and thus to make jobs.

— Big business is strong enough to handle itself. We must concentrate on small business and provide some incentives for business to start and survive," he said. — Traffic - "Both ends of the county are suffering with traffic problems. It is concentrated more in the south end with traffic jams on State Road 436 and State Road 434," he said, adding he saw the traffic problems in both the south and north parts of the county while he was campaigning at major intersections.

— "The only viable solution for 436 may be an overpass or cloverleaf," Grindle said.

— Transportation - "I'm concerned with coming up with some kind of public transportation — such as a monorail." He noted it is nearly impossible to get a cost estimate of a monorail connecting Seminole County to Disney and the Orlando International Airport. "I don't know whether we can get private enterprise to do it. But I believe in user fees and a monorail would take some traffic off 436 and Interstate 4," he said. He added such a system would help preserve the quality of life. He also noted it is costly and time consuming for motorists to wait through traffic jams that add to pollution.

— "A monorail would be very expensive, but the cost of not doing something is far greater than doing something," Grindle said.

— Crime - "Crime and the cost of crime are also important," he said. He said the alternative to the high cost of incarceration may be giving first time offenders convicted of minor crimes an opportunity to clear their records by going into some kind of half-way house.

— Drunk drivers - "There's no question in my mind that drunks should be taken off the roads. And a person who is inebriated and stopped by law enforcement officers, but who refuses the breathalyzer test should be subjected to more than a 60-day loss of their

him with manslaughter while intoxicated and transported him to the Juvenile Detention Center where he was later released into his parents' custody.

According to state law, a person must be brought to trial within 180 days from his arrest or with 90 days of an appeal or the case is dismissed. Therefore, the state had until Jan. 15, 1982, to try Jowais after his arrest on the manslaughter charge. But because of admitted mistakes by prosecutors, the case was dismissed.

The "mistakes" according to court records evolved around which time clock was the appropriate one use. Should the case have been brought to trial within the 180-day limit or within a 90-day limit from the date of an appeal concerning trying Jowais as an adult instead of through juvenile court.

"Now at the 11th hour, the state has decided that particular time clock (180-day) has run and that they were mistaken and the time clock that needed to be counted was the (90-day) time clock, which, in effect, had not run," Salfi said in his dismissal ruling.

Salfi ruled that the 90-day clock was appropriate and that the case could have been properly tried within 90 days. The Fifth District Court of Appeals in Daytona Beach agreed with his ruling concerning the time schedule in reversing the dismissal.

However, Salfi said the problem he faced was: "Can we revert to the 90-day clock at this 11th hour after an order of discharge has already been entered by the court? I think not."

"The court lacks the authority (jurisdiction) to correct an error of law, even though it be an invited error," he continued. "If the state were to appeal the original order, they probably would be able to reverse that decision (if the appellate court agrees with the 90-day clock) due to a mistake in the application of the proper time clock."

That, he said, could give the state additional time to prosecute.

Salfi said he "reluctantly" dismissed the case, adding he didn't think he had the authority to correct "an error of law."

"Judges aren't expected to know all of the law," Salfi said. "We are responsible to know a lot of it and we do but we rely on the knowledge of the attorneys before us to present much of it. If we knew it all,

"Now that we have been able to sit back and look at the case, I can see that the 90-day clock applies, as the appeals court ruled," he said. "But, in the appeal court's decision, they didn't address the fact I was reluctant to correct the errors of law. They ruled on the time table and reversed the dismissal on that basis."

During the appeals procedures, the state maintained that the defense "automatically" waived any right to speedy trial by appealing the decision to have Jowais tried as an adult. However, at the onset of the debate concerning the case's dismissal, state prosecutors admitted they made mistakes and had planned to argue that the defense had asked for a continuance in the trial and therefore waived speedy trial. Later, prosecutors dropped that charge, relying on the appeal to try Jowais as an adult as grounds for speedy trial forfeiture.

After the case had been dismissed, state Rep. Dick Batchelor (D-Orlando) asked Gov. Bob Graham's office to investigate the state attorney's office handling of the case. Later, Graham announced his office could find no fault in the state attorney's handling of the case.

More Killed In Beirut

United Press International
Rescue workers recovered "about seven" more bodies Saturday from the rubble of the Israeli military headquarters in the Lebanese town of Tyre, Israel radio said. In Beirut, two separate terrorist bombs killed scores of people.

Amid shouts for stretchers and the chanting of Sabbath prayers, rescuers in Tyre dug for four more Israeli soldiers believed still buried by an explosion Thursday that collapsed the Israeli military headquarters, Israeli Armed Forces Radio said.

"Since (Friday) night, about seven additional bodies have been pulled from the rubble," said an Israeli radio reporter on the scene in the Lebanese port city.

In addition to the bodies found today, figures released by the military command Friday said 47 Israelis were killed and 28 wounded in the blast, six of them seriously. Also killed were 15 local residents who had been held as suspected guerrillas in a makeshift prison on the top floor of the building.

Twenty-one soldiers escaped unharmed, the Israeli Armed Forces radio said.

It's a beautiful, sunny fall day, when a '38 Packard moves along a two-lane highway called "17-92", heading for Orlando.

Driving slowly past the Old Folks Home finds elderly men and women lined up in their rocking chairs looking contented.

The cows are in the pasture munching on blades of grass and sounds of chickens cackling and pigs grunting can be heard in the background. The land is heavily wooded for miles around, with a huge camphor tree sitting in the front yard of the Old Folks Home.

Such are the memories of Mrs. Lorraine Whiting, formerly Lorraine Yarborough, mother of three sons and curator of the newly formed Seminole County Museum located in the former agriculture building on U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford, and before that, the Old Folks Home.

Lorraine was first appointed on the Seminole County Historical Commission in 1965 and has been the only person appointed every year since. She is a fourth generation Floridian coming from a family who has been in business in the Geneva area in cattle and citrus for three generations.

Lorraine's father was the county road superintendent for about 30 years in Seminole County. The maintenance building he worked in was on the road behind the Old Folks Home. Her grandfather, E.H. Kilbee, was on the Seminole County Commission Board in the late '20s and he was one of the county commissioners who recommended the county purchase 28 acres in the woods at that time.

"With my grandfather being one of the sponsors on purchasing this land, and my father working right out back, I feel closely associated with preserving this building," says Lorraine.

Lorraine left this area in the '40s when she married. She lived with her family in the diplomatic service in different countries for years before returning to the Geneva area in 1960.

The museum will be a walk through the past of Seminole County. At the present time, Mrs. Grace Bradford is refurbishing the superintendent's quarters in memory of her late husband, Robert. She is also in charge of making all the curtains for the museum. She has hung an antique chandelier in the room that once served as the superintendent's living room and has put in an old claw legged bathtub to replace the one that is no longer there.

"The kitchen will be set up like in the '20s" says Grace. "We will put in an old wood cook stove with utensils hanging above it."

Grace says she has fought to keep the wooden-plank cupboards intact and to keep the old sink instead of replacing it with a new one. She hopes to keep the kitchen as authentic as possible. She says the dining room and bedroom area will be furnished in the same period.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy will be taking one of the rooms to furnish where they will be able to keep their historical records.

Alpha Delta Kappa Sorority will sponsor a room to use for the history of education in Seminole County. The Seminole County Federation of Womens' Clubs will furnish a room as their project and author Arthur Francke will fill one room with pictorial history. The Sabal Point Garden Club has volunteered to landscape the grounds.

The museum is anticipating rooms with the history of the fire department, transportation of Seminole County and an agricultural room.

While the county commission has donated the building to the museum, they allotted no funds. Private citizens, organizations and businesses have provided the funds for the project thus far. Trustees from Seminole County Jail have been doing some of the manual labor.

"It took over a month just to clean the building. Many of the windows wouldn't open and broken window panes had to be repaired," says Lorraine. She also said extensive yard work was needed, the dog tract between the buildings was in dire need of repair, the floors had to be sanded and refinished, and the rooms all needed cleaning and painting.

Lorraine is no stranger to organizing historical museums. She helped establish the Geneva Historical Museum and is still an active member. She is hopeful that once security is established at the new museum, residents will want to "clean out their attics, and if they have old newspapers, pictures or anything at all pertaining to Seminole County, they will want to bring the items to the museum" to share with others.

In her effort to fit historical pieces into place, Lorraine contracted 85-year-old Rachael Lee, who was the nurse for 22 years at the Old Folks Home. Miss Lee, who is a very alert, bright-eyed lady, toured the building and recalled many past events. Touching the porcelain handles on now decrepit sinks, Miss Lee recalled how they once were kept clean and shiny.

No opening date has been set for the Seminole County Museum.

Miss Lee arrived in Sanford in 1940, after responding to an ad for a nurse. She told how she decided she wanted to become a nurse in 1918 when she saw so many people sick and dying of influenza in Mississippi and no one knew what to do with them.

"The people suffered so much," she said, "and I decided it would be nice if just somebody knew what to do for them."

After graduating from nursing school in Virginia, she returned to Mississippi where she worked as a school nurse, and in the summers she worked at a tuberculosis sanatorium.

When Dr. Charles Park, Sr., called her, she told him she would come help him out for "at least two weeks" until he could find somebody for the job. He sent her the fare to come to Sanford and she ended up "staying 22 years instead," she says chuckling. She was the first nurse for the Old Folks Home.

Miss Lee said the Old Folks Home was segregated except for the infirmary. She recalls how the food "wasn't anything fancy but there was always plenty of it." She tells how residents were self-sufficient. They had a garden, orange trees, cows, pigs and chickens, she said.

"We ate what we raised. After supper we'd sit out front and shell the beans and peas. We even raised sugar cane and made our own molasses," recalls Miss Lee.

The prison trustees helped at the home by working in the fields and milking the cows. Miss Lee recalls how the jail administrators would bring sick inmates to her infirmary. Once they brought her a prisoner that she was afraid of. "I called the jail and told them to send a guard because I wouldn't stay there all night with that man. He was walking all around and I didn't know what he might do," she said.

She remembers how the late T.W. Lawton who was county school superintendent, would stop by the home daily with a bouquet of cut flowers sent by his wife to the infirmary. She said he would always visit with the residents he knew from Oviedo and Geneva. She remembers how the warden would bring fish and deer.

As she shuffled through the halls of the building recalling all the details of days gone by, one could imagine the care given to many a sick patient by this gentle and caring nurse.

In order to keep the many memories from being lost, so that future generations might know what Seminole County Florida was like in the past, the Seminole County Museum needs participation from its residents. They hope to form a group of people called "Friends of the Museum" to help operate the facility and conduct guided tours.

The museum wants every organization that has a history in the county to help make up the museum.

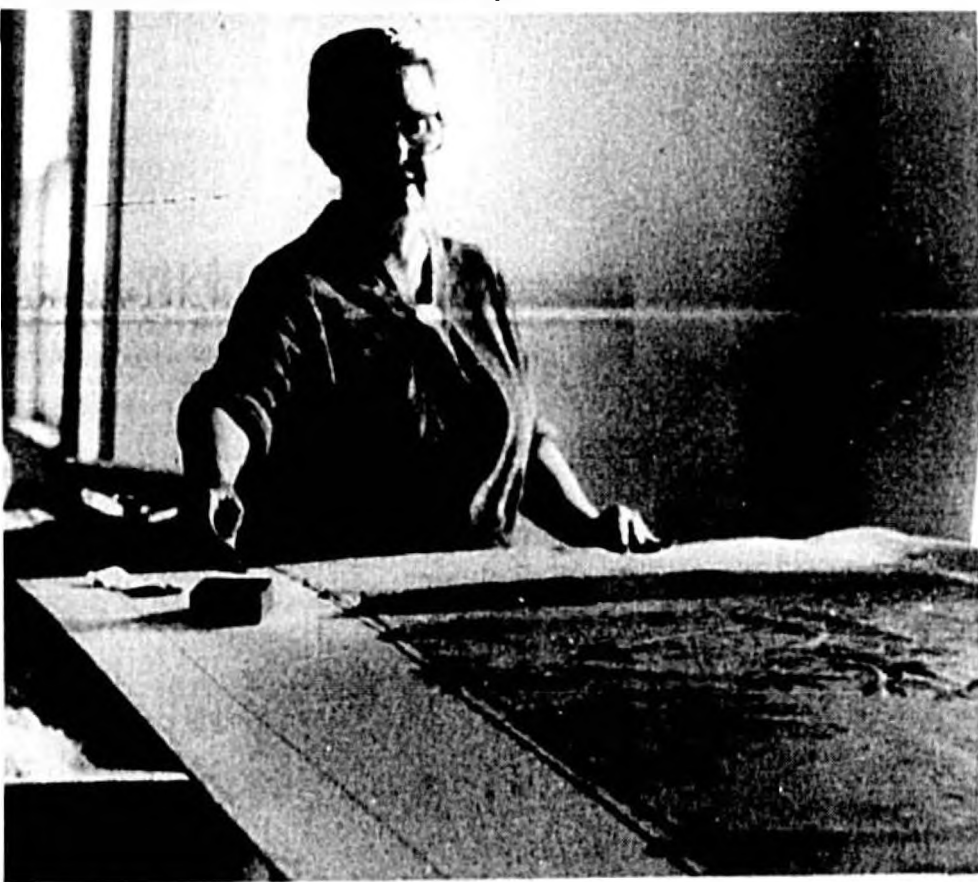

Lorraine says that Bonner Carter, of the Seminole County Historical Commission, was the one who got the commission going again "after many years of a standstill." Now that they have a building to put the many years of accumulation, they hope the residents will support this project by lending a hand when needed, or donating anything of interest.

Hopefully, this will be a project that all Seminole County residents will share with enthusiasm, Lorraine says.

Rachel Lee, a nurse at the Old Folks Home for 22 years, recalls a wealth of history surrounding the facility.

Grace Bradford, working on curtains, is refurbishing a room at the museum in memory of her late husband, Robert.

Lorraine Whiting, curator of the newly formed Seminole County Museum, and Bonner Carter, chairman of Seminole County Historical Commission, survey work projects in progress at the museum.

Seminole Mutual Concert Association will begin the 1982-83 season Thursday at 8 p.m., at Lake Mary High School with the accomplished violinist, Robert Rudie.

Four more concerts (see accompanying photos) have been booked for the season. Admission to the concerts is through season subscriptions. For information call membership chairman, Mrs. Frederic F. Gaines. Memberships may be purchased Thursday night at the concert. Prices are: family, $40; adult, $17.50; and student, $12.

A Signor Paganini, Robert Rudie' IS the celebrated "Devil's Violinist." Rudie' creates Paganini in appearance, speech and in manner. As most music lovers believe, Niccolò Paganini was the greatest violinist who ever lived. Some think he was double jointed; others believe he was possessed by the devil. He played the violin as no one before him — or even imagined.

"Robert Rudie' as Signor Paganini is an engrossing evening. The character is fascinating and Rudie' is an exceptional violinist. Paganini's music is tuneful and full of pyrotechnics. If the legend of Paganini has always intrigued you, Robert Rudie' as Signor Paganini will too. If you have never been caught up in the violinist's mystique, this program will do it."

Robert Rudie' has an enormous reputation throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico as an outstanding violin virtuoso. His concert tours as soloist with orchestras and in recital have won unanimous acclaim for musicianship, technical mastery and for wit, charm and personality.

Geneva Artist Studying Under Residency Program

Geneva artist Cecil Herring is participating in the current residency program at Atlantic Center for the Arts in New Smyrna Beach. She is studying under three major artists in residence there for three weeks. The artists are: Reynolds Price, a professor at Duke University and author of "A Long, Happy Life;" Edward Albee, New York City, Pulitzer prize winning playwright author of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolf?" and Mia Westerlund Roosen, represented by Leo Castelli Gallery, New York City.

Mrs. Herring has participated in 16 one-man shows across the nation, the most current in San Francisco. Her sculpture has drawn international acclaim after she created a silver pendant for Betty Ford, wife of former President Gerald H. Ford.

'Everything Goes' Auction

Theta Epsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will hold an "Everything Goes" Auction Saturday, Nov. 13, beginning at 7:30 p.m., at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. Lewis C. Dell will serve as auctioneer.

Seniors Call Special Fete

According to Wilma Rasey, the Sanford Senior Citizens Club will have a special Thanksgiving celebration with entertainment Tuesday, from 4 to 6:30 p.m., at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce in lieu of the regularly scheduled meeting.

After a brief business session at 4 p.m., a variety show from Seminole Community College under the direction of Laurel Elmore, will be presented.

Artist Wins Festival Award

Joan E. Zimmerman of Sanford, was one of 20 artists receiving awards in the DeLand Museum's Art Festival. She was one of six artists winning an Award of Distinction, carrying a $100 prize, for a handmade paper collage.

Chiropractic Meet Attended

Dr. Thomas F. Yandell D.C., chiropractic physician, attended post-graduate educational sessions at the 68th Annual Convention of the Florida Chiropractic Association at the Sheraton Twin Towers, Orlando. More than 1,300 doctors, spouses, chiropractic assistants and guests attended the three-day convention.

Sally Riggs and Laura Lary, radiologic technologists in Yandell's Sanford office, also attended education sessions at the convention.

Couple Plan Return Trip To Island

Madeline and Ron Minns returned Sunday from a 4-day tour of Grand Cayman Island. They had planned to spend their time snorkelling but choppy waters altered their plans. They rented a car and toured the island.

Madeline says Grand Cayman has a population of 15,000. There is no industry, no plantations and employment comes from the hotels, restaurants and taxi service for the tourists, she says. Wages are extremely high (a dishwasher receives $250 weekly). Everything is imported from other countries. Most of the residents fly into Miami to shop for clothing and other items, she says. There are grocery stores that carry most of the things the states sell. An interesting fact is that there are 350 banks on the island.

The residents own their homes. There are no homes or apartments to rent. There are very few televisions, perhaps the reason being a TV costs $3,000. The music played there dates back to the 1950s and 1960s.

Those wanting to reside there must first apply for a work permit and then it takes five years before they can receive a Canadian status.

Visitors must have a return trip ticket before they are permitted on the island.

Madeline says she and Ron enjoyed their stay and plan to return in the near future.

At the November meeting of the Keenagers of the Forest election of officers for 1983 was held. Those elected were: president, Arnold Dauven; vice president, Ronald Lulinski; secretary, Jeanette Blandy; and treasurer, Edith Liebert.

Edith and Joe Liebert presented a slide show with narration of their 17,000 mile trip around the United States and down to Acapulca, Mexico. Refreshments were served.

At the Nov. 9 meeting of the Lake Mary Extension Homemakers Club, election of officers were held.

Those elected for 1982-1983 were: president, Andrea Wise, first vice president, Phyllis Welton; second vice president Violet Beckwith; secretary, Delores Muse; treasurer, Jackie Lockwood; delegate, Lois Mahau; and alternate delegate, Mildred Sandusky. The next meeting will be held Dec. 14.

Congratulations to Dr. Harvey and Trisha Kansol on the birth of their new baby girl, Casie Elizabeth was born Oct. 22, and weighed 5 lbs. 11 ozs.

Don't Slight Stepchildren At Gift Time

DEAR ABBY: Last year my husband, our child and I received Christmas gifts from my husband's sister who lives in another state. She sent nothing for our two other children who are mine from a previous marriage. These children (I'll call them Sally and Bob) are teen-agers who are very fond of this step-aunt and would be hurt if they had known about this. I hid the gifts until Sally and Bob left to visit their father for the Christmas holidays.

Abby, most stepchildren have a hard enough "row to hoe" without being slighted by the step-family. Their need for tangible proof of affection and acceptance by the step-family may be even greater than that of the natural children due to their awkward status.

My purpose in writing this is not to chastise, but to plead with step-families to remember these children along with the natural children of the family when it comes to gift giving and other acts of kindness. I'm sure it will make them happier, and I know of at least one parent who would very much appreciate it. I'm certain that there are countless other parents who would feel the same way.

HURTING FOR THE CHILDREN

DEAR HURTING: Your letter is both timely and worthwhile. Thank you for a suggestion that will surely make Christmas a lot merrier for many stepchildren.

DEAR ABBY: I chuckled at the letter from "Upset," the 25-year-old woman whose mother ("divorced and living alone") asked Daughter to phone before dropping in on her.

Daughter would be truly upset were she to drop in unannounced to find Mother in the arms of her lover. Most kids (even at 25) assume that their parents have no interest in sex, much less a sex life. This is simply untrue. "Upset's" mother is most likely trying to ensure her deserved privacy in order to delicately balance her need for intimacy with her desire to protect her daughter's illusion of Mom's "purity." It's a sticky situation, in which we often find ourselves in this 1982 morality.

Dear Abby

Most 25-year-old daughters living alone would not appreciate an unannounced visit from Mom for the same reason.

DIVORCED MOTHER, LIVING ALONE
DEAR MOTHER: Right on. Unannounced visits are rarely appreciated — even in families with open minds and closed eyes.

DEAR ABBY: "Katie in Anchorage" submitted that immigrants who arrived at Ellis Island "without papers" were tagged "WOP." If that were so, we would have to assume that our immigration inspectors discriminated against Italians. No, I am told that the guardians of our gates at Ellis Island disliked all foreigners equally. So, why weren't other immigrants called "wop"?

Simply, the expression predates the immigration to America, and is Italian-Spanish in its derivation. In the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, the expression "guappo" had reference to handsome young men who affected a sense of bravado. In Naples, "guappo" sounded like "wop."

From its true meaning — ruggedly handsome — the term began to decline in its meaning as it was applied to tough gang members, hence the pejorative "wop."

'Fall Frolics' Celebration

The autumn leaves will come tumbling down in a colorful indoor setting Saturday night, Nov. 13, at the Sanford Civic Center in celebration of the 15th season of Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole.

Richard Scott is creating the unique and unusual decorations to include live trees, a wishing well and vegetation depicting the bountiful autumn harvest.

"Fall Frolics" is the theme chosen by the BGS Board of Directors for the festivity open to supporters of the non-profit dance company as well as the general public.

A donation of $15 a couple is asked at the door if advance tickets have not been purchased. Profits will benefit the performing dance company which is sustained exclusively by civic support.

"Passenger," a five-piece band, will provide the music for dancing and will conduct a dance contest. The band will "strike up" at 8 p.m. and play until midnight.

Fall Frolics chairman Joe Monserrat announces that light food is included in the admission cost. He says the celebration will also feature door prizes, a cash bar and "some surprises."

Monserrat says dress is optional and suggests patrons wear the attire of their choice — from casual to dress-up.

Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole is a non-profit dance company that conducts auditions annually for the company dancers. Auditions are open to any qualified dancers in the community.

Wishing: Miriam Wright, left, and Valerie Weld, artistic directors and choreographers of Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole "wish you will join us at Ballet Guild's Fall Frolics celebration."

Pair Renew Vows On 50th Anniversary

It was a happy day on Oct. 23, 1932 for Roosevelt and Brownie Mae Lee when they exchanged wedding vows in Donaldsonville, Ga.

To celebrate their 50 years of happiness, the Lees, of 2401 Granby Ave., Sanford, repeated their vows on their wedding anniversary at 3 p.m. at the Reddick Memorial First Born Church Of The Living God, Sanford, with Elder Elijah Edwards, officiating.

The bride chose for her vows a gold satin formal length gown with a white waist length veil. Attending the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Gene Williams. Elder Gene Williams served the groom as best man. Flower girls were the great granddaughters of the couple, Tornie, Denise and Connie Moore. Ring bearer was Marice Asble, grandson.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee, Broad Street and King, Sanford.

The Lee's are the parents of four children: Willie James, James B., Edvene and Laurette Lee, Sanford. They have 46 grands and great grands.

The Les Bon Amies Club will observe their 31st Anniversary, Nov. 14, at 2:30 p.m. at Grant Chapel AME Church, Franklin Street, Oviedo. The guest speaker will be Mrs. Edna Frozer Hill of Jacksonville. Mrs. Viola Givens is president and Mrs. Mable Matthews, advisor.

Mr. and Mrs. Tully Carlton of 109 Anderson Ave., Sanford, held a reunion with their children, as they gathered for a weekend of festivities. Visiting from West Ger-

The Door and The Key

The hopes and visions of mankind... the ideals to which we aspire. Can we fulfill them? Is there a DOOR to our spiritual hunger? Men say the Church is the Door! Jesus said He was! No contradiction... Christ founded the Church! But useless is the door without a key. Why not gather the family together and head for your place of worship this week? The decision to seek the Door—that is the KEY.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Sunday, November 14, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY

November 14, 1982

Even though your motivation to succeed will be greatly accelerated in the year ahead, keep everything in perspective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You can do just about anything you set your mind to today, provided you're properly motivated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your hunches regarding business or money matters should be on-target today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If there are friends to whom you've not been as attentive lately as you feel you should be, try to do things today to bring you closer together.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Instead of having an adverse affect, challenging situations are likely to bring out your better qualities today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Faith can work wonders for you today, so believe in yourself and what you hope to accomplish.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take the leading role today if you're involved in a joint venture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Rather than attempting things on your own today, seek out an ally who shares your interests and who can make an equal contribution.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Follow inclinations today which urge you to be of service.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Those with whom you pal around today will have a strong influence on your behavior.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You tend to be fortunate today where end results are concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're likely to be a bit restless today and you could get rather moody if there are lapses in your schedule.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're not likely to take your responsibilities lightly today, especially regarding persons for whom you feel responsible.

For Monday, November 15, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY

November 15, 1982

Your leadership qualities will be greatly enhanced this coming year. Situations you direct or control will have good chances for success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Projects or ventures you launch or originate at this time should work out according to blueprint.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Keep in touch and stay on the best of terms with persons who've been helpful to you in the past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions are ripe to take positive measures to realize your hopes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be afraid to establish goals now which are a bit grander in scope than you are used to handling.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Nothing you've learned lately will be wasted. In fact, knowledge gained through personal experience can now be put to positive uses.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Some interesting transformations might occur today which should benefit you materially. Treat all business or commercial situations seriously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Agreements or partnership arrangements which you enter into today have the potential for success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Changes are afoot workwise or careerwise. These could lead to new opportunities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is a good time to get out and circulate, to develop new contacts and fresh social interests.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Beginning today, try to detach yourself from situations which have proven unproductive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you've been looking to expand your knowledge in your area of expertise, today is the day to begin to do so.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are now in a cycle where you could be more fortunate than usual in ways that will add to your income or resources.
