'Wizard' Builds One-Of-A-Kind Resort

Overshadowed by a giant waterwheel turned by the flow from a mountain spring, Arda Lee drops handfuls of food to the crocodile fish he has brought to his unique resort at Hidden Hollow.

Kennedy Overshadows Brown's Presidential Bid

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI)—One year before the presidential election, the campaign of California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. looks more like a secret society than a race for the White House.
 Hidden in the shadows of the battle between President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Brown's nearly unopposed nomination as he has been around the country.
 His standing in the polls is low. He has trouble raising money. His campaign events are sometimes unimpressive. He doesn't count on the 41-year-old Democratic. Not yet.
 "This is definitely a guerrilla campaign," observed one veteran Brown staffer in his headquarters in Los Angeles that lacks the media attention of such offices.
 Brown is an energetic campaigner. Recently, he has spent more time in New Hampshire, where personal contact with voters is considered important.
 "That's a sign of an unassuming man," he said.
 He is a quiet, unassuming man. "A ball of a guy to boot water" and the MX missile program. "Mass transit for millions."
 For the record, Brown still hasn't said definitely he is in the race. "I'm looking for the right moment to say the obvious."
 Brown's association with stage Linda Ronstadt and her trip to Africa in one of the things he has contributed to the backdrop of his image as a "liberal."
 He is doing his best to put forth a serious image. "The California mistake doesn't exist," insisted campaign deputy Richard Maulin. "That's a sign of an unassuming man."

transport aircraft. He bought Hidden Hollow from an uncle in 1963 and slowly began building up the small resort that caters to groups from family size to several hundred.
 Coupling an original imagination with a talent for working with materials such as wood, water, cement and electrical wiring, he has constructed oddities like the rock that pours forth water when you strike it with a stick of wood.
 Lee has just finished a wishing well. But not your ordinary wishing well. As visitors peer into its depths, a stream of water suddenly and surprisingly spurts from a opening on one of its cedar posts.
 Then there is the love seat by the lake that when those sitting upon it least expect it turns into a gushing cabinet of cold spring water. It's for swimmers only.
 Inside Lee's snack bar is a wall-mounted mirror. At least, it's a mirror until someone walks up behind you and claps his or her hands twice. Then the mirror disappears. Where your face was appears the horrible face of a witch behind a pane of glass.
 "It's different," explains Lee who is unmistakably a little eccentric. "I like about this place." Indeed, these things are just one side of Lee's little island.
 In his fish pond beneath the slowly turning 19-foot waterwheel swim Golden Oris imported from Germany, Israel, carp, Black Moors and Cometa. Roach-wing swallows, sand martins and a kingfisher nest by the cliffs above Hidden Hollow's lakes. And running all about are ducks, turkey guineas, peacocks, rabbits, geese, a goat and a deer. Lee affectionately calls "Dor" when the day's work is finished. Lee sits back in a swivel chair on his porch, rocking gently and listening to his own favorite music — the sound of water falling that tumbles down from a spring in the hillside.
 "The sound of running water is the most soothing thing in the world," he says.
 As the sun dips below the head of the hollow and a blue fall across its world, Lee sits still down to the fall, breathing the delicious coolness of the air there.
 "The sun goes down here in hours before it does in Coonville, but there's still light in the sky and it's cool," he says. "Come down here by the falling water and rest in the cool — it makes you feel like a million dollars."
 That is the wealth of Arda Lee, the Wizard of Hidden Hollow, the man who said he might be crazy but not rich.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Economist: Construction To Slow With Recession

Construction contracts in 1980 will total $108.3 billion, two percent more than this year's anticipated level of $105.2 billion. But after accounting for the impact of inflation, the actual volume of next year's construction will be down by eight percent, it was announced at a major conference for business executives.

George A. Christie, the McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company's vice president and chief economist, told the audience: "On the surface, you could see much evidence of recession in the construction industry in the fall of 1979. But in the 1970 months that still remain, all the risk is on the downside. The strong measures taken to restrain inflation have created an environment for the construction market that is becoming increasingly hostile on all fronts."

The economist warned the construction industry executives that as the Federal Reserve Board seeks "the ultimate rate of interest" to deter inflation, the housing market will stagnate.

"As the recession deepens in the quarter ahead, commercial and industrial building will be curtailed. And that's the way things will remain," he said, "until there's a fundamental change in the economic environment."

New Landing System Here

LOS ANGELES — An advanced instrument landing system (ILS), designed and produced by Northrop Corporation's Wilcox Electric, Inc. subsidiary, is scheduled to be installed at the Sanford airport as part of a $100 million Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) program to upgrade air safety in metropolitan areas by improving satellite airport facilities.

The ILS will increase safety and operational efficiency for private and business flyers by allowing safe landings in bad weather, poor visibility or night landing conditions. It accomplishes this by providing electronic guidance to aircraft during approach and landing.

FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond said the purpose of the $100 million satellite airport improvement program is to relieve congestion and reduce the mix of commercial and non-commercial aircraft at major hub airports — such as Orlando — by making smaller, satellite fields more attractive to private and business flyers. It is the first step in a "greatly expanded effort to upgrade general aviation airports in metropolitan areas," Bond said.

Lampier On Seminole Team

Edwin Lampier, formerly assistant vice president of Wortham Bank and Trust Company, L.L.C., Arkansas, assumed responsibilities recently as the new manager of the Orange City branch of First Federal of Seminole, Inc. He will be working closely with the bank's president, J. W. Hester, and its vice president, J. W. Hester, and its vice president, J. W. Hester.

Carolyn Dillon In Ranks

All Florida Realty of Sanford introduced its new associate, Carolyn Ann Dillon, Mrs. Dillon, her husband John, and daughter Melanie reside in Sanford. Mrs. Dillon will handle buying, selling or investing.

Pan-Am Adds Miami Route

Pan American World Airways announced recently major increases in its operations — involving international and domestic flights — which will make Miami one of the most important hub airports in its worldwide system. New 747 jumbo jets flying to Los Angeles are part of a daily international flight between Los Angeles and San Francisco, with one stop in Miami.

The new flight, only daily 747 jumbo jet service between Miami and Los Angeles, will provide passengers with immediate connections to Pan Am's flight serving Tokyo, Hong Kong and Taipei, it is added.

Help For Vietnam Vets

Vietnam war veterans lose their entitlement to G.I. Bill benefits on the 10th anniversary of their separation from military or the last provision of a Major Read to the educational training benefits. While some veterans in the Orlando and surrounding areas have used some or all of their G.I. Bill rights, there are many who still need at least partial use of their benefits.

There are many ways that the G.I. Bill can be adjusted to meet individual needs and circumstances. The Office of Veterans Affairs in Jones College does not want anyone to lose their rights to this program simply because they did not know.

New California Road?

California has a long history of road building. In 1906, the state legislature passed a law that authorized the construction of a state highway system. This was the beginning of the California State Road System, which today consists of over 100,000 miles of roads.

As a result of this legislation, California has become a leader in road building. Today, the state has one of the most extensive highway systems in the world. This is due to the fact that California has a long history of road building.

Duda In Business Hall Of Fame

By JANE CASSELBERRY Herald Staff Writer

Andrew Duda Jr., co-founder and member of the board of A. Duda and Sons, of Orlando, will be one of three area business leaders to be inducted into the Mid-Florida Business Hall of Fame.

The third annual induction will take place Thursday, Nov. 15, at the Orlando Marriott Inn, following a reception at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:15 p.m.

Also to be inducted will be T.G. Lee of T.G. Lee Foods, Inc. and the late Howard Phillips of Dr. Phillips, Inc.

Born in Czechoslovakia, Duda and his two brothers were brought to this country by their father, Andrew Sr., early in the century.

They settled on a five-acre farm at Oviedo and have expanded into a multi-million-dollar business which has diversified to include cattle, a produce company, an equipment and engineering division, a processing plant and farming interests throughout Florida and other parts of the U.S. and Australia.

Andrew and his brothers were instrumental with others in building Lutheran Haven in Slavia, near Oviedo, with a retirement center, home for the aged, child day care center, and Lutheran Christian Day School, affiliated with St. Luke's Lutheran Church.

"The more we give, the more the Lord blesses us," Duda said recently. He gives 50 percent of his income to charity.

Three select graduate achievers of Orlando Junior Achievement, sponsor, will make the formal presentations highlighting each person's life. Tim Wacker will be master of ceremonies. The event is co-sponsored by the Sentinel-Star.

Committee Chairman Ralph Allen said the purpose of the Business Hall of Fame is to honor prominent business persons who have made extraordinary contributions of leadership to their community and the state.

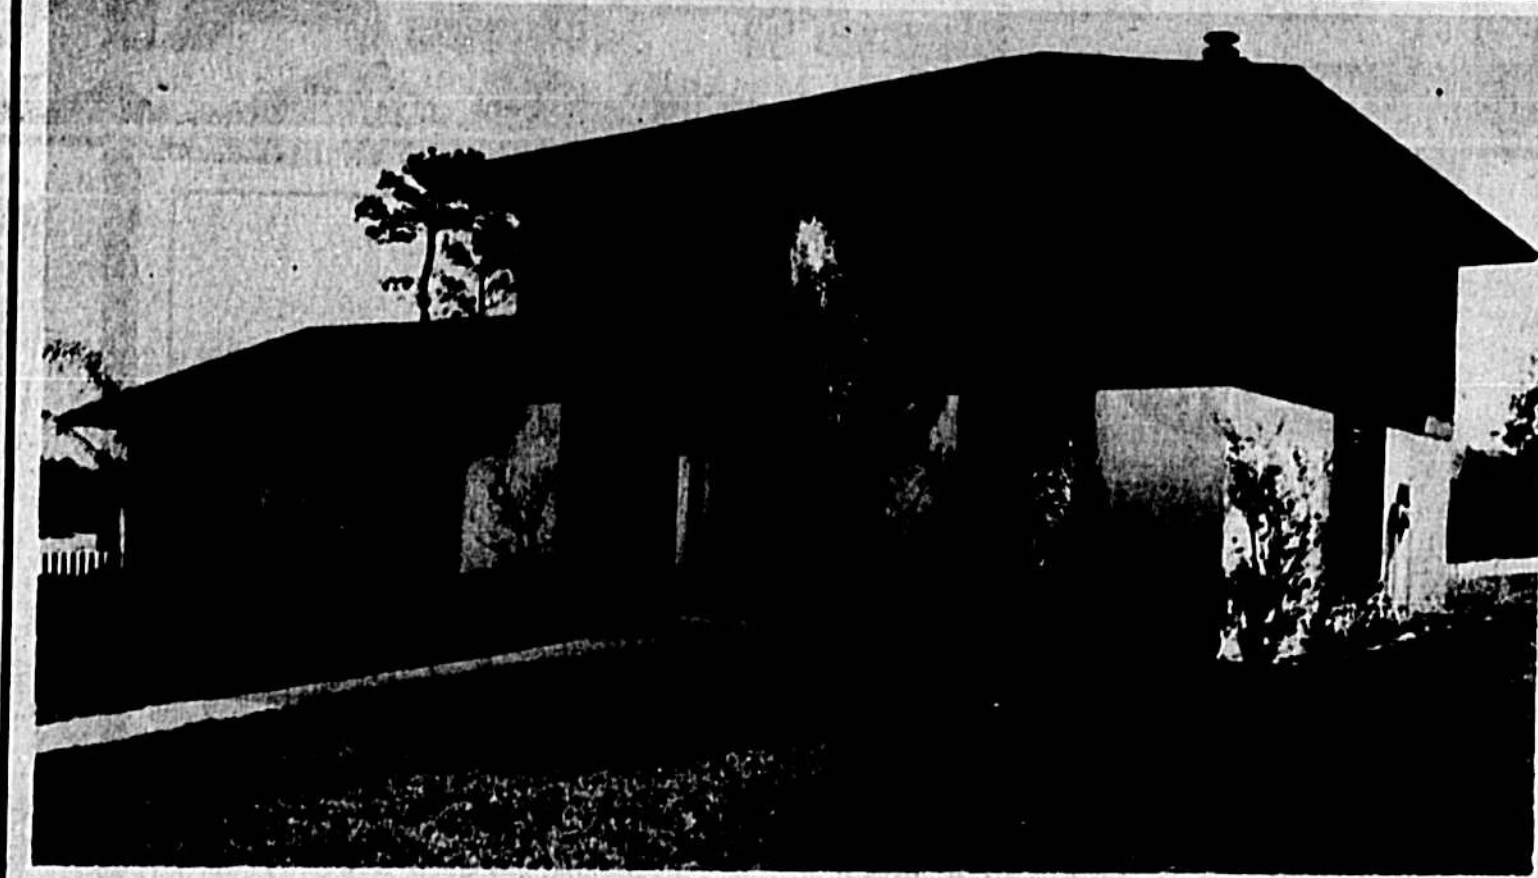

Recognition of the importance of maintaining free enterprise and the American way of life; and to encourage young people to follow their example.

Construction Crisis

Builders 'Crippled' In Florida

Despite the construction slowdown, new buildings such as this George Davis-built three-bedroom home at Sabal Point, continue to be built.

Contracts Fall Below 1978 Values

For the third consecutive month, September contracts for new construction fell below their comparable 1978 value, it was reported recently by the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company. September's $13.2 billion of contracting for future construction of all kinds was 8 percent less than last year's total of $14.4 billion.

Through the end of the third quarter, 1979 residential building, at $48.8 billion, continued to lead 1978's value by 3 percent. The number of dwelling units started in the first three quarters of 1979 trailed last year's volume by 8 percent, however, according to the Dodge economist.

At $2.6 billion, September contracts for nonbuilding construction were 11 percent below the year-ago total. "What has been this year's pattern of large gains in highway-bridge construction offsetting declines in utility projects was again evident in September's contracting," Christie pointed out.

The $1.7 billion cumulative nine-month total of 1979 contracts for nonbuilding construction was almost exactly even with 1978's value for the same period.

Total construction contracts held a narrow 8 percent lead over 1978 at the end of the third quarter, with $12.3 billion of new projects started this year.

the 1978 value. This margin, which had been 20 percent at midyear, was reduced sharply during the third quarter. Residential building contracts for the latest month held within 1 percent of the 1978 September value, with $1.2 billion of new work started. Multi-family building continued to set the pace in September with a 20 percent gain over the year-ago total.

"The real danger possibility is that Florida will have a repeat of what happened in California," says Tom Koenig, president of Florida's Builders Association (FIBA). "We're not going to get a lot of new construction in Florida until we get a lot of new construction in California."

"For a builder, that might appear exciting," said Koenig. "But it's a very unhealthy, disruptive situation. It's a sign of a market that's not working."

The same concern is shared by Bob King of Chase Federal in Miami, chairman of FIBA's mortgage finance committee. "It's obvious that the administration is asking the housing industry to take the bullet and work with them to get inflation and high interest rates down," said King. "But to accomplish that, the industry would have to shut down rapidly and get back up, instead, we see a slow grinding when the demand hits, the industry will be unprepared to meet it."

It was the second time in four weeks the seemingly unstoppable Hawk momentum was broken by a crucial score by the halfback pass. Aside Cleveland beat them earlier with a similar throw.

Another scoring opportunity presented itself in the form of a Koenig interception of a Mike Wood pass one minute later.

In an attempt to revive a sputtering attack Howell coach Sammy Weir heeded Bob Capobianco from the bullpen to relieve the ineffective Wood.

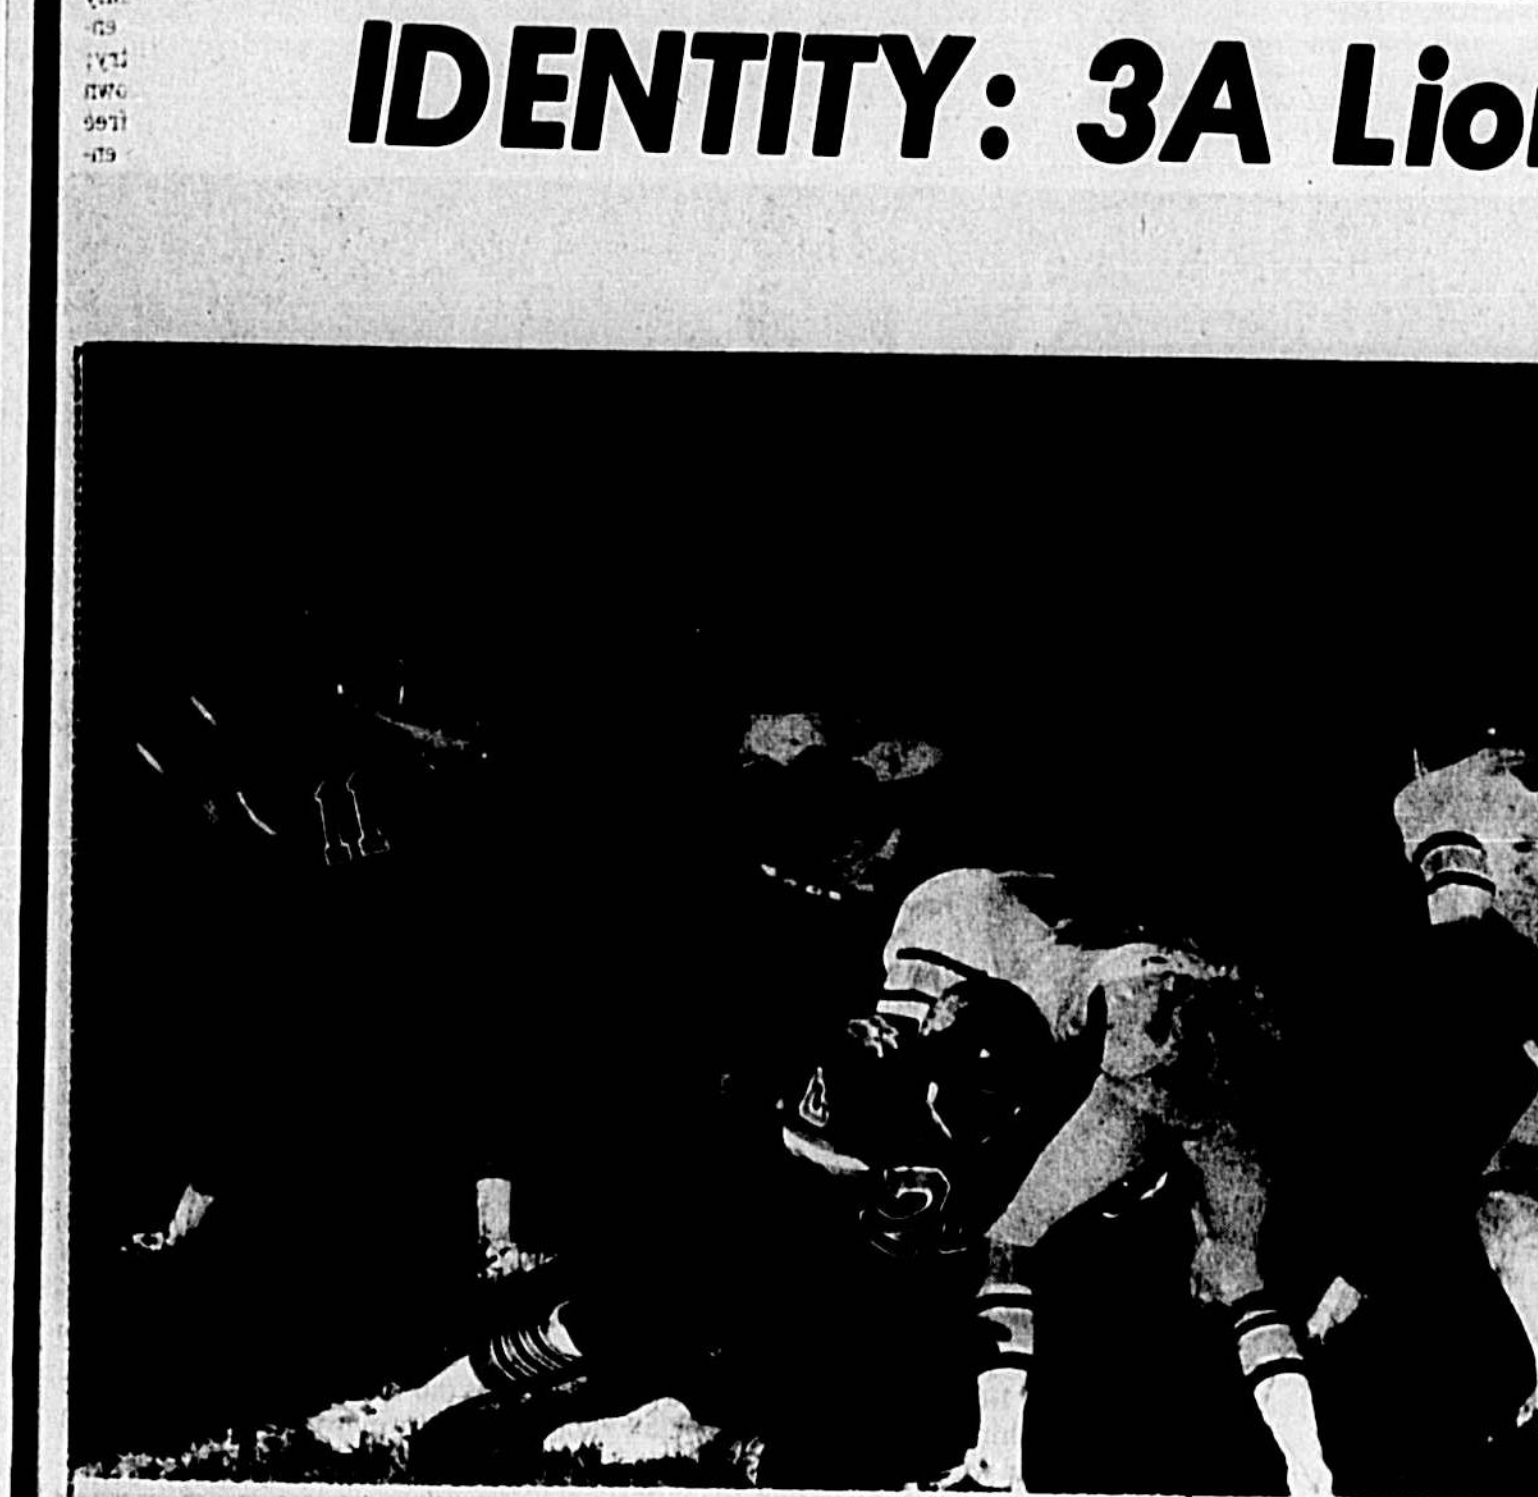

Once again Capobianco responded with a sustained march of nine plays which almost ended successfully, but Rusty Conway's 22-yard field goal hit the crossbar and bounced down — no good.

It was a remark by Conway earlier in the week that "They

Transfer Route Is Rough

At least half of all corporate employees transferred to Florida have never been to the state before. They are surprised and often surprised by what they discover in the Sunshine State, including the climate, the types of homes that are available and the outdoor-oriented lifestyle, all adding up to a different environment.

Home Ownership Not Always Best Route

Many people who move to Florida are looking for a better way to invest their money. Home ownership is often the first route they take, but it may not be the best route for everyone.

Country Boy Jerry Reed: When He's Hot, He's Hot!

By MARK SCHWED
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Some December, Jerry Reed will "lay up and get fat as a pig." Reed deserves the break between October and December, the crooner and part-time actor will finish work on two albums, star in a television movie, and put together plans for his seventh film, a sequel to the box office smash "Smokey and the Bandit," starring Burt Reynolds.

Because the "future looks like hell," Reed says people "need a richer round of entertainment now than say 20 years ago when the country was at its peak." "After World War II everything was easy street and we were king. Now everything is different. When people come out and pay dollars they should be entertained so they can forget those things." "You better know I'm going to stick to having fun. I don't think anybody wants to pay $3.50 to see something they just saw on the screen," he says.

Reed's success is based in his hometown of Altamonte, where he worked days in cotton mills and performed nights in gin mills. At age 18 he landed a contract with a record company and soon artists began recording his songs. His song, "Amos Moses," became a No. 1 country record in 1970 and crossed over into the pop charts. Four years later he got his first chance at acting in another Reynolds film, "W.W. and the Dixie Dance Kings." "I always wanted to act but couldn't lay my music down," says Reed, who describes himself as a "very energetic dude." "I went into picking and singing and I backed into pictures. If I never make another one I'm way ahead." But if "Smoky Two" is anywhere near as successful as its predecessor (Reynolds reportedly made $10 million on the original picture), Reed's acting career is not finished. But he sometimes worries that his acting career might affect his recording and writing success. "I'm trying to do them both

France's Top Criminal Killed In Police Ambush

PARIS (UPI)—Jacques Mesrine, France's Public Enemy No. 1 whose 10-year criminal career spanned two continents, was shot to death in a police ambush that also wounded his girlfriend and pet poodle.

The hail of bullets fired through the windshield of his gray sedan at a busy intersection near Paris's Flea Market left the criminal sitting upright strapped into his seat by a safety belt with blood staining the yellow upholstery.

The gunfire cut down the 42-year-old former Algerian war hero, dubbed France's John Dillinger, so quickly that he had no time to reach for the hand grenades he always kept with him.

Some of the 20 bullets pumped into the car seriously wounded Mesrine's girlfriend, Sylvia Jean-Jacques, whom the criminal called "La Bella" ("The Beauty" in Italian).

Other agents lodged in the paws of the couple's pet poodle. "We know Mesrine was armed and possessed two grenades and we couldn't take the risk of letting him open fire on us or risking other people's lives," said Maurice Bouvier, head of Paris

Dr. Genevieve Richardson Heads Exhibit Museum Adds Fashion Gallery

BY DORIS DIETRICH AND SHIRLEY REILLY
Leg-of-mutton sleeves... Turtlenecks... Bertha collars... Pillow-lace... Pastelous... Dresses...

These may be terms that today's young moderns are not too familiar with.

But Dr. Genevieve Richardson sprinkles her conversation with these costume and dressmaking terms while explaining the vintage clothing on exhibit at the Henry Shelton Sanford Museum-Library, 500 E. First St., Sanford. Costumes are certainly not new to Dr. Richardson. She is a graduate of the University of Illinois where she was in charge of costumes in the theater department before retiring to DeBary several years ago.

Through mutual friends, Dr. Richardson and Mildred M. Caskey, who lived in DeBary at the time, became acquainted, and both have mutual artistic interests.

Both women have shared their varied talents with the community including DeBary Theatre Arts Guild (TAG) since its founding. And both are past board directors of Ballet Guild of Sanford-DeBary, where they designed and created "fantasy costumes" with Miss C. A. Key choreographing ballets for the dance company on occasion.

Each has shared her "savvy" with the community—gratis.

And now, something new has been added to the quaint museum—fashions—in fact, "100 Years of Fashion."

What are the forces behind a "fashion gallery" in the Sanford Museum? Dr. Richardson and Miss Caskey, the museum curator, met their heads-together in the interest of a new exciting exhibit for the museum and began dreaming of a formal fashion display.

Their dream became reality through the efforts of an exhibit committee of Rose Wontensay, Carol Kirchhoff and Margaret Vitale.

The first task was to find mannequins. "This search led them to the attic of a department store where they had to climb a 10-foot iron ladder."

"Agnes, I've detached heads and torsos 'lay everywhere, but we found what we wanted," Dr. Richardson said. "Wigs were no problem except we had to style them according to the period of the clothes we intended to use."

Volunteers devoted their artistic talents to painting and refurbishing the mannequins.

"My aunt, who lived with us when I was a child, was a dressmaker," says Dr. Richardson. "I had access to the latest fashion magazines and I played with scraps of material. I guess some of my aunt's interest in clothing rubbed off on me."

Dr. Richardson's love and respect for the hand-workmanship of these aged costumes is evident as she lightly fingers the fragile organza; smoothes a tiny see MUSEUM, Page 2B

Wood Carver Whittlin' Way To Art Status Of 'Freak'

By TOM METZEL
Herald Staff Writer

Have you ever done any whittling?

Have you ever taken a piece of wood and carved it into a recognizable shape?

After you put the knife away, did you pause to make it look more like life?

After that, did you ever show it to anybody for their comments and criticism?

If you have ever attempted carving a piece of wood so it looks like a bird or animal, you are probably aware of the difficulties involved.

Now suppose there was a contest open to the best carver in the world, you entered and your piece came in third. No small accomplishment.

That is what Daniel DeMendoza did this year.

The Sanford whittler carver entered a pair of exquisitely carved pelicans in the miniature class of the world championship contest sponsored by the Wood Foundation and the Wildfowl Art Museum in Maryland.

At his home 125 Hidden Lake Drive, DeMendoza looked over a catalogue of winners and mentioned the high quality of the first place winners work. Then his face broke into a grin and he said, "I think I can take him next year."

DeMendoza is proud of his work, and rightfully so. Wildlife wood sculptures are an up and coming art form that started with hunter's decoys years ago. "It's the only true American art form," DeMendoza said. "It started with the Indians. The old wooden decoys, many of which are antiques, are highly prized by dealers and collectors today."

DeMendoza is a professional carver turning out 50 to 80 pieces a year, but he was not always in this line of work. Working as a sculptor for toy manufacturers, subcontractor, and making plaques was his original occupation. "I didn't like the rat race," he said. "I decided to go into what I really love."

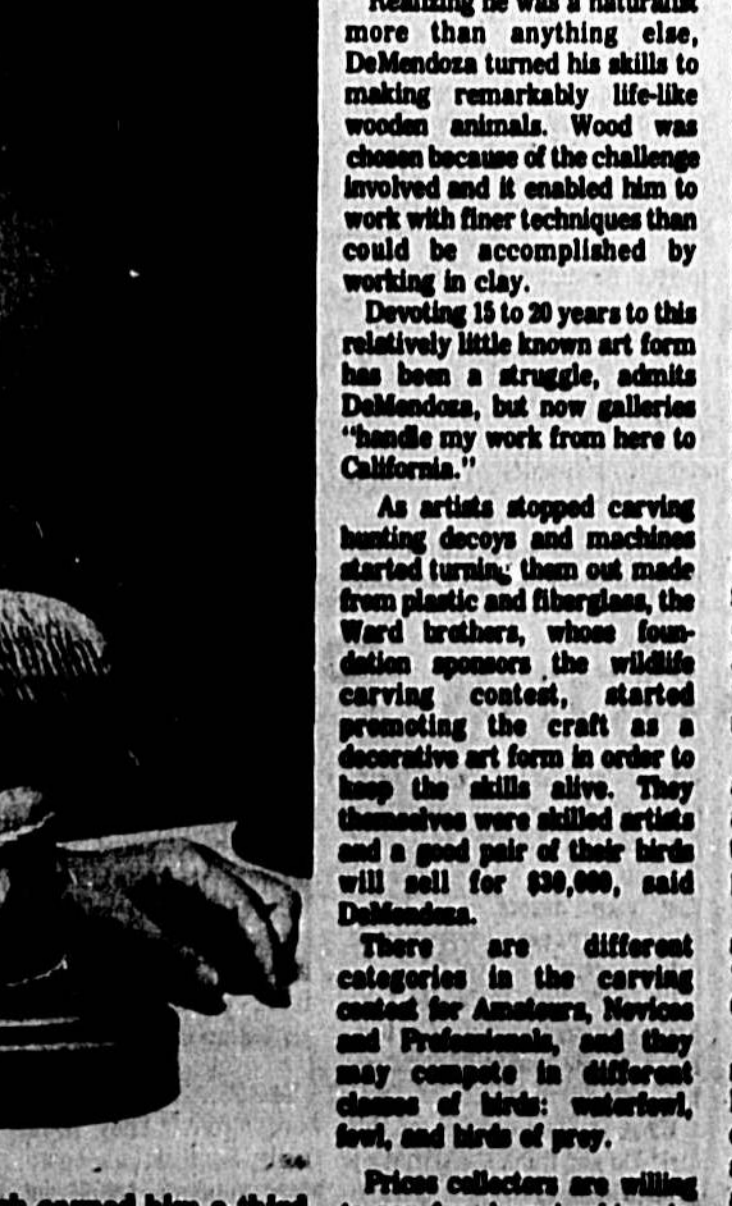

Realizing he was a naturalist more than anything else, DeMendoza turned his skills to making remarkably life-like wooden animals. Wood was chosen because of the challenge involved and it enabled him to work with finer techniques than could be accomplished by working in clay.

Devoing it is 20 years to this relatively little known art form has been a struggle, admits DeMendoza, but now galleries handle his work from here to California.

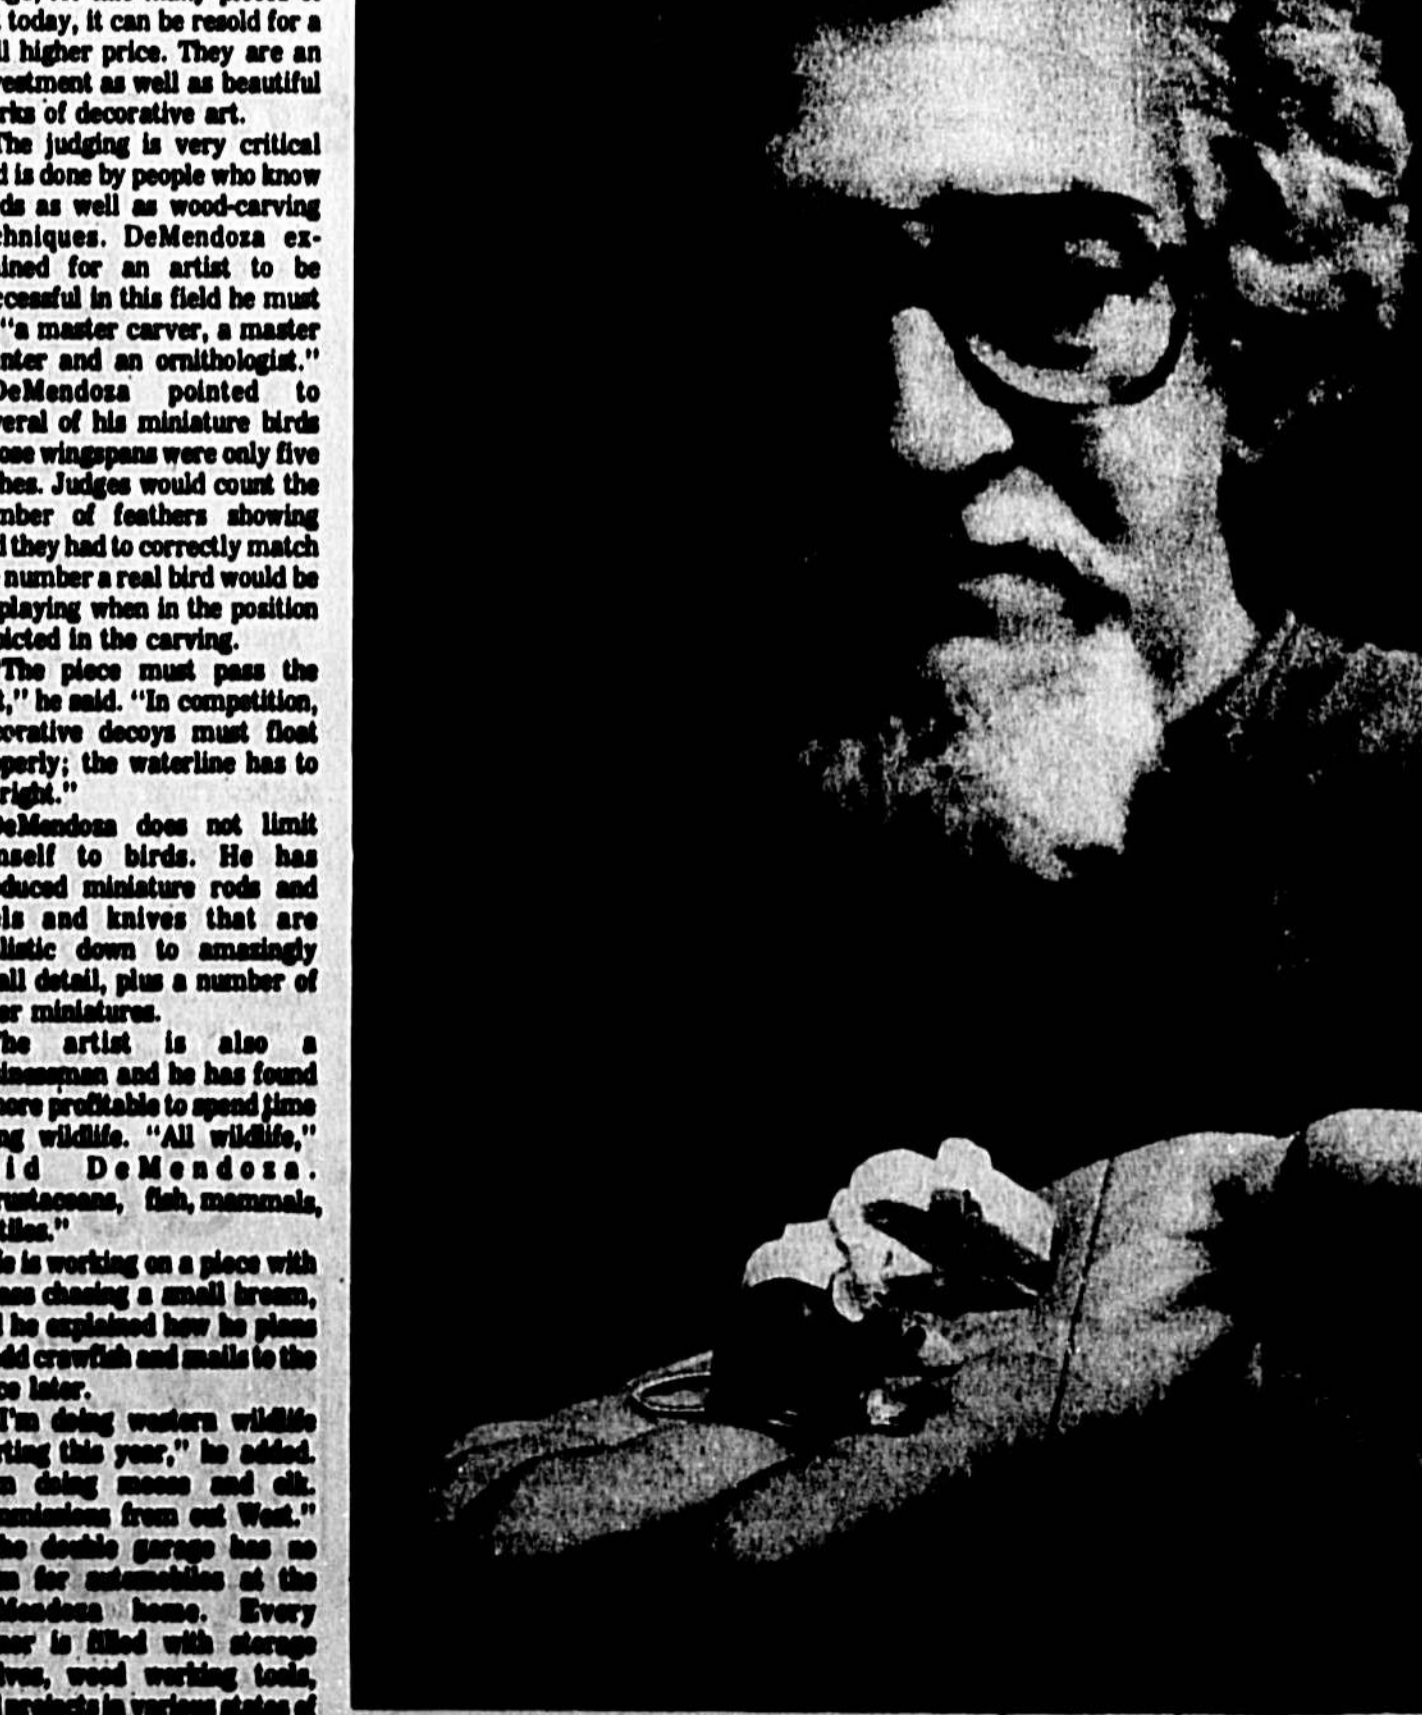

As artists stopped carving hunting decoys and machines started turning, then out made from plastic and fiberglass, the Ward brothers, whose foundation sponsors the wildlife carving contest, started promoting the craft as a decorative art form in order to keep the skills alive. They themselves were skilled artists and a good pair of their birds will sell for $20,000, said DeMendoza.

There are different categories in the carving contest for Amateurs, Novices and Professionals, and they may compete in different classes of birds: waterfowl, land, and birds of prey.

Prices collectors are willing to pay for championship winners are in the $15,000 to $20,000

Daniel DeMendoza is proud of his miniature pelicans which earned him a third place award in the world championship for wood carvers.

DeMendoza shows mice in various stages of completion.

DeMott gave examples of artists in many fields—examples spiced with salty language and an expressive face.

With his curly gray hair, glasses and a ready smile, he reminds one of a younger Peter Ustinov. With his tongue and wit as sharp as his carving, he comes to life as a living on the lecture circuit.

The Return Of A Classic: Pumps For 'Boardroom To Ballroom'

By ELLIE GROSSMAN
Special To The Herald

NEW YORK — The carriage stopped in front of the manor house and, as the footman opened the door, Lady Peabody whispered to her daughter, "Do try not to gap, Agnes, my dear. It's so unbecoming."

Agnes flushed with anger. After all, every fashionable woman in London and Paris was gapping these days — 220 years ago — because of the stupid shoes they were all wearing. Those pointed-toe, low-heeled, black "pumps."

Boy, if a name ever fit!

She'd read that people used to call male servants "pumps" because they wore loose-fitting, thin-soled leather shoes that sounded like a water pump when they gapped their way across marble floors.

The shoe was still gapping and pumping. How could you expect it to do anything else? There were no buckles or snaps or ties to keep it on. All it did was grip the foot at the toe and heel.

And what were women doing in men's shoes, anyway? Peasant shoes, to boot, if the truth be known. That's how they started, because who else would have worn such thin leather soles?

As they entered the ballroom, Agnes saw her widowed mother nonchalantly searching for Lord Wellheeled. "She wouldn't dare carp at him about his gapping pumps," she thought. No, it was fine for men to gap in their dancing pumps.

American women tumbled for the shoe, for sure, around 1906, when they started getting out more into business and wanted a low-heeled, comfortable shoe. They insisted on shopping for them — which men were still wearing to dance in — in boys' departments even after shoe people began making them just for women.

Well, pumps are de rigueur again, or none of this would be pertinent. But women don't have to worry about bruising the collective male memory by wearing them. The shoe industry takes no pride in preciseness or purity of language. To them, these days, a pump can have pointed, round or no toes, high or low heels, straps, bows, rhinestones and a host of other strictly disqualifying characteristics.

This fall there are pumps to please a plethora of persons, according to The Footwear Council. At left: consider Golo's jeweled classic evening pump in black kid suede ($175). This sling-backed, open-toed nubuck is perfect for day to evening transfers ($50), while today's financier will feel like a million in Golo's mid-high heel kid pump. Left: For dancing in the night, Golo brings back sophistication with this black satin low-heel pump ($55). The gold kid lining makes this classic a knock-out.

DEAR HELOISE:
I don't like the idea of putting my small baby on the plastic mat in the stroller, and if I had a blanket underneath the pad, the baby would up in one corner and the blanket was wedged up in another.

Once, while trying to tuck the blanket around the edges, I thought, "If only the blanket went all the way around..." Inspiration! After measuring the mat and allowing for some and a little extra at one end to fold under, I bought some cotton flannel.

I stitched it up like a pillowcase, leaving a flap of one end. I then made two buttonholes and attached two buttons (slogers, snaps or cut-gripping tape could be used instead).

I slid it over the mat, bottom side down, and now baby stays warmer in the winter and cooler in the summer. When it becomes soiled, I just throw it in the washer and dryer.

I'm going to make two more so when one is being washed, there's a clean one to put on the mat and one to spare.

How neat is an insect-proof! No more fear of baby getting tangled up in the covers, or covering his face with the blanket.

When a person is using a crutch and needs to prop their leg when sitting, especially if they have a cast on their leg, it is easy to sit down on the narrow end of the crutch and use the wider end for a leg prop.

My doctor showed me this when I broke my leg.

DEAR HELOISE:
I've never written in like this before, but your column turns me on. I think you and your fans might find this hint useful.

I always have trouble finding safety pins, straight pins, paperclips, bobbypins, etc., so I took a small pill bottle and whenever I find a small article that is important enough to save from the trash, but I don't want to bother with putting up, I just pop it into this jar.

Practically whenever I need those types of odds and ends, I check in my bottle instead of digging in drawers for fifteen minutes. Whatever I need is usually there.

Well, I hope this has helped you. It's those little things that make life a little easier!

Well, now I don't mind telling you, your letter turned me on! Thanks so much for adding a cheery note to an already beautiful day!

British Embassy Stormed

Khomeini Levels Warning At U.S.

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Muslim students held dozens of American hostages inside the U.S. Embassy today demanding that the United States hand over the shah. Other students stormed the British Embassy in an apparent attempt to take control.

Khomeini warned the United States of "another course of action" if the shah was not handed over to Iran for Islamic justice and the ayatollah's son entered the U.S. Embassy today to ward cheering from the occupying students.

Students sympathetic to the Tehran invaders also seized U.S. consulates in Shiraz and Tabriz, in northwestern Iran, that were closed after the shah's regime was overthrown last February.

In Tehran hundreds of Muslim students holding at least 59 Americans seized during a takeover of the U.S. Embassy Sunday vowed today to occupy the compound until the United States returns the deposed shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, now in a New York hospital where he is being treated for cancer.

Witnesses said about 50 students moved into the British Embassy late today only hours after the state radio broadcast a statement by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini accusing Britain of sheltering former prime minister Shapur Bakhtiar.

Khomeini also denounced Britain in his speech to insurance company employees in an audience in the Muslim holy city of Qom.

He said Britain must hand over to Iran the shah's last premier, Bakhtiar. But a British Embassy spokesman said Bakhtiar was not in Britain.

"If they do not hand over these traitors or at least expel them from their country," Khomeini said in a reference to the exiled shah and Bakhtiar, "we shall have another course of action."

Less than four hours after Khomeini made his demand, Iranian students moved into the British Embassy in Tehran.

Witnesses said about 40 armed government guardsmen had entered the British Embassy premises and were negotiating with the students.

Iran's oil minister Ali Akbar Moinefar said today he would cut off crude oil supplies to the United States if ordered to do so by Khomeini, the state radio reported.

The fate of a group of American and Iranian hostages held for the second day in the U.S. Embassy, including at least 59 U.S. citizens, was unknown. The students, who seized the building in a battle with Marine guards, vowed not to surrender until the shah is returned to Iran.

Almad Khomeini, the 46-year-old son of the ayatollah, swept into the embassy amid wild cheering by the more than 10,000 demonstrators and students, many of them teen-age girls wearing the black anklelength veil.

In Qom, the Islamic Religious School threw its "full support" behind the students, telling them, "You have not occupied this place but, rather, you have recaptured it from the invaders."

Khomeini also gave tacit approval to the embassy takeover, calling the compound "a center of spying and massing on the street and revolutionary guards and police patrolling the area were reinforced."

"Khomeini struggles, Carter trembles." "Give us the shah," and "Death to America, death to Carter."

In remarks broadcast today by the state radio, the Islamic leader denounced the United States for giving the shah permission to seek cancer treatment in New York.

The students stormed the compound Sunday morning and a spokesman for the group said they fought for three hours with U.S. Marine guards, who responded with tear gas, before taking control and seizing the hostages.

A student spokesman told the students said the students were holding about 90 Americans and 10 Iranians hostages. In Washington, a State Department spokesman said late Sunday there were probably 59 Americans being held, but added, "We can't be precise."

No names were released, but diplomatic sources said chief of mission and charge d'affaires Bruce Laingen was not inside when the embassy was attacked.

Outside the embassy compound today, demonstrators massed on the street and revolutionary guards and police patrolling the area were reinforced.

Golden Age Olympics Begins 5th Year

Stella Taylor, Miss Florida At Opening

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

The 5th Annual Golden Age Olympics was off to a running start this morning in spite of a slight delay in lighting the Olympic torch.

A brisk breeze off Lake Monroe kept last year's track and field champions Harriett Boyd of Sanford and Orin Graff of Daytona Beach from lighting their torches with matches. Undaunted they ran onto the Civic Center, where several hundred people were gathered for the ceremonies, and a match tossed into the gas burner did the trick, and the Olympic flame burned once more.

The annual event for senior citizens 55 and older will run through Saturday and is co-sponsored by the city of Sanford and the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce.

Music for the event was provided by the German Band of Daytona Community College under the direction of Burton Burgess, also known as "Gus, the Bugmeister," and the Star-Spangled Banner was sung by Shirley Ryan, choir director for Lake Mary Baptist Church. Stella Taylor of Fort Lauderdale, this year's honorary celebrity chairperson was introduced by Dan Moss, manager of Zayre Department Store, which is sponsoring her stay here. Moss said although she had swum from St. Petersburg to Tampa in Florida, the Nile River and the English Channel twice, she faced the greatest challenge of her career when she swam Lake Monroe on Thursday."

Ms. Taylor had trained hard for the 70-hour, three-day swim from Cuba in October, but it had to be called off because conditions were not right. She said she is now looking forward to her next big swim next May from Marathon to Freeport, Bahamas sponsored by the Bahamas News Bureau. A school teacher, Ms. Taylor also said she is considering a Gasparilla Swim from St. Petersburg to Tampa in Tampa Bay. A two-way swim of the English Channel may also be in the offing next year she said.

Welcoming speeches were also made by State Rep. Bob Hallaway, Sanford Mayor Lee P. Moore, and Official Hostess Edith Harrison.

Joe Werner of Sea World announced that the overall champions would be guests at a luncheon at Sea World and Lifetime Sea World senior citizen discount cards would be available at the chamber office.

The new official gold and blue Golden Age Olympics flag was presented by Clarence Bauer in memory of his late wife, Martha, to Mrs. Harrison, accepting for the Olympics

Altamonte Springs, Winter Springs To Elect Officials

Elections Tuesday In Area Cities

Less than 1,000 Altamonte Springs' 7,375 registered voters are expected to go to the city's three polling places Tuesday to elect two persons to the city council.

City Clerk Phyllis Jordahl predicted the 50 percent turnout of voters. The three polling places are located at the civic center for those living south of State Route 68 and east of U.S. 17, at the intersection of 54 and north of SR 68 and at the Spring Oaks Recreation Center for those living west of 54.

Candidates are Marian Morris and Doreen Vickers, incumbent, for the District 3 commission seat and Jim Thompson for the District 4 post.

Mrs. Morrison, 66, of 609 Hawthorne Drive, is making her first bid for public office. A former waitress of the city, she is originally from Illinois and Wisconsin. She and her husband, Guy, have four children. Their youngest, Guy, 8, lives at home and attends the Palm Springs Christian School.

Advocating a strong mayor form of government, Mrs. Morrison is for "anything to alleviate the traffic problems on SR 68." She has been active in homeowners associations and a parent-teacher organization in the past.

Mrs. Vickers, 44, is completing her first term on the city commission. A resident of Altamonte Springs for the past 15 years, she and her husband David have two daughters and live at 770 Florida Boulevard.

Their daughters Elizabeth, 25, and Rosalinda, 18, are both students at the University of Mississippi.

A member of "Young Women," Mrs. Vickers is a homemaker.

He wishes to continue her work on the city commission to retain the residential character and quality of neighborhoods. She was the historical chairman for the city and has worked on the five-year advisory plan for the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council.

Actively involved in the preservation of the community's natural resources, she has advocated fiscal responsibility and initiative and leadership for passage of the anti-litter ordinance in the city.

Thompson, 57, of 801 Curtis Ave., is a native Floridian. He and his wife, Debbie, have two children, Cary, 16, and Cecil, 15 months.

A teacher in the Seminole County school system for the past 11 years, Thompson currently teaches history at Lakeview Middle School, 15 Thompson is for holding the line on taxes, protecting the city's natural resources, sensible and orderly growth and effective law enforcement.

Rex Walker, 36, of 900 Montgomery Road, has one son, Rex Shawn, 6.

Employed at Albertson's, he believes in fair representation, proper planning in growth and building, conservation and ecology. He is concerned with controlling traffic, restoring respect and dignity to the city commission, reducing crime, and working with educators, parents and students for better education.

Winter Springs voters Tuesday will select two councilmen from among four candidates in the municipal elections.

Challenging Wilfred Arnold, completing his first year in the first year on the city council, is Gary Hunt. While two incumbents to city politics, Maureen Boyd and Andy Montali, are vying for the Seat 4 post.

Polling places for the election are: Precinct 13, 102 N. Moss Road, Fire Station No. 1; Precinct 24, Seventh Day Adventist Church, S. Moss Road and Precinct 26, Fire Station 2 on Northern Way, Tuskarville.

Absentee ballots may be returned until the polls close at 7 p.m. Tuesday, City Clerk Mary Norton said today. Applications for 19 absentee ballots were received and eight of those ballots have been returned, Mrs. Norton said.

There are 2,787 persons qualified to vote in the election. Arnold, 67, of 800 Leopard Trail, has been a resident of Winter Springs for the past 2 1/2 years.

Today Officials Prepare

Encephalitis Program

Seminole County officials have taken steps to prepare for an outbreak of mosquito-borne St. Louis Encephalitis, should one occur.

A countywide surveillance program, begun in 1977, watches for the disease and monitors the number of mosquitoes capable of transmitting it.

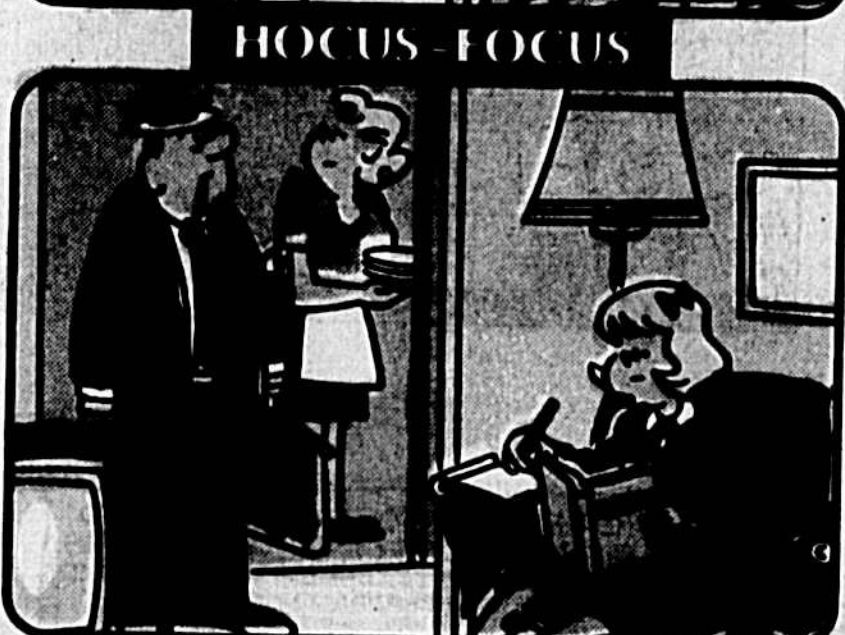

To be prepared in the event it is determined that St. Louis Encephalitis, epidemic in Florida in 1977, is a threat to the citizens of the county, these steps have been taken, according to County Commissioner Bob French:

1. A contract has been negotiated with an aircraft spraying firm to begin spraying any and all areas of the county deemed necessary within 12 to 24 hours following authorization.

2. Arrangements have been made with the Florida office of Entomology to transfer equipment and manpower from organized mosquito control districts to aid in controlling the mosquito. County personnel have visited neighboring coastal counties which have extensive programs to determine equipment availability and approximate cost to the county for assistance.

If an emergency situation should occur in the county, U.S. Air Force planes can be obtained for mosquito spraying, French said.

"Seminole County does not have an on-going mosquito spray program," he reported, "however, we have the plans and resources available to act if the threat of mosquito-borne disease should occur."

FACE VALUE AT A GLANCE Place three dice in a clear water glass and bend the glass to a friend. Ask him or her to shake the dice and place the glass upon a table. Now, looking at the tops of the dice, announce that you will predict the number of spots on the bottom surfaces. When the glass is held overhead, your prediction will prove correct. Secret: Since the total of any two opposite sides is always 7, simply subtract the total of the top three numbers from 21.
