Visit from the sheriff

SANFORD - The Seminole County Sheriff's office is instituting a new welcome program as part of its Seminole Neighborhood Policing.

According to spokesman Ed McDonough, each month, the county's sewer and water division will send a list of new accounts to the sheriff's office. The list will be given to the district

Deputies will then be asked to stop by the new home or business and introduce themselves. They will give each homeowner or business owner a crime prevention booklet and a list of the services the sheriff's office has to offer.

McDonough says the welcome program is another method the Seminole County sheriff's office will use to reach beyond the typical reactive role of law enforcement.

Roll out the Beryl

SANFORD - The current tropical storm ripping her way through northern Florida into Georgia might be tearing up the countryside because she's upset that no one can pronouce her name.

Newscasters on local television and radio stations have been saying her name as if it were "barrel." The proper pronounciation, according to several people who have friends and relations with that beautiful old name, say the name should be pronounced "Burl."

We believe that as people learn how to pronouce the tropical storm's name, she will because calmer and cease her destruction.

Traffic jam

LAKE MARY — A traffic tie up was reported this morning on Interstate-4. It was reportedly caused by a vehicle accident near the I-4 Lake Mary Boulevard exit. Traffic was said to be at a standard in the westbound large to S.R. 46 and times even further north.

Lake Mary police said one person required copitalisation, but no names or details were available regarding the incident as of 10:30 this

The traffic flow reportedly returned to normal by 9:30 a.m.

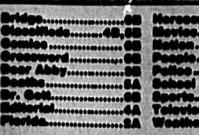

Public session on road

SANFORD — Seminole County engineers will hold a public information session tommorrow night on the proposed widening of the Lake Mary Boulevard extension between U.S. Highway 17-92 and Sanford Avenue. The session begins at 7 p.m. and will be held in the Agricultural Extension Service Auditorium, Five Points Operations Center, 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford.

Correction

SANFORD - The Lake Monroe Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee will meet Wednesday, Aug. 17, at 4 p.m., at Sanford City Hall, rather than Tuesday as written in Sunday's Sanford Herald. The Herald regrets this error. The main item of discussion is the refined Scheme D of the University of Florida architectural design plan for waterfront development.

Disaster planning

By MICK PPEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY - Although Tropical Storm Beryl didn't pose a threat to Central Florida, Seminole County and its municipalities are working diligently on disaster planning.

The Longwood City Commission approved participation in a statewide disaster mutual aid con-tract last night. Lake Mary's commission will discuss it's own plan this Thursday night.

During last night's Longwood City
Commission meeting, a unanimous vote was given to enter into a statewide disaster mutual aid contract. Under the plan, in case of emergency cause by hurricane, tornado or other disasters, Fire Chief Charles Chapman will be assigning one fire engine, the emergency boat, an ambulance, a tower truck and up to three personnel and one supervisor to the area

Seminole County approved the measure in July, and has been requesting cities to join in the agreement.

The City of Sanford has also agreet to the joint mutual aid plan. Although Lake Mary had been approached to join the plan, it is seeking to establish its own methods of helping the city residents in emergency situations.

Lake Mary has previously discussed the countywide emergency disaster plan.

The joint plan was held off however. At that time, Mayor Lowry Rockett commented that during a severe emergency, the citizens of Lake Mary would have to wait their turn in receiving county emergency disaster workers. Rockett suggested that the Lake Mary City Commission and staff should take it upon themselves to "look after our own people. They depend on us,

Device may save lives

WHITING FIELD - A collision avoidance device being installed on Navy training planes already may have saved lives.

Coast Guard Lt. Rich Jackson, an instructor pilot, was flying with a student July 21, a cloudy day, when the system chimed an ominous warning tone. It sounds when another plane is 20 seconds from entering a 1-mile protection zone.

A display screen showed they were on a collision course.

Jackson pulled a hard breakaway maneuver to avoid crashing.
"We had hit the magic 200-feet mark when we split apart.
That's pretty lethal range," Jackson said.

Building inspector works with police

ORLANDO - Orlando police officers Danny Sutherland and Andre Boren often go out on their drug busts with building inspector Fred Bruns.

The officers arrest suspected dealers and abusers, the inspector closes the houses. This is a good solution to a common police lament: arrest a drug dealer and he's back on common police lament: arrest a drug dealer and he's back on the street within hours, usually working out of the same house. Sutherland and Boren arrested two alleged dealers and abusers recently while Bruns cited for condemnation two houses where the drugs supposedly were being exchanged. "If you find something that works, you should use it," Sutherland said. "Fred has always worked well with us." Boy survives, family drowns

MIAMI — Eight-year-old Daniel Buzo likely would've died along with his mother if she hadn't given him her life vest, the only one aboard their boat.

Fellow Cuban rafters found the boy floating alone clinging to a piece of wood in the Florida Straits. The U.S. Coast Guard picked up the boy and the rafters Monday afternoon about 60 miles southwest of Key West.

Daniel's is but one of hundreds of stories of Cubans who try to make it the United States to escape the communist regime of Cuban President Fidel Castro. On Monday, 270 rafters were found in the Florida Straits, bringing the total for the year to 6,056, the Coast Guard said.

Over the weekend, the Coast Guard said, 371 Cubans were rescued in the waters between the island nation and Florida, making it the busiest weekend since the Mariel boat lift of 1980, when 125,000 Cubans came to this Country in a space of five months after Castro opened the port of Mariel.

Daniel was in a boat with his parents and three friends, said Arturo Cobo, director of the Cuban Transit Center in Key West who spoke to the boy after he was taken there.

The boy's mother gave him her life vest just moments before the boat overturned after running into rough weather and choppy seas, Cobo said.

Both Juan Carlos and Julia Ester drowned; their son Daniel made it to freedom and was listed in serious condition.

Beryl hits northwest Florida

Residents of flood area watch storm's progress

By JACKIE HALLIFAX Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Tropical Storm Beryl drenched northwest Florida, unleashed strong winds, washed out roads and flooded coastal areas before moving toward Georgia.

The center of the storm at 5 a.m. today was at 30.7 latitude north and 85.2 longitude west, which put it about 80 miles southwest of Albany, Ga., according to a National Weather Service advisory. The storm continued to drench the area between Apalachicola and Cedar Key, with showers extending south to Fort Myers.

The storm, which crossed land Monday, remained just northeast of Panama City for much of Monday and early today.

"It's going to be out of there in a couple of hours," said Ed Rappaport, a hurricane specialist at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables. "Definitely, the worst is

A flood watch remained in effect for a large part of northwest Florida. A tornado watch was to remain in effect until 5 p.m. EDT today for much of Panhandle.

The memories of last month's Tropical Storm Alberto are still fresh in the minds of many Georgia residents.

Cile Warr of Bainbridge, Ga., whose dream house was saved by a 9-foot wall of 5,000 sandbags last month, wondered now whether it had been wise to tear it down.

"We feel like it's going to be OK, but that's how we felt last time," she said. "If it gets bad, I think we'll pack up and hope for the best. I don't think we have the energy to build a wall again."

Flood victims in Georgia watched in dismay as Beryl came ashore Monday afternoon at Panama City, but there was no panic. And, unlike the preparations for last month's flood, there was no frantic sandbagging of low areas.

Forecasters said Beryl isn't expected to be as destructive as Alberto, which killed 31 people in Georgia, damaged thousands of homes and forced about 40,000 people to

In Florida meanwhile, Walter Beckham, 61, and a few helpers hosed silt and muck out the door at Posey's restaurant in St. Marks. Inside, linoleum tiles were beginning to curl; outside, an oyster cooler had been lifted 10 feet up a hill by the rising river.

"My daddy always said, 'You pay a price for living by the water," he said Monday.

"I'll tell you what, though: It's a mess."

A tropical storm warning was posted from Apalachicola to Yankeetown, just south of Cedar Key.

"We can't take too much more rain," said Alan Pierce, emergency management director for Franklin County, where last month's floodwaters ruined the oyster harvest in Apalachicola Bay. "We've been having bad weather ever since Alberto. It's getting real old."

Gov. Lawton Chiles declared a state of emergency Monday. The order didn't list specific counties, just north-central and west Florida.

The storm, moving north-northwest late Monday at 5 mph, was expected to dump 4 to 6 inches of rain on Alabama, Georgia and northern Florida. Some spots could get as much as 12 inches.

Flood watches were posted for parts of the Panhandle and southwestern Georgia, and residents of three Florida counties were advised to evacuate.

There were no reports of severe damage or serious injuries.

Beryl, upgraded from a tropical depression around midday Monday, hammered Franklin and Wakulla counties for several hours Monday as it stalled in the Gulf of Mexico.

The storm then came ashore at Cape San Blas and drifted northeast. Forecasters said it would weaken as it moves into Georgia 'Who knows what's next?" said Melodie Holton, wife of Mitchell County, Ga. cattleman Lane Holton. They lost about $500,000 when their fields and pastures flooded during Alberto.

"A lot of the floodwater is still here," Mrs. Holton said. "A lot of it is trapped. It wouldn't take much to bring it up again."

Beryl didn't pack the same wind punch as last month's storm, which came ashore blowing at around 70 mph, nearly hurricane strength. Alberto killed 31 people in Georgia, damaged thousands of homes and forced 40,000 people to evacuate.

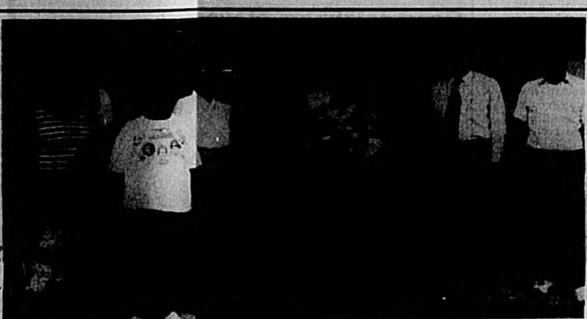

People in low-lying coastal areas of Taylor. Dixie and Wakulla counties were urged to evacuate. One lane of the main road through Alligator Point collapsed into the water Monday when pounded by wind and waves at high tide. Further west, parts of U.S. 98 were under water, and the road was closed the 15 miles from Eastpoint to Carrabelle in Franklin County.

Isolated power outages were reported throughout the Florida Panhandle.

"We get one area back on and another goes out," said George Galloway, director of administrative services for Talquin Electric Co-Op in Tallahassee.

The Red Cross opened four emergency shelters, but only a handful of people had shown up late Monday; precise figures weren't available early today. Volunteers expected them to begin filling today as the storm moved inland.

PENSACOLA - A courtappointed lawyer that antiabortion extremist Paul Hill reluctantly accepted says he will challenge a federal abortion clinic protection law and seek a change of venue.betsorm and Hill is charged with violating the new Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances law by fatally shooting an abortion doctor and volunteer escort and wounding Pensacola clinic July 29.

After Hill, who also faces state charges, pleaded innocent at his federal arraignment Monday, Assistant U.S. Public Defender Roderick Vereen said the statute is overly broad, vague and discriminates against abortion opponents.

"In essence what Congress has done is taken the side of the pro-choice movement," said Vereen, who described the law as unfairly protecting only abortion providers and patients. "What happens if somebody shoots a pro-lifer?"

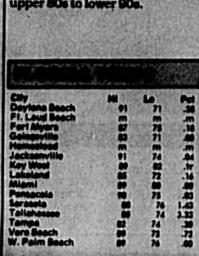

But Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern in Washington said the law is intended to protect clinics, not abortionrights advocates.

"The statute is directed at conduct, not belief," Stern said.

Gunshy man wrestles gun away from woman

By Associated Press

CRESTVIEW — Jeffrey Brown says he has been gunshy ever since he was wounded in a drive-by shooting that killed his girlfriend's baby, but he did not hesitate to act when gunfire erupted again in his neighborhood.

The construction worker wrestled a revolver away from a woman pointing it at him from an off-road vehicle last Thurs-

"He probably saved a few people," said police Lt. Jerome Worley.

Brown, 20, had just driven into the parking lot of a popular hangout in this Florida Panhandle city and gotten out of his car to pick up a friend when he found himself staring into the barrel of the Colt .45.

"I was scared, I ain't going to lie to you," Brown said. "I thought if I walked away from her she might shoot me."

At least one shot had been fired before Brown arrived, police said.

"She was pointing the un dead at me;" Brown recalled. "She was shaking and crying. I told her to go ease on down the road. Go home. She said, "I'm going to kill somebody, I'm tired of this."

of this."

Police Chief Maxie Barrow said the woman, JoAnn Lesch, 33, of Crestview, charged only with drunken driving as of Monday, was a regular customer of drug dealers in the neighborhood.

'She probably got mad somebody ripped her off," Barrow said. "I always see her down there and we've even sold her crack before, and we went to arrest her but she swallowed it."

Brown saw an opening when the woman turned her head slightly.
"I grabbed the gun and made sure it was facing outward instead of inward," he said. "She tried to bite my hand and the gun went off into the air."

Brown wrested the revolver from her grip and took it to the police station.

In the meantime, about 25 people converged on Lesch, throwing rocks and bottles. As police arrived so did more people. After two hours, 21 police officers, state troopers and Okaloosa County sheriff's deputies and four police dogs finally scattered the crowd that had grown to about 75.

Four officers suffered minor injuries and four people were arrested on charges of inciting a riot, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest without violence. One of the suspects was bitten on the less by a police dos.

on the leg by a police dog.
Only eight months ago Brown was wounded in the thigh while he was babysitting his girlfriend's 19-month-old boy.
The toddler was killed.

"I got a flashback" last Thursday, Brown said. "I'm scared what's going to happen next he said. Who's going to get shot, if there's going to be violence. It's just frightening how you're going to be at the wrong place at the wrong time."

Inspector closes houses after cops bust dealers

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Orlando police officers Danny Sutherland and Andre Boren often go out on their drug busts with building inspector Fred Bruns.

The officers arrest suspected dealers and abusers, the inspector closes the houses. This is a good solution to a common police lament: arrest a drug dealer and he's back on the street within hours, usually working out of the same house.

Sutherland and Boren arrested two alleged dealers and abusers recently while Bruns cited for condemnation two houses where the drugs supposedly were being exchanged.

"If you find something that works, you should use it," Sutherland said. "Fred has always worked well with us."

But a lawyer who frequently handles cases for the American Civil Liberties Union thinks the city's practice is discriminatory.

"That's selective enforcement," Howard Marks said. "If they are selecting places out because they don't like them, I have a problem with that."

New ephefrine law affects non-abusers

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — If you're missing Primatene Tablets, Bronkaid and similar asthma medications at your pharmacy counter, blame young people abusing the drug ephedrine.

A new Florida law designed to stop teen-agers from using the widely available stimulant has made it harder for those needing asthma tablets, nose drops and a hemorrhoid ointment.

They are now available only through a doctor's prescription.

The law that went into effect May 29 was aimed at pills, sold mostly in convenience stores, that were being marketed as diet or energy pills under such names as Mini-Thins, Pink Hearts and White Cross.

But it also cleared the shelves of other medications with ephedrine but without a history of abuse as stimulants. These include the Primatene tablets and Bronkaid, plus Vicks Varionol nose drops, Pazo Hemorrhoid Ointment and others.

"They happen to be caught in this fine net of law," said Greg Jones, a drug agent supervisor with the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

HRS, which enforces the new law, warns overdoses of ephedrine can cause death. Besides the drug's ability to relax the muscles of bronchial tubes, it increases the heart rate and can boost blood pressure.

"When you take this drug in excessive doses, you are increasing the risk of cardiovascular accident." Jones said.

The sponsor of the law. Sen. William "Doc" Myers, R-Hobe Sound, said the wording was unintentionally too broad in the original legislation. He later tried to amend it to permit over-the-counter sales of the other products, but no action was taken.

"If we do have a special session on health, I'll try to stick that in there again," said Myers, a practicing physician. "We don't want people taking Primatene to go to the doctor to get a prescription because that's another 30 or 40 bucks."

Tony Jackson, pharmacist at Fairbanks Pharmacy in Winter Park, said Primatene products are the hardest hit by the new law. However, many asthma sufferers use doctor-prescribed drugs, he said.

Myers said the Florida law was encouraged by several incidents. One involved a potent new stimulant called "cat" that emerged from clandestine drug labs in the Midwest. Ephedrine was the key ingredient.

Repeat offenders

Many arrest reports made by Sanford police say that a person was stopped and ques-tioned, because the officer recognized the person from previous arrests.

The report in Sunday's Sanford Herald was a good indication of the revolving door syndrome in which many criminally inclined people have become involved. The same people are arrested time after time. They appear before a judge, but are back in the streets within days or even hours.

Even traffic violators are repeat offenders. A 25-year old Sanford woman was stopped on Country Club Road by Lake Mary police Thursday Aug. 4th, and charged with driving with a suspended/revoked license.

That same woman was stopped by Sanford police on Friday, Aug. 12th on Hidden Lake Drive. Again, she was charged with driving with a suspended/revoked license.

The original suspension or revocation of her license was probably the result of another traffic violation. The wheel keeps spinning, but nothing is being done other than issuing more and more traffic violations.

Local police also arrested a man recently, who was found to have had his license revoked or suspended a total of 14 times. He was charged with driving with a suspended/revoked license, which made it 15 times, but he is probably out driving on Sanford

These are only mild examples however. Of more serious nature are persons who are arrested over and over for retail thefts, home burglaries, armed robberies, and many other

Our Sanford Herald editorials have, on several occasions, endorsed the efforts of STOP. They want people given a jail sentence to serve at least 85 percent of the sentence.

Perhaps we should form a new group: "Stop Mollycoddling All' Repeat Terrorists" That would be SMART (pun intended). There have been attempts made to strengthen laws against repeat law violators, but most of them have fallen by the wayside.

Just as the STOP organization is refusing to let the State Supreme Court declare their petition for a public referendum to appear on this year's ballot, citizens should also rally to bring back the "three-stikes-you're-out" legislation, and get it strengthened as well as put

The thought that a person walking past you in the gracery store or down First Street in Sanford may be a multi-repeat criminal, is certainly frightening. It certainly doesn't do anything to make people feel safe, which is what our laws regarding criminals, and yes, traffic offenders, are supposed to be doing.

Whining racist

There is something about right-wing columnists that, at times, impels them to plunge into the sleaze of racial hatred, and Mr. William Rusher has slease of racial hetred, and Mr. William Rusher has taken his dive ("Clinton a prisoner of Black Caucus," 21 July 1994). Maybe it's frustration over things not going as well for them as they would like; it must be galling to find the majority of Americans stubbornly clinging to ideas that are fiscally conservative but socially moderate. So the answer is Hitler/Goebbeis' big lie: Repeat it often enough and it will be believed. It worked for George Bush in 1988 (remember Willie Horton?), until people realized just how empty Bush is.

So now comes Mr. Rusher beating the drums to action to save the president (from whence came Mr. Rusher's sudden love for Bill Clinton?) From the foul machinations of the blacks in Congress which he would have you believe imperil the republic because they vote as a bloc to further their legislative agends. As proof of their nefarious intent, he damns them for their discipline, cohesion and determination, as if these qualities are vices instead of virtues. (Where does Mr. Rusher categorize the Republicans who did not give Mr. Clinton a single vote for his budget?)

To make sure the point is not lost. Mr. Rusher keeps the blackness of such deeds clearly in mind and in view. Through 12 paragraphs of some 900 words, the words "Black Caucus appear nine times along with "danger," "blackmail," "hostage," ad nauseum. Although it is not your daughters' virtue as it was in 1968, it is more compelling: It is your daughters' and your sons' lives "to pay off Mr. Clinton's debt to Kweisi Mfume and Co." To make sure the point is not lost. Mr. Rusher

If Bush could saddle Dukakis with the tar baby of Willie Horton, maybe Rusher can tie Clinton to Mfume. But, then, maybe not; maybe he can only label Rusher a whining racist.

Balking at the winds of change

BOSTON - It was one of those impenetrable. sagging summer afternoons when the weather forecast suggests that everybody take a day off from breathing. The president, looking much the worse for wear, had finished a speech to the National Governors' Association, and arrived in the room to talk with a group from The Boston

He had run the gantlet of the traveling Washington press corps who were in various stages of high spirits having arrived unanimously — and therefore comfortably — at their lead ly — and therefore comfortably — at their lead for the next day. The headlines would claim that President Clinton had backed away from univer-sal health care coverage — Gotcha! When he denied it, the next stories would say that he had backed away from his backing away. But in the midst of this min-flap, I scratched a different impression into my notebook. In conversation, the president had compared himself rather wearily to Truman, "He just wore people out, kind of like I do," said Clinton. "Part of his job was making people do what they didn't want to do."

is this what the president thought? It occurred to me that the man who had run and won on a platform of change, believed that one of things people "didn't want to do" was change.

Maybe he believed that when push came to shove, when the ideas of change came down to the policies, average folk wound up more worried about the unknown than the known. That there were lots of people who didn't want to upuet the apple cart even when the boards on the bottom of the cart were broken and the apples were dropping to the ground one by

I thought of that moment this week as the health care debate erupted on the Senate floor over watered-down employer mandates and might-be filibusters this president, this administration, has worked too hard for too little. The political physics are out of whack.

make changes

Health care reform bills. Welfare reform bills. Crime bills. The past two administrations didn't do much more than patch and postpone. This one deserves - and rarely gets - credit for wrestling with the Big Ones.

But from the very beginning, the administration has been saddled with subliminal skepticism about the country's willingness to change, a skepticism honed during the Reagan years, sharpened in Arkansas. These grown-up baby boomers have tried to figure out a way to make the most possible change while upsetting the fewest possible people. To move the country without unsettling it.

These worriers may be right about our reluctance to make changes in the midstream of our country's midlife. When we talk about change these days it's with more anxiety than hope. The Woodstock generation seems more swamped with nostalgia than with optimism. We associate the very word with our losses - of family, community, economic status - not our gains.

Once, as a student, historian Crane Brinton taught me that revolutions come at a time of rising expectations.

Content, useful in South Africa

Ask Phyllis Crockett exactly where she was when the notion hit her to leave friends, family and a good gig in Washington for a permanent home in South Africa and she flashes a you'll-never-guess grin.

Was it at one of the many inspiring political rallies she'd attended since her first visit to South Africa in 1990? While hanging out with black South Africans in the poor-as-mud homelands? Or could it have occurred while she sat near Danny Glover and Coretta Scott King, watching Nelson Mandela's historic inauguration?

Please. At the moment of truth, Crockett — then a senior correspondent for National Public Radio — was in Johannesburg, watching CNN at "the best health club I've ever been to ... on one of the 10 tradmills overlooking one of two indoor pools. Listening to pump-me-up music on my Walkman."

"And really," she says, "it hit me like a bolt of lightning. I could do this." Live in Johannesburg. Be contented and useful 8,000 miles from home.

"I realized I was happier there," she says.
"That I could make a positive contribution to someone other than myself."

When I saw Crockett, 44, at a recent journalism convention, just six months had passed since her treadmill thunderbolt. But she'd already done what dozens of African American journalists who covered South Africa's liberation and dreamed of contributing full time to the fledgling nation haven't:

With "seven big suitcases," Crockett moved to Johannesburg on March 31. The fact that she hasn't once regretted it doesn't mean it's she hasn't once regretted it doesn't mean it's been simple.

She recalls how, still jogging, she'd ticked off the details: Her children were grown. She could rent her house, sell her art. Pale in "Jo-burg's" large African American community had offered her temporary lodging.

That left one major obstacle: the fear "of deing something different." Before getting off the treadmill, she decided to go for it.

When I saked Crockett to meet for breakfast, she chose the international House of Pancakes, "one of the places you surprise yourself by Leaving her family cost far more.

"That was the hardest part," says Crockett, who called a family meeting when she returned in February to reveal her plans. "If there'd been strong opposition, I wouldn't have done it." But Crockett's mom, Mac Williams: daughter, Adina, of Hagerstown, Mil.; and son, Andrew. a University of Minnesota microbiology major, were end but supportive. microbiology major, were end but supportive.

Still the break wasn't easy. "I was just crying yesterday." said Crockett, sighing over

It was easier separating from NPR, her employer for 13 years. "I love NPR. But it was like being with a man you know isn't good for you anymore. ... We'd gone as far as we could."

Crockett says "exists, but is so small a part of the scene." Most members of the American press corps, she says, "are white, and bring white American baggage with them. ... The picture they give is so small."

Recently, she hung out with her housekeeper. "We went to church ... took a litney to her neighborhood. I wanted the real experience that gives life context."

For a black American, being a member of the majority is indescribable. "It's like — wow ... this is ours. While I was here I went to see "The Lion King." In the (theater) lobby, there were 50 pictures of stars and not one black person. ... You still feel you're not part of society."

She recalls an elderly African who said, "Don't let anybody take away the good in you. I felt people here were getting close to taking my good."

Independent counsel sacked

If you're wondering what really went on when a panel of federal appellate judges suddenly sacked Whitewater independent counsel Robert Fiske, you might get a lot closer to the truth if you ignore what the magistrates themselves said.

They said they replaced Fiske with Republican partisan Kenneth Starr to avoid "perceived" conflict. Fiske had been appointed by Attorney General Janet Reno during a period when the independent counsel law had lapsed, and now that a new law was in place providing for court-appointed prosecutors, it was best to be squeaky chutspah, your Honors, but that's a lot of baloney. What we witnessed in the late afternoon of Friday. Aug. 5 was a political ambush so brasenly perpetrated that the capital city is still: stunned and silent from the shock of it.

The very premise of the ruling, that Fiske might be perceived as biased in favor of the administration that appointed him, is ridiculous on its face. Robert Fiske is a Republican, a former prosecutor, a thoroughly pro-fessional attorney who, had he been reap-pointed as independent counsel, would have reported to the court - not Attorney General

The only thing Fiske did wrong was to come up with some judgments that did not please the extra-chromosome right wing of the Republican party -- especially the finding that White House deputy counsel Vincent Foster's death was a suicide. So 10 members of the House of Representatives, led by Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., who appears to have stripped a few gears in his obsessive drive to find a Foster conspiracy, wrote to the three-judge panel that selects the indepen-dent counsels and asked that Fisks be fired. Fierce Clinton foe Floyd Brown, father of the 1988 Willie Horton commercial, also contacted the judges.

Amazingly, the judicial panel agreed. Well, perhaps it is not so amazing when you consider the presiding judge of the panel is David B. Sentelle, a staunch conservative and protege of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who was appointed to the federal bench by Ronald egan in 1967.

This is the same David Sentelle who wrote the majority opinion in the decision to overturn Oliver North's Iran-contra convictions. In a ruling that bordered on the preposterous, Sentelle and another Reagan-appointed judge. Lawrence Milberman, tossed out the North convictions on the grounds that witnesses and jurors may have been influenced by North's immunised have been influenced by North's immunised testimony before Congress - despite the fact that North was found guilty only of three felonies he acknowledged committing.

This is the same federal appeals judge who now says that Robert Fishs must be replaced to avoid the appearance of conflict. I test you, the absurdity of it boggies the mind. If Judge Bentelle is truly concerned with potential conflicts of interest, the first thing he abould've done was ask some other judge to att in for him on the Fishs decision.

That brings was to Fishs's successor.

That brings us to Pisks's successor. Kenneth Starr. He is a resolute conservative who worked in Ronald Reagan's Department of Justice, total side by side with David Bentelle as a federal appeals judge and served as George Bush's Scitcitor Ceneral.

Foreclosure looms for Heaven Pastor claims 'kingdom' is not of this world

By BETH HEGEN
Associated Press Writer

SUBLIMITY, Ore. - For pastor Paul Revere, getting into Heaven is easy. It's getting out that's a problem.

The last time Revere drove his white car out of the 34-acre Kingdom of Heaven, he wound up in Jail for displaying Heaven license plates and carrying a Heaven-issued driver's license.

State officials haven't heeded Revere's claims of celestial citizenship. Nor do they believe the forested estate Revere calls the Kingdom of Heaven embassy belongs to God and is thus exempt from county tax rolls. Heaven owes more than $10,000 in property taxes, and the county plans to foreclose.

"The Kingdom of Heaven is not of this world," Revere says in response. "The county has declared war on the saints."

Revere, the slender, bearded leader of the Embassy of Heaven church — and until 1985 known as state Department of Transportation employee Craig Douglas Fleshman — says it is impossible to serve both God and the state. He and his followers have renounced their worldly identities and function solely as citizens of Heaven.

Revere says his flock numbers 200, but only five currently reside in Heaven: Paul and his wife, Rachel, their daughters, Brooke, 14, and Skye, 11, and a scholar simply named Abraham.

The road to Heaven is full of potholes and dust, but the paradisaical plot is lush with trees, wild berries and a garden. The Revere family and their pet cat live in a spacious wood cabin with a deck overlooking a stream, and a small hydroelectric plant provides Heaven with light.

A typical day features Revere preaching on various topics, Abraham working on his own translation of the Bible, and Rachel, Brooke and Skye baking bread and carrying out clerical duties. "We are an earthly kingdom," Revere says, "Jesus has established his government on earth, just as it is in heaven."

Verily, he says, there are no taxes in Heaven.

"Jesus did not pay taxes," he says. "My rule is simple: Love God, love neighbor. I don't need 10 books of Oregon statutes to tell me how to live."

Marion County tax collectors say that if the taxes aren't paid during the two-year redemption period, Heaven will be placed on

Jo Stonecipher, the county's assistant legal counsel, says that each time a notice is sent to the embassy, "the note comes back naking God to bless us and informing us that the embassy is not part of Oregon and they do not owe taxes."

Revere says he intends to remain steadfast in his claim that the state has no authority over God's property

"I would rather lose my body," he says, "than my soul."

Commissioner Paul Lovestrand who cast the lone "no" vote said a long-range study should be conducted rather than making the quick "Band-Aid" solution to the problem. A study might allow the city to provide a facility to meet the needs into the next century, the commissioner suggested, rather than simply patching the problem and spending additional funds refurbishing an inadequate facility. Lovestrand also criticized the purchase contract claiming it was not dated, no deposit was made, a clause had expired and only one of the two property owners signed the agreement. Lovestrand also questioned whether the ordinance was valid because a different address was listed on the ordinance at first reading and not formally corrected cted an amendment at the hill the first in the first in the first in such a hurry it causes opposes," Lovestrand said. Commissioner Ron Sargent noted the city is acquiring an asset which could be sold in the future if the citizens pass a referendum for a new building.

Sargent also added, purchase of the existing building is not raising taxes.

Commissioner Iris Benson urged an expert be hired to help the city utilize the new office space to the fullest. Benson said she understood Lovestrand's concerns about the needs of the department but immediate steps are necessary to improve conditions at the station.

Mayor Steve Miller said requests for money to improve the fire station have been turned down by the commission for at least five years. He claimed over the years, some commission members had been badgered into turning down requested funding by editorials in an area newspaper.

Ten citizens spoke in favor of the building purchase. No member of the public spoke in opposition to the purchase.

The commissioners also honored several softball club and Babe Ruth teams for outstanding performances winning national and state titles.

The Seminple Softball Clubs, the Eagles were recognized for its first place national champi-onship. The Falcons and the Hawks were recognized for their fifth place national championships. Bembino Longwood All Stars (11-12 years old) were recognized for winning the Flotida Babe Ruth State Championship and the Longwood Babe Ruth All Stars (9-10) for winning the Florida State Commissioners' Tournament.

A picnic in the park or renting a balifield in Longwood will cost a little more for civic/nonprofit groups or private citizens under a schedule proposed to align the fees with surrounding cities. The schedule sets out fees for renting balifields, with and without lights, and shelters. In general, the fees charged civic/nonprofit groups are about one-half the amount proposed for private renters of the facilities. Some groups will still qualify to use the facilities without charge.

By Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. - Would you buy a vacation package from someone named Skip Town or Dusty Rhodes? More than 2.000 customers in 43 states did, and federal prosecutors say they got burned in a telemarketing scam.

To the would-be travelers, the advertised prices may have seemed too good to be true. For many, that apparently is exactly what they were.

After a 29-month investigation, brothers Michael and Christopher Barson were indicted Monday by a federal grand jury on charges of illegally obtaining more than $800,000 through a bogus travel telemarketing business.

Prosecutors said the brothers' business names included the Great American Travel Club, Fantasy Vacations and Fun

Michael Barson, 26, of Reston. and Christopher Barson, 30, of Bethesda, Md., were charged in to violate mail, wire and bank Traud statutes between August 1990 and March 1992.

Michael Barson was arrested by the FBI Monday at his home and later released on bond. Christopher Barson was not ar-rested but was ordered to appear with his brother in court next Monday for their arraignment.

The Barsons each face possible minimum sentences of 30 years in prison and fines up to $1

Helen Fahey, U.S. Attorney for the eastern district of Virginia. said the Barsons illegally obtained money from more than 2,000 customers in 43 states who responded to nationwide newspaper advertisements for vacation packages to Cancun, Mexico, and Caribbean destina-

The Barsons required customers to pay in full for the vacation packages by certified check, money order or credit cards before the packages were sent by overnight courier. Fahey said.

But instead of receiving tickets and confirmed reservations, customers were sent third-party promotional travel vouchers containing numerous restrictive terms and conditions, which made it nearly impossible to obtain the trips.

Fahey said the average loss was more than $400 per customer.

Michael Barson allegedly used numerous aliases - including Bill Daley, Michael Charles, Skip Town and Dusty Rhodes. Christopher Barson used the aliases Christopher Daley and Christopher Anthony.

Brett Emmerson of Alexandria and her parents paid the Barrona' Great American Travel Club $800 in December 1991 for a trip to Cancun. The trip never took place, and when Emmerson tried to get her money back. Great American Travel returned only $200.

Alien smuggling growing business

By PATRICK REYNA

Associated Press Writer

LAUDERDALE LAKES -Edmonde Jean-Baptiste was desperate to get her family ashore, to a better life. But it was dark and the alien smuggler's boat remained in deep water off Hutchinson Island.

The Haitian mother feared for her 7-year-old son, Justin. He couldn't swim. But the smuggler who'd brought the 27 Haitian . refugees from the Bahamas in the black of night motioned for his "passengers" to climb

"In God's hands," Jean-Baptiste said, drawing her son and two daughters to her. "In God's hands." One of the other Haitian refugees, a man, took Justin on his back, so the mother let him go.

Several hours later, after sunup on Feb. 7, U.S. Border Patrol agents found the boy's small body, rolling in the surf on the beach. Three others, 6-year-old Kenol Louis and two adults, also drowned that morning before dawn trying to swim to shore — and freedom — without getting caught or swallowed up by the dark
"Lots of people are coming
"Lots of people are coming

They all became victims in the grim, growing business of smuggling aliens into the United States along Florida's hundreds of miles of coastline. Less than two weeks later, for instance, as many as 34 Haitians were believed to have drowned when their 23-foot boat capsized in rough seas off the Bahamian island of Abaco.

U.S. authorities believe scores of other illegal immigrants also have drowned trying to reach Florida and a chance at the American dream.

"It's already fairly well publicized, the dangers involved in maritime smuggling of human beings, especially drowning." says Mike Sheehy, assistant chief patrol agent of the U.S. Border Patrol's regional office in Pembroke Pines. 'There've been a number of reported cases where as many as two to 30 people may have died when their boat went down. And with knows how many others have perished — in cases that have never been made public.

"This is a serious problem," he says, "and, unfortunately, someone has to die before the agnitude of the problem is fully realized."

During the past year, Sheehy says the Border Patrol has seen a sharp rise in the number of aliens caught coming into Flor-

In 1993, 1,087 Haitians and 207 Cubans landed illegally along Florida's coastline, according to Border Patrol records. So far this year, 1,812 Haitians and 1,243 Cubans have landed illegally. And Sheehy says those statistics don't include illegal immigrants from other nations.

But figuring out just how many of those aliens were smuggled in for a profit and how many just got a ride isn't easy. Sheehy says.
It's also difficult to estimate how much money smugglers make, though investigators have evidence they charge as much as $3,500 per person from Haiti.

Sheehy says.

Though the smuggling of Haitian refugees has drawn the most attention because of the recent drownings, Sheehy says illegal immigrants are smuggled from India, throughout Asia, Central and South America. Europe and Cuba.

In Jean-Baptiste's case, she wanted out of Haiti, where jobs are scarce and international economic sanctions against the military-ruled government have made life harder still.

She and others on the boat also feared the military that ousted Haitlan President Jean-Bertrand Aristide nearly three years ago.

'I left Haiti because Haiti doesn't have a president, and because they are killing people." Jean-Baptiste, 25, said in a recent interview at the Lauderdale Lakes home she and her two daughters now share with relatives.

"My husband arranged the trip for me, because I wasn't working and I had no money, she said. "My husband paid, but it wasn't easy finding someone to smuggle us out of Haiti."

She says the refugees' trip began in the hold of a larger boat from Haiti to the Bahamas, and ended with a silent dash to Florida in an open boat, speeding over the waves without running lights.

Pastor Jean Georges, the evangelical minister at the Hai-illegally, but they don't want to speak to protect themselves and their families," the minister said. "But they are right to come. Things are bad down (in Haiti.) The people don't have food; the people don't have their own government."

Cubans also have been fleeing their homeland in record numbers this year as economic conditions under Fidel Castro's communist government deteriorate. Although Cubans are granted a special exception under U.S. law to settle here, some are paying smugglers for safe passage to the United States.

Earlier this year, federal authorities busted a Cubansmuggling ring in Fort Lauderdale and Miami that charged Cuban immigrants $5,000 each for transportation here, says U.S. Attorney Kendall Coffey, whose office is trying to crack down on alien smuggiers.

So far this year, Coffey and his office has brought and addict ments in allen among the and obtained indiciments dozen other cases involving passport fraud and illegal entry by deported aliena.

He said the increased pro-secution resulted from a task force his office set up in February with the Border Patrol, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Coast Guard, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and sheriff's offices in counties along Florida's coast.

This week, West Palm Beach boat captain Richard Barker is scheduled to stand trial in federal court on four charges of negligent homicide and 27 counts of alien smuggling for the trip that led to the death of Jean-Baptiste's son.

Barker has denied the charges. "What they're saying about me is ludicrous," Barker told The Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale last month in an interview from Palm Beach County Jail. "I would never throw someone off a boat. I wasn't raised that way: just the opposite. I was raised to respect the sanctity of life."

Tears well in Jean-Baptiste's eyes as she recalls the night her son died. She pauses only a moment when asked if she'd do it all over again, knowing what she now knows of the dangers of the journey.

"Yes," she says, looking at her daughters. "I would still do it."

1994 race for governor of Florida

Scott, Thomas hope to smash Senate deadlock

Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Florida Republicans, who went from no Senate seats in 1958 to half the chamber in 1992, hope this is the year they go over the top.

"We think people are recognizing now that they should give the Republicans a chance to be in actual control of the Senate," said Sen. Jim Scott, R-Fort Lauderdale, who will preside if the GOP takes a majority.

But Democrats say they too are eyeing potential gains, including the seat that top Senate Republican Ander Crenshaw of Jacksonville vacated to run for governor.

By targeting that seat and others left by GOP incumbents. Senate President Pat Thomas, D-Quincy, said: "We have done the best that we could do to be in a posture to break the deadlock."

In 1992, when the parties both wound up with 20 Senate seats. Thomas and Crenshaw agreed to serve one year each as president. Thomas wants a Democratic majority - and two full years with the gavel.

"We'll engage those scats where our opponents are, and try not to lose any," said Thom-

But Scott said voters admired the way Senate Republicans forced a no-new-taxes budget in 1993. This year, Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles didn't call for taxes, but he did call a special session to try to adopt a health care plan. The Senate deadlock dashed those hopes.

"Obviously there's a lot of disentisfaction in the state with the Democratic governor," Scott said, and he predicted that would help Republicans in other

A top target is Democratic Sen. Jim Boczar of Sarasota, who rocked Republicans by ousting veteran Sen. Bob Johnson in a heavily GOP district in 1992.

"Sen. Boczar's got the toughest seat," acknowledged Thomas, but he noted Boczar got nearly 60 percent of the vote despite Johnson's eight years in the House and eight in the Senate.

Facing off in a GOP primary to tackle Boczar are Dr. Bob Windom of Sarasots, an assistant Health and Human Services secretary in the Reagan administration, and former Ringling Museum chairwoman Katherine Harris of Sarasota.

There is also a three-way Republican primary to pick a challenger for Sen. Patricia Grogan, D-Merritt Island, a veteran of eight years in the state House and one Senate term.

Battling to challenge her are rancher and Brevard County Republican Chairman Charlie Bronson of Satellite Beach, Cocoa construction executive Marty Dixon and AIDS activist Jack Johnson of Cocoa Beach.

In turn, Democrats hope Jacksonville City Councilman Matthew Carlucci can grab Crenshaw's open seat.

Carlucci is the son of the late Sen. Joe Carlucci, who Crenshaw succeeded in the of-

The Republicans Bush out in front of talented candidates

By WILL LESTER Associated Press Writer

MIAMI - The question these days for Jeb Bush isn't whether he can capture enough votes to survive the Republican primary for governor. It's what happens

Like a long-distance runner, the 41-year-old Miamt developer has been campaigning tirelessly for more than a

He has been preaching his message of smaller government, a better business environment, drastic welfare reform. local control and choice of schools. limited taxes, tougher justice and more prisons. He has kept a hectic pace. speaking at chicken dinners and barbecues, attending countless fund-raisers with the well-heeled, touring all sorts of businesses and government programs, and crisecrossing the state in motor homes.

But will he have the kick left to sprint through a likely runoff and overtake a vulnerable but personally popular incumbent governor?

His advisers think so. "The more people see and hear of Jeb Bush, the more they are reassured," says his senior adviser, Mac Stipanovich. "We will continue to expose Jeb Bush to the electorate, nothing fancy.'

The son of former President George Bush is out in front of a talented pack of Republican candidates who want to oust incumbent Democratic Gov. Lawton

Chiles, recent polls have shown.

But a runoff, required if no candidate receives more than 50 percent of the vote, is expected.

"The main job now is establishing Jeb as the only credible candidate who brings something different to the campaign, says David Hill of Houston, a political consultant to the campaign. "Jim Smith and Tom Gallagher are nice guys, but they don't bring anything different. It's hard for them to claim they will bring something different to Tallahassee."

Smith, Florida's secretary of state, and Gallagher, the insurance commissioner. are the two Republicans in the best position to enter a runoff with Bush.

State Sen. Ander Crenshaw, who boasts he went "toe-to-toe with Lawton Chiles" as former state Benate president, plans a television blitz to challenge for the runoff. Tallahassee attorney Ken Connor, the other major Republican candidate, appears to be a longshot at this point.

Bush's sides say privately that Gallagher, despite his appeal in a televi-sion campaign, offers the best contrast with his pitch for $1.7 billion in voterapproved taxes for prisons. And they fear the combative campaign style of Smith. who criticizes the younger Bush for not having paid his political dues.

But Bush's aides say this is where the hard work pays off.

"The main thing that will distinguish us is that our campaign genuinely has grassroots, huge hidden sasets," Hill says. "We will have more of a mechanism to deliver the vote to the polls. The other candidates don't believe in grassroots organization and phone banks."

They also don't have Jeb Bush's campaign treasury, boosted by a successful tour with George and Barbara Bush last spring. Bush has about $2 million in the bank and the family road show is likely to return before a runoff on

"I know the other campaigns are whining a lot about their inability to raise money." Bush said this week. "The simple fact is that I've worked real hard. I've turned a lot of people on. I have people who have supported my dad in the past supporting me."

Bush, married with three children, had good reason to spend months on the campaign trail. While he was well-known in Florida, he was best known as the son of President Bush who was adept at organizing political campaigns for his father and former Gov. Bob Martines, and for making real estate deals.

In partnership with Armando Codina, Bush built one of the top commercial real estate businesses in the Miami area. But not all of the publicity about his business dealings has been positive.

Congressional Republicans: Florida 'land of opportunity'

MIAMI - National Republicans plotting a takeover of the U.S. House look at the 1994 congressional map and see Florida as "the land of opportunity." "Florida is a lynchpin in the South to gains nationwide," says Dan Leonard, a spokesman for the National Republican Congressional Committee.

Democrats, already at a 13-10 disadvantage in the state, saw two of their incumbents — Earl Hutto in the Panhandle let District and Jim Bacchus in the Space Coast 15th District announce they would not run for re-election for personal reasons. Nine of 13 Republican incumbents have no Democratic opposition.

"It has not made things easi-er," says Lynda Russell, executive director of the state Democratic Party. "We have a little more on our plate than we anticipated."

But Democrate haven't thrown in the towel. They say they have strong candidates in those two open districts and talk about holding their ground in a tough

The only Democratic can-didate in the Space Coast open district is Sue Munsey, a popular businesswoman and civic activist in Cocoa Beach.

Munsey, who switched parties, says she was not happy with an increasing ultraconservative trend among some in the GOP, notably on the abortion issue, and the Republican field was already crowded with seven candidates.

She mays she has found a home with the Democrats.

"They are trying to move the party back to the mainstream." she says. "That's where you will find me, philosophically, and where you will find my voting record In the Panhandle district, Democrats almost yielded the seat without a fight.

Two Democrats finally filed at the last minute for the Sept. 5 primary. They are Penascola lawyer Vince Whibbs Jr. and anti-gun control activist Jim Barnett, owner of a hunting and fishing equipment store.

Whibbs is the son of former Pensacola mayor and auto dealer Vince Whibbs Sr. The elder Whibbs is a longtime Republican, but two years ago he headed a Republicans for Hutto group.

Also running for Hutto's seat are five Republicans, including state Rep. Lois Benson and Escambia County Commissioner W.A. "Buck" Lee, both of Libertarian Richard Vaja of Fort Walton Beach and a write in candidate.

"We consider both of those tossup districts. They have been voting for Democrats," says Betsy Mullins, a spokeswoman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. "They show they have no problem voting for the right candidate."

One Democratic incumbent who faces a stiff challenge is first-term Rep. Karen Thurman, whose opponent "Big Daddy" Don Garlita is trying to cash in on his fame on the drag-racing circuit for political capital in the sprawling 5th District of north Central Florida.

Garilta is a 62-year-old conservative with a gapped-tooth grin, his own Museum of Drag Racing in Ocala and a bluntspoken philosophy that makes some people angry and his supporters a bit nervous.

Garilte, who faces former judge Gary Graham in the primary, has drawn fire for statements about race. For example, he said a small number of blacks were responsible for much of the nation's crime. He vehemently denies any claims that he is racist.

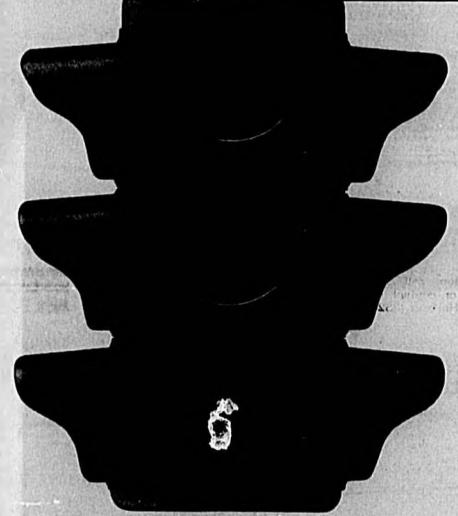

"You'd probably need a little salt and pepper to get those statements to go down in Miami," says GOP state Chairman Tom Slade. "But this is Dixie County, Florida, Thurman hasn't been very effective. She's voted the party line, has her fair share of the bad votes."

Russell says Thurman has been a strong leader and cam-paigner "and they may be underestimating her.

The other open seat is being vacated by retiring Republican Rep. Tom Lewis of North Palm Beach. Four Republicans, including state Sen. Mark Foley of West Palm Beach, three Demo-crats and Fopulist John S. Adams of Port St. Lucie are running for the District 16 seat.

The only Democratic incumbents who don't have Republican opponents are Carrie Meek of Miami and Aicee Hastings of Fort Lauderdale. But Hastings has an independent challenger, Musheer Qua'id Muhammad of Fort Pierce, and Meek has a write-in opponent, Maureen Coletta of Miami Beach.

Veteran Democratic Rep. Sam Gibbons, acting chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee while Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois defends himself against corruption charges, also is seen as vulnera-ble by Republicans.

During the 50-day baseball strike In 1981, mediator Kenneth Moffett was a constant presence, setting up bargaining sessions and carrying messages between the sides. Martin didn't envision mediators immediately filling the same role in these talks and wasn't sure whether they would attend bargaining sessions.

"It's too early to tell at this time." he said.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Cubs optioned pitcher Steve Traschel to Iowa of the American Association in the first player move since the strike began. The Cubs were one of eight teams at the 25-man roster limit. His move to the minors left 762 players on strike.

"I'm here just to try to keep myself in shape." Trachsel said after lowa's 6-4 loss to the Indianapolis Indians. "It was my option: ... I thought about it for a while and figured I would probably be better off in the long run and come here and continue to get in some work."

While Trachsel is pitching, Martin is working to find a solution along □See Strike, Page 23

Westview Baptist nets v'ball title

SANFORD — Westview Baptist Church swept through its series of make-up games Monday night at the Sanford Middle School Gymnatorium and, in the process, clinched the Sanford Recreation Summer Recreation Volleyball League championship.

Second-place B & M Lawn Service closed out its campaign with a 4-1 rush, but the one loss was a 16-14 defeat at the hands of the league champions

After opening their evening with a 15-2 stroll by Sanford First Baptist, the Westview crew held off B & M and followed that decision with a 15-11 victory over Nichola Outboard Service Center.

Westview closed out the evening with a 15-2 rout of Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church and a 15-7 win over

Except for the one loss, B & M was overpowering Monday night, collecting 15-2 wins over Nichols Outboard. Palmetto Avenue Baptist, and Premier as well as a 15-11 victory at the expense of Sanford First Premier held on to third place in the league standings despite a 2-3 evening, the squada' two wins coming against Sanford Pirst Baptist (15-8) and Palmetto Avenue Baptist (15-6).

Nichols Outboard continued its struggle to get back to the .500 mark with a 3-2 outing last night. They outscored Palmetto Avenue Baptist 15-4, got the best of

The league standings (with this week's record and season mark) have Westview Baptist Church (5-0, 24-6) leading B & M Lawn Service (4-1, 21-9), Premier (2-3, 16-14). Nichols Outboard Service Center (3-2, 13-17). Sanford First Baptist (1-4, 10-20), and Palmetto Avenue Baptist (0-5, 6-24).

Pro Late Models Shugart runs from wire to wire in

By BILL SIEBERT Special to the Herald

BARBERVILLE - Wayne Shugart of St. Augustine was set up and ready to go Friday night, running away from the rest of the field to take the 30-lap Pro Late Model feature last Friday night. Aug. 12, at Volusia County Speedway's

Howard Keitham, running in the 19-car, 15-lap Hobby Stock feature, clocked in with an early birthday present to himself as he claimed the checkered flag 45 minutes before his Aug. 13

In other divisions run on dirt Friday night at Volusia County Speedway, Brian Bales took the 20-lap Pro Stock feature while Tom Mulligan was the winner among the Mini Stocks.

Shugart was on the pole to start the 13-car Pro-Late Model feature and never gave up the spot. pulling away to nearly a half-lap advantage over runner-up Gary Flynn by the end of the race to collect an easy trophy.

"The car handled well." Shugart said from the Sportsolution Winner's Circle. "My car's starting to come around. I don't have any more horsepower than anyone else - maybe a little Following Shugart and Flynn across the finish line were Mitch Kilpatrick, Bill Kopka, and Bubba Bales started the Pro Stock feature on the outside of row one, opposite pole sitter Terry Lewis. Bales then raced around to take control by the end of the first lap in a race that took two starts to get in the first lap and three restarts to claim the second

Lewis slipped behind Bales on the first lap and chased him the rest of the 20 laps to come away with the runner-up spot over Kent Corbin, Rob Lefevre, and Steve Wortman.

"I'm excited." Baies shouted while talking to VCS track announcer Tom Tipton. "It looks like a valve cover leak (causing white smoke near the end of the race). We just put a new engine in this

Wulligan did a lot like Bales, starting on the outside of row one and trailing pole sitter Chris ogel for two laps before scizing the point in the Mini Stock feature on lap three.

And that's where Mulligan stayed for the remaining 15 laps, leading Vogel, Mike Ponce, Brett Weber, and Cleo Grubb over the start/finish line under the checkered flag. Mulligan was very complementary towards the rest of the field.

"Chris is real strong." Mulligan said from victory lane. "Mike is really strong. The track was real good tonight and the car was running. It. was a little loose in turns one and two."

Keltham, ready to celebrate his birthday on Saturday, took the lead in the 15-lap Hobby Stock event on lap four after starting the race on the outside of row seven in the 19-car field. He kept the lead the rest of the night even though Jimmy Ammons was just a quarter panel behind : at the finish.

Trailing Keithman and Ammona across the stripe were Kathy Gainey, John Reiter, and Jack Hackney.

Dirt track racing continues at Volusia County Speedway this Friday, Aug. 19, with the four regular divisions - Pro Late Models, Pro Stocks, Mini Stocks, and Hobby Stocks — taking to the track along with the national points race for the

Tough-luck speedway attracting attention

By MICHAEL GRACZYK Associated Press Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas The star-crossed Texas World Speedway is headed for the auction block this week with many bidders interested in renaming the track after Texas' most famous racer.

A.J. Foyt Speedway? It could

The company running Thursday's auction says many bidders want to rename the 2-mile high-speed oval after Foyt, the four-time Indianapolis 500 winner and success at virtually every kind of auto racing he has tried.

Serious bidders for the Texas World Speedway, about 100 miles northwest of Houston, are required to show up for the auction with certified funds or a cashier's check for $250,000.

The winning bid could be as much as 10 times that amount.

"Anybody who wants to go into the racing business couldn't duplicate this for $20 million." said William Bone, president and marketing director of National Auction Group, which is han-dling the sale. "Somebody is going to get a terrific bargain in motor racing."

Whoever buys the track will have to try to reverse a linx that has haunted it, a virtual clone of the thriving Michigan International Speedway.

Some $6 million in renovations, including repaving what is touted as "The World's Fastest Speedway," were made begin-ning in 1991 by the then-owner, Ishin Corp. of Japan.

Ishin, however, defaulted on payments and ownership last year reverted to Dick Conole, a College Station businessman who has been involved with the track for nearly two decades.

"The track is in perfect condition," said Conole, 57. "It just needs somebody with energy.

somebody with youth." The Ishin troubles were the latest of a series of financial problems the track has experienced since it was built in 1969 as Texas International Speedway.

It hosted a NASCAR race and a Can-Am event and then closed in 1970, only to re-open the following year with a pair of NASCAR events.

Indy cars showed up in 1973. but the worldwide energy crisis forced the speedway to close again.

New management arrived in 1976 and several races a year were held through 1981, when the physical deterioration of the track prompted the major sanctioning organizations to pull out.

Ishin entered the picture and staged a few ARCA and NASCAR Winston West events before its financial problems shut the gates again.

The brief opening, however, gave the racing world a hint at the capabilities of the track. In February 1993, Jeff Andretti, Mario Andretti's youngest son, set an unofficial speed record when his Indy car made a lap of 234.5 mph.

Thursday's auction includes 16 parcels of land, the largest of which is the 400-acre tract that includes the 2-mile D-shaped oval, a grandstand that holds 23,000 people and a three-story press box tower that also houses VIP suites and assorted garages. offices and utilities.

More than 300 people have made inquiries and more than 100 have asked for bid packages.

Roger Penske, who owns Michigan International Speedway and fields Indy Car and Winston Cup teams, sent one of his people to inspect the site last week and a car to test the track.

"They're seasoned guys."
Moffett said from Washington, where he is assistant to the president of the National Association of Broadcast Engineers and Technicians. "I think the fact that they're in there is a lot better than the situation before."

Moffett became involved in the baseball talks in 1980, when the sides reached an agreement that put off a work stoppage until the following year. Martin and Flores met with both sides for the first time on Saturday and are just acquainting themselves with the issucs.

"If mediation had been called in before, they could have sug-gested ideas, such as extending the contract, bringing in a panel to study," Moffett said. "There wasn't any mediation team in there before and they just bumbled into this stupid strike."

Moffett later succeeded Marvin Miller as executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, but was forced out by players in 1983 and replaced by Fehr. Moffett said baseball negotiations are different from all other types of collective bargaining.

"It is done in a fishbowl," he said. "Every statement, every press release — anything — is for public consumption. In most negotiations, you don't hear peep until there's a settlement."

SANFORD — A group of concerned neighborn banded together to organize a street fair benefit for a family in Banford's Hidden Lukes neighborhood Saturday.

Sherilann Blevins, one of the organisers, said that approxi-mately 200 well-wishers from the community raised $600 for the Steve Bonner family. Bonner was injured in a fall from a roof and is expected to have a six-month recuperation period from his injuries. His neighbors and members of his church, First Church of the Nazarene, wanted to do something to help the family.

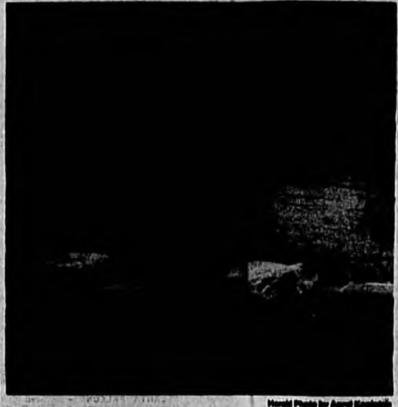

Blevins said that everything needed to put on the event was donated by local businesses, from poster board and printing to food and trash bags.

Those that attended the street fair enjoyed hotdogs and drinks, games, face painting. clowns, a magic show, a nummage sale and a bake sale, and a raille.

Sympathy for shoplifter is put in its proper place

DEAR ABBY: in response to the woman whose daughter had been caught shoplifting and was banned from entering any of the company's stores nationwide: She thought this punishment was "terribly harsh," and you agreed with her. You did acknowledge that retall merchanta lose millions annually because of shoplifting, but failed to recognize that the consumer must pay this cost in the form of increased prices. Your reasoned that since the daughter had been seeing a psychiatrist, this somehow excused her behavior. Abby, she was a common thief. Your easy accetance of the lame excuses and agreeing the girl received "very harsh punishment" was a poor example to set for your readers. You may not mind subsidizing these criminals by paying higher prices for products but I do!

As a law enforcement officer, I come in daily contact with these "poor, first-time offenders," and believe me, they are well aware of the crime they are committing. Also, rarely is a shoplifter caught on the first attempt at shoplifting. They are usually so accustomed to getting away with it, they become careless and are finally observed by store employees or security. Then they offer to pay for the stolen items to keep from being arrested. All levels of crime, not just violent or serious crimes, must be dealt with by setting examples of punishment that will deter others from committing any such act. May I remind you that although this person was banned from all of the company's retail stores, she still has the freedom to walk into other stores and steal from them. And with responses such as the one you gave, I'm sure she, as well as other shoplifters.

my readers. Read on: DEAR ABBY: As a psychiatrist, I have treated many patients suffering from manicdepression. Although 1 am sympathetic to the young woman who was arrested, you should be aware that her condition had nothing to do with her shoplifting. Manic-depressives know the difference between right and

EAST COAST PETCHIATRIST DEAR ABBT: I work in retail management and am very much aware of how costly shoplifters are to retailers. All shoplifters should be prosecuted to the

ing student who was picked up for shoplifting $47 worth of merchandise when I was 18 years old.

I was arrested and escorted out of that store through the front door, banned from that chain store's outlets for life, and fined $275 for criminal damages and

Elvis is not in the building But the 'King' still drawing crowds

By WOODY BAIRD Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. - Seventeen years after his death, Eivis can still draw an audience.

As they have every year since 1977, the faithful flocked to Memphis for a week of grieving and grooving to mark the Aug. 16 anniversary of Presley's

Some 8,000 fans were expected to participate in the most somber event of Elvis Week: a candlelight vigil by his grave at his Graceland estate.

The single-file procession began at 9 p.m. Monday and continued today. Many fans carried single red roses, bouquets of flowers or other small offerings as they walked up a winding driveway to the King's grave in a garden near a swimming pool.

"It's a teddy bear but with a lot of love added to it," said Debbie Grise of Lewisburg, Ky., clutching a white bear with a gold-colored heart stitched to its chest. "I've brought him one for the past eight years."

The candlelight vigil capped a week of parties and fan club called it "a dream come true."

gatherings sponsored by Graceland, which draws more than 700,000 visitors annually. As usual, the crowd included fans of all ages. Omer Ghija, among a group of 50 visitors from Belgium, said his companions ranged from 13 to 62. "Some of them grew up with Elvis," Ghijs said. "Some of them send their children here. It goes on. The music goes on." One of his fellow travelers, 21-year-old Priscilla Driesen, was making her first visit to Graceland. Driesen, who was named after Presley's ex-wife,

Can aspirin really cure cancer?

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Evidence continues to mount that people who regularly take aspirin have a substantially lower risk of developing cancer of the colon or rectum.

The latest study warned, however, that aspirin should not be recommended as a preventative until more is known about the proper dosage, since the best dose for preventing colorectal may not be the best for preventing heart disease. Research has shown that taking an aspirin every other day will cut the risk of heart attacks.

In the study published in Monday's Annals of Internal Medicine, researchers tracked 47,900 male health professionals aged 40 to 75 for six years, quizzing them every two years on aspirin use, diet, family medical history and lifestyle. The group is being examined for other diseases as well.

The study found that men taking aspirin at least twice a week had a 32 percent lower risk of getting colorectal cancer and a 50 percent lower risk of having the advanced form of the disease.

Previous research shows that aspirin's affect on colorectal cancer in women is probably the same. the report said.

Edward Giovannucci of Harvard Medical School, which conducted the study.

The study did not say why aspirin appears to lower the risk, but said other pain relievers have shown a similar effect.

"We do think there is strong evidence ... that aspirin reduces risk of colorectal cancer," said Dr.

Colorectal cancer is one of the deadliest cancers, with 152,000 new cases and 57,000 deaths in the United States last year.

The Harvard study is useful because of its size and because researchers could adjust their findings for such factors as age, weight, family history and smoking and dietary habits, said Dr. Harinder S. Garewal, a cancer prevention and control specialist at the University of Arizona in Tucson. But Dr. Moshe Shike of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York said that while the usefulness of aspirin in preventing colorectal cancer is not completely proven, there is strong evidence for other methods, such as early acreening for tumors and a diet low in fat and high in fruit, vegetables, beans and cereals.

"At the present time we cannot tell people, "Take aspirin to prevent colon cancer." Shike

Does micro-organism cure Crohn's disease?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Now that scientists believe that duodenal ulcers are caused by a microbe, I was wondering if Crohn's disease also might be brought on by a micro-organism.

DEAR READER: This is a good question for which no one has an answer. Crohn's disease is marked by inflammation of parts of the small intestine (and sometimes the colon), leading to fever, diarrhea, weight loss and poor health. The standard treatment is anti-metabolite medicine. such as cyclosporine.

Many scientists have tried but failed to uncover a microorganism that could explain this baffling disorder. The present theory is that Crohn's disease may actually be an autoimmune affliction, which causes people to become allergic to their own normal tissues. However, research is continuing and I will update you as further news is forthcoming.

To give you more information. I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Constipation and Diarrhea." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, selfaddressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with a sinus infection and suffer from post-nasal drip. Antibiotics don't help. I have a feeling of irritation, a possible lump, and wonder if this is to be expected with post-nasal drip. I'm beginning to feel as if I have a mystery illness, and it's driving me crazy.

DEAR READER: Chronically congested sinuses can become infected and can also cause an intermittent mucous drainage down the back of the throat. Such a post-nasal drip may lead to chronic cough and choking, a sensation of a lump in the throat, and a persistent irrita-

In my view, your doctor should investigate the reason for your sinus problem. Perhaps the antibiotics you were prescribed weren't strong enough or weren't given long enough. Maybe you have an undlagnosed allergy. Or you might have polyps, benign growths in or near the sinuses that may need removal. To start with, you need X-rays or a CT scan of your sinuses, in conjunction with a thorough ear.

By Phillip Alder

Defensive play is difficult because both partners must work with incomplete information. But by signaling carefully and counting, they can usually find the right plays to defeat a defeatable contract.

In today's deal. South should pass three diamonds, but that contract is beaten if West receives a club ruff.

Against three hearts, West led the club queen: three, two, acc. Declarer continued with the heart ace: four, 10, three. Next South led the heart queen: five, spade six, heart jack. Then came the heart nine: king, spade seven, club four.

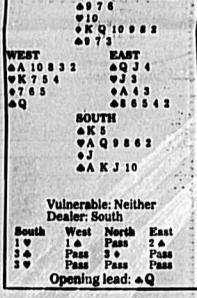

West switched to a diamond. East won with the ace and gave his partner a club ruff. However, now West had to open up the spades, so South scored his king for nine tricks: one spade, five hearts and three clubs. Any thoughts?

When partner leads a guaran-teed singleton at trick one and your play in the suit is irrelevant, you should make a suitpreference signal. That's why East played the club two. His lowest card showed a top diamond and denied a top spade. Yet West obviously wasn't conident about the his questionable holdup of the heart king until he could see a discard from his partner. East's club four was a second suitpreference signal.

East didn't count the defensive tricks. After the heart king, the diamond ace and a club ruff, two spade tricks were needed. He had to assume West held the spade ace. So, East should have switched to the spade queen before giving the club ruff. This defeats the contract.
