GREEK MILITARY NOW IN CONTROL OF GOVERNMENT

Michalakopoulos Cabinet Is Overthrown While Populace Is Unmoved By the Change; Pangalos Is the New Leader

ATHENS, June 26.—The Greek government under the premiership of Michalakopoulos has been deposed and a new government under military control is installed at Athens. The revolutionary movement started at dawn simultaneously in Athens and Averof, when anti-government forces after a brief fusillade seized the telegraph offices and cut communications.

The military movement had been foreseen for several days, but up to the last minute the government had declared itself master of the situation and was absolutely convinced of the loyalty of the troops.

At 5 o'clock Thursday morning however, General Pangalos, who was former generalissimo of the Greek army and held the office of minister of war for a short time, with a number of officers occupied the barracks of the regiment of engineers and forthwith issued an ultimatum to the government demanding its resignation and holding the ministry responsible for any bloodshed.

At the same time an ultimatum was issued by Admiral Hadjikirakos, former minister of marine, who was aboard the warship Averof, and by the commander of the troops at Saloniki. The whole of the Athens garrison did not at first declare in favor of the revolution and Premier Michalakopoulos and his cabinet remained in session in the parliament building guarded by loyal troops.

In the afternoon General Pangalos and his staff took quarters at the war ministry, where he assumed the attitude of leader of the revolution, and issued orders accordingly. In the meantime, the provisional president of the republic, Admiral Kondouriotis, sent out an urgent summons to the parliamentary leaders. He invited M. Papanastasiou, former premier to organize a cabinet, but in political circles it is generally believed that Pangalos had designs upon the premiership and would not likely be willing to serve under Papanastasiou.

Admiral Hadjikirakos assumed command of the fleet and is expected to become minister of marine. It is understood that Admiral Kondouriotis intended to resign the presidency but was dissuaded.

Though there were possibilities of a really serious situation, had a collision between the troops of the two parties occurred, the revolution from a military standpoint was a mild affair and except for a few blank cartridges fired, nothing that seemed like war happened. Revolutionary troops are protecting public buildings.

The populace seems strangely unmoved by the event, and is evincing such a calm, which has been increasingly frequent in recent years. Pangalos issued a manifesto declaring that in acting as he did he was merely carrying out the wishes of the people, who demanded the redemption and purification of the country.

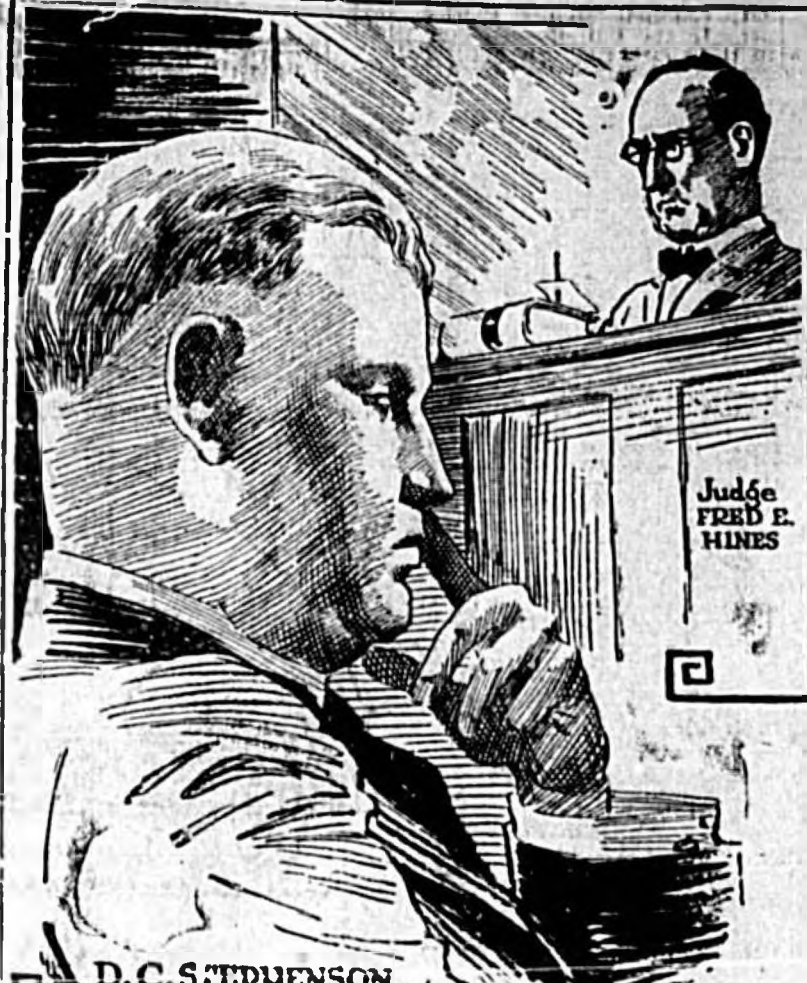

The care with which the revolution was engineered is evidenced by the elaborate preparations made in the principal garrisons throughout the country, where agents of the revolution seem to have found fertile soil to work upon. The adherence of the entire fleet has put the seal of success upon Greece's latest coup d'etat.

"I gave him three test tubes of germs, one of para-typhoid A, and one of para-typhoid B," he quoted Faiman.

He credited Faiman with intentionally leaving out typhoid germs so as to prevent himself ever being sent to trial for helping cause the disease which killed young McClintock.

O'Brien gave virtually his entire hour to ridicule, ending the pleas for Shepherd. The crowded court room of spectators frequently laughed aloud at his witticisms.

United States Experts Are Helping Argentine Farmers To Raise Better Produce

BUENOS AIRES, June 26.—American methods in the development of crops and mineral resources are being rapidly introduced into Argentina, which formerly looked to Europe for instruction. The national and provincial governments now have in their service no less than nine technical experts who are either Americans or have gained their knowledge in the United States.

Argentina's infant cotton industry is being developed under the technical advice of two American experts, Ernest L. Tutt, former chief of the cotton section of the textile division of the department of commerce, and Dr. N. E. Winters, a cotton geneticist, formerly of Clemson College, South Carolina. Mr. Tutt is devoting himself to improving methods of cotton cultivation, harvesting, ginning and marketing, while Dr. Winters' work is to obtain pure uniform varieties of the plant for the different sections of the republic, and adapt seeds from other countries to Argentine conditions.

W. E. Cross, an American sugar expert, is in charge of the experimental station maintained by the provincial government of Tucuman, where the sugar industry is centered. He is developing new varieties of sugar plants and controlling pests and diseases.

Thomas Grogan, an American geneticist in corn, is in the employ of the ministry of agriculture endeavoring to obtain better varieties of that cereal.

The culture of tobacco is being developed by Felix Charlan, a specialist formerly employed by the Canadian government, who has studied tobacco culture in Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky and Cuba. He is introducing American seeds and methods.

The methods for making cheese used on the Pacific Coast of the United States are being introduced by an Irish expert, who spent considerable time studying the American dairy industry.

The possibilities of establishing a metallurgical industry in Argentina are being investigated by H. Foster Bain, chief of the United States bureau of mines, and two assistants, E. C. Swanson and G. E. Williams. They have been exploring the territory lying along the Andes for coal, iron and manganese.

In addition to the above an American, Leon M. Estrabrook, was the organizer of Argentina's new crop statistics bureau; another American, George O. Wiggins, organized the weather bureau, and there is also an American connected in an executive capacity with one of the state railroads, said to be better than any other of the system.

Dr. Thomas Le Breton, former Argentine Ambassador at Washington, now minister of agriculture and Dr. Carlos A. Vallejo, sub-secretary of agriculture and a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, are responsible for bringing most of these experts to Argentina.

On Its Errands of Mercy

When you notice the green cross on the automobile of some physician speeding to bring relief from suffering, or possibly rescue from the very grip of Death, do you ever stop to think if there is any special significance, or any special history, back of that emblem? And have you seen the new automobile emblem for physicians which contains as its central feature the rod and serpent of Aesculapius? This emblem is interestingly explained by a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The knots on the rod," he explains, "symbolize the difficult problems of medicine; the serpent typifies wisdom. The Aesculapius symbol therefore stands for power, wisdom and health. Scarlet and gold have long been regarded as the particular colors of the physician's costume. In the middle ages, the physicians of the king's retinue wore scarlet cloaks. The elixir of life was usually a red tincture. Gold symbolizes the sun, which has long been regarded as having definite influence for health and, indeed, modern scientific investigations have continued its beneficence. The radiating lines underlying the scarlet enamel of the emblem signify the sun's rays, which emerge to form a gold band around the insignia.

"The central part of the design lies on the green cross, the four arms of which radiate from it. Previous to 1910, the use of the red cross was rather general as the insignia of hospitals, health departments and medical institutions. At that time the executive committee of the American National Red Cross requested all hospitals, health departments and like institutions to refrain from the use of the red cross in order to avoid confusion, and suggested as a substitute the green cross on a white background. Congress restricted the use of the red cross to the American National Red Cross, and prohibited organizations from adopting this emblem after the passage of the law. At that time numerous organizations, particularly those in the eastern part of the United States, adopted the green cross on white ground as a proper emblem for the automobiles of physicians or of hospitals, and for ambulances. Many concerns began to manufacture this design as an emblem for the automobiles of physician. In some cities, municipal ordinances gave cars bearing the green cross special privileges. The use of the green cross on the present design is a recognition of the widespread use of this device in many sections of the country, and obviously makes it unnecessary to introduce new municipal ordinances for recognition of the new emblem.

"From a legendary point of view, it is interesting to know that the cross usually signified punishment and death previous to Christian era. The Persians, however, used it as a symbol for the sun, and the Gauls endowed it with creative and fructifying powers."

Almost every emblem in every-day use about us has an interesting, sometimes an inspiring origin. When you see the green cross and its symbol on succor-bearing car of the family physician, think of it with the respect to which it is so richly entitled.

"Headed" For the Age of Ninety-Five

"Give me five minutes' talk with a man about politics or weather or neighbors or finances and I'll tell you whether he's going to reach ninety-five in good shape or not. If he says he has the finest neighbors in the world and adds that times never have been better or politics cleaner or the weather finer, then you may be pretty sure that he'll be a winner at ninety-five or any other age. No matter how long you live, there isn't time to worry."

That is some philosophy of Chauncey M. Depew who having reached the age of ninety years, himself, hale and hearty, ought to know pretty well what he is talking about. The person who sees the good side of everything is usually a person with a good digestive apparatus. He also is usually a person who has good, clean blood, and an outlook on life that is cheerful and kindy. In all that there is the essence of good health, and Depew is right in guessing that such a person has a chance at living to near the century mark, and beyond.

People who "dig their graves with their teeth"—that means the people who eat unwisely and bring upon themselves all sorts of ailments—are pretty likely to become misanthropes. If they manage to live to old age they are disagreeable and difficult to live with. They find something wrong with everything and everybody. And then some day they turn right yellow and die.

Then there is another class whom Depew would correctly schedule for an early grave. They are the "fearful" people. They are afraid of everything, afraid of poverty, afraid of money, afraid of illness, afraid of everything under the sun out of which they can manufacture any sort of cause for fear. They worry day and night about something. Their eyes grow strained with watching for trouble. And time and time again they prove the truth of Elbert Hubbard's famous adage, "What you fear, will surely come upon you." They die early because they have worn themselves out running to meet unpleasant things.

The optimistic, kindly person on the other hand, not only prolongs his own life but contributes to the health and happiness of everybody who comes within the range of his influence.

It's right curious that more of us don't think of these things more often. We might be adding years to our lives by a bit of readjusting of our attitude toward our neighbors, and the world in general.

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB. Richard Scott is a young man of a fine Kentucky family who went upon the stage. During his first season he was with Otis Skinner in "Kismet," playing the part of the Nubian hunsman, Kufur. Those who saw the play may recall that Kufur's costume consisted mainly of a coat of greasy paints mixed with glycerine to give to the head-man's bare limbs and torso the polish of ebony. When young Mr. Scott was promoted to the part he had photographs taken in character and sent copies home for family consumption. The old cook, known as Aunt Clara, was of a deeply religious nature and she was shocked to observe a likeness of Mister Dick in garb so scanty and paint so black. She brooded over this for several days, but one morning when she came to cook the breakfast her expression had miraculously cleared. Presently Aunt Clara saw fit to explain. "I've been rastlin' wid de good Lawd in prayah," she stated. "I been worryin' 'bout Mister Dick runnin' round befoah all dem 'Nothern folks wid hardy any clothes on him, and las' night de headquartes white his ampbions planes look for land in that uncharted million square miles between the Pole and Alaska. It was not two Americans, but two wild Brits who made the Atlantic in one hop, and it was not an American, but a Norseman who tried to jump from Spitzbergen to the Pole. When the American Navy decided to cross the Atlantic by airplane, it did so in a comparatively leisure fashion, making elaborate provision against accidents of all kinds; and now that, under its auspices, Commander MacMillan is going on a scientific expedition to the North

Coolidge on the Radio. 2 Kinds of Preachers. The Farmer's Share. Old Swimming Holes. By ARTHUR BRISBANE (Copyright 1925). NO MAN CAN guess what power it speaks well over the radio may mean in years to come. Last Monday night bridge parties laid down their cards, women on farms stopped the late cleaning up of dishes, their husbands came in from evening chores, tens of millions listened to the President's clear, incisive matter of fact voice, discussing in plain fashion the importance of national economies and laying down, to the satisfaction of every hearer, the money belongs to the PEOPLE, that THEY ought to be allowed to spend as much of their own money as possible, and have as little as possible taken away from them by the government.

THUS PRESIDENT Coolidge now talks direct to the people of the United States. It was an innovation when Woodrow Wilson, so perfectly dressed, drove to the Capitol and talked direct to Senators, Representatives, the Supreme Court and others. "Wonderful audience," the world said. But it was no audience at all compared to the vast multitude that heard President Coolidge talk direct to the people of the United States. For the first time in the history of this country it is possible to say of the President that ALL THE PEOPLE HAVE HEARD HIS VOICE AND KNOW HIM.

SEVEN WORDS in the thirty-seventh verse of the twelfth chapter of St. Mark stand out in the minds of millions: "And the common people heard him gladly." Great and ever growing is the power of those who voice the people listen gladly, as to one whom they know.

A MAN in public office, with something to say, and with "the air," the opportunity to be heard by all at his command, can build for himself a place in the people's confidence and affection that cannot be taken away from him. His words go to the people, no intermediary.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, as millions can testify, speaks with no effort at oratorical effect, plainly, awfully, keeping a big, gigantic audience from their bridges, whist, or their chores, as few minutes as possible.

Bishop Oldham, of Albany, invited to speak at Westminster Abbey, and perhaps a little flustered by the honor, said various things that he will think over when he gets back. He apologized for the United States. He regretted that his country had not done its duty by Europe, flattered the British unctuously, and said "millions of people in America were terribly disappointed to put it mildly—at the inactivity of the American Government."

THAT'S ONE kind of an American clergyman talking to the English. Another kind was Henry Ward Beecher, who went over to arouse sympathy for the North, in our Civil War. He was not as well received as the Bishop of Albany, perhaps because he carried with him a higher opinion of his own country and his own countrymen than the one taken over by the Bishop.

IN LIVERPOOL, when Beecher spoke they threw eggs and hissed him. A man in the crowd shouted, "We thought you Yankees were such great fighters. How long is this war of yours going to last?" Beecher replied, "I can't answer your question. When we fought you Englishmen in 1776 it didn't last long. That was easy, because then we were only fighting Englishmen.

"But this time we are fighting Americans, and there is no telling HOW long that may last."

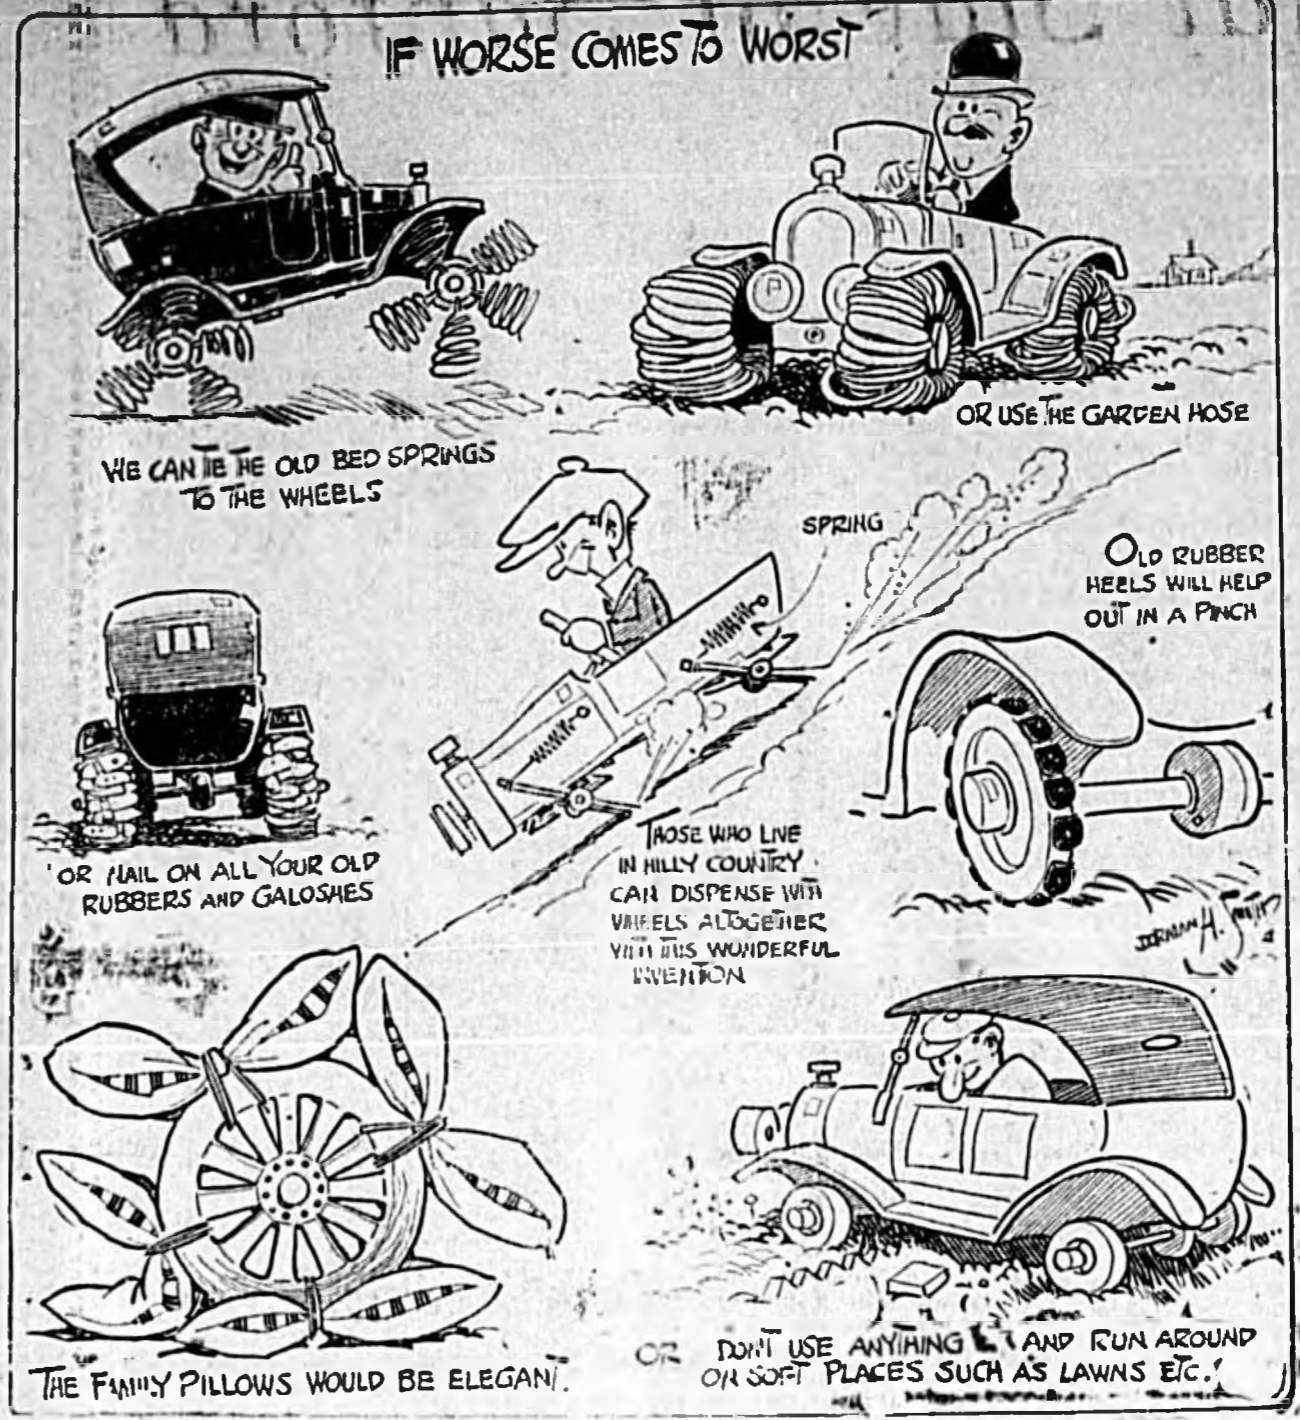

THE BRITISH crowd applauded, listened, and developed an opinion of Beecher considerably higher perhaps than the present British opinion of the good and humble American bishop from Albany.

THE AGRICULTURAL Department shows that in 1924 the farmers averaged a profit of 21 cents a bushel on wheat and 28 cents a bushel on corn. Many lost money on every bushel, others made more than the average. Farmers that raised potatoes on the average actually lost money, and would have been better off if they hadn't planted a potato. A good wheat speculator, knowing that the prosperous class wanted La Follette badly beaten, and was sure to put up the price of wheat, could easily buy a million bushels of wheat early in the campaign and sell it at a profit of one million dollars.

It was a lucky farmer that could raise five thousand bushels of wheat and sell it at a profit of one thousand dollars. Working together the home, the public school and the church are the factors which are to work out our salvation. These three should always be co-operative in all the things which tend to the making of good citizenship. But co-operation is far from meaning that either of them should infringe upon the rights and proper fields of effort of the other. So long as they heartily co-operate things will be well. Whenever one of them laps over into the proper domain of the other the result will, eventually, be the same as in the case of two automobiles at attempting to occupy the same place in the road at the same time.

Justice Seeger seems to have sensed this. Another thing we believe in with all the earnestness of which we are capable is the constitution of this country. It recognizes church, school and home and sets them up as co-ordinated agencies rather than as clashing institutions, assigning each its place and guaranteeing its security. It is based on the principle that declares that

The American Rubber Situation Is Growing Serious

A SUMMER SCHOOL OF EVOLUTION?

Now that the evolution controversy has been dragged into the law courts and therefore forced, willy-nilly, upon public attention, let us make the best of the situation and, even though it falls to our lot during the heated period, let us strive to learn what we can from the protagonists on both sides. There is to be much published in the public prints, because of this debate, on science, theology, religion and freedom in all its phases.

Comes now Dr. Charles Hill-Tout, fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, lecturing before a section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, to testify against much loose thinking with regard to man's bodily ancestry. In brief, Dr. Hill-Tout says that man never was monkey or ape and monkey never was man. If he said by science that, physically, man has apical characteristics, it is equally true that the ape has man-like characteristics. "Probably both ape and man come from some common ancestor," and probably man, while bearing in his body resemblances even to the structures of trees and flowers, was from the unknown beginning genus homo.

Let us be long suffering under the assaults that must this summer be committed by evolutionists and anti-evolutionists. The matter will never be settled until settled right, and the people's horse sense must at last settle it.

CHURCH AND STATE

TAMPA TIMES. A supreme court justice of New York—Justice Seeger of White Plains—has granted a permanent injunction which restrains the Mount Vernon school board from devoting a period of time each week to religious training.

We believe very strongly in religion, and we mean by this the Christian religion. Among all our acquaintances there is neither boy nor man, girl nor woman, who could profitably enough have a vacation of church or state. Public schools are nothing more nor less than the state engaged in the business of teaching. This is something in which it should engage, for the duty is upon it to enlarge as far as possible the capacity of the coming citizens for developing into good citizens. No citizen can be the best citizen whose life is to be lived under the clouds of ignorance. But there is no hope for the making of better citizens if a vital fundamental of the constitution is ignored or violated in the attempt to produce them.

There is great danger that well-meaning eagerness will bring us into serious trouble just here. Religion is so good and so vital that we think it should always be impressed. It is but a step to where we conclude that our own particular brand of, or preference in, religion should be impressed. So long as we only hold this idea the sailing may be smooth. But when the other fellow becomes possessed of the same notion difficulty arises.

We happen to know of two places, located in another state, where, some years back, no Episcopist need apply for place as teacher in the public school of the one nor no Methodist for similar position in the public schools of the other. The reason? The first was a "strong" Methodist community, the other as predominantly Baptist, and each of these majorities used the power which was given them by force of numbers. It is altogether superfluous to add that "sweet charity" and "Christian love and fellowship" were complete strangers to those two towns and their people.

Yes, we need more morals. To indicate them as the primary duty of the home. By the same token we need more mental development. Supplying this is the particular province of the school. More religion? It is needed worst of all. And here is found the very special field and opportunity of the church. We cannot safely get the functions of these three most important agencies mixed. The fathers saw it, way back yonder, and provided against it in the constitution. There is no place in our scheme for a combination of church and state, or for either of these usurping the proper rights of the home. Justice Seeger appears to use to have made a decision which is not only constitutionally correct but also, one which is very wise and upon which almost everybody whom we know needs to ponder quite seriously.

FLORIDA FACTS

The legal rate of interest in Florida is eight per cent. The contract rate is ten per cent. The ports of New Orleans and Mobile were at one time a part of the province of West Florida.

There are 160 nurseries in Florida selling plants of citrus, pecans, avocado and other tropical and general nursery stock. The Everglades embrace approximately 4,000 square miles (42,500,000 acres) south of Lake Okechobee. Nearly one million acres still belong to the State.

The greatest length of Florida north to south is 450 miles. The greatest width is about 400 miles at the extreme northern part. The average width is 95 miles. The reclamation of the Everglades was actually begun on July 4, 1906. Work was started with a dredge, built under the direction of the late Governor N. B. Broward, at a point Fort Lauderdale.

Drainage was slow for the first ten years because the State was dependent upon the sale of the land for funds with which to carry out the project. The land brought very low prices in their original condition. Lake Worth has become known throughout the country because it divides Palm Beach, the popular winter resort, from West Palm Beach, the county seat of Palm Beach county. A bridge connects the two towns.

The late Dr. John B. Gorrie, of Pensacola, was the inventor of artificial ice. He is one of Florida's representatives in the National Statuary Hall in the Capitol at Washington. His statue was struck by C. Adrian Pillars, sculptor of Jacksonville.

Truth Seekers' Class Has Enjoyable Meeting Thursday Afternoon

The Wesleyan Truth Seekers Class assembled at the Methodist Church on Thursday afternoon and motored out to Silver Lake for an afternoon of wholesome pleasure.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Reginald Turner, the brief business session was presided over by the teacher, Mrs. T. J. Nixon.

The devotional was led by Mrs. Peeler, drawing a beautiful picture of the prayer life of Jesus, after which she led the class in prayer. Mrs. T. J. Nixon then gave a splendid talk, telling of a story she had read of "The Flower of Happiness" which told of the road of helpfulness and the road of service. Mrs. Nixon closed her talk with a request that the class adopt for its motto: "Christ first, others second and class individuals third."

The report of the secretary was read and accepted. There were two visitors present, Mrs. Lucile Simmons and Miss Ora Chandler, who were cordially welcomed as new members of the class.

The refreshment committee, who served a delicious and bountiful repast were: Mrs. Otto Schmeff, chairman, and Mesdames Moffit, Hickson, Phillips, Lundquist, Pope and Squires. Miss Mary Telford offered a resolution that the hostess be given a rising vote of thanks. This meeting was voted the most inspirational and most friendly gathering of the year.

Several husbands were present and entered heartily into the pleasures of the afternoon. There were two guests of honor, Mrs. Charles Nixon, daughter-in-law of Rev and Mrs. T. J. Nixon, with her little son, and Miss Mary Telford, daughter of the late, Rev. W. B. Telford a Presbyterian minister and a pioneer resident of Seminole County. Miss Telford is a cousin of L. M. Telford of Sanford whom she is at present visiting.

Two Americans In Lead First Of British Open Golf Tourney

Jim Barnes Sets New Record For the Famous Prestwick Course in Scotland; MacDonal Smith Is Second

Only a Dozen Of British Remain In

Half Dozen Strokes Separate Smith From First Of British Rivals In Tourney

PRESTWICK, Scotland, June 26.—Two Americans, MacDonald Smith and Jim Barnes, were in the lead for the British open golf championship Thursday night, with half of the 72 hole struggle behind them. Both set new records for the famous Prestwick course Thursday. Barnes bringing it down two strokes with a stirring round of 70 in the morning, and Smith reducing it still further with a dazzling 69 in the afternoon.

Having done 76 in his forenoon round, Smith ended the day with a total of 145. Barnes followed up his 70 with 77, for a total of 147, which put him in second place. Only a dozen of the British golfers who set out Thursday morning with the hope of winning their own championship back from the Americans, who have held it for three years out of the last four, were within striking distance of Smith and Barnes tonight.
