Cleveland Gets Chamber's Topper

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer
Jesse S. "Red" Cleveland, director of Aviation for the Sanford Airport Authority, was honored with the prestigious John S. Krider Memorial Topper Award Friday night by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce at an awards dinner at the Sanford Civic Center. Bringing his wife Eloise forward with him as he accepted the award, Cleveland said modestly, "This should be a team award, because I owe a debt to all those who have helped over the years." The award, presented by George Touhy, a past Topper Award winner, was given in recognition of "outstanding leadership, distinguished and unselfish service to this community." There were 350 persons in attendance at the annual event, including 40 chamber scholarship winners and their parents. Ron Dycus, 1985 chairman of the chamber board, was master of ceremonies. He was presented with a plaque of appreciation for his service by board chairman Shirley Schilke. In 1989 after a distinguished career in the U.S. Navy, Commander Cleveland was looking for "a challenging assignment in a commercial complex affording ample opportunity to demonstrate management abilities" in the civilian world. He found in the job of operating and developing the 1,885-acre Sanford Airport after it was deactivated by the Navy and deeded to the city of Sanford for $1. Cleveland was well qualified for the job, having been executive officer of the Sanford Naval Air Station since 1966 until he retired in 1988 when it closed. He managed the installation, which had an annual operating budget of $20 million. Sixty officers, 820 enlisted and 200 civil service personnel were assigned to the base. From 1983-85, he was air operations officer, staff, commander Naval Air Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet. He developed and directed the schedule of all naval aircraft assigned to the Naval Air Force U.S. Atlantic Fleet. See TOPPER, page 8A

Mayfair Lease For Sale

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer
The lease to operate the Mayfair golf course and country club in Sanford is apparently being offered for sale by Mayfair manager Jack Daniels for $2 million. The reported sale attempt comes at a time when Daniels' compliance with lease terms for the city-owned property is under investigation by city commissioners and staff. Reports of the sale received by the Evening Herald Friday were substantiated by City Manager Frank Faison, who said a local realtor told him the Mayfair property lease was being offered for $2 million through an ad that ran in Thursday's Wall Street Journal. Faison said the realtor called a Sanford brokerage number listed in the advertisement and was told the "18 hole central Florida golf course" listed in the ad was indeed the city's Mayfair property. Neither Daniels nor his attorney, Gerald Rutberg, could be reached for comment Friday. The Sanford broker, Don Rathel, who lives on Mayfair Court, declined to discuss the advertisement with the Evening Herald and directed queries regarding the Mayfair course to Daniels. Faison said Daniels' sale of the lease would be contingent upon city commission approval. According to Commissioner John Mercer, who has alleged that Daniels is operating the course in violation of the city's lease requirements, it would be up to the commission to determine whether it wanted to transfer Daniels' lease to the new operator or draw up another contract. Either way, according to Faison, the course's new operator "will be fully responsible to the city for proper operation of the club." Daniels' lease calls for the city to be paid five per cent of the

Rat Poison Found In Contac, Teldrin

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Government tests have confirmed the presence of rat poison in several capsules of the popular Contac cold remedy and in an allergy medicine pulled from stores in Orlando and Houston. The discovery came a day after the manufacturer of the drugs ordered the products off store shelves because of contamination threats. John Norris, assistant commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said Friday rat poison was found in five capsules of Contac and one capsule of the allergy medicine Teldrin. He said investigators suspected two additional capsules of either Contac or Teldrin from those cities also had been poisoned. Both medicines are made by the Philadelphia-based SmithKline Beckman Corp., which Thursday ordered those products and a third drug, the appetite suppressant Dietac, pulled from the market after a male caller said he had poisoned the brands in four U.S. cities. "In light of the laboratory findings and continued terrorist threats, we feel that withdrawal of these products is required to safeguard the public health," SmithKline President Henry Wendt said. No injuries were reported. Norris said the FDA was continuing to test "thousands" of Contac, Teldrin and Dietac pills garnered from Orlando, Houston and the two other cities — St. Louis and Chicago — citing the man who called SmithKline and various media outlets about the tampering. "Unfortunately the caller had not been as specific as he was to a particular store as he was with Orlando and Houston," said Norris, explaining that the caller named the stores in those cities where the poisoned product could be found. "We could go to a particular store and clean out all of the inventory and that's why we have been able to immediately find tampered product." "I think for now it's confined to the four cities mentioned," he said. "It's hard to speculate where this thing will head. We're hoping it will end soon and hopefully with an apprehension of the criminal." SmithKline said the FDA tests of the poisoned capsules showed traces of warfarin, an ingredient used in rat poison, in amounts too small to present

Longwood To Act On City Attorney's Resignation

The resignation letter of Longwood City Attorney Gerald Korman is to be acted upon at a special meeting of the Longwood City Commission called for 6:30 p.m. Monday. The commission meets at city hall, 175 W. Warren Ave., Longwood. Korman has been city attorney for little over a year. He succeeded Frank Kruppenbacher, who stepped down in February, 1985 after serving about a year and a half, citing "personal and professional" reasons.

Korman's letter of resignation said his duties as city attorney have become too time consuming and he wants to spend more time with his family. The commission is also scheduled to discuss plans to acquire $6.8 million in funding for capital improvements for the city. Proposals have been made by Sun Bank, Barnett Bank, Freedom Bank and Southeastern Municipal Bonds. The commission is to discuss the expired contract with Florida Residential Communities under which the city includes the FRC's sewer billing in city water bills for customers who are connected get FRC sewage and city water. Commissioners are also scheduled to make a decision on selection of a consulting firm for updating the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan. City Planner Chris Nagle was asked to make his recommendation after proposals were submitted by three applicants — Florida Land Design and Engineering, Inc., Glatting, Lopez, Kerker and Aglin, and Diane Kramer. —Jane Casselberry

Search Continues For Suspect In Slaying

The search continued Saturday for a man who is believed to have shot and killed his live-in girlfriend. Meanwhile Seminole County sheriff's deputies have identified the woman who died of a gunshot wound to her head early Friday. Ronda Bemis, 31, of 871 Caliente Way, Altamonte Springs, was killed at her home at about 8:30 a.m. Friday. Sheriff's deputies initially reported that Ms. Bemis lived in and was killed in Forest City. Sheriff's investigators continued a search for Robert Woodbury, 27, of the same address. Witnesses said that at the time of the shooting Woodbury was at the home he, Ms. Bemis and her 12-year-old son, Kevin, moved to Wednesday. The witnesses were also at the home at the time, a sheriff's report said. Those men have told sheriff's investigators they heard Woodbury and Ms. Bemis arguing and then a gunshot, a sheriff's report said. Woodbury reportedly left the home on foot, possibly armed with a revolver at about 6:30 a.m. Following the shooting, Michael Leonard Roark, 24, owner and another resident of that home, told sheriff's deputies he took Ms. Bemis' son to his grandparent's home before sheriff's deputies arrived. Roark returned to the scene, but not before deputies arrived, the report said.

When sheriff's deputies arrived at the locked home at about 7:30 a.m. they got no response from inside and had to break in. Ms. Bemis' body was on a couch in the living room, covered with a comforter, the report said. The other adult witness, Michael Joseph Pfister, 22, of Orlando, was brought by sheriff's deputies from his home back to the scene. Roark reportedly told investigators that Ms. Bemis, her son and Woodbury had moved into his home Wednesday from an apartment on Forest City Road. Ms. Bemis was transported to Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs where she was pronounced dead. —Susan Loden

5 City Police Officers, Paramedic Join SWAT

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer
The Seminole County SWAT (Special Weapons and Tactics) team has been beefed up by Sanford and Altamonte Springs police officers and a Casselberry paramedic, who have joined Seminole County sheriff's deputies and Longwood police on the 16-member force. The SWAT team was started 11 years ago as a unit of Seminole County Sheriff John Polk's department and Longwood police merged their city SWAT team with the sheriff's about two years ago. Even with the addition of officers from other agencies the team of volunteer lawmen, who are specially trained and equipped to deal with dangerous and emergency situations, will continue to be based at the Sheriff's Department and under the command of sheriff's Lt. Marty LaBruciano. Altamonte Springs policemen Chuck Stancel, Jeff Brazier and John Heber have been deputized to serve on the SWAT team, along with Sanford policemen Willie Harden and Jimmy Murray. Casselberry Fire Department paramedic Gene Fry has also joined the force, to be available to provide immediate medical assistance if needed. "The reason Sanford police joined the Seminole County SWAT team is, it's not economically feasible for a city the size of Sanford to have its own team," said Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett. Altamonte Springs Police Chief William A. Liquori in evaluating the needs and budget of his city agreed with Harriett. "We wanted to contribute to that unit in that we would use the unit from time to time. We wanted some input," Harriett said. He called the effort "cooperative," between the police departments and the sheriff. In the past Harriett said he has called for assistance from the SWAT team in serving warrants in possibly dangerous situations. "They would certainly be called in if we had other situations where they were needed," Harriett said. Liquori, who as an Orlando policeman established and commanded that city's SWAT team several years ago, said he sees the opportunity to participate in the county team as a good training ground for his men. "Maybe 10 to 15 years down the road we'll want our own SWAT team and these men will already be trained. This is an economical way to get that experience. The equipment is already there. For me, as chief, it's an inexpensive way to get involved." Liquori said having direct input and working hand and hand with the other SWAT supporting agencies is a plus for his department. The SWAT team has and will continue to be available to assist all law enforcement agencies in the county and in surrounding counties, even cities that don't provide manpower for the force. But when functioning on the

IN BRIEF

Stevenson Vows To Make Illinois 'Waterloo Of LaRouchites'

By United Press International
Adlai Stevenson III rejected an invitation to talk politics with right-wing leader Lyndon LaRouche and instead vowed to make Illinois the "Waterloo of the LaRouchites."

LaRouche extended the invitation Friday and said voters, by awarding Democratic nominations to two of his candidates, told Stevenson, the Democratic candidate for governor, "to run with these two people."

The LaRouche Democrats narrowly defeated Stevenson's hand-picked candidates for lieutenant governor and secretary of state Tuesday.

Stevenson, however, spent the day in researching ways to "purge" the ticket. He has said he will not run with "candidates who espouse the hate-filled folly of Lyndon LaRouche." Party leaders fear the LaRouche candidates will wreck Democratic chances in Illinois.

Stevenson, appearing on NBC-TV's "Nightline" Friday night, said the election of LaRouche candidates is not limited to Illinois, but is a national phenomenon.

"What has happened here is being attempted throughout the country," Stevenson said. "But before it's over, we are going to make this the Waterloo of the LaRouchites."

On the same show, Janice Hart, the LaRouche candidate who won the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, congratulated the voters of Illinois for "allowing us to kick the snakes out of Washington and Illinois."

"Nightline" host Ted Koppel repeatedly berated Hart and asked her to speak on the issues as she resorted to name-calling during her segment with Stevenson, referring to the former U.S. senator as a "geek-out, circus act."

Stevenson has repeatedly called LaRouche and his supporters neo-nazis and fascists.

No Retreat On Contra Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan says he will never sound retreat in his battle to arm the rebels trying to overthrow the Nicaraguan government and believes that until the Contras win, "there will be no peace in Central America."

He was expected to repeat that theme in his weekly radio address Saturday.

Undeterred by House rejection of his $100 million aid package, Reagan told about 200 cheering, whistling Contra supporters at the White House Friday. "We cannot give up. We will never give up... We intend to bring this back to the House as many times as it takes to win. And we will win."

In Managua, some 30 men and women in wheelchairs and on crutches blocked a street outside the house of Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, protesting what they called the church's failure to condemn the U.S.-backed Contra war.

The protesters, most of whom said they had been wounded in Contra attacks, said they represented a group of 3,000 war veterans.

"We are asking the church to speak out against the Contras and against the United States for trying to help them with another $100 million," one of the wounded men, Renerio Medina, 24, said from his wheelchair.

"You have never spoken out to blame the United States for the orphans, the thousands of dead, the wounded like us, victims of the contra war," Medina told a spokesman for the cardinal, who was not at home.

In another part of the city, four House Democrats began a one-day fact-finding mission Saturday to gather information for renewed congressional debate over $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels.

Attorney Disciplined

By Deane Jordan Herald Staff Writer

A Casselberry attorney has been suspended by the Florida Supreme Court from practicing law for 90 days.

Wallace F. Stalnaker Jr., 101 Normandy Road, was ordered suspended for violating the Bar's ethics code, according to David McGunagle of The Florida Bar.

The suspension starts April 6.

According to the court's order, in late 1979 and 1980 while Stalnaker was a salaried associate of a law firm, Jones and Morrison P.A., (Jones, Morrison and Stalnaker P.A. according to a city directory of that time) he systematically diverted $36,922 in fees over a 2-year period that should have been paid to the firm.

The money was put in his personal bank account at the Barnett Bank of Altamonte Springs and later remitted in part to the firm's bookkeeper. The partners confronted Stalnaker about the diversion in 1981, according to the court record. The diverted money reportedly was not claimed on Stalnaker's 1980 income tax.

Stalnaker, however, said he had an oral agreement with one partner that he would pay his fair share of overhead and costs and that he could keep a portion of the diverted fees.

According to information supplied to the Evening Herald by The Florida Bar, the justices agreed with Stalnaker that a 12-month suspension recommended by a Bar "referee" was too harsh.

"While Stalnaker exercised extremely poor judgment by handling his financial arrangements as he did, his actions fall short of a deliberate attempt to steal from the association," the justices wrote.

Stalnaker has since repaid the firm. He said he had the agreement because he was responsible for most of the firm's business volume. The court agreed.

"The record illustrates that after the professional association was formed, Stalnaker was left to carry a disproportionate amount of the workload, earning for the firm about twice the fees that Jones and Morrison generated. All three men, however, earned identical salaries," the justices wrote.

Stalnaker said Friday that there was a civil disagreement between himself and another member of the partnership but not an illegality. He also said he was a partner in the firm and the material presented to the Bar and court did not reflect that, an important point, he said, since the issue centered on what he was paid for his services.

Before the case got to the Supreme Court, the Bar referee who heard the case noted that "Stalnaker had a good reputation," that he had "found himself in an office that was very disorganized and fairly unproductive monetarily," and that Stalnaker "became the main generating source of cash and legal financial revenues for the firm."

One justice however, J. Ehrlich, dissented with the majority opinion. He said it was a "strange and incomprehensible twist" to agree with the referee recommendation for discipline but not go along with the 12-month suspension.

"What is the court suspending respondent for if he did not steal from the association? If he took the firm's money with Jones' knowledge and consent, he did not misappropriate or steal the firm's funds, and if he did not steal, the Bar hasn't proved its charge," he wrote.

"I think justice would best be served by remanding the case to the referee with the instructions that he make a specific finding whether there was an oral agreement between Jones and Stalnaker. If there was, then Mr. Stalnaker should be exonerated from any wrongdoing. If there were no such oral side agreement, then he should be properly disciplined. A lawyer's reputation and career are far too important to have the Court suspend him from the practice of law without a specific finding of wrongdoing," Ehrlich wrote.

Stalnaker, born in 1948, was admitted to the Bar in 1973. He was also ordered to pay $2,549.50 in disciplinary costs.

Challenger Probe Absolves Fuel Tank

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The search for what caused the Challenger disaster has been narrowed to a joint in the ship's right booster rocket, and NASA engineers say tests in the next 10 days may help pinpoint the reason for the seal failure.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers told the presidential commission investigating the Challenger explosion they have cleared the shuttle's massive external fuel tank of any blame in the Jan. 28 accident.

Appearing before the commission Friday, the engineers said the precise cause of the failure of two rubber O-ring seals to contain fiery gases in the booster was still unknown.

But, they said, several possibilities are under scrutiny:

cold weather effects on the O-rings, ice in the joint, damage to the seals during rocket assembly and defects in putty between the O-rings and the open interior of the rocket.

"I believe we have eliminated all the other possibilities except these items we've just discussed ... and those all deal with the joint," said Wayne Little, chief engineer at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala.

"In the next week to 10 days we hope to get a significant amount of data relative to these prime scenarios," he said.

Salvage work was put on hold Friday because of rough weather at sea, kicking up waves cresting at 12 to 15 feet and wind gusts higher than 35 mph.

Tire Deflator Charged With Battery

A man who was reportedly letting air out of a car's tires and refused to stop when confronted by Sanford police, reportedly battered a policeman before he fled on foot.

The incident occurred in front of #12 Castle Brewer Court at about 9 p.m. Wednesday and the suspect who escaped from police was arrested at about 6 p.m. Thursday.

Sanford Police Capt. Herb Shea said Friday that when first confronted by police, who had been called to the scene, the man refused to stop letting air out of the car's tires. He wouldn't identify himself, became combative and grabbed and hit a policeman and then ran into the housing project, Shea said.

The man eluded police until he was found and arrested at the Masonic Temple on Park Avenue in Sanford on Thursday.

Soviet Girl To Try McDonalds

CHICAGO (UPI) — Soviet schoolgirl Katerina Lycheva will take time out from her five-city tour for peace in memory of the late Samantha Smith today to meet Ronald McDonald and eat an American fast-food lunch.

Samantha visited the Soviet Union in 1983.

Katya, as she is known to her friends, requested that she be allowed to set aside her peacemaking duties to eat at a McDonald's restaurant.

Katya, 11, is being accompanied by her mother, Marina, Star Rowe, 10, of San Francisco, and Patricia Montandan, founder of the Children as the Peacemakers Foundation, on her trip.

On Friday, Katya visited an American school in Chicago before touring the city's Peace Museum and the LaSalle Language Academy and meeting Mayor Harold Washington.

Katya presented Washington with a drawing done by her Soviet classmates on the theme of peace and mayor gave her a bracelet with a tiny replica of the Chicago Picasso statue and a Chicago Bears teddy bear.

Katya seemed impressed by the exhibits chronicling the efforts of worldwide peace activists at city's Peace Museum.

"It's about the work for peace, and how women work for peace," she said in English.

Then, through an interpreter, Katya added, "I think if someone made a call to all women all over the world, I'm sure everyone would come (to see the museum) and there would be no more war."

Truck Driver Hospitalized After Lake Mary Blvd. Wreck

A driver pulled from the wreckage of a truck in Lake Mary was in stable condition Saturday.

The accident in which he was injured at about noon Friday snarled traffic on Lake Mary Boulevard at Interstate 4 for almost 2½ hours while rescue workers freed him from beneath his vehicle and moved debris from the roadway.

Delbert Hilligoss, address not reported, remained in South Seminole Community Hospital in Longwood Saturday, where he had been transported following the accident. An unidentified passenger was also treated at the hospital.

A Lake Mary spokesman said Saturday Hilligoss' rental-style truck ran off the roadway and overturned, leaving him trapped. He apparently fell out the driver's side window and the top of the truck above the window pinned him to the pavement.

The truck was westbound on Lake Mary Boulevard at the time of the accident and police rerouted traffic to Sun Drive and Rinehart Road and then back onto Lake Mary Boulevard.

Aquino Vows Purge Of 'Goons, Warlords And Cronies'

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — President Corazon Aquino vowed Saturday to purge the military of "goons, warlords and cronies," saying Filipinos will not allow abuses committed during the reign of Ferdinand Marcos to go unpunished.

"We must purge our armed forces of all that has dishonored them in recent years," Aquino told the 1986 graduating class at the Philippine Military Academy.

Aquino, 53, wearing a yellow sash, flew to the mountain resort 130 miles north of Manila to speak at the graduation of 174 cadets.

Her speech followed creation March 18 of a Presidential Commission on Human Rights that said Friday it would investigate human rights abuses that might implicate former aides of the deposed ruler now in the Aquino government.

"This revolution began with a bullet shot by a soldier into the head of my husband," Aquino said.

"Only through an honest explanation of the past can a clean start be made for the future," she said. "I shall, as your commander-in-chief, make that clean start."

Filipino Strike Blocks Base

SUBIC BAY NAVAL BASE, Philippines (UPI) — Thousands of striking Philippine workers Saturday barricaded the gates of the largest overseas U.S. naval base after talks on a new labor contract collapsed.

A Navy press release said the "wildcat strike" broke out Friday night and pickets were set up at four gates, blocking servicemen from entering and leaving the strategic U.S. Subic Bay Naval Base, 60 miles northwest of Manila.

At least four Philippine workers were hospitalized after they allegedly were stabbed and hacked in scuffles with eight U.S. Marines, who shortly before midnight tried to drive their jeep through the picket line set up at the main gate near the town of Olongapo.

Haiti Junta Replaced By Council

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — The six-man junta that has ruled the country since the overthrow of Jean-Claude Duvalier was dissolved by President Henri Namphy and replaced with a new ruling council.

About 3,000 people demonstrated Friday outside the National Palace as Namphy announced the government shakeup, which came six weeks after Duvalier fled with his family into exile in France.

U.S., France Talk Terrorism

PARIS (UPI) — Prime Minister Jacques Chirac and Secretary of State George Shultz have pledged to work with other western nations to combat terrorism, a problem some believe will be the first test of the new French government.

The pledge was made after Chirac, the new conservative prime minister, and Shultz met privately for an hour Friday to discuss a number of issues, including anti-terrorist cooperation.

School Board Buys Land

The School Board of Seminole County completed two land purchases Thursday. Funding for the transactions was from the initial $15 million of the $105 million bond issue. The money arrived in the district by wire Wednesday from New York.

Purchased were 10.35 acres of land, including a house, from the family of the late T.W. Lawton, former school superintendent, for Lawton Elementary School, and five acres of land from the YMCA for Lake Brantley High School. The Lawton property cost $475,000, while the YMCA was paid $225,000.

The signing of the Lawton agreement was done on the late superintendent's old wooden desk, found by present superintendent Robert Hughes and restored several years ago. Lawton served as superintendent from 1916 until 1952. Lawton family members were on hand for the signing, and T.W. Lawton, Jr. turned over the keys to the 90-year-old family house to Hughes.

Superintendent for Facilities and Transportation Benny Arnold said the building had "historical value" for the district, and may eventually be used for a museum.

It has been speculated by school officials that the property could have been sold for as much as a million dollars to a commercial developer, but the Lawton family desired to continue their support of county schools.

The property at Lake Brantley was purchased for future expansion, and the YMCA used proceeds from the sale for its new Seminole County facility near Lake Mary.

Civic Group Nets $500 From Festival

The Lake Mary Community Improvement Association's festival last Saturday netted the group an estimated $500, according to CIA President Charlie Webster.

He said weekend rains held off in the morning, and the pancake breakfast was a huge success. The CIA fundraising event was held in the parking lot of the new Shoppes of Lake Mary. Shoppes merchants, wanting to get more involved with the community, donated 10 percent of their gross sales from the day to the CIA. Webster said. The money will reportedly be used to purchase kitchen equipment for the recently constructed CIA civic center, located on Country Club Road, north of Lake Mary Boulevard. The hall is expected to be used for both private and public events, as well as civic organizations. Webster said.

Highway Sign Would Tip Motorists To Sanford As Historic Site

By Sarah Fischer Herald Staff Writer
 Soon a sign along Interstate 4 at the State Road 46 exit may direct motorists to Sanford's historic commercial district. The Sanford Development Corporation is seeking state approval for the sign. Its request is before the Florida Department of Transportation for a one-month review, and it appears the downtown area meets most of the state criteria in order to receive the marker, according to SDC Secretary and founder Sara Jacobson. An interstate sign would tell travelers who may otherwise bypass downtown Sanford that the city, indeed, has something unique to offer, Miss Jacobson said.

"It would let the world know that there is something special here," she said. The sign would direct traffic from the SR 46 exit to the 24-square-block historic district which features buildings dating back to the early 1900s. The state requires that the area have 500 or more visitors per day and it is believed downtown Sanford meets and exceeds that number. Miss Jacobson estimated between 3,000 and 5,000 people visit downtown Sanford each day based on available parking spaces and turn-around time. SDC's request is part of a larger effort to publicize and further document the Sanford historic district's existence. Miss Jacobson said. The private, volunteer group of Sanford businessmen and property owners is also pursuing a sign within the district detailing the city's history, as well as brass plaques for the buildings, she said. The state also requires that the site be on the national register of historic places. SDC member W.E. "Duke" Adamson said downtown Sanford has been officially listed since June 15, 1976. Adamson, who is heading up the sign effort, said downtown Sanford has nearly 30 historic buildings. "The past several years have seen an outstanding and beautiful change to our downtown district, with many of the old turn-of-the-century buildings having been restored by property owners and tenants, as well as new merchants and vendors being attracted to Sanford," he said. "Many shoppers are also finding our historic downtown a pleasant and enjoyable place to browse and shop." Structures like the Meisch, Roumillat, DeForest and Hotchkiss buildings have endured in Sanford's hub of activity, an area the state department of archives and history has called "one of the oldest surviving original commercial districts in Florida." DOT defines historical attractions as areas, places or sites of major historical significance located within or in close proximity to a limited access highway corridor and which provide easy access for motorists and ample, all-weather parking areas. Traffic Engineer H.L. Wynn Jr. said. In order to have a sign on the interstate, the attraction must be within 12 miles or 15 minutes driving time to a limited access highway and must also appear as a place or facility on the Florida official transportation map, Wynn said. The sign is designed for a place that is "more historical in focus," rather than just where people shop, Wynn said. Once the agency receives a sign request, engineers go out and visit the location and view existing signs there, he said. The sign may be green and white or white on brown, Wynn said. DOT determines whether the road is "oversigned," that is, cluttered with signs already, he said. If the historical district meets state criteria, the request is granted and DOT pays for and installs the sign, Wynn said.

Comet Brings New Australian Gold Rush

SYDNEY (UPI) — From Aborigines who fear it to futurists who believe man may be able to hitchhike between the planets on it next time around, tens of thousands of people are plunking down millions for front row seats to Halley's Comet.

Fleets of chartered jumbo jets will ferry thousands of Japanese amateur astronomers to Australia's vast, starry outback deserts. The Concorde supersonic jetliner will chase the comet in record-breaking 12-mile-high champagne flights.

And luxury cruise ships, one with American astronomer Carl Sagan aboard, will track the celestial visitor while playing the Tasman Sea from New Zealand to Australia.

But while space probes like Europe's Giotto are making dramatic discoveries with their close encounters, astronomers say the view of the every-76-years event from below may prove disappointing for those expecting a fireball with a spectacular tail streaking across the sky.

"It's never going to be spectacular at all," said British astronomer Mike Hawkins, who helped guide the Giotto spacecraft from the UK Schmidt telescope on Siding Springs Mountain southwest of Sydney.

"At best it will look like a long, dull fuzzy blur that is stationary. And it is getting dimmer all the time as it moves away from the sun," he said.

Scientists say the peak viewing date is April 11, when the comet will come closest to Earth — 39 million miles away.

The last time it can be seen with the naked eye is expected to be April 24 when there is the added bonus of a total eclipse of the moon. The two events together occur every 7,600 years.

While the Northern Hemisphere had the best view of the comet's 1910 return — when it was brighter and closer — the Southern Hemisphere takes honors this time around.

The best land views run along the Tropic of Capricorn, which runs through central Australia, Chile, Argentina, Paraguay and Brazil in South America and Namibia, Botswana, South Africa and Mozambique in Africa.

Many comet chasers began planning their trips to Australia as early as 1984 when the U.S.-based Sky and Telescope magazine reported that the finest vantage point of all would be Alice Springs, near the exact center of the country.

The remote desert town was given the nod because of its cloud-free skies, low pollution and distance from city lights.

But even closer to the comet's orbit is the outback hamlet of Barrow Creek, 150 miles north of Alice Springs. With a population of 11, the town boasts a single tavern, a gas station, a windmill and little else.

"We're booked solid in April — all seven rooms," said barkeeper Lance Pietsch. "Anyone else will have to roll out their swag (sleeping bag) on the floor."

Also challenging Alice Springs for the comet dollar is the Northern Territory gold mining center of Tennant Creek. Using the motto, "We're bigger than you think," the town of 3,200 plans to hire the local rainmaker, Chief Running Cloud, to bring down the heavens on Alice Springs when the comet is overhead.

Alice Springs is expecting 50,000 visitors in April, double its year-around population. Nearly all of the town's 1,300 hotel and motel rooms and 5,000 camper and trailer parking spots have been booked since late last year.

Another choice location is the even more remote Ayers Rock, an Aboriginal land seemingly in the middle of nowhere, which boasts the world's largest monolith among the kangaroos, emus and camels wandering the red-colored desert floor.

Some 300 miles southwest of Alice Springs, Ayers Rock features a new Sheraton resort which has set up a $70,000 mini-Halley's observatory with telescopes, binoculars, a small theater and astronomers to answer questions.

While tourists anxiously await the comet's full bloom, the native Aborigines who live near Ayers Rock fear the celestial visitor will bring bad luck, as it did in 1910.

The comet is represented in Aboriginal "Dreamtime" lore as a man traveling through the planets with a spear, vanquishing all in his path. Elders say when the comet came 76 years ago, it coincided with flooding and a plague of blindness in the Aboriginal community near the monolith.

The Japanese represent the largest single tourist group among the 20,000 foreign visitors expected to descend on Australia to snap up no fewer than 100 comet tour packages.

Two thousand Japanese astronomy buffs are setting up shop at Coonabarabran in the shadow of the Siding Springs Observatory in the Warrumbungle Range. They have rented one of the observatory's telescopes, have set up three of their own and are building a village at the edge of the town's golf course.

Japanese youngsters, meanwhile, will join rural Australian families while awaiting the comet and experience "fair dinkim Aussie tucker" (genuine Australian food) such as bacon and eggs and T-bone steaks.

Since the bane of comet watching will be city lights, entire towns have decided to black out street lights during prime viewing hours, including the Queensland capital Brisbane and parts of Sydney.

Some are anxious to see the comet a second time around.

Clem Hawke, 87, father of Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke, said when he saw the comet as a schoolboy in 1910, "it was amazing and unforgettable."

"I'll be excited about seeing it again but not as much as last time because 12-year-old boys get excited more easily than old men," he said.

Port Approves Settlement With Star Line Corp.

Star Line Corp., owners of the Star of Sanford, are to pay nearly $10,000 to the Seminole County Port Authority to end the company's five-year agreement to dock at Hidden Harbour Marina.

The port authority board of directors Wednesday unanimously approved a settlement with the Michigan-based firm, which has suspended operations of the cruise ship in Sanford.

To retire the docking agreement and avoid litigation with the port authority, Star Line will pay $9,639, which represents 10 percent of the remaining amount the company would have paid over the next 51 months. Port Authority Administrator Dennis Dolgner said.

Star Line paid an initial monthly dockage fee of $1,500, however that sum was slated to increase by 10 percent per year under what Dolgner described as an "accelerated lease" with the port authority.

Over the last nine months, the port authority has received $23,000 in revenues from the Star of Sanford, he said. That figure includes the approved settlement.

Dolgner, who negotiated the settlement with Star Line Corp. President Gary Priestap, said the options were to "equitably settle or take this into court."

However, both sides agreed it was "not prudent" to initiate a legal battle, but instead to "arbitrate a severance settlement which is fair to everyone."

Port Authority Attorney William Hutchison recommended the settlement as a way to "minimize the port's loss."

"If they were staying in Florida and were a going concern, I wouldn't support the 10 percent. But as far as anyone knows they will leave Florida," Hutchison said.

"It is cumbersome to face the continuing process of a lawsuit. (The port authority) would spend a wad of money trying to chase this."

The cruise ship is to leave for Michigan April 1, after being outfitted for ocean sailing, to become the Star of Charlevoix.

Port Authority board member David Lanier, however, had strong words for Star Line's decision to depart Sanford.

"We haven't been hurt financially but we were used to meet a business' objectives," Lanier said. "Some prominent business people in the community raised questions about the Star before it came here and those have come to fruition."

In the future, he urged the port authority to "keep our eyes and ears open to prospective tenants and what their intentions are

YMCA Groundbreaking Held; Fundraising Over The Top

Ground was broken for the new $500,000 Seminole County YMCA Friday in a noon ceremony. The 6,400 square foot building and swimming pool will be built on 7.7 acres of land off Longwood-Lake Mary Road, south of Greenwood Lakes Boulevard, near Lake Mary.

According to Jerry Haralson, general director of the central Florida YMCA, phase one of the facility will include offices and a reception area, lockers, toilets, showers, a multi-purpose room, an outdoor park, and parking. Later phase two will include a gymnasium, racquetball courts, and futher parking and site work.

Haralson appeared at Lake Mary's Thursday night city commission to inform commissioners of the ground-breaking, and showed artists renderings of the completed facility. Mayor Dick Fess presented Haralson with a check for $500 from longtime Lake Mary resident Samuel F. Pratt, to go toward the YMCA's public fundraising campaign for the facility.

In the YMCA's quest to raise the $500,000 needed, a contribution by General Homes of Lake Mary late Thursday put the organization over the goal, according to Scott Washburn, Seminole YMCA branch manager. He said funds are still needed to meet additional expenses.

More than 200 persons attended the groundbreaking a barbecue at the site.

with
Commissioner of Education
Ralph D. Turlington

Q: What is the state law with regard to search of student lockers? This situation has not arisen where my children go to school, but I have heard of it coming up at other schools in our county. Can I would like some information in case it does.

A: Florida Statutes, Chapter 232.256 "Search of Student Locker or Storage Area" addresses this issue. The first section of the law states that the legislature's findings on existing case law in Florida provides that relaxed standards of search and seizure apply under the State Constitution to searches of students' effects by school officials. The law notes both the special relationship between school officials and the school officials' standing in loco parentis to the students.

The second section of this law authorizes a principal of a public school or a school employee designated by the principal, "if he has reasonable suspicion that prohibited or illegally possessed substance or object is contained within a student's locker or other storage area," to search that locker or storage area.

The law requires that school boards will see to it that public notices be posted in each school, in a place readily seen by students, to let students know that their lockers or storage areas are subject to search, upon reasonable suspicion, for prohibited or illegally possessed substances or objects.

The final section of the law permits the use of metal detectors or specially trained animals in the course of a legally authorized search.

Q: How many microcomputers are currently in use in Florida's public schools?

A: The survey conducted annually by the Division of Public Schools' Education Information Services section revealed that for the current school year a total of 48,873 microcomputers are in use for student instruction. An additional 3,310 are being used by school districts for administrative purposes. In 1982 the state total for instructional use of micros was 6,310. This year's total represents an increase of 675 percent which shows the dramatic impact this new instructional technology has had on our state.

The survey indicates that the ratio of students per microcomputer has continued to decrease until, for the current school year, there is one micro for every 31. Next school year, Florida public schools will begin to include student performance standards for computer literacy in their instructional programs. Six general standards will be included in grades 3, 5, 8 and 11, with a total of 44 separate skills. Students will be tested on their skill achievement as a part of our statewide assessment program.

Phonathon Nears Goal

The UCF phonathon is in its final week and the fundraiser is not far from the $100,000 goal. With the help of 600 student and alumni volunteers, the program is within $29,000 of the final figure.

"We hope to complete around 5,000 calls overall. With one week to go, I feel confident that we will reach our goal," Pat Powers, coordinator of development and alumni relations said.

UCF started the phonathon in an effort to raise funds that will later be distributed to several departments around campus.

Former Iranian hostage Moorhead Kennedy will be at UCF April 1. Kennedy is a guest of the United Campus Ministry and will speak at 12 noon in the Student Center.

Kennedy will speak about issues of international understanding and peacemaking. He is a graduate of Princeton and Harvard law school and was on temporary assignment to the U.S. Embassy in Tehran when the take-over occurred.

The trial period for Touchtone registration is under way at UCF. Students who wish to attend any of the three summer sessions have the opportunity to register by phone.

seven performances of Cole Porter's play "Anything Goes." The first performance is set for 8 p.m., April 10, and will run the following two days and then continue the 17th-19th. Tickets are $8 and are available at the university.

The UCF baseball team set a school record of 14 consecutive wins in one season when the Knights downed St. Xavier Tuesday evening. UCF continues its vigorous schedule this week with six games. The Knights are 20-6.

Researcher: 'Binge-Purge' Common Among Teens

By Larry Doyle

CHICAGO (UPI) — A sizable number of American teenagers apparently believe that self-induced vomiting and the abuse of diuretics and laxatives are appropriate methods of weight control, researchers say.

A recent study at a northern California high school found that as many as 13 percent of 10th graders there practiced some form of "binge-purge" eating behavior. Girls who binged and purged outnumbered boys by a 2-to-1 margin, said the report today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Joel Killen, a psychologist at Stanford University, said the behavior did not generally constitute full-fledged eating disorders, but the findings point out the need to better educate adolescents about diet and nutrition.

"Binge eating and the various forms of purging behavior can cause serious medical complications," Killen said. In its most severe form, called bulimia, the behaviors can damage or ruin the entire digestive system, he said.

Bulimia involves a dangerous cycle of binge eating followed by fasting or some form of purging, including self-induced vomiting.

Vandals Deface Artifacts

BLUFF, Utah (UPI) — Vandals spray-painted a panel of historically important Indian paintings, parts of them up to 3,500 years old, and have destroyed an ancient dwelling site in southern Utah, officials said.

Bureau of Land Management Chief Ranger Dave Krouskop said Thursday investigators were uncertain how much of the petroglyph known as the Kachina Panel was destroyed by the orange paint. Parts of the panel date back 3,500 years, he said.

Krouskop said investigators found the orange paint in letters about three feet high on about 200 feet of the petroglyphs. He said the gist of the writing seemed to be: "River runners stay out," apparently referring to rafters on the San Juan River.

"We are investigating now," said Jack Reed, spokesman for the BLM in Salt Lake City. "We're trying to see if there is some way that maybe we can restore it or take away the spray paint."

"This is a world-class site," said John Noxon of the Native American Rock Art Research Associates of Logan. He said some 100 figures were on the wall, some of them 12 feet high.

The 1,000-year-old Anasazi ruin that was damaged, called River House Ruin, was under a cliff overhang about a mile downstream from the panel.

"This happens to be a structure that was damaged once before, and the BLM spent some money restore it," Reed said. "And now it's probably worse than it was before."

Reed said the vandalism was not done by looters searching for valuable pots and baskets that command high prices on the black market. "It's just vandalism... They were just destroying it," he said.

Anderson Emerges As Player Of Year

Lawson, Forsyth, Asplen, Patterson Complete First 5

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer
Catherine "Kitty" Anderson has been a starter for Seminole High's Lady Seminoles since her sophomore season. Despite being a quality player since the inception, the versatile 5-7 performer was overshadowed by such greats as Deldre Hillery and Mona Benton.

During the 1985-86 season, Anderson stepped out of the shadow and into the spotlight where she had an impressive season. Anderson was second in Seminole County in scoring with 20 points per game, fourth in the rebounding with 10 per outing and tied for second in steals at 3.9 per game.

After a relatively slow start when she was hampered by an ankle sprain, Anderson came alive in the late going of the season and in one two-week stretch averaged 25 points per game including a season-high of 31 against Spruce Creek.

High, Anderson was selected the 1985-86 Evening Herald Seminole County Player of the Year.

"She definitely deserved it," Seminole coach Charles Steele said Friday. "She had a great year with statistics and she did a good job of leading our younger players. She made our season a lot better than it would have been."

The Lady Seminoles finished with an 18-8 record. They finished second to Lake Mary in the Class 4A-9 District Tournament and lost in the Class 4A-5 Regional Tournament to Winter Park.

The All-County team was voted for by the six county coaches along with Evening Herald sports writer Chris Fister. Anderson was also honored as an All-Seminole Athletic Conference First Team selection and the Burger King Player of the Year.

Anderson was joined on the Evening Herald First Team by Lake Brantley's Sherry "Ice" Asplen and Lake Mary's Tonya Lawson at the guard spots. Lake Mary's Cynthia Patterson at the other forward position and Lyman's Kim Forsyth at center. The team was selected by position — two guards, two forwards and a center. Asplen, a senior, led the Lady Patriots in scoring (15.4), assists (4.3), steals (3.2) and free throw shooting (72 percent). "Ice" had a career-high 26 points in a victory over Apopka and scored 20 or more points on six occasions. Asplen played varsity for four years at Lake Brantley.

SEC Teams Dominate 'The Road'

United Press International
The road to Dallas goes through the heart of the Southeastern Conference Saturday.

Louisville will be the only non-SEC school in action when the first two regional finals of the NCAA Tournament are played at Atlanta and Houston. The Cardinals will face Auburn, and Kentucky meets Louisiana State.

Friday, at East Rutherford, N.J., David Robinson banked in an 8-foot jumper with five seconds remaining to give Navy a 71-70 victory over Cleveland State; and Johnny Dawkins scored 25 points and No. 1 Duke ended DePaul's startling postseason revival, defeating the Blue Demons 74-67 in the semifinals of the East Regional.

At Kansas City, Mo., Charles Shackleford scored a season-high 22 points and Chris Washburn added 20 to lift North Carolina State to a 70-66 victory over Iowa State; and Calvin Thompson scored 8 of his 26 points in overtime to carry No. 2 Kansas from the brink of elimination to a 96-86 victory over No. 18 Michigan State.

"They are better than we are," Auburn coach Sonny Smith said. "Some people might think Louisville has pressure on them because they are the favorites. But when you are playing as good as they are, you don't feel pressure."

Louisville has been in 18 previous NCAA Tournaments and are 6-0 in regional finals. This is only the third trip to the NAAs for the Tigers, and their first to the regional finals.

To reach the Final Four, Kentucky will have to travel a familiar route. The Wildcats defeated Alabama for the fourth time this season to reach the regional final and will have to beat LSU for a fourth time as well to move on to Dallas.

"It's just like Alabama," Kentucky guard Roger Harden said. "We pretty much know what they are going to do and they know about us. It's going to come down to who plays best Saturday afternoon."

The Wildcats beat the Tigers 54-52 at Baton Rouge, La., on Jan. 29; 68-57 at Lexington, Ky., on March 1; and 61-58 at Lexington on March 7 in the SEC Tournament semifinals.

"There'll be no surprises," LSU coach Dale Brown said. "If you are surprised now, you are sleeping at the wheel."

Auburn, 22-10, eliminated Nevada-Las Vegas 70-63 Thursday night; and Louisville, 29-7, knocked off North Carolina 94-79. Kentucky, 32-3, defeated Alabama 68-63, and Louisiana State, 25-11, ousted Georgia 70-64.

Eric Martinez dives headlong for a foul popup. Martinez rallied alive with a base hit as Lake Howell upended Lake Mary to hand the top-ranked Rams their first loss.

Wagner 1-Hits Lake Mary Lake Howell Strangles Rams' Victory Streak At 16

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor
CASSELBERRY — Lake Howell's Craig Wagner didn't just stop Lake Mary's 16-game winning streak Friday afternoon — he strangled it. Wagner, an unusual athletic combination of defensive tackle on the football field and righthanded pitcher on the diamond, hurled no-hit ball for 4½ innings before settling for a one-hitter as Lake Howell blanked the Rams, 4-0, before 75 fans in Seminole Athletic Conference baseball at Lake Howell High School.

Wagner's gem severed the state's longest winning streak at 16 games and will probably knock Lake Mary from the No. 1 ranking in the Florida Sports Writers

Baseball

Association Class 4A Prep Poll.

"You knew it was going to happen sooner or later," Lake Mary coach Allen Tuttle said about his team's first setback. "You just don't go undefeated in baseball."

Lake Howell won for the sixth consecutive game and improved to 11-5 overall and 3-1 in the SAC. Coach Birto Benjamin's Silver Hawks return to action Monday at 4 p.m. in the Greater Greyhound Invitational at Lyman against Lake Brantley. Lake Mary, which fell to 2-1 in the SAC, takes on Apopka at Apopka Saturday night at 7:30 p.m.

Making Wagner's near no-hitter that much more impressive was the fact that Lake Mary shelled him in the first meeting between the two teams in the season opener Feb. 10.

"They got 10 runs off me and I got knocked out in the second inning," Wagner, a hulking 6-2, 230-pounder, said. "I threw too many fastballs that day. Today, I threw more breaking pitching."

"It was a nice payback."
Wagner (2-2) struck out seven. Five of those whiffs were called, attesting to Lake Mary's puzzlement. He retired the first seven batters before walking Billy Jenkins with one out in the third. He came back, however, to catch Matt Messina looking at a called third strike before walking Shane Letterio. Wagner caught Kelly Hysell looking for the third out.

"The bats were a little cool today," Tuttle understated. "Wagner was just wild enough to keep us off balance but when he had to bring it in there, he did."

Lake Mary, which hit just three balls hard all day, mounted another threat in the fourth when Mike Pinckes walked and one out later Ryan Lisle reached when Damon Mariette dropped a fly ball in center field.

Wagner, nevertheless, got dangerous Brett Molle on a check swing popup for the second out and when Neal Harris lined to shortstop Dave Martin, he was out of his only serious situation all day.

Letterio broke up the no-hitter with a clean single between shortstop and third with two outs in the fifth inning. "I knew I had a no-hitter in the third or fourth inning," Wagner said. "My mind blew when he (Letterio) got the hit but I was mainly concerned about the win. I just went after the shutout."

Lake Howell gave Wagner all the runs he would need against loser Harris (3-1) in the second. Mariette, who led the Hawks with a pair of singles, slapped a base hit to left and one out later, red-hot Eric Martinez did the same. Sophomore Chris Norton followed with a single through the right side to score Mariette and send Martinez to third. Harris wild pitched home Martinez one batter later for a 2-0 lead.

The Silver Hawks picked up two unearned runs in the fourth. A low throw by Letterio allowed Norton to reach second base. Harris then retired Mark Schnitker on a popup and Tom Boucher on a groundout. Boucher had singles in his other two at-bats.

Martin, whose steady influence since taking over at shortstop started the Howell win streak, roped a clutch double just out of Molle's diving grasp in center field to score Norton.

Ernest Martinez followed with another double to right center to chase home Martin for a 4-0 edge.

Wagner finished with a flourish as he retired the last seven batters he faced. Right fielder Schnitker made a fine running catch for the first out in the seventh and first baseman Eric Martinez scooped a low throw for the final out.

"Craig's curveball was awesome," Lake Howell catcher Taubensee said. "That was the difference today. He was mixing his pitches. They were really guessing wrong."

Bowers Almost Perfect Late Infield Hit Interrupts Gem

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer
OVIEDO — Although it won't go down in the record book that way, you can't get much more perfect than Oviedo High's Scott Bowers was Friday afternoon. The only blemish on what was a masterfully pitched ballgame by the junior righthander was a seventh-inning infield single by Steve Klein.

But that infield dribbler that went for a hit did not diminish the best game Bowers has pitched in his prep career. Bowers retired the first 18 hitters in order before Klein's hit, then retired the last three for a one-hit shutout as Oviedo's Lions, ranked fifth in the state (3A), blanked Bishop Moore's Hornets, 3-0, in Orange Belt Conference play at Oviedo High.

The Lions ran their overall record to 8-1 and avenged their only loss of the season. Oviedo now stands at 3-1 in the OBC.

The Lions return to action Monday night at 7:30 against Lyman in the Lyman Greater Greyhound Invitational. Craig Duncan will be on the mound for Oviedo.

Keeping the ball low was the key for Bowers Friday as none of the Bishop Moore batters hit the ball in the air. Bowers threw just 77 pitches in the game, struck out 10 and got the other 11 batters out on infield grounders.

"My curve and slider were working really well for me," Bowers said. "The perfect game was in the back of my mind, but first I wanted to help the team beat Bishop Moore. They're one of our major rivals and we really wanted this game after what happened last time."

The past two years, Oviedo and Bishop Moore have been famous for controversial games. Last year, Oviedo was on the verge of making a comeback victory when the game was called on account of darkness and Bishop Moore won. The same thing occurred this season at Bishop Moore High when a late Oviedo rally was cut short when the umpire called the game.

The way Bowers and Bishop Moore's Tom Avant were pitching, though, there was no question the game would get in on time Friday. In fact, it took less than an hour and a half to complete.

"It was by far the best game Scott (Bowers) has pitched."

Ex-Seminole Carter Wins Special Teams Honor At Sioux Falls

A couple of football players — former Seminole High defensive back Butch Carter and Lake Mary High senior Shannon Porter — are in the news again.

Carter, a senior linebacker for NAIA's Division II Sioux Falls Cougars, was named the top Special Teams performer. Carter, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willy Carter of Sanford, was also an honorable mention all-conference choice.

Carter had 63 tackles and one interception. He is majoring in criminal justice.

Sanford's Mike DeRose, Tracy Holloman, Johnnie "Bull" Littles and Mike Futrell along with Steve Inanan from Lake Howell helped the Cougars to a 6-3-1 record and second place in the South Dakota Intercollegiate Conference.

The Cougars were ranked No. 1 nationally in passing defense as they allowed just 92.8 yards per game and five touchdown passes.

Porter, meanwhile, will walk on at the University of Central Florida where he was accepted last week. He was a two-year defensive standout for coach Harry Nelson's Rams. This past year they won the conference, district and region.

The 6-0, 200-pounder led all down linemen in sacks last year and was the top defensive end vote getter on the Evening Herald's All-County First Team. Porter said he will major in computer engineering.

Last call for the Aretha Riggs Benefit at Sanford's Allen Chapel at 1203 Olive Ave. The fund-raiser is Saturday night at 7.

Money will go for Aretha's hospital bills to pay for treatment of Landry-Guillain-Barre Syndrome, which she was stricken with last January.

Call 323-9212 for further information. Eartha Melton, Juanita Redding and Tiny Johnson are heading up the benefit.

Russ Whittington and Joe Cotroneo, two baseball coaches who date back to the Stengel era, have become the third and fourth inductees in the Altamonte Little League Hall of Fame. Both were admitted on Opening Day.

Whittington was the first manager to guide a team into state tournament competition. His Junior League All-Star entry of several years ago finished second in the state. He was capably assisted by Rod Metz Sr.

Cotroneo has been turning out winners in the Senior League the past two years. Whittington was nominated by Altamonte Springs Recreation Director Bill James while former Altamonte Little League President John Strott championed Cotroneo's cause.

"Well, at least the inductees are getting better," James quipped. "They had to alter the first two."

The first two — Bill James and Don Crawford.

The Oviedo High School Boosters Club elected Hal King as its '86 president. Other officers include Charles McCurdy (first vice president), Buzz Clark (second vice president), Virginia Osborn (secretary) and Bev Cox (treasurer).

King appointed the following to committees: Dick Leigh (athletic program), Bev Cox (budget), Loren King (telephone) and Sheron Neeley (public relations).

King said the boosters are proud of the renovation of the baseball field, which has included a new fence, warning track, advertiser signs and other facilities. "It's really one of the best facilities around now," King said.

Coach Howard Mable's Lions have benefited, too. They are 7-1 and ranked No. 5 in the Class 3A Florida Sports Writers Prep Baseball Poll.

Chuck McMullan is big enough that you don't want him mad at you. It was incorrectly reported Thursday that Carl Lee hit a three-run homer as Hants USA outslugged Ads in Sanford Men's Spring Softball League play.

McMullan rocked a two-run homer to tie the game and Lee followed with a solo shot to win it.

The men's league plays Monday and Wednesday nights at Pinehurst Field on 24th Street just west of U.S. Highway 17-92. It's a good chance to see some of Seminole High's ex-sluggers swing the bat. A lot of them still swing it pretty well.

Speaking of swinging the bat, Andres Galarraga is not. The slumping Montreal rookie first baseman-outfielder is 0 for 18 this spring. He struck out twice with runners in scoring position Wednesday.

"We have to get some homers out of him if we're going to win the N.L. East," Tim Lincecum said about the powerful rookie. "He's got good power he's just having trouble making contact right now."

Florida State's first two football games have been moved up one week. The Seminoles game at Nebraska was moved from Sept. 13 to Sept. 6 to accommodate television. Florida State's home opener against Toledo was moved from Sept. 6 to Aug. 30.

Television, Gator fans, is an invention which allows one to watch a football game without being at the stadium. No, it's not regulated by the NCAA. Well, not directly anyway.

Bryan Maley scattered six hits while Jeff Greene and Kevin Hill continued to tear the cover off the ball as the Seminole Community College Raiders dropped hapless Lake City, 7-2, in Mid-Florida Conference baseball Friday at SCC.

The victory was the seventh in a row for coach Jack Pantelias' streaking Raiders. SCC, 15-10 overall and 4-2 in the MFC, travels to Jacksonville to battle Florida Junior Saturday. It hosts Long Island University for a double-header beginning at noon on Sunday. Lake City fell to 0-9 and 0-23.

Jeff Morgan walked and Johnny Moore walked to load the bases before a Rick Given fly ball to right field was dropped. Lake City regrouped to get the fielder's choice force out at second but Greene scored for a 2-0 lead.

Leonard Thigpen followed with a fly ball to center, which was also dropped, for two more runs. Hill singled home in Thigpen for a 5-0 bulge.

In the second, Mike Songini walked and Greene singled him to third. Morgan followed with a sacrifice fly to center for one run. Moore singled and Greene, who was running with the pitch, scored all the way from first base.

In the fourth, Greene doubled, Morgan walked and both moved up on a wild pitch. Given's groundout chase home the final Raider run.

Hill, a Lake Mary High grad who had two home runs earlier this week, rapped a trio of singles and drove in three runs.

Greene had a pair of singles and a double. Sims doubled and singled for one ribbie. Tico Martinez added two base hits.

Overstreet, Brock Propel Lyman Past Lake Brantley

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — Byron Overstreet tossed a one-hitter while Chris Brock scored three runs and played flawlessly in the field as Lyman's Greyhounds turned back Lake Brantley, 7-2, in Seminole Athletic Conference baseball Friday night before 65 fans at Lyman High School.

The victory inched the Greyhounds to one game below the .500 mark (6-7). Lyman is 1-2 in the SAC. Lake Brantley fell to 4-10 and 0-4.

Lyman will send Bill Henley against Oviedo Monday night at 7:30 in the Greater Greyhound Invitational. Lake Brantley returns to action Saturday night at home against Orange Park.

Overstreet, whose earned run average is 0.95, didn't hurt himself much by allowing just one earned run. Both Lake Brantley runs were scored without a hit in the third and fifth innings.

The senior righthander struck out seven and walked six. He got the county's leading home run hitter (6), Mike Beams, twice via strikeouts.

He struck him (Beams) out with fastballs," catcher John Burton said. "We set him up with the surge and then came in with the fastball."

Beams personally accounted for Brantley's first run in the third when he walked, stole second, went to third when catcher John Burton's throw went into center field and came home when Darren Boyesen couldn't come up with the ball in the outfield.

Overstreet gave up his first hit an inning later when Mike Davis crunched a leadoff single cleanly up the middle. Brantley got its other run when Overstreet walked the bases full in the fifth and then passed Davis for the run.

Lyman, though, had the game under control by then, scoring three runs in the first, three more in the third and one more in the fifth. Six Lake Brantley errors contributed to the cause.

"I could challenge the hitters more when I got the lead," Overstreet said. "It was nice to get those runs in the first."

Boyesen led off the first with a single and Overstreet followed with a base hit in the hole. Shortstop Andy Dunn made a nice diving stop but when he got he to throw, he tossed it past first base, allowing the runners to move up.

Brock followed with a line double to left but the runners had to hold up and only Boyesen could score. Burton then took loser Pat Lusk deep into the left field corner for a sacrifice fly, scoring Overstreet and sending Brock to third. Henley then beat out an infield hit to plate Brock for the 3-0 edge.

In the third, Overstreet walked and stole second before Brock beat out an infield hit. Henley followed with a fly ball to left center which went through Beams' hands to load the bases. Freshman Chris Radcliff chased home Brock with a fielder's choice and John Bane reached on an error by third baseman Mark "Pork" Coffey to score Brock.

Dale Stevens singled in the third run but Beams gunned down Bane with a perfect throw to retire the side.

Byron Overstreet

Chris Brock

In the fifth, Brock reached second on Lusk's throwing error, moved to third when Burton reached on another error by Dunn and scored when Henley grounded into a double play.

Brock also made all the plays defensively at shortstop for Lyman, quite a turnaround from his earlier performances as he handled all five chances that came his way.

"I'm feeling more comfortable at shortstop," the converted outfielder said. "I think I'm getting more used to it. This was my best game defensively."

McCullough, who said he knows Brock is a good outfielder, said the same can be true of him at shortstop. "It just takes time," McCullough said about his gifted sophomore. "Chris is a good enough ball player that he can play any position on the field if you need him to."

"Shortstop is a tough position to play but he can become a good one. He got down on himself earlier in the year because of mistakes. He's leaning to shake them off. He looked a lot more settled tonight."

Brock led the 'Hounds with two hits while Stevens also had two. Stevens turned in the defensive gem when he speared a sharply hit grounder to his left and wheeled to throw out the runner.

Peete, Faldo Outplay Wind For First-Round Lead

Golf

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A nagging north wind and a near-freezing wind chill factor helped early finishers Calvin Peete and Nick Faldo move to a first-round lead at the $500,000 USF&G Classic.

Peete and Faldo each fired a 4-under-par 68 and moved into the clubhouse at Lakewood Country Club as winds whipped up to 10 to 25 mph and temperatures lowered to near freezing with the wind chill.

"It was a terrible day as far as the temperature and the wind is concerned," Peete said. "Anywhere you hit it (the ball) you're going to get into the wind."

Tom Watson, who finished at 71, said the temperatures made play uncomfortable and winds made shooting grueling.

"I think it (strong north winds) makes the course play about two shots tougher," he said. "It was a hard day to play all day. You play some of the toughest holes into the wind."

Faldo, 28, said he had been working to improve his swing.

"It's come along nicely," he said.

"Now I'm just sort of fine-tuning it." Peete and Faldo both went to 5-under-par during the first round, but bogeyed their final holes. Faldo has not won a PGA title since the 1984 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

Peete, ranked fourth on the PGA's 1986 money winners list, made $90,000 for his winning effort in the MONY Tournament of Champions and finished behind winner Hal Sutton in the Phoenix Open this year.

Californian Pat McGowan finished a stroke behind the leaders at 69. Mike Reid, Kenny Knox, Lon Hinkle and Chris Perry were another stroke back.

Jack Nicklaus, the USF&G champion in 1973, withdrew from the tournament because of the death of his mother-in-law.

Defending champion Seve Ballesteros posted a disappointing 3-over 75 in the first round, which was postponed for a day because 2.7 inches of rain fell Wednesday and Thursday left fairways on the 7,080-yard course flooded.

The greens and fairways were in good condition for the start of the first round. PGA spokesman Tom Place said the field would be cut in half today, with the low 60 scorers and ties through 36 holes advancing to the final 36 holes Sunday.

The low 70 scorers and ties through 36 holes all will receive normal prize money.

BRADLEY TAKES CHARGE

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — LPGA Tour veteran Pat Bradley is known for her charging finishes, so it is understandable that other golfers are concerned when she takes a commanding lead.

"Pat is getting too far ahead," said Myra Blackwelder, who is tied for second place six strokes behind Bradley after two rounds of the $200,000 Tucson LPGA Open.

Bradley fired a 4-under-par 68 Friday to pull away with a two-round total of 11-under-par 133. Jerilyn Britz joined Blackwelder at 139.

Of Bradley's 16 LPGA victories, she led wire-to-wire only once.

Although Blackwelder is concerned about the possibility of a runaway for Bradley, she added that "a big lead is also a lot of pressure."

Bradley agreed when asked if she can relax.

"Are you kidding me? I can't believe you said that. There are still a lot of birds out there," she said.

Bradley made one bogey for the second straight round in spite of gusting, swirling winds of more than 20 mph.

"I didn't play as well as I did yesterday, but my putter was still hot," she said. "It saved me twice on the back nine with 20-footers."

The putts Bradley spoke of saved par on the par-4 14th and par-5 16th holes. She had hit her drive into the water on No. 16, but scrambled to make par.

"The back side played so much tougher because of that swirling wind," she said. "It really became a guessing game."

Bradley is currently third on this year's LPGA money list with $68,391. First prize at Tucson is $30,000.

Britz said she was happy with "a really steady, bogey-less round."

"I haven't had one of those for a while," she said. "That's important for me, because I'm one of those fluctuators — up and down."

The first-round runner-up, Sherri Turner, shot 72 to remain at 4-under with a 140. Judy Dickenson and Anne-Marie Palli are also at 140.

A total of 77 golfers survived the cut of 5-over 149 at the Randolph Park North Course.

White Sox, Royals Trade Brushbacks In Spring Training Fling

United Press International

With over two weeks to go before the victories count, the Kansas City Royals and Chicago White Sox displayed some fire in a game neither squad won.

Rookie home plate umpire Del Scott ejected Kansas City pitcher David Cone after one pitch in the 10th inning Friday, ending a controversial 1-1 game. Cone was ejected after his pitch sailed to the screen over the head of Russ Morman.

In the ninth, after White Sox pitcher Bill Long threw two inside pitches to Steve Balboni, umpire Dan Morrison warned both managers the next pitcher to throw close to a batter would be ejected.

Kansas City pitcher Scott Bankhead hit the White Sox's Carlton Fisk on his left wrist with a pitch in the seventh inning.

Following Cone's ejection, the Royals were out of available pitchers and the game was called, resulting in the tie.

Willie Wilson, who had two doubles and a single, scored the Kansas City run in the fourth inning. Wilson doubled, and advanced on singles by Hal McRae and Frank White.

The White Sox tied the score in the ninth off reliever Dan Quisenberry. Quisenberry walked John Cangelosi, who stole two bases and scored on Ken Williams' sacrifice fly.

After the game, the Royals sent outfielder Gary Thurman to their minor league complex at Sarasota, Fla. The move left 42 players in Royals camp.

At Winter Haven, Fla., Roy Smalley hit a grand slam off Roger Clemens, and three Minnesota pitchers combined on a five-hitter to lift the Twins to an 8-1 exhibition victory over the Boston Red Sox.

At Tampa, Fla., Jim Clancy allowed two hits in five innings and combined with three other Toronto pitchers on a three-hitter to lead the Blue Jays to a 3-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

At Bradenton, Fla., Junior Ortiz drove in four runs and scored four to spark the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 13-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Jim Morrison went 4-for-4 and scored three runs. Teammates R.J. Reynolds, Joe Orsulak, Barry Bonds and Sammy Khalifa chipped in with two hits each as the Pirates collected 17 hits off five Detroit pitchers.

At Clearwater, Fla., a three-run homer by first baseman Mike Houtt in the 11th gave the Montreal Expos a 7-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies. The home run, on an 0-2 pitch, followed consecutive walks to Al Newman and Wallace Johnson issued by losing pitcher Don Carman.

At Pompano Beach, Fla., a two-run double by Duane Walker started a six-run fourth inning and led the Texas Rangers to a 10-3 split-squad exhibition victory over the New York Yankees.

At Tempe, Ariz., Jeff Leonard's sun-aided double in the eighth set up the winning run.

giving the San Francisco Giants a 5-3 Cactus League victory over the Seattle Mariners.

At Phoenix, Jim Wilson and Tony Bernazard each drove in three runs, leading the Cleveland Indians to an 18-6 Cactus League victory over the Oakland A's.

At Palm Springs, Calif., Dick Schofield's fourth hit of the game, a bases-loaded single with one out in the 10th, gave the California Angels a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Bobby Castillo walked Glenn Hubbard with two men out and the bases loaded, forcing home Bob Horner and giving the Atlanta Braves a 5-4 victory.

HOWE LATCHES ON WITH CLASS A TEAM

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Steve Howe, whose promising major league career was scuttled by drug addiction, returned to professional baseball Friday, signing a contract with the San Jose Bees of the California Class A League.

The signing of Howe, who agreed to a mandatory drug-testing clause, gave Bees' owner Harry Steve one of the more unique lineups in minor league baseball. The club has also signed Mike Norris, Kenny Reitz and Derrel Thomas, all former major leaguers who have had drug problems.

A Bees spokesman said Norris was slated to pitch the Bees' opener April 11 and Howe, 28, was a probable starter for April 13 even though he was used exclusively as a reliever in the major leagues.

Robinson's 8-Footer Lifts Navy's Sails, 71-70

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — David Robinson recovered from passivity in time to be a hero and No. 1 Duke responded to its first strong challenge in the NCAA Tournament to advance to the East Regional final.

Robinson, the 6-foot-11 Navy center, hit an 8-foot jumper with five seconds remaining Friday night to give the Midshipmen a 71-70 victory over Cleveland State. The triumph set up a meeting Sunday against the Blue Devils, who choked off a second-half challenge by DePaul to take a 74-67 decision.

Robinson, the nation's top rebounder and shot-blocker, picked up his third foul before halftime and chastised himself for not being assertive in the second half.

"I was out of the game. I couldn't be too aggressive and I got lazy on defense. I was just absent," said the junior, who scored 22 points, grabbed 14 rebounds and blocked 9 shots.

Basketball

With Navy trailing 70-69 with eight seconds to play, Kaylor Whitaker lobbed an inbounds pass to Robinson in the lane and the center hit the winning shot. At the buzzer, the Vikings' Clinton Smith attempted a 22-foot shot that bounced off the rim.

"Robinson is a great one," Cleveland State coach Kevin Mackey said. "He is a superstar, there is no question about it. He is the best guy in the country and would be the number one pick in the (NBA) draft."

With their 16th consecutive triumph, the Midshipmen, 30-4, advance to within one victory of the Final Four.

Whitaker added 23 points and Vernon Butler contributed 18.

Navy led by as many as 11 points before intermission, but the Vikings' pressure defense disrupted the Midshipmen. An 8-0 Cleveland State run provided a 60-55 advantage and the Vikings led for most of the remaining 7:08.

Cleveland State, which finished at 29-4 and had its 14-game winning streak halted, was led by Smith and Ken McFadden with 16 points each.

Navy coach Paul Evans said of his team, "When we play well, we can play with anyone in the country." The Midshipmen will have the chance to prove this against Duke, 35-2, which won its 19th consecutive game despite shooting only 41 percent from the floor.

"We showed a lot of poise because of our maturity," said Duke's Johnny Dawkins, who scored 25 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, "so sometimes you win when you're not shooting so well."

Duke compensated for its inaccuracy by outrebounding DePaul 45-27, despite the superior size of the Blue Demons' frontcourt.

"We haven't played a big team like this in a while," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "And it caused us trouble in the first half."

DePaul drew within 65-59 with 4:04 remaining, but an 8-0 Duke run put the game away.

The Blue Demons, 18-13, who in recent years had trouble escaping the NCAA first round, did unexpectedly well this season.

The Blue Demons were led by Rod Strickland with 15 points and Marty Embry with 12. Mark Alarie scored 21 for Duke.

As for Sunday's game against surprising Navy and the much-heralded Robinson, Krzyzewski said: "I have three daughters, and I read them bedtime stories. But I never knew that Cinderella was seven feet tall and blocked 200 shots in a season."

Haycock Joins Soccer School

Nick Haycock, a professional soccer coach from England, has been added to the coaching staff of the Seminole Soccer School this summer at Lake Mary High, announced camp director Larry McCorkle.

Haycock is employed by the Watford FC (owner Elton John) and performs a variety of duties from coaching to critiquing professional matches to assessing professional talent. Haycock, who earned the coveted Football Association coaching badge, trained McCorkle's Lake Mary team last summer in England.

Haycock will join nationally licensed coaches McCorkle (Lake Mary High) and Dave Fall (Bishop Moore), Mike Fall, currently playing professional soccer with the AISA (American Indoor Soccer Association) Louisville Thunder. Joe Bartlinski, former All-State goalkeeper from Bishop Moore, rounds out the camp staff.

The Seminole Soccer School will train individuals and/or teams from ages 6-16. Boys and girls will receive training both indoors and outdoors. Cost is $72 per week.

The four weeks are: June 23-27 (under 8s and under 10s), July 7-11 (under 8s and under 10s), July 14-18 (under 10s and under 12s) and July 21-25 (under 12s, under 14s and under 16s).

For more information, contact McCorkle at Lake Mary High at 323-2110 (ext. 221). Or call Patti Roy at 339-4075.

LSU Women Eye NCAA Upset

Second-seeded Louisiana State will try to snap a seven-game losing streak to Tennessee when the Southeastern Conference rivals meet in the NCAA Midwest Regional women's tournament final Saturday.

The Lady Tigers, 27-5, and the Lady Volunteers, 23-9, are one step away from the Final Four March 28 and 30 at Lexington, Ky. Tennessee made the tournament's round of eight remaining teams by upsetting Georgia 85-82 while LSU squeaked by Ohio State 81-80 in Thursday night's semifinals.

Also Saturday, it will be: Louisiana Tech, 27-4, vs. Southern California, 29-4, at Long Beach, Calif.; Mississippi, 24-7, vs. Texas, 31-0, at Austin, Texas; and Western Kentucky, 31-3, vs. Rutgers, 29-3, at Philadelphia.

In other games Thursday, it was: Rutgers 85, Penn State 72; and Western Kentucky 72, James Madison 51 in the Eastern Regional semifinals; Texas 85, Oklahoma 59; and Mississippi 56, Auburn 55 in overtime in the Midwest Regional; and Louisiana Tech 71, Long Beach 69; and Southern Cal 84, North Carolina 70 in the Western Regional.

Miller, Buckeyes Win Again

Ohio State coach Eldon Miller keeps postponing his trip to Northern Iowa, and that's fine with him.

As soon as Ohio State's season ends, Miller will be headed for a new job as coach of Northern Iowa. Ohio State refuses to end its season, though.

Dennis Hopson scored 16 points and Brad Sellers hit for 15 Friday to lead Ohio State to a 79-68 victory over Brigham Young in a National Invitation Tournament quarterfinal at Columbus, Ohio.

The Buckeyes, 17-14, will play Louisiana Tech Monday night in one semifinal at New York's Madison Square Garden. Florida will meet Wyoming in the other semifinal. Brigham Young finished at 18-14.

Malfunctioned Clock Mars Kansas Victory Over Michigan State

Basketball

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A series of unexpected events produced an expected conclusion in the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinal between Kansas and Michigan State — the No. 2 Jayhawks advancing to the regional championship.

Kansas extended its winning streak to 15 games with a controversial 98-86 overtime victory over No. 18 Michigan State Friday night to reach a regional title game Sunday against North Carolina State. The Wolfpack moved on with a 80-68 decision over Iowa State.

Heading the list of unexpected events was the failure of the game clock to run for 11 seconds after Vernon Carr sank a free throw to increase Michigan State's lead to 76-72 with 2:21 to play in regulation.

Kansas rebounded the ball and Ron Kellogg scored a short time later on an offensive rebound. The overhead game clock showed 2:20 remained, but the regional's computerized statistics crew, which uses its own clock, showed the basket coming with 2:09 left.

The 11 seconds were critical because Marshall hit a follow shot to send the game into overtime with 10 seconds left.

"The sad thing was that the clock malfunctioned," Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said. "If the 10 seconds had run off, the game would have been over before they would have had the chance to tie it. The officials refused to discuss it. There was no explanation at all. To have a clock malfunction in an NCAA game is extremely disappointing."

Dick Schultz, a member of the NCAA Basketball Committee in attendance at the game, said nothing could be done after-the-fact to rectify the error.

"The clock operator (Larry Bates) was not aware that the clock had malfunctioned," Schultz said, "so he did not notify the officials. According to the rules, time cannot be added or subtracted from the clock unless the amount of time gained or lost is precisely known by the officials or the clock operator."

and collected 14 rebounds, scored 13 of Navy's final 17 points, and finished with 23 points.

Cleveland State, which finished the season at 29-4 and had its 14-game winning streak halted, was led by Clinton Smith and Ken McFadden with 16 points each.

SPORTS FANS!
I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought to you By Ken Rummel
Do you know when the first NCAA championship basketball tournament was held, and who won it? First one was staged in 1939, and the first school to win it was the University of Oregon.

Here's a sports fact that's hard to believe...but it's true...A college basketball team once refused to play in the NCAA basketball tournament for the national championship...What team did it? Answer is Marquette, in 1974...Marquette rejected the NCAA tournament because their coach, Al McGuire, was unhappy with the regional playoff in which his team was placed, so they gave up any chance to win the national championship that year.

Here's one of the most amazing basketball records of all-time...Wilt Chamberlain, who played in over 1,000 pro basketball games in his career, NEVER fouled out of a game!...That seems hard to believe...but it's a fact that Wilt never fouled out in any game in any of his 14 seasons in pro basketball!

I bet you didn't know...that Ken Rummel Chevrolet has a fine selection of new cars and trucks and OK used cars & trucks. Our service department is fully staffed with factory trained technicians and ready to serve you.
No appointment necessary!

International Adoption

He Just Came Up A Different Exit Ramp, That's All

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Six-month-old Brandon Cook entered the lives and hearts of his Sanford family through "a different exit ramp" when, on Feb. 13, his new adoptive parents, Larry and Martha Cook, and new sister Lauren picked him up at the airport where he had arrived from his Korean homeland.

Mrs. Cook said it was an emotional moment when Dr. Lorraine Boiselle, executive director of the Winter Park-based Children's Services International, Inc., brought Brandon from the plane to his adoptive parents. The organization arranges the adoption of Indian, South American and Korean children, as well as of local youngsters.

"When Lorraine carried him off the plane, she was walking up the ramp and I could see him," Mrs. Cook said. "I was having all the same feelings I had when I birthed Lauren, all the tears, emotion coming up. Larry was crying and it was like giving birth. He just came up a different exit ramp, that's all."

"It was very, very similar and the bonding was similar. We sat and looked at each other for long periods of time."

The warnings of other adoptive parents of foreign children that Brandon might not want to come to them, that he might scream because he had never before seen a blue-eyed blonde like Mrs. Cook or a man with a beard like Mr. Cook, didn't apply.

"He smiled and came right to us," Mrs. Cook said. "All of my anxieties were relieved. He acted like we were his parents from the time he got off the plane."

Although the Cooks had two-year-old Lauren, they found there was a fertility problem when they wanted to add to their family. They decided to adopt and stuck with that decision, Mrs. Cook said, even though while waiting for Brandon they found a solution to their fertility problem.

They knew they wanted a son, Cook said, and

Mrs. Cook added, "We wanted a baby. We really didn't care where the baby came from."

They went to an orientation session for Children's Services International and "fell in love" with the Korean-American children they met there, she said.

The process that brought Brandon, who was born to an unwed mother on Sept. 20, was quick. Typically, Dr. Boiselle said, her agency matches children with new parents within one year of application, unlike some agencies that have a two-to five-year wait with little hope of offering an infant to the parents. The cost of the adoption varies, depending on the nationality of the child, because the new parents have to pay travel costs as well as medical and other expenses. The cost to the Cooks for bringing Brandon into their family was about $5,000, Mrs. Cook said.

They applied for a son in September and by December had received Brandon's photograph. Because they already had a daughter, they were able to specify the choice of a son, but Dr. Boiselle said that would-be parents who don't already have a child have no choice in the adopted child's sex. They can, however, select the nationality of the child.

International adoption, or even traditional adoption, isn't for everyone, Mrs. Cook said, but it was definitely for her family. She said Lauren has accepted Brandon as her brother, and he has been welcomed into their neighborhood.

Mrs. Cook said that, as Brandon matures, he will always realize he is adopted because he doesn't look like the rest of his family. She said that she and her husband intend to teach their son that the word 'adopted' means 'loved.'

"He's accepted by so many and he's really a darling little boy," Mrs. Cook said. The few negative, racially-oriented remarks she has encountered from strangers have, in her mind, she said, been chalked up to ignorance.

"It doesn't bother me that much, but it's going to bother me when he gets to the point

The Cook family: Larry and Martha with Lauren and Brandon.

Speaking of her son, Brandon, right, Martha Cook says, 'He's accepted by so many and he's really a darling little boy. His ready smile will charm doubters.'

that it hurts him. That will bother me. I think there are ignorant people in the world and I don't have any doubts that I will run across them occasionally."

But, Mrs. Cook, said, her son will become a naturalized citizen and will ultimately make a "fine, upstanding American."

She's sure Brandon's ready smile will charm doubters, and he won the hearts of his new mom and dad even before they met — all it took was a snapshot.

"Once you get that picture," Mrs. Cook said, "it's like the child is yours, even though you've never held the child or anything else. It's all you can think about. There's no way I could have turned that picture back in and said, 'We're going to try for our own.' He was our own at that point. He was mine, but he wasn't here yet. It's almost like being pregnant. There are a lot of the same feelings."

Although at 34 she was feeling a biological push to complete her family, Mrs. Cook said, she didn't have a real need, which some do, to give birth again. She skipped suffering through morning sickness with Brandon and, by the time he got to his new home, he was already sleeping through the night — two big bonuses.

Brandon is a healthy boy. His new dad calls him "great," and said he's everything he hoped for in a son. At six months Brandon is already wearing clothing sized for an 18-month-old.

The children adopted through CSII are healthy, Dr. Boiselle said. In 18 months of operations in this area, she said, about 65 children have been placed. One turned up with a hidden health problem, which Dr. Boiselle said could happen to any child.

That child's adoptive parents sought financial assistance from the state to deal with their son's problems, but were turned down because he was not a native American, Dr. Boiselle said.

That prompted agency officials and parents who have adopted through CSII, a tightly knit group, to conduct a fund to help with such medical expenses, she said.

The non-profit, tax-deductible group's first fund-raiser is an auction/concert scheduled for Sunday, April 13 at the Winter Park Civic Center. Admission is $5 in advance and $8 at the door for the 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. event.

Local merchants are being asked to contribute auction items, and already in hand are a hot-air balloon ride and a breakfast cruise on Sanford's RiverShip Romance, Dr. Boiselle said. For more information on the event or to donate an item, contact her at 639-8887.

Meanwhile, Brandon's adoption can become official after he has spent 90 days in his new home. It will be his decision later as to whether he ever returns to his birthplace, Mrs. Cook said, but, through continued contact with other CSII families, both he and Lauren will have the opportunity to grow with other youngsters whose families are made of a similar blend.

Bringing Brandon into their home, she said, has been a fantastic experience which has broadened their lives in many ways.

Americanization Of Mary Poppins

Nannies Help Mommies Go Back To Work Force

By Jean Hanner
UPI Feature Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mary Poppins would have no trouble getting a job in New York — or in most other parts of the United States.

In fact, English nannies are being paid $200 to $300 a week — plus vacations home — in order to take care of the children of dual-profession families where both husband and wife work.

And there's a big demand for home-grown nannies trained at the nanny schools that have sprung up from New Jersey to California.

"The trend is for women to go back to the work force almost as routine, and they are going back sooner, rather than later," said Dr. Daniel Keeler, chief of the division of child development, New York Hospital-Cornell Medical School, and assistant professor of pediatrics, Cornell University.

The nanny is one answer to the problem of at-home care for the infants of working mothers — an answer favored by a lot of people who can afford it. Other possibilities include less well-trained caretakers, old-fashioned baby-sitters, and even that old standby, grandma.

For those who want a nanny or a reasonable facsimile — she can be found through domestic employment agencies, advertising in the ethnic newspapers of large cities and networking with other mommies and with competent child caretakers in the park and playground.

Top of the heap may be the nannies that have been tested and certified by Britain's National Nursery Examination Board, an examining and validating body for 100 colleges in Britain and Northern Ireland that has roots going back to 1892. It took its present form in 1948.

Elizabeth Coles, examination secretary of NNEB, said to earn a certificate a nanny must pass a two-year college program, complete on-the-job training at a nursery, hospital or elsewhere, produce written reports on child behavior and pass a written multiple choice and essay test. Nannies are expected to know about everything from clothing and footwear to love and grief.

For couples who would rather buy American, there are the products of American nanny schools that dot the country from coast to coast.

The Sheffield School in Hopewell, N.J. is one such, founded two years ago by Ellen Sheffield after she had trouble finding proper care for her own Davey, now 3, when she wanted to return to her job at Princeton University.

"Baby sitters react. Nannies initiate," Sheffield said when asked to define the difference between nannies and other child caretakers.

The Sheffield School — one of two nanny-training facilities certified as vocational schools by the New Jersey Department of Education — expects to turn out 50 or 60 nannies this year.

Its student nannies come from as far away as Texas and Kansas, as well as from the New York metropolitan area. They take a 400-hour program that includes courses in child development, recreational activities, theoretical nutrition and meal preparation, first aid and safety, health, teaching methods, communications and more, Sheffield said.

She said about 40 percent of Sheffield's nanny class were

Bad Reputation of Donkeys And Mules Is Not Deserved

DEAR ABBY: I am fed up with all these offended bachelors who resent being compared with mules. What's wrong with mules? I am a regional representative of the American Donkey and Mule Society, and believe me, donkeys and mules are the finest beasts on earth, so if any human calls you a mule or even a jackass, he is paying you a compliment!

Donkeys and mules are honest, affectionate, gentle, intelligent and fun-loving, so how did mules and jackasses get such a bad name?

SUE ANN WEAVER,

Dear Abby

BLUESTONE BRAYERS

DEAR SUE ANN: It eludes me, but over the years the consensus has been that mules are stubborn and jackasses are stupid. Unfortunately, these degrading myths have been perpetuated until they are accepted as facts.

What donkeys and jackasses need is some high-powered public relations firm to improve the images of these noble beasts. Any takers?

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you emphasized the importance of voting. May I share with your readers some examples of how one vote changed history?

In 1645, ONE VOTE gave Oliver Cromwell control of England.

In 1649, ONE VOTE caused Charles I of England to be executed.

In 1839, ONE VOTE elected Marcus Morton governor of Massachusetts.

In 1845, ONE VOTE saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment.

In 1876, ONE VOTE changed France from a monarchy to a republic.

In 1923, ONE VOTE gave Adolph Hitler leadership of the Nazi Party.

In 1960, ONE VOTE change in each precinct in Illinois would have defeated John F. Kennedy.

graduates of two- or four-year colleges, including some registered nurses; another 10 percent had a year or two of college and the remaining 50 percent were high school graduates.

Sheffield runs an employment agency as well as the nanny school, and she said there is a waiting list for her graduates. The biggest demand is from dual-profession couples, followed by single parents, particularly widowed or divorced fathers, "and about 10 percent of our clients are the absolutely fabulously wealthy."

Her graduates earn $200 to $400 per week, and about 70 percent "live-in."

Sheffield said that an increasing number of her clients are teaming up, with two or three families combining resources to hire one nanny for their children.

"We have three families in Hillsborough (N.J.) who each contribute $110 a week to a nanny to take care of their three children, all of whom are under 4 years old," Sheffield said. That nanny does not live in, but in other cooperative arrangements, the nanny lives at one couple's house but also cares for the infant of another family.

Whether a nanny has graduated from an official nanny school or simply attended the school of long-time experience, she can earn good money.

"A good nanny gets between $200 and $400 a week, with the less experienced women on the lower end of the scale," said Derry Grubb, director of the Home Service Agency in New York City. "I've placed nannies up to $600 a week, but that's very rare."

"Most of the women who want nanny jobs range in age from their 20s to mid-30s. Most of them come from the midwest or from Europe — England, Ireland, Scandinavia. Lately there have been some Australians — they make excellent nannies, by the way."

He advised would-be nanny employers to look for two primary attributes — intelligence and commitment.

"You should look for someone who is committed to doing this for at least a year," he said. "Some clients like to extract a commitment for life, but that's unrealistic."

Dr. Meryl Newman-Cedar is a

New York city pediatrician in private practice who also works in child development at New York Hospital. She has first-hand experience in the nanny-finding field as the working mother of two children. She believes in the do-it-yourself method of picking a child's caretaker.

"I think an agency is the last resort — they are very expensive and I don't think they do any better job in screening applicants than you can," she said. "I find the best way to find someone good is to talk to friends and see who has what. The next route is talking to the nannies in the park. Pick people's brains, and see who you can find through word of mouth. Check local bulletin boards."

"Try advertising in your local newspaper and in ethnic papers like the Irish Echo and the Hungarian press and the Jewish press. I did that once and I must have gotten 800 calls."

A check of a recent edition of The Irish Echo revealed that 71 out of 82 classified ads for "household help wanted" involved child care. The only specific salary offered was $300 a week for a live-in nanny.

"My advice to parents is to think about exactly what you want in a child care person and write it down so when you interview job applicants you have a standard list of questions, instead of just going by the fact that you like someone's looks," Newman-Cedar said.

"I think parents' priorities have to be for someone who is warm and loving with the kids, as well as someone who also will be a fantastic housekeeper. Mary Poppins doesn't exist — people usually are good in one area or the other. Get someone else to clean the house."

She said it is important to hire someone with whom you can communicate, and emphasized the need to spell out exactly what you expect from a prospective nanny — never minimize the workload. You need an organized, committed person. It is a good idea to arrange a trial work period, with the new person on the job and the parent at home to see how things work out.

"My own feeling is that, as much as I think it is important to look around really hard, this is not like getting married," she said. "You can change nannies. People sometimes are hesitant to switch and they end up living with a situation not to their liking. But hard as it is for children to separate, they also make new attachments very well. Kids are very flexible and they learn to love new people very fast."

Pediatrician Kessler was equally reassuring about another question that bothers women who leave their babies to return to work — the worry about whether the infant will know which woman his mother is.

Kessler strongly agrees with Dr. Berry Brazelton, the Harvard pediatrician who has campaigned for, and testified before Congress about, the need for longer and more encompassing maternity leave. But Kessler is unconcerned that the child will not form bonds with its mother.

"Mothers worry whether the child will have enough time to form a relationship with her," he said. "There's a lot of talking about 'bonding.' I think bonding is being sold a little too aggressively to parents. Bonding seems to imply a rapid, irreversible relationship. But human relations are more complex than that."

"I think the term attachment is better — it implies a slowly evolving relationship that evolves over a period of time, without the magical implications of bonding."

"Parents are concerned that if another individual is caring for a child eight or more hours a day, the child will somehow form a closer relationship to that individual than to themselves."

"But the kind of attachment children form to their biological parents — given exposure to those parents — is a primary attachment and it can occur despite the fact that the parents are working for long periods of time outside the home."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) For the sake of your image, don't brag about your accomplishments today. Let someone else toot your horn.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though you may secretly feel your ideas are superior to those of others today, nothing will be gained by starting a debate. Button up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Joint ventures that require a financial outlay on your behalf must be carefully thought through today or you could come out on the short.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't take it upon yourself today to make a major decision without first consulting your mate. If it goes wrong, and it might, you'll catch a lot of heat.

commitment from others regarding their willingness to assist you, but when the chips are down, their support won't be forthcoming.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Maintain your powers of concentration today, and keep your mind on what you're doing. But if you do make a mistake, don't cover it up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something you fail to attend to may hamper your freedom of movement today. Don't sweep it under the rug because it could cause more trouble later.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Indecisiveness is something you may have to combat today. If you keep changing your mind, associates won't want to deal with you.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Here is a deal with the theme of combining all your chances in the best way. You arrive at four spades, and the defenders play three rounds of clubs at you. You will certainly need the diamond queen to be onside, but after the successful diamond finesse, you will have to concern yourself with your fourth diamond. There are three possibilities. (1) If diamonds are divided 3-3, the fourth diamond is a winner. (2) The queen of hearts could be a winner on which you could throw a diamond. (3) The last diamond could be ruffed in dummy if the defender with long trumps also holds length in diamonds.

After ruffing the third club, lead a heart to the queen. That loses to the king. Win the return, cash two rounds of trumps, then play a diamond to the king, a diamond to the jack, and play the ace of diamonds. Although East has four diamonds to the queen, he also has the three trumps, so you are now able to ruff your last losing diamond with dummy's nine of spades. You were fortunate that the same defender who held three trumps also had diamond length, but you still gave the deal the best play. After all, some of the time West might hold the heart king, in which case your fourth diamond would go on dummy's queen of hearts.

Church Site Plan Approval Delayed Due To Waiver Plea

By Paul Schaefer
Herald Staff Writer

Holy Cross Lutheran Church will continue to wait for approval of their final site plan review, pending a meeting between engineers from the City of Lake Mary, the project, and a fire marshal. Lake Mary's city commission agreed to delay the decision at least until their next meeting April 3.

Church Pastor Paul Hoyer asked the commission to waive road improvement and fire protection sections of the site plan during phase one construction. He said the church had been attempting to begin construction for 15 months.

The commission agreed that the pavement and drainage issues surrounding the construction at the property could be resolved, but "I don't think we could allow a church to have no fire protection," Commissioner Charlie Webster said.

Hoyer replied, "We don't want to put $750,000 into a water line and paving for a $200,000 building."

Commissioner Paul Tremel suggested the proposed church's fire protective sprinkler system be hooked up to a well on the site.

City attorney Robert Petree said, "The city would be liable for allowing an unsafe condition to occur," in the event of a fire, if the fire protection issue was not addressed and the construction were allowed to proceed.

The proposed site of the church is near the intersection of Sun Drive and Lake Emma Road, and the nearest fire hydrant is reportedly 1,500 to 2,000 feet away.

The commission approved a request by Seminole County to delay the condition of city required landscaping on the final approval for their expansion of the Greenwood Lakes water treatment plant percolation pond. The commission agreed under the condition that the landscaping be done within seven months of the completion of the ponds.

Mayor Dick Fess told county representative Jim Bible, "We don't want to take tax-payer's money to buy more land for ponds when we already have green areas and right-of-ways to irrigate."

Bible said he would take the suggestion back to the county staff.

"Cooperation is needed between municipalities and the county," Commissioner Ken King added.

It was determined that alcoholic beverages could be served at the new Community Improvement Association's civic center on Country Club Road. Saying building functions such as wedding receptions "need to serve beer to survive" commissioner Charlie Webster — CIA president — asked city attorney Robert Petree for advice.

Petree said the building was non-public owned, subject to the terms of the lease, and the beverages could be served at private functions. The land on which the building stands is leased by the city to the CIA under a reported 99 year agreement. The CIA is a private, non-profit, civic service organization.

The city attorney will contact Diamond Engineered Space of Orlando from whom the city is leasing a 1,344 square foot double wide modular unit to house the police department headquarters.

"The floor is coming up at the center seam," acting police chief Samuel Belfiore said.

He said that the company had been contacted about the problem, and other repairs to the structure had been made, but the floor problems have not been repaired after repeated requests to the company, he said.

Petree said he would contact the supplier, and suggested withholding rent payment until the problem is corrected.

The double-wide mobile home office is rented at a reported cost of $667 a month. It is to be the temporary department headquarters for two to three years.

Commissioners also agreed to a developer's request to modify plans for waterline placement and storm water drainage changes. Lake Mary Woods, a development of nearly 100 homes, originally platted in 1981, got approval for the changes, with the stipulation that Lake Road be changed to one-way traffic between Weldon Boulevard and First Street.

The intersection at Lake and Weldon had been widened since 1981, and commissioners were concerned about the safety of drivers trying to negotiate the intersection, with their view now blocked by a house near the street.

"The house is right on the sidewalk," said Commissioner Charlie Webster. "We need to correct the intersection before we approve the project or we'll have people laying on the road dead (from accidents). We would have deaths on the highway for no reason at all."

Commissioners then approved the project, and temporarily addressed their concerns about the dangers of the intersection by mandating the one-way traffic on Lake Road. The traffic will flow west.

The Sanford Planning and Zoning board has sanctioned a conditional use of the French Avenue Village Flea Market property to enable its transformation into a multi-unit shopping center. The P&Z has also approved amended site plans for a shopping plaza on Airport Boulevard and a Friendly's ice cream shop at Seminole Centre.

In the city's residential district, P&Z approval will enable Historic Board chairman Jerry Mills to open a bed and breakfast inn at 701 West 3rd Street and Central Florida Legal Services to relocate its headquarters from South Park Avenue to a converted home at 315 Magnolia Avenue.

The board has also endorsed a conceptual site plan for construction of 20 townhouses on Florida Avenue, between Georgia and Hartwell Avenues.

Without exception, the P&Z approved all projects contained on the comprehensive agenda it addressed Thursday night.

The Village Flea Market property falls under the jurisdiction of Sanford's general commercial district requirements, which allow shopping centers as permissible conditional land uses following a P&Z endorsement. After securing the necessary board approval Thursday night, the center's developer, Jack Bridges of Centennial Development Co., said he expects to proceed with construction in June.

Bridges said the center will be anchored by a large "prototype" Wynn Dixie which will contain a pharmacy, a bakery, a deli, and a fresh seafood counter in addition to usual retail food services. He also said a bank and several retail stores will be located at the center.

The project will lie between the Sanford Middle School and the Farmers Market.

Another new shopping center, Riverboat Plaza on Airport Boulevard, will open in six months, according to developer Fred Shipman. The project's site plans had to be amended and presented to the P&Z after workers dug into 51 feet of "muck" while attempting to lay a northern foundation for one of the development's two buildings, he said. The swampy area necessitated a portion of the building be "cut off" and relocated as a third structure at the shopping plaza, he said.

The developers for the Seminole Centre Friendly's had been before the P&Z on three earlier occasions and were told each time that approval would be denied until the board was satisfied that the shop's circular parking layout would not be hazardous to pedestrians. Of particular concern to P&Z was the proximity of the shop's drive thru lane exit to a handicap parking zone and crosswalk.

Safety features, including a stop sign at the end of the drive thru lane, were contained on the amended site plan approved by the board Thursday night. The shop will open by the end of this year, Friendly's representative Duncan Rose said.

Following P&Z site plan approval Thursday night, Central Florida Legal Services will begin "an overall rehabilitation" this summer of the 70-year old Magnolia Avenue residence that will serve as its new headquarters, said the agency's Managing Attorney Trenea Kaye said.

The agency's move from South Park Avenue after almost 10 years was prompted in part by the elderly and handicapped clients who had difficulty climbing the stairs to CFLS's second floor offices, Ms. Kaye said.

The "Mills Mansion" bed and breakfast inn on West 3rd Street will be revitalized and "hopefully" opened for business during early 1987, said Mills after receiving project approval from the P&Z.

Mills called the 99-year-old structure "the most ornate home built in Sanford," and said his restorative efforts will be undertaken with the assistance of turn of the century photos of the building.

In addition to rehabilitating the home's interior and exterior, Mills said he will erect an "ornate" wooden picket fence along the property's northern and eastern boundaries and extensively landscape the site. Part of the exterior amenities will include a vegetable garden and four citrus trees, Mills said.

The second floor, will be remodeled to contain three guest rooms and, when complete, the "Mills Mansion" will be advertised in historic publications, he said.

The conceptual site plans for 20 town houses off Florida Avenue were presented to the P&Z for review by developer Nicholas Fertakis, who said he will return to the P&Z next month with formal site plans and engineering studies for review. If approved by the P&Z, construction of the project, which will be located on a 2.32 acre tract of land, will begin later this year, Fertakis said.

Cattle Testing Expanded

TALLAHASSEE — "First-point testing" for the cattle disease brucellosis will be expanded statewide effective April 1. Commissioner of Agriculture Doyle Conner announced.

All test-eligible cattle consigned to all state livestock markets, quarantined feedlots, quarantined pastures and other assembly points will be required to be tested at those first points of concentration under a revised state brucellosis regulation, Conner said.

Test-eligible cattle under the market testing program will include all female cattle over 18 months of age which have not been tested negative within the previous 30 days. Optionally exempt from "first-point testing" will be cattle from Certified-Free herds, quarantined herds and commercial dairy herds.

Pitchmen Of All Stripes Are Riding On Halley's Comet

By Susan Postlewaite
UPI Business Writer

MIAMI (UPI) — Hawking everything from comet dust to comet-hunting supersonic jet trips, Pitchmen of all stripes are revving up for the final April fly-by of Halley's Comet.

After all, it's a business opportunity that comes only once in 76 years.

Optical equipment firms nationwide report "astronomical sales" of telescopes and binoculars as people shell out anywhere from $60 to $2,500 to bring the fuzzy ice and dust ball into sharper focus.

The comet may still look like a dud, but the marketers are ready with scrapbooks, comet rocks, souvenir posters, finder charts, patches, T-shirts, and star gazing trips.

Probably nowhere is the hoopla as great as in south Florida, Comet Country U.S.A. The next four weeks have been declared Comet Month.

"It really hasn't hit yet but I think when April gets here, it's going to be Halley's Fever," said Jack Horkheimer, director of the Miami Space Planetarium and the national public television show Star Hustler. "I think people are going to go a little bananas."

Halley's Comet Chase Inc. is selling two-hour comet hunting flights aboard the Concorde beginning April 10. Some 400 stargazers have signed up, at $1,099 to $1,500 a head, to chase Halley's at 60,000 feet.

The passengers will have to peer through the supersonic jet's tiny windows to see the "hairy snowball." Champagne and caviar will be served and Horkheimer and former Apollo astronaut Donn Eisele will give lectures on board.

"God knows what it will look like," said Eika Staschen, an Australian promoter who organizes Comet Chase. "You never know how a comet will behave. We don't guarantee anything."

She said she was a little concerned over a report from Australia that two tails may have broken off of the comet. "That means it may only have five tails."

Horkheimer says there is no reason for concern. "It's just an outrageous party. It's still going to look like a ghostly fuzzy apparition. If you flew to the moon it wouldn't look any closer."

For most of March, experts say, the comet is visible, though fuzzy, from most places in the United States that are far enough away from the glare of city lights.

However, from about April 7 to April 15, when Halley's makes its closest pass to the earth, Horkheimer says visibility will be better in south Florida than anywhere in the continental United States. The comet will be higher in the sky and thus visible for longer periods in Australia and South America, he said.

If you can't afford the Concorde, Gulfcoast Travel in Tampa is offering Lear Jet rides over the Atlantic. Tour operator Dick Lee is prepared to send out planes all night long from late March until mid-April. The $595 price includes two champagne buffets and a hotel room, or $495 without the room.

The Florida Keys officially declared Comet Month March 13. That launched a series of parties centered partly around five mobile vans dispatched by the Miami Space Planetarium with telescopes.

Cruise lines are cashing in. They've been advertising comet cruises for about two years. "If you miss the boat this time, it will be a long, long time coming back," a Paquet French Cruises ad warns.

The ships all have on board astronomer guides to give nightly celestial talks. Norwegian Caribbean Lines booked its 1,900-passenger ship Norway full for a March 22 Caribbean trip featuring nostalgic 1910 comet parties, a comet ball and costume party, a spokesman said.

Optical firms are also reporting record sales in the past year as Halley's headed on its lopsided orbit toward the sun.

"Halley's comet has provided a once-in-76-year opportunity for optics," said a spokesman for Tasco, a firm in Miami that expects to ship more than 1 million optical products by the time the comet passes out of view.

The comet business may be doing well, but the fad doesn't compare to the mania that accompanied Halley's last visit in 1910 when Madison Avenue emblazoned the comet logo on everything from Pear soap to Mott champagne.

Ragtime musicians composed ditties like the Comet Rag and New York threw all night comet parties on the roofs of the Waldorf and Astoria.

"What people considered spectacular in 1910 would not thrill the average viewer today," says Horkheimer, who has been telling people for two years not to expect too much from the famous comet.

"If you expect the comet to look like a ghost you'll not be disappointed."

Interest-Bearing Bank Accounts Deregulation Complete April 1

The long process of deregulating interest-bearing bank accounts will be complete and passbook savings accounts will no longer be limited to paying a maximum of 5 1/2 percent interest effective April 1, 1986.

In preparation for this final step in the deregulation process, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System on March 12 adopted regulations to govern bank interest-bearing accounts.

Effective April 1, 1986, the new rules governing money market deposit accounts held by individuals. (Withdrawals or transfers from money market deposit accounts made through Automatic Teller Machines (ATMs) do not count toward the six transfers per month.)

The new regulations will lift the $150,000.00 ceiling on corporate savings accounts on April 1 and will reduce the minimum early withdrawal penalty on all categories of time (savings) deposits. As of April 1, all time deposits must either prohibit early withdrawals during the first six days after deposit or require forfeiting seven days interest during that period.

Non-personal time deposits with original maturities of 18 months or more will carry a minimum early withdrawal penalty of one month's loss of interest during the first 18 months after deposit. These minimum requirements, however, do not prohibit banks from imposing higher penalties in order to recover costs.

Members of the banking community expect the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to act on similar proposals in the near future.

Clean Idea

Two Longwood businessmen hope to clean up on a clean idea they are trying to sell local cities and the Seminole County Commission.

Paul Korchmar and Dave Stuart, owners of Clean 'n' Clever Eye Level Advertising, made their first pitch to the Longwood City Commission Monday night when they unveiled the fiber glass litter receptacle which they designed and had manufactured by an Orlando firm.

The firm would like to place the 200-gallon, 42-inch high trash containers advertising local businesses around the city in strategic locations without such service. They said there would be no cost to the city because Clean 'n' Clever would supply the receptacles and plastic liners, maintain them, and see that they were emptied as often as necessary.

They said the advertising would be on vinyl stickers which won't fade or come off and are guaranteed for two years. The tops for the containers, which have openings to put the trash through, will be locked on, Stuart said.

Commissioners expressed doubt that they would be used because there are no pedestrians in the city and the litter along the streets comes from people in passing cars, who would not be able to toss their litter in the container. There was also a question in their minds whether the advertising would violate the sign ordinance.

The commissioners are considering, however, letting the covered receptacles, designed to last for several years, be placed in city parks to replace the drums which the city now has there. Because this would mean the city would no longer be responsible for collecting the trash and maintaining the containers, they are also considering waiving any sign permit.

The city attorney is going over the contract with the firm, which is in the process of being incorporated. It is located on County Road 427 in the Merit Center.

One Man's Castle

Solomon Built His Royal Abode, But Now He Can't Pull Up The Drawbridge

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Turtle-like, wherever Howard Solomon goes, his home is with him. That's what happens when you live in a tin castle in the boonies. Even when visiting friends in Geneva, La., Solomon is called to recount his life as 'king and jester.'

Solomon sought peace and seclusion when he ventured into rural Hardee County near Arcadia and St. Petersburg over a decade ago after a seven year stint in the Bahamas, but the home he created was brought to tourists tapping on his door in Ona, Fla.

He had been introduced to that area by artist and friend Benini, who had found his own hideaway on the shores of Geneva's Lake Harney. Unlike Solomon, Benini, over the years has expanded his own Geneva lakeside cottage into what he calls 'Popeye's Place,' a mix of wooden rooms fit for a painter, but not in keeping with the style of a sculptor with a king's name.

However, Benini admits that beyond the peace and beauty of his own setting, Solomon has created a home with a magical, mystical energy that intrigues the artist as well as the tourist.

Solomon, when settling in Florida was led by his bent for sculpting and his whimsy to create an ultimate metal sculpture, his tin castle home that covers 8,000 square feet, peaks at 40 feet and is surrounded by a moat in the center of his 45-acre, somewhat soggy paradise.

The wetland mandated Solomon build up, not out, he said, and that was the birth of his castle.

"I thought a palace would be too expensive, so I made a castle.

"Tin castles are for temporary kings. You have to reign before it rusts," Solomon joked.

Despite his royal shelter and his regal name, Solomon said there are drawbacks — he can't pull up the drawbridge.

He said he doesn't feel like a king. "I feel like a caretaker and a tour guide," he said. "I didn't intend to become a tour guide." Solomon's castle is drawing about 10,000 visitors a year, he said.

'Tin castles are for temporary kings. You have to reign before it rusts.'

What 50-year-old Solomon had intended from childhood to become was a cartoonist, but he found his skill wasn't with a pen, but with a bandsaw and welder. He's a Jack of all trades and a master of about 20. In addition to his artistic endeavors, Solomon has also worked as a builder and cabinet maker.

But tour guide is apparently the lot of a would-be cartoonist, who would place his joke not on paper, but on the soil of a wooded ranchland ripe for any type of eccentric distraction.

Imagine Walt Disney reading in Cinderella's Castle at his kingdom and you might get an idea of the way-of-life of this "Rembrandt of Reclamation" and "Picasso of the Put-on."

Solomon, a noted metal sculptor, woodworker and stained glass artist with works described as "humorous, clever, rarely serious," he said, turns the ordinary into the extraordinary. He creates animals, mock weapons, whimsical humans and vehicles out of bits of metal, wire and wood, and has reached the ultimate in reclamation by turning castoffs into a very contemporary Solomon's Castle.

His kingdom, built on a flood plane in a hodgepodge of sections, is covered with a mix of galvanized metal and aluminum newspaper printing plates, the shining armor of his abode.

Solomon's Castle is adorned with artistic touches that fascinate busload after busload of the elderly and artistic who cross his moat six days a week for a grand tour of this Rube Goldberg fantasy land.

Forty stained glass windows add sparks of color to the silver structure and show Solomon's representations of the planets, the elements of earth, wind, water and fire, as well as the arts and other fantasies and facets of life.

There's a drawbridge, a covered bridge and a catwalk as well as galleries filled with his baffling and intriguing art, to entertain, an endeavor Solomon accepted reluctantly, but a role he has grown into.

When Solomon began his castle, curious locals began to ask to see this strange creation that has popped up in the mist of their conventional and conservative homes. Their interest caused Solomon to lower the drawbridge and open the King of Hearts and Queen of Diamonds-adorned gates to his castle on the last Sunday of every month.

But that didn't sate the appetite of those who would like a glimpse at his "regal" life, which in addition to a de rigueur dungeon has all the comforts of home including a microwave oven and dishwasher, along with a wooden elevator held together with glue.

The demand to see his stately way of life was so great the Solomon fell into having an open house, with tourists trekking through his artist's galleries, workshop and living space.

It's definitely life in a fish bowl for this artist, who has little time for his crafts, except to stock his gift shop with Solomon-made gifts and accept an occasional commissioned assignment.

He admits his way of life and artistic expression cause some to distort his first name from Howard to "How weird."

Solomon laughs off that label and said his intent is to amuse and entertain. His castle, which is

Ants And Grasshoppers: A Parable For Our Time

Once upon a time there was a vast and fertile land inhabited by grasshoppers and ants. The grasshoppers dominated almost every aspect of life in the vast land. Every aspect, that is, except one.

While food and water were abundant in the vast and fertile land, grasshoppers required, or felt they required, the use of a thick, black liquid that the ants took out of the earth. The grasshoppers used the thick, black liquid for everything from heating their homes to providing power for the grasshopper buses that took hungry grasshoppers from one field to the next.

Because only the ants could take the thick, black liquid out of the earth, their role in the vast and fertile land was a special one. Of course, there were so many ants and there was so much of the thick, black liquid that for a very long time it seemed as plentiful as the food and water that blessed the land.

Some of the ants warned the grasshoppers, however, that the earth held only so much of the thick, black liquid. If the grasshoppers were to use it up, there would be no more.

The grasshoppers laughed when they heard this. The thick, black liquid was plentiful and cheap, like everything else in the vast and fertile land. Their laugh was a slightly nervous one; grasshoppers couldn't imagine life without the liquid the ants brought out of the earth.

One group of ants lived far to the east. They had the richest deposits of the thick, black liquid. They were very rich. But they were also very worried.

They realized that the thick, black liquid was going to run out. And when it did, the ants would have nothing.

The ants in the east decided to do something to preserve their livelihood. They cut back sharply on the quantity of the thick, black liquid they took from the ground. With a smaller quantity, they could charge the grasshoppers a much higher price.

The grasshoppers were hopping mad. How could the ants from the east do such a thing? How could the grasshoppers live without a huge and cheap supply of the thick, black liquid?

The grasshoppers said the ants were destroying them. They were profiting from the devastation of grasshopper economies everywhere. Life, they said, could not go on.

Oddly enough, it did.

Faced with a sharply higher price, the grasshoppers began to get along with a great deal less of the thick, black liquid that had once seemed a necessity. The policy of the ants had been a great success. They made a great deal of money, and the higher price assured the conservation of the thick, black liquid.

But the ants got carried away. They tried to raise the price too high. They got used to the huge revenues that were pouring in. They couldn't imagine life without them.

In the meantime, the grasshoppers were so successful at finding ways of doing without the thick, black liquid that they didn't buy all that the ants were producing. There was suddenly a surplus. As always happens when there is a surplus, the price fell. The thick, black liquid got cheaper.

And then a very odd thing happened. Many of the ants responded to the falling prices by producing more. This was different from the way other markets worked. In other markets, a surplus would cause the price to fall. When the price fell, producers would cut output, and the surplus would vanish.

But the ants were determined to keep their revenues up. Many of them relied on revenues from the thick, black liquid to run their societies. As the price fell, they tried to maintain their revenues by producing faster. But as they did this, the price fell further, and so they had to bring more out and do it faster. The price fell even faster, forcing even faster production.

The grasshoppers were delighted. They loved the falling prices, loved the plentiful supply. It was like the old days.

Some of the ants remembered their old worries about running out of the thick, black liquid. But most of them simply said they had bills to pay and services to provide for their fellow ants. They had no choice but to keep producing more.

Asimov Admonishes Reporters

'It's Halley — Rhymes With Sally'

By Gayle B. Young
UPI Science Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Science fiction writer Isaac Asimov knows when it really will be the best time to see Halley's Comet. In the year 2138.

"Now if we can all hang on for another 150 years we'll see a really good show," said Asimov, who said Halley's Comet this time around has been a disappointment because its orbit is too far from the earth for it to be seen clearly.

Bright night lights on earth and fog from pollution in the atmosphere have also made it worse, he said.

Asimov, the best-selling author of over 100 books on science and science fiction, spoke on the comet at the Foreign Press Association headquarters, where he admonished reporters for mispronouncing its name.

"It's Halley, rhymes with Sally," said the author, who blamed the comet's mispronunciation on a 1960s rock group called Bill Halley and the Comets.

"Ever since then people who know more about rock 'n' roll than comets have called it Halley's Comet instead of Halley's," said Asimov. "They are showing their ignorance."

Isaac Asimov

Asimov said comets were long believed to be portents of disaster.

"Whenever one appeared in the sky someone died that year, or a few years before, or a few years after," said Asimov. "Of course on years the comet didn't appear someone died that year, or a few years before, or a few years after."

In the 1500s, astronomers noted that comets' tails always point away from the sun and people began to realize comets worked in harmony with the planets, said Asimov.

Sir Edmund Halley predicted in 1705 that the comet of 1680 that would someday bear his name would return in 1758, said Asimov, but his contemporaries were skeptical because they knew none of them would still be living at that date.

On Christmas 1758, some 20 years after Halley's own death, an amateur astronomer who was familiar with Halley's work spotted the comet returning through his telescope.

"He pointed his telescope where Halley said it would appear," said Asimov.

Editor's postscript: Although Isaac Asimov is of the opinion Halley rhymes with Sally, televised interviews with those who claim to be the noted astronomer's descendants have shown those Halleys prefer to rhyme with braw! — hall as in hallway.

Scholar, 100, Goes To College

ELIZABETH, N.J. (UPI) — Louis Altchuler, 100, may be the oldest college student in the nation and the most aptly named. His Yiddish last name means "old school goer" or "old scholar."

Altchuler is taking classes at Union County College with about 600 other senior citizens from the Workmen's Circle Home in Elizabeth.

"I like to go down to the class and hear what he has to say," Altchuler said Wednesday of his teacher, Philip Gold. "My mind is not as sharp as it used to be, but I like to learn."

His wife of 25 years,

Olga, who died in 1984 at age 84, was concerned about him growing old.

"Before my wife died, she worried that I might go senile. But I never did," Altchuler said.

Altchuler, a retired civil engineer, doesn't brag about his senior scholar status. He emigrated from Poland in 1907 at the age of 23, attended night school to learn English, went to a preparatory school and earned a bachelor's degree from Cooper Union in New York City.

"It doesn't mean that much to me that I'm the oldest student," he said.

Victory!

... that is the cry of the multitude. Today we join in happy throngs around the earth as we shout together.

"Hosanna!" Whatever the morrow may hold of the suffering, today we declare to the world... "Christ has come."...

Whatever a Friday of crucifixion may bring of temporary defeat, we know life will triumph over death, and the Christian way will resolve itself supremely in the final destiny.

Then Palm Sunday is a day to celebrate and we set up our banner of hope. "For right is right as God is and right the day must win." This hope will convert, for us, spiritual defeat into eternal victory.

Moral Relativism Linked To Violence In Schools

Freedoms Foundation Features

In all but one of the last 15 annual Gallup polls on education, respondents have chosen lack of discipline as the greatest problem facing America's schools. Available data suggests that concern is justified.

The National Institute of Education's landmark 1978 "Safe Schools" study found that each month: 389,000 students were assaulted; 2,400 cases of arson occurred; 1,000 teachers required medical attention due to assaults; and more.

Later studies and reports contain similar findings. During a five month period in 1981, California schools reported 100,000 incidents of violence. In a 1983 study conducted in the Boston school system, 40 percent of the high school students reported being victims of robbery, assault or larceny during the school year; 11 percent of the teachers reported personal assaults. During 1984, 120 students in Detroit schools were shot. During the first four months of the 1984-85 school year, spot checks in the New York City schools resulted in the confiscation of 1,000 weapons. No one knows how many went undiscovered.

The good news is that, as a percentage of the total student and teacher population, the rate of violence is thankfully low. Education writer David Brooks, in a recent National Review article, stated, "only 2.3 per cent of urban teachers, 0.8 per cent of suburban teachers, and 0.1 per cent of rural teachers are assaulted in a given month."

However, these kinds of numbers should not be used to downplay the seriousness of the situation. One teacher assault a month is one too many. Learning is enough of a challenge for students without the added fear of assault or robbery.

There is another factor which must be taken into account when examining school violence, one that is sometimes missed by those who should know better. Brooks cites the remarks of one educator who argues that the average classroom fire does only $.85 of damage and is "merely" intended "to disrupt routine rather than destroy property."

That's not a problem? For every wastebasket fire there is an hour or two a day in a classroom when little or no learning takes place. School violence is only the visible and most extreme example of a deep and disturbing educational problem. Brooks points out that the 1978 "Safe Schools" study "found that 75 per cent of urban teachers and 43 per cent of rural teachers are cursed at by students every month."

Very little effective learning is going to take place in an environment where a significant number of students have no respect for teachers or the educational process. Dr. Amital Etzioni, director of George Washington University's Center for Policy Research, in research for the National Chamber Foundation found that a student's ability to learn was linked to his level of maturity, self-discipline and ability to cope with rules and authority figures.

That students lack these traits is certainly not the fault of the schools alone. Too many parents shirk their responsibility to instill within their children a basic understanding of right and wrong and the motivation to learn.

But, the schools are not free of blame. In too many classrooms, students are exposed to a currently fashionable moral relativism which refuses to condemn even theft and which ultimately contributes to an erosion of respect for educators and the educational system. And, like it or not, the schools are going to bear a significant responsibility for helping students develop positive character traits. If only for the simple reason that they cannot carry out their primary function of education in a climate not conducive to learning.

Romance Of Rail-Legend And Myth

By United Press International
Dream Tracks: The Railroad and the American Indian 1890-1930, by T.C. McLuhan (Abrams, 208 pp., $37.50)

For Thomas Wolfe, the railroads offered America "a wordless and unutterable hope as one thinks of the enchanted city toward which he is speeding," while Wordsworth dismissed them as a "profane invention."

From their very inception, the railroads inspired both celebration and suspicion. Large, modern, overwhelming machines that promised to join the established eastern terrain with the exotic, unknown western landscape.

In "Dream Tracks," author T.C. McLuhan has utilized an eye for detail, a sensitivity to subject, a gift for engaging prose and an insight born of able scholarship to explore the unholy alliance between the railroads and corporate image-making in the lexicon of American success stories.

Using photographs, illustrations, magic lantern slides and calendar art, the Santa Fe, Topeka and Denver and Rio Grande Railways married soil, roots, country and the railroads as a natural progression. Indeed, McLuhan insists that the ingredients provided "a novel amalgam in the history of American business" — that of corporate image-making and "primitive cultures."

Simply, the poetic imagery of the Southwest and Indian life, the railways contended, was America. By identifying these elements as the "real" America, and the railroads as a means of discovering this "natural identity," a growing business flourished — a business that depended on the success of its advertising campaign and the romantic majesty of its illustrations.

In order to attract travelers West, the railways selected suitably exotic and intriguing imagery. The advertisers beckoned travelers with a marketing savvy never before witnessed. The railroads had discovered culture in the wilderness, and noting its usefulness, sought to exploit it. In so doing, a new

Satire On Presidential Aide Memoir

By United Press International
The White House Mess, by Christopher Buckley (Knopf, 227 pp., $15.95)

Christopher Buckley, who used to write speeches for Vice President George Bush, has done the country a far greater service with "The White House Mess," a snicker-snort satire of the "tell-all" memoir of former presidential aide Walter Winchell used to call a "don't invite-em" at the Reagan White House.

Buckley's "senior administration official" is Herb Wadlough, a prim Boise bookkeeper (he drinks hot water, fearing overstimulation from coffee or tea) who latches on to an Idaho politician named Thomas N. Tucker and follows him from the statehouse to the White House.

Buckley has made Herb such a stick that the book is without a real hero, unless it is the president's soft-porn actress wife, who favors moonlight skinny-dipping in the White House pool or the precocious First Son, Firecracker, whose hamster takes up residence in the president's desk.

The prologue of this book, describing Tucker's arrival at the White House Jan. 20, 1989, is just a few lines longer than nine pages. It alone is almost worth the price of the book. It alone also may make Buckley what Walter Winchell used to call a "don't invite-em" at the Reagan White House.

It would be hard for any author to sustain the prologue's level of wicked comedy, but Buckley succeeds in most of his 30 short chapters in serving up a full measure of hilarity as well as a hollow, leather-honed spoof of the typical self-serving and profoundly boring recitation of who did what to whom in and around the Oval Office.

To get the full flavor of what Buckley intends, the reader really needs to have read one or more of the White House family and friends, he finds himself really left to him begin to break. He reaches Lu Anne, his dark angel, only to discover that her predicament is beyond his own.

The Long Friends are Lu Anne's manifestation of death, hallucinatory beings who appear as harbingers of doom, drawing her to her demise, in which Walker must inevitably partake.

What becomes a hard-hitting commentary on modern love and art as seen through the jaded eyes of Hollywood gets a casual nod from Shakespeare. The magic of Stone's writing is in the way two lives are related to form a statement of late 20th-century thought and mysticism, and of what happens when brave explorers who follow their hearts find themselves at an impasse, a dead end that offers no hope.

In this powerful work, we are forced to take a long hard look at the means used to induce creation. The odd, hip voice of Robert Stone provides a vision that reaches deep into the American spirit, the tragedy being that we must go on without it after the final page. You will find yourself wanting to read "Children of Light" more than once.

Statement On Late 20th Century Thought

Children of Light, by Robert Stone (Knopf, 256 pp., $17.95)

As an absolute chronicle of the decay of Western society, "Children of Light" gives a wide-angle view of the edge of pop culture as seen through the impressions and images of a dying man.

Gordon Walker is a screenwriter and actor coming to terms with mortality, loss, and the wear and tear of a West Coast literary lifestyle that has lost its glitter. Caught in a struggle for survival, he follows an instinct to seek out his soulmate, hoping to find a way out of torment and back to a lifeline, his dream.

down — and the plain fact is that, as we age, we slow down physically and mentally.

Here is some information about the books:

Memory Fitness Over 40 (Triad Publishing Co., $12.95) is by Robin West, Ph.D. Dr. West is assistant professor of psychology at the University of Florida, where she conducts research on memory and aging; she also teaches memory courses in older people.

This book tells what we can realistically expect from memory in middle age and beyond. It describes what happens to memory as we grow older — what stays the same and what changes with age — and how we can minimize age-related memory loss. Dr. West tells how to distinguish between occasional memory lapses and the more serious memory failures associated with specific diseases, such as Alzheimer's disease. One chapter helps readers evaluate their memory strengths and weaknesses; another offers practical strategies for developing sharper recall and better retention.

This book is for people who realize they have a memory problem and really want to work at changing it.

The Myth of Senility: The Truth about the Brain and Aging ($13.95; distributed by Farrar, Straus and Giroux) is an American Association of Retired Persons book written by Robin Marantz Henig, a health and science writer.

Although this book covers memory, Alzheimer's disease and medical conditions that mimic senility, it concentrates more on Alzheimer's. It's good if you want a general overview of the brain, memory and newer Alzheimer's research.

A sample of the information you'll get here: "Gerontologists today distinguish between two kinds of forgetfulness: benign and malignant. 'Benign forgetfulness is when you spend 15 minutes looking for the glasses you mislaid,' says Richard Beadine of the Harvard Medical School. 'Malignant forgetfulness is when you forget you ever had glasses.'"

Aging Myths: Reversible Loss of Mind and Memory Causes ($17.95; McGraw-Hill Book Co.) is by Siegfried Kra, M.D., professor at the Yale University School of Medicine.

This book debunks the common belief that senility is a natural and unavoidable part of aging, and concentrates primarily on the reversible causes of memory loss. It reveals that in 65 percent of the cases of what is popularly known as "senility," the symptoms have proven to have reversible causes.

The author presents case studies of patients who showed symptoms of senility but were found to have diseases and disorders that mimic senility: malnutrition, alcohol abuse, depression, high blood pressure or the side effects of medications. Although the medical problems might not be curable, the symptoms can be reversed and often prevented.

All of these books provide a hopeful message for someone like me, who sat halfway through one of the "Star Wars" movies before realizing I'd seen it already. And I was only in my mid-30s.

It would appear ... the glow of last November's Geneva summit is dimming daily...

Because of this chilly state of affairs, it is a particularly welcome event that Senator Dale Bumpers has joined again with Sens. Patrick Leahy, John Chafee and John Heinz in introducing a resolution asking President Reagan to continue his "no undercut" policy on the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty....

The urgency of the new Senate resolution is the scheduled launching of the United States' eighth Trident submarine on May 20. If the Trident is launched without the United States first having dismantled two old Poseidon submarines or 22 land-based missile launchers, the United States will exceed the limits of SALT II and thus free the Soviet Union to add at least 6,000 warheads to its SS-18 intercontinental ballistic missile fleet. It is clearly to the United States' advantage not to let this happen....

President Reagan and House Speaker Tip O'Neill ... rarely agree on many issues. The future of Northern Ireland is a happy exception.

Last November an historic agreement was signed between Britain and the Republic of Ireland which gave Ireland an official voice in governing Northern Ireland, also known as Ulster. To give the agreement a financial boost, President Reagan has asked Congress to approve a $250 million aid package for the financially depressed province....

O'Neill, who is Irish right down to his blarney, made a rare appearance before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on behalf of Reagan's request.... On the following day the House committee voted overwhelmingly to support Reagan's aid package. Congressional sentiment is leaning strongly in the same direction....

Although a multimillion-dollar aid bundle from the United States will not resolve the Irish conflict, it will help stabilize the shaky Ulster economy, which in turn could help bring equanimity to the political landscape.

Delighted, that is, until the inevitable happened. Suddenly ants crawled forth from the earth

The thick, black liquid had vanished. It was too late for a higher price to bring it back.
