DR. KIRKLAND'S SERMON

Stirring Words That Went Direct to Listener's Heart

SUBJECT: "RECKLESS DRIVING"

Is Handled in Most Forceful Manner And Comparisons Made With Everyday Life

The sermon preached at the Congregational church on last Sunday night by Dr. R. Lee Kirkland upon "Reckless Driving," was one of the most forceful ever heard in this city. His text was taken from II Kings, 9:20: "For the driving is like the driving of Jehu, the son of Nimshi, for he driveth furiously."

The man of our text prided himself on doing those dangerous and daring things, such things as no other man of good intelligence would think of doing. He seemed to think that it displayed generalship and bravery to see how near the awful precipice he could drive while other men with good judgment would stay as far away from danger as possible. Jehu continued this reckless course until he stirred his friends to the highest pitch of anxiety. His name became table talk. His acts became the talk of the street. His influence was dreaded. Our text calls him the furious or reckless man, and to make his course more serious he was a man in authority. Especially was Jehu reckless when out on one of his usual drives. I fancy I see him preparing for that famous drive mentioned in the language of our text. Standing in front of his office I see that nervous black span chewing against their bits. The driver who holds the reins is sad and has nothing to say. He would not go out on this famous drive for this world, but he is a military soldier. He is under command. He has to go. Lining up behind his carriage are several thousand men. They will follow the front carriage. They will stay close to its heels. Jehu comes out of his office with his cabinet of friends. Enters his carriage. Gives orders to his driver to go down Broadway, a down grade of four miles, crossing the noted bridge that has no banisters. In a few minutes they have passed the skirts of the city. The team is fast drawing the carriage down grade. It's easy running. It is easy riding. For everything is going down grade. No one notices the time or the speed. Jehu is drinking champagne and choice wines. Speed does not bother him. Down grade does not worry him. Danger never frightens him. But just now the driver has noticed that one of the horses is becoming nervous. The driver says: Jehu, one of the horses is nervous, and shows a disposition to be mean; what shall I do? Jehu laughs at his cowardice, and says: You poor, chicken-hearted fellow; there is no danger in that horse; in fact in neither of them. This is my old family team. Let them go, if they want to. They have always stopped in time, and always will. Onward the mad horse plunges against the bit, until his mate grows nervous. The driver is again alarmed and cried out: Jehu, both horses are nervous; I fear they will get away from me. Nonsense, answers Jehu. Give them the rein; let them go. The mad team now becomes unmanageable. They seize the bits in the corners of their mouths. The sight of the great bridge has increased their maddened condition. The driver knows what it means. He cries out in the anguish of his soul. Oh, Jehu! both horses are unmanageable, and we are in sight of the bridge. He, for the first time, realizes his condition. He cries out stop the horses. The driver wraps the reins around his hands and over his elbows, and with all the strength of his being he throws himself against the runaway team. But alas! only to increase their speed. He cries out: Jehu, they have seized the bits in their mouths; I cannot rein them. Oh! for God's sake, cries the doomed man, has it come to that? Throw on the brakes, driver. Save us if you can. But there is no hope. Jehu has waited too long. He has played with life his last time. His team is unmanageable, his soul is doomed; the brakes will not work. They are inadequate. The hoofs of the horses are now striking the bridge. I hear the awful crash, and they plunge overboard. Jehu became a type of millions on earth today who are on the downward grade. No man expects to go to jail. No drunkard expects to fill a drunkard's grave. No woman thinks of falling below the level of the brute. But they are just playing with sin. Just out for a good time. That's all. Here is a poor widow with only one son. It is the only child she has. She has lived all her life in the country on a farm. But her son wants to go to the city. Persuades his mother to sell the home, the stock and all the farm interests. With a few thousand dollars they locate in the city. Soon the son meets some gay friends. Bye and bye it comes to that old mother's ear that her son is associating with bad people. When he comes home to supper that night he finds it ready on the table. The mother is ready to serve him. At one glance she sees there is something wrong. What's the matter, mother? Ah, my son, I hear you are associating with evil companions, and your mother is in distress over it. The egotistical boy, the smart I flies into a fit of anger; informs his mother that he is no kid. That when he sees danger he will avoid it. That there is no harm anyway in his friends. They are good fellows. One night the mother is waiting. She is uneasy about him. Two o'clock in the night she hears him step through the front door. Takes off his shoes and slips up stairs to his room, but there is whiskey on his breath. There is a bottle dropped at the door, and beer checks in his pocket. Oh, my boy, says the distressed mother, will you not throw on the brakes, and rein the team before this awful habit gets the better of you? Nonsense, nonsense he says. There is no danger. Just a little social dram; that is all. I have always stopped this team; I am not afraid. Another night the mother is waiting for him. Ten o'clock comes. The mother hears the clerks going home from the stores, but her son is not in the crowd. At eleven o'clock she hears the carriages rushing from the union depot. Her son is not in the crowd. Twelve o'clock; one o'clock comes. She hears the rumbling of a heavy wagon coming toward the house. She hears the wheel of it strike the curbstone opposite her door. Here is the place says one man. They take someone out of the wagon. Down the long walk, up the stone steps they carry their victim. They ring the bell. The door is opened. What is it? What is it? says the frightened mother. It is your son, madam. There is a fine of one hundred dollars and costs against him besides we bring him home beastly drunk. The poor, old, heart-broken mother pays the bill, and puts him to bed. All that night she sits by his side praying for him. The next morning he is sorry for his conduct, and promises her he will never do that again. Begs her to only trust him once more. She cleans him up. He starts again down to the city, with all the good resolutions that a boy ever left his mother's roof. Don't worry, mother, I'll be back for dinner, says he, and I will come back sober, too. That boy meant it, but his team had become unmanageable. His will-power is gone. His manhood is hurried to the dogs. As he goes out at the gate he says old gate when I come back through you today, I will be a sober man. You will never swing open for me to pass through you drunk, again. On to the city he goes. He is about to pass that old corner, called Jake's place. He starts to pass it, but the maddened team—seize the bits in their mouths; he throws himself against the reins; but he has lost his strength. He throws on the brakes, but it is too late. With one plunge the maddened team throws him against the bars. Drink, drink he hears a voice saying. That's his last day. Oh, what will I do? It's too late. I am doomed. That day that young man loses his life in a drunken riot. He is taken home dead. Young man, if you are in this room tonight and know yourself to be trifling with sin, throw on the brakes, and turn over the reins to one whose arms are long and strong. They reach across the universe; they span lands and seas. They have all power. Let him drive for you, young man. If there is one person above another who has my sympathy, it is the young man of today. There are deadfalls in society, deadfalls along the way, and traps in his path that his father knows not of. Men and women of God, don't condemn the young man of today, but save him.

A young lady of unusual talent, after completing her education in this country was sent away to Paris for a musical education. Her friends said to her "before you settle down you should visit the Golden Gate Park, the Garden of the Gods, the Royal Gorge, Pike's Peak and other places." The mother tried to persuade her to settle down, and make her dear old heart glad with her presence. She positively informed her dear old mother that she did not intend to be tied to her apron string always. Ah, what a mistake. That night you were away from your mother's apron string was the fatal night in your life. That is the night your team started to run away. This young lady took the advice of her gay friend, trampling the feelings of her mother under foot. A letter came back every week. One every two weeks and then one a month, until at last, that mother could not hear from her girl. She wrote, but could get no answer. She advertised, but could hear nothing. I wonder what is the matter? That young lady's team has become unmanageable. She has fallen. Her home is not in the old mansion on the farm. It is in the dens and caves with the ruined wrecks of her race. She would turn and come home, but she has fallen to the lowest depth of womankind. She plods the midnight streets with bare and bleeding feet. Oh! the memories of other days. How she would give this world were she innocent and pure as in other days. She has tried to reform. She has made many a good resolution, but she cannot have them out of her hands. The brakes will not act. Sin has rubbed the stamp of God's image from her soul. Her reckless team throws her against the crime of suicide, and ends her life. Oh! young woman, would to God I could turn on the white light of eternity, and let you see yourself, but you know more than anyone else. Your mother has given you good advice, but you will not take it. You are already driving at an awful speed. Soon your team will be unmanageable. Soon the brakes will not work, nor will your carriage stop until it strikes the curbstone of hell.

Father, are you in this room tonight? To whom God has committed sons and daughters to rear for eternity. How is your life before your family? Is it good? Or is it full of drunkenness, blasphemy and all manner of disorder. Do you not know that you are not only driving yourself to hell, but that some carriage that is carrying you to an awful eternity, is also carrying your family? Your sons would be Christians, but they are afraid of their father. They have never heard you pray, but they have heard you blaspheme the Lord Almighty. They have never seen you read the Bible, but they have seen you drunk. Turn over your reins this moment to one that is almighty.

I close by noticing the reckless mother. If there is anything in this world that I thank God for, it is for the memory of my dear old mother. I don't know that she could read or write, but she lived as close to God as she knew how, and with her loving hands she pointed her children to the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world. Jesus drove her team for her. Sometimes it was over rugged roads, but it was only to better fit my mother for heaven. At last her carriage halted in front of the gate of the eternal city. There was a clang, and the gate went up, and the safe driver entered within the city. Mother, if you are not a Christian, I beg you to give your heart to God before you go out of this room. Don't let your team become unmanageable before your children. Do you know you are going to meet your children at the judgment bar? Will they bless you there, or will they curse you? God wants to help you; will you let him?

Hidden Dangers

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Sanford Citizen can Afford to Ignore

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the approach of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Sanford proof:

Mrs. Mary Van Bibber, Second St., Sanford, Fla., says: "I suffered a great deal from backache. My kidneys were also weak and the frequent passages of the secretions were positively annoying. In spite of the doctoring I did, and the various remedies I tried, I grew no better. Finally I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. They removed the soreness and pain from my back and made my general health better. I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the great improvement they brought about."

IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Items of Interest Concerning Society People.

POINTS PURELY PERSONAL

How Celery City Vanity Fair While Away the Golden Hours—Social Gossip.

Last week in this department The Herald in behalf of poor down-trodden man resented some imputations which had been hurled at the men by some of the women, in the discussion of matrimonial problems, which have been engaging a little of the attention of a club or two. The Herald likes to agree with the women and will, now and then, strain a point in order to keep within the pale of their approval, but when they, in cold blood and with premeditation, assert that the men, that is the unmarried men, are selfish and will not marry because they are unwilling to give up the real comforts of the bachelor, for the uncertain ones of married life, this paper must take the part of much abused man.

The Herald, by resenting the charge of unselfishness, has caused several of the girls, in the language of the Anti-Slang club, "to jump on us with both feet" and the tramping given to us by one pair of nice little pedal extremities was such delightful pain that we want more of it and are going to "sass back."

She says that it is all nonsense to say that men of moderate means stand aloof from marriage because they are not properly encouraged by the girls, and through fear of not being able to furnish with a fifteen hundred dollar salary the contentment required for domestic tranquillity, and then she asks us "how men are to know how girls feel about that proposition until they ask them."

Now, that is something we never thought about, and we must confess it is pretty hard to answer. Surely no man would guess at anything of such importance, and he would not dare risk a conclusion on the actions of the girl, or on surrounding circumstances, because girls act so differently, one way to-day, another to-morrow, and so on. So when we consider the question propounded by some of these dear little creatures who are stamping on us we must admit that man should not guess at what a girl means without first asking her; that is, he should ask her first, and then guess at what she says, or rather what she means. It does not clear up the perplexity of man very much, but it is social-etiquette which should not be disregarded.

The Herald is very much pleased at the interest which is being taken by the girls in trying to solve some of the matrimonial problems. It was not the intention to say anything which would discourage the young men, but it was intended to spur the girls on to giving a little encouragement to the backward lover, and that is what these pouty creatures object to. Now what can be the objection? The women are trying to take the lead in every pursuit and then why not lead man up to the matrimonial noose? They have to rot along together in double harness after the wedding, each one encouraging the other, and trying to lighten the other's burden, and why cannot some of this encouragement be given to the men before the partnership is entered into. It certainly can do no harm, and it does not detract in the least from the dignity of women. Matrimony must be approached with a great deal of caution, and if the young men are not carefully handled they will shy and jump the track when they see the divorce record showing about 2,800 separations out of 22,000 weddings. The Herald will co-operate with the girls and ministers in bringing about more activity in the matrimonial market, and believes that encouragement will do more towards that end than all things else.

GREAT IS THERMIT

New Material that Heats Metal in Thirty Seconds.

Thermit is the name of a new German invention, being in the form of coarse powder and by its use metal can be heated for welding in thirty seconds or less. At the A. C. L. shops the new material was given a trial last Tuesday and it proved a great success. Part of a heavy frame under one of the engines had been broken, necessitating a welded joint. Instead of taking the engine apart, taking out the broken bar and putting it in a forge for welding, the two pieces were welded with the bar in its accustomed place, by the use of thermit. A small metal box was placed over the joint, and, after being heated to the right temperature, the thermit and boiler cuttings were poured in and when all was ready the pour was made by touching a hot bar to the mixture. In an instant the whole mass was at white heat and the welded joint was successfully made. This plan saved the time and expense over the old method upon this one job a total of $100. Master Mechanic Stevens is well pleased with the experiment as he is very anxious to improve the facilities of the shops at all times.

FROM MACARONI DELTA

From The Herald's Special Correspondent By Wireless Telephone

Miss Pinky Slimmer, has established a correspondence bureau over her father's barber shop and will write society and news items from Traders Point and Bungalow Corners exclusively for the Herald. The first installment follows.—Ed. Herald. Uncle Bill Slimmer went to Mudsoc on business yesterday. Peter Slimmer is learning to ride his new second-hand bicycle.

Elvira Slimmer had a bad cold in her head and her nose is much stopped up. Aunt Mary Slimmer wore her new store teeth to church last Sunday and her improved facial expression was much observed.

The Slimmer family ancestors came over in the Mayflower and have revolutionary blood in their veins. They are all highly educated. The sun rose in the blue eastern sky yesterday and shone with much warm effulgence during the forenoon, but alas the clouds gathered and it rained to beat the band all the afternoon. Sudden changes seem to be written on all things, as the poet Byron says.

The Pilcher, who sat for his picture yesterday, was unable to look pleasant because of sitting down on a carpet tack. Doc Spitzfadden was called over to Sorrento last night to see Amos Gilcuddy's wife who ruptured the calf of her leg climbing a barbed wire fence. Doc says she won't be able to use it with much alacrity for a long time.

Two families in Bungalow Corners have ordered bath-tubs to be put in their houses by the time warm weather sets in, and there is more or less gossip about such extravagance on the part of the families. We won't give names at present.

Jake Gilchrist's family all took baths in their new bath tub last Sunday morning. Rushing the season elicit haint you Jake!

Ask Nancy Huffstetter how about her new beau, don't mention Silie Stuckey's name unless you want trouble. Silie set up with Nance last Sunday night and hasn't nerve enough to speak to her once the entire evening. Bruce up, Silie.

Your correspondent has received a note from Mose Stuckey ordering The Herald stopped. Last week we alluded to his daughter Lib as being very short-waisted and headheaded whereas we are reliably informed that both of the girls are very long-waisted and have blonde hair. We hope our apology is accepted as we hint to loose a good subscriber like Mose.

Tootsy Ann Hybarger has been induced to accept the position of hired girl in Jim Finkbner's boarding house. Tootsy is the soprano singer in the Hardshell church.

CELERY GROWERS' RAILROAD

Sanford Farmers Build and Pay For Road Into Their Fields

Sanford, Fla., March 23.—If prices continue as good all season as they have up to the present time, the railroad here owned exclusively by the shippers, will be extended four miles. The corporation is the Sanford-Everglades Railroad Co. When the celery fields began to extend from the station here, the growers tried to induce the Atlantic Coast Line to build a spur into the celery fields so growers could load without hauling such a distance by tram. The A. C. L. refused to do so, as they said it would not pay, and as there was no other road entering the town that was available for the eastern markets, the growers would have to ship over the Coast Line.

The growers took the matter into their own hands and at present have five miles of the road through the principal celery fields. This road cost about $30,000 and is all paid for. It was open this year for the first time, and it is a great convenience to the growers. They now load directly onto the cars. Even after the road was built, the Atlantic Coast Line refused to do the switching for the loaded cars without a charge. To overcome this, the company leased an engine of its own, and now does its own switching.

Already the celery growing has led to an extension of the railroad about two miles, and when the other four miles are added this fall, as is likely to be done, it will cover nearly all the celery fields. The growers claim that if prosperity continues there is a possibility of building this line

100 miles down the coast through a very fine section that can grow vegetables. Some idea of the increase of shipments from Sanford can be gained when it is known that in 1899 there were only four refrigerator cars shipped out of this town; in 1900 it had only grown to 100 cars; while for the season of 1907-8, 1,193 cars were shipped. It is now estimated that in ten years there have been shipped 5,000 cars of celery, cabbage, lettuce and cauliflower from this station. The first car of celery shipped from here was sent by B. F. & J. N. Whitner. Capt. Whitner is a pioneer in the business.—New York Produce News.

A CITY BACKED BY FARMS

Sanford's Most Valuable Asset is The Vegetable Industry

Factories are a valuable adjunct to a city, and are almost indispensable in developing the growth and future prosperity. Greater than all the factories, however, is a good farming section that aids in building up and making permanent the city. Neither panics nor strikes can retard the growth founded upon the rich farming country, and to this reason is ascribed the growth of Sanford and the surrounding territory. Prof. P. H. Rolfs of the agricultural experiment station, comments upon this feature. He calls attention to a fact which cannot be disputed that cities without the backing of thrifty farmers living in their neighborhood and trading with their merchants are sure to fall behind in wealth, development and importance. They are certain to be outstripped by their sisters which are more fortunately situated.

The conducting of farmers' institutes inspire increased activity along the line of agriculture and teaches, at the same time, the science of cultivating the soil, so that it may yield its fullest return. The success of one farmer in a neighborhood induces others to settle and take advantage of the opportunities offered. The good work goes on with every year of bountiful crops until areas once almost unpopulated become thickly settled, and cities within whose sphere of influence they are located reap the benefit of the results.

One Rate For Advertising

The following from a Nebraska paper regarding advertising rates is the same plan being followed by The Herald:

"The so-called foreign ad. problem is always before us. Some newspaper men have tried to cut it out, but there is good business in it if it is worked right. The foreign advertiser will pay your regular rates if you have the circulation to warrant it and the sand to stand by your guns. But you must have both. He wants publicity. He must have it. He feeds it and his business would die without it. But he must know your circulation, and it must be large enough to warrant him in paying your price.

No newspaper of general circulation ought to sell advertising space for less than 10 cents per inch each insertion, but there are some of the foreign advertisers who cannot afford to pay that much on a circulation of less than 800. Therefore, it seems that the thing to do is to let them stay out.

"You cannot afford to charge your local merchants twice as much as you do some Chicago or New York house. That is not fair. Your local merchant is your stand-by. His patronage keeps you in business and without his support you would not be in it. He is the man who should receive your favors if you have favors to extend.
