was subject to His parents. He also continued to "increase in stature and wisdom, and in favor with God and man." Thus, as He grew up an obedient son, He also grew up the obedient Son of His Father, God. He did not strike out on His own until he was about thirty years of age. The time between the first Christmas and His baptism by John in Jordan was spent in learning the will of God for Himself.

Thus it was that Jesus lived the perfect example for young people as well as for older ones. He grew up in the family, obeying family customs and rules. He also grew up in the awareness of His relationship to God and of His need to obey the will of God.

All of us, whether we be small children, teen-agers, or adults, need to grow in terms of maturity and spiritually by being subject to the family and to our God. We need to know the rules of the game of life and follow them so that our lives may ultimately be so attuned to the will of God that we can achieve that perfect freedom which is found when we ask not what I want for me, but what God wants for me and for the

$4 million a year on a lobbying force of 339-more than one for every two members of Congress -to keep the congressmen happy, argue the armed forces' point of view, and feed the Pentagon information about what's happening on Capitol Hill. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield called it "an over-large establishment" and added in an interview: "It appears to me that admi rais and colonels could be used to better purpose and effect, and while I personally appreciate the great assistance which hey have rendered I think t same amount of assistance could be accomplished with fewer personnel."

Defense officials say the big legislative liaison force is necessary because of growing demands from and upon members of Congress, including an "astronomical number" of written and telephoned inquiries from their constituents.

While some Pentagon critics see it as further evidence of expanding military influence, defense officials insist there's no cause for concern that the weight of such a disciplined legislative effort might tip the scales in favor of the military's position in a Senate or House debate.

On the contrary, said a Pentagon officer. "We're always being pushed into a corner by the Fulbrights and others." A congressional source normally sensitive to military pressure or inroads said, "I don't think senators regard them in the usual sense as lobbyists but really just as members of the services helping with the mail."

If a congressman or senator asks the Pentagon for information on a military issue-as in the debate over the Sentinel anti-ballistic missily system-he gets it-along with material supporting the Defense Depart ment's view. "It would be silly to say we don't give them material that supports the secretary's decision." said Marine Brig. Gen. James F. Lawrence, deputy assistant to the secretary of defense for legislative affairs. Each service-Army, Air Force and Navy and Marine Corps-has its own legislative organization, but they work under the general supervision of a veteran Pentagon lawyer, Jack L. Stempler, assistant to the secretary of defense for legislative affairs.

The average number of persons working on legislative activities. according to the Pentagon's appropriation requests for fiscal 1970. are 140 military and 199 civilian at a total cost, principally pay and allowances, of $4.134.911 a year.

They work at congressional lia'son with individual members, with committees considering appropriations or holding hearings, and with committees involved in investigations. The military information centers are staffed by 30 employes, primarily to deal with inquiries bucked to them by congressional offices.

Narcotics Thieves Hit Three Businesses Smash Walls herald In Search By BILL SCOTT

Burglers, apparently looking for narcotics, entered three Altamonte businesses — a drug store, dentist and doctor's office - during the weekend and made off with a small quantity of narcotics from one of the establishments, according to information today from J. Q. (Slim) Galloway, county investigator. Galloway reported the in-1
