Compulsory Military Training

Now that Congress has appropriated some ten or fifteen billion dollars for national defense, it is preparing to debate the question of compulsory military training. It seems logical enough that if the government needs a two-ocean navy, some 35,000 warplanes, and countless tanks, anti-aircraft and machine guns, it will also need men to man them.

Under the circumstances it is difficult to see how there could possibly be any opposition to this proposal and yet there are men in Congress who oppose compulsory military training because they say it is one of the measures employed by Hitler, because the United States has never before resorted to it in time of peace, because they are afraid we are going to send another army to Europe.

They say it isn't fair to force a young man trying to get a college education to spend a year or two learning to be a soldier in a training camp. They say it is inhuman to take a young man away from his wife and children and send him off to study the more advanced methods of mass killing. They ask what about the young fellow who has a good job and is compelled to give it up in order to join the army.

Well, all that's tough, nobody denies that. But anybody who doesn't like it should blame it on Mr. Hitler and company, not on anybody in this country. Nobody in America likes this sort of thing any more than we like the enormous taxes they are going to have to pay in order to build battleships. But Hitler with his rank disregard for the rights of others and his brutal resort to force makes all these measures necessary.

In modern warfare it isn't possible to resort to military training after the fighting has begun. The first blow comes like lightning preceded not even by the ancient and honorable preliminary declaration of war. Our relations with Germany might apparently be the best possible, as were Belgium's, Holland's, and Norway's, when we woke up some morning to learn that we have been attacked.

A million men would spring to arms overnight, as some have said long before us, but what could they do if they had been given no previous training in the handling of modern implements of war? Such an army of untrained recruits would be the most pitiful kind of cannon fodder for the veteran legions of foreign powers.

We need a standing army of at least half a million men. We need a greatly expanded and improved National Guard. And we need compulsory military training for as many men as can be provided for in military camps. Anything short of this will be asking for it just as other unprepared nations asked for, and got it.

A Public Scandal

Several years ago the conduct of the Pardon Board in releasing dangerous criminals without rime or reason just because weeping relatives were present to prey upon the sympathies of the board members resulted in such a far-reaching protest throughout the state that promises were made to do something about it and for a time the board did seem to take its responsibilities seriously.

Recently, however, as public protests subsided, and the board concluded it was no longer being watched, it has gone back to its former careless system of issuing pardons to anyone and everyone who asked for them and who had a few friends or relatives to appear in their behalf, regardless of the obvious menace to the public.

"We learn from Miami newspapers," says the St.
Petersburg Independent, "that the pardon board has gone back to its old ways—as, indeed, it was bound to do sooner or later under so unsatisfactory a system. It has released Walter Valiton, who killed Officer Lauria Weaver in Miami 15 years ago. The Miami News describes the killing as follows:

The boy (Valiton) had stolen a car. Sergeant Weaver, riding a motorcycle, ordered him to pull over to the curb. Without warning, Valiton shot.

"The board explained its inexplicable pardon by saying that Valiton had a good prison record. Its interpretation of the phrase is extraordinary. Valiton escaped from prison three or four times (the News says three, the Herald four) and was, according to the Herald, an incorrigible for a number of years.

"We can see no excuse for turning such a man loose on the people of Florida without, apparently, having better assurance than a 'good' prison record that he has completely reformed. But cases of this sort will continue to crop up as long as Florida retains its irrational and unscientific pardon board instead of installing a modern parole system.

"Fortunately the people of Florida will soon have the opportunity to change this system. In November they will vote on a constitutional amendment providing for the creation of a state parole commission which, if properly set up, would assure the state against a repetition of the scandals which have long been associated with the present pardon board system.

"We shall probably vote 'no' on most of the proposed amendments this November, but we shall certainly vote
'yes' on this one."

MOVIE MUSINGS

Walt Disney and RKO Pictures announced this week the return to circulation of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," released in December, 1937, and withdrawn about a year and a half later after a reputed gross business of almost $10,000,000. I understand the picture will be released as a "Snow White Festival" with the Disney shorts, "Ferdinand the Bull," "The Practical Pig," "The Ugly Duckling," and "Donald's Lucky Day" on the same bill.

And he gets paid for doing it! Oscar Levant of radio's "Information Please," currently working in Paramount's "Rhythm on the River," recently received an assignment considered by everyone on the set as one of film-dom's easiest. All he had to do was to appear to be reading at random from a book by his favorite author. Here's the pay-off:—The book was "A Smattering of Ignorance." The author—Oscar Levant.

I don't know how many of you folks got the thrill that came to me when I saw Eddie Leonard, Blanch Ring, Tricie Frigana, Grace La Rue and Paul Gordon in Bing Crosby's picture, "If I Had My Way," the other night. Seeing them brought back to me the many happy hours I spent watching them and hundreds of other great stars on New York's "Great White Way." Incidentally, the story of one of the greatest of them all, Lillian Russell, will be unfolded at the Ritz, Sunday and Monday. I never had the pleasure of seeing Lillian Russell on the stage but I do remember Weber and Fields and Eddie Foy. Seems as if I saw them ages ago... How time marches on!

Sheboygan, Wisconsin, has just passed an ordinance requiring all band and orchestras to play four patriotic numbers in all concerts, there. These are the requirements:—Programme must open with "America," close first half with "Stars and Stripes Forever." Second half of programme must open with "God Bless America" and close with "The Star Spangled Banner." The city fathers of Sheboygan declare: "It is imperative under present world conditions that we as citizens of these United States, should express in every way possible, our loyalty to this country."

CAMPOGRAMS

Recent visitors include James Tew, Mrs. L. E. Tew, Sr., Mrs. H. C. Strong-Loft and Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Park and children.

The name of Mrs. T. J. Drummond was inadvertently omitted from the list of Sunday visitors. All of the boys in Cabin Two will enter the Junior High School this Fall. They are Glenn Lingle, James Drummond, Billy Grey, Joe Wathen, Leroy Gilbert and Kenny Leffler.

Mr. Morris has been leading the boys in some unusual and interesting games around the evening council fires.

Scout work is being done this week at the camp. In this connection there are two Eagle Scouts, Chas. Stanley and Sidney Nix, Jr., who are serving as camp leaders. Mr. Morris is scoutmaster for Troop Five.

Walt Disney and RKO Pictures announced this week the return to circulation of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," released in December, 1937, and withdrawn about a year and a half later after a reputed gross business of almost $10,000,000. I understand the picture will be released as a "Snow White Festival" with the Disney shorts, "Ferdinand the Bull," "The Practical Pig," "The Ugly Duckling," and "Donald's Lucky Day" on the same bill.

And he gets paid for doing it! Oscar Levant of radio's "Information Please," currently working in Paramount's "Rhythm on the River," recently received an assignment considered by everyone on the set as one of film-dom's easiest. All he had to do was to appear to be reading at random from a book by his favorite author. Here's the pay-off:—The book was "A Smattering of Ignorance." The author—Oscar Levant.

I don't know how many of you folks got the thrill that came to me when I saw Eddie Leonard, Blanch Ring, Tricie Frigana, Grace La Rue and Paul Gordon in Bing Crosby's picture, "If I Had My Way," the other night. Seeing them brought back to me the many happy hours I spent watching them and hundreds of other great stars on New York's "Great White Way." Incidentally, the story of one of the greatest of them all, Lillian Russell, will be unfolded at the Ritz, Sunday and Monday. I never had the pleasure of seeing Lillian Russell on the stage but I do remember Weber and Fields and Eddie Foy. Seems as if I saw them ages ago... How time marches on!

Shelbygan, Wisconsin, has just passed an ordinance requiring all band and orchestras to play four patriotic numbers in all concerts, there. These are the requirements:—Programme must open with "America," close first half with "Stars and Stripes Forever." Second half of programme must open with "God Bless America" and close with "The Star Spangled Banner." The city fathers of Shelbygan declare: "It is imperative under present world conditions that we as citizens of these United States, should express in every way possible, our loyalty to this country."

ST. LOUIS, July 12. (U.P.)—The male sex may have lost much of its prerogatives but it is still the stronger of the two sexes as far as hearing is concerned. Dr. Fred J. Cohen of Wichita, Kan., told the convention of the American Otological society that statistics on 500 cases of deafness which he diagnosed disclose that women have a 118 percent greater chance of becoming deaf than do men.

Merchants, bankers and agriculturalists were asked by the government to give suggestions on how to improve the economic organization of Nicaragua.
