The Cost Of Strikes

Just what a great economic loss to the whole nation any interruption of production in a great industry such as occurred recently in General Motors is, can hardly be realized by anyone far from the scenes of the disturbance, but the fact remains that the General Motors strike has cost every business in this country something, and has cost many of them millions of dollars.

One newspaper writer is quoted by the Tampa Tribune as saying, "The statistics alone do not tell the whole story and sets out the picture in terms that can be easily understood. The motor industry tops all others as a user of steel, rubber, gasoline and lubricants, plate glass, mohair, nickel and lead. It is a great contributor to the railroad freight volume of the country. Automotive products represented 3,825,000 carloads in 1935."

"Referring directly to the General Motors situation, he points out that during 1936 more than two million cars represented the output of G. M. establishments. Then he estimates some of the resultant losses that might appear if an output of such size and scope had been longer interrupted. The railroads will lose business at the rate of at least 50 million dollars worth of revenue freight a year and cotton consumption would be curtailed by 140 million pounds," he recites in round numbers. "Around 120 million pounds of rubber annually go into tires for General Motors cars and some 28 million pounds into other parts of cars and trucks."

"The items suggested, of course, involve not only losses of profits to owners of the enterprises that sold goods to General Motors but also infer tremendous losses for labor in the form of idleness that would ensue in these industries, in the event the strike had been indefinitely prolonged."

In view of the enormous costs involved for all of us, it is to be hoped that John Lewis did not mean what he said at his last press conference to the effect that he is now planning a strike in the coal and steel industries, or perhaps that he did not say it at all. It would seem that there might be some less expensive way of "organizing" these industries, or at least some way that would confine the expense to the interested parties.

Varying Versions

Usually it is pretty difficult to arrive at the truth of any given situation. If you don't believe this, take a brief look at the face of your watch, hand it to a friend, and then proceed to describe it to him in complete detail. Now you know what a newspaper reporter is up against!

Further emphasizing the difficulty of ascertaining the truth, is the problem of police officers, insurance underwriters, and other interested parties following an automobile accident. As the Americanizer points out, "An auto accident produces three stories, the hitter's, the hittee's, and the truth."

"The latter is seldom used except by bothersome witnesses," the Americanizer continues. "Truth is stranger than fiction and usually produces a lot of it."

"But the other two versions of the mass meeting offer a wide range of entertaining fiction."

"When parts and passengers stop flying through the air, two drivers emerge from the wreckage waving flags and policies."

"The involved cars hang together, but the stories of how it happened never do."

"After hearing both sides the natural conclusion is: Each car was jogging along in second, hugging the right curb."

"Suddenly, and without warning, they leaped upon each other like a couple of strange bull dogs. Thus when all is said and done, a lot has been said and nothing done."

"Everybody comes out all right except the insurance man who wasn't even at the party."

SEVENTY YEARS YOUNG

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

The more the record of the justices of the Supreme Court is studied, the hollower becomes the President's pretense that his proposed packing of the court has any relation to efficiency or ability.

We mentioned yesterday Justices Oliver Wendell Holmes and Brandeis. Consider the others. Out of a total of seventy-seven members of the Supreme Court since its creation, thirty-eight were seventy-one years of age or over when they retired. Out of the last fifty justices, thirty-one retired at over seventy years of age. The list, since the court's inception, includes such great names as John Marshall (eighty), Roger B. Taney (eighty-seven), Horace Gray (seventy-four), John M. Harlan (seventy-eight), Melville W. Fuller (seventy-seven), William H. Taft (seventy-three) and Charles E. Hughes (still in office at the age of seventy-five). Only a few of the younger justices acquired corresponding fame or rendered equal service. Of these exceptions perhaps the most distinguished was Joseph Story.

In other fields of government, parallels can be found. The Presidency, it is true, has for the most part been filled by men under seventy. But most of Benjamin Franklin's greatest work was done after he had passed the Roosevelt deadline. In Great Britain Gladstone three times held the office of Prime Minister after he was seventy, and was at his youngest and most progressive in his eighty-second year. Clemenceau saved France and the Allied cause in his seventy-seventh and seventy-eighth years.

On the President's side, it may be argued that most big business concerns provide for comparatively early retirement. The railroads set seventy years as the age limit. A number of the big banks retire their men, with a few exceptions, at the age of sixty-five. One of the largest oil companies has a sixty-year retirement age. But executive work differs fundamentally from that of Federal judges. Particularly in the case of the justices of the Supreme Court, a long term of office gives a richness of knowledge and maturity of judgment that is hard to replace. A new man appointed to the court, be he young or old, necessarily is not of as much value in his early years as after five or ten years in office. He cannot acquire the necessary background except on the bench.

A glance at the ages of the present members of the Supreme Court completes the sham of President Roosevelt's contention. Liberalism flourishes equally in the oldest member of the court, Justice Brandeis, and in Justice Stone, who is next to the youngest. In the conservative point of view unite Justice Roberts, who is the youngest, and Justice Van Devanter, next to the oldest. Plainly it is not because such men as Messrs. Van Devanter, McReynolds and Sutherland are over seventy that Mr. Roosevelt would oust them. Their crime is that they have declared New Deal statutes unconstitutional. With a deplorable lack of candor, Mr. Roosevelt attempts to hide his real motive under apparently plausible arguments. Judging by the reactions of the press and the leading minds of the country, he has failed to deceive any one.

In 1908 the United States war department accepted delivery of a Wright biplane, the first military airplane in the world and the first plane to be operated by any government.

The first electric cooking was done by Benjamin Franklin, and the first practical electric lamp was patented by Thomas Edison 50 years ago.

 BIRTHDAY GAZETTE

Tomorrow the writer of these lines will have, his sixty-ninth birthday and in 306 days from now he will have to walk out of the Gazette office or President Roosevelt will have the law on him for being 70 and continuing to function in his old job. In the meantime, before that, we expect to see all the congressmen over 70 join all the Supreme Court judges over 70 and all the nice old burlesque tenorists curled up in the warm-cushioned federal chairs seated out of the government.

Frank Gannett, Newspaper Publisher, Announces His Plans To Lead Fight To Uphold Constitutional Government

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 15. (AP)—Frank E. Gannett, publisher of the Gannett newspapers and an ardent supporter of some of President Roosevelt's policies, announcing the organization of a "National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government," made public today the Committee's form of petition to Congress and a statement of its purposes.

Mr. Gannett flew from his winter home in Miami Beach for conferences in Washington and New York and thence will return to Rochester to give his time to the work of the Committee, of which he is temporary chairman and treasurer.

The Committee's petition to Congress is being distributed to individuals and organizations from coast to coast, to whom Mr. Gannett has written personally. Following is Mr. Gannett's announcement:

"Since I commented on President Roosevelt's proposal for startling changes in our Supreme Court, I have received commendation and assurance of support from various parts of the country. So many have urged me to lead a fight to preserve and protect the Supreme Court and our Constitution that I have been persuaded to join with others in the organization of a National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government."

"The object of this Committee will be to help mobilize and coordinate individuals and mass protest against the proposed undermining of an independent judiciary."

"Never in our history have the American people been so deeply stirred. It is not an issue for partisan politics. It transcends party, overshadows religious, racial, and all other dividing lines."

"Our form of government was set up as a protection against tyranny and autocracy. Our forefathers saw the necessity of having the three departments, Legislative, Executive, and Judicial, kept separate and independent. If we permit one man to become the master of all three branches of the government and of the fundamental law, then we shall throw away our most precious heritage and shall have founded the death knell of democracy."

"If all those who believe in our form of government will rise up and make their protest heard in Washington, the constitutional balance among Legislative, Executive, and Judicial department of the government can be preserved."

"The National Committee will include outstanding Democrats and Republicans, liberals and conservatives. It will be representative of agriculture, business and labor, the rich and the poor alike—for one has as much at stake as the other. It will include leaders in education and religion, and representative men and women of all professions."

"A petition has been drafted, universal in its appeal, which will be distributed through the nation for use by co-operating committees and organizations in every state and congressional district. Copies of this petition have been sent to every daily newspaper in the country."

"The National Committee encourages immediate action of all

What Explains Antagonism For Court Proposal

 fifteen as an innumerable decision, then the next administration would be authorized to increase the number from fifteen to twenty-five so as to secure a different concentration of the Constitution."

"It so happens that we have at the moment in the White House a man who is imbued with the desire to relieve the suffering of the unfortunate. We have no way of knowing, however, who will occupy the White House ten years, or twenty years from today. If the present administration can stack the court so as to have his views upheld, then the future occupant of the White House may be a communist, or a Fascist, may likewise pack the court."

The Supreme Court is the only umpire the people have over the rules of the game as politics is played, said Mr. Wilson, adding that Congress cannot be depended upon to protect the rights of the people. "At one time or another in the last 150 years," Mr. Wilson wrote, "Congress has enacted laws which have sought to abolish every single guarantor of personal liberty and freedom as enshrined in the Bill of Rights in the Constitution."

"Unless there had been a tribunal, free of political interference and not subject to political pressure, which could stand between the people and these encroachments upon their rights, the Bill of Rights would long ago have disappeared."

306 Days Court Plan Of President Is Frightful Move

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Senator Glass, Virginia Democrat, said today President Roosevelt's proposal to increase the Supreme Court unless justices over 70 retire was "frightful." He added he is ready to speak in the Senate against it.

He said the President's proposal of court reform was "unprecedented" since the founding of the Government.

Glass, who frequently has opposed Roosevelt monetary policies, spoke as the President called five Democratic senators, three of them opposed to the plan, to the White House for a conference. The five were King of Utah, Burke of Nebraska, Van Nuys of Indiana—all opposed to

Husband Of Golfer Loses Court Appeal Against Sentence
TALLAHASSEE, Feb. 13.—John D. Crews, husband of Golfer Maureen Orcutt Crews, lost his appeal today to the Supreme Court from a sentence of 120 days in jail for contempt of court in Miami.
Holding itself strictly to the discussion of applicable laws, the Court affirmed a conviction for statements that he could bribe Circuit Judge Worth W. Trammell of Miami in a case in which the judge was sitting.
Crews was remanded to the custody of the sheriff at Miami but unconfined reports here said Crews is in California. Lawyers said he could not be extradited for contempt which is not a felony.

Sanford Bureau Carries On Battle Against Insects
NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The Mississippi River's flood crests were reported "flattening out" today as they rolled closer to Vicksburg in the journey to the Gulf of Mexico.
The "flattening" process, Meteorologist J. T. Lindley said, would slow the movement of crests but would not increase the strain on the main levee system.
Lower valley dwellers from Cairo to New Orleans had now assurances from army engineers that there is no cause for worry anywhere.
The situation for inhabitants of a 50 square mile area of inundated lowlands northeast of Vicksburg was not encouraging and refugees continued to pour into camps provided by the Red Cross Federal and State agencies.

I buy these Chesterfields

... because they give me the good things I want in a cigarette

I work hard and I play hard... and I guess I smoke more cigarettes than most anybody I know.

The reason is... Chesterfields give me a lot of pleasure.

It's easy to figure why... they're mild, not strong... and they've got a taste and aroma that clicks every time!
