Behind the screen play of rewrite man Grover Jones is the ton Railway, tale of an actual shipwreck and of a man who "played God" with human lives on the brink of Ais-

Here is the story, a. gleaned from United Stales Circuit Court testimony of the survivors, reported in the Philadelphia Public Ledger for April, 23, 21 and 25, 1842:

On the night of April 19, the previous year, the Yankee packet "William Brown," Liverpool for Philadelphia, with eighty two souls abeard, struck an iceberry off the coast of Newfoundland and stove in both her bows.

Captain George L. Harris ordered the lifeboat lowered - a jollyboat and a longboat, with eafe room for no more than thirty persons between them.

The rkipper took eight with him into the jollyboat, seven of them members of his crew. The mate, Francis Rhodes, commanded the longboat, containing the nine remaining sailors and thirty-two passengers. And while both bonts stood by, the "William Brown," with thirty one remaining, passenquarterdeck, capted and plunged head first to the lattom."
