Cholesterol Fight Must Include Diet

DEAR DR. LAMB—I just had an examination and was told that my cholesterol is 225. I asked my doctor what I was doing wrong as I rarely eat any fried foods, gravy, ice cream, chocolate candy, cakes, pies, sweets, sauces, French fries, butter, expensive steaks, chicken skin or eggs.

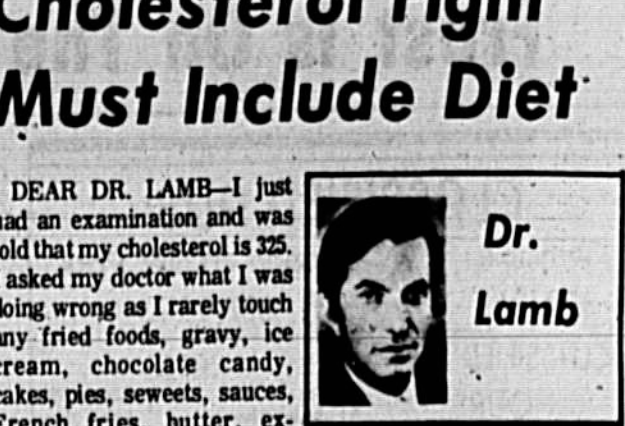

However, I do love cheese. I stopped that. The doctor told me to have beef only once a week. I buy only extra lean meat so I'm at a loss to know why my cholesterol is so high. Can you help me?

Having a high cholesterol isn't always bad. It depends on how much of it is "good" cholesterol and how much of it is "bad" cholesterol. Since you're a woman you have more likelihood that the greater portion of your cholesterol is in small particles which can be beneficial. This is explained more fully in The Health Letter I'm sending you.

Don't forget to exercise. Regular, sensible exercise helps to control calories and, apparently, helps to favorably influence cholesterol levels. Blood fat levels, at least in some people. Finally, if by weight control, diet and exercise you presently have a high cholesterol, then there are medications that can, and probably should, be used to help lower your cholesterol further.

Also don't get so excited over one determination. The cholesterol level can fluctuate in relationship to stress. Before deciding that a person has a persistently elevated cholesterol level, it's a good idea to have at least three determinations. A good study years ago showed that students during examinations tended to have much higher cholesterol levels than usual. Stress was the reason and it was temporary.

Played Role In Hospital Rejection

Adventist Architects Same As State

County officials dismayed by decision. Story, Page 2A

County officials were dismayed by the decision of the Seminole County Commission to reject the Adventist Hospital. The architectural firm used by the state to support its rejection of Hospital Corporation of America's proposal to build a new hospital in Sanford is the same firm used for years by the Adventist Health System—a strong competitor last year in the race to win control of Seminole Memorial Hospital.

The state Office of Community Medical Facilities ruled late Friday that the Adventist Health System's proposal to purchase the facility and spend $6 million renovating it.

The state recently asked us if they could talk to our architects, Mardian Blair, Adventist Health System, Orlando-based regional vice president said today. They indicated how we arrived at our conclusions.

Jim Boyle, Adventist senior vice president, said the system's proposal to purchase the facility and spend $6 million renovating it.

Loss Of New Hospital Would Hurt

Hospital Corporation of America is prohibited from building a new hospital in Sanford, its contractual agreement with Seminole County will lapse, said County Attorney Nikki Clayton.

Here's what the county stands to lose if the deal falls through:

—A new, $24 million hospital to replace aging Seminole Memorial Hospital.

—$41 million in cash, including $2 million from leasing the current hospital to HCA for three years and $2.1 million from its sale after the new hospital is built.

—About $27,000 annually in property taxes to be shared by the county, the city of Sanford and the Seminole County School Board.

West Palm Beach.

A spokesman for Edge Firm said the company has done work in central Florida for Adventist Health Systems—Sunbelt, the Seventh-Day Adventist Church-affiliated group which operates Hospital-Orlando and Florida Hospital-Altamonte and hundreds of hospitals worldwide.

In December the county commission narrowed down its alternatives for Seminole Memorial to the proposals of three groups: HCA, the Adventists and Sunbelt. The county's own Board of Health began immediately to take the steps necessary to obtain its Certificate of Need from the state. Such certification must be obtained before a new hospital may be built. This is the state's method of attempting to hold down health care costs by preventing excessive duplication of services.

The state's rejection of the HCA proposal prompted one source close to the situation to surmise that the state based its opinion on a report by one of HCA's early competitors, the Adventist system.

Relly said Monday, however, that the state's review in May of Seminole Memorial Hospital was part of a study of all hospitals in the state.

Although HCA's new hospital was proposed as a replacement facility, not a duplication, Clarke said Monday his office can consider any aspect of economics in ruling on a Certificate of Need application. He said in this case he feels the less costly alternative is renovating the old hospital.

"We're not in the business of spending more money than we have to," Welborn said.

"But $6 million won't touch it. Not to bring that hospital up to code and make it functional and efficient by our operating standards, which are conservative. We build frugally."

HCA is in the process of appealing the decision of Clarke's office.

"We're anxious to go to a hearing to find out what information they have that we are not privy to," Welborn said.

Clarke said the appeal will go to a hearing officer appointed by the state under its Administrative Procedures Act. But that officer's recommendation would return to his office for acceptance or rejection. If the hospital proposal is rejected again, the next appeal step is court, he said.

Welborn said if HCA wins at the hearing and the state still elects to challenge the proposal HCA would proceed with construction of the new hospital anyway.

"We'll go ahead and build and accept the risk," he said, "because it costs so much to delay."

Seminole County Attorney Nikki Clayton said Monday if the case reaches the courts it could drag on two to five years, although she said litigation is unpredictable.

"But we don't anticipate it will come to that," she said. "The denial does not appear justified. It is obviously an error, and with concerted action it can be turned around."

As far as the Hospital's Certificate of Need goes, Clarke said Monday he "sign-off" on the ruling, giving the application final approval or disapproval.

"He may be trumpeting a little too soon, I'm afraid," Clayton said.

Blind 84-Year-Old Sails By Feeling The Wind

How do you pilot a sailboat when you're unfamiliar with the waters and almost blind?

"You feel the wind," Charles E. Vanderloot said. "The wind is always right angle to the waves, he said.

"Mostly I feel the tiller and feel the wind. It's about the same as night sailing."

Confident and in great spirit Monday, Vanderloot entered in the sailing competition of the opening day of the Golden Age Games in Sanford. The sailors were put through their paces on Lake Monroe just off the shores of Monroe Harbor.

Vanderloot didn't win any medals, but he wasn't entered in the contest to be a serious competitor. He was happy just to be a participant.

"It keeps you out of the house," he said.

But for many of those age 65 and up, the Golden Age Games are an opportunity to be competitive—and occasionally victorious.

Louise Wing, 62, of Lynn, Mass., said: "Two of them were 60-footers."

She now has two gold medals to show for it and she promises to keep swimming "forever."

After all, she began "when I first saw water."

Vanderloot began his sport at an early age, too. He was 14 when he first raised sails and learned to steer and tack.

Originally from Pennsylvania, Vanderloot sailed Chesapeake Bay and the Susquehanna River as a youth.

Since then he's owned some 40 boats. "I was not of a heavy trader in boats," he said. "Two of them were 60-footers."

He also has been occupied by listening to recordings for the blind.

"I can't read anymore," he said, "but I keep up with current news with the recordings." —DIANE PETRYK

Sanford Housing Authority Axes Director In Swift Meeting

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Thomas Wilson III who was executive director of the Sanford Housing Authority for the past eight years, was summarily fired by the Housing Authority board Monday afternoon, after a meeting that lasted only 15 minutes.

Blackbeare said today the board decided at its Monday afternoon meeting to chain-lock the authority's doors. "We are custodians of the property there. We want to take every precaution."

Meanwhile, City Manager Warren Knowles said that the authority which occupies offices in the lower floor of city hall should have sought the city's permission before chain-locking the doors.

"They are the city's tenants and were supposed to get permission because by locking those doors they are also locking up other city areas," Knowles said.

Some housing authority members were in the locked-up offices this morning. Knowles said there are other ways of getting into those offices and perhaps the chain and lock are "symbolic."

Knowles said he found about two months ago that a problem existed in the administration of the housing authority.

"I did not and do not wish to become involved in the housing authority's internal operations or their programs," Knowles said. "My interest was and is in those programs which they are addressing officers in the lower floor of city hall should have sought the city's permission before chain-locking the doors."

County Asks $3 Million

The Seminole County Commission this morning voted unanimously to apply for $3 million in Federal Community Development Block Grant funds for drainage, paving and other improvements in Winwood Park and the Lockhart subdivision.

County Planner Woody Price estimated the county's chances of obtaining the money are "fair."

Price said the federal government has $4 million in uncommitted block grants for the coming year. And it is expected to have $4 million to $5 million in subsequent years.

"We're asking for 25 percent of that," he said.

The city is giving Seaboard written notice in a letter from the mayor. "If we don't hear from them in a reasonable time, we'll have our attorney write a letter," said Mrs. Lormann. "I'm going to stay on top of it. They were supposed to have put up signal lights this year at Orange and Church street crossings but they haven't done anything."

'Law' Could Fix Longwood Rails

For years the city of Longwood has been attempting to get the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad to repair crossings in the city without results, but there may be hope yet.

VETERANS MARCH DOWN LAKEFRONT

With flags flying and the brass ensemble from Seminole High playing patriotic tunes, veterans marched down Seminole Boulevard to Memorial Park to observe Veterans Day. Several hundred gathered to participate in the services, which included a laying of a wreath at the base of the flagpole, a three-gun salute and the playing of taps to honor those who fought and those who died in the defense of America.

Time Has Come For Sacrifices

The electioneering is done and the presidential decision has been made. The great problems debated in the campaign remain, however.

The problems of the automobile industry are among those that require priority attention.

It has been said that the auto industry is going to hell in a handbasket. The industry is under siege from Japanese automakers — really the Japanese government which guides Japanese companies. The industry also is under siege from our own government which assails it with costly regulation. New models are being offered to the public. If they don't sell, the industry will be in deep, deep trouble.

Neither major candidate in the presidential election would address the problem of labor costs in the auto industry. An article in the New York Times last summer pointed out that autoworkers earn between $17 and $18 an hour. The article noted that this is "roughly double the average American wage." Now people in industry and even in Congress are now beginning to consider restrictions on the flood of Japanese imports, they are silent on the even more basic problem of excessive labor costs.

The United Auto Workers rely on political clout to bypass the marketplace. They think they can maintain high wages through their political muscle. If they succeed, it will be at the expense of America's taxpayers. There will be more Chryslers and more union representation on the boards of automakers. We could find ourselves in the position of the British, building cars that the public won't buy. What would we do with excess automobiles produced through federal subsidies? It's a question worth considering.

The hard fact is that labor costs in the auto industry must come down. The UAW must agree to accept a lower wage scale in order to restore the lost competitiveness of many American-made cars. The UAW also must accept a much higher degree of automation in Detroit's plants. This automation already is in place in Japanese factories and is a major reason for the competitiveness of Japanese automobiles.

In other words, the autoworkers must concede some part of their excessive wages if they are to keep their jobs at all. And there must be at least a few courageous offshooters who will call for a wage cut in the industry.

To date, the autoworkers have been shielded by federal aid. The Labor Department has declared them all eligible to receive 70 percent of their regular pay from the federal government. When that runs out, there will be additional unemployment benefits. These can't be paid indefinitely, however.

The autoworkers already have received a vast amount of aid from the public treasury. The time has come for them to make sacrifices in order to preserve their jobs and the industry that employs them.

Emerging Education Goliath

WASHINGTON — One of President Carter's top legislative priorities of the past four years was education.

That was also a top priority of the National Education Association, a union that represents some 2 million teachers nationally and that was one of Carter's earliest and biggest labor supporters in 1976. The union believed that creation of such a department would enhance the importance of education in federal policy making — and, incidentally, Carter was quick to dedicate himself to this goal.

The cost-conscious Congress finally went along with the proposal in July 1979 after being assured by high administration officials that establishment of the department would not increase federal spending — and might even save the government money by merging programs and eliminating duplication.

Budget Director James McIntyre, for example, advised Congress that the department "will contain more people and cost no more than is now devoted to educational programs." In fact, 350 to 400 positions will be eliminated, saving $15 million to $19 million.

In gratitude to Carter for keeping his campaign pledge, the NEA rallied around the president in the dark early days of his reappointment. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., NEA members eventually made up 20 percent of Carter's delegates to the Democratic Convention.

Interestingly, the smaller American Federation of Teachers backed Kennedy just as strongly as the NEA. Kennedy's support of the NEA was the Department of Education for much the same reason that its rival union did: support of the NEA would increase the establishment and growth would increase the NEA's political clout.

And the Education Department has — at a rate unparalleled in the federal bureaucracy. In fiscal 1980, it took 4,400 employees to run the federal government's 152 education programs at a cost of $11 billion. The new department already has 1,500 employees and a fiscal 1981 budget of $15.5 billion.

Rather than becoming the streamlined agency that the administration promised, the new department has almost overnight grown top-heavy with high-priced officials. For instance, the department is entitled by law to five assistant secretaries. Yet, it currently has 11 staffers designated as assistant secretaries, receiving the salaries of assistant secretaries and having the status of staffs befitting that exalted bureaucratic level. The Pentagon is the only other Cabinet-level department with as many assistant secretaries.

Education Secretary Shirley Hufstader, a former federal judge, has an interesting rationale for naming six more assistant secretaries than the law allows. She points out that the enabling legislation permits the appointment of four additional "executives."

Vesco Case Merits Special Probe

WASHINGTON — Now that Jimmy Carter defeated and cannot manipulate the Justice Department for another four years, a special prosecutor should be appointed to tie together the tangled threads of the Robert Vesco case.

I began reporting more than two years ago that Vesco, an international swindler, had offered multimillion-dollar bribes to presidential cronies. First, I tried to buy his way out of legal difficulties; then he offered me a job. I refused. I then reported that he had offered to pay me $1 million to help him get out of the country. I refused. I then reported that he had offered to pay me $1 million to help him get out of the country. I refused. I then reported that he had offered to pay me $1 million to help him get out of the country. I refused.

Several people of impeccable credentials have examined the evidence and have concluded that the Carter administration is guilty of "stonewalling" in every sense of the Watergate term. They range from U.S. senators to federal investigators, from a grand jury foreman to a federal judge.

There are three main threads in the Vesco-Carter case. First, Vesco's flight from the U.S. in 1973 — just weeks after Carter was inaugurated. Vesco offered $10 million in stolen stocks to Georgia crony of the new administration. A $10,000 advance was paid to Spencer Lee IV, a close friend of White House aide Hamilton Jordan and Richard Harden.

"America's Golden Leaf"

That's tobacco, according to a new publicity campaign recently announced by the tobacco industry's chief lobbying group. The campaign is designed to combat efforts of anti-smoking groups against tobacco.

Designed by the Tobacco Growers Information Committee, the campaign includes a monthly newsletter giving the industry a side of tobacco smoking and its connection with health problems.

Reginald L. Lester, director of the committee, said the campaign will emphasize tobacco's "significant contribution" in terms of jobs, income, tax receipts and balance of trade.

In a recent United Press International story, Lester is quoted as saying that a study has shown the tobacco industry and related businesses contributed $66 billion to the gross national product last year.

The story didn't say who conducted the study. But assuming the figure is accurate, consider it in comparison with these facts brought forth by DeBary Biophysics and cancer research specialist Dr. Mary Ann Kontrick. The direct cost of all smoking induced illness in the U.S. is $8.2 billion per year.

One of the smoking-induced illnesses is emphysema. The total cost of lost earnings and medical care attributed to pulmonary emphysema is $615 million per year in the U.S.

The economic cost of lung cancer is $2.3 billion per year in the U.S. Twenty percent of this amount accounts for direct cost of doctor bills and medicine. Eighty-percent accounts for indirect costs, such as the value of work lost.

Employees who smoke are absent from work 34 to 45 percent more than non-smokers, costing $1 million workdays each year.

Smoking workers have twice the number of on-the-job accidents as non-smokers.

Employees who smoke cost their employers $40 per year more than non-smokers due to absenteeism, lessened productivity, accidents and insurance claims.

Dr. Kontrick, who works for the Florida Lung Association, also said a pack-a-day smoker has an 85 percent greater chance of dying from a smoke-related disease than does a non-smoker. And that pack-a-day smoker will die eight years sooner than a non-smoker according to a U.S. Surgeon General's report, she said.

Premature death may account for a significant loss in lifetime earnings, but beyond that it is difficult to put a price tag on human suffering caused by lung cancer or other diseases linked to smoking. You can't compare that to the economic benefits of tobacco.

Contrary to anything you may have heard on the news media, tobacco is still king in North Carolina, but cancer is king everywhere. A more powerful king, and "America's Golden Leaf" may really be a royal shaft.

Return To Wood For Heat

SPOKANE, Wash. — Marilyn Fichtenberg is a relatively recent convert to the ranks of those who heat their homes with wood stoves, but she's already an enthusiastic booster of the "old-fashioned way" of keeping warm in the winter.

"It's great. I really enjoy it — and it's economical and efficient," says Mrs. Fichtenberg, who lives with her husband in a farm outside this city. "We build up a fire before we go to bed and it heats the whole house overnight."

The Fichtenbergs are among millions of American families who have turned to wood rather than oil, gas, or electricity as a fuel for space heating, thus reversing a decades-long trend and helping to reduce petroleum imports.

As recently as 1940, wood was the primary source of heat for more than 82 percent of all homes here in the Pacific Northwest and almost 20 percent of all houses throughout the country.

But those figures plummeted in the wake of the post-World War II housing boom. By 1973, only 13 percent of all the nation's households relied on wood as their main heating fuel.

Soaring prices for "conventional" fuels, increased public concern about conservation and the growing popularity of a back-to-basics philosophy now have combined to produce a dramatic renaissance for wood-burning stoves.

The typical LaPetite Academy is a year-round operation usually housed in a one-story, air-conditioned building on a plot of half acre or so, with a staff ranging to 20. The centers care for children from three to 12 years of age and so are open outside the usual school hours, some operating evenings and weekends, and provide more care in summer than when school is in session.

Behind the school growth spurt for the business are the steady increases in the number of working mothers and in the number of one-parent households. Even the all-star working mother or one-parent family head has increasing difficulty finding competent domestic help to care for small children at home. The BLS says that in the whole country there were only 41,000 domestic workers in 1979, down 17 percent from 1973.

The growth in one-parent families may be surmised from the increase in divorce from 470,000 in 1965 to 1.12 million in 1978. The number of working women jumped 40 percent in the same period. The BLS says there presently are at least 17 million children with single mothers. One third of these are preschool age and that 5.5 million should double by 1990.

A few years ago it was believed Congress would appropriate billions for day care centers. That didn't happen but the debate brought some interesting arguments, including opposition to centers operated by employers or unions since it would give them a hold over parents, especially working mothers.

LaPetite Academy represents the metamorphosis of Center from a small consumer finance company to a sizable service conglomerate. Chairman P. Freeman recalls that the 23-year-old Center bought

Child Care Industry

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 16 million American households now pay for day care for small children outside the home. That makes proprietary or professional day care centers one of the best growth businesses in the country.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates there are at least 19,000 day care centers in the country and people pay $7.5 billion a year for their care. The licensed capacity has grown from 850,000 children in 1973 to 1.6 million in 1979. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare thinks the payments could soar to $25 billion a year by 1990.

The 10,000 centers include everything from 17-hour operations to centers operated by churches, welfare institutions, unions or employers or by the public schools.

The interviewed estimates they reduced their winter heating bills by an average of 44 percent or $23 per household. "With savings like that, it's not surprising that 98 percent of all wood burners intend to continue using firewood," says Anderson official Elizabeth Spain.

In the South, the Tennessee Valley Authority is promoting firewood as a fuel in a relatively recent project that involves providing interest-free loans to members of Georgia rural electric cooperative who are interested in buying wood-burning stoves.

A nationwide survey conducted last year by the Gallup Organization for the Wood Energy Institute found that 5 million homeowners now have a working wood stove and an equal number plan to buy one in the next year.

White House, meanwhile, has refused to let State Department big shots Warren Christopher, Harold Saunders, Richard Moose and David Newsome.

In Denver, Chief Judge Fred Winner has sought to unravel another case involving energy. The judge has compared the bribery scheme to the Teapot Dome scandal and has told associates that the Justice Department's stonewalling is the "worst raw use of naked power" he has ever seen.

Third Thread — In characteristic fashion, "Wend" — who once tried to get his hooks on Richard Nixon through the then-president's brother Donald — advised Qaddafi that honey Billy Carter might be a promising way to gain influence in the Carter administration.

When the Justice Department was compelled to investigate, both Jimmy and Billy Carter tried to stonewall. The department's investigators complained that they had been denied free access to the president's diary and personal notes "despite the President's public statements of total cooperation."

His progress was evident, as the team tripled its attendance in four years and — with the help of Manager Bill Virdon — reached a climax this season with a 69-57 record in the National League West.

Oilers Squeek By Pats In Wild One 38-34

HOUSTON (UPI) — It's a rare occasion when a 120-yard rushing performance by Earl Campbell is overshadowed. But that's what happened Monday night in a gem of an NFL game when the Houston Oilers scored more points in the first half than they had in any game all year — and still needed two additional touchdowns to subdue the New England Patriots, 38-34.

Quarterback Kenny Stabler passed for 238 yards and three touchdowns in his finest hour as an Oiler, and Patriot quarterback Steve Grogan passed for 314 yards and four touchdowns while under pressure to play catch-up the entire game.

The Oilers jumped into a tie atop the AFC Central Division with the Cleveland Browns, while the lost dropped New England into a tie for the AFC East lead with the Buffalo Bills. All four teams are 7-3.

The Patriots left the field believing they were the better team.

"The best team did not win tonight," Patriots' Head Coach Ron Erhardt said.

Stabler said the Patriots played "great" defense.

"We ran more to the right side," he said. "It wasn't intentional. We just had to make adjustments to their performance in the winter."

Bulldogs Put Bite On Top Poll Spot

NEW YORK (UPI) — Vince Dooley, the fan, was elated. Vince Dooley, the coach, was having private nightmares.

His 34 Georgia Bulldogs — the nation's only undefeated and untied major college team — had just been named No. 1 Monday by UPI's Board of Coaches, and Dooley was thinking of both the fame and the envy such an honor entails.

"As a football fan, I am very much in favor of weekly polls because the promotion is great for the game, and as a Georgia fan, I'm particularly proud," Dooley said Monday. "However, as a football coach, I don't like football polls in light of the past performance of the No. 1 teams."

Dooley did not have to be reminded of the double-edged nature of the No. 1 ranking.

The top spot has changed hands each of the last three weeks — with Alabama surrendering its supremacy two weeks ago with a 53 loss to Mississippi State and Notre Dame falling last week with a 24 tie to subaltern Georgia Tech.

The Bulldogs, who are leading for their first national championship, face feisty Auburn this week, a team that knocked Georgia out of the Sugar Bowl the last two years. Dooley said he would struggle this week to keep his players' minds on the Auburn game.

"We're kind of like the old king for a day, except it's for a week," Dooley said. "Here we are with still two games left and there's only one team that's undefeated. I never dreamed about that. But it's going to be that way more and more every year because you've got so many good teams."

Georgia almost was annihilated Saturday by Florida but escaped when quarterback Buck Bole connected with Lindsay Scott for a 53-yard TD in the final 60 seconds for a 26-21 victory.

The interviewed received 34 of a possible 41 first-place votes from the coaching board for 618 total points. Southern California, a 34-9 winner over Stanford, which moved up one spot to No. 2, gathered 30 first-place votes and 500 points. The Trojans, 7-0, are ineligible for the Pacific-10 crown and a bowl appearance.

Nebraska jumped two positions to No. 3, followed by No. 4 Florida State (one first-place vote), No. 5 Alabama, No. 6 Ohio State, Notre Dame (one first-place vote), No. 8 Pittsburgh, No. 9 Penn State and No. 10 Baylor, which advanced five positions.

Baylor, 8-1 following its 45-15 decision over Arkansas, needs a victory over Rice on Saturday or Texas on Nov. 22 to clinch a Cotton Bowl bid.

Gators, Fla. State OK Game Switch To Dec. 6

NEW YORK (UPI) — No. 1-ranked Florida State and Florida have agreed to push back their annual football rivalry to Dec. 6 so the contest can be aired on national television, ABC has announced.

The game between the Seminoles and the Gators had been scheduled for Nov. 22. Kickoff now will be at 12:30 EST Dec. 6. A second game that day will pit No. 2 Southern California against No. 1 Notre Dame. The network also said Monday it would broadcast the annual Army-Navy game nationwide on Nov. 29 as part of a double-header. The first game has yet to be announced.

Tar Heels Eye Bid For Peach Bowl Berth

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — No. 13 North Carolina is the choice as the host team in the Jan. 2 Peach Bowl, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported today.

On the next Oilers series, as Campbell found the going rough, Casper asserted himself by catching three passes. A hamstring injury briefly forced him from the game, but he returned just in time to grab a 4-yard scoring pass.

Tatum's interception and 35-yard return on the first play following Casper's touchdown gave the Oilers the ball on the Patriot 33-yard line, and when Campbell burst over the goal line for the first of his two touchdowns, Houston led 24-0.

Grogan's four scoring passes in the second half capped drives of 78, 70, 69 and 86 yards.

"I'm pleased with the way this team came back," Grogan said. "We've got nothing to be ashamed of. We were up against a great football team and our home field. From the sound of it out there, it's one of the toughest places I've ever played."

An interception by Oilers cornerback Greg Stemmie in his own end zone with 35 seconds to play finally ended the Patriots' dream.

"I was looking for the corner on the interception," Stemmie said. "It was man-to-man coverage. I was taking a chance on thinking I could catch the ball in the corner, but I acted like a receiver. I went and punt shielded him from the ball."

Stabler added the Patriots "did a good job on Earl. He made some great, great runs but just couldn't get the yards. We had to take up the slack with our passing game."

Erhardt reflected, "We gave up too many points in the first half."

The Oilers' "Oakland Connection" was responsible for the uncharacteristic early lead. Heroes of the moment were Stabler, tight end Dave Casper and safety Jack Tatum.

Ironically, an underthrower Stabler bomb ignited the Oilers' 21-point second quarter when the pass was tipped by two Patriots defenders into the hands of Oiler tight end Mike Barber for a 79-yard touchdown.

They were shutting us up pretty well on the left," Stabler said. "I had a good job on Earl. He made some great, great runs but just couldn't get the yards. We had to take up the slack with our passing game."

Sugar Awaiting Outcome Of Tide-Irish Clash

MIAMI (UPI)—The Sugar Bowl will choose the winner of the Notre Dame-Alabama game Saturday to be the Georgia Bulldogs' opponent in the New Year's Day game, the Miami News reported Monday.

Georgia has only to defeat Auburn to become the South-eastern Conference championship and get an automatic bid to the game in the Louisiana Superdome.

The News said the Sugar Bowl was the only New Year's Day game that was decided, but that Florida State would probably play in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas and the Orange Bowl at Miami would get what's left.

Formal bowl invitations are not allowed to go out until Saturday.

"We're going to have the No. 1 team (Georgia) and that's going to give us the No. 1 bowl," an unidentified Sugar Bowl committee member was quoted as saying. "We're just going to invite the winner of the Notre Dame-Alabama game to play for the national championship."

The newspaper said the Orange Bowl was left in a difficult position since Nebraska is the current favorite to get the automatic Big Eight Conference bid to the Orange Bowl.

Two of the possibilities at opponents have already played the Cornhuskers. Florida State defeated them and Penn State lost to them. The latter would seem to rule out the winner of the Penn State-Pittsburgh game, although Pitt might receive an invitation before that game is played.

Another possibility would be the best of the Alabama-Notre Dame game, the paper said.

"It also said firm commitments have been made for other bowls: South Carolina will go to the Gator Bowl and SMU will go to the Holiday Bowl against the Western Athletic Conference.

The News also said the Hill of Fame Bowl has asked Mississippi State and the Bulldogs have set a deadline for the more prestigious Liberty Bowl before deciding.

Baker Signs Big With Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Slugging Los Angeles outfielder Darryl Baker, one of the biggest names on this year's baseball free-agent list, has signed a five-year, guaranteed contract with the Dodgers worth a reported $4 million.

"We feel Darryl is in the prime of his career and we regard him as one of the top players in the game today," said Dodger President Peter O'Malley, who made the announcement late Monday. "Darryl has been a key part of the Dodgers for the past five seasons. We're confident he's going to continue to make great contributions to the Dodger team."

The signing ended eight months of negotiations and came a week after Baker had turned down a five-year, $3.5 million offer from the Dodgers. The pact reportedly makes Baker one of the five highest paid baseball players in the major leagues.

Throughout the negotiations Baker stressed the fact he wanted to remain in Los Angeles.

"I was a combined effort of God, family, agent, friends and fans," Baker said. "I always wanted to stay in Los Angeles. I've always wanted to be a Dodger from the time I was a youngster."

"The glad that although we had great differences of opinion at times both sides were able to act in a gentlemanly fashion so that we could reach an agreement both myself and the Dodgers are happy with."

Baker, 31, is coming off the finest season of his 13-year major league career. He batted .264, hit a club-leading 29 home runs, tying him for fourth in the National League, and had 97 RBIs, seventh best in the league.

Baker also had 17 game-winning RBIs, tying him for second in that category, and finished fifth in the NL in slugging percentage with a .503 mark.

He played in 153 games, made just three errors in left field and was named the NL's player of the month in June when he batted .349 with 10 homers and 26 RBIs. He also led the Dodgers with 12 sacrifice flies, one short of the all-time Dodger record.

Baker signed the contract shortly before 9 p.m. in Los Angeles, just minutes before the deadline for removing his name from the free-agent derby. He and San Diego Padres slugger Dave Winfield were considered the cream of the free agent crop this year.

Charboneau, Smith Tabbed Top Rookies

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Joe Charboneau of the Cleveland Indians and Lennie Smith of the World Champion Philadelphia Phillies today were named rookie players of the year by The Sporting News.

Joining Charboneau in the American League selections was Britt Burns of the Chicago White Sox, who was named AL rookie pitcher of the year. Bill Gullickson of the Montreal Expos won the rookie pitcher award in the National League.

Matt Keough of the Oakland A's and Jerry Reuss of the Los Angeles Dodgers were named the 1980 comeback players of the year.

The sports weekly said the selections were made in a poll of 100 National League players and 241 American League players.

Charboneau, a colorful outfielder-designated hitter, batted .269 in 131 games with 23 home runs and 87 runs batted in.

Burns had a 15-13 record while recording 11 complete games. He struck out 133 batters in 238 innings.

Smith, a speedy outfielder, stole 23 bases in 100 games and batted .293.

Gullickson was called up from Montreal's Denver farm club on May 26 and won 10 games, lost five and struck out 120 batters in 141 innings. Two of his victories were shutouts and the highlight of his season came on Sept. 10 when he struck out 10 Chicago Cubs.

Keough, who posted a 3-17 record with a 5.03 earned-run average in 1979, was 16-17 with 10 complete games this season. His ERA was 2.92, fourth lowest in the American League.

Reuss had a 2-2 mark in 1979 and was 7-14 the next year. But in 1980, the veteran southpaw won 18 games and lost only six. He led the National League with six shutouts and his 3.52 ERA was third lowest.

The highlight of Reuss's comeback season was a no-hitter pitched against the San Francisco Giants on June 27.

Jose Jimenez, it is said, refused to rob a bank in McKinney, Texas, because his favorite chili parlor was located there.

This attractive clubhouse is the center for community activities at Carriage Cove Mobile Home Park.

Carriage Cove Provides Affordable Family Housing

In an effort to meet the public demand for affordable housing, Dreyfus Interstate Development Corporation is continuing planned expansion of Carriage Cove mobile home community.

One of the largest and nicest mobile home communities in the area, Carriage Cove is located on County Road 472, south of Sanford. Phase IV is filling up rapidly and work on Phase V is expected to begin in the next few weeks. The park will cover 87 acres when completed.

Carriage Cove Park Manager Marlen Friedman said the expansion will help meet the needs of the many families and retired persons who have found mobile home living in the affordable housing in the face of apartment conversions, lack of housing and high expense of going into home ownership.

"Carriage Cove is one of the few mobile home parks in the area that accept families," said Ms. Friedman. There are separate adults-only and family sections in the well-kept park.

Since it opened five years ago, Carriage Cove has continued to grow, attracting residents with its combination of city conveniences and country living.

Why not celebrate Christmas and New Year's in your new beautiful mobile home in Carriage Cove. Several new models are for sale, completely furnished and ready for occupancy. They are displayed at the park by Gregory Mobile Homes. Some residences are also available and are listed in the park office in the Carriage Cove clubhouse.

Carriage Cove residents are only five minutes from churches, schools, Seminole Community College, shopping centers and entertainment. School children are picked up at the park entrance by buses.

All mobile homes at Carriage Cove are individually owned and set up on roomy lots which rent from $65 up, including water and sewer service, use of all recreational facilities and the underground master antenna system for better television reception.

Activities at Carriage Cove focus on the exclusive air-conditioned clubhouse, 54-by-60-foot swimming pool and open-air teen center.

In the all-ages clubhouse, there is a party-game room, TV lounge and kitchen facilities. Laundry facilities and a fenced-in clothes drying lot are also available.

Some of the other outdoor facilities include a volleyball and basketball court and a play lot and wading pool for toddlers. Special events such as cake-decorating classes, bingo, billiard tournaments and children's fishing tournament are popular with residents.

Underground electricity is provided to each site with 200 amp. service available. Each 12- and 14-foot-wide mobile home site will be provided with a 9-by-18-foot concrete patio and a two-car driveway. A tree is planted on each lot.

There are three full-time maintenance men on the Carriage Cove staff. The professional management is responsible for mowing the grass in all common areas and for maintenance of recreation facilities and community buildings.

Closed Sunday, the Carriage Cove office is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Mrs. Friedman and Sales Manager Shirley Rummye welcome visitors and will be glad to answer questions.

In And Around Sanford Getting Acquainted Calls For A Party

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas (Clea) Brown have her granddaughter, Consuegra Moorsom from London, England, as their houseguest for the next few weeks.

Friday evening, the Browns invited Tracy Johnson, Shannon McNally, Vickie Shelley, Teresa Spillman, Heather Greenlee, Donna Fitzpatrick, Tyler Johnson, Kelly Heagon, Bill and George Kirchhoff, Robert McGregor, Sam Katanich and Tom Fitzpatrick to a get-acquainted party.

Consuegra after graduation last spring, worked during the summer as a volunteer worker in Israel, then was a model in the Vidal Sassoon Salons. She went to San Francisco as a model after a few months she decided to "see America" by bus and traveled across the United States, seeing a great deal of this country before her arrival in Sanford.

Mr. and Mrs. Gail (Anne) South arrived in Sanford last Thursday to spend several weeks before returning to their home in Naples, N. Y. They have been spending the winter months in Sanford for many years and consider this their second home. But as much as they love Sanford, they always spend the Christmas Season at their home in Naples.

She reports that Jackie is doing very well since surgery and should be well enough before too much longer to return home and receive visitors.

Charities Should Not Waste Money

DEAR ABBY: Please continue to emphasize the fact that charities should not waste money. When I give blood to the Red Cross, I don't want a thank you letter. I want to be invited to a formal ball for dinner and dancing to be officially thanked for my help. If the public knew of this kind of waste they would be in an uproar.

Those of us who work hard for charities want all the money to go where it can help the cause.

HELEN IN SAN PEDRO DEAR HELEN: Right on! The best example of using your money to help the cause is the Goodwill Industries of South Florida a few years ago. They sent invitations that read: "The annual Goodwill Industries dinner will not be held this year at the Americana Hotel. The cocktails will be served at 7 p.m. No dinner will be served at 8 p.m. The master of ceremonies will be Jackie Gleason. The invocation will be read by the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, and the guest speaker will not be Dear Abby."

"Stay home and have a restful evening, but please send $50 per person or $100 per couple."

Needless to say, it was hugely successful. P.S. The moral to that story is: Many people are so bored with laws - fund-raising silence implies agreement.

Beta Sigma Phi Xi Epsilon Xi Theta Epsilon

A buffet supper was served by the hosts. The social committee decorated the Florida room for Halloween, complete with pumpkins and jack-o'-lanterns. The theme of the evening was a midnight hay ride in and around Mullet Lake park.

Those attending the coffee were: Mary Cook, Phyllis Miller, Lisa Perez, Donna Spier, Karen Hittel, Mary Cook, Betty McKee, Cheryl Gividen, Ellen Mack and Millie Gilbert.

Guests were Caroline Durham, Sylvia Smith, Ann Hobbs, Marion Ricketson, Sue Rose, June Perez, Lynn Ashley, Jean McClanahan and Juliette Cook.

To introduce the guests and members each person drew the name of another when she did not know, interviewed that person and then presented her to the others present.

Refreshments of cake, punch and coffee was served by the hosts.

Xi Epsilon Sigma members and guests were entertained at a Halloween party at the Mullet Lake home of Millie Gilbert.

'Empty' Calories Alcohol Contains

DEAR DR. LAMB—I hope you will explain to me and several friends what appears to be a confusing contradiction in one of your columns about alcohol. The statement that leaves us bewildered is the one that alcohol doesn't contain any fat or cholesterol—that it's the closest thing to an empty calorie there is. A food that is empty of fat and cholesterol is also empty of calories. Then you say that alcohol is fattening and in large amounts it can be damaging to the heart. You also said that alcohol is the major cause of obesity in many Americans but you said that the calories were empty. Please explain.

DEAR READER—All the statements you've quoted are absolutely correct. Evidently, you just don't understand some of the terms used. Alcohol contains calories the same as carbohydrates, fat or protein. There are seven calories per gram of alcohol. Calories from any source, whether they come from sugar or protein or alcohol, that your body doesn't use can be converted to fat and stored that way. Hence it's no surprise that the calories in alcohol can be stored as fat. Whenever you consume too many calories of any and all kinds, more about alcohol and its effects on the body, I'm sending you The Health Letter, number 144, Alcohol Can Be Dangerous to Your Health. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1501, NY 10017.

Finally, I would like to emphasize again that a major factor in the nutritional problems of obesity is the excessive use of alcohol. All those empty calories that can be converted to fat contribute enormously to the excess calorie intake and obesity. The solution, of course, is to decrease your normal diet but to eliminate the excess use of alcohol. As the Health Letter I'm sending you explains, that provides additional health benefits as well.

WIN AT BRIDGE

ing in trump, playing a second trump and going after spades. East will take his ace, but with the 10 dropping to the West hand, South will get to discard a club on dummy's jack of spades and will ruff both his low diamonds.

If West opens his singleton spade suit with his ace, spade and hold South to five.

We have shown North doubling, but does it mean anything? In fact we see that some West players will be allowed to pass by North, a spade by East, a heart by South and two diamonds by West.

Of course, if the bidding goes that way South should bid in most cases will try to hearts after the two-diamond call comes around and North will raise three or four. If he only bids three he will be sorry and conservatively.

The play at two diamonds will probably result in West getting set but he will still get a good score for minus 50 or even minus 100 if he misguesses, trying after North opens a spade.

West opens his king of diamonds. South will make tricks by the simple play of winning the diamond, finesse.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I hope you will explain to me and several friends what appears to be a confusing contradiction in one of your columns about alcohol. The statement that leaves us bewildered is the one that alcohol doesn't contain any fat or cholesterol—that it's the closest thing to an empty calorie there is. A food that is empty of fat and cholesterol is also empty of calories. Then you say that alcohol is fattening and in large amounts it can be damaging to the heart. You also said that alcohol is the major cause of obesity in many Americans but you said that the calories were empty. Please explain.

DEAR READER—All the statements you've quoted are absolutely correct. Evidently, you just don't understand some of the terms used. Alcohol contains calories the same as carbohydrates, fat or protein. There are seven calories per gram of alcohol. Calories from any source, whether they come from sugar or protein or alcohol, that your body doesn't use can be converted to fat and stored that way. Hence it's no surprise that the calories in alcohol can be stored as fat. Whenever you consume too many calories of any and all kinds, more about alcohol and its effects on the body, I'm sending you The Health Letter, number 144, Alcohol Can Be Dangerous to Your Health. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1501, NY 10017.

Finally, I would like to emphasize again that a major factor in the nutritional problems of obesity is the excessive use of alcohol. All those empty calories that can be converted to fat contribute enormously to the excess calorie intake and obesity. The solution, of course, is to decrease your normal diet but to eliminate the excess use of alcohol. As the Health Letter I'm sending you explains, that provides additional health benefits as well.

Games Praised As A Spark For Seniors' Resurgence

By JOE DE SANTIS
Herald Staff Writer

For an idea that was born just a few short years ago, Sanford's Golden Age Games have come a long way. A long way in pointing out the changing attitudes of America's senior citizens about staying active and in shape in their golden years.

That's the point emphasized most by Dr. Richard Keeler, Director of Program Development for the President's Council on Physical Fitness.

Keeler, along with Ken Deffen, corporation communications manager for General Foods, co-sponsors of the games, were on hand at Sanford's Bowl America Tuesday afternoon to witness the opening portion of the Golden Age Games.

"Somewhere, a long time ago, somebody said the precedent that older people should just sit in a rocking chair and call it quits," Keeler said.

"But more and more, older people are finding that the key to stay active, to stay alert and fit."

The Golden Age Games, along with similar activities across the country, are, according to Keeler, the catalyst needed to spark new interest and awareness among senior citizens.

"The whole attitude of older Americans is changing tremendously," the council spokesman said.

"What happens to older people emotionally is just as important as physically," he said. "When people stay in shape they feel more assertive, younger, it gives them a healthier attitude about life."

"When that happens it's exciting. Right now there is no more responsive to fitness and sports than older people."

The 1980 Golden Age Games marks the first time an outside organization has become directly involved with the event. This year the General Foods Corporation has offered its sponsorship.

"The Golden Age Games approached us on the idea, but the games and Sanford. The public is invited to come out and watch all the events, especially the swimming competition beginning at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at the Holiday Inn swimming pool on Lake Monroe; the pancake race at 12 p.m. Thursday at Fort Mellon Park softball field; the variety and talent show, 7 p.m. Thursday at the Sanford Civic Center; and the decaathlon, at 9 a.m. Friday and Saturday beginning at 9 a.m. at the Seminole High School stadium. Other track and field events will begin at 9 a.m. and continue into the afternoon.

Board Clams Up On Wilson Firing

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Why was Tom Wilson fired by the Sanford Housing Authority after more than eight years on the job as its executive director?

Edward Blackbeare, chairman of the Authority, said when he recommended a "vote of no confidence" and "termination" during a less than five minute meeting Monday night Wilson was not helping the board meet its "goals and objectives."

He said the other four members of the board—D.C. McCoy, Leroy Johnson, Yonsey Dixon and Mary Whitey—refused to elaborate.

Wilson says he had been in recent months disenchanted with the administration of the authority.

But City Manager Warren Knowles got involved with the management of the authority because of his concerns for the sponsoring program which the authority was administering.

In a series of memos to the city commission and "notes to the file" Knowles outlines a systematic stripping of authority from Wilson over the past several months by Blackbeare and the housing authority.

The Sanford Housing Authority will have its first meeting Thursday noon before its executive director, Tom Wilson. The meeting will be held at 1 p.m. in the conference room at Redding Gardens, 5th Street and Locust Street.

The agenda, according to Lewis Cox, finance director, contains only one item—a Housing Management audit conducted by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Blackbeare said they will also consider a progress report on the authority's rehabilitation program, a report from Cox and legal advice from authority attorney, Ned N. Julian Jr. Julian will report on the procedures for firing a new executive director.

Wilson, said in an interview Tuesday he still couldn't understand why he was fired. The $200 per year job he lost was not foreseen on his mind, however.

Wilson, during his eight years, two months and five days with the authority, had been able to bring $4.7 million in federal funds to the authority, all of it in grants except for a $1.4 million federal loan for public housing modernization, according to Blackbeare.

A native of Sanford Wilson left the area after graduating from Crooms High School and went to college in New Orleans and Arizona. He worked for the state of Arizona, in insurance and for the model cities program in Rochester, N.Y. before returning to Sanford.

"While I was on vacation here, I decided to apply for the job of executive director of the Housing Authority. My object was to do what I could for the people of Sanford to improve their quality of life."

In addition to his work as executive director of the Sanford Housing Authority Wilson's consulting business, Dynamic Program Planning, has been under contract to the Seminole County Board of Commissioners by the chairman, Wilson's letter said.

Glenn McCall, chairman of the Seminole authority, said today Wilson has done an excellent job for the county organization. He said he was not sure why Wilson was fired.

"I would not have taken the job," he said.

When Wilson's firing by the Sanford Authority was announced to the Sanford City Commission Monday night, Blackbeare said he was "distressed" by the action and publicly asked the authority to rethink its position for the sake of the city and the authority.

Altamonte Must Trim Over $600,000 To Balance 1981 Budget: Etchberger

By CHARITY CICARDO
Herald Staff Writer

The Altamonte Springs City Commission must cut more than $600,000 from its budget for fiscal year 1981 to balance the budget, estimated deficit for next year would be $600,000, Etchberger said.

At a work session Tuesday, attended by most of the city's department heads and many city employees, Etchberger told the commission there is a $200,000 deficit in the 1979-80 budget.

In a letter to the commission dated Oct. 30, City Comptroller Leslie Bentley said the general operating fund would show a $725,000 deficit for last year.

If the city stays with its current proposed budget for fiscal year 1981, estimated deficit for next year would be $600,000, Etchberger said.

Therefore, at least $600,000 must be cut from the proposed budget for fiscal year 1981, Etchberger told the commission.

Etchberger told the commission $3.8 million of the $5 million budget is for salaries and fringe benefits, employees could be cut.

Etchberger said he would present his proposed budget cuts to the commission at a work session on Nov. 25 immediately following a Commission's regular meeting.

Etchberger also asked the commission whether they wanted to continue with a policy to allow city employees the day off on their birthdays.

The commission agreed that the policy should be discontinued.

Algeria Relays U.S. Answer To Iran

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI)—Algeria today turned over to Iran the U.S. reply to conditions for release of the 52 American hostages, but the formal transmission was preceded by warnings in Tehran and Algeria it would not lead to a speedy end to their captivity.

"We don't anticipate an early response from Tehran," said an authoritative source in Algeria, named by the Iranian government to act as intermediary. "The Iranian authorities may need some time before formulating their answer."

The source described failure of the U.S. reply to meet Iran's four demands unconditionally as a reason for the expected delay.

From Tehran, the London newspaper Financial Times quoted Central Bank Governor Ali Rez Nohari as saying the response "do not really meet Iran's four conditions."

But in another interview printed in London today, Nohari said the United States could meet Iranian conditions for release of the hostages in four days if it wanted to.
