Oil Chiefs: No Price Hike Now

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Oil ministers of the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries agreed today to maintain the freeze on oil prices at current levels until the end of the year. Oil Minister Ali Khalifa AlSabah of Kuwait, who presided at the ministerial conference, said "no decisions" were reached on increasing prices, currently $12.70 a barrel.

Asked whether this means prices remain frozen, Khalifa, said.

The Kuwaiti minister said the conference agreed the 13 OPEC countries, acting individually, would draw up positions on what they think should be done to counter losses resulting from inflation and depreciation of the U.S. dollar.

"We will study the problem individually and submit reports to Abu Dhabi, Khalifa said, referring to the site of the next ministerial session scheduled for December.
Asked whether members of the oil cartel favor abandoning the dollar as the currency for payment for oil, Khalifa said, "the dollar is the most ideal currency." The OPEC communique said the conference reviewed the situation relating to exchange rates and "expressed its deep concern in this respect." "A high-level committee of experts" presided over by Khalifa will meet in London in July to study the dollar question," the meeting is convened in between, will be Dec. 16 in the Persian

CLOSURE SNELL (RIGHT) AND FREDDIE JONES CONVERSING

He Does His Job For Sanford Silently 'Smiling All The Time'

By LEONARD KRANSDORF Herald Staff Writer

He likes footbell, girls, has his sights set on buying a car and is settling into a job with the city of Sanford which he hopes to make into a career. But in one way he is different .

Closure Snell is a deaf mute. Some people might find it difficult to imagine a person like Snell working with the city - until they Although the first, Snell is now not the only deaf mute on the city payroll. Since he was hired, a friend of his — Freddie Jones — has also been employed to work at the sewer plant.

Because Jones has only been on the job a short time, his boss, Jim Cohen, is unsure what type of worker he will be. However, Cohen has had a longer time to observe Closure and has no doubts about his

"Yes" he found it uncomfortable when he first started on the job but once he got used to it, "I get along pretty good with my fellow workers and I know I must work hard to do a good job," he noted in a written response to a question.

Although the other employees at the plant have become accustomed to Closure's handicaps, there were those early days when forgetfulness set in.

"I remember once I saw Closure walking toward the plant and I shouted at him to bring something with him. At first I thought he was ignoring me until I remembered," recalls Ron Partridge, chief Elite Getting U.S. Aid?

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The wealthy elite, not the poor majority, are benefiting from the billions of dollars the United States is pouring into Bangladesh, a new report says.

This elite holds power from the national government down to the village level, and it is through this elite that foreign aid is channeled," the report said. "Under such conditions Americans can expect their foreign aid dollars to perpetuate rather than alleviate poverty in Bangladesh.

The report was written by Betsy Hartmann and James Boyce for the Center for International Policy, a project of Stewart Mott's The Fund for Peace. They were in Bangladesh from 1974 to 1976 on grants from Yale University, and spent part of the time in a small bamboo house in a northwestern Bangladesh village, speaking Bengali and wearing native clothes.

Uniformity In The Law

Much of the debate in the House Criminal Justice subcommittee over a massive revision of the federal criminal code is focused on the length of time violators of federal law will spend in prison.

But the most persuasive argument in favor of passage of the legislation is the equity it will bring to the federal judicial system.

Under the version approved by the Senate, according to the research division of the Library of Congress, guidelines would be established that could increase total time in prison, although maximum sentences would be reduced.

Less generous provisions for parole and time off for good behavior would be offsetting factors. The study indicated that the proposed changes could add as much as 93 percent to the time prisoners would spend behind bars.

House critics complain that the Senate bill is unnecessarily severe and weighted in favor of prosecutors. Supporters of the stiffer penalties, however, are more attuned to the public dismay over lenient treatment in the federal courts.

No matter which faction prevails in the House and in the ultimate conference to reconcile House and Senate versions, the long-awaited recodification will eliminate the glaring differences in penalties assessed nationwide for similar crimes.

Previous drafts of the legislation outraged publishers and broadcasters with their vision of heavy penalties for revelation of "secret" government information, which triggered charges of press repression. Revisions have tightened up the requirements for the secret designation and have adopted a more reasonable approach to press

The concessions have not satisfied all of the publishing and broadcasting industries' representatives.

In our view, the overdue move to uniform justice and standardization of procedures makes the legislation acceptable. Refinements can be made as the need develops.

In the interest of fairness, the passage of the code revision should be expedited.

Water Program

Billions of tax dollars have been invested by the federal government in the development of water supplies for the West. should continue.

President Carter seems to be coming to this view, if he did not hold it when he took office. The water policy he recently unveiled in a special message to Congress imposes new strict criteria for water projects but the White House is expected to propose within a few days the first new water projects to be suggested by a president since 1975.

The West was shaken when Mr. Carter, without warning, killed 18 major irrigation and flood control projects last year. Congress, having authorized these projects earlier, restored nine of them. Funds to begin planning or construction on three others have been approved by the House Public Works Com-

Now the President proposes that the states in which federal water projects are located should pay as much as 10 percent of the costs of new dams and irrigation systems.

That seems a reasonable requirement. If the people of a state are not willing to invest any of their own public money, how can they ask the rest of these United States to foot the bill?

California already has shown the way. California's State Water Project, which has cost nearly $3 billion in state funds, is thoroughly integrated with federal reclamation projects in the Central Valley. The federal-state system functions as a single unit with the state government bearing about half the cost. Other states should do the same. For example, the federal government is constructing a giant reclamation project in Arisona which will serve the municipal needs of the cities of Phoenix and Tucson. There is no reason for the state government of Arisona not to bear part of the cost.

POLITICS IN BRIEF

Shevin Wins Straw Nod Of State Young Democrats

DAYTONA BEACH, (UPI) — The Florida Young Democrats are endorsing Attorney General Robert Shevin for governor.

Shevin was guest at a special breakfast this morning at the Sanford Inn. Among the issues he addressed: he backs elected cabinet, more funds for education and "light clean industry" for Florida. He opposes casino gambling and sees no effect of Proposition 13 on Florida because of the 10-mill limit placed on any taxing body in the state.

AFL-CIO Rebuffs Gunter

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) - The only incumbent Cabinet member expected to seek reelection who was not endorsed by the state AFL-CIO Sunday was Treasurer-Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter. President Dan Miller said his labor organization's 400,000 members are backing Rep. Don Hazelton, D-West Palm, instead of Gunter because they prefer his stance on auto insurance and worker's compensation.

The group endorsed Commissioner of Education Ralph Turlington, Comptroller Gerald Lewis and Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner.

Miller said the AFL-CIO's political action group meeting in Orlando picked Rep. Barry Richard, D-Miami, as its favorite in the state attorney general's race. Sen. George Firestone, D-Miami, was endorsed for secretary of state.Richard Salem, former chairman of Hillsborough County's Democratic party, was endorsed for Sam Gibbons' 7th District Congressional seat, which the Tampa Democrat has held since

The AFL-CIO said last November it would support Attorney General Robert Shevin in his bid for governor.

Food Shortage May Alter American Eating Habits

Editor's Note: This is the first in Newspaper Enterprise Association's (NEA) six-part series of excerpts from the recently published book, "Future Food," by Barbara Ford.

Most Americans nutritionists tell us, eat enough

On fact, they assert, many of us eat too much food. Particularly protein. Americans eat 99 grams (about 3.5 ounces) of protein per day, almost twice the amount suggested for the adult male by the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization and the World Health Organization Some other countries also eat an overabundance of protein These nations include most of Western Europe, Australia and New Zealand.

The food shortage is principally a problem of what are known today as "developing countries." Most of them are in Asia and Africa. At frequent intervals, some of these nations experience severe shortages of both protein and calorie sources, and death rates mount. Even in good times, mainutrition is a chronic condition among a large segment of the population in sary reception at the Fellowship hall of First Baptist developing countries. Malnutrition is simply a state

Our present diet, with its emphasis on ever-consumption of expensive, protein-rich foods like meat and dairy products seems destined for a change. What form will the change take? Ex-President Dons Cowboy Duds To Help Roper Son

By United Press International

A COWPOKE AND HIS DAD: Yep, that fellow ambling across the dusty rodeo arena decked out in his best cowboy duds was really Jerry Ford. And nope, the former president was not displaying his new strategy in case he runs against Ronald Reagan again. Ford was at the rodeo in Pomona, Calif., Sunday to help his son Steve, 22, a team roper for the Los Angeles Rough Riders professional rodeo team. Ford climbed a 5-foot fence and perched above a 600-pound steer, then freed the beast while his son chased it on horseback. Steve missed his first try but scored a second-half victory chasing his steer in 8.2 seconds. Rough Rider's coach Casey Tibbs said afterwards: Mr. Ford did just fine. What hampered Steve's first try was the news media that was crowding the chute."

He's The Hollering Champ

A HOOT AND A HOLLER: In Spivey's Corner, N.C., Dewitt Howell let loose with a regular old-fashioned whoop and holler" that made him the winner of the 10th annual National Hollerin' Contest. Howell, 66, said he learned to holler by listening to the whoops and shricks his neighbors used to use to call in the cows, seek help, or just socialize. Eric Vernon, 25, won the whistling competition with a whistle so piercing he claimed it cooked food long before the ultrasonics of microwave ovens came along. He said one of his whistles was perfect for cooking possum in wine sauce." Robbie Goodman, 10, won the junior championship with a carbon-copy rendition of an ambulance siren.

Gleason: No Golf For Now

GLEASON RECOVERING: Jackie Gleason, recovering at home in Lauderhill, Fla., from heart surgery, plans to forsake the golf course for the next week or so. But not even a triple coronary bypass can keep "The Great One" down. He predicts he will recover more quickly than actor John Wayne, who had a similar operation earlier this year. "It's not as tough to jump on a joke as on a horse,' Gleason said. And he has to eat a can of beans every day." "The Great One," who promised his doctors he would kick a six-packa-day cigarette habit and lose 27 pounds from his current weight of 227, hopes to be back in tip-top shape within eight weeks, when he will work in Atlantic City, N.J.

Indira: Flowers, No Gold

A FLOWERY RECEPTION: Everything was coming up roses Sunday for former Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Her admirers in the western Indian town of Ahmedabad gave her her weight in rose petals -119 pounds. Still, Mrs. Gandhi might have felt slighted. Usually, admirers in India give their leaders their weight in gold. The money is then donated to charity.

Hope: Christmas Marcher

GLIMPSES: Comedian Bob Hope will be grand marshal for this year's Hollywood Christmas Parade, leading a stream of entertainers and dozens of floats down Hollywood Boulevard ... African folksinger Mirlam Makeba gave her first U.S. concert in four years during the weekend at Madison Square Garden... Fred Silverman, the new president of NBC, was at the NBC Television Network affiliates convention in New York during the weekend and two of the NBC personalities he met were Dick Clark and Bruce Jenner

A bench warrant has been issued in Seminole County for an alleged member of a gang of criminals believed responsible for two murders and more than 200 robberies and burglaries in Florida in three years.

Circuit Court Judge J. William Woodson issued the warrant after William Lewis Lawley, 31, failed to appear at the Seminole County Courthouse Monday to face charges of attempted burglary, possession of burglary tools and conspiracy to commit a

The charges stem from an attempted burglary at the Longwood Village Pharmacy March 11. Lawley was freed after posting what is considered an unusually high bond in burglary cases of $31,500. Investigators said it was the third time the gang has marked the Longwood pharmacy as its target. During the second attempt, an armed robbery on Dec. 29, 1977, Seminole County Reserve Deputy George Pfeil happened to walk in the store and in a shoot-out with Terry Michael Sims, 36, Pfeil was shot twice and killed.

robbery similar to the one in Longwood, was Warrington, Fla., pharmacist Woodrow Moulton, 56. An escapee from the Tennessee State Prison, Marvin Edwin Johnson, 35, is being sought for Moulton's killing. Sheriff's deputies in Escambia County said Moulton pulled a gun from under a counter and fired at Johnson, who fell to the floor, rolled over and fired at Moulton hitting him in the chest. A spokesman for the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Orlando acknowledged that most of the intelligence work on the gang has been done by Seminole County 11. Detective Antonio Calangelo and Detective Ralph Salerno since the Pfeil murder.

Salerno identified Clarence Eugene Robinson, 33, who is atlarge and is being sought as the driver of the getaway cars in the Pfeil and Moulton murders, as the leader of the gang-Sims and Johnson were also identified as key leaders of the burglaries and robberies in Florida.

They're thugs with a common goal." The gang is divided in two parts, a burglary squad and robbery squad, Salerno said.

Among those on the robbery squad were Johnson, Sims, Robert Owens Little, 33, now in prison and Thomas Curtis Baldree, 46, who is being held in Seminole County jail after pleading guilty to lesser crimes for his part in the December Longwood pharmacy robbery and agreeing to testify against Sims and Robinson.
