Former County Attorney Tom Freeman today informed county commissioners his law firm will not provide legal services after Dec. 10 because on-going political hassles prompted Asst. County Attorney Robert Pierce to submit his resignation.

"I'm tired of the hassle," Pierce said. "For the sake of my sanity and " my family I'm resigning."

Freeman's announcement caught county commissioners by surprise But Republican Commissioner John Kimbrough said Freeman's firm stepping down "won't make any difference.'

Freeman said Pierce's plans are 'uncertain, but he wants to get out of this county business. And, I do, Pierce, 31, said he had hoped to stay on during the transition stage in which county government is swithing over to an in-house legal staff.

But Pierce said politics just wouldn't allow it. "It just appears that Tom is still the center of political controversy," Pierce said.

Commission chairman Dick Williams said little when informed of Pierce's resignation.

"December 10?" Williams asked. "Okay, thank you, Mr. Freeman.' Outside commission chambers, Kimbrough said this latest development will require action by the entire board.

The Republican commissioner said the best method of providing legal services to the county after Freeman's announced cut-off date may be to sub-contract the work to other attorneys. "I say maybe," Kimbrough declared. "I'm shooting from the hip."

Members of the St. Johns River Water Management District met Monday night with the Friends of the St. Johns (FSJ) to discuss a further reduction of water hyacinth spraying between Lake Harney and Lake Monroe - but today there were different interpretations of what was decided at the session.

"We agreed to go ahead with what we've got and then get back together with them in March to see whether it's feasible to hold off spraying any longer," said Joseph Joyce, chief of the Aquatic Plant Control Section of Jacksonville's Army Corps. of Engineers. The plant control department had agreed previously to suspend spraying activities on the St. Johns between Geneva and Sanford during the Florida shad fishing season, which runs from Dec. 1-

But FSJ President J. T. "They said they'd extend the non-spraying program for about referring to the Orlando five months (total) and then talk with us in May," Turnipseed said. "We agreed we'd take a closer look then, which would probably result in an extension of the time period."

> Learning of the confusion, Joyce contacted Turnipseed today by telephone and reported that the matter had been resolved. "He did think it was supposed to be the other way - that we'd extend the non-spraying until May," said Joyce, "but we came to

In Ireland Killing

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) - Ireland's Supreme Court is expected to rule soon on an appeal by Noel and Marie Murray, confessed anarchists sentenced to be hanged for killing a police constable during a bank holdup last year. No one has been executed by the Irish government since 1954, and a woman has not been sent to the gallows since 1925. The double death sentence has revived debate over capital punishment, and public opinion against the death penalty appears to be growing. But a well-placed source reported strong sentiment in government circles that clemency for the Murrays would undermine the government's campaign against the Irish Republican Army and other extremist organizations.

Police and sheriff's deputies at noon were searching the Sanford area for a defendant who disappeared from the courthouse this morning just before a jury was to be picked in his circuit court fire-bombing witnesstampering trial.

Circuit Court Judge A.J. Hosemann Jr., ordered Nathaniel Lee Williams to be arrested and held in county jail. Courtroom observers said Williams was seen in the courthouse earlier this morning, but when his case was called he was nowhere to be found. This was the second time that Williams has failed to appear for trial in the 1974 firebombing case.

Williams, 25, of Castle Brewer Court, is accused of attempting to murder sheriff's deputy Luke Stallworth, first-degree arson, throwing a destructive device and conspiracy in connection with a May 1, 1974, incident in probation which a firebomb was thrown atop Stallworth's residence. Stallworth extinguished the fire on the roof and there were no injuries.

Williams didn't show up for trial in June 1974 and was arrested last September in Niagara Falls, N.Y., and returned to Sanford. ## OPEC Nations Learning Economics

For weeks it has been a foregone conclusion that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would meet in December and hit the oilimporting nations with another price increase perhaps as stiff as 10 per cent. Now the enthusiasm of OPEC for a price increase appears to be cooling, and it's not hard to understand why.

For the record, OPEC officials are saying that their Dec. 15 meeting may have to be delayed because it conflicts with another international conference on a related subject. Ministers from 27 "rich" and "poor" nations are meeting in Paris next month to try to complete work on a plan to help the poorer countries earn more from their natural resources and deal with big deficits building up in their trade balances.

The connection is that the economic problems of the developing countries can be traced to the inflation and recession which was aggravated by OPEC's quadrupling of the price of oil in 1974.

The oil exporters have been arguing that inflation has continued in the last two years and they deserve a price increase to make up for the declining value of their oil revenues. This would be easier to swallow if the current price of around $11.50 a barrel had anything to do with the cost of production of oil or represented a true market value. But it doesn't, and some of the exporters are even having trouble disposing of the capital they're accumulating at the present price.

The fact of the matter, is that the United States Western Europe and Japan are only now pulling out of their recession, and an oil price increase of the magnitude of 10 per cent would throw a wrench into recovery and give a new push to inflation. This would hurt OPEC as much as it would hurt OPEC's customers. Particularly, it would make little sense for countries like Iran and Saudi Arabia to invest in business and industry in the industrialized world, as they have done, and then pursue an oil policy that can only hurt their investment.

By toning down its price demands, OPEC can also avoid taking blame for failure or inadequacy in the steps to be taken at Paris to help developing countries out of their economic plight. The industrial nations will be less willing and able to contribute toward the proposed $1 billion aid fund if their own economies have to bear the blow of a jump in energy costs.

The theme of interdependence between the socalled rich and poor nations lies behind the Paris conference. The industrial world has shown a sincere desire to respond to the cry for relief from Third World countries pointing to disparity between the price of the raw materials they export and the manufactured goods they import. OPEC and its pricing policies must be drawn into that framework of interdependence if the problems of inflation and recession on a worldwise scale are going to be

She Paid The Price

IVA Ikuko Toguri d'Aquino has been called "Tokyo Rose" since 1945 but she never used the name when she was one of seven women who were American citizens making Englishlanguage broadcasts for Radio Tokyo during World War II. None of the others were ever prosecuted. She wouldn't have been if she had renounced her U.S. citizenship, which she refused to do. She was convicted of treason on one count after a jury deliberated three days. She lost her citizenship, served six years in prison, paid a $10,000 fine out of her father's estate, and successfully resisted deportation.

Now she wants her U.S. citizenship back. She has applied or a pardon. She is 60 years old. The facts of her crime are hazy. She has paid dearly for it.

Fate singled her out. A presidential pardon would now be appropriate.

DON OAKLEY Don't Run Away From The Cities

There is no question but that the financial plight of so many of our cities is largely the result of the shift of tax-paying middle-class residents and job-generating businesses to the suburbs.

And the blame for this rests with the federal government, charges one observer, Boston University political science professor Frances Fox Piven

Federal government did two things, she says: It made it financially advantageous for middleincome families to buy suburban homes with low interest rates and income tax deductions, and it spent billions building highways to give suburban dwellers quick access into and out of the cities.

This may be true, or part of the truth, but one wonders how it could have been otherwise. In a democracy, for better or worse, the will of the majority - or at least the will of the voting majority - prevails, and it is difficult to imagine how the federal government could have told Americans in the 1950s and '60s to forget their cars or have told the owners of businesses where they must locate.

Behind the helping hand of the social planner always lurks the fist of the tyrant. Having said this, however, there is also no question but that there is really no running away from the cities. The problems of urban America are the problems of all of us. If the past few decades were an era in which millions of Americans were enabled to achieve the good life, one of our top national priorities in millions who were left behind.

As everybody knows by now, Amy Carter will attend a public school in Washington. It will be the first time since the administration of Theodore Roosevelt that the child of a president has done so. Of course, the Secret Service was consulted before the decision was made. But what many people do not know is that Amy attended the Thaddeus Stevens School all last week, as sort of a 'dry run' to test Secret Service procedures.

According to my source in Washington, the Secret Service had chosen its best man to protect Clinton J. Fetlock, an experienced agent with a

JOHN D. LOFTON, JR. Networks Keep Us In Dark WASHINGTON - On November 11, here in this city, in the East Lounge of the National Press Club, a new organization calling itself The Committee on the Present Danger (CPD), held a press conference and issued a warning of the utmost gravity.

The profoundly disturbing admonition, which incoming President Carter will ignore only at great peril to this nation, was this: Our country is being increasingly endangered by Soviet military power and unless decisive steps are taken to deal with this growing menace, our economic and military capacity will become inadequate to assure peace with security. Declaring the Soviet Union's unparalleled military buildup to be the "principal threat" to the United States, world peace and the cause of numan freedom, the CPD says: "Soviet military power and its rate of growth cannot be explained or justified by considerations of self-defense. The Soviet Union is sciously seeking what its spokesmen call 'visible military preponderance' which, they explain, will permit the USSR 'to transform the onditions of world politics' and determine the direction of its development."" To deal with the Russian arms buildup and the danger it poses to U.S. security interests, the CPD suggests a larger defense budget so that we can be sufficiently strong to negotiate hardheaded and verifiable agreements to control arms and reduce armaments.

Now, when this new conference was completed, CPD press man Paul Green felt good about it for several reasons. First, it was wellattended

Glascock: A Partner

Charles Glascock and his wife, Elizabeth, have a very busy life, revolving around their two partnerships. They are parents of 9 children. They are also partners in a thriving hardware business in Longwood.

"Our oldest son is in the navy," says Charlie. "Our oldest daughter is married and is a school teacher in West Virginia." The seven children still at home all help mom and dad with the store - when they aren't running off to music lessons, school functions or other activities.

Tim, the number-one son still at home, spends much of his time working at the store. Next semester he begins college and will perhaps study business administration. He ran the family store completely for his father during the recent Casselberry budget hearings so his father could keep an eye on what was going on in city hall.

Rosemarie, 12, plays clarinet. Mary, 17, plays bells and Lisa, 16, plays flute. She also came back from a statewide competition on plano with a "superior" rating, the highest rating possible. Nearly all the children play piano, but it is a special favorite of Bill, 13, Terence 10, and John, 8.

Give a darn... the cure can be a k Modern wonder drugs can knock out illness and diseases that were serious health hazards in grandpa's day. But the very drugs that help make you well... can also affect your ability to drive a car. Even when prescription drugs make you feel well enough to drive, they can affect your alertness, judgement and coordination ... even your vision ... things you must use constantly while operating a motor vehicle. When that happens, the cure can be a killer. GIVE A DARN... Don't drive when you are taking drugs or when you are ill. FLORIDA 150 "FLORIDA" De les ARRIVE ALIVE 4

How To Stop A Nosebleed

DEAR DR. LAMB - What does one do to stop a nosebleed? It's very dry in our office and I find that I'm getting nosebleeds more often, especially in the winter. I know you have to apply pressure to the side of the nostril and pinch the bridge of the nose hard, but do you put your head forward or back? I don't like the blood flowing to "nose picking" which in turn Pass Pass Pass down my throat, so I would leads to bleeding.
