Steering committee agenda

SANFORD — The next meeting of the Lake Monroe Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee has been scheduled for Wednesday, July 14, beginning at 4:30 p.m.

The Waterfront Committee, recently approved as a standing committee by the City Commission, will also hold its first official election of officers from among its 21 members.

Also listed on the agenda for Wednesday's meeting are the following items:

Citizens present needs to visiting congresswoman

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Corrine Brown said she had heard the same complaints many times Thursday. City officials complain their county ignores them. Residents complain their city officials neglect them.

"All the problems are the same," said Brown, the Democratic congresswoman from Jacksonville. "I represent an area that has traditionally been neglected. I could close my eyes and be in Jacksonville. I could close my eyes and be in Ocala. I could close my eyes and be in east Gainesville."

Brown ended an exhausting 14-stop tour of her district Thursday evening with visits with Sanford officials and Goldsboro residents, the first local stop since her election last November.

Brown is the first black to represent portions of Seminole County and the remainder of her meandering 300-mile black-majority congressional district which runs from Ocala to Gainesville to Jacksonville to Daytona Beach to Sanford to Orlando.

County maps debt repayment plan

By J. MARK BARFIELD

Another day older and deeper in debt
Merle Travis

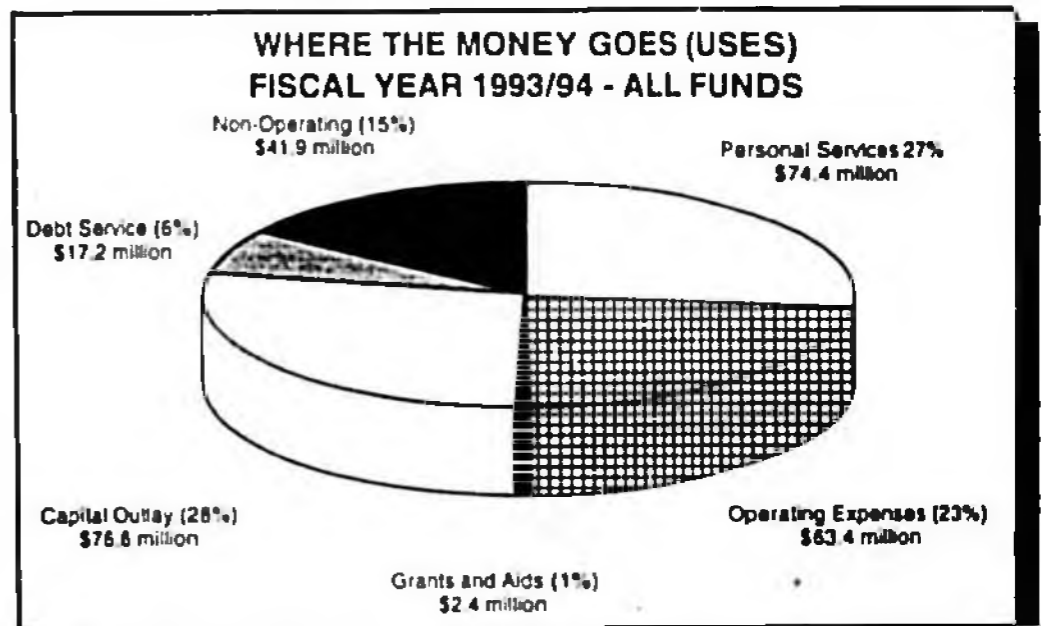

SANFORD — Included in County Manager Ron Rabun's $276 million budget proposal for next year is about $17.2 million to pay for the county's debts or 6 percent of the total spending plan.

By the Oct. 1 start of the new county fiscal year, the county will owe $186 million in principal alone. That's about $550 for every man, woman and child living in the county.

And if interest is added to the principal owed, the county will owe a total of $310.7 million during the next 30 years or so to repay all of the debts.

Actually, a small amount of the debt will be repaid by property taxes. Out of every dollar Rabun wants you to pay in property taxes this November, a tad more than a penny will be used to repay the county's $4.4 million debt on library construction bonds which were originally issued in 1984. The county refinanced the library and other debts during the past two years

Caribbean countries consider joint approach

By Associated Press

NASSAU, Bahamas — Caribbean countries say it's time the cruise industry pays for sapping their island resources, so a dozen nations are planning to form a regional agency to make sure it does.

The Caribbean Hotel Association, which instigated the campaign, claims the cruise business has been growing at the expense of land-based tourism and doesn't pay its fair share for the island visits.

The idea for an agency to regulate and tax the cruise industry received a warm reception Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Caribbean Community, a gathering of the heads of 12 English-speaking countries and the British colony of Montserrat.

The initiative follows a decision by Miami-based Royal Caribbean Cruises Ltd. to drop St. Lucia as a port of call after it raised its head tax on cruise passengers from $2.50 to $10 in October.

"They put too much pressure on us," said John Compton, prime minister of St. Lucia. "We decided to withdraw it. They have been growing at the expense of land-based tourism, which accounts for 90 percent of our tourism revenue."

Royal Caribbean spokesman Rich Steck said Thursday the company sees the route change differently.

"We have no objection to paying when value is received, but we object to arbitrary increases in head tax when there's no value added," he said.

John LaCapra, head of the Florida-Caribbean Cruise Association, said Thursday the governments are preoccupied with tax income but ignore cruise passenger spending ashore and their return visits as hotel guests.

"We certainly know that the cruise industry is a major economic benefit for the region, and I think that the current discussions ignore all of that," he said.

The Caribbean Community is considering adopting: —A uniform head tax, probably about $10. They currently range from a low of $3 in Barbados to a high of $15 in the Bahamas.

—A uniform port user fee covering berthing, waste disposal and terminal construction costs.

—Uniform licensing fees that could be offset by buying supplies in the Caribbean. "Right now there is not too much incentive to buy everything out of Miami," said St. Lucia tourism director Allen M. Chastanet.

—Imposing fines for illegal ocean dumping. "Because we are all so dependent on tourism as the principal engine of our economies, marine pollution could savage the core of economic activity in the majority of islands," said Hubert Ingraham prime minister of the Bahamas.

Hot? You don't know

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — It was a 100-degree punchline to an age-old straight line: How hot was it?

But not many folks were laughing Thursday when subway stations turned to saunas and asphalt melted into adhesive during another brutal day of a heat wave.

How hot was it?

Too hot to sell ice cream. Mohammed Hassan stood, sweat dripping from his brow, alongside his ice cream cart at 52nd Street and Fifth Avenue. He had frozen fruit pops, lemon ices, chocolate and vanilla delights. What he didn't have was customers.

"When it's too hot, nobody buys ice cream," he said, mopping his forehead. "You need medium hot. Nobody wants to come out of their building in weather like this."

With good reason. The temperature in the city hit a record 100 during the afternoon. As if that wasn't enough, the humidity pushed the heat index to 109 degrees. In layman's terms, a reading of 109 means "Get inside, stupid! It's really hot out here!"

It was really hot along all of the East Coast, especially from New York to South Carolina. The National Weather Service reported heat indices of 100 to 115 degrees throughout the region, and forecast more of the same for Friday. Among temperature records broken or tied Thursday were 103 in Newark, N.J., and in downtown Baltimore, and 102 in Richmond, Va.

It's been hot since the Fourth of July, when the temperature in New York hit 95. It reached 98 on Wednesday.

Efforts to stay cool led to the second-heaviest demand for electricity in city history, said Consolidated Edison spokesman Richard Mulieri. Only July 23, 1991, exceeded the 10,608 megawatts of power cranked out Thursday afternoon.

If you think it's hot above ground, try underground. In the city's subways. The conditions on the platforms brought to mind a tropical rain forest, minus the tropics, the rain and the forest. Sweltering temperatures had commuters using their T-shirts as towels.

Seat belt checks to continue

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

Motorists will save themselves many problems if they buckle up their seat belts. The Florida Highway Patrol has announced it will continue a safety belt blitz on the state's highways.

The drive was instigated as the result of a study done on the Memorial Day holiday weekend. It started this past holiday weekend, and is now set to continue through July 17.

Regarding the initial study, Col. Ronald H.

Grimming, director of the FHP, said, "We were especially disturbed to find that almost 90 percent of motorists fatally injured during the Memorial Day holiday weekend, were not wearing safety belts, although they were available to them in their vehicles."

Grimming added, "We simply cannot allow these senseless tragedies to continue."

During informal surveys done by FHP troopers it was revealed that compliance had increased from 56 percent during the Memorial Day weekend, to 69 percent on the July 4th weekend at selected locations around the state. The patrol remains concerned that a significant number of motorists still are not buckling up.

Grimming said stepped up enforcement will continue during the remainder of the drive, with troopers issuing written warnings during roadside safety checks, and motorists found not to be buckled up during routine traffic stops.

Citations will not be issued solely for violation of the safety belt law during the roadside safety checks.

Specific locations and times for the checks were not revealed. The FHP indicated they would be done throughout the state.

Brown

officials with obtaining more federal assistance for drainage problems in Goldsboro and throughout the city and to aid them to bypass county bureaucracy. She promised residents to aid them in their fight to steer more community improvement funds and jobs to their neighborhoods.

But Brown also had a message for the 30 or so west Sanford residents gathered at the West Sanford Boys and Girls Club. She told them to organize, review city and county budgets and attend government meetings en masse to force the attention of their elected representatives.

"We need to get more sophisticated in how we deal with our problems," said Brown.

At her first stop at City Hall, Brown met with commissioner Bob Thomas, Sanford's first black commissioner, City Manager Bill Simmons, and Charles Rowe, the city's community development officer. Mayor Bettye Smith was unable to attend the meeting.

Simmons told Brown federal entitlement guidelines need to be relaxed to allow Sanford to receive direct grants to improve drainage, sewers and other local problems.

Simmons said the county, which allocates its federal community development block grants for projects, does not grant a fair share to Sanford, which has a higher percentage of low income residents than other communities. Simmons said Sanford has only one vote on the county's CDBG Citizens Advisory Board, the same as Bookertown and other smaller pockets of low-income residents.

"The (committee) should be divided according to percentage," said Simmons.

"There needs to be an emphasis on need," said Rowe. "One low-income person in an isolated situation needs as much help as a low-income person who lives in a sea of low-income people."

Brown pledged her staff would review current and pending legislation for relief for the city.

City officials also asked for Brown's support for funding for the Central Florida GreeneWay interchange at Interstate 4 and development money for Central Florida Regional Airport. Both, as Simmons described them, were job-producing enterprises.

Brown, a member of the Aviation and Economic Development Subcommittees of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, pledged her support.

Later, at a meeting of the Westside Community Association, Brown heard similar comments from residents that the city and county were unresponsive to their needs.

"The city and the county have been crying the same tune for 40 years. 'There's not enough money,'" said Seminole County activist Johnell Jackson. "I've found there's plenty of money, but where does it go? These people keep you in blighted areas. They keep you in blighted conditions. How can your office monitor what happens to the funds?"

"I can assure you, if the money comes in to my district, it's going to be spent the way it is designated," responded Brown.

Anthony People, WCA president, asked if federal community improvement grants could be directed to their association, and not the city or county. Brown responded she knew of none other than drug rehabilitation and similar social service grants.

Brown urged Jackson and the other residents if they believed community development funds were not being allocated fairly, they should contact the secretary of Florida Department of Community Affairs or the governor's office.

After the 75-minute session, residents said they were impressed with their congressional representative, despite her geographical remoteness to Sanford.

Interested citizens met at the Boys and Girls Club to share their concerns with her. Brown made several suggestions and promised her support.

Reich says teachers can help create good jobs

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich called on the nation's teachers today to help reverse what he called a trend toward more jobs at lower pay.

In a speech to the American Federation of Teachers, Reich noted that the U.S. economy has created nearly 2 million jobs a year since 1975, including 800,000 so far this year.

"Our bigger long-term problem is creating good jobs," he said. "The average wages of America's production workers continue to slide. Adjusted for inflation, they're the lowest they've been since 1967."

That shift, he said, requires new policies that improve skills and ease the transition from contracting industries into new jobs in expanding ones.

"Education lies at the heart of such a strategy," he told the teachers.

"The major required changes are strengthening investments in education and training, an effective school-to-work transition approach, an improved worker adjustment system and the capacity for life-long learning on the job," he said.

Reich said nearly one full-time worker in five doesn't earn enough to keep a family of four out of poverty, compared with just over one in 10 in 1979.

"And even greater numbers of Americans wanting full-time jobs are working part time stead," he said. "No other industrialized nation's workers have lost so much income."

Reich disputed the argument that a trade-off between good jobs and more jobs is inevitable in advanced industrial nations.

Blow whistle on people who pollute

In Fort Lauderdale, passengers who reported illegal dumping from a cruise ship may reap some financial benefits from their concerns.

This may be good, but it should not be the main purpose for what might be labeled as whistle blowing.

Preservation of the overall environment should be the prime concern. Every citizen should be constantly aware of problems on land as well as in the water.

Certainly we have many organizations which we expect to keep a close eye out for pollution of any type. They include the Friends of the St. Johns, Friends of the Wekiva, State Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, and many other groups, private as well as governmental. They have served as excellent watchdogs.

The problem is, that no matter how diligent they are, they cannot watch every area all the time. They need the assistance of every citizen.

We cannot ignore even a small indication of pollution. If a person sees waste or trash being thrown into Lake Monroe or some other body of water, it must not be assumed that someone else will report it.

It also cannot be expected that waste will be absorbed in the waters and eventually disappear.

The same holds true for land areas. Illegal dumping must not be allowed. Trash should not be thrown along the roadway from moving vehicles.

When a problem is seen, or even suspected, take action, and contact the organization which has jurisdiction over the land or waterway. If they cannot take the complaint, they may be able to give advice on who to contact.

Reporting infractions however, is not the only responsibility we must accept. If a situation is reported and nothing is done to resolve it, pressure must be applied to whoever is responsible for not only clean-up, but protection.

We must also not be part of the problem we seek to overcome. Do not throw trash out the car window, and don't try to get rid of items by depositing them where you believe no one cares.

People who stop and think of the damage and destruction caused by pollution do care. Apparently not everyone is capable of having this concern. If they did, we wouldn't have a problem.

In defense of King

As someone who wasn't there and doesn't know what happened, how could you, Jane Johnson, or why would you comment or take sides on the issue of Coach Blake's suspension? Blake, being a minister of the community, should have taken more precautions in his lack of self control. Phillip "Duke" King, age 19, a man but still a student, 6'2", 135 lbs. Coach Blake, a schoolteacher, role model, about 6'1", 230 lbs. Now you tell me what right did he have to attack this student or any other student at Seminole High School?

They say that Phillip took a swing at Coach Blake but if you ask the witnesses who were there, that wasn't true. Ms. Jane Johnson, I would argue your issue but you don't have one. I'm a student of Seminole High School and a friend of many students who are joining the football team because of Coach Blake's suspension.

Coach Blake, head football coach, continually put Phillip King above his head and threw him down. Now what is so right about that? This incident between Phillip and Blake started when Phillip quit the football team. Since then he had been saying little comments toward him; finally during an argument between Duke and Coach Blake over a turn on the basketball court turned into a disaster after Phillip said he "didn't care about the turn and that whoever wanted the turn could have it."

How to end vandalism

I recently read your article about the school vandalizing problems (editorial, Sanford Herald, June 15, 1993).

A solution that I read about that was suggested up north would be to publish the parents' names of those juveniles involved.

You will see how quickly these acts of vandalism will end.

Race still divides popular opinion

Two major decisions — judicial and legislative — point up again how tragically this nation continues to be divided along racial and class lines.

The legislative decision — the House vote to ban Medicaid financing of abortions except in cases of rape, incest or a threat to the woman's life — swept to an easy victory in a 255-to-178 vote.

On the face of it, the vote would seem to have nothing to do with race. But the ban-Medicaid-abortion vote divided the U.S. House of Representatives as completely along racial lines as any vote ever taken.

While 59 percent of the House members (157 Republicans and 98 Democrats) voted for the ban and, in effect, making low-income women second-class citizens, the 38 members of the Congressional Black Caucus (37 Democrats and one Republican) voted UNANIMOUSLY against the ban.

This does not mean that the black community unilaterally favors support for abortion. A significant percentage of blacks are as opposed to abortion as whites. (On principle, I oppose abortion, but I strenuously support the right of a woman to make the choice about what she does with her body.)

However, it does indicate that the black community generally supports the right of poor women to have equal access to an abortion as their wealthier counterparts.

This is because the percentage of black women who live below the poverty line is three times greater than that of white women.

Blacks have been deprived so long and so egregiously of their political and economic rights that they have developed a more intense fidelity to their right to make personal decisions in the political arena.

Moreover, after 12 years of the Reagan-Bush administration's feverish efforts to turn back the civil-rights clock to pre-Brown vs. Board of Education days, blacks are becoming depressed about the continuing erosion of their rights. This brings up the tragic judicial decision to which I alluded earlier. The Hyde Amendment (named for Illinois Rep. Henry J. Hyde, a Republican) would embezzle one more right from the already small number of rights that blacks still retain.

Only two days before the House ban-Medicaid-abortion vote, the Supreme Court ruled, 5 to 4, that legislative districts created to increase black political representation MAY be violating the constitutional rights of white voters.

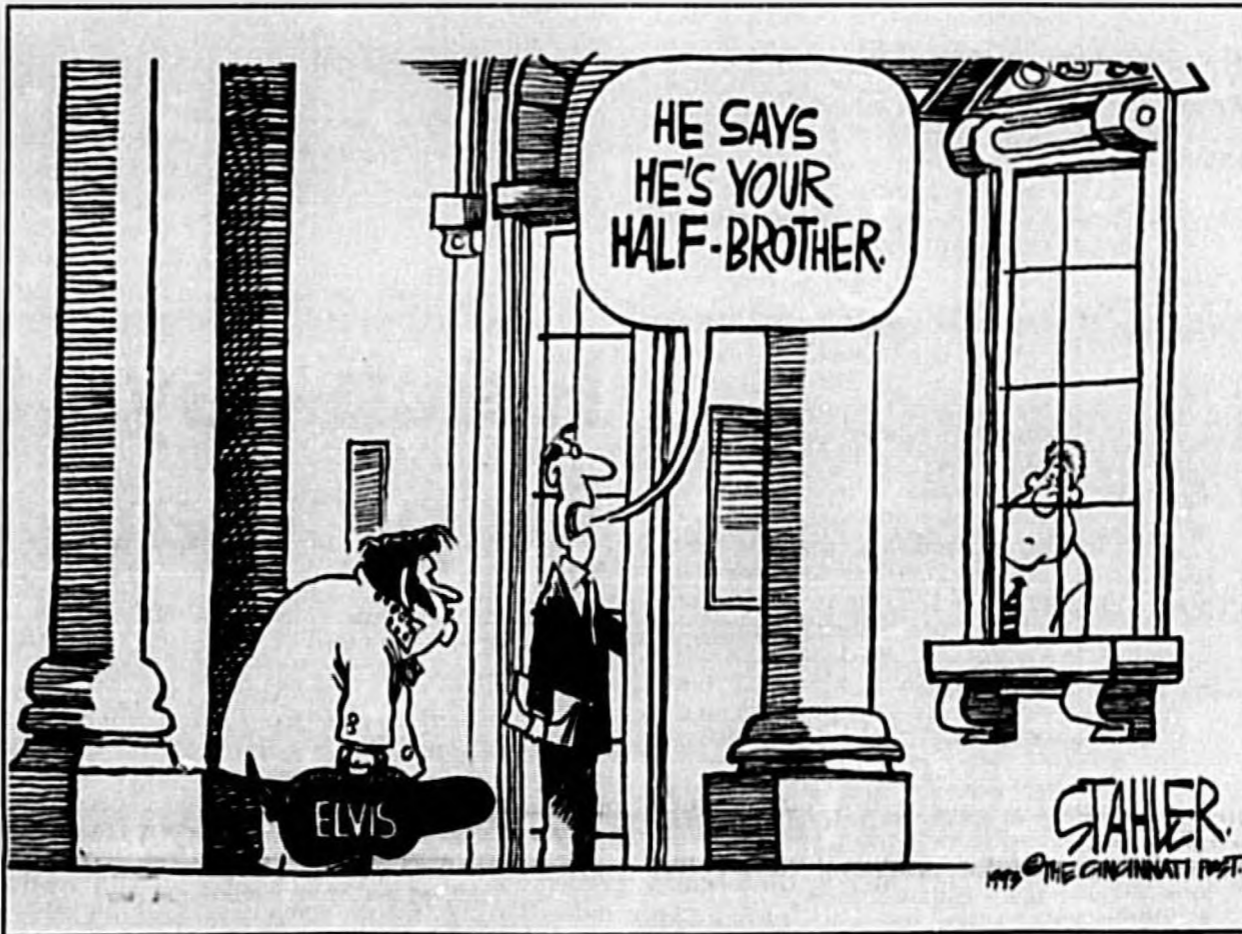

The court majority, which included the least judicially qualified member of the court, Clarence Thomas, knew it was on shaky ground and equivocated unmercifully. After reciting the facts of the case with some tortured legal reasoning, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote:

"Thus, we express no view as to whether 'the intentional creation of majority-minority districts' ... always give rise to an equal-protection claim. We hold only that, on the facts of this case (Shaw vs. Reno), plaintiffs have stated a claim sufficient to defeat the state appellees' motion to dismiss."

Translation: Remand the case to the district court for retrial.

Two major decisions point up again how tragically this nation continues to be divided along racial and class lines.

Broad missions vs. budget

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration has performed a major about-face in the acrimonious debate over downsizing the military. After signaling it was ready to constrict the military's mission, Defense Secretary Les Aspin is now apparently backing off from making a change.

It now appears the Pentagon will have to fund a broad mission with a shrinking budget. A major interservice fight for dwindling assets is clearly in the offing.

The Bush administration, and then-Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, determined that the military had to be prepared to fight and win two major regional conflicts simultaneously — a so-called "win-win" strategy.

For the last year, the individual services wrestled with reviving force structures and "roles and missions" statements to comply with this strategy. For most of the services it meant scaling back on planned expansions, but it did not entail very sharp cuts from current force levels.

The Clinton administration realized there would be only a relatively small "peace dividend" from a military prepared to fight two major regional conflicts simultaneously. Aspin appeared ready to adopt a revamped policy, called "win-hold-win," which calls for fighting one major regional war, while holding the line in a second, until the first is won.

Now he is backing off. But even as the Clinton administration says it is sticking with "win-win," it also insists it will continue pushing for larger defense-budget cuts.

Here is how the policy will affect each service:

Army: The Army faces dual challenges. Not only must it cut personnel, but it must transform itself from a "heavy" force constituted to fight World War III, to a highly mobile force ready to move and fight in any corner of the world.

Under the win-win strategy, the Army was to come down to 12 divisions. There have been serious discussions about cutting the Army back to 10 divisions, which would probably be sufficient in a win-hold-win environment. What is not clear is whether pressure remains to cut the Army further, even while holding to the win-win mission.

Army Chief of Staff Gordon Sullivan thinks his branch of service has already done more than its share: "We have already cut 260,000 positions out of the Army, uniformed and civilian. We have cut from 18 divisions to 12. We have closed hundreds of installations overseas and dozens here at home. I think we are now at the correct strength."

Navy: At the height of the Reagan defense buildup, there were plans for a 650-ship Navy centered around 14 aircraft-carrier battle groups. Under the win-win strategy, the Navy would downsize to around 420-450 ships and 12 carrier battle groups. Aspin now appears ready to cut the Navy to as few as 350 ships and 10 carriers.

Adm. Frank Kelso, chief of Naval Operations, is dead set against the plan: "It's all a question of risk. You can only have a certain percentage of your fleet at sea at any one time. With the number of trouble spots in the world, and the need to be able to respond quickly, 10 carriers does not give us the number of options that we should have. I need 12 carriers to do the job the Navy is being given."

Marine Corps: The Marine Corps is in a contest with the Army to be the force first called to go into a trouble spot. When former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced the win-win strategy last year, he wanted to cut the Marines to 159,000 by 1997. Marine Commandant Carl Mundy fought the plan, both within the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill. In the end he simply outmaneuvered Cheney, and the size of the Corps was put at 174,000 by 1997. There has been some talk recently of downsizing the Marines to below 174,000.

Gen. Mundy appears ready to fight to hold the line: "We have already significantly cut the size of our force structure, and I do not believe we could be expected to handle our mission if we are cut below that force strength."

Air Force: The only service that was set to grow, or at least not shrink, under a change from a win-win to win-hold-win strategy was the Air Force.

In the new force structure, air power becomes critical, not only to winning regional conflicts but also to any holding action in a second conflict. Moreover, in a rapid deployment strategy, where troops are based here and not abroad, the Air Force will be required to have a massive airlift capacity.

There had been some talk of cutting from the Bush projection of 24 air wings to 20, but that will now be very difficult.

"There has to be common sense to this (downsizing) process," says Air Force Chief of Staff Merrill McPenk. "We need to be really sure of future roles and missions before we make choices that may be difficult and expensive to reverse."

We need to be really sure of future roles and missions before we make choices that may be difficult and expensive to reverse.

White House chef stews over staff

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton may be the commander in chief, but he's apparently having trouble getting the White House kitchen staff to take orders.

Although it wasn't among his campaign promises, Clinton has been pushing hard to get the domestic staff to revamp the White House menu from the time-honored French gourmet to more traditional American fare. The new president's pedestrian palate has proved too much to digest for White House chefs, who have reacted with a mixture of pique and petulance.

Sean Haddon is one White House chef who says shame on his prima donna colleagues.

According to his behind-the-kitchen-doors account, which he provided during a recent interview with our associate Ed Henry, Haddon may enjoy the distinction of being the first White House whistle-blower to don the fluffy white chef's hat. He alleges that his fellow chefs are not just getting mad, but they are also getting even through insubordination and inferior service.

The nuggets Haddon served up suggest that a chef's ego can take precedence over the president himself.

For example, though President Clinton is allergic to cream, Executive Chef Pierre Chambrin has refused on several occasions to remove the cream from his vaunted French recipes, and the president has consequently suffered some allergic reactions. Chambrin refused to comment. Haddon says that rather than improvise by preparing French food without the cream, Chambrin now prepares a separate meal for the president without cream and serves his cream-based masterpieces to the rest of the first family.

Haddon has his own personal bone of contention with the White House that goes beyond menus and meals. He recently filed a lawsuit against his boss — the chief usher of the executive residence, Gary J. Walters. Haddon alleges that he was passed over for a promotion because his wife is African-American and because he didn't train in France like most White House chefs. According to his lawsuit, Haddon says that when he tried asking Walters why he missed the promotion, Walters responded: "I do not want American food, California Nouveau, or eclectic cooking in the White House."

The dispute between Haddon and his colleagues has been simmering for nearly a year, but came to a boil one night this May while Haddon was in the midst of preparing dinner. Four armed Secret Service agents suddenly appeared to escort Haddon out of the White House kitchen and deposited him onto Pennsylvania Avenue in full chef's regalia. He was placed on administrative leave. Haddon's attorney said that the Secret Service had acted on a tip that Haddon had leveled threats against the Bush family last year.

It's unclear why the Secret Service, which did not return our calls for comment, had not acted sooner. Haddon's attorney said that his client passed a polygraph test administered by the Secret Service, and has returned to work. Ironically, Haddon was one of Bush's favorite chefs. He and Bush formed a bond when Bush was hospitalized in 1991. Haddon trekked out to Bethesda Naval Hospital to prepare the recuperating president's meals at Bush's request.

Though Haddon is the only White House staffer willing to speak about the subject on the record, other officials corroborated parts of his story. A spokesperson for Hillary Rodham Clinton confirmed that the Clintons have made a "clear change to American cuisine" from French food, but added that the chefs "have been very agreeable" to the change.

Braves music video, cards promote fruit

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A set of seven Atlanta Braves trading cards, a music video and a baseball board game are part of a novel state promotion for Florida fruit and vegetables and good nutrition for kids.

Instead of a curve ball, one card has pitcher Steve Avery about to throw a grapefruit.

Fellow hurler Tom Glavine is chomping on a carrot, while catcher Greg Olson tears into a stalk of broccoli. Third baseman Terry Pendleton ponders a bowl of strawberries and first baseman Sid Bream holds aloft a glass of orange juice.

There's even a rewritten, nutritionally correct version of the standard "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" that features orange juice and watermelon instead of peanuts and Cracker-jack.

"We have teamed up with the National League champion Atlanta Braves to drive home the message that proper nutrition is essential for good health," said

Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford. "This program makes good nutrition fun and appealing by using professional athletes to model good eating habits."

The baseball theme is part of Crawford's "Fresh 2 U" campaign to teach children better eating habits. Another part of the campaign uses rap music videos about fruit and vegetables.

The trading cards contain notes about each player and a fact about Florida's agricultural production: "Did you know if you lined up all the tomatoes Florida farmers grow in a single year, they would circle the earth eight times?"

They'll be released for the first time this weekend in Tallahassee for the Sunshine State Games, four days of amateur athletics featuring competitors and spectators from around Florida.

The music videos will be broadcast on Florida television and radio stations and on the scoreboard screen during Braves games at Atlanta Fulton County Stadium.

Competition in the August 7 running of the national Soapbox Derby in Akron, Ohio.

Sunday's race begins at 8:30 a.m. and is slated to end at 4:00 p.m. An awards banquet will be conducted at 7:00 p.m. Sunday at the Sanford Civic Center.

All 50 contestants who participate in the race will receive awards.

Special soapbox derby racers have been prepared for handicapped children so they may experience first hand what it feels like to ride in the race car. In addition, two adult cars will be used for celebrity races.

The participants, ranging in age from 9 to 16 years old, are competing in three divisions for the opportunity to attend a week-long camp prior to racing in the national derby. A total of 235 racers from 105 cities will compete in the national race in Ohio.

The racers Sunday will be focused on winning with an eye on Akron and probably hope to break a long standing record. There has been only one winner ever from the South in the All-American Soap Box Derby...Joe Lunn in 1952 from Columbus, Georgia, age 11.

agencies can expect to be allowed time to make corrections."

Building official Linda Gentry has recommended four of the five structures be condemned, and demolished by the Public Works department.

The City Manager is recommending that all five owners be given 30 days in which to repair or demolish their buildings, or have the city demolish them and assess the cost against the property.

The first building is an abandoned single family residence located at 1013 W. 11th Street, with Simeon Austin listed as owner. The city building department was unable to contact the owner.

Gentry has identified the house as having: rotted siding, broken windows, deteriorated roof, junk, debris, high growth, and possible transient and drug activity.

Building number 2 is an abandoned single family residence located at 1112 W. 13th Street. The owner is listed as Edna Long. The building official reports receiving no cooperation from the owner.

The condition report from the building department describes the home as having: broken windows, deteriorated roof, junk, debris, high growth, possible transient and drug activity, and open to vandalism.

Building three is an abandoned commercial building, located at 1017 W. 13th Street, with the owner indicated as the Sestside Improvement Association.

The building department report describes the building as an attractive nuisance. It lists: broken windows, deteriorated roof, junk, debris, high growth, possible transient and drug activity, open to vandalism, holes in side of building.

Building four is a structure located at 919 Elm Avenue, owned by Columbus and Eva Carawell. Although a building permit on the structure was issued on June 8 of this year, the building has suffered extreme structure damage from a fire.

The building is listed as having junk, debris, open to vandalism, being an attractive nuisance and having a dilapidated shed.

The fifth building has been discussed by the commission for the past two years. It an abandoned commercial building located at 1800 W. Airport Blvd., at the corner of Country Club Road. The owner is listed as Johnny Walker, Trustee, of Leesburg.

Gentry lists the two story building as having: Signs of transient use, numerous bar joists-signs of deterioration; floor and roof decking show signs of deterioration and rusting; structural damage due to deterioration; property is overgrown; structure is non-conforming due to setback requirements.

The hearing scheduled for Monday night is a formal procedure required to be done by the city as a first step toward the demolition of dilapidated structures, unless the owner brings them up to code.

As of the end of this week, the five condemnation hearings were listed as the first item of business at the city commission meeting.

Later in the meeting, the city will consider a status report on progress, or the lack thereof, on repairing a total of 18 structures, which include the five to be discussed previously.

Most of them are listed as single family structures. Of the remaining 10, good progress is reported on two structures, no progress at two structures, and the rest are listed with limited improvements or other suggestions for demolition.

Most of the structures were entered on the condemnation process report as far back as 1992.

One home has been on the condemnation list for over four years. The residence at 2018 Mellenville Ave. is owned by Sara Jacobson. It has been on the condemnation list since May 1, 1989. As some work on the structure has been reported during the past years, the city has granted a number of requests for time extensions with which to complete repairs on the building.

The most recent was a 45 day extension, by which time the building is to be made liveable and placed back on the tax roll.

Both of these items will be discussed in the city commission meeting beginning at 7 p.m., in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Debt

to reduce interest payments.

Less than one penny of each dollar of property taxes will be used to repay the amount owed from the $15 million in environmentally sensitive lands bonds sold in 1992 with the endorsement of request of voters.

In all, the county will pay about $2.1 million next year for the two debts. All of the other county debts will be repaid from "special obligation" funds. That is, sources of money county commissioners have pegged to repay certain debts.

For example, the county will pay about $1.3 million on a $10 million debt incurred in 1987 to build the Juvenile Justice Center, Animal Control Shelter and commissioner's auditorium. The payment will come from the nearly $11 million the county expects to receive from state sales taxes.

Rabun has recommended tapping in to the sales tax revenues again to repay a proposed $12 million bond which he wants to use to build a new Public Safety-Sheriff's Office complex.

Another example of a special obligation debt is the $2.8 million owed to raise money to build the soccer training facility at Sylvan Lake Park. The $242,000 payment will be made from the $990,000 the county expects to receive from its three-cent tourist development tax.

Other county debts include: ●$2.8 million owed on a refinanced debt originating in 1973 for road construction, $392,263 payment next year from gasoline taxes.

●$19.3 million owed on a refinanced 1988 debt for road improvements, $2.7 million payment from gasoline taxes.

●$16.6 million owed on a refinanced 1988 road construction debt, $1.4 million payment from gasoline taxes.

●$3.8 million owed on bonds sold to acquire equipment, $1.3 million payment from state shared revenues.

●$76.5 million owed on refinanced 1985, 1987 and 1989 debts for water and sewer improvements and expansion, $5.9 million payment from water and sewer customer fees.

●$25.7 million owed on a refinanced 1990 debt incurred for garbage handling improvements.

From Staff Reports

TALLAHASSEE — Things did not go quite as planned for the Oviedo Marlins baseball team in the opening round of the Sunshine State Games at Dick Houser Stadium on the campus of Florida State University Thursday night.

Playing in the feature game of the day against Tallahassee (the defending champion), the Marlins were done in by the pitching of Jared Robinson and an extra-base offensive barrage by the score of 10-0.

The Marlins, the summer team for Oviedo High School that plays in the Central Florida National Amateur Baseball Federation (NABF) league, fell to 22-8 with the loss and will now have to battle back out of the loser's bracket if they are to win the double-elimination event.

Robinson tossed the complete game shutout and helped his own cause with a bases-loaded triple.

Other big hitters for Tallahassee were Brooks Stevens with a two-run home run and Clark Odum who went three for three with a double and three RBIs.

Lallahassee will now face Merritt Island, a 0-2 winner Thursday, or Jacksonville Beach Fletcher, while Oviedo will take on Fletcher.

In other games Thursday, Quincy edged Swainville 3-1 and Apopka crushed First Coast 14-2. Today, Quincy will play Apopka and Swainville will face First Coast.

Merritt Island stayed in the winners bracket as Tony Wolfe and Dan Quattrochi each went two for three, to back winning pitcher Louis Ackerman. Mike Barnhill also went two for three for Jacksonville Beach Fletcher.

Apopka advanced behind the hitting of Brad Gerke (son of former Seminole Community College pitching ace and current Apopka football coach) and Orangewood Christian baseball coach Chip Gerke. Gerke was three for three with a pair of doubles to back the two-hit pitching of Derek Kirkland.

Derek Kirkland, brother of Derek, helped his sibling with two hits in four at bats. First Coast was its own worst enemy, committing 10 errors.

In Quincy's victory, winning pitcher Ray Hughes also carried the offense, going two for three with a double and two RBIs.

Another group of Seminole County athletes will be looking for better success starting today when several runners from the Lake Mary area take to the track at Florida State University.

Today (Friday), the younger group will compete with seven-year-old Michael Gibson Jr. and his 11-year-old sister Tiffany, son and daughter of Lake Mary's Girls Cross Country and Track teams at Lake Mary High School, will be in action.

Michael will throw the Shot Put and possibly try the High Jump, while Tiffany will be in the Long Jump, High Jump and 800-meter Run.

Michael qualified for the High Jump, said Mike Gibson Sr. But he's only seven and he will be going against kids nine and 10 years old. If they don't start at a high a height he may give it

Dodgers finish a strong fourth

From Staff Reports

ALAMONTE SPRINGS — It may not have been a championship, but it was almost as good.

Playing in the Veterans Memorial Fourth of July Tournament in Bradenton, the Altamonte Springs Dodgers baseball team did itself very proud, finishing fourth out of a field of 20 teams that featured clubs from Puerto Rico, New Jersey and Miami.

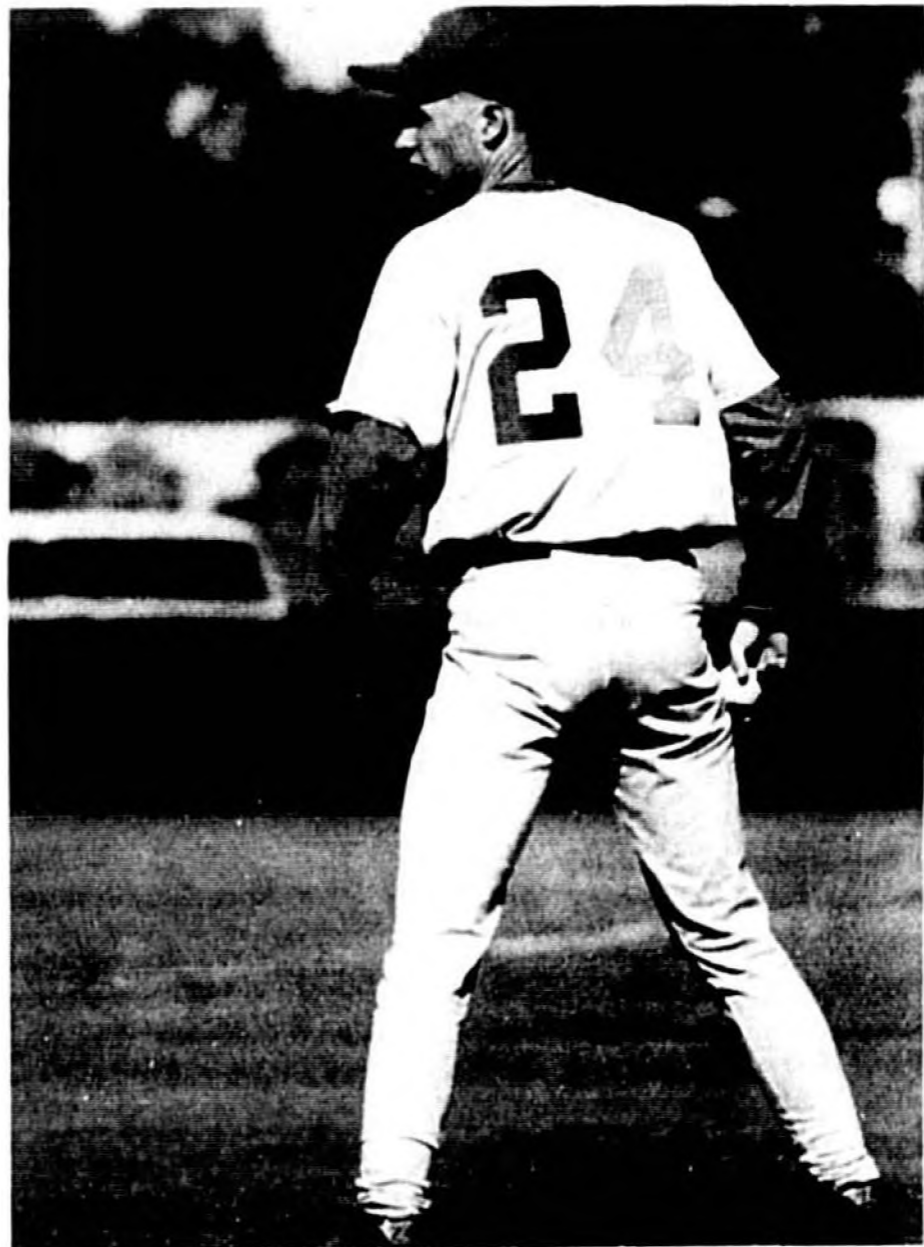

The team, representing Brandon American Legion Post 278-A, defeated Puerto Rico 6-0 in the championship contest.

The Dodgers, the Lake Brantley High School summer team that plays in the Central Florida League of the National Amateur Baseball Federation (NABF), won three games in the tournament over some very impressive competition.

In their opening game, Mitch Schradt hurled a shutout in handing the powerful Sarasota Baseball Club a 1-0 setback.

The big right hander tossed a three-hitter as the Dodgers handed Sarasota its first loss in 21 games. Matt Desart drove in the only run for the winners.

Raines leads White Sox in pounding of Orioles

By DAVID GINSBURG AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — Twice in six days, the Chicago White Sox battered Baltimore, starter Rick Sutcliffe. This time, they got a victory to show for it.

Tim Lincecum had four hits, Bo Jackson homered in Chicago's six-run first inning, and Ellis Burks had a homer and five RBIs to lead the White Sox past the Orioles 12-5 Thursday night.

Ron Karkovier also homered for the White Sox, who led 10-0 after three innings and coasted to their fourth win in five games, Chicago is 7-2 against Baltimore this season.

On Saturday, Sutcliffe gave up six hits, three walks and four runs in just 3.1 innings. But Baltimore had even better success against Jason Bere and won a 9-6 slugfest.

In the rematch, Sutcliffe (8-4) was yanked after giving up six runs before getting three outs. It was the shortest outing by a Baltimore starter this season.

We match up with him pretty well, Chicago manager Gene Lammont said. He didn't have the control he needs to be real effective.

Exactly. Although Sutcliffe said he has been battling an inner ear infection, he would not use that as an excuse.

I've just had real bad location lately, he said. Everything is up in the strike zone. Right now I can't get my breaking stuff and off speed pitches over. That's a bad combination.

Five hits, a walk and an error gave the White Sox a 6-0 lead against Sutcliffe (8-4). Raines opened the game with a single and took third when Mark McLemore, playing third base for the first time since 1990, let a one-out grounder roll through his legs.

After a walk filled the bases, Burks hit a two-run single and Jackson followed with his seventh homer. Ozzie Guillen capped the big inning with an RBI double.

That proved to be more than enough offense for the White Sox and Bere (4-3), who allowed five runs in five-plus innings. Donn Pall pitched the next three innings, and former Seminole Community College star Bobby Thigpen worked a scoreless ninth.

The Sanford-born Raines, who now lives in Heathrow, is 7 for 10 in his last two games, both Chicago victories. He has also made two

Gaston, Cox fill All-Star rosters

By BEN WALKER AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — This year's All-Star game may look a lot like last year's World Series.

Pitchers Pat Hentgen and Duane Ward, outfielder Devon White and designated hitter Paul Molitor were added to the American League roster Thursday by All-Star manager Clito Gaston of Toronto, giving the World Series champion Blue Jays seven players on the team.

Fans already had elected starters John Olerud at first base, Roberto Alomar at second base and Joe Carter in the outfield. No other AL team has more than two players this year.

"I don't think anybody can question Clito's integrity. We all know there are people left out who deserve to be there. But you can make a strong case for everyone Clito's bringing," Molitor said.

The last time a team had seven players in the All-Star game was Cincinnati in 1977. The last AL team with seven was Oakland in 1975. The most players ever from one team is nine from the 1958 New York Yankees.

Six of those seven guys are world champions and the other guy (Molitor) is a Hall of Famer in my opinion," Gaston said.

"There are probably going to be a lot of All-Stars sitting at home watching the game," he said. "If there was a way to extend the roster from 28 to 32, that sure would be nice."

Hentgen, 11-3 with a 3.10 ERA in his first full year, was not expecting to be an All-Star when the season started. In fact, he was the only one of the Toronto All-Stars who did not have a bonus clause for making the team.

"I'm happy, surprised and thrilled," Hentgen said. "My mom and dad are going crazy. I told them if I made it I'd get tickets for them and my wife. It's a done deal."

The Atlanta Braves, who lost to Toronto last October, have five players on the National League team, including pitchers Tom Glavine, Steve Avery and John Smoltz. Outfielder David Justice will start and shortstop Jeff Blauser was picked as a reserve.

Detroit's Cecil Fielder, snubbed for last year's All-Star game, was added to the AL team and will back up Olerud. Fielder was leading the majors with 76 RBIs and tied for the AL lead with 23 home runs when he was picked.

Last year, however, Fielder was leading the majors with 75 RBIs and left off.

The starting lineup for the AL will be Olerud, Alomar, Rodriguez, Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken, New York third baseman Wade Boggs and outfielders Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle, Kirby Puckett of Minnesota and Carter.

Starters elected in the NL are Kruk, Chicago second baseman Ryan Sandberg, Cincinnati shortstop Barry Larkin, Florida third baseman Gary Sheffield, Philadelphia catcher Darren Daulton and outfielders Barry Bonds of San Francisco, Justice and Andy Van Slyke of Pittsburgh.

Van Slyke is injured and a substitute will be named. Gaston and Cox will name their starting pitchers and batting orders Monday.

"I understand people were not voting for me. Over the last two and three years, my name's not been mentioned too much and I understand that," Calarraga said. "Yeah, I deserve to start in that game, but I'm just really happy to make it."

The AL will try to extend its five-game winning streak, its longest in the series. In Tuesday night's All-Star game at Camden Yards in Baltimore.

Detroit catcher Mickey Tetlefon, who had 23 homers and 69 RBIs, was omitted. Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez was voted to start and Oakland's Terry Steinbach was selected as his backup.

"Mick is a Silver Slugger, but not an All-Star," Fielder complained. "The fan vote just destroys the whole meaning of the All-Star game. Put it truthful: Best ain't best when you've got the fan vote."

Cincinnati outfielder Kevin Mitchell, batting .356 with 15 home runs and 50 RBIs despite limited playing time, was not chosen. Nor was injured San Francisco third baseman Matt Williams, who has 21 homers and 64 RBIs.

Also missing will be a few big-name players. There was some thought that Nolan Ryan, George Brett, Robin Yount and recently released Carlton Fisk might be special additions to the roster, but they were not included.

Making their first All-Star appearances for the NL are pitchers Terry Mulholland of Philadelphia, Andy Benes of San Diego, John Burkett and Rod Beck of San Francisco, Darryl Kile of Houston, Los Angeles catcher Mike Piazza, Pittsburgh shortstop Jay Bell, Cubs first baseman Mark Grace, Philadelphia third baseman Dave Hollins and Montreal outfielder Marquis Grissom.

The NL's other reserves and pitchers are Cincinnati outfielder Bobby Kelly, Florida reliever Bryan Harvey, Mets outfielder Bobby Bonilla, St. Louis reliever Lee Smith, San Diego outfielder Tony Gwynn and San Francisco second baseman Robby Thompson.

Filling out the AL's pitching staff are Jack McDowell of Chicago, Mike Mussina of Baltimore, Rick Aguilera of Minnesota, Randy Johnson of Seattle, Jimmy Key of New York and Jeff Montgomery of Kansas City. The other reserves are Boston third baseman Scott Cooper, Chicago first baseman Frank Thomas, Cleveland second baseman Carlos Baerga and outfielder Albert Belle, Detroit shortstop Travis Fryman, Milwaukee outfielder Greg Vaughn and Texas outfielder Juan Gonzalez.

The starting lineup for the AL will be Olerud, Alomar, Rodriguez, Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken, New York third baseman Wade Boggs and outfielders Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle, Kirby Puckett of Minnesota and Carter.

Starters elected in the NL are Kruk, Chicago second baseman Ryan Sandberg, Cincinnati shortstop Barry Larkin, Florida third baseman Gary Sheffield, Philadelphia catcher Darren Daulton and outfielders Barry Bonds of San Francisco, Justice and Andy Van Slyke of Pittsburgh.

Van Slyke is injured and a substitute will be named. Gaston and Cox will name their starting pitchers and batting orders Monday.

"I understand people were not voting for me. Over the last two and three years, my name's not been mentioned too much and I understand that," Calarraga said. "Yeah, I deserve to start in that game, but I'm just really happy to make it."

Final Four

Conferece will serve as co-hosts if the committee's recommendation is approved by the NCAA executive committee next month.

The committee also selected San Antonio for the 1998 event; Minneapolis for 2001 and Atlanta for 2002.

Indianapolis already had been tapped for the 1997 tournament.

"This is an important day for the city of Indianapolis, and a tremendous achievement to be selected once again to host a world-class event like the NCAA Final Four," said Mayor Stephen Goldsmith.

The city has staged the event three times, the last in 1991. That year, the NCAA received more than 143,000 applications for tickets, and approximately 47,500 fans watched as Duke defeated Kansas in the championship game in the Hoosier Dome.

That year, the Final Four brought not only good basketball to the Hoosier capital, but also injected an estimated $23 million into the city's economy. The 2000 tournament is expected to bring in even more, maybe as much as $30 million, the mayor said.

But the results may be even longer-lasting, a member of the Indianapolis Local Organizing Committee said.

"The Final Four really gives us an opportunity to showcase the city as an attractive business location and tourist destination and to capitalize on the media spotlight that's cast on the city for the duration of the tournament," said David Frick, an Indianapolis attorney.

City representatives made a 45-minute presentation to the basketball committee Sunday in Newport, R.I. It included a video that featured the 1991 tournament.

"The committee has total confidence in the ability of all of these cities to host a highly successful Final Four," said Tom Butters, basketball committee chairman and athletic director at Duke. "We have visited each city in recent weeks and have been extremely impressed by their enthusiasm facilities and commitment to hosting the Final Four."

Left-hander Chris Tibbetts was the winning pitcher as the Dodgers outscored Brandon American Legion Post 278-B by the score of 8-6.

Joey Harmer carried the big bat for Altamonte Spring, collecting four hits. Also having good days at the plate were Mickey Bono with three safes and Jeff Butler and Keith Walsh with two hits each.

The local nine's final win came against another Sarasota ball club, Riscorp, by the score of 9-2.

Scott Conners pitched a complete game to gain the victory.

Jeff Shaw, John Anderson, Moise Navarro and Heath Ritenour had two hits each for the Dodgers.

Bono was named to the All-Tournament team after going 12-for-18 (.666 batting average) for the team.

The Dodgers' Desert was also honored, being chosen the Most Outstanding Outfielder for the tournament.

Other members of the team that was managed by Terry Butler were: James Clark, Pete Gaddis, Brian Krot, Jared Varitek, Greg Nabe, K.T. Slavson, Brad Vanderweide and Chuck Little.

A little bit of laundry brings a pile of trouble

DEAR ABBY: I could kick myself. It's a long story, but I'll try to condense it as a warning to unmarried women everywhere. If a man asks you to do his laundry, show him the door and ask him not to call you anymore.

I'm 40, and this guy I had been seeing a short time noticed that I had a washer and dryer in my house, so he asked if he could bring his laundry over. Forty red flags should have sprung up when he hit me with that question, but I was caught off guard and said yes. Well, he brought his dirty laundry over every week for two years, and like an idiot I did it for him like a hired hand.

My point is, the laundry thing summed up the whole man. He was a manipulator and a salesman, and if I'd had the brains to see what a user he was, I would have politely declined to be a free laundry service, and never seen him again. I could have saved myself five years of pain; two years of seeing him exclusively, and three years of being harassed.

Please print this, Abby. Women are better off alone than with a dominating, manipulating creep who does a convincing impersonation of a gentleman. Sign me...

STUPID
DEAR LADY: Don't call yourself "stupid" — stupid people never learn. "Wiser Now" is more appropriate. Thanks for giving other women the benefit of your experience.

DEAR ABBY: Once again I have endured a daylong business meeting trapped in a room with a woman whose strong perfume made me ill. I know when this is going to happen because I can smell the odor before I can identify where it is coming from. These women are everywhere. They are at the symphony, in business conferences, in classrooms, on airplanes, in church, in restaurants, etc.

Please don't tell me to leave the room or change my seat — I can't. And please don't suggest that I take medication. I do.

Kindly tell the manufacturers of these scents that "stronger" does not mean better. A body cleansed with ordinary toilet soap and water, followed by underarm deodorant is much nicer. You would be doing millions of us an enormous favor by making the (female) public aware of the above facts.

HAS A HEADACHE IN DALLAS

DEAR HAS: Women in the workplace (and men, too) would be more popular with their co-workers if they would wear lighter scents. Less is more, particularly to those who suffer from allergies.

DEAR ABBY: What memories those letters about slapping a kid in the face brought back!

We were blessed with two children who could be disciplined verbally, although there were a few swats on their behinds during their younger years. We weren't accustomed to hearing our children use nasty language, so when our 16-year-old son smarted off, I slapped his face!

I immediately realized I never should have done that to a 16-year-old boy, so I looked up at him and said, "I'm sorry you made me do that."

We both started to laugh and said we were sorry, and he has

Pesticides in the diets of children

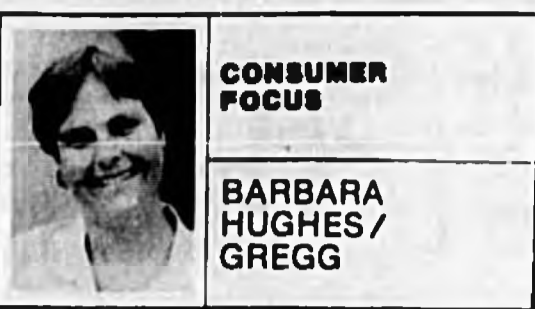

As the Seminole County Extension Home Economist, I want people in this county to receive the most current and up-to-date information on food and nutrition. Food and nutrition questions seem to change on a regular basis. With more emphasis on eating healthy it is apparent that consumers are taking a greater interest and want to do "what's right." Many times we do the best we can with the information we have given to us.

What about the new information we have been hearing about regarding pesticides in the diets of infants and children? I have read a number of reports regarding the press conference and conclusions drawn regarding pesticides in the diets of infants and children.

I think the following comments are the least biased and easiest information to understand. The comments come from Dr. Carl Winters who attended the news conference and is an Extension food toxicologist from the University of California. I hope it will help you to come to your own conclusion.

Contrary to several media accounts of the report and the press conference, the report did not indicate that pesticide residues in the diet of infants and children pose significant risks. According to Dr. Phillip J. Landrigan, the committee's chairman and a professor of Community Medicine and Pediatrics at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, "We are not saying that parents should rush out and radically change their children's diets to avoid certain foods. We do not say in our report that some particular food is terribly dangerous for children and needs immediately to be discarded. Parents should continue to emphasize fruits and vegetables in their children's diets." In response to repeated queries from reporters, Dr. Landrigan and other committee members refused to endorse consumption of organically-grown fruits and vegetables over conventionally-grown produce.

The report, however, was highly critical of the scientific and regulatory procedures used by the federal government to assess risks and safeguard infants and children from potential health effects of pesticide residues in their diets. Several recommendations to improve the methods to assess the risks of children were provided in the report.

CONSUMER FOCUS

A major conclusion of the report was that the government typically takes a "one-size-fits-all" approach that ignores potential differences between infants and children relative to adults, particularly with respect to sensitivities to pesticides and to exposure levels. It was pointed out that infants and children are simply not "small adults;" they differ physiologically in terms of the development of their nervous and immune systems and in their abilities to perform biological tasks such as metabolizing and eliminating pesticides. Such physiological differences may render infants and children more sensitive to some pesticides than adults while less sensitive to other pesticides.

Pesticide residue data needs to be improved. Existing data may not provide adequate sample sizes for important foods that infants and children consume. In addition, little has been reported concerning the effects of processing to remove residues in foods of infants and children, and existing pesticide residue data may be of little value because standard analytical methods and reporting procedures are often not followed.

It is clear that the recommendations of the report send mixed messages to consumers. On one hand, the report encourages consumers to eat liberal amounts of fruits and vegetables and does not suggest that any changes in food consumption patterns are warranted. On the other hand, the report is highly critical of existing government oversight over pesticide residues in foods and recommends several new approaches. How can such mixed messages be reconciled?

To begin, it is critical to understand that the committee's charge in preparing the report was to identify improved methods to assess the risks of pesticides in the diet for infants and children and not to determine the actual risks posed by dietary exposure to pesticides. Risk assessment is an extremely complex and imprecise science requiring a variety of assumptions to be made. Most of the assumptions are difficult, if not impossible, to validate through scientific studies. Consensus does not exist as to the appropriateness of the various assumptions. The use of different risk assessment methods incorporating different assumptions can lead to dramatically different estimates of risk. While it is generally agreed in the scientific community that pesticides in the diet do not represent a major food safety priority, the magnitude of the theoretical risks, particularly for infants and children, is the subject of intense debate. It is hoped that the recommendations made in the report, if adopted, will serve to provide a better scientific basis for some of the assumptions used, improve the accuracy of the risk estimates, and allow greater consensus to be achieved concerning the magnitude of dietary pesticide risks.

Much less debate exists as to the benefits of consuming liberal amounts of fruits and vegetables in the diet. In another National Academy of Sciences study, it was concluded that the health benefits (e.g. decreased risk of heart disease and certain types of cancers) attributed to fruits and vegetables greatly outweigh any potential small risks from pesticide residues in the foods. This conclusion arose from actual studies of large human populations rather than from theoretical and highly uncertain practices used in assessing risks from small amounts of pesticide residues in the diet.

It is feared that some consumers may react to the report by changing their food purchasing habits; ironically, the worst thing that parents could do would be to decrease the amounts of fruits and vegetables they feed their children. This view is shared by the members of the National Academy of Sciences committee who authored the report, the vast majority of health professionals, and even several environmental organizations striving for significant reductions in the use of agricultural pesticides.

Hard-line attitudes on alcoholics

DEAR MARY: Let's tell it like it is. We love to talk about how to help all those alcoholics and drug addicts but nobody wants to talk about the fact that they did this to themselves and if they had the guts and brains, they could "undo" it. In our socialistic society, we want to pretend that if we throw enough money and "do-gooder helpers" at a problem, we can fix it. Well, I say let's throw them in a drunk tank and let them stay there till they dry out and decide to help themselves.

"cure" an alcoholic any more than any other person can recover from a chronic illness by simply resolving to stop being sick. Unfortunately, because of the myths about their moral weakness, many alcoholics and other addicts don't realize they can get treatment and help with a very good prognosis for recovery.

So while I agree with you that each of us is responsible and accountable for our actions and their consequences, I feel that we still have a responsibility to offer help and hope toward recovery to anyone suffering from chronic, debilitating illnesses.

The Unseen Hand

These youngsters are trying mightily to set sail, yet they need more power. If they rest a bit, perhaps the invisible power of a gentle breeze will give their miniature sailboats a helping hand. John 3:8 reflects, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth."

Like the wind, God is invisible, yet always present when we invoke His power... and like the anticipated movement of the tiny boats... His presence, once evident, is unmistakable.

The late poet Edna St. Vincent Millay stated this truth simply as she wrote, "God, I can push the grass apart and lay my finger on thy heart." As you worship this Sabbath, may the invisible, yet invincible hand of God touch your heart.

How to relieve chest wall syndrome

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been having chest pain for a year and a half which my doctor has diagnosed as chest wall syndrome. An EEG was normal, as was a thyroid blood test, chest X-ray, CT scan and MRI of my head. My doctor tells me I should learn to live with the discomfort. Is this appropriate treatment for my symptoms?

DEAR READER: Chest wall syndrome is, to an extent, a "wastebasket" diagnosis. Doctors use it when they can't find any other cause for chest pain. Your doctor seems to have delved appropriately into your symptom -- and come up with the fact that you are healthy. Try ibuprofen. I've found that it frequently relieves the pain of chest wall syndrome.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A recent exam included urinalysis. Since there was occult blood in my urine, I underwent an IVP. The result was sponge kidney. What is it?

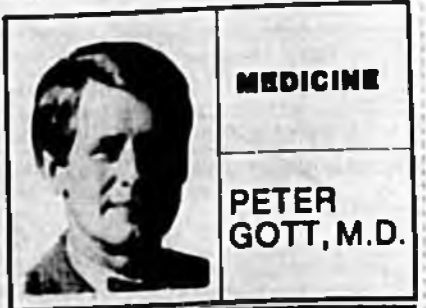

DEAR READER: Sponge kidney is a congenital abnormality. During special X-rays, the kidneys show cystic structures, described as a "bouquet of carnations" appearance.

Sponge kidney may lead to kidney stones or infection, both of which are treated as they would be ordinarily, with diet or antibiotics, respectively. Thus, this condition is not a hazard to health and needs no treatment per se.

The small amount of bleeding that occurs into the urine is inconsequential. In fact, it's precisely this kind of abnormality that leads to the unexpected diagnosis of sponge kidney, during testing to rule out other, more serious renal disorders, such as tumors.

Occasionally, surgery may be required to remove the spongy portion of a kidney if a stone blocks this section, but such therapy is infrequent.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Kidney Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Many people are nervous about trying duplicate (or tournament) bridge. They want to know more about what they are letting themselves in for. Others, who do give it a try and find their fears were groundless, then want to learn more about the tactics and strategies of duplicate.

One book that satisfies the desires of both these groups is "The Complete Book of Duplicate Bridge" by Norman Kay, Sidney Sidor and Fred Karpin (Devyn, $17.95, 800-274-2221). It was first published in 1965; now it is back on the streets.

There are many interesting deals in the book. I particularly liked this one. How do you think the play proceeded in four spades?

If only North had passed three no-trump, which he should have done, probably there wouldn't have been a story. It also looks as though four spades will coast home because of the favorable lie of the trumps. However, Albert Okuneff found a beautiful deceptive play as East.

South won the opening lead with the club ace, cashed the club king and ruffed the club seven with the spade 10. Okuneff overruffed with the king.

East switched to a diamond. West playing three rounds of the suit. Now South, convinced that West had the spade jack, played a trump to his ace and cashed the queen. The effect of West's discard was similar to a punch in the solar plexus.

If East had overruffed with the spade jack, of course, declarer would have taken the trump finesse and made his game.

Give duplicate a try; it's enjoyable.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY July 10, 1993

Goals and objectives which were of considerable importance to you last year could be relegated to the rear ranks in the year ahead. Your new targets will be more exciting and potentially profitable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Impulsiveness and restlessness could be the precursors of unsound reasoning today and cause you to make changes in situations which are presently running to your advantage. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're not apt to get the response for which you're hoping if you boast about or embellish your achievements today. If you want to make an impact, underplay your triumphs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial trends are a trifle tricky for you in this cycle, so don't count your chickens before they've hatched. Anticipated funds aren't the same as having them in the bank.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you're the type of person who does not succumb to flattery, but today you may let your guard down and be manipulated by one who is truly a master.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your chances for personal achievement are rather slim today, not because you lack the drive or the ability, but because you'll be handling too many things for others they can do for themselves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not get involved too quickly or too deeply with a person you recently met who you find intriguing. He/she might not be all they first appear to be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In order to assuage your ego today, you might pretend to be knowledgeable about something you aren't. This could lead to complications should you be asked to prove yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid involvements with associates today who are careless or extravagant where finances are concerned. You might have to ante up for their errors.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Agreements must be negotiated with great skill and care today in order to avoid future misunderstandings. All participants must observe the ground rules.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The truth will eventually out today if you pretend to take care of something for another yet knowingly fail to follow through. This is not a formula for enhancing your creditability.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extremely mindful of your behavior in social situations today. A sensitive friend might misread your signals and end up with hurt feelings.
