Child abuse program

MAITLAND - Sexual abuse of children may have a life-long impact on the victims. Tuesday night, Barbara Mara, Ph.D. will address the subject of anyone who uses their power over children in this manner at the Task ACT (a task force against child sexual abuse).

Interfamilial abuse accounts for about 77 percent of all reported cases. She will discuss the difficulties in overcoming the effects of incest. Incest by law is any sexual relationship with children by a blood relations.

At the 7 p.m. meeting at the Maitland City Hall Council Chambers, 1776 Independence Lane located behind Goodings off 17-92 and Horatio. The meeting is free and open to the

Unattended death

SANFORD - The Seminole County sheriff's department says an autopsy is expected to be conducted today on the body of 87 year old Charles Steverson. His body was found at approximately 3 p.m. Sunday on the railroad tracks near Riverview Street in Sanford.

Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said Steverson had apparently walked away from the Good Samaritan Home, 1704 W. Ninth Street in Sanford at approximately 4:30 p.m. Saturday. and had not been heard from until yesterday when an Amtrak employee found his body.

McDonough says no signs of foul play have been found and death is believed to have taken place because of natural causes.

Parents threatened

SANFORD - Jeremy Kaplan, 26, of Charlotte, N.C., was scheduled to make his initial court appearance this afternoon in a courtroom at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. He is charged with one count of aggravated stalking/domestic.

District 3 sheriff's deputies arrested Kapian at 10 a.m. yesterday when he was reportedly found sitting in his car in the 500 block of Holbrook Circle near Lake Mary. His parents reportedly live nearby.

Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said a computer check showed Kaplan was wanted on an FBI warrant issued in Texas regarding extortion and threats. McDonough said Kaplan's parents confirm that he had made a number of threatening calls and letters to them over the past year. McDonough said the letters reportedly threatened that Kaplan would come to Florida and kill his parents.

The letters and notebooks have been taken into evidence.

Kaplan has been held in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility without bond.

By BILL KERNS

Herald Correspondent

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series on those who may be left behind as Sanford grows.

LAKE MARY - The question posed is whether the elderly are being left behind. We could also ask if we're allowing them to play an active role in our lives and community.

Paulee Stevens, whose long career of service currently includes being the director of th Mary Sentor Center and a Silver Haired Legislator in Tallahassee, doesn't see the elderly being left behind in Sanford. But, she does see problems to work on in Sanford and throughout

"I don't feel Sanford is leaving its elderly behind," said Stevens in an interview Friday. "I don't feel ten out myselt. Every person, regardless of age, is responsible for making their own mark in life. But, transportation is a big problem. We're also not concerned with our neighbors. We've become selfish."

The problem Stevens sees in Sanford's rapid growth is that services might not keep up.

The outskirts are growing much faster than the inner part of the city," said Stevens, adding that the same phenomenon is happening in Lake Mary and throughout Seminole County. "People just outside the city will want the same services. With the mall, that's going to get worse. The money will flow toward the outskirts, not downtown. "Sanford is growing in spite of itself. The progress is great, to an extant. Many are finding SANFORD - Some postal facilities will be operating until midnight tonight for last minute Income lax filers. On the average, workers have until noon each day (all year long) to earn enough money to pay their tax burden.

According to the Tax Foundation, the typical American works almost until lunch time, throughout the average working year, just to pay federal, state and local taxes.

Midnight tonight however, is the deadline for filling that tax return. Even though the filling date has been extended because of the weekend, there are still millions around the nation who have waited until the last minute.

Longwood to discuss Rangeline fees

Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD - The mile-long strip of blacktop that stretches between E.E. Williamson/Longwood Hills roads and State Road 434 that has been the object of hours of discussion, debate and discord is on tonight's Longwood City Commission agenda.

City administrator W. Shelton Smith is recommending the Rangeline Road final design and construction administration fee and scope of services presented by Professional Engineering Consultants (PEC) be approved by the city commissioners. Smith is recommending approval of the amount not to exceed $243,450.

C See Elderly, Page 5A

All the funds are reimbursable by Seminole County except the $17,704, specifically requested by the city commission to investigate an alternative drainage design which would allow preservation of the existing pavement, Smith's memo to the commission states.

The county allocated $800,000 for Rangeline Road work from the one-cent gasoline tax approved a few years ago for improving transportation in Seminole County. Subdivisions dot Rangeline Road and many homeowners opposed any changes which might increase traffic on the already busy road. Most opponents are against the widening of the existing road.

City engineer Fernand Tiblier, who prepared the memorandum submitted by Smith notes. "The Improvements to Rangeline Road have been a high profile project. This is the next step to an improved roadway."

Explaining the fiscal impact of the project. Tiblier continues, "It is important that the Commission understand that the City's Capital Plan contribution is targeted at $158,770 toward this project. If no further commitment is made, the consultant should be instructed to keep the construction costs within our means. When the $800,000 Seminole County contribution is exhausted, their commitment to the City ends."

Seven cougars will be removed from wild

GAINESVILLE - Seven cougars used in a three-year study to find suitable habitats for a close cousin, the endangered Florida panther, will be removed from the wild in June, when the study ends, state wildlife officials say.

The Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission considered leaving the cougars roaming in the forests of North Florida and South Georgia after the experiment ended. It decided to remove them after opposition surfaced late last year from residents fearful for their safety.

'What we decided to do was stick with our original plan and pull them out rather than allow them to be a subject of criticism," said Tom Logan, the commission's chief of wildlife research. "What we decided to do was not change our plan." Four cougars have been in Columbia County in recent weeks.

Three others were sighted in South Georgia.

The three-year study was launched to determine which areas are suitable for the reintroduction of the panther, whose population of 30 to 50 is confined to South Florida. But some residents of Columbia County voiced concerns for their safety because the cougars were spotted nearby. There is no evidence, however, that the animals have harmed or even threatened people, game and fish commission officials contend.

About 500 people attended a raily in January to oppose the cougar introduction in northern Columbia County. Agency officials said then they hadn't decided whether to remove the cougars when the study ended.

Hundreds rally in support of hospital

TAMPA — Hundreds of people railied in support of mistake-ridden University Community Hospital, which has been stripped of its accreditation and banned from performing elective surgery.

"Life depends on you," read one sign at the Sunday rally outside UCH.

"This is a hospital that cares. Judge us on 26 years," hospital spokesman John Andreas said.

More than 600 employees and residents cheered, clapped and chanted, urging the state to remove an elective surgery ban, which is costing the hospital about $30,000 a day in lost

The hospital's problems began Feb. 20 when doctors amputated the wrong leg of a 51-year-old diabetic. Less than two weeks later, a 77-year-old man died after he was mistakenly removed from a ventilator.

Later investigations uncovered other mistakes, including an arthroscopic surgery performed on the wrong knee of a patient. Regulators on Thursday stripped the private, 424-bed hospital of the accreditation it needs to continue getting millions of dollars in federal funds.

The state has banned all elective surgery at the hospital until the staff is briefed on proper operating room safety procedures.

Bill Zimmer said his family has gone to UCH since 1970, a year after it opened. "We'd be lost without it." he said. "It has saved a lot of lives."

Tobacco finds unlikely allies

TALLAHASSEE - The tobacco industry has hired some unlikely allies in its defence of a $1.43 billion lawsuit to recover the cost of treating Medicare patients sick with smoking-related ilinesses

The industry wants health care lobbyists, some of the most influential players in Tallahassee, to snuff out the Florida law that enabled the state to sue in the first place.

The force of the 53-member lobbying team underscores the importance the tobacco firms have placed on wiping out the controversial new law and the challenge Gov. Lawton Chiles' administration faces to stop them.

According to the state office of lobbyist registration, two-thirds of tobacco's hired guns also represent hospitals and health insurance companies. Tobacco lobbyists say that is no

State Farm, Allstate and other property insurers want Floridians to buy two insurance polices.

Homeowners would purchase one policy from private insurers to cover traditional hazards such as fire and theft - but not wind. Homeowners would pay separately for hurricane coverage from a state-run program.

The industry wants the Florida Catastrophe Fund, created after Hurricane Andrew to help insurance companies cover future hurricane claims, to become the only direct provider of hurricane insurance to Floridians.

The industry has assembled a team of lobbyists to press Florida lawmakers to approve such a plan before this year's legislative sessions ends in

May. It's not clear whether legislators would endorse the plan or what impact it would have on homeowners.

Citizen Bush: Six months later, he's back in arena

Associated Press Writer

right?" she asked. A woman in Tampa gave the second son of former President Bush the same quizzical onceover and finally asked: "You're an anchorman on Channel 12. aren't you?" "It's humorous and it puts things in perspective," said the 41-year-old Bush, who told her he was the weatherman before finally setting her straight.

But the man known on the campaign trail as Jeb is re-cognized by most Floridians these days. Many shout encouragement as he walks briskly through airports.

His busy schedule includes helping run the Miami real estate business he started with Armando Codina, recruiting support for his new Poundation for Florida's Future and writing Dies Bush, Page SA a book about values and charac-

He's also organizing the state Republikano convention in November called Presidency III that will include a straw poll and a candidates' debate.

After a razor-thin defeat to Gov. Lawton Chiles almost six months ago that felt like he'd 'hit a brick wall," Jeb Bush is back doing what he loves.

The foundation lets him stay closely involved in conservative politics and public life. And if it iets him keep his political network alive for the future, that's all right too.

"If I do run again, I want to be in a position where I don't start from scratch," he said, although he insists that is secondary. The flerce campaign for governor was a kind of crucible for Bush and he says people treat him differently now that it's OVET.

"It's having been tested and coming out with my integrity intact," he said. "I didn't get my eyes gouged out, I'm not walking with a limp, and I stopped stuttering a while back."

Outdoor displays

The Sanford City Commission has approved, in concept, allowing business operators in the downtown historic district to have outdoor displays and signs. It isn't allowed right now, as the matter still must be approved by city ordinance. But basic acceptance of the idea has been indicated.

The suggestion was discussed during several commission work sessions, and input was obtained from several downtown organizations before City Manager Bill Simmons was instructed to prepare the proper ordinance. We will assume that the ultimate decision will be a compilation of business community input in keeping with codes and restrictions already in force.

One of the points brought out in commission discussion was the fact that, if merchants go beyond what may be allowed. and violations occur, the commission can always re-examine the concept and strike it from the books.

This wasn't done as a threat, only to point out that this new freedom to advertise outside a store window, could be taken away if people

Commissioner Bob Thomas, on two separate occasions, opined that the city should pass the ordinance as a show of trust to the downtown merchants. He projected that those who will use outside displays will adhere to the requirements of the ordinance regarding size, locations, and other stipulations.

Commissioner Lon Howell however, suggested that some merchants already have outside displays which may be in violation of present city codes, and are not being cited. He it will ordinance will downtown displays will be abused.

Looking at the two points of view, we hope Thomas is right, and Howell is wrong. We believe Howell hopes his prediction is wrong

Downtown merchants have already proven they need to cooperate with each other. Some have become members of SHDWA, the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association. Others have joined Sanford Main Street. Still others have united in the Sanford Advertising Co-Op and Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce.

Let's face it. People who are running the downtown area businesses are doing so to make a profit. If someone abuses the ordinance once it is approved, these business leaders have a right to be angry.

As such, we believe the requirements for storefront advertising will be followed. Working together, it can be beneficial to

We see this as a good move and commend everyone who has been and continues to play an active roll in bringing it about.

For the good of SHS

It is time for resoning. Do I dare say the dirty word! What is the best solution? Being fair to all students no matter what school they go to sounds good. Unfortunately, not all people have the same idea of what fair is. Seminole High School would like a shot at finding out what fair is. I have a child at Seminole High, and am proud of him and the school. He is indeed getting a quality education from quality teachers, however, I'm tired of being treated and known as the poor relation.

You know the story ... Other schools get the frills. other schools get more new textbooks and sooner, they also get the boundaries that are so necessary to get the students that lead to more funds, frills. and parent involvement.

I ask you. is this fair that Seminole High School and its students have to feel the shame of being referred to as "undesirable"? If you don't feel this is so, then why are so many people ready to fight to not attend Seminole High School, and why should they be allowed to get away with this?

I'm challenging the school board and Sanford residents to take into consideration what is right and fair for all students, not just in numbers, but in possible parent involvement and funding brought about by equal socio-economic boundaries. Can this be accomplished? I hope so, not only for the good of Seminole High School, but in the name of fairness.

Seminole High School is a school to be proud of: I think it is about time the school board and adjoining communities acknowledged this with action, not just words. Get involved for the good of SHS and our town.

Mrs. Robert Loveland

We should portray FDR as he was

BOSTON - These are times when history refuses to stay in its place. Every generation comes to view the past through its own, fresh lens. Their vision almost inevitably produces some historic revision - and, of course, a good deal of controversy.

We've seen such historic fights over the Vietnam Memorial and over the Smithsonian's Enola Gay exhibit. We've heard arguments over movies about JFK's assassination or Thomas Jefferson's slaveholding. But now it's FDR's turn.

This past Wednesday, the country marked the 50th anniversary of the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. At 1:15 p.m. on April 12, 1945, the worn 63-year-old man who led us through the Great Depression and World War II, suffered a massive cerebral hemorrhage at his Warm Springs, Ga. retreat and died.

Older Americans who knew him as their president, still remember the smile, the jaunty angle of his cigarette holder, the timbre of his yoice, thr reassuring words: "We have nothing to fear but fear itself." But few of those who mourned him that day knew about the leg braces, the wheelchair, the struggles of a man unable to stand without help.

In an era when a cripple could not have been elected to the presidency, in a time when the words "strong" and "disabled," seemed like a contradiction, in a generation when the press colluded to protect a president's privacy, there was a grand deception that kept his paralysis from the public view.

Now we're commemorating his death with a wrestling match about the facts of his physical life, about how the next generation should literally see FDR. About writing and rewriting

The terrain for the controversy is the FDR Memorial that is finally to be built on the Tidal Basin in Washington. The memorial is designed as a series of open-air rooms peopled with various images of the president. But there is no brace, no cane, no wheelchair, no indication of FDR's physical condition except for a small entry carved into the granite chronology.

To many, especially many in the handicapped community, that seems like a second grand deception, a way to strike his handicap from the public record. Michael Deland, a board member of the National Organization on Disability, believes that "Roosevelt's disability was such an integral part of the man that it needs to be shown — and it's historically inaccurate not to show it."

But others, especially some on the FDR Memorial Commission, regard the pressure to portray his handicap as a kind of post-mortem "outing," and invasion of his privacy. Indeed, grandson David Roosevelt bristles at what he sees as an attempt to turn FDR into "a modern-day poster child, if you will." the commission's executive director, Dorann Gunderson adds. "Let me say emphatically that FDR would have been very disturbed."

But what do we say when facts collide, when two sides accuse each other of rewriting history? The "fact" is that FDR hid his handicap from the public. The "fact" his that he was handicapped. The view of the public president is different from the view of the private president. There is not a soul who knows what

FDR would say if he returned to a world that treats disability so differently. What would he have wanted? The only memorial he wanted was the block of marble bearing his name in front of the National Archives.

He went to great lengths to disguise his handicap from the public, for political reasons. But FDR's turn. sometimes - touring a veterans' hospital or speaking at How ard University - he didn't hide his handicap. for political reasons.

To David Roosevelt, "the fact that he veiled his disability is the overriding reality." But there is another equal reality: FDR did the job while being disabled. A man who couldn't put on his own shoes, led us through the Depression. A man who couldn't walk, commanded his country through a world war.

But now it's

No one is suggesting a memorial to The Handicapped President. Our generation is learning that people are more than their handicaps. We're also learning not to hide disabilities. A wheelchair sculpture in one room of the memorial, a hint of braces around his shoes in another - these would not be insults to his memory but artifacts for a visiting and wondering public.

Maybe Anne Roosevelt, a grandchild born after FDR's death, says it as succincily as possible: "We should portray him as he was and, as he was, he wore braces. As he was, he did things scated. As he was, he looked to his sons for support. This is who he was, and he went on and lived and gave the nation a sense of life and vibrancy that kept all of us going."

FDR left an extraordinary legacy. Half a century later, surely, we can put his history to

U.N. boss seeks to head off violence

UNITED NATIONS - Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, having agonized about the United Nations' absence during last year's slaughter in Rwanda, is lobbying the Security Council behind the scenes to allow him to put a standby military force near Burundi, which is likely to explode in a similar paroxysm of bloodshed.

Boutros-Ghall is calling it "preventive preparation," and hopes it will be a blueprint for future U.N. peacekeeping action.

Aidessay Boutros-Ghall, an Egyptian and the first Secretary General from Africa, is. naunted by the U.N. impotence demonstrated during the Rwanda massacre. "He came as close to begging the Security Council as I've ever seen him when he asked for a vote to deploy forces to Rwanda last April." said one high-level

The ethnic violence that erupted into full-scale civil war claimed more than half a million lives in a matter of months.

U.N. official. "And he doesn't want it to happen on his watch a second time."

The ethnic violence that erupted into full-scale civil war in the Central African state claimed more than half a million lives in a matter of months. Despite Boutros-Ghali's fervent pleading, it took the U.N. three months to deploy troops, by which time the massacre was mostly complete.

Neighboring Burundi is now showing many of the same signs as Rwanda — a nation ready to explode in a volcano of violence between the same two tribes. Like Rwanda, Burundi is about 85 percent Hutu and 14 percent Tutal. Both tribes have recently engaged in slaughter, contributing to a swift disintegration of civil order. Burundi has already suffered four waves of massacres since independence from Belgium in 1962.

The first problem in getting quick action from the Security Council is what Boutros-Ghali calls the "Somalia syndrome." This is a reluctance, particularly on the part of the United States, to vote for troop deployment into a country involved in civil war. The world community has become increasingly disinclined to tread where there is no political power in charge, where there is peace enforcement rather than peacekeeping. And where, as happened in Somalia, humanitarian peacekeepers are senselessly murdered in the name of ethnic warfare.

"I have even found the Somali syndrome in Germany," Boutros-Ghall told our associate Dale Van Atta in an interview. "Germany had a contingent of people in Somalia for three weeks in a difficult position. Nothing happened to them. I had a long conversation with the minister of defense in Germany and found that the fact that they were in danger for three weeks gave them also this Somali syndrome."

The second problem - almost a bigger one - is that the U.N. is slow to move even when the political vote is taken. Procurement of equipment for peacekeeping missions has taken an average of 22 weeks from the time it is ordered to the time it's received.

In the current political climate, Houtros-Ghall concedes it will not be possible for him to get approval for a force to be sent to Burundi. He revealed that his office is working on several proposals for action, one of which is being backed by Canada, the Netherlands and Denmark.

When Rwanda fell apart, Boutros-Ghall thought he had an alternative plan for swift action already in place. Thirty-eight member countries had previously agreed to be on standby with pledges of troops and equipment in the event of an emergency. "But all 38 said no on Rwanda," a top U.N. aide noted ruefully. "Not one of them honored their pledge, so the contingency plan was useless."

Taxes

The Sanford police office on N. Palmetto Avenue will close as usual at 5:15 this afternoon. Persons depositing their returns in the drop box inside the post office building before midnight will still have today's date.

A Sanford postal worker stressed, "ONLY THE INSIDE DROP BOX, not the ones outdoors." Depositors should not depend on dropping their tax forms in the outside boxes as they will be emptied when the post office closes, and dropping mail after the regular 5:20 p.m. pickup will not be processed today.

Lake Mary's post office on Lake Mary Boulevard will close operations at 5:30, but a postal clerk will be on hand in the facility to issue certified receipts for persons seeking them. Other services will not be available after nomal hours but the post office has stamp vending machines

Tax returns placed in the dropbox immediately outside the Lake Mary post office will be gathered at midnight, and any returns dropped in by that time will have today's date.

Postal facilities in the Longwood area will close at 5 p.m. this afternoon. Deposit boxes located outside, but only on post office property at 920 Wekiva Springs Road, and 101 W. Church Street in downtown Longwood, will make last-minute box pickups for midnight, and any return deposited in those boxes before midnight, will receive the April 17th postmark.

The last minute waiting lines therefore, may be in motor vehicles rather than standing in line at a post office desk.

Regarding earning money with which to pay those taxes, the Foundation, a nonpartisan research organization financed partly by corporations, says the typical person devotes two hours and 48 minutes of every eight-hour work day to earn enough to pay taxes.

If that person starts work at 9 a.m., he or she would have earned enough to pay federal taxes at 10:49 a.m. and state and local taxes by 11:46

Tax Foundation economist Patrick Fleenor said that taxes consume 34.4 percent of the typical person's gross income - 22.6 percent for federal taxes and 11.8 percent for state and local. That's a higher proportion of gross income than a typical American spends on food, clothing and shelter combined.

Looked at another way, the typical taxpayer this year must work 126 days to pay taxes, putting Tax Freedom Day - as the foundation calls it - on May 6, tied with last year for the

The Tax Foundation, like many groups, uses today's IRS filing deadline - when Americans' minds are on taxes - to focus attention on their

Its report, an annual tradition, is challenged by such groups as Citizens for Tax Justice, a labor-financed research organization, which points to the value received for tax dollars.

"The implication that somehow this money goes to Washington and disappears just isn't true," said Robert S. McIntyre, the group's director. "It shows up in roads. It shows up in a cleaner environment. It shows up in national defense, which I presume most of us want. It shows up in taking care of poor people. Every nickel that goes in comes back in some way or another.'

McIntyre also said the foundation's use of statistics can be misleading. The U.S. tax system is progressive, meaning that wealthy people pay a much bigger proportion of their income than others on federal taxes. So any average is skewed, McIntyre said. He said a typical taxpayer actually pays less taxes than the Foundation asserts.

Tax Freedom Day occurs later in some states, earlier in others. Connecticut and New York residents have it the worst - May 24, or three hours and nine minutes out of an eight-hour day. Alaska has the lightest tax burden: two hours and 17 minutes each day, and a Tax Freedom Day of April 14. The next lightest burden is in Mississippi - two hours and 21 minutes: April

The Tax Foundation study, however, makes no attempt to measure the quality and amount of state and local services received in Connecticut and New York versus Alaska and Mississippi.

"If you take the example of Mississippi and Connecticut, what you get in Mississippi is basically what you pay for and what you get is not the range and depth of public services that you get in Connecticut." said economist Daphne Clones of the Corporation for Enterprise Development, a research organization that studies states' economic development.

"The more appropriate question is, 'Are you really getting your money's worth?' If your state's physical infrastructure is falling apart and you don't have an adequate education system. then what has a lower tax rate gotten you?" she asked.

As recently as 10 years ago, in 1985, Tax Freedom Day came a week earlier, on April 30. A decade ago, the tax bite also was eight minutes shorter at two hours and 38 minutes. In 1945, it was only an hour and 59 minutes.

Prosecutors to grill criminalist

LOS ANGELES - Trouble, trouble, trouble. Prosecutors in the O.J. Simpson trial hope to dig themselves out of it this week. The judge wants to get to the bottom of it.

Police criminalist Dennis Fung, after a grueling week under barbed defense questioning, returns to the witness stand today for considerably more friendly treatment by the prosecution.

So far, prosecution testimony has been aimed at showing motive and opportunity. Now the state must link Simpson to the forensic evidence - the bloody glove, a knit cap, blood spots and shoe prints. So far, all remain unconnected to anyone.

"This is the make-or-break portion of the prosecution case," said UCLA law professor Peter Arenella. "If they can't convince the jury they have reliable physical evidence to link Simpson to the murders, then the case is over."

Welfare to work

WASHINGTON - Only a handful of states are moving the required number of unemployed welfare parents - mainly fathers — into jobs or training, according to federal statistics.

The lack of compliance raises questions about whether Republicans would be able to make good on promises to push millions of welfare recipients from dependency to payrolls, in part, by turning the programs over to the states.

According to the Department of Health and Human Services. only 10 states met existing federal work participation requirements last year for two-parent families who receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

A provision of the Family Support Act of 1988, the last welfare reform bill to pass Congress, required states, starting on Oct. 1, 1993, to find jobs or training for at least one parent of a certain number of two-parent families receiving AFDC.

Millionaire shifts focus to 2 percent milk

WASHINGTON - Milk "does a body good," but a rich anti-cholesterol crusader launched a national campaign today to tell Americans they can cut the fat by guzzling skim milk instead of the 2 percent kind.

Phil Sokolof, 72, an Omaha, Neb., businessman, is spending more than $500,000 of his own money on ads noting that 2 percent milk doesn't meet the government definition of a low-fat food, although the law allows it to be sold as such.

The full-page advertisements featuring an overweight model with a milk mustache - a parody of a current milk industry campaign — are appearing in more than 40 newspapers. including USA Today and The New York Times.

But Gregory Miller, a nutritionist for the National Dairy Council, said 2 percent milk fits easily into any balanced diet and that people who like its taste shouldn't be made to feel guilty for not drinking skim milk, which is fat-free.

Milk industry advertisements proclaim that milk "does a body good." A current campaign features female models and celebrities with milk mustaches.

But Sokolof's ads claim that three eight-ounce servings of 2 percent milk have the same amount of fat as nine strips of cooked bacon and ask. "Would you let your child eat nine strips of bacon a day?"

Sokolof said he wants people to know that skim milk is as nutritionally sound as 2 percent milk, which has 5 grams of fat per serving

25th Earth Day call to arms

WASHINGTON — For a quarter century the nation has singled out a day each Spring to celebrate the environment. But on the upcoming silver anniversary of Earth Day environmentalists say it's time to again to take to the barricades.

The target at railies in thousands of communities and college campuses across the country this Saturday will be the 104th Congress which in its first 100 days has mounted an unprecedented assault on major environmental laws, say Earth

Day organizers.
"Everything that Earth Day stands for is under attack in the new Congress," says Rodger Schlickeisen, president of Defenders of Wildlife. That's not what the public expected when it voted for a Republican Congress last November, he

Fatherless families 'most harmful trend'

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG AP National Writer

NEW YORK - Somewhere on the road from "Ozzie and Harrict" to "Murphy Brown" and Newt's new "Boy's Town," America lost something. David Blankenhorn thinks he knows Fatherhood.

That's fatherhood: "a social role that obligates men to their biological offspring." Fatherhood: "the key to the emergence of the human family and, ultimately, of human civilization."

Beneath the academic blandness of these phrases lies the rather sharp point of Blankenhorn's new book, "Fatherless America: Confronting Our Most Urgent Social Probiem.

In It, the founder of the Institute for American Values, a New York-based think tank, argues that much that is wrong with America can be traced to the separation of children from their biological fathers.

"Fatherlessness is the most harmful demographic trend of this generation," he writes. "It is the leading cause of the decline in the well-being of children. It is also the engine driving our most urgent social problems, from crime to adolescent pregnancy to child sexual abuse to domestic violence against women."

Much has been written and said in recent years about the rise of the single-parent family, the head of which is almost always a woman. What Blankenhorn has done is turn mother-headed households, he talks about households lacking

When he looks at late 20th century America, he sees many of the same problems as other social critics. But where others see a complex web of interrelated social fallings, he sees only one primary problem - and only one solution, summed up in five words: "A father for every child."

It is an argument that is both timely, given the new emphasis on family values in Washington. and instantly controversial, given the rising number of nontraditional families headed by single mothers, stepparents and homosexuals.

'I think this book is going to be very controversial." said James Levine, director of The Fatherhood Project, a New York-based advocacy group that seeks supportive programs and policies for families of all stripes. traditional or not.

Levine is critical of "Fatherless America." which he finds simplistic and unrealistic. "It's a great book title," he said, "but it's a sloppy analysis of what's really going on in America."

Blankenhorn, in an interview at his office near Lincoln Center.

society seeks to maximize the likelihood that every child will grow up with two loving parents. And if you don't want to hold the discussion on its head, that up as an ideal, which we Rather than talk about increasingly don't seem to want to, then you had better prepare to live with the consequences."

Blankenhorn's book is especially interesting on two levels.

One is political. While the book makes an argument primary associated with conservatives, Blankenhorn says he is a Democrat who has never considered himself to the right politically. He likes to point out that Vice President Al Gore was the keynote speaker last year at a conference of the National Fatherhood initiative that Blankenhorn helped organize.

Still, he acknowledges siding with conservatives on some aspects of family policy.

'My theory is that now, there is very little difference between liberals and conservatives when it comes to describing the problem. There's differences when it comes to what we're going to do about it. ... It's the difference between the people who want to deal with the consequences of the trend, versus people who want to deal with the trend."

The other unusual aspect of Blankenhorn's argument is the emphasis he puts on the role of fatherhood in "socializing" - or civilizing — men.

Fatherhood, he argues, is argued that his thesis is simple. Yole that is imposed on men by but not simplistic. It and him totall society; while motherhood is an "Really it just comes down to "essentially biological role. So this: I believe that every child while the mother-child bond is deserves a father ... and a good nearly unbreakable, the father-child bond needs society's support. Right now, he says, society is doing little to support either parent — but the consequences of unsupported fatherhood are far more devastating.

Mothers, he argues, will continue to be mothers without societal support, but fathers will leave the fold. Without a role of responsibility in the family, their stake in society will diminish. as will their incentive to be good, law-abiding citizens.

"The withdrawal of cultural supports for motherhood is sad and harmful," he writes, "but the withdrawal of cultural supports for fatherhood is tragic and calamitous." What caused these cracks in society's superstructure? Blankenhorn argues that American society is a victim of its own belief in individual freedom, which, taken to its logical extension, relieves individuals of all group responsibility. Blankenhorn is not necessarily optimistic about the future. He acknowledges in his book that his proposed solutions - which include having men take a "Fatherhood Pledge" and hav-ing Congress consider the impact of its laws on families - are limited, speculative and fragmentary." He argues, essentially, that they can't be worse than the present course. But he worries about the possibility that it's already too late to turn things Galois in Annihama

"If we enter a period where we can't reverse this social trend that we have of fragmenting families and growing social disorder; if we can't do anything about it, then ... American history will ultimately be tragic."

Court: Can landowners modify species' habitats?

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court, in what may be its most important environmental case in nearly two decades, is about to decide whether the Endangered Species Act bans destruction of wildlife habitats on private property.

After hearing arguments today, the justices must decide whether landowners violate the 1973 law if they change the natural homes of endangered or threatened species. A federal appeals court ruled last year that the law bars only direct threats such as hunting. trapping or otherwise directly killing the species, but not indirect threats such as destruction of habitat.

That ruling in an Oregon dispute over protection of the Northern spotted owl was hailed as one of the timber industry's greatest legal victories and called by environmentalists a grave threat to the Endangered Species Act's continued effectiveness. Potentially millions of acres in the Pacific Northwest could be affected by the court's ruling. Endangered species battles also are being waged on hundreds of millions of acres of privately owned land in other parts of the country.

A congressional report said that 90 percent of the 781 endangered or threatened species listed by the government in 1993 have habitats on privately owned land.

Supporters and critics of the Endangered Species Act agree that the court's ruling, to be announced by late June, could eclipse in importance the high court's 1978 decision that said chance available under the Congress intended to protect endangered species "whatever the cost.

The 1978 ruling blocked completion of a huge dam because it posed a threat to an endangered species, a tiny fish called the snail darter.

makes it a crime to "take" any endangered species, and by regulation that prohibition is applied as well to threatened species. The law defines "take" to mean "to harass, harm, pursue, hunt, shoot, wound, kill, trap, capture or collect." The Fish and Wildlife Service.

a federal agency, has regulations defining "harm" to include "significant habitat modification" leading to an injury of a protected species.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled, however, that the longstanding regulation is not authorized by the 1973 law. The regulation had been challenged by timber industry Interests in Oregon. The case attracted the most unsolicited advice of any during the court's 1994-95 term, a total of 24 friend-of-the-court briefs. Among those urging the justices to uphold the appeals court ruling are the American Farm Bureau Federation, U.S. Chamber of Commerce. Defenders of Property Rights and the states of Arizona, California, Kansas, Nebraska and Utah.

The case is Babbitt vs. Sweet Home Chapter of Communities for a Greater Oregon, 94-859.

Debate: Control nuclear weapons said Indonesian negotiator Iwan

By CHARLES J. MAMLEY AP Special Correspondent

UNITED NATIONS - A generation after striking the bargain known as the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, the world's nations are back at the table debating how to control man's deadliest weapons into the 21st

At a month-long conference opening today, delegates from 176 countries will decide whether to extend the treaty indefinitely and unconditionally. as favored by the United States and other nuclear powers, or for a limited period and with strings attached. Down-to-the-wire wrangling this weekend over voting procedures indicated the global gathering may not reach its final decision easily.

In the historic deal of the 1960s, the treaty nations committed themselves to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons beyond five nations that already had them.

In exchange, the five — the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China — are pledged to work toward climinating all nuclear arms. The treaty also guarantees nations the right to develop peaceful nuclear technology under international oversight.

The Non-Proliferation Treaty is credited with defusing the threat of a nuclear free-for-all. But it has not halted all proliferation. Three nations that refused to sign — Israel, India and Pakistan have developed nuclear weapons capability. And two that did sign — Iraq and North Korea — have tried to build

Raiders drop two in Jacksonville

From Staff Reports

JACKSONVILLE - The Seminole Community College baseball team hung tough over the weekend but could not quite muster enough offense as the Florida Community College at Jacksonville Stars edged the Raiders, 3-2 and 3-1, in Mid-Florida Conference action.

In Friday's game, a bases-loaded single scored an unearned run in the bottom of the ninth inning. On Saturday, a two-run home run with none out in the bottom of the 12th inning gave FCC-J the sweep.
Sanford's Robby Morgan (3-6) was the hard-luck loser in Friday's game despite allowing just eight hits and two earned runs, striking out four.

Doing the hitting for the Raiders were Chris Thorne (2-for-3, RBI), Ron Hollister (2-for-4, run). David Bacz (2-for-4). Renee Ramos (single, run) and Larry Hardy and Lake Howell's Paul Giambalvo (one single each).

Giambalvo was the starter Saturday and only allowed.

one run on three hits into the 10th inning. Butler came on and retired the first four batters he faced. But in the 12th a lead off double and the homer ended the game. Hitting for SCC were Thorne (2-for-5). Hardy (single,

Lyman junior has turned 'handicap' into advantage

In an extreme example of "when life gives you lemons, make lemonade," Rob Evans has taken what the less enlightened would consider a handicap and turned it into a decided advantage.

Evans, a junior at Lyman High School, is one of Florida's top high school distance runners, a claim strengthened by his jaw-dropping finish in the 3,200-meter run during Friday night's Lyman Invitational.

He's also about 18 inches short of a full set of arms, his right arm ending at the elbow.

"The only thing I can't do is tie my shoes," said Evans. "It's made me a stronger person. I don't know where I'd be without it. I might never have started running if it hadn't been for this."

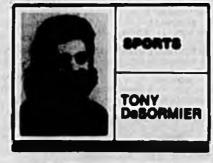

As a boy. Evans played soccer. where being cane one hand ien't a drawback. Drawing the inevitable barbs. Evans learned to answer the taunts with his play on the field.

So, when he was teased by classmates during a physical education class in his freshman year. Evans let his feet do the talking. "We were supposed to run that day," he remembered. "Some of the other guys were teasing me, asking me if I could keep my balance. They underestimated me. After that class, the P.E. teacher said that I should go out for the cross country team." His determination and ability caught the attention of cross country/track coach Fred Finke and soccer coach Ray Sandidge.

"His arm is an unfair advantage." said Sandidge. "It makes you con-scious of him and as you watch him. you realize he's doing a great job." "We always close our practices with sprints, sit-ups and pushups. The first day of practice his freshman year, I said that we'd finish the way we always do. Then I turn around and there's this kid doing push-ups on an arm and a stub, not saying a word and working harder than anybody."

Evans made the varsity team as a freshman, a team Sandidge considers one of his best and was one of the top teams in the state that year. "He's one of the guys that my didge. "I know exactly what he's country state mest last fall, going to do every game. He'll do his best and give every ounce of effort.

3,200 may be remembered as one of He's winner.

"Rob's No. 1 skill may be his mental discipline. The kid is incredtble. You can't give someone the heart and character that he has. They either have it or they don't."

Once a soccer player who ran cross country as a diversion, Evans now considers himself a distance runner who also plays soccer. Sandidge recognizes that and just hopes he continues to play soccer while at Lyman. "I love to coach him," said Sandidge. "Every day, he comes to work and to play, not to socialize. He's a great human being and he has the greatest sense of humor. day. Everyone was dragging and we were wondering what we'd do if something happened to Chris Lewis happened to Chris. All the guys lost it. It was just the thing we needed."

Evans' development as a competigoing from a neophyte runner as a freshman to winning the individual happens. You never know."

program is built upon," said San- championship at the Class 6A cross those defining moments in an athlete's career, where Evans went from being another good runner in the pack to being the individual to beat in any given race.

Running against Lecanto's Scan McManus, a good friend and the Class 4A cross country state charipion, Evans came from 15 meters back heading into the final 200 meters of the last lap and overtook McManus on the final turn, beating him by more than two seconds.

Having doubled Friday night winning both the 1,000-meter and 3.200-meter runs in the same meet - Evans is looking ahead to the Class 6A state meet in four weeks, "We had a real tough practice one where he said he'll concentrate solely on the 3,200.

Should he win the 3,200, Evana will duplicate the effort of former (the starting goalkeeper). Rob Lyman great Teddy Mitchell, who picked up one of Chris' goalkeeper won the state cross country title in gloves, put it on his stub, and said the fall of 1989 and won the 3,200 he was ready to play if something with a state meet-record time of the fall of 1989 and won the 3,300 9:14.93 in the spring of 1990.

"I'm going to concentrate on the 3.200 for now," said Evans. "But tive distance runner has been rapid. I'm running really well right now. so I'll have to walt and see what perennials grown in Florida. These hardy, fleshy rooted plants are relatively pest free and have a long blooming period. Plants are available in a wide variety of flower types, colors and growth habits. The present flower color selection includes shades of yellow, orange, red, pink, purple, near white and bi-colors.

The adaptability of daylilles to a variety of cultural conditions and the wide variety of colors and plant sizes make them well suited for landscape use. Like most perennials they are most effective when massed. Clumps of 10 plants or more of the same color will give the best display. Daylilies can be used effectively as foundation plantings to contrast a nearby evergreen shrubbery. Keep in mind the color of the building material when selecting varieties. Bright flower colors, such as yellow, should be used against dark backgrounds, and dark flower colors used against white or light backgrounds.

Davillies over 36 inches tall are suitable for foundation plantings, the back of daylily beds or in mixed borders. Medium daylilles, those 16 to 36 inches, can be used n most settings. Dwarf daylilles, those 12 inches or less, are best used for border plantings.

Most nurseries do not sell daylilles by varieties. If you are looking for specific varieties, you will probably have to go to a daylily nursery, such as Big Tree Daylily Garden in Longwood which grows over 2,500 varieties. When selecting a daylily variety, it is important to remember daylilles have three types of foliage growth.

Dormant - The foliage dies back after Evergreen - The foliage remains green throughout the year.

Semi-Evergreen - Part of the foliage dies back during the coldest months and grows back in the spring.

In Florida, dayillies thrive in many soil types; the muck of the Everglades, the limestone rock of Dade County, the light sands of Central Florida and the red clay hill of the northern part of the state. While daylilies will grow under many conditions, it is important to select a favorable location. Daylilies will grow in full sun or filtered shade. The darker colored varieties (reds and purples) grow best in partial shade, while light-colored varieties (yellows, pinks and pastels) need full sun to bring out their lovely colors. Avoid heavy shade because it will cause thin, spindly growth and poor flowering. The light level under pine trees is ideal for growing daylilies.

Daylily beds should be tilled and incorporate a 3- to 4-inch layer of organic matter. such as peat, compost or well-rotted manure, and 2 to 3 pounds of 6-6-6 or an equivalent amount of complete fertilizer, per 109 square feet of bed. The amended soil should be leveled and moistened before planting. Daylilies can be planted throughout the year in Florida; however, apring or fall is ideal. Fall planting allows the plants time to develop new roots and become established before the next blooming season. Prepare daylilles for planting by removing foliage 6 to 8 inches from the crown, the point where foliage and roots join and remove any damaged roots.

Daylilles are planted 18 to 24 inches apart, when spaced properly, daylilles can usually grow in one location for 3 to 5 years before division is necessary.

root system and make a mound of soil in the center of the hole and set the center of the daylily on top of the mound spreading roots out to the sides of the mound. Next, fill the hole with loose soil, making sure the crown of the daylily is at ground level. Daylilles should be planted at the same depth they were originally grown. Water newly planted daylilles and keep the soil moist until plants are well established.

Mulching daylilles with a 2-inch layer of pine needles, leaves or shredded bark will help retain soil moisture, reduce weeds and moderate soil temperatures. Daylilles can survive temporary dry conditions. However, the plants' bloom size, bloom number and overall vigor can be adversely affected by prolonged drought. A spectacular display of blooms can be achieved by a weekly application of % - 1 inch of water. Overhead watering during the heat of the day can cause open blooms to spot and/or Fertilize dayillies in the fall, early spring and mid-summer with 21/2 pounds of 6-6-6 per 100 square feet or an equivalent amount of another complete fertilizer. Apply fertilizer evenly between plants, keep off foliage and water into the soil after application.

Most daylily plantings in Florida are virtually pest free and rarely need a pesticide application. However, daylilies may be atteked by aphids, thrips, spider mites or grasshoppers, which may damage the foliage and flower buds. Daylily enthusiasts may be interested in a new display garden opening in Eustis. Rollingwood Gardens grows over 1,000 varieties of Daylilies and will be open to the public Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, April 16-July 4, from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. To get to the garden take County Road 439 north off State Road 44 near Mt. Dora. Go 3% miles to the garden's sign on the left.

Want Ad That Sells!

YOUR CLASSIFIED AD works best when it contains what the reader wants to know.

GIVE FACTS

Put yourself in the beyon's place. What would you want to know? List the item's age, condition, size, bread name, model and approximate value. If you're miling a nor, state the type of transmission, mileage (if it's low) and systal squipment.

DON'T EMBELLIRH It's risky business to enaggerate and it won't increase your channes of excess. Misleading information may get a buyor to your house. It may also get you a punch in the ness.

AVOID ABBREVIATIONS: While a fire observations can core you space, too many of thom strong together can excels confusion. A confused reader won't take time to cert out your meaning.

INCLUDE PRICE: Borveys indicate that buyers are more interested in the morehan-dies when they know the price. This applies to averything from household fernishings to extensibiles. Good marchandies, priced fairly, is the best guarantee of aucross.

How to treat a cluster headache

cause of cluster headaches? Is there a cure?

DEAR READER: Cluster headaches are, in general, severe and throbbing, occur without warning, are probably related to migraine, and appear - as the name implies - in groups of three or four, often with extended periods of relief between the clusters. The cause is unknown.

Many specialists have had success in preventing cluster headaches with prescription beta-blockers (Inderal and others) or calcium-channel blockers (Calan and others). Acute attacks are usually treated with pain medication (Indocin and others), oxygen or cortisone. Patients with cluster headaches should, in my opinion, be under the care of neurologists.

DEAR DR. GOTT: How is any rare disease given the attention to be researched?

DEAR READER: This is an excellent question, which I cannol answer.

During my residency training about 100 years ago, I met a healthy young athlete, an Olympic oarsman, who was found to have a large heart on X-ray. His doctor was concerned that the superbly trained rower might have heart disease.

We tested the athlete up, down and around, and found to our surprise that, far from having cardiac disease, he had a super-normal heart that had grown large and beat slowly from training.

As a result of this experience, I published a report on this champion sculler, in which I confirmed the presence of the "athletic heart syndrome": the predictable consequences of intensive and strenuous training. The "athletic heart" has now been accepted by the medical community as a harmless condition, whereas in the past it had been considered to be an unusual and worrisome -- even poten-

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is the tially dangerous -- disorder. I'm certain that other afflictions get studied in the same way. Someone gets interested enough to perform research and push the medical barriers further. Or, because of a personal experience, a doctor may decide to study a disease. Often medical researchers merely ask the obvious questions and then go about an-

There is a natural reaction to take a profit. And often any profit is better than no profit -- as people who dabble in the stock market will attest. Yet, although Mark Twain claimed that one should never speculate, sometimes you must take a temporary losing position when it will result in a greater long-term

In today's deal, would you end with a profit or a loss? You are in three no-trump after West has opened with a weak two-bid in spades, showing a decent sixcard suit and some 6-10 highcard points. West leads the spade jack and East follows suit with the four. After winning with the queen, how do you continue?

In response to North's takeout double, South advanced with two no-trump, which promised some values. North had an easy raise to game.

At trick two, South tried the heart finesse. However, East happily won with the king and returned his second spade. A moment later. South conceded Copyright MEA Inc. two down.

South had started with seven top tricks, given the spade lead. But as the key heart finesse had to be taken into the East hand. there was a distinct danger of the actual denouement. Yet there was a simple solution. As East was marked with only two spades. South should have ducked the first trick. West can establish his spades, but he has no entry. And if he switches at trick two. South takes the heart finesse without danger because he still holds a spade stopper. With the 3-3 diamond break, South ends with 10 tricks instead of seven.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do things for others today out of the goodness of your heart, not because you expect them to do something for you in return.

GRACINI (May 21-June 20) Let your common sense and knowledge from past experiences guide you in your financial affairs today. A short memory might invite a costly mistake.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Things should work out as you anticipate today, provided you operate along the lines of least resistance. New methods could prove counterproductive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your acting will be pretty good today as someone who tries to upstage you may discover. This individ-ual could learn a lot from you about stealing scenes.

VIROO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial conditions look encouraging today, provided you don't disassemble present arrangements. If it's not broken, don't fix it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Situntions you view optimistically today can work out as you envision them. You mustn't let a card-carrying pessimist cloud your outlook.

SCORPSO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Study business and financial proposals from every angle today. Something may appear to be a bargain in one sense, but be very costly in a surprising way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone who enjoys taking pot shots at others might make disparaging comments about an old friend today. Let this person know where your allegiance lies. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.

19) You will be quite lucky today if you keep your attention riveted on a rewarding, practical objective. Try not to let impa-tience dilute your drive.

AQUARTUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might not handle petty problems very well today, but if large, complicated situations develop, you're apt to deal with them like an expert. PSSCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Excellent career opportunities may develop today, but you must follow through on them methodically if you hope to reap the benefits they offer. Copyright1991 by NEA Inc.
